INDIAN TROOPS BEFORE KING

Another Coronation Review at Buckingham—Presented Fine Spectacle.

His Majesty Wore a $50,000 Sword, the Gift of a Maharajah.

London, Aug. 13.—The Indian coronation troops to the number of 1,300 were reviewed by King Edward at Buckingham Palace to-day. The arrangements were similar to those of yesterday, when a body of colonial troops was reviewed. The Prince of Wales presented medals to the men, who are all picked troops, including Lord Curzon's body guard. They presented a fine spectacle in their handsome uniformed uniforms. The Princess Victoria and other royal persons took snapshot pictures while the ceremony was in progress. Queen Alexandra and many notables were present. The King wore a jeweled sword that cost $50,000, which was presented to him yesterday by the Maharajah of Jaipur.

The scene on the terrace was a very brilliant one, the European military and levee dress being quite outshone by the splendid apparel of the Indian princes. The Queen received a greater ovation than the King and both passed a line of notables, bowing and shaking hands. The young sons of the Prince of Wales, the Princes Edward and Albert, constituted themselves aides to the King, and fetched several general officers, who smilingly obeyed their summons to an audience with their grandfather. The great lawn below the terrace was a marvellous sight in red, green and blue. The Bengalese, Sikhs, Gurkhas and Punjab cavalry made a strong contrast to a single khaki spot where the British regulars from India stood. At the word "at ease" the British lances, rifles and carbines were grounded and the contingents one by one filed past the royal canopy, saluting their Majesties and receiving medals at the hands of the Prince of Wales.

At the close of the review the troops were drawn up in front of the King, who addressed the officers as follows: "I wish to convey to you the high satisfaction it has given me to see this splendid contingent from India. I almost feared, owing to my serious illness, that I would be prevented from having the advantage of seeing you, but I am glad to say that by God's mercy I am well again. I recognize among you many of the regiments I had the advantage of seeing at Delhi during my tour of India. I hope the contingent has enjoyed its stay in England, and that all may return in safety to their homes. I wish you to convey these sentiments from me to all ranks of your command."

STINGING TIMES FOR THE POLICE

Beehives Are to be Thrown Among them if they Close Religious Schools.

French Peasants Determine on Vigorous Resistance—One Unsuccessful Attempt.

Brest, France, August 13.—Soldiers have been requisitioned in several places in Finistère during the past two or three days to protect police commissaries engaged in closing religious schools from threatening crowds. A battalion of infantry and a strong body of mounted gendarmes are expected at St. Meen, Folgoet and Ploudaniel to-day.

The inhabitants of Folgoet are engaged to-day in building a wall of masonry behind the principal door of the church school. At St. Meen scouts on horses, bicycles and even automobiles are reconnoitering in order to give alarm of the coming of the police. The peasants declare they will throw beehives among the gendarmes, and will put beehives in the barricades.

Brest, Aug. 13.—Thirteen schools belonging to White Sisters remain unclosed in Finistère. The expulsion of the sisters at Comarnau was undertaken to-day. Scouts on automobiles reached the town early in the morning from Quimper and reported that troops were on the way. The towns were rung, bugles were blown and boys ran through the streets ringing hand bells. Large crowds gathered around the railway station and around the school. Several bodies of gendarmes and two companies of infantry arrived by a special train. The commissary ordered the school evacuated, at which the crowd shouted, "Long live the sisters." The gendarmes advanced toward the school, but they were repulsed and a general scrimmage followed. Later the troops reached the building and the police tried to break down the doorway with axes, but the resistance of the people continued.

UNKNOWN KILLED

A fatal accident occurred at Bothwell Tuesday evening, the victim of which is an unknown man who is supposed to be a tramp.

The accident occurred a few miles this side of the village. A G. T. R. freighter was pulling out when they ran over the man who was lying asleep on the track and evidently intoxicated. The trainmen noticed him but could not warn him of his danger. The body was taken to Bothwell and coronor Dr. J. L. Bray, of this city, was sent for. The doctor went to Bothwell yesterday and upon investigation decided that an inquest was unnecessary.

The remains of the unfortunate man were buried in Bothwell as the body could not be identified.

THE WOMAN'S BUSY TONGUE

She was Scarce Released Before it Got Her Into More Trouble.

This Time Judge Houston Sent Her to Jail to Think it Over.

The vagaries of a woman were markedly exhibited at the Police Court this morning. Mrs. Agnes Harvey, a typical Irish woman in appearance and brogue, was charged with using insulting language to Sarah Bentley. In court she wept and wiped away her tears with an orange colored handkerchief. She even cried bitterly and called the heavens to judge that she was an innocent woman. The case was adjourned till Monday, and the woman walked smilingly to the streets. On the corner she again met Sarah Bentley, and called her ugly names. Another warrant was issued and Mrs. Harvey was again arrested, and this time sent up to jail to await the completion of the trial.

This time she didn't smile as she came down the stairs, but wept bitterly and wailed, "O, Dear God, what did I come to Chatham for?"

She attempted to kiss her husband at the foot of the stairs, but he wouldn't have it that way. In the cells the woman continued her wailing. When the case was being tried Judge Houston had difficulty in keeping the two women from talking. Mrs. Harvey kept protesting that her temper was "rized" and she was provoked.

Sarah Bentley meanwhile kept emphasizing the fact that Mrs. Harvey had her scared and she had to come to the police for protection, also that Mrs. Harvey had called Sarah Bentley the name of every animal she could think of. She further alleged that her neighbors a block away could hear her bad language.

Richard Chrysler was summoned as a witness. He didn't appear and a warrant was issued for his arrest. The case was adjourned till Monday and Mrs. Harvey was only out about five minutes when she was brought back and sent up to jail.

R. A. CHOSEN

Ex-Ald. R. A. Harrington Elected Deputy Chief Ranger of the I. O. F.

Windsor, Ont., Aug. 13.—The second day of the Foresters' convention was devoted chiefly to the election of officers. The distinctively favorite candidate for election to the office of High Chief Ranger, C. H. Merrifield, had no difficulty in landing the office. The new officer is warden of Perth county and his home is at Monkton. R. A. Harrington, of Chatham, won out in the race for Deputy Chief Ranger after a few moments of seesawing with the ballots. The office and honors of the high secretaryship fell to Frank McCormick, of St. Thomas. Arch-Duncan Davis, who for a number of years has filled the office of high treasurer, will succeed himself. Dr. Henderson, of Sarnia, was made chief high physician of the order. Windsor Foresters succeeded in picking one of their number, A. H. Clarke, K. C., on the roll of high court officers and accordingly the office of high councillor has been annexed to his office as clerk of the peace for the county of Essex. J. H. Hamblin, of London, and R. D. Cameron, of Lucknow, will constitute the board of auditors for the ensuing term.

Sarnia and Galt put up a strong fight for the next convention and the island town succeeded in winning out over her frontier rival.

Miss Bertha Garrett, formerly of the Sutherland-Innes Co. offices, but lately of Geo. Stephens & Co., has accepted a position with the Sutherland-Innes Company and leaves this evening for New Orleans.

