—OR, THE—
Mistress of Darracourt.

CHAPTER XV.

Her heart cried, "No! no!" a hundred times. It was like him to think that he was unworthy, to talk of a shadow and a stain, but it should not be considered so by her.

"No!" she murmured, as—all slowly and with an exhaustion, faintly commingled with an exaltation, which sprang from the storm of passion which had assailed her—she changed her habit for her dinner dress. "No! Nothing that any one else has done shall separate us! It is for me to decide, not you, dearest! You not worthy of me! Not worthy because I chance—and by what mere chance!—to have the poor, miserable dress, and you have none! It is I who am unworthy of you," she murmured to the glass as if she were addressing him. "What am I but a mere senseless, ignorant schoolgirl, pitch-forked into a position above my real one, while you are a strong, noble-hearted educated man! Oh, I did not know what a Nature's nobleman might be, but I know now, Harry, dear! No, nothing shall separate us; nothing shall come between us! I love you, I love you! Let that be sufficient. Take me, Harry, my love, my husband!" and she stooped forward and kissed the glass. It was not in her eyes, the reflection of her own face that she touched, but his, with its bright, flashing eyes and clear, sun-kissed brow.

Oh, there is no woman more capable of a full, absorbing passion than your seemingly cold one, who hides beneath her repelling snows the smouldering fires of a volcano!

She had sent Susie away on some excuse, and the dinner bell had rung some time before; having gained something like composure, she went down. For a reason which to men is inexplicable, but which women will understand at once, she had put on one of her best dresses and the Darracourt diamonds. And this though Harry Herne could not see her. For the first time she felt proud of her beauty which she knew now she possessed, for was it not her beauty that had helped her to win his love! And now, therefore, it had become precious to her.

All through the dinner Lucille's happiness seemed to radiate from her. A light shone in her eyes that had never rested there before. At times she would seem to lose herself as if in some delicious dream, and would awake from it with a little start and a flush. Harry Herne's voice sang sweet music to her heart, that throbed in unison.

And all the time, while she laughed and chatted as usual, Marie Verner's keen eyes watched her with scornful malice that concealed itself behind glances of sisterly affection. When they went into the drawing room, Lucille gently drew her to the piano.

"Sing for me, dear," she said, and the love that thrilled her whole being seemed to ring and thrill in her voice. Marie smiled at the keys a cold, exultant smile.

"I can sing until, say two o'clock," she replied, brightly, and began instantly. She sang song after song, and all of them of love; and Lucille stayed by the window, looking out at the night in a dreamland of her own—and Harry Herne's! Then she heard the stable clock strike ten, and, going to the piano, bent over the singer and kissed her, and without a word went upstairs.

Marie Verner looked after her, then brought her hands down upon the keys with a discordant crash that almost caused Mrs. Dalton to jump from her chair.

"Dear me, Miss Verner, whatever has happened?"

"The first bar of a symphony by Wagner, Mrs. Dalton," she said, immediately; "but I won't inflict it upon you to-night."

And she got up and tripped from the room, humming the last song she had sung, so that the footman who heard her as she passed through the hall went downstairs declaring that Miss Verner really was the lightest-hearted young lady as could be, and that she was like sunshine in the 'ouse.

Her room was near Lucille's, and as she passed the latter, she paused a moment and listened. Then she went and changed her dress for her dressing gown, let her hair down, and with a brush in either hand, went and knocked at Lucille's door.

"May I come in, dear?" she said, as Susie opened it carefully.

Lucille called out to her in the affirmative, and she entered with her face screwed up into a charming little smile, as she went and leaned over the chair on which Lucille was sitting, her hair flowing like a cascade of golden brown over her shoulders.

"Will you let Susie brush my hair for me to-night?" she said. "I feel dreadfully lazy!"

Lucille looked up at her affectionately.

"Why, of course? Why don't you let her do it every night? I have offered her times out of number, and Susie would be only too pleased, wouldn't you, Susie?"

"Oh, yes, miss!" assented Susie, with whom Marie Verner had ingratiated herself, as she well knew how.

"There, sit down!" exclaimed Lucille, jumping up and pushing her gently into the chair.

She sank into it with a little sigh.

"How good you are! And it is very good of Susie to do double work. Ah, how I wish, Susie, you could brush my locks into something like Miss Darracourt's hair."

"Oh, it's very pretty hair, I'm sure, miss!" said Susie. "But," she added, as if truth could not be suppressed, "it isn't quite so beautiful as Miss Darracourt's."

