BOWELL TELLS THE STORY OF HIS "NEST OF TRAITORS"

Hammers Foster and Haggart and Relates Inside History of the Famous Bolt.

DECLARES THAT THE TRUTH WAS NOT IN THEM

coincidence at the very time that an official announcement was being made in the House of Commons this afternoon of Mr. Sifton's resignation by reason of dissatisfaction with the educational clause in the autonomy bill, Sir Mackenzie Bowell was on his feet in the fact that he and his fellow-conin the senate, giving the inner history of the famous bolt of 1896, when a similar question was agitating the public mind. The doughty old Parliamentarian was moved to this course by the statements made by Mr. Foster during the North Toronto election, and by the utterances of the same gentleman as well as of Mr. Haggart and Mr. George Taylor in the House recently.

Sir Mackenzie said he did not remember using the term "nest of traitors," but if he did not make use of it he ought to have done so, and to avoid respect. . . . I am content to let any misunderstanding he would adopt the phrase now. He gave a detailed account of the cabal which forced him from the premiership, and succeeded in You will pardon my writing this plainpresenting the conduct of the bolters in a most unenviable light.

Evidently from Sir Mackenzie's criticisms the bloody chasm between his former colleagues and himself has not been bridged, and he does not intend that it ever shall In his opening remarks with reference to the events of 1896 the servative leader of the Upper House said to justify the course thus pursued by what are now known as the "bolters" Mr. Foster had declared that he was justified in resigning on account of a difference of opinion on the policy of the Government. "Mr. Haggart justified his and Mr. Fester's action upon that occasion," continued Sir Mackenzie, "on account of an alleged violation of promises which he says were made by myself and not fulfilled, which Mr. Taylor, to a limited extent, attempted to confirm, not one word of which, as I shall show plain language-true.

"It is difficult to understand why knew, was to push the question to a such statements were made after a final issue if no amicable agreement lapse of nine years unless those making them believed the events of 1895-96 Government, and therefore he was. so were forgotten, or that the great majority of those who were addressed knew nothing whatever of the facts, therefore, the hearers could be the more easily misled and deceived.

Contradictory Mr. Foster.

"Had Mr. Foster confined his explanations of why he and his fellow-bolters left the Government to that given in House of Commons on Jan. 16, 1896, I should never have deemed it tion. worthy of further notice, but when he gave other and incorrect reasons it becomes my duty, not only to call attention to them, but to prove out of his own mouth and from his own utterances that he had little regard, when making his last explanation, for facts as they appear upon the record. When he told the people of Toronto at the last Dominion election that he left the Government on questions of policy, and that his Excellency the Governor-General, knowing the facts, called them back into the Government, he knew he was telling what was not correct. The fact is the reasons given in the House of Commons for his resigning were never discussed in the Privy Council before he resigned, therefore he had no oath to respect in that particular." Mr. Foster recently claimed that a minister had a right to resign when he was not in accord with the Premier on a question of policy, but in his explanation in 1896 he stated that he resigned because of a lack of confidence in the Premier. Evidently these gentlemen did not believe what they said in 1896. or they said what they did to deceive

This Is Frank.

Sir Mackenzie continued: Before referring to similar statements repeated in the House of Commons by Mr. Foster, I deemed it but right, in self-justification, to lay before the senate the fact that friends of the Conservative party in the north riding of Toronto. finding it difficult to rally a number of them to the polls on account of the events of 1895-96, and the part played therein by Mr. Foster, wrote urging me to send letters which could be read in support of his candidature, which I declined to do, giving my reasons therefor in the following letter, which I may add was not published:

Belleville, Ont., Oct. 28, 1904. -: I owe you an apology for not replying to your letter at an earlier date. The fact is, I was out of the city when it arrived, but was reminded of its existence on re-ceipt of your telegram. . . . If you will take the trouble to read the reports of Foster's speeches as they ap-Mail, I do not think you will ask me to write any such letter as suggested by you. . . . This is not the fact. The reasons given by him in the Commons in justification of his action make no mention of differences of opinion upon questions of policy. The best evidence of which and of the untruthfulness of his statement is found spirators were to come back into the fold without any stipulation as change of policy. His dragging the Governor-General's name into the discussion is most unwarrantable, knowing, as he did, that the Governor-General acted solely on my advice, I have no desire, however, to enter into a controversy upon this subject. I humiliated myself quite enough by taking him back. It was done in what considered the interest of the party then, and I have regretted it ever since. I do not propose to repeat it by writing such a letter as you suggest, I may be all he and his chums say I am, but I have not yet lost selfhim alone to fight his own battles, but decline to further demean myself by asking my friends to put confidence in him, which I do not entertain myself, ly. I do so, believing it best to be frank with friends. Yours sincerely, MACKENZIE BOWELL.