IS ENJOYING HIS BIG TRIP

J. H. Ferguson Tells of the Splendid Time he is Having in British Guiana.

The Climate is not so Warm as in New York—Description of the Natives

J. G. Ferguson, in an interesting letter to a friend, dated at Georgetown, British Guiana, July 8, 1902, says:

I suppose you in Chatham are pitying poor John's suffering with the terrible heat away down under the equator. I will venture to say, in fact I am sure that we are not suffering as much with the heat in Demerara as you are in Chatham. I have been here now nearly three weeks and as yet I have not found the heat nearly as disagreeable as in New York. Yesterday was a very warm day and I was working hard all day. When I came home to dinner at 6.30 p. m. I was quite surprised to hear the lady of the house, an old resident, complaining of the terrible heat. Of course it was warm but the oppressiveness was nothing to what I have felt in New York. We have not had a night yet that I could not sleep comfortably. The thermometer goes up to 150 during the day but there is always a breeze so that unless you look at the thermometer you don't realize it. About 4 p. m. it commences to get cool. The temperature is the same all the year around, ranging between 75 degrees at night and 90 degrees in the shade during the middle of the day. At present we are in the middle of the rainy season, which very much resembles the month of April. You can count on a couple of showers every day, which last from a half to an hour, and then the sky clears up. When it rains it pours no gentle showers from heaven here. There is very little thunder and lightning. The country along the coast and for 15 miles back is low, flat and marshy, beyond that are the mountains and the gold diggings. The staple product of the country is sugar and its by-products rum and molasses. The main industry is gold digging, and of late diamonds in quantities, but of a very small size, are being produced. The country is just now owing to the very low price of sugar. It is rather surprising, but you don't see anything like the quantity of flowers here that you see in the north. You see very little bloom. The plants are all foliage varieties, occasionally you see a rose bush. In the botanical gardens you see plenty of plants with beautiful foliage, corrugated leaves, etc., but there is an entire absence of flowers comparatively minded. The colony is not inured with the temperate zone.

The people here have a very high opinion of Canadians and Canadian energy. You hear a great deal of talk about Canada. They are very anxious to do business with us, but Canadian manufacturers have got to learn how to put stuff up so that it will stand the climate, which is very damp. The English understand this much better than the Canadians.

I stated in my last letter that there were in Georgetown 50,000, of which 15,000 are white. I am told there are 60,000, of which between 2,000 and 3,000 are white, which, I think, is more correct. You see all shades here, from the Creole to the jet black, but the half in half predominates; they are mostly all mixed blood. The Creoles are very dark skinned and are supposed to be native born of European parentage, but very yellow negro calls himself a Creole, and it is pretty hard to tell where to draw the line.

The people carry everything on their heads from a pail of water to a sack of grain, or an armful of firewood. The Coolie women carry their youngsters astride of one hip. They project their hip out and the kids being all naked, they sit straddling the hip while the mother holds them on with her arm. They use small donkeys almost exclusively instead of horses. They don't seem to be much bigger than a big St. Bernard dog, but are very strong. They draw loads you would think would stagger an ordinary horse and then two or three negroes on top of that. They say the climate is hard on horses, but I don't believe it. It is simply an old fashioned way of doing. Every time I see a donkey cart and a colored man I feel like telling him to get out and throw the donkey into the cart and haul it himself and he will get along faster. You see a great big six foot man in a donkey cart being hauled about by a little donkey that wouldn't be much higher than his knees.

Yours truly,
J. G. FERGUSON.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 14.

A SAD MISAPPREHENSION.

Our really excellent, though somewhat touchy, young local contemporary has evidently taken umbrage because The Planet mentioned the fact that this great home journal was the only newspaper in the west to furnish its readers with a seven-column complete, detailed and accurate account of the coronation on the same Saturday afternoon as the coronation occurred in London, England, and alluded to the fact that we had been the recipient of many kind eulogies on the enterprise displayed. The reference to this big "heat" has, unfortunately, made the Banner angry and it worked itself into an editorial frenzy yesterday.

Now this is unfortunate, because The Planet had not the least intention in the world of "rubbing it in" on the Banner in mentioning the matter. To entirely allay our contemporary's hysteria we may assure it that we never gave it a thought in connection with the circumstance. It would be unfair, anyway, to look for the Banner to give the news as early as The Planet. The people do not expect it. And it would be cruel to ask it. With its splendid mechanical equipment and superior facilities this great home journal is expected to lead the smaller local papers, and it is no disgrace to them that it does.

For our young contemporary's efforts in the matter of the coronation news, this home journal has nothing but kind words. It gave a nice little synopsis of the ceremonies the following Tuesday, which wasn't so slow, and it deserves much credit therefor.

The Banner doubtless has a mission in its own small sphere and it is a pleasure for The Planet to tender it any and every encouragement. It is a source of sincere regret to see that, on this occasion, it has misapprehended our remarks. This great home journal had no more thought of reflecting on the Banner than it had on the Highgate Monitor or the Merlin Mirror. They are all excellent young publications and deserving of consideration and encouragement.

But it was thoughtful of the Banner to call attention to the fact that the Detroit News gave the text of the coronation despatch in its "second edition" on Saturday afternoon. This kindly and complimentary inference, marking the enterprise of The Planet in publishing it IN THE FIRST EDITION of this great home journal, is appreciated. It is not often that a newspaper in a small Canadian city is able to give the news an edition ahead of an energetic American rival in a centre some twenty odd times its size.

And the cablegram was also secured on Saturday afternoon by the Hamilton Spectator, the Toronto News and Star, the Montreal Herald and possibly a few of the other enterprising Canadian dailies in large centres, whose splendid mechanical plants and equipment and exceptional facilities for rapid news gathering enabled them to use the long and important despatch concurrently with The Chatham Planet.

All of which, we believe, warranted us in saying that, invariably, Planet readers ARE FIRST SERVED—AND BEST SERVED.

THE REFERENDUM.

The Prohibitionists have decided to try and carry the Referendum and will attempt to raise a fund of $10,000 for campaign purposes. At a convention held in Toronto bitter things were said of the politicians and the mention of Mr. Ross' name roused the meeting's ire. They now see what their party feeling would not permit them to grasp before and that is that they are being played with by professional prohibitionists who are politicians first, last and always.

Anne Helyar's Coronation.

Henry VIII. addressed letters to the Mayor and Communitate of London signifying unto them that his pleasure was to solemnize the coronation of the most dear and well beloved wife, Queen Anne, at Westminster, on Whit Sunday, willing them to make preparation as well to fetch her grace from Greenwich to the Tower by water, as to see the city garnished with pageants in places accustomed for the honor of her grace, when she should be conveyed from the Tower to Westminster. Everything was duly carried out in accordance with this Royal command. The girl queen (the only one of Henry's consorts besides Catherine who was crowned) on arrival at Westminster walked under a rich canopy, the Bishops of London and Winchester, bearing up the laps of her robes while her long train was carried by the old Duchess of Norfolk. She was set in a rich chair between the choir and high altar, and after she had rested a while, she descended to the high altar, where she prostrated herself, and the Archbishop of Canterbury said certain collects over her. Then she rose, and the bishop anointed her on the head and on the breast, and she led up again to her chair, where the archbishop set the crown of St. Edward on her head, and then delivered the sceptre of gold in her right hand and the rod of ivory with the dove in her left hand. After the Te Deum the bishop took off the crown of St. Edward, being heavy, and set on her head the crown made for her, and so she went to Mass. Just out of the cloister of St. Stephen's chapel was made a little closet in which the King with divers ambassadors stood to behold the service. The proceedings, which commenced at seven in the morning, were very protracted, it being six in the evening before the Queen quitted the banquetting hall.

Beyond Pardon.

"Forgive him!" exclaimed the great orator, "No, sir. There are some things that a man can never forgive. If it were only an ordinary quarrel, I could forgive him; if we had had a stand-up-and-knock-down fight I could forgive him; if he had slandered me I might forget it, but some things a man cannot forget, however hard he may try."

"Did you ever have a political argument with him?" asked the great politician.

"No, we were both on the same side."

"Both fall in love with the same girl?" inquired the young lover.

"No; he never knew the girl I married."

"Tried to get the better of you by underhand means in some business transaction?" suggested the business man.

"Not so. I never had any business dealings with him. I'll tell you what it was, though. I was making a speech one night—it was the effort of my life—and he was present. I had worked in some heroics and came to the pathos. I could see I carried the audience with me as I told the little story I had interpolated to illustrate the point I was making. There was hardly a sound in the vast auditorium. I could see that the people were hanging on every word, every syllable that I uttered. At that moment—the very moment of my triumph—"

"Well," asked the others together, as he hesitated.

"At that moment this man yelled, 'Speak up!'"—London Tit-Bits.

Some Vicissitudes of Manuscript.