"No, a long way off that, Susie!" assented Marie. "It isn't given to every one to have hair that would send an artist raving mad with longing to paint it! But it's fortunate that some men like yellow better than brown, isn't it, Susie? I hear that Harry Herne is rather partial to the blonde, isn't he, Susie?"

WOMAN WOULD NOT GIVE UP

Though Sick and Suffering; At Last Found Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Richmond, Pa. — "When I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was in a dreadfully rundown state of health, had internal troubles, and was so extremely nervous and prostrated that I had given up all my feelings. I would have been in bed, as it was I had hardly strength at times to be on my feet and what I did do was by a great effort. I could not sleep at night and of course felt very bad in the morning, and had a steady headache.

"After taking the second bottle I noticed that the headache was not so bad, I rested better, and my nerves were stronger. I continued its use until it made a new woman of me, and now I can hardly realize that I am able to do so much as I do. Whenever I know any woman in need of a good medicine I highly praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound." — Mrs. FRANK CLARK, 3146 N. Tulip St., Richmond, Pa.

Women Have Been Telling Women for forty years how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored their health when suffering with female ills. This accounts for the enormous demand for it from coast to coast. If you are troubled with any ailment peculiar to women why don't you try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound? It will pay you to do so. Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

the mere suggestion that Harry Herne could see anything to admire in her, overwhelmed her with confusion.

Lucille had seated herself on a couch, and was, looking on at the operation with smiling, far-away eyes, but at Marie's cunning speech a bolt seemed to go straight through her heart. Then the sharp pain gave place in a moment to a swift indignation. How dare Marie, any one, couple his name with a servant-maid; with anyone, indeed, but herself?

"You don't answer, Susie," went on Marie Verner; "but I mustn't tell tales out of school, must I?" and she yawned carelessly.

Lucille's face grew hot, and then cold, but Susie became of the color of the penny as she stammered:

"I'm sure, miss, Master Harry—" "Oh, Lucille," broke in Marie Verner, as if she had not heard her, and had forgotten the subject; "I didn't tell you that I met the marquis in the Park this evening!"

"No," said Lucille, coldly. She scarcely noted the remark in the emotions which the speeches linking Susie to Harry Herne had aroused.

"Yes, and we had quite a pleasant chat. Do you know the more I see of Lord Merie the better I like him? He was more pleasant and agreeable this afternoon; and as Mrs. Dalton says, he is a most polished gentleman. Do you remember—but of course you do—the fun we had over that secret plate closet of his?"

Lucille did not answer, she scarcely listened.

"What an enormous quantity of plate, wasn't it? I had my little joke about burglars in my little playful way, but really, when one comes to think about it, what a tremendous haul a burglar would make if he got into that closet! That's a fearfully hard brush you have got Susie."

Susie laid the brush aside, and took up a softer one.

"An enormous quantity of plate," continued Marie Verner; "there must be thousands of pounds' worth there—enough to make a man rich for life, the burglar sort of man, I mean. You may depend upon it if it was known that there was such a treasure stowed away there, that some one would try and steal it."

She paused to yawn, and Susie suspended her brushing to listen open-mouthered, then fell to work harder than ever.

"A man might break in there quite easily and carry off the lot, and then make for Spain, or some place where we cannot touch him!"

"You forget," said Lucille absently, and for the sake of speaking, "that it is quite secure against all who do not know the secret word which must be found upon the key."

"Oh, of course!" assented Marie. Then she yawned again. "The secret word. Oh, Lucille, do you know, now I think of it, the marquis and I talked about that plate this afternoon, and just try and guess what he said?"

"I cannot. I am not good at guessing," said Lucille, coldly and absently.

"You won't. Well, you would never guess! Why, what do you think?" and she leaned back so that the chair tilted on tiptoe, her yellow hair hanging down below her waist, her frank, innocent eyes burning with archness and merriment. "I asked him to tell me the secret word which unlocked his treasures! You remember he promised to tell me whenever I asked? Do you remember?"

"Yes," answered Lucille, absently. Susie plied the brushes on the golden locks, but listened with innocent, curious eyes wide open.

"Well, I wanted to see if he would keep his promise. You know what men are, dear—all honey and sugar, polish and politeness, until they are put to the test. And so I thought I would put the marquis to the test. I asked him," she repeated slowly, "in so many words to tell me the secret word which spelled on his key would prove an open sesame to his wonderful plate cupboard!"

"And he refused to tell you," said Lucille, curiously.

"Refused! How little you know the marquis, dear! Or rather, you misjudge him, as I did. He told me at once. The word is 'Safety!'"

In her curiosity and excitement at the marvelous story, Susie dropped the brush.