Munchausen Haggart.

Sir MacKenzie for a while paid his espects to "that exemplary statesman." Mr. Haggart, who had said that a correct statement of the resignation Conservative ministers had never been made, but no doubt it would likely be made shortly. "If so," declared Sir MacKenzie, "it will never emanate from a historian of the Baron Munchausen type of John Haggart. The ex-minister of railways had claimed that his resignation was similar to hat of Sir Adolphe Caron and Messrs. Angers and Clarke Wallace, but Sir MacKenzie showed that such was not the case.

"Mr. Wallace," he said, "before retiring, waited upon me and asked if it were the intention of the Government to persist in their policy of remedia legislation; if so, he added, he could not be a party to it. My reply was that the policy of the Government, as he could be reached with the long as he remained in the Government, though not of the cabinet. sponsible. His reply was to the effect that he could not support such a policy, upon which declaration I told him the only course left to him was to retire, which he did by telegram from the west a few days after. this he acted not only within his rights, but honorably and in consonance with his views upon the ques-

Far From the Truth.

Mr. Haggart's profession of kindliness for him reminded Sir MacKenzie of the man who warmed a viper in his bosom. Sir MacKenzie then dealt with Mr. Haggart's statement that he (Sir MacKenzie), was a party to Sir Charles Tupper's appointment, and agreed to resign, but afterwards balked. statements made in the above extract,' indignantly said the speaker, "are so far from the truth that language fails to properly characterize them. what these gentlemen may have conjured up in their own minds I am not

Plot of Long Hatching.

It was here that Sir MacKenzie's adoption and ratification of the term "nest of traitors" came in. He said his resignation was the culmination of a scheme of long hatching. Continuing, he said: "That it was so is beyond doubt. I have the authority of the Hon, John Costigan, a member of the Government at that time, for saying that a month or two before the eulogistic speeches made by Foster et al, in which I was extolled as one able physically and intellectually for the position of Premier, he when in the office of Mr. Foster was approached immediately on entering by that gentle-man with the question if he did not think some younger blood should be at the head of the Government, adding 'The Premier is too old for the position.' Costigan's reply was that he was of the opinion that there were too many young men in the cabinet who believed themselves better fitted for the position, and then walked away. addition to this interview, Mr. Costigan adds that when on, New Year's Day, he called at the residence of Mr. Foster to pay the usual New Year's greeting he was met at the door by the servant, who must have been waiting for him, and informed that Mr. Foster was in the library and wanted to see him immediately, and that before he had time or opportunity to ex- majority of two over his opponent, Mr. tend the compliments of the season to the ladies of the house he was ushered into the presence of the then Finance pear in the Globe, the News and the Minister, and at once approached with an invitation to join the nest of conspirators, who were hatching a scheme

An hour later other chasseurs rushed across the bridge and seized and fortified a thicket opposite Lamuting overcoming a number of wolf-holes and wire entanglements, and blew up the Japanese redoubts. The artillery mean-while kept up the bombardment and suc-ceeded by midnight in demolishing the Japanese searchlight. Then a stubborn fight in the darkness began, the gloom being but slightly alleviated by the pale light of the stars and the reflection from light of the stars and the reflection from fires kindled by the explosion of shells. The Japanese brought up their quick-fire guns and forced the Russians to abandon the thicket, from which position the Japanese proceeded to bombard the regiments holding the head of the bridge. The fight was desperate and at close quarters. The Japanese rushed up heavy columns of reinforcements, and charged repeatedly across the river, strewing the repeatedly across the river, strewing the ice with the bodies of their dead. St. Petersburg, March 1.—Gen. Reiss, Gen. Stoessel's chief of staff, in behalf of Gen. Stoessel, gave an interview today in which he charged that the stories emanating from Che Foo and attacking the commander of Port Arthur originated with a Russian connected with the Novoe Krai (a newspaper of Port Arthur), who was expelled by Gen. Stoessel.

Gen. Reiss reiterated the story of the extremity to which the garrison of the fortress was reduced, insisting that less than 8,000 men were under arms to defend twenty miles of fortifica-The garrison also lacked provisions and ammunition for the heavy ing figure. Quebec Legislature.