Writers who need unsolicited contributions to magazines give more trouble than they are aware of, and it is not to be wondered at that they are sometimes treated with scant courtesy. An editor is human, and there are moments when the burden he carries is so heavy that another stray in the shape of an illegible manuscript, is likely to make him break down. None the less, we sympathize with the hero of the following story. He is very young, but he is beginning to get accepted, and some months ago he was delighted to receive a letter from a well-known editor inviting him to call. He did so, and was asked to send in stories and sketches in the course of a few weeks he sent in several, and one of them was printed.

Then there was silence, and he went and saw the editor, and asked if he might have his MSS. back if they were not going to be used. It was quite a friendly interview, and the editor was in his most genial mood when he said: "My dear fellow, I will do my best to find them."

The fact is I have three large brown paper bags at home, and I take manuscripts back with me and put them into those against the time when I shall have leisure to read them. They are all full, and I don't even remember into which of them I put yours." This happened months ago, and the little sketches, probably quite salable, still dwell in the brown paper bags.—London Morning Post.

African snakes.

The African cobra is regarded somewhat reverently by the natives of that country, who once a year kill a cobra de capello and hang its skin to the branch of a tree tail downward. Then all the children born during the last year are brought out to be touched with the horned serpent's protection. The cobra de capello divides with the horned viper of Africa the questionable honor of being the "worm of the Nile," to whose venomous tooth Cleopatra's death was due.

The Kaffirs use the venom of this snake's cousin, the puff adder, to poison their arrows and when they have any small quantity left they swallow it, having a theory that it will protect them from the bad effects of the puff adder. The Snake tribe of the Punjab says that the bites of snakes do not hurt them, and if they find a dead serpent they dress it in clothes and give it a superb funeral.

RECUPERATIVE EFFECT.

Considered with reference to its recuperative effect, there is not so much good in the ordinary vacation as there is in a single bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla. The latter costs $1; the former—well, that depends; how much did yours cost last year? Hood's Sarsaparilla refreshes the tired blood, sharpens the dulled appetite, restores the lost courage.

THE CAPITAL.

How Ottawa was selected as the seat of Government in Canada—Lady Head's Sketch.

It is about 45 years since Canadian cities and towns were engaged in competing for the honor of being chosen as the national capital. Toronto, Kingston, Ottawa, Montreal and Quebec were in the running, and each place was urging the unexcelled scenic and other natural advantages which it enjoyed.

In the fall of 1857 Sir Edmund and Lady Head visited Ottawa, and were entertained to luncheon by the citizens under the marquee at the north end of Major's Hill, now Major's Hill Park. Hon. R. W. Scott, president over the feast, and he took the opportunity to impress upon the Governor and his lady the many natural charms which the town possessed.

But, in truth, they were quite evident for themselves. It was a glorious day, and from the plateau where the company were assembled a magnificent panorama lay outspread in the foreground the steep banks of Barrack Hill, now the site of the Parliament buildings, descended to the river. They were clothed with foliage, upon which the autumn tints were just beginning to appear. To the west the Ottawa hurled itself over the Chaudiere Falls, and emerging from masses of foam and spray, went sweeping grandly past. The City of Hull was still in embryo, and on the north side of the river green slopes extended to the water's edge. They were unoccupied, save by a little edifice called "the Chapel of the Voyageurs," where every fall the shanty men would perform their religious duties before going to spend the winter in the woods.

Lady Head was charmed with the beauty of the scene, and, being a skillful artist, made a clever sketch of the surroundings. Later in the year Lady Head went to England, and there is little doubt used her influence in favor of Ottawa as the national capital. Doubtless, too, the sketch was of use in emphasizing the picturesque features of the locality.

But the beauty of the place was not the only argument used. Hon. R. W. Scott, in a carefully prepared memorial, advanced many cogent reasons, which were considered stronger than those urged by the Mayors of the other places interested. Moreover, according to report, the fact that Ottawa was capable of being easily fortified was pressed upon the Duke of Wellington, and so the great soldier's aid was given in its favor.

No wonder that early in the following year a despatch came to the effect that the Queen had decided upon Ottawa because it combined more advantages than any other place in Canada. The despatch containing her late Majesty's decision was dated December 31, 1857, a day which it is likely will ever be borne in affectionate remembrance by the people of the capital.

A CANADIAN PICTURE.

Aberdeen Journal on British Colonial Art Exhibition.

Among the pictures in the "British Colonial Art Exhibition," just opened in the galleries of the Royal Institution in Piccadilly, says the Aberdeen Journal of June 17, is a portrait of Lord Strathcona, by Mr. G. Home Russell, Montreal, son of Mr. George Russell, Watson street, Aberdeen. The other portraits include one of Lord Milner, and one of Mr. Rhodes, by Mr. Tennison Cole, and another of the late General Sir Andrew Clarke, by Mr. Rhodes. The exhibition ought to be interesting at the present time, and it should also be successful, seeing that it has the support of royalty and other distinguished personages, among the pictures being H. R. H. the Prince of Wales, a number of past and present colonial Governors and Governors-General, all the Agents-General, Lord Strathcona, and Lord Mount Stephen.

Russell's portrait of Lord Strathcona, is said by the critics to be a capital one, and this favorable criticism is all the more gratifying to the artist, when it is stated that his lordship does not care much for giving sittings. Mr. Russell, however, was fortunate to meet Lord Strathcona on the occasion of the Prince and Princess of Wales' visit to Canada, and his request for an opportunity to lay his hand in reproducing a likeness on canvas of his lordship was granted, the sittings having been given in London. Born in Danf, Mr. George Home Russell came to Aberdeen with his parents about a quarter of a century ago. He then went to Canada, and, giving himself entirely up to the profession of art, he has made for himself a high position in the art world, his landscapes and portraits having for several years past been hung in the place of honor in the Canadian Royal Art Academy. Mr. Russell, who is married to an Aberdeen lady, Miss Morrison, has been on a visit to his friends in Aberdeen during the past month, but left last night on his return to Canada.

—From the Globe of June 24, 1852.

Gloomy thoughts become habits to the dyspeptic. He looks on the dark side of things and every mole hill becomes a mountain. His condition affects his business judgment and mars his home relations.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures dyspepsia and other diseases of the organs of digestion and nutrition. It gives buoyancy of mind as well as health of body because it removes the physical cause of mental depression.

It enables the perfect digestion and assimilation of food, and the body is strengthened by nutrition which is the only source of physical strength.

It was afflicted with what the doctors called nervous indigestion. Took medicine from my family physician to no avail," writes Mr. Thos. C. Lever, of Levee, Richmond, Va. "At night would have cold or hot feet and hands, alternately. I was getting very nervous and suffered a great deal mentally, thinking that death would soon claim me. Always expected something unusual to take place, and was impatient, and greatly reduced in flesh. I could scarcely eat anything that would not produce a bad feeling in my stomach. After some hesitation, I decided to try a few bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Pleasant Pellets. After taking several bottles of each, found I was improving. I continued for six months or more, and now I have to be careful yet, at times, of what I eat, in order that I may feel good and strong. I fully believe if any one suffering with indigestion or torpid liver or chronic cold would take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Pleasant Pellets and observe a few simple hygienic rules, they would soon be greatly benefited, and with a little perseverance would be entirely cured."

Biliousness is cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

ALL CANADA AT TORONTO

There will not be a province or a piece of territory in the Dominion that will not be represented at the exhibition to be held in Toronto this year from Monday, Sept. 1st, to Saturday, Sept. 13th. To mark their appreciation of this evidence of the country's confidence, the Executive have increased the prize list until now it is proudly boasted that, with special, upwards of $37,000 will be distributed in prizes among the exhibitors, six-sevenths of which will find its way to the agricultural community. While this large sum proves the magnitude of the exposition, the enterprise of its managers, and the comprehensiveness of the exhibits, the fact that $30,000 is to be spent in attractions and special features, the latest inventions as well as the latest novelties in the amusement world, and for more $7,000 for music, shows that while the agricultural and industrial interests of the country are to be well looked after, the people's enjoyment will not be neglected. America has been scouring for all that is best in every line of attraction. Belossi Kiralfy, the greatest master of spectacle on earth, has been secured to produce in all its brilliancy and gorgeousness his stupendous production "The Orient," which was the wonder of London, Eng., at Olympia for a year, and that is only one of the really wondrous features that have either been engaged or are being negotiated for. Then there are the new Dairy Building and the new Art Gallery, which will greatly increase the value of the exhibition as a factor in the education and elevation of the people. In the Dairy Building not only will there be exhibits of dairy products, utensils, and so on, but lectures and demonstrations will be given twice daily in a hall provided with seating accommodation for 600 people. Reduced rates will, of course, be available on all lines of travel.