The action and its accompanying noise roused Lucille to the full significance of what she had heard.

With a sudden flush and a drawing together of her dark brows, she said: "Is your hair finished, Marie?"

"Yes, dear," replied Marie Verner, pleasantly. "So good of you to let me have Susie. Thank you, Susie!"

Susie, still under the spell of the strange story of the mysterious plate closet and its key, dropped a curtsy, and, gathering the brushes together, went into the adjoining boudoir.

Lucille rose from the couch and closed the door carefully, then came up to the chair where Marie Verner sat with her hands folded behind her head in a careless manner.

Lucille looked down at her in silence for a moment, then she said:

"Marie, weren't you a little thoughtless in revealing the word to others?"

"To others! Yourself, do you mean?" she asked with a little laugh.

"Yes, to me!" answered Lucille. "For how do you know that I shall not talk of it as you have done, and so the secret may get abroad?"

"My dear Lucille; oh, dear!"

"But I was not thinking or speaking of myself," Lucille went on, taking no notice of the interruption. "I was thinking of Susie."

Closing of the Legislature.

What will be known as the "Emergency or War Session" of the Legislature was prorogued by His Excellency the Governor at six o'clock last evening.

The Stamp Duties Bill had been passed by both branches of the House at noon.

When the Governor entered the grounds he was received by a squad of our volunteers whom His Excellency was very pleased to review whilst the bagpipes discoursed appropriate music. His Excellency, who was escorted to the Throne in the Legislative Chamber by Inspector General Sullivan, Lieut.-Col. Rendell, Lieut.-Col. Conroy and Capt. Goodridge, A. D. C. and gave his assent to the following Bills:—

- 1. An Act Respecting Enquiries into matters of Public Importance.
2. An Act to enable the Governor-in-Council, during the Existence of a State of War, to take possession of food stuffs unreasonably withheld.
3. An Act respecting the Provision of Wireless Telegraphy on Steamers engaged in the Trade of the Colony.
4. An Act to Confer certain powers upon the Governor-in-Council.
5. An Act Respecting a Volunteer Force in this Colony.
6. An Act Respecting the Exportation of Timber.
7. An Act to Authorize the Governor-in-Council to raise a Temporary Loan in Certain Cases.
8. An Act for raising a Sum of Money by Loan for the maintenance and equipment of a Volunteer Force.
9. An Act to Increase the Revenue by the Imposition of certain duties on the Estates of Deceased Persons.
10. An Act Further to amend the Revenue Act, 1905.
11. An Act to Conserve the Commercial and Financial interests of the Colony.
12. An Act Respecting Stamp Duties.

His Excellency read the Speech from the Throne, after which Hon. John Harris, President of the Council, announced that the Legislature stood prorogued until October 7th, after which the National Anthem was sung by the entire gallery. His Excellency's Speech read thus:—

SPEECH FROM THE THRONE.

Mr. President and Honourable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council: Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of the Honourable House of Assembly: I thank you for the speedy and effective manner in which you have dealt with the various bills submitted to you. I earnestly trust the duration of the war may be so brief as to render it unnecessary to invoke the aid of some of these wise measures, though they have all been framed with a view to stabilize the country and the Empire of which we are a part. It has been a special gratification to me to observe the splendid unanimity existing among your members. The example thus set cannot but be of great value, not alone for our own people in the period of trial which confronts us, but to the whole Empire, as further evidence of the unity of the British Dominions.

Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of the Honourable House of Assembly: I thank you for the appropriations you have made, not alone to cover our defence contributions, but to the maintenance of the Public Service, as the impairment of the provision previously assured is so seriously threatened by the war.

Mr. President and Honourable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council: Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of the Honourable House of Assembly: In relieving you from further attendance upon a session which, though short, must at this season have greatly inconvenienced many of you, I fervently trust that Divine Providence may ever guide you and all upon whom rests the responsibility of directing the affairs of our Empire, and ensuring the peace and happiness of those who dwell therein. I further hope that before we meet again, victory will crown the arms of Great Britain and her Allies.

People are doing more reading to-day than ever before, and it is very important that those who wear glasses that they should be properly fitted. If you have any trouble or are in doubt, go to TRAPNELL, the Eye-sight Specialist—see p. 11.

Grave Warning From Dr. Grenfell

HARBOR DEEP, Aug. 10.

Dear Mr. Editor,—I have just cruised all along the Straits Shore on both sides, and down White Bay. There is not us blinking the fact that the conditions are very serious. We are having this summer constant evidence of families even now with insufficient nourishing food—cases of beri-beri, anaemia, scurvy and debility. Some stages are still empty, and all more or less so. Fish is of little value, so we are told anyhow, and flour is rising rapidly.