Quebec, March 1 .- A meeting of the provincial cabinet was held this afternoon at the Parliament buildings, which was attended by the Premier, Hon, Mr. Parent, Messrs. Archambault, McCorkill, Robitaille and Monet, and Nemese Garneau, who was previously sworn in by the Lieutenant-Governor, as Minister of Agriculture. The latter addition completes the Parent ministry, except that Mr. Monet is only for the present acting Minister of Colonization and Public Works. Auguste Tessier, M. P. P. for Rimouski, who is the prospective Speaker of the House, had a conference with Premier Parent and his ministers this morning, and later assumed charge of the Speaker's department. The cabinet council was in session until near 2 o'clock this afternoon to complete business before the opening of the House, which included the adoption of the speech from the throne, etc.

Nervousness, fretfulness, restlessness, sleeplessness, irritability—all are the outward signs of inward nerve disturbance. The fault is not with the nerves which give you warning—not with the nerves which enable you to feel, to walk, to talk, to think, to see. But the INSIDE nerves, the automatic power nerves—these are the nerves that work wears out and worry breaks down.

I have not room here to explain how these tender, tiny nerves control and operate the stomach, the heart, the kidneys, the liver. How excesses and strains and over-indulgence destroy their delicate fibers. How, through a bond of sympathy, weakness in one center is conveyed to each of the other centers. How this same bond of sympathy produces the outward signs of nervousness which should warn us of the trouble within. I have not room to explain how these nerves!

Between Friday, when I procured a copy of the clause, and Monday morning, I gave the subject my best consideration, and I had the privilege in the meantime of an interview with the Prime Minister on the subject. As the result of such consideration I determined that I could not indorse or support the principles of the education clause. Under these circumstances my duty became perfectly clear, and on Monday morning I wrote the Prime Minister tendering my resignation as a member of the cabinet. Subsequently I expressed the desire that my resignation should be acted upon at once, and to that wish the Prime Minister has now assented. In conclusion, oxes, iron castings, street hydrants, not intending and not considering it proper at this time to enter into a discussion of the merits of the matter which has caused the difference between myself and my leader, I have only to add my regret that circumstances have compelled the severance of my official relations with my leader and with my colleagues, with whom my relations have always been of the most harmonious and pleasant character, and with whom upon other questions I am in entire accord. The ircumstances, however, in my judgproperly to consider anything excepting the principles which are involved. which he claimed that the bill had been put together too hurriedly. Mr. Foster has said that the bills are hurried ones. Surely he does not mean that these are new bills. I remember last session hearing this matter discussed, if not in the House, at all events around the House, and likewise the session before that. They are, I submit, two of the best considered bills ever brought forward, and although they might not have been as McCarthy With Sifton. fully discussed with some members of the Government as some would have liked, still I venture to say that during the past five or ten years no question has received greater consideration. #### The School Legislation.

Mr. Sifton, in his statement in the House of Commons yesterday, left, the public in doubt as to the precise ground of his opposition to the educa-The Premier says he was given the impression by Mr. Sifton, in their conversation, that the differences between stance. This bears out the current opinion that Mr. Sifton is not opposed to the insertion in the bill of an education clause, guaranteeing the perpetuation of the dual system in the Territories, but that he opposes the mandate to the new provinces to divide all public moneys equitably between pub- Times touch briefly on this aspect of lic and separate schools. The Dominion Lands Act sets aside a considerable area of land in the Territories for the endowment of public schools. The section of the Act relating to the distribution of this fund is as follows:

"Sec. 25 (School Lands) (3). All moneys, from time to time realized from the sale of school lands shall be invested in securities of Canada, to form a school fund, and the interest arising therefrom, after deducting the cost of management, shall paid annually to the Government of the province or territory, within which such lands are situated, towards the support of public schools therein; and the moneys so paid shall be distributed for that purpose by the Government of such province or territory, in such manner as it deems expedient. 46 V., c. 17, s. 20,

It will be observed that the Act says a provincial or territorial government may spend the income from school lands "as it deems expedient." The clause in the bill introduced by Sir Wilfrid Laurier directs that the new provincial governments shall expend the income for "the support of public and separate schools in equitable shares or proportions." As a matter of fact, the Territorial Government has voluntarily divided the money proportionately between the public and separate schools, and would no doub continue to do so, even if the division were not made compulsory by the Federal Government. Mr. Sifton is resigning upon a constitutional point, holding that the Federal Government has no right to place a limitation upon the powers of the new provinces in respect of the distribution of the money from school lands. The objection to the proposed legislation is that it goes further than the Dominion Lands Act or the educational clauses of the Northwest Territories Act of 1875. which now govern the Territories.