HEART AND HAND.

You gave your hand to me, as though
The low scrub-growth that spanned
The gorge, the dimpling lake of blue,
The keen and fresh breeze that blew
Across the reach of sand.

Too proud! The grace you scorned to do
Where scarce your feet could stand;
'Twas but for sheer fatigue I knew
You gave your hand!

How clear that scene comes back to view!
Your cheeks' faint roses fanned,
The gorge, the dimpling lake of blue,
The black boats on the strand!
I gave you all my heart, and you—
You gave your hand! —M. O. Nelson.

THE MAN WITH THE FAD.

Only Those Who Have a Fad Find Life Worth Living.

The world is full of faddists, but even at that it is better for the world to be full of faddists than full of lunatics, and that is the choice.

The average man has a fad. Perhaps he collects birds or bugs or geological specimens, postage stamps or rare coins. Perhaps his fad is for books with quaint bindings or quaint interiors. Perhaps it is for flowers or ferns or mosses or fungi. Perhaps it is for something more expensive.

It may not take the collecting form. He may be a faddist about things that can't very well be collected. He may be a golf fiend or a ping pong maniac, a baseball crank or a lacrosse imbecile. He may have wheels on the subject of automobiles, or he may be a perpetual motion idiot or a flying machine enthusiast. Anyway, you may be tolerably sure that your next door neighbor has a fad and that his next door neighbor has one, too.

After all, it is largely fads that make life worth living. When we are not indulging in our own enjoyment nothing so much as sneering and jeering at the fads of our fellows, while they, doubtless, sneer and jeer at ours.

Great men have fads as have little ones, rich men have fads the same as the poor. Indeed, the great man would find his greatness oppressive could he not turn to his conservatory, his library, or his golf bag occasionally. Of what use is wealth to the rich man who has no tastes to gratify? Chamberlain is a faddist on orchids, Carnegie is a faddist on free libraries.

It is well enough to say that the busy man has no time for fads and the sensible man has no need for them, but it is not true. The busy man who has no time for anything but business becomes a mere machine in the wealth producing scheme of civilization; the sensible man who is specially interested in nothing is in danger of dying of paresis.

It is a bad sign when a man has no fad. It means that he has given up all interest in life, or that he is excessively disgusted with his place and station, and when he gets to that pass look out for him. He is liable to become an Anarchist—that is, a faddist on the subject of dynamite bombs. A good fad is a camera.

Canning of Mr. Fox.

A well authenticated story is told by one of the keenest of the members of the Toronto Hunt Club, which seems to prove that foxes, if they have not equal reasoning powers with the human race, at least are conversed with an excellent imitation. The weather during a hunt in the recent season was cool and crisp and there was just enough dampness on the leaves and grass to give the dogs good scent. A fox was soon unearthed and kept running in a circle about three miles in extent. A knoll in the centre overlooked the entire course and after the hunt had continued for some considerable time the fox made for a giant and venerable chestnut tree which had fallen across a ravine. Into the hollow tree dashed the fox, the dogs being about 150 yards behind. Reynard was seen to emerge from the other end of the log and soon made off through the forest.

The dogs were thrown off the scent at the hollow log, but soon caught it again across the ravine and kept up the chase for about half an hour or more. Then the fox once more disappeared in the hollow log to emerge before the dogs had scoured on, but in about another 30 minutes the fox for the third time entered the log and still again disappeared in the forest across the ravine. The dogs were baffled, and began to suspect something. They secured on, but in about another 30 minutes the fox for the third time entered the log and still again disappeared in the forest across the ravine. The dogs were baffled, and began to suspect something. They secured on, but in about another 30 minutes the fox for the third time entered the log and still again disappeared in the forest across the ravine.

A Professional Pioneer.

Prof. Sharp of Queen's University, Kingston, is one of the recent settlers in Temiskaming. Up to the end of last winter's session he occupied a chair in the college, and delivered lectures regularly, and now he announces that he has hidden farewell to the role of the lecturer and to Queen's classic halls, and henceforth the life of a farmer is the life for him. He has 320 acres of land and is taking a course at the Agricultural College in Guelph and the other is helping his father, the professor, to grub out stumps and plant potatoes. The dogs trailed on, but in about another 30 minutes the fox for the third time entered the log and still again disappeared in the forest across the ravine.

A DANGEROUS TRAITOR.

The Result of Pechantre's Plot to Kill the King.

Probably no well meaning poet was ever more taken by surprise than was M. Pechantre, a gentle and mild-mannered French dramatist of the seventeenth century, who was one day arrested for high treason as he was peacefully eating his dinner at a village inn.

The landlord of the inn where he was in the habit of dining discovered on a table a piece of paper on which were written some unintelligible phrases and below in a plain, bold hand, "Here I will kill the king."

The landlord, consulted with the chief of police. Clearly this clew to a conspiracy ought to be followed up. The person who had left the paper had already been remarked for his absent air and gleaming eye. That man was Pechantre.

The chief of police instructed the landlord to send for him the next time the conspirator came to dinner.

When Pechantre was shown the evidence of his guilt, he forgot the awful charge against him and exclaimed: "Well, I am glad to see that paper. I have looked everywhere for it. It is part of a tragedy I am writing. It is the climax of my best scene, where Nero is to be killed. It comes in, here let me read it to you." And he took a thick manuscript from his pocket.

"Monseigneur, you may finish your dinner and your tragedy in peace," said the chief of police, and he beat a hasty retreat.

Scarabeus, Egypt's Sacred Beetle.

Scarabeus, the god beetle of the lower Nile, has been worshipped, petted and feared by several benighted sects of Egypt since the time "when the mind and history of man runneth not to the contrary." Like the other sacred creatures of idolatrous countries, several mythical fancies are woven around this entomological rarity.

The number of its toes, thirty, were supposed to symbolize the average number of days in a month. On each new moon day it deposited a ball containing 300 eggs, which the Egyptian priests assured their followers referred to the number of days in the year, the brilliant golden color of the ball itself personifying the sun. In ancient times this curious beetle was declared to be of but one sex, the male, but modern investigation has exploded that one myth at least.

In connection with the Egyptian name the Gnostics as well as some of the early Christian fathers speak of Christ as the scarabeus and symbolize him as a man with a beetle's head. The Egyptians always embalmed this sacred insect.

PAMPHLETS FOR TOURISTS

Grand Trunk Issues New Summer Resort Publications.

Two new publications have just been issued by the publicity department of the Grand Trunk Railway System. One of them is descriptive of the charming summer resorts on the east coast of Lake Huron, including Southampton, Port Elgin, Kincardine, Goderich and Sarnia Ontario and the beaches that are reached through Port Huron, Mich. The publication is enhanced by direct reproductions in half-tone from photographs and is printed in the Luxotype process. In addition to a description of the resorts, the country there is information for the lover of rod and gun, lists of hotels, with accommodation and rates, and a great deal of other data that is of interest to anyone who is looking for a summer play ground.

The other new publication is a description written in a story-like form most interesting, and dealing with that vast wilderness embracing the region around French River. The descriptive matter takes the tourist over the northern division of the Grand Trunk to North Bay and from there across Lake Nipissing to Chaudiere Falls on the French River, which is as far as navigation by steamer can be enjoyed. The rest of the journey is made by canoes, several portages being necessary; but the scenery is so grand and so magnificent that anyone is well repaid for a visit to this charming locality.