Those who think on this coast see semi-starvation looming ahead in places, where once the winter is in little food will be obtainable. Now is the time for giving warning and information. Families and children won't starve for want of tobacco, alcohol, tea, gramophones or travelling, moving pictures, and amusements—but I verily believe they will for want of fats, starches and proteins, and I do not see how to avoid it unless at once we consider ourselves in a state of siege and make more of the food at our doors. I have just been interviewing poor families. Some had beri-beri last year, and I find many have put away for winter practically no local food, no dried cod—no very valuable nutriment—no herring, salt or smoked, the latter very valuable; no salmon or trout dried, greatly used by our northern neighbors and well able to sustain life. As yet no berries nor mushrooms, though quite plentiful in places, and with a very high proteid, food now beginning to be used on Labrador. They should be dried on strings of cotton that hang up in warm rooms. Few are either using or drying for use the dock, Alexander, dandelion and such things as over two hundred years ago, Major Cartwright on Labrador, pointed out as being of value. If you can now add to your services to our northerners by advising them what food they can get locally and how store it for winter, you will possibly save many lives. Thus fish can be caught in plenty as a rule late in the fall and frozen for winter use. Stocks of trout can be frozen caught late through ice. Deer, of course, are good, but all cannot get them. And in addition to this if we could get compulsory education and have every one learn to read, write and improve themselves, much would be gained. Here to-day on board, I spoke to the first six young men that came over the rail—not one could read or write. The teacher here is a good, energetic, capable fellow. He has a nice school. There have been teachers here for 20 years. Only three persons attended his night school last winter. When I asked why, he replied, "they prefer to lie around and smoke."

Young men should be ashamed to acknowledge even here that they are ignorant to this extent. They had to admit, when pressed, it was their own fault. This coast gives a living to capable, energetic, eager-for-improvement men. It can not give a living to the physically or intellectually deficient, and they become a great burden on the rest, a useless encumbrance.

WILFRED GRENFELL. Painful Swellings Reduced. Muscular Strains Ended. Such Troubles Now Quickly Rubbed Away by Powerful Remedy.

If you have any muscles that are strained and weak, that are frequently subject to rheumatic pains; if you have any painful swellings that refuse to go away—get busy with Nerviline. This is the very sort of trouble that Nerviline is noted for curing quickly. "I have proved Nerviline simply a wonder in reducing a hard, painful swelling. It followed an injury I received in my left leg and caused me great pain and discomfort. The muscles were strained and sore and no other remedy gave the ease and comfort I got from rubbing on Nerviline. There is a soothing, pain-relieving power about Nerviline that touched the root of my trouble. Nerviline reduced the swelling, it destroyed the pain, it brought my limb back to perfect condition." The experience of Mr. Bowen, whose home is in Middlesex, is not unusual. Thousands are proving every day that muscular pains of every kind, chronic rheumatism, lumbago, neuralgia and sciatica will yield to Nerviline when nothing else can possibly cure. Nerviline is an old-time family pain remedy, used nearly forty years with great success. The large family size bottle costs 50c., trial size 25c. at all dealers.

Situation Hopeful.

So far, we have good reason to feel satisfied with the progress of the war. At sea we have proved uncontestedly supreme, and our great lines on every ocean are open, and British commerce is pursuing its course steadily, while that of our enemies has been destroyed. On land, in spite of the many retreats and heavy losses, the campaign is more successful than expected. The success of the German campaign was based by themselves on speed. It was on the claim that saving of time was an overwhelming necessity to them that they based their decision to strike at France through Belgium, even though they disagreed with America with their violation of international honour, paralyzed their commerce and fleet, and brought Britain and Belgium in the field against them. So much were they willing to sacrifice in order to gain time. Their tactics were to strike the French forces an overwhelming blow, cripple her and then turn their forces eastwards and by means of their great military and other railways throw the force that had smashed France on Russian armies before they were brought up in full strength and overwhelm them. We are now on the eve of the fortieth day since Germany declared war against Russia and France, and France is not yet crippled. In spite of the severe losses our allied army in France is still intact, but it is felt that Germany is now concentrating for a supreme effort along the line between the Straits of Dover and Verdun and Nancy. Every eye is turned to the neighborhood of Verdun.