A rumor comes from Ottawa to the effect that the clauses of 1875 will be simply re-enacted, leaving conditions precisely where they are at present This compromise would probably meet Mr. Sifton's objections and provide a way out of the difficulty.

The Simple Life. A remarkable letter appears in a recent issue of the London Times, signed by fourteen prominent philanthropists, all of them past or present heads of social settlements in London, protesting against the extreme of luxury which exists alongside the extreme of poverty. The writers say:

"Extravagant expenditure on food. on dress, and on passing pleasure has increased, and 28 out of every 1,000 citizens of London are paupers The national revenue is £125,115,218 and the streets in which the work. ing classes live are mean and often ill-lighted and ill-cleaned. The drink cause they are insufficiently nour-

They claim their own experience has convinced them that the example of luxury permeating the whole body of society makes for poverty. Their argument may be summed up as fol-

"having" rather than "being" as the chief object of life; education comes to be regarded as a means of livelihood, not of life, and charity tends to treat men and women as animals with no want beyond food and shelter. Luxury, which draws all classes to seek satisfaction in "having"-be it drink, pleasure, or the excitement of ostentation-so materializes the nature of people that they gradually become indifferent to the spiritual aspirations which are necessary to progress. 2. It induces the selfishness which makes the nation indifferent to the ugliness of its towns. When wealth is regarded as necessary to happiness, the sky is defiled with smoke, grass and trees are destroyed, and slum quarters are permitted in order that successful people may surround themselves with comforts and beauties. The mass of people who have to do their work amid depressing ugliness and dirt become less fit for work, a readier prey to drink and more dependent on exciting pleasures.

3. It leads to cruelty in industrial gart, and then confessed that language relations. When no good seems comcouldn't describe their conduct. parable to that which money can procure, profits are put before health, gambling before work, and the human element is lost sight of.

These settlement workers add that they do not plead for the extremes of asceticism or voluntary poverty, but for examples of simple living to counteract the example of luxury.

"We ask for the example of full lives spent in refined homes, lives which find their interest in clear thinking and deep feeling, so that people may realize that the greates: nappiness is within their reach if will seek 'to be' rather than 'to narrow definition on luxury; but we are convinced that the most satis-fying joys are those 'in widest com-monalty spread,' and that the happi-est hospitality is that where hosts and guests understand each other's interests, and have common sympathies."

The letter raises a moot point in economics, mainly, the influence on general well-being which is exerted by the mode in which each individual spends his income. Extravagance is often excused on the plea that it is good for trade, and the idea that labor is benefited by the wasteful expenditures of the spendthrift has the sanction of economists of repute. An English writer on these subjects, Mr. Hobson, propounds the theory that there would be no cycles of industrial depression, such as sweep over countries every eight or ten years, if the rich spent the whole of their incomes, or nearly the whole, instead of saving money, with the object of making it yield profits. The growth of new wants and desires is held to be beneficial, because it stimulates people to increased exertion. Another argument in favor of expenditure on luxuries is that articles of an artistic character-beautiful furniture, fine clothing, etc.-train the highest faculties of those who make them. The writers of the letter in the the question. They say:

"Money spent in luxury employs labor, and has for its results pleasures which, within reasonable limits, may be justifiable; but money spent on developing the productive powers of individuals or the land employs as much or more labor, increases tal and has for its result a healthier and wealthier population, whose increased demand for the necessaries of life makes the broadest basis of trade and industry."

There are some who try to mark of certain trades as productive, and others as non-productive, but it is impossible to draw an arbitrary line Works of art, for instance, are luxuries, but they have a refining influence, and if they are not turned out by machinery they stimulate the taste, skill and inventiveness of those who produce them. If everyone would seek to increase the beauty of things in his possession rather than the number or magnificence, the effect on society would be undoubtedly beneficial. How to use leisure and wealth well, is a problem too little studied by those who have both, for in the wise ordering of expenditure lies the amelioration of many social evils. This is the gespel which Ruskin was always

Sir Mackenzie Hits Back.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell yesterday gave his version of the famous "nest of traitors" episode in reply to the statements of Messrs. Foster and Haggart in the House of Commons several weeks ago. According to Mr. Haggart, colleagues by refusing to resign the premiership after joining in the invita-Canada and form a cabinet.