The hunting and fishing in this comparatively virgin district is unexcelled—black bass, muskies and pickerel being the most numerous of the finny tribe found here, the big fellows of the muskies species running from 20 to 30 pounds are a frequent catch. The charms of this wonderful country beyond Lake Nipissing are not all confined to the summer season—it is beautiful in August and September, and it is gorgeous in October and November.

During the first two weeks of November the deer-hunting is good, and in duck-hunting season a full bag is obtainable at any time. The waters of the streams tributary to the French river are literally alive with gamey fish of all varieties and sizes. This interesting booklet just issued by the Grand Trunk includes all information how to reach the locality, and other particulars looked for by the sportsman or tourist. Copies sent free on application to G. T. Bell, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Montreal.

PRINCES AFFAIRS

London, Aug. 13.—Yesterday afternoon a young German student, who was an intimate friend of Crown Prince Frederick William when at the University of Bonn, said: "With reference to the reports that the Prince wants to marry Gladys Deacon, an American girl, I have just had a letter from his Highness saying that his little love affair was settled six weeks ago, and that it concerned not an American but a German girl."

"This latest fancy of the Prince is a Miss Schuckert, daughter of a wealthy electrical manufacturer of Nurnberg, who attended a seminary at Bonn. The Prince liked her and paid her considerable attention, but his Imperial father's objection even to a platonic friendship induced the Prince to break off the acquaintance."

The illustrious potentates of the Indian Empire in London for the Coronation are magnificent in the bravery of their marvellous jewels, glimmering satins and costly turbans, but, as a matter of fact, they become accustomed more readily to the dazzling effect of many jewels than perhaps any other kind of personal adornment. One is never wearied of admiring the snow-white garments, beautiful and artistic in texture and design, of the Indian magnates who throng all the social functions going on in London at present, but one very soon wearies of the dazzle of the many jewels worn by both the Oriental Princes, and the grande dames in London drawing-rooms. There is a strong suggestion of the Parisian Diamond Company running through all the designs in jewelry one sees; and half the time one finds it difficult to believe that the Maharaja of Idar, who is, perhaps, the most gorgeous of all the Indian potentates: here this year, is not simply an advertisement for that greatly-advertised diamond emporium in Bond street. It is perfectly true that the eye is "dazzled" by the jewels which adorn the turbans, necks and wrists of the dark-faced men, whose thoughts would fain penetrate to the possibilities of the gatherings which assure peace within the empire, for the bonds of gracious and profuse hospitality are very strong and lasting, especially in the estimation of Orientals, and the men who are gathered together in the forces from beyond the seas, measure and view with increasing interest the strength as represented by the various sections of soldiers and officers, and administration of many portions of the Imperial whole.—Lally Bernard, in The Globe.

Social Instincts of Ants

A swarm of Formica pratensis was closely pressed in its nest by an army of the same species, and crowds of alarmed defenders issued from the entrances to the nest and flew to take part in the fight. Like Satan, the tempter of old, I placed near them a beautiful drop of honey on a piece of paper. At any other time the honey would have been covered in a few instants with ants gorging themselves, but this time, as if by magic, the ants came upon it, tasted it for scarcely a second, and returned to it restlessly three or four times. Conscientiousness, the feeling of duty, invariably prevailed over gormandising, and they left the honey to go and be killed while defending the community. I am bound to own, however, that there are ants less social, in whom gormandising does prevail.

Compared to the manners of other sociable animals, and especially to those of man, the manners of ants exhibit a profound and fundamental aggregation of facts of convergence, due to their social life. Let me mention devotion, the instinctive sentiment of duty, slavery, torture, war, alliances, the raising of cattle, gardening, harvesting, and even social dogence through the attraction of certain harmful means of employment. It would be ridiculous and erroneous to see in the fulfilment of this series of acts, individual reasoning, the result of calculated reflection, analogous to ours. The fact that each is fixed and circumscribed within one species, as well as the fatalistic character it has in that species, proves this sub-graduate a mistake to refuse to recognize the deep natural laws that are concealed under this convergence. Is the case different as regards our actions though they are infinitely more plastic and more complex individuals? I do not believe it.

I have been unable to give more than a short sketch of the social life of ants. Let each one study it for himself, and he will experience in doing so the deep enjoyment that comes from sounding the secrets and laws of nature, while at the same time he will enjoy the delightful satisfaction of having the main lines of a social example that we ought to be able to imitate, though we cannot do so, on account of the too large dose of egotistical and ferocious instincts that we have inherited from our ancestors.—Augustus Forel, in International Monthly.

He hit everything that came near, except the pipe. Fine for William.

George Perrin was chatting with a number of friends last evening when The Planet asked him how he viewed the match.

George smiled. "Oh, it was very fine," he said. "Geo. K. Atkinson was certainly the Adonis of the contest. His posing while at bat was a dream, being both artistic and graceful—in fact, as the artist says, every move a picture."

"Wm. Sheldon, the young man of the old boys, many, many thanks to the Chatham Mineral Baths, jumped around like a boy with his first pair of long pants. His pretzel stroke to leg was great. He hit everything that came near, except the pipe. Fine for William."

"There was a hush of admiration when Dr. Bray took his place on the green, and he looked the part for fare you well. But somehow the wires got crossed and the Dr. says, 'Back to the mines for mine,' disgusted but not disheartened."

"Geo. Cowan was a bit overtrained, at the bat the alderman showed the right spirit and, if the bill had only been where he shattered the atmosphere, it would have been pay day on the Wabash."

to spring the news upon the young man's father, who objects to his son's marrying until he reaches a certain age. The young man who assumed the name of "Brown's," seeks seclusion in a country place ten miles from the city, but to his inexpressible dismay all their friends and relatives drop into the same place. The complications that arise from the fact that the young man tries to keep this marriage from them and his plan to effect them effectively but gracefully are said to be very humorous.

"Brown's in Town" Company appears at the Grand to-morrow night. Reserve seat sale now open at the Central Drug Store.

A GIRL OF THE PEOPLE

By Mrs. C. N. Williamson

Which I did, and got into the carriage.

There was no moon, but the sky's purple curtain was thickly crusted with sparkling stars; and as we drove away from the station I could see dark masses wavering tree-branches on either side of the road, and I could smell through the open window the aromatic scent of pines. Here and there a distant light gleamed like a yellow star out of the blackness, but there was no sound anywhere save the roll of our wheels and the ring of our horses' hoofs on the hard ground.

"Have we a long drive?" I quietly asked, after we had sat in silence for five or ten minutes.

"About a quarter of an hour now—not much more. Are you frightened?"

"No."

"But you are excited, though you try to keep me from finding it out. Well, you are a brave girl. And I don't think that you will ever regret this evening's work."

"I hope not," I impatiently returned. And we spoke no more.

Twice only our road wound. The rest of the way—and it must have been four miles in all—was straight as a Roman road, till at last we came to tall stone gate-posts, set in a high brick wall. We turned in between, and I looked out eagerly, half expecting, after all the precautions for "secrecy" which had been taken, that I should be requested or more forcibly induced to sit back from the window. But I was allowed to do as I pleased.

We passed a lodge which, however, showed no lights; drove along a winding avenue that ascended for a little, and then abruptly dipped. With this, we came suddenly in sight of a house—a big square building with towers that was silhouetted against the sky. Most of the windows were dark, but I could see two on the ground floor that shone dimly, and there was a light over the door at which we presently drew up.

By the time that the groom had sprung down from his seat to let us out of the carriage the house door was opened, and the illumination from within showed my curious, observant eyes that the liveliness of coachman and groom was identical with that worn by the pair who had driven us from the Marble Arch to Waterloo Station.

An elderly butler received us with the air of one who awaited an expected event; and as I entered the house I racked my brain to comprehend why I should be feeling as if I had lived through exactly this episode before.

I had never visited this house, or any other house like it, as far as I could remember, yet I had the impression of having seen it (not in a former state of existence, as happens sometimes in one's experience), but not so very long ago.