In the eastern theatre of war, Russia has had nearly six weeks to mobilize. Austria has been practically crippled. She has been forced to weaken her forces in Serbia and suffer disaster there. In addition to this she has been so severely crippled in Galicia that she cannot aid Germany. Russians too are pressing Germany in the east and every day will force on her the necessity of putting more and more troops to the east. Unless she can strike a crippling blow in France immediately, her campaign for time will have failed completely, and she will have to fight a campaign she never contemplated.

The news to-day confirms the hope that she will fall in her crippling tactics, and it may be that her offensive tactics are very nearly spent.

TURKEY IN DOUBT.

LONDON, To-day. A despatch to the Times from Constantinople commenting on the conditions there says although there is still a large section of influential Turks clamoring for intervention in the present European war, the situation seems to be improving owing to the precarious situation and the unwillingness of the reservists to take part in any except a defensive war. The total number of German officers now in Turkey is estimated at 600. All British merchantmen in the Black Sea have been ordered home.

BALKAN SITUATION IMPROVED.

LONDON, To-day. An Athens despatch to the Times states the Russian victories over Austria appeared to have cleared the air somewhat in the Balkans, although the danger of complications cannot be said to have entirely passed. The Popular Press believes the Russian victories assure the neutrality of Turkey and Bulgaria.

PARIS PLEASED.

LONDON, To-day. A despatch to Reuters from Paris, reviewing the situation in that quarter says according to official statements the allies had advanced about ten miles up to noon Monday. This latest news from the front has produced an excellent impression in Paris. Unofficial news brought back by soldiers returning from the front is even more encouraging than the official statements, and people here are convinced that things could not be going better for the success of the French arms.

STEAM TRAWLER BLOWN UP.

LONDON, To-day. Another Grimby steam trawler, the Revie, was blown up by a mine. The skipper and two engineers are injured but the rest of the crew were saved.

AUSTRIANS STAGGERED BY RUSSIANS.

LONDON, To-day. A correspondent to the Chronicle at Petegrad describing General Rozhky's brilliant feat at Lemberg says he hurried his men to the attack by marches so rapid that the men slept only three hours each night and frequently transport trains were left behind. Blow after blow he delivered, now to North now to South, that staggered Austrians and the final battle lasting a week drove them to headlong flight. Russians are now able to concentrate their attention on the first Austrian army whose task it has been to break the Russian line between Lublin and Khelm. Rarely has an army been in a more critical position than this Austrian force, and the next few days should decide the issue.

FOGOTA SAILS - The s.s. Fogota, Capt. Dalton, sailed for the northward at 10 a.m. to-day, taking a ton freight and the following passengers: Mr. Humphries, John Abbott, R. Winsor, J. F. Perry, Miss A. Mallet, R. Parsons, M. O'Neil, Mr. Lockyer, H. Blundon, T. Blundon and 8 second class.

General Pau Victorious at Precy

British War Bureau has no information of it. British said to have annihilated Imperial Guard under Crown Prince.

11 A.M.

Special to Evening Telegram.
LONDON, To-day. A Boulogne despatch to the Evening News says a telegram has been received from General Pau announcing a victory by the allied forces at Precy sur Oise. The Imperial Guard under Crown Prince Frederick William is reported to have been annihilated by the British forces which opposed them. The Boulogne despatch to the Evening News says a telegram has been received from General Pau announcing a victory by the allied forces under Field Marshal French and General Damane at Precy sur Oise about 25 miles North of Paris. The allies were drawn across the northern line with the centre at Precy. The English troops were on the left, the French on the right. The former had in front of them the Imperial Guard under the German Crown Prince Frederick William. On both wings it is reported the allies were successful. The Germans left were held back by the French and retired to the North. The Imperial Guard who were ordered to surrender were annihilated by the British. It is reported the Crown Prince was captured. The British official Bureau has received no confirmation of the above message. The news, contained in a French official communication that the Germans had fallen back before a vigorous advance by allied troops on the line from Nanteuil Lenardouin to Verdun, indicated that the Anglo-French forces have got on the flank of the German right wing which passed by Paris on the North and was marching Eastward to join with the Crown Prince's army coming South. It has been suggested by military experts that General Von Kluck's movement to the Southeast was taken as a matter of precaution. Before a movement by the allies from the coast, the Germans had started retreating. Unofficial advice from Berlin also have indicated that a battle of tremendous importance is being fought in the territory described.

GERMANS LEFT 3,000 DEAD

LONDON, To-day. A Reuter despatch from Antwerp confirms the reports of a German repulse on Friday at Capelle Anholis, and says they left three thousand dead. The British and Belgians, the despatch adds, proceeded back to Brussels.

GERMANS INCITING MOHAMMEDIANS.