Sir Mackenzie, in the course of his reply, compared Mr. Haggart to Munchausen, and said his statement was 'so far from the truth that language fails to characterize it." He denied absolutely that he had ever sent for Sir Charles Tupper or given his consent to the formation of a Government by Sir Charles. Furthermore the bolting ministers came back to the cabinet without any pledge or promise from him (Sir Mackenzie) as to his future action. Sir Charles Tupper consented to enter the Government as leader in the Commons under Sir Mackenzie's premiership.

Sir Mackenzie charges that a month before Mr. Foster had extolled him as "intellectually and physically fit" for the premiership, he (Foster) had approached Hon. John Costigan and suggested that younger blood should be at the head of the Government, showing that the conspiracy had been bill is £174,445.271, and there are one of long hatching. While he (Sir children who cannot be educated be- Mackenzie) was under Mr. Foster's own roof, paying his respects to the the household was in another room conspiring against his leader and guest. Sir Mackenzie denied positively that he had at any time promised to resign. The first warning he had of the plot was from the late Hon. John F. Wood, a member of the cabinet.

Sir Mackenzie's story, unless it can be successfully refuted, places Messrs. Foster and Haggart in an unenviable light. They were first accused of treachery; now they are accused of falsehood.

The Spring Feeling.

[W. H. Lampton, in New York Sun.] I can feel the Spring a-coming,
I can feel it in my bones,
I can see it in the sunshine,
I can hear it in the tones of the changing winds a-blowing From the land of Summer days, Where the balmy breezes soften

There is piled up snow a-plenty In the city yet awhile, But it's melting in the presence the sun's returning smile: The trickling streams of water
That are running from the snow
Are the tears that Winter's shedding Cause he knows he has to go.

Winter's raw and raucous ways.

The crocus with its blooming
Isn't very far along,
And the birds have hardly started Tuning up their welkin song; But they're getting good and ready, And although they may be shy At plunging into Springtime

The butterflies ain't butting
Much into these early days,
And the busy bee ain't busy
In his honey-making ways.
But they will be, don't you worry
For the Spring will soon be here,
With its waking of the roses
And the rapture of the year.

There may be another blizzard, For the blizzard is a thing That is very apt to happen As a harbinger of Spring. But though the blizzard blizzes, And the earth is clad in white, We are firm in our conviction That the Springtime is in sight.

The boating on the river Is perhaps not extra fine, And the air is rather chilly On the open trolley line;
There isn't much surf bathing,
And the Summer Girl ain't here,
But the air is full of rumors
That the Spring is drawing near.

The coal man still is active, And the furnace still is on, There's a shiver in the breaking Of the season's early dawn; An overcoat is useful, And the heavy underwear Reminds us of the Winter, But the Spring is in the air.

I can feel it coming nearer, I can smell the glad perfume Of a new world budding slowly

Today the situation is more nebulous and uncertain than ever. The coalition of the various Hungarian parties making together the parliamentary majority still continues. The politicians have not succeeded in effecting any change therein. The extreme element of the independence party insists upon concessions from the throne on military questions. Francis Kossuth (leader of the United Opposition), however, counsels moderation and even a postponement of the extreme military demands. To these the Emperor gives no direct sign of conceding. His majesty evidently is waiting to see what the Hungarians will do and vice versa. Each side It is rumored that it may persist in #### declares, was a surprise, and led him to ask what he (Foster) meant.

Foster the Arch Conspirator. "Mr. Foster's reply was that an arrangement had already been made to reconstruct the cabinet under Sir Charles Tupper as Premier, and that Sir Alexander Lacoste, Chief Justice of Quebec, and Sir Adolphe Chapleau, then Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec were to form part of the new cabinet and that an appeal was then to be made to the country. This, Mr. Costigan assured me, was all news to him, and he at once asked how that was to be accomplished in the face of the declarations made by him (Foster) in the Commons in behalf of the cabinet, and by the Premier in the Senate, that an early session would be held in the next year and a remedial bill introduced, if in the meantime a satisfactory and amicable arrangement could not be effected between the Dominion Government and that of Manitoba. To this Mr. Foster replied that that could be explained by the new Premier making a declaration that a remedial bill would be introduced immediately after the election on the reassembling of the new Parliament, but before that could be done it would of Sir Mackenzie and make Sir Charles Premier." Sir Mackenzie went on to members of the cabinet to conspire for the purpose of compelling the to resign. He added that during this conference he (Sir Mackenzie) was also in Mr. Foster's house calling upon the ladies of his family.