We passed through a big conservatory, not too well kept, into a square hall with a high, ornate ceiling supported by round pillars of ugly reddish marble, the walls hung with many life-sized portraits of men and women in the dress of bygone periods. Where had I seen them all? And why did I turn expectantly, searching for a wide staircase with shallow marble steps, to find it in the precise position where I had looked? I began to feel as if I were in a dream. At the foot of the staircase stood a tall grandfather clock with a big white face, very convex. I saw that it was half-past ten.

"Would you like to go immediately to your room?" asked the woman in black, whose bright eyes regarded me with keen attention. "Or—"

"I should like the explanation you promised," I interrupted. "You can have that in your room as well as elsewhere if you choose. Shall I show you the way there?"

I assented, and she led me upstairs. Oddly enough, as soon as we had passed out of the great hall, the impression of having known the place faded. The corridors above, dimly lighted, and the bedroom into which I was taken at last, were all utterly strange.

The room was very pretty, and strikingly different from any other part of the house which I had yet seen. The bedchamber, so like garrets that I had possessed in my palmy days in town that my eyes opened wide in surprise as I gazed at them. On the dressing-table were flowers, and a medley of pretty silver things, some of which appeared remarkably familiar. There was a jewel-case, too, that I seemed to know; but the climax of strangeness was reached when the woman in black threw open the door of a huge, mirror-fronted wardrobe.

"You won't want for frocks, I hope, while you stay here," she said. And there, in the different compartments, hung the dresses I had left in my boxes at Easel street, even those which on that last miserable day I had sold to the second-hand clothes dealer.

When I stared, speechless, my companion drew my attention to a chest of drawers in another part of the room. "Here is plenty of underlinen," she announced. Mechanically I moved nearer as she pulled out drawer after drawer. A fragrance oforris-root and violets came to my nostrils. In one drawer lay folded silk stockings with my monogram embroidered at the top. In another were petticoats, silk and lace. Nothing was strange to me; I had seen, and possessed, every article before.

"This jewel-case may interest you," the woman went on, crossing to the dressing-table. "There are no thieves here"—with a slight emphasis—"so it has not been locked."

She raised the lid; I peeped in, and saw the things which had been stolen from me in Easel street.

"Rather like a fairy-tale, isn't it?"

said the woman in black.

"It is a trick—the strangest trick that was ever played upon me!" I exclaimed.

"At least, it relieves your mind. I should think of you as a fair play. I intended you. The persons who have planned this surprise would hardly have taken so much trouble, you must see, if they had brought you here to murder you."

"There are other evils in the world besides murder," I answered. But my brain felt as if wheels were going round inside it. When they stopped turning, was the dim thought in my mind, I might be able to solve this puzzle, but not while they kept whirling round.

"Only good is intended for you," said the woman. "You are a very fortunate girl—or you will be."

"I shall certainly go mad, whatever else I am to do," I cried. "If I am not given an explanation of all these mysteries. You tempted me with that advertisement. Now I am sure that it was only a bait, and nothing more."

"I told you in the train that, in course of a couple of hours or so, I would explain as far as it was in my power to explain. That I will do now, if you will sit down. You are as white as death, and I don't want you fainting on my hands."

I sat down on a small sofa at the foot of the bed, and the woman in black took possession of a chair not far away. I watched her in silence, waiting, and presently, with the air of considering her words, she began:

"I have only been agent in this—last affair. Now that you are in this house, I am able to tell you what I could not tell before—there is a power behind the throne, for which I have been acting."

"What power has been interested in your movements for some time, and you have done few things that have not been known at headquarters. The power has pulled the wires; you and other shall I say 'puppets'—have danced. Always you have danced a little nearer, and a little nearer, to—this. And now all your troubles are over. You may rest."

I jumped up from the sofa. "You talk like a mad woman!" I ejaculated. "We are in real life, not in a play."

"The world's a stage; the men and women mere players," she quoted, calmly. "Why do you excite yourself? Why not, now that you've come into said, as I said—rest?"

"Who is the 'Power' you talk of?" I demanded, hotly, and scornfully, too. "Who are you? What is this house?"

"Too many questions at a time."

"Were you the agent of the same employer?" I began, "on the night when you sat in the stalls at the Lyceum Theater and showed me the scar on your arm?"

Her face changed slightly. "No," she said. "I was not. Still, even then I did not act for myself, but for another."

"You shall tell me for whom you acted then, for whom you acted now?" I cried, passionately, stamping my foot. "I am not a child, but a woman, and I will not be cheated and played with."

The woman in black smiled. She had not a pleasant smile. And her big white teeth looked cruel. "You make me laugh," she drawled. "If you are not a child, you certainly behave like one. You say 'shall' to me, and you expect to enforce your commands?"

"At least I can go away," I retorted. "Since you have been at some pains to bring me here, I suppose you would not like that?"

"You will not be so foolish as to leave this house when I tell you that it is your own—absolutely your own. The servants are your servants; the very plate on the sideboard in the dining-room is yours; and I may add that it is well worth having."

If I had never seen John Bourke her words might have fallen like seeds on barren ground. But I thought what it would be to have such a house as this for my own; what a different position mine would be—not in his eyes, for I knew him to be as far above mercenary temptations as the sun was above the earth—but in the eyes of his world. And so again I was silenced, if not convinced.

"I have told you all now that I am permitted to tell," the woman went on, "except my own name. That you may know if you like. It is Leigh—Sintra Leigh. Did you ever hear it before?"

Her eyes pierced mine to find the truth in their depths, as if she doubted the evidence my tongue might give. But I thought for a moment, and then answered that the name was strange to my ears. It was so peculiar that I knew I could not have heard it and forgotten.

"When am I to hear the rest of this mystery of yours?" I asked, trying to put contempt rather than curiosity into my voice.

"Not of mine; of another's. My employer will see you to-morrow, probably in the morning, and I have no doubt the information which you lack now will be supplied."

"But you say you had a different employer at the time you went to the Lyceum?" I objected. "Above all things I wish to know the secret of that night. Why my mother—why Lady Cope was so affected when she saw the scar. Why she went away with you? What happened while she was away? Why the scar like yours on her arm was burnt, and the meaning of the words she tried so hard to make me understand before she died? It was these things which your advertisement in the paper led me to believe that I might expect to have explained."

Always the face of the woman in black changed when I brought up the subject of the heart-shaped scar. She looked away from me, as she had before, while she answered:

earth—but in the eyes of his world. And so again I was silenced, if not convinced.

Always the face of the woman in black changed when I brought up the subject of the heart-shaped scar. She looked away from me, as she had before, while she answered:

"I am not to be held responsible for all that you may have taken for granted from that paragraph," she returned, in the stilted way, without abbreviations, which I had discovered to-night was characteristic of her in speaking. "But my present employer knows as much as I know—at least, as much as I did know until this evening—and will decide how much it is best for you to understand. Can you be patient until to-morrow—since impatience will advance your interests not at all?"

"Needs must, when certain persons drive," I quoted, recklessly. For I had reflected that the shelter of this mysterious house was better than no shelter for to-night.

"I will bid you au revoir, then," said Sintra Leigh, with a look of relief. "Will you have supper sent up?"

I thanked her stiffly, refusing the offer, and in a moment she was gone. Hardly had she closed the door when I ran to it, not only turning the key in the lock, but slipping a small bolt into place. Then I went to the windows, raising one and looking out to satisfy myself that it was high above the ground. Last of all, I set to work examining the walls. I had heard of secret ways of entering rooms in old-fashioned country houses, and weary and spent as I was I could not sleep until I was certain that there was no danger of being disturbed.

CHAPTER XX.

The Doorway With the Curtains.

I felt more than ever like a shadow-self in a dream, as I prepared for bed and brushed out the heavy waves of my long hair with my own old silver-backed brush. How had the people here managed not only to collect all my belongings from Easel street, but to retrieve the stolen jewels and the dresses I had sold?