LONDON, To-day. The correspondent of Reuter at Rome, says a despatch has been received there from Naples saying German emissaries are inciting Mohammedans against England saying that Germany is everywhere victorious.

TROOPS LEAVING SOUTHAMPTON.

NEW YORK, To-day. Transports leave Southampton almost every four days laden with troops for France, according to reports of passengers aboard the Minnetonka which reached New York from London. Returning transports are bringing wounded from French battlefields for distribution among English hospitals.

GERMAN AND BOER IN SOUTH AFRICA.

LONDON, To-day. The Germans in South East Africa where there are thirty thousand German troops have been storing guns and ammunition for some time and preparing for military action. This has been made known to the British. It is said the Germans believe that the Boers would aid them. Although the Germans proceeded with great secrecy, the British officials have been fully informed concerning their actions, and know the number of arms in their possession and their military dispositions. With a populace of British territory on two sides of German Southwest Africa with adequate military forces at hand, Britain is said to be well prepared for the situation. It is generally believed that she will soon seek and take control of all German territory in Africa. It is said here that the Boer farmers living in Southwest Africa are all loyal to King George.

COLONEL GORDON MISSING.

LONDON, To-day. Colonel Gordon, of the Gordon Highlanders, who won the Victoria Cross in South Africa, was among the officers reported missing in France.

GERMANS MARCHING ON GHENT.

LONDON, To-day. A despatch to Reuters from Ostend, says violent fighting, lasting five hours, has taken place between Melle and Quatrecht near Ghent, between Belgian volunteers and a superior corps of Germans. After a determined resistance the Belgians retreated in good order. The Germans occupied Melle and are marching on Ghent.

GERMANS DRIVEN BACK IN GREAT BATTLE.

LONDON, To-day. Once more the Germans and the allied French and British armies have grappled in a great battle which has been fought with only two brief intermissions since August 23. The tide has turned for a time at least and according to an official bulletin from Paris, the Germans on Sunday evening were compelled to make a retreat. The battle line stretched in a rough crescent east of Paris from Vaneuil, Lehardouin to Verdun. The front was more than 100 miles long with the French on the outer edge of the crescent and the Germans occupied interior lines. It was a general action. The British troops were in action with the French. A brief and three days' truce in which it is said kindled high hopes in Great Britain that the German steam roller has struck an impassable barrier.

CAPTAIN SAVED.

LONDON, To-day. It is learned on reliable authority that the captain and fifty of the crew of the British Cruiser Pathfinder which was sunk by a mine in the North Sea have been saved.

RELATIONS STRAINED.

LONDON, To-day. A despatch from Brussels says much attention is being paid here to the possible inclusion of Italy and Spain in the number of countries at war. The strained relations between Italy and her former allies has been greatly aggravated in the past few days. While in strictness it is said public opinion is becoming most insistent for a declaration in support of Britain and France.

The Most Discouraging Work.

By RUTH CAMERON.

One morning not long ago I threw down my pencil in despair. The thoughts which I was trying to catch and imprison on paper, refused to be coaxed out of their hiding places in the very back of my brain. The words, too, eluded me, and irrelevant thoughts that I did not want to entertain at just that time, came crowding in upon me.

"There is nothing so discouraging in the world," I finally decided, "as trying to write when the thoughts and words elude you, and you can't keep your mind where it ought to be." Whereupon I threw down my pencil and wandered disconsolately out on the veranda and across the street to seek comfort from the Lady-who-always-knows-something.

The Lady-who-always-knows-something greeted me as cheerfully, as always, but with a preoccupied air. "I'm glad you came, my dear," she said, "for you may be able to tell me what's wrong with this dress I'm trying to make over. I can't seem to make it hang right where it drapes. I do think there is no work in the world so discouraging as trying to make over things."

Just then a telephone call demanded the lady's attention and she threw down the dress just as I had thrown down my pencil. While she was at the telephone Ellen, mistress of the kitchen regions, appeared with a worried look on her face, and not seeing her mistress, confided in me—we are old friends—"I don't know what's the matter, but I don't believe the jelly is going to jell. I've put it back and boiled it over once and if I have to do it again I shall give up. Don't I wish all I had to do was to sit at a desk in a cool room instead of fussing over a hot stove."

The Lady came back from the telephone. "It was John," she explained, "to tell me he wouldn't be home to lunch. They're taking stock and he has to be there every minute. He doesn't think he'll even get home to dinner. Poor boy, he does hate that part of the business."