"The first intimation I had of the plot," continued Sir Mackenzie, message received from Hon, John F. Wood who told me that 'something was transpiring which would require my serious consideration, or words to that effect." The remainder of Sir Mackenzie Bowell's statement was a recital of the incidents and sayings that occurred up to the date of the bolt. After the intimation he received from the late Mr. Wood, Messrs. Mon-tague and Haggart called on him and asked him to resign and make way for Sir Charles. They departed as wise with respect to his intentions as when they entered the room. The cabal was kept up, Mr. Foster's office being the rendezvous.

While this was on Mr. Costigan called on Mr. Dickey, the then Minister of Justice. The latter expressed the bellef that if Sir Charles Tupper and Sir Mackenzie could meet an understanding could be arrived at which would settle all the difficuties. to this time Sir Mackenzie Bowall, who had consented to Sir Charles coming to Canada to talk over the matter of the fast Atlantic service, had not met that gentleman. Thursday, March 2. There was a fairly large attendance at the market this morning. The splendid sleighing and the fact that the majority of the farmers have very little work on the farm that requires their immediate attention places them as a whole at liberty to bring their produce to the market, without any great inconvenience. There was a larger display in the smaller lines than at Tuesday's market. Sales were as a rule brisk, excepting for hay.

The favorable reports in regard to the the Iron Age stimulated speculation in steel common and preferred. Heavy absorption was again the feature in Erie, and N. Y. C. advanced on heavy buying. The extreme advance in Union Pacific seemed to attract considerable liquidation, causing a reaction of 1 per cent, but below 134 considerable support developed. London houses bought moderately on balance. The advance in Mexican Central was thought to be due to manipulation by a broker who was at one time a very large holder of the stock. After the first hour the market became very professional, but on the whole prices were well maintained. Sales 815,900.	to noo

PROGRESS OF WORK ON COUNTY JAIL

The Prisoners' Services Called Into Requisition—Needed Improvements.

These are busy days in the cells of the county jail. Extensive repairs, ordered at the January session of the county council are in progress, and the county council, are in progress, and the prisoners are doing their share of the work. William Anthistle has the contract for the cement work. All of the four male wards on the ground floor, including their cells, are to have fine new concrete floors. The old oak wood floorings are being torn up by the prisoners, and the latter are also to shovel and mix the necessary sand and ce-ment, which are being hauled into the south yard by the contractor. One ward will be done at a time, its inmates being transferred temporarily to the

No. 3 ward is the first to be overhauled, and this morning the men in black and yellow emptied the place of all its bedding and furniture, piling them in the hall, and tore up the old floor. Ward 6 on the second floor, which is used for juveniles, is to have a new floor of maple. The prisoners' lavatories are also being refitted along the most approved lines, and new walls of steel lath and white plaster will be

The jail is comparatively crowded at present, there being 25 prisoners behind the bars. If many more come in there will be some difficulty in accommodating them, while the repairs are in prog-

Suit for $5,000 Damages Against Board of Health

When the board of health adopted its famous ice regulations last year it had no idea on what dangerous ground it against the board of health?" was asked. was treading. Events have proved, however, that the regulations were but the prelude to a series of troubles for he members of the board and the local icemen, which are not by any means ended. And now a new and rather startling feature has been added to the already highly complicated situation.

Today Mr. R. M. C. Toothe, acting on behalf of Mr. F. E. Bennett, who owns a pond northeast of the city, in London township, served notice on the board of health that his client intends to sue the board for damages for con-ing impure and unfit, therefore, for the purposes of ice-cutting.

A clause in the board's regulations, which reads as follows, is referred to: "No permit shall be granted in pur-suance of these regulations to cut, harvest, sell, store, deliver or obtain ice for domestic use or for cooling purposes (except in cases provided for in section 5 of these regulations), from any portion of the River Medway, the north or south branches of the River Thames the cover Clark's Weller's or Thames, the coves, Clare's, Walker's or Bennett's ponds, or in or from any river, cove, stream, pond, bay or body proved of by the said board of health.'

BOY BACKED INTO ELEVATOR SHAFT PAY NO LICENSE

Unique Recommendation of No. Edward Stephenson, 15 Years Request for Change of Hours FAREWELL DINNER. 3 Committee Re Royal, the Badly Injured. Tecumseh House Dog.