I was desperately eager to know everything, but my weary body cried out for rest, and after a delicious bath in the bathroom adjoining my new bed-chamber, I had no sooner laid my head on the pillow than I seemed to be sliding down, down steep, grassy banks of—

THE GIRLS OF KASHMIR.

Why They Are Not as Beautiful as They Once Were.

The girls of Kashmir in former times were so beautiful and so pure that the Punjab, in India. They commanded a large price, and parents in moderate circumstances for centuries past have been in the habit of parting with their daughters to place themselves in easier circumstances, and the daughters have generally been quite willing to escape from a life of penury and labor to one of opulence and ease.

A laboring man in this part of India cannot earn over $2 or $3 a month, while many receive for their daughters as high as $1,000. There are some cases where $5,000 was paid, but the usual price has been from $100 to $500.

The practice became so common as well as so damaging that a severe law was enacted prohibiting any one from removing any woman from the country, but it is said that the business goes on now as it has done for hundreds of years, and to that practice may be charged the fact that the women of Kashmir are not as beautiful as they once were.

The process of taking all the beautiful girls away, leaving only the "old" and "ugly" ones to continue the race, has lowered the standard of beauty. Most of the women and girls perform field labor as much as the men, and their dress is of the coarsest and plainest materials, consisting of a garment like a nightgown made of white cotton. There is no effort to have it fit.

The condition of women in Kashmir is a very sad one, but one from which there does not seem to be any present escape. It is a constant struggle to live, without the least hope of any accumulation or of ever seeing better days.

The men only receive about 5 cents a day and the women generally about 3 cents, and that provide only the coarsest food.

PICKINGS FROM FICTION.

There is nothing that is enough for a woman, but all—"The Mississippi Bubble."

Overdone heartiness is nearly as nasty as underdone mutton—"Comments of a Countess."

No man can be brave who considers pain the chief evil of life—"The Heroine of the Strait."

We ought never to do wrong when people are looking—"A Double Barreled Detective Story."

Occasion's everything, but the rub is to know an occasion when you see it—"The Lady Paramount."

I'd be slow in advising anybody to crook, but when you feel you're in the hands of sharpers it's the only way—"Rockaway."

The master poets love to deal with the victory of the vanquished, which the world's thinkers know to be greater than the victory of the victors—"Nathan Hale."

Be sure, before you give your love and your trust, that you are giving them not only to one who deserves them, but to one who really wants them.

Useful Purposes of Rosin.

There are many useful purposes to which rosin can be applied outside of those of general practice. As a non-conductor of heat it is used in the protection of water pipes, particularly in crossing bridges, where the pipe is laid in the middle of a long box and the whole filled with melted rosin. Rosin is also used in supporting basement floors in machine shops, which may be laid over some dry material, as spent molding sand, which is carefully leveled off, and the planking laid upon temporary supports separating it about two inches above the sand.

Numerous holes about two inches in diameter being bored through these planks, melted rosin is forced through them by means of funnels until the whole space is solidly filled, and then the upper flooring is laid upon these planks. In case the floor is subjected to shocks sufficient to break the rosin it rapidly joins together again in much the same manner as the regulation of ice.

The Dragon Slayer.

At an English school a pompous younger whose father, it was well known, had been a successful omnibus driver was one day fingering ostentatiously a large seal which he is in the habit of wearing, representing St. George and the dragon, and, having drawn the attention of a school companion to it, remarked carelessly:

"Ah, one of my ancestors is supposed to have killed the dragon, don't you know?"

"Good gracious!" inquired the other, somewhat anxiously. "Did he run over it?"

Gerald—I didn't say that he blushed. Geraldine—What did he do?

Gerald—Left Yale and entered Harvard.

Eudora—In what way?

Edmonia—Why, she is not a Colonial Dame, but when she came to the colonial reception she had on a more elegant frock than any one of the Dames.

Little Willie—Pa, what does this poem mean by saying it was a fruitless search?

Father—It probably applies, my son, to the quest of some man who was looking for pineapples on a pine tree, Chicago News.

Slowly Dying From Catarrh

Thousands are in this terrible condition but don't realize their danger. If you have the slightest taint of Catarrh, would it not be wise to commence Catarrh treatment now and be perfectly cured in a short time? This pleasant remedy cures without the use of drugs, atomizers or snuffs. You inhale the medicated vapor which spreads to all parts of the breathing organs, kills the germs and heals the inflamed surfaces. Catarrh cures the throat and nose instantly, and never fails to cure the most obstinate catarrh, lung and throat troubles. A trial will demonstrate the value of Catarrh, which sells for $1, small size 25c., at Druggists or Folson & Co.

Sandwich Islands.

The term "Sandwich Islands" recurs in news items, scientific addresses and in lectures with a frequency which suggests some other cause than ignorance of the fact that the early name of the group has long been obsolete. One cause of this survival, especially where these islands are mentioned in public speech, is the inability of the mainlanders to pronounce "Hawaii." He usually says "Haywaylan" and knows that he is wrong; so to protect himself from a lingual infelicity he says "Sandwich Islands" and lets them go at that.

Beauty is born in the blood. Beauty is more than "skin deep," it is blood deep. When the blood is tainted by disease the flesh will feel it and the skin will show it. Sallow or muddy complexion, pimples, blotches, and eruptions are only the surface signs of impure blood. Face washes, lotions, complexion powders, may palliate the evils but they cannot cure the disease. The only cure is to cleanse the blood of the poisonous matter which is the cause of the outbreak in the flesh and skin. Impure blood can be absolutely purified by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Its effect on flesh and skin is marked. Sores heal and disappear. The skin becomes smooth, and regains its natural color. The eyes brighten and sparkle, the whole body is radiant with the brightness and beauty of health. "Golden Medical Discovery" contains no alcohol, whiskey or other intoxicant, and is absolutely free from opium, cocaine and other narcotics. The use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets assists the action of the "Discovery," by cleansing the system of clogging matter.

The Penpackers.

There are not many Penpackers in the state of Pennsylvania, and the name of the Philadelphia jurist who has been nominated for governor has aroused considerable discussion. There is only one Penpacker family in Pittsburgh and one in Allegheny. Allegheny has a Panabaker. That is really the nearest thing in the directory to Penpacker, for Penpacker originated in no suggestion of coin about it and is a corruption from the old Dutch or Pennsylvania German Panabacker, or Panabaker, which merely means a man who bakes in a pan.

The Cause of Nervous Headache.

This most distressing and common malady doubtless has its origin in some unbalanced condition of the nervous system. Probably the simplest, safest and most efficient remedy is Polson's Nervine. Twenty drops in sweetened water gives immediate relief, and this treatment should be supplemented by bathing the region of the head with Nervine. To say it acts quickly fails to express the result. Sold everywhere in large 25c. bottles.

The husband rises up and lights a candle and, placing it at the bed foot, says to his wife, "There, dee hoo!"

POWERFUL MECHANISM.

The Picking Up Machine Used in Grappling Ocean Cables.

A truly wonderful piece of mechanism is the "picking up" machine used in all grappling and cable hoisting operations. It is a powerful variety of the steam winch family, but also a most aristocratic and elaborate member, fitted with gear changing clutches, patent brakes and other ingenious appliances. To give some idea of its capabilities in dry figures it can at slow speed lift twenty-five tons at the rate of one mile an hour or at fast speed ten tons at the rate of four miles an hour. Moreover, it can be quickly altered and adapted to changing circumstances in speed or lifting weight.

All being made ready, the big grapple, attached to 700 or 800 fathoms of chain and rope, is passed over the bow sheave, or pulley, and as soon as it reaches bottom the ship is sent slowly ahead. Back and forward across the path of the cable, as pointed out by the friendly marking buoys, we steam. Several times the grapple catches something, only to lose it hold again, probably an inequality upon the bottom, although a bosun's mate mumbles "mermaids' grottoes," but at last comes a steady strain. Every soul on board hangs over the bow, watching the grimy grapple rope come steadily up and over the well oiled pulley. At length the grapple itself appears, holding tight on to the truant.