Before I took my leave I asked if the Lady had seen Molly, the little stenographer, lately. "Just for a moment last night," she said, "she's terribly busy. There's a lot of copying and she has had to stay late and bring work home. She was completely discouraged last night because she had several pages to copy over on account of my mistakes she made because she was over-tired."

Tell me, reader friend, does your corner of the world's work sometimes seem to you the most discouraging and disheartening of all the tasks in the world? Do you sometimes think that the obstacles you have to overcome are the most annoying that anyone ever had to face, and find yourself envying almost anyone else? Courage, comrade! We all have these moments now and then, even those whose only work is the pursuit of pleasure. Doubtless, at the very moment when I threw down my pen some social climber was crying her heart out because she had not been invited to some particular function.

So courage, comrade. Remember it isn't your particular lot, it's the lot of humanity, which is born to try, to fail, to be discouraged, and to try it again till "the leaves of the Judgment Book unfold."

Fifteen Months for Embezzlement.

The young city clerk who was on remand for embezzling $600 from Morey & Co., having pleaded guilty to the charge shortly after his arrest when he was tried summarily, came up to-day for sentence before Judge Conroy. The accused had no one to plead for him. When asked by His Honor if he had anything to say he replied in the negative. Mr. Warren, on behalf of Morey & Co., intimated that the accused or his family would not offer restitution. The accused was then sentenced to one year's imprisonment with hard labor, also to give $30 compensation to Morey & Co. or serve an additional three months, an aggregate of fifteen months' imprisonment.

At the Crescent.

The Crescent Picture Palace patrons were highly pleased last night with the splendid programme submitted. It is one up to the usual standard of Crescent shows. "For Better or Worse," the two-reel feature and "The Forgotten Letter" are both beautiful dramas of a high class. Pearl White and Baldy Belmont in the two comedies kept the audience in roars of laughter. Miss Clark's singing of "My Hero" and the old Scotch ballad "Within a Mile of Edinboro Town" won much applause for this talented lady. On to-morrow Miss Clark sings "A Heart Cry From the East," words by Dan Carroll. The music is written by Rev. P. Sheehan. Don't fail to hear this charming Newfoundland ballad.

Bugler Missing.

A 16-year-old lad named Gammen, who was engaged as bugler on the Allan Liner Carthaginian, is now wanted. Upon the ship's arrival Sunday evening he came ashore and up to one o'clock to-day when the ship was ready for sea, failed to put in an appearance. The police authorities will keep a watch out for him and if they capture him will hold him until the return of the ship from Philadelphia.

Where Responsibility Lies.

No matter how large, or how small, a business may be, nobody can deny that its Office is the nerve centre of the firm. Every transaction, important or trivial, must be recorded at the Office. An order is received at the Office, its history is recorded at the Office, and finally payment is received at the Office. If the Office makes an error the firm stands the loss. That's why you must be sure that your office is moderately and dependably equipped for the care of all important papers. To do this effectively you need the up-to-date equipment of the "GLOBE-WERNICKE CO." When sixty offices in St. John's have found this necessity this equipment can surely be of use to you. A Thought for the Times

ARTICLE IV.—THE WAR.
I. C. MORRIS.

Let us be loyal to our King,
And to his royal sons,
Hurrah for England's guns!
And let the people shout and sing.

It should be a cause of gratitude that just at this present juncture in our nation's history we have upon the throne a king who has gone through his degrees and who knows his Empire. His training and experience have qualified him for the duties of his office; and his manner of speech is sufficient guarantee that he knows whereof he speaks, and that he really means what he says. We think that all great men should mean what they say, but it appears they do not. Certainly the Emperor of Germany did not mean peace when he spoke of it. By his action the dove of peace has been banished from Europe and the war-dogs have been let loose upon the world. What of the Peace Conference? Is it of no use at this critical time? This time of all times. We noticed that the President of the United States exercised his right in this respect, and offered to mediate, but his offer was not accepted. Was his position then a false one, and is the world only being blind-folded by the creation of a Peace Conference? Is it possible that one man, or one class of men, can embroil the whole world in the horrors of war, and that our Twentieth Century advancement is to be defaced by rivers of blood? Is this all that the world has so far accomplished? Surely there ought to be power enough somewhere, or authority enough in the councils of men to cry halt.

Already a half century of harm has been inflicted, and a million hearts broken, and this sorrow is daily increasing. Markham in his poem: "The man with the hoe" which deals with the oppression of labour says:—

"O masters, lords, and rulers in all lands,
Is this the handiwork you give to God?
This monstrous thing, distorted and soul-quenched,
How will the future reckon with this man?"