At last night's meeting of No. 3 committee, the somewhat unique proposal was moved and carried that a certain dog, because of a certain good deed, be ous damage or possible destruction by fire the other night. It seems that the proprietor of the hotel, Mr. Hook, approached the fire chief and Ald. Matthews, and asked that the city allow the name of the London fire department to be stamped on a gold medal, which is being made by a local jeweler, Mr. Hook to pay for the medal, which will be attached to Royal's collar. Some of the aldermen appeared to regard the whole affair as a joke, but Ald. Matthews explained that the fire chief had investigated the case; had found that there had been a fire, and that the dog had at least saved the hotel from serious damage. Ald. Matthews also suggested that the city remit the animal tax on Royal, during his lifetime, and a motion to this effect was made by Ald. Abram. It carried unanimously, If the council on Monday night acreport as to whether the city shall allow the fire department's name to be used business, with prospects bright.

Mr. H. C. McBride, of McBride Marncombe, said: "Just now we are very busy, though, of course, all our rlans are not for London buildings. Some of them are for churches, schools and residences outside of London. We are, however, preparing plans for several houses in London, ranging in price from $1,500 to $5,000. As a rule, the man who builds a $1,500 house does not employ an architect, and no doubt many such houses will be built in London which we will know nothing about. We are also working on plans for several local warehouses ranging in price from $4,000 to $5,000. On the whole, we consider prospects very we consider prospects very

Mr. John M. Moore, of Moore & Henry, said: "We find business very fair just now. There is an active inquiry for houses of all classes, and we are engaged on a general run of business. As regards labor, there is plenty of all classes of it at present. Of course, in the summer, the younger generation of bricklayers always leave London and go to Detroit, Buffalo, New York and other places, where very high wages are paid, but there are al-ways plenty of good mechanics avail-able in London. I see no reason why London should not enjoy a good build-

The Cottam Bird Seed Company has purchased the old Glackmeyer residence on Bathurst street, from the estate of the late John Elliott. The building is to be remodeled and converted into an up-to-date warehouse, with handsome offices. It is a fourstory structure, and in its day the pride of London. It was in this house that his Majesty King Edward VII. (then the Prince of Wales) stopped when he visited London in 1860.

Week's Circus Will Be Held Here in June to Raise Funds for the Reunion.

The semi-centennial committee and today, and decided to accept the offer of the Mundy circus people to hold a show in London during the week of June 16. It will in all probability be held in the fair grounds. The Old Boys are putting on the show so as to avoid as far as possible the canvassing of the public for funds. According to the circus agent, the Old Boys will make not less than $3,000, and perhaps $4,000. The Old Boys are to receive 20 per cent of the main gate receipts, 15 per cent of the receipts of the paid shows, and 25 per cent of the receipts for all privileges.

The show will be continued for an entire week, and will embrace 24 distinct shows. It will be billed all over the London district within a radius of 30 miles, and it is expected that not less than 50,000 tickets should be sold

It is well known that Griffiths was elected chairman of the committee of the National Association to the American League or the National League, and all of them expressed the Sun. During the recent baseball conclave committee of the National Association to look after the interests of the minor leagues regarding the draft rule before the National commission at Cincinnati. The election of Griffiths was, it is said, in opposition to Powers' wishes, and the resignation of Griffiths as president of the Jersey City club was said to have been due to the act of retaliation upon the part of Powers.

Powers said today that while he could other National League teams, without an League, and all of them expressed the other National League teams, without an exception, were not stronger to any ap-

The only teams calculated to make Mc continued, "but if any responsible club owner wishes me out, I will spare the league the necessity of calling a special meeting to remove me." mation of one player, are Chicago and Pittsburg. The Chicagos will improve possibly over their 1904 form, and they will also have the advantage of a long spring training trip. Frank Selee, ever since he took hold of the Chicagos, has been up with the leaders, but he has not been able to develop real champion ship material. The Pittsburgs have a lo of experiments to make this year, but they are still under the management of Fred Clarke, who will be able to play again himself. Clarke knows what a pennant-winner means, and he also knows terrific beating.

When these players say that McGraw's team will "walk home" with the pennant, they mean that the success of the champions depends entirely on the ability of pions depends entirely on the ability of the star pitchers, Mathewson and Mc-Ginnity, to repeat last year's record. "If they can pitch as well this year," say these players, "there will be nothing to it. All of the other clubs will be beaten before they start, for McGraw's cham-pions will be invincible with either Matty or the Iron Man in the box. But should one or the other go wrong, there would be a different story to tell. McGraw's men have all the others beaten at base-running and run-getting, and that tells running and run-getting, and that tells he rest of the story."