May Day Custom in Belgium.

The most honored month of the year in Belgium is the month of May, known as the Virgin's month and consecrated to the Virgin Mary. In the province of Liege young maidens have a quaint way of predicting their love affairs this month. A group of girls arrange to meet at sunrise and start to walk through the fields until they come to a hedge, quite unobserved from the highway, where they generally choose a honeysuckle bush beneath the protecting branches of which to perform their mystic operations. Each maiden selects three blades of dew laden grass, the tops of which she cuts to equal length and to each of which she attaches a colored silken thread. Black represents a bachelor, red an unknown lover and green the secret desires of the maiden's heart. Ten days afterward they return to the same spot where they left the blades growing, and that blade of the three chosen which has surpassed the others in height reveals the lover the maiden is destined to have.

The Old Way of Passing Bills.

A document found among the Duke of Rutland's papers at Belvoir castle throws a curious light upon the mode of getting private bills through the house of commons in the days of King Charles II. The case in hand was the divorce bill of John, Lord de Roos, an affair that caused a great deal of gossip in its day. One of his lordship's agents wrote in January, 1697: "On Wednesday last I got six and forty of the house of commons to the Dog tavern, in the palace yard at Westminster, when were present Mr. Attorney General and Mr. George Montagu. As soon as they had dined we carried them all to the house of commons, and they passed the bill, as the committee, without any amendments, and ordered it to be reported the next day."

Shakes That Were Shakes.

Over on the eastern shore of Maryland there was a man who was suffering from a severe case of "shakes," as they call fever and ague in that country. One morning the local physician called on the patient and asked him how he felt.

"N-n—not a bit b-b-better," was the shaking man's reply.

"Your case is a very peculiar one and hard to take hold of," remarked the doctor sympathetically.

"Yes, that's so," remarked the patient, trying to smile. "The c-case sh-sh-shakes so I don't w-wonder you c-c-can't get hold of it."

Their Words Struck.

When Mark Twain was in Egypt, he one day arranged with a friend to meet him at one of the pyramids. The latter engaged two old but experienced Arabs to guide him to the place. He afterward complained that, although he had some knowledge of their native language, he could not understand anything that his guides had said to him.

"You should have hired younger men," Mr. Clemens told him. "These toothless old fellows talk only gum Arabic."

THE TORTURE

OF NEW SHOES

A North West Lady Tells how "Foot Elm" Gave her Relief and Comfort.

It is difficult to get a pair of new shoes that fit the feet perfectly at the outset. Most times they pinch and squeeze the foot, and cause great discomfort until they are "broken in."

"Foot Elm" shaken in new shoes makes them fit as comfortably as an old pair, prevents the "drawing" of new leather, and prolongs the life of the shoe.

Here is the experience of Mrs. Francis M. Norris, Nanton, Alta., N. W. T.

"I have for years suffered with tender feet and it has been perfect torture to wear a pair of new shoes, no matter how soft or easy. I am glad to say 'Foot Elm' has given me relief and is a very valuable remedy for tired feet."

Charming Summer Resorts

Two interesting little books of the illustrated folder type have been issued by the Grand Trunk Railway System, one being entitled "Songs of the Nipissing," and the other "The Eastern Coast of Lake Huron." The illustrations are very numerous, are of all sizes, and are scattered through the pages to elucidate the text and appear to the eye just as the story told in the letter press does to the mind. The prevailing note in these little works, upon which a profitable half hour may be spent by the reader, is the craving for change, and there can be no doubt that men and women who live in the stress and strain of to-day, and feel the throbs of advanced and advancing civilization, do require change—complete change for mind and body. The haunts described here minister to the intellectual as well as the physical health of the dweller in cities. The physical exercises that can be obtained among the woods and waters create and promote a perfectly sound bodily condition, while the multifarious life that is to be found, stimulates the intellectual faculties and prompt inquiry and investigation into nature's ways as they are revealed in her flora and fauna. The maps which are in these pamphlets enable the visitor to the wilds, to realize his bearings at whatever part he may be, and the general information given enables him to economize his time and spend it to the best advantage.

Editor Planet: One would think, from the amount of crushed stone, steam roller and other work being expended, that the Board of Works felt that the very existence of this city depended upon keeping that scrap of Wellington street between William and the market in first class shape. ## A WARM SUBJECT.

The Editor of The Planet: Dear Sir:—In reply to Mr. J. W. Humphrey's remarks on the coal question, I do not know where he has obtained the information that we would not book orders under $8 per ton. In your issue of the 6th instant you report us as stating that we are not booking any orders. This is correct. We have refused to accept orders for future delivery at any price. If we cannot get a full supply of coal later, when it is needed, we will divide up among our customers what coal we have on hand, charging whatever the current price at the time may be.

As to Detroit prices, if the dealers here were foolish enough to sell their coal last season at fifty cents per ton below its value, the public were the gainers. With reference to Mr. Humphrey's assertion that coal was now selling in Detroit and orders being booked at $6.50 per ton, delivered any time during the winter, I enclose copy of letter received this morning from one of the leading coal dealers in Detroit. Your kindly giving space to same will oblige.

J. L. SCOTT.

800 Union Trust Building, Detroit, August 11, 1902.

J. L. Scott, Chatham, Dear Sir:—Your favor of August 9, I do not believe the Detroit dealers are accepting orders for future delivery at any price and nearly all of the dealers in Detroit who have coal are getting $7 per ton for it and are not anxious for orders at that. One or two dealers have not advanced their price above $6.50, but they have no coal to deliver at any price, so it would make no difference whether their price was five or ten dollars, as the customers could not get the coal. I have not heard of any dealer accepting orders for future delivery and I think the in-

Everything for Summer Wear

From crown to toe—everything a civilized man wears is here except shoes.

Most garments sold in the store are made in our own factory. Well made they must be, or the factory would not have grown so steadily from a small beginning—would not be able to pay the best wages, and provide spacious, airy workrooms for its employees—but these things go with good work as naturally as growth goes with sunshine.

Other lines of garments and furnishings we buy, but our own ideas—and yours—are often worked into them. When you think of it, it takes about as much technical knowledge to buy right as to make the article yourself.

Between making and buying this store has gathered for you the finest all-round collection of summer wear that Chatham men have ever been invited to choose from. If a thing is seasonable, sensible and stylish we're showing it. Test us.

Billings Was the One at Fault.

"Your honor," said the attorney for the defence, "I wish to prove by this question that the witness is a man of quarrelsome disposition, hard to get along with, and on bad terms with his neighbors. Now, sir," he continued, whose farm is next of yours?"

"Well," answered the witness, "here's the Billings farm, and the—"

"Stop right there! One! at a time. Are you on friendly terms with Mr. Billings?"

"I can't say that I am."

"Are you even on speaking terms with him?"

"No, sir."

"Whose fault is it?"

"It's his fault, I reckon."

"Oh, yes; it's his fault, you reckon? How long has it been since you have spoken to him?"

"About 14 years as near as I can remember."

"Now, sir I want you to tell this jury why you have not spoken to Mr. Billings for 14 years."

"Gentlemen," said the witness, turning to the jury, "the reason why I haven't spoken to Mr. Billings for fourteen years is because that's the length of time he's been dead."

Pure Coconut Candy for Children.

Take one pint of sugar, a quarter of a pint of desiccated coconut and a quarter of a pint of milk. Boil these ingredients in a granite-ware or porcelain-lined saucepan for five minutes. Remove from the fire, set the saucepan in a dish of cold water and stir briskly until the mixture is creamy. Pour on a lightly buttered dish and mark it squares while warm so that it may be easily broken when cold. Coconut cakes are very easily made, and would be a variety. Beat the whites of two eggs to a stiff froth; add gradually a small cupful of sugar, the same quantity of coconut, either desiccated or freshly grated, and one tablespoonful of flour. Drop on a buttered tin in small round cakes and bake for five minutes in a quick oven.—Ladies' Home Journal.