Local baseball fans will receive this expert prediction with much satisfaction, for they are particularly anxious to have the National League pennant come here again next fall, so that McGraw's men will play the winners of the American League race for the world's championship. And it may be stated also that there will the London Curling Club yesterday. baseball sharps across the line who are the American League championship race this year. While it is conceded that the Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Chicago teams are powerful combinations of playing talent, the heavy hitters representing the Forest City are generally looked upon with wholesome respect. A well-known manager, who has had much experience in handling major league teams, and who has won a couple of championships, said recently that if harmony had prevailed in the ranks of the Clevelands last year they might have won the American League pennant without much trouble. But from all accounts there was serious friction in the team, caused by an open breach between Armour, the non-playing manager, and Napoleon Lajoie, the star second baseman, who is the best player in the profession today. Armour came from the minor leagues, where he made a splendid reputation, but when it came to handling veterans who had been stars in the major league firmament for a number of years, he found that he had a problem that was most difficult of solution.

Lajoie had the support of the players, and Armour's ideas as to team play were practically valueless. When Armour was Chicago teams are powerful combinations Lajoie had the support of the players, and Armour's ideas as to team play were practically valueless. When Armour was released by the Cleveland club to take hold of the Detroits, Lajoie was placed in charge of the Forest City team. This was just what his fellow-players wanted, and it is freely predicted that from the very beginning of the American League race this year the Clevelands will be in the hunt. The team as a whole is a powerful one. In batting strength it apparently excels all the other teams in the circuit. pared to Deal With Request of the Firemen.

A meeting of No. 3 committee of the ity council was held last night. It was expected that the application of the local fireman for an increase in salary would come up, but the aldermen were not prepared to deal with the request, and it was laid over.

The application of F. E. Roberton for a position of street watering inspector was referred to the city engineer.

The memo from the engineer re the largement of the rag and bone area London was filed. Manager Carr, of the street railway company, in a letter to the committee, refused to pay for a length of hose cut by a street car in South London during fire last fall. Mr. Carr claimed the railwaymen were not to blame. The matter was laid over. The petition of Robi. Fraser et al for an electric light on the corner of Waterloo and Victoria streets, was laid over. The request of F. A. Greer et al for a light on Kenneth avenue was turn to the "straight and narrow," similarly dealt with.

Fireman Bolton, who has been transrred from No. 1 to No. 2 fire station by Chief Clark stated that he is dissatisfied with the change, and he asked to be allowed to appear before the committee to state his grounds. The equest was granted. The recommendation of Engineer Graydon, that the asphalt pavements be watered by day work this year, was accepted, and it will be sent to the ouncil. > Police Court Clerk Moule yesterday placed a new "blotter" upon th iragistrate's desk, the old one, which began its duties on the first of April 1901, having become filled. The "blotter," as is well known, especially to the law-breakers of the city, is the book which contains the magstrate's record of every case which has come before him. In the first column ap-pears the name of the delinquent, and then follows, across the page, the name of the person who laid the information, tse statutory name of the crime, the verdict (guilty or not guilty), the sentence, and, lastly, any further remarks descriptive of the crime. Many a sad history is summed up in these brief records. Some of the names appear only once, which means that their owners are not out-and-out criminals, but have fallen once from grace. These are always dealt with in a special manner. Every effort is taken to encourage the offenders to reand to prevent them from falling irrevocably into the regular criminal ter reveals the fact that there is regular criminal class in London. large number of the names appear time after time. When a man has appeared three or four times in court for drunkenness, non-support of his family, theft, or the like, he becomes marked with a brand which is very hard to shake off. The saddest of all cases are those of young people who, having been dealt with in the juvenile court, persist in their evil ways, pass the age limit and appear as regular criminals in the police court. One such lad, for whom the magistrate did all in his power when he was still under the jurisdiction of the juvenile court, is now serving a term in the pentitentiary, although not more than year or so over the statute age of 14, when the boy, as far as the police court is concerned, becomes a man. It appears from the records in the blotter that only new criminals receive any marked moral benefit from their punishments. After a man has spent two or three terms in the county jail, punishment sometimes appears to lose its corrective effect. But the heaithy, corporal effect remains, and the whole some food, and regular hours of work and rest at the jail do a great deal of good in removing the effects of dissi-