But what answer can the promoters of this war give to an outraged world, and in what light will posterity look upon them? What say they of this breach of the world's peace? How answer they to the wall of Europe's children? How reconcile their impious deeds with the slaughtered hosts of this conflict? When the slaughter is over, who will look the world in the face and say: "I did it!" What indemnity will offset the loss of life, or heal the myriad broken hearts of those that mourn. It can never be done, and those who are responsible will never wash their hands clean of this crime.

The more we look at it the more we see it a crime—a crime as black as any by which the annals of history have been dyed. It is a crime against trade and commerce, against religion and education, against home and country, or against childhood and innocence. It is a crime against all that the age stands for, and all that we have been taught to hope. It is a crime against the love of womanhood. It is a crime against man, and therefore against God—for man is God's creature; the noblest of our lower creation, and made by Him for his own great glory. When shall we learn this lesson. Perhaps this war may teach it to us.

Longfellow in his poem: "Hiawatha," embodies this same principle where he refers to the Great Spirit whom he calls "Gitchie Moricito, the Mighty." The quotation runs as follows:—

"Mitche Mornito, the mighty,
The creator of the nations,
Looked upon them with compassion,
With paternal love and pity;
Looked upon their wrath and wrangling," saying:—

"O my children, my poor children!
Listen to the words of wisdom,
Listen to the words of warning,
From the lips of the great spirit,
From the Master of life who made you."

"I have given you lands to hunt in,
I have given you streams to fish in,
I have given you bear and bison,
I have given you roe and reindeer,
I have given you brant and beaver."

"Filled the marshes full of wild fowl,
Filled the rivers full of fishes;
Why then are ye not contented?
Why then will ye hunt each other?"

This is the question which we ask: Why hunt, why kill each other? The people don't want it—not even the German people. Why then this war? Simply because somebody, somewhere has said so; and because somebody says so, the whole world suffers. An esteemed friend came into my office a day or two ago, and read for me a poem which he had cut out of a Halifax paper, and I cannot do better than close this chapter with it.

WAR.
"Twelve million men to be marshaled
And murdered, and mangled, and maimed;
Twelve million men, by the stroke of the pen,
To be slaughtered—and no one is shamed."

Mountains of wealth to be wasted,
Oceans of tears to be shed;
Valleys of light to be turned into night,
Rivers of blood to run red.

Thousands of wives to be widowed,
Millions of mothers to mourn,
Thousands in sorrow to wail the to-morrow,
Millions of hearts to be torn.

Thousands of fathers to perish,
Millions of children to moan,
Ages of time to prepare for a crime
That sons can never atone.

Thousands of homes to be shattered,
Millions of prayers to be vain,
Thousands of ways to the glory that pray
In poverty, panic and pain.

Twelve million men in God's image,
Sentenced to shoot and be shot,
Kill and be killed, as a ruler has willed,
For what—for what—for what?"

Pearl White, the popular Crystal star, excels herself in the sprightly comedy, SOME DOINGS. HAROLD'S BURGLAR is another lively comedy in which Baldy Belmont figures. MISS ALICE CLARK, Prima Donna, sings (a) "My Hero" from the Opera Chocolate Soldier; (b) "Within a Mile of Edinboro Town." Prof. Spencer at the piano. On Wednesday Miss Clark sings "A HEART CRY FROM THE WEST," a Newfoundland ballad. Words by Dan. Carroll; Music by Rev. P. Sheehan.

Divorced Life

Taking the Love Cure

Marian admitted to herself frankly that she understood this man Calhoun less than any man she had ever met. He was an enigma, a cryptogram. The hard suileness of his countenance, melting now and then into an abrupt and gleaming smile, made her wonder from what curious background of circumstance he had developed. His gray eyes, now inscrutable, now beaming and dancing with their sudden eye-laughter, puzzled her strangely. Now man, now boy, he differed intangibly, indefinitely from other men who had manifested an interest in her. Wonder wove through her mind as to whether he was going to make love to her. She had almost hated herself for the thought; yet what else is a woman to expect in a world, man-made in its civilization from the bottom up, with women constituting its prey, its game, its playing?

When they had boarded the canoe, he paddled moodily for several minutes. Marian made no effort to stir up conversation. The silent river-banks, the serene water, the rhythmic padding of her companion, were pleasantly restful. She was content to dream.

"You say you don't like the Inn?" she asked at length remembering an earlier remark of his.

"Hideously dull," he answered.

"What made you come?" she asked.

"An absurd whim. A piece of crowning folly brought me here," he replied modestly.

"How romantic!" exclaimed Marian. "It isn't often that a man will confess to anything as interesting as that. The very confession is romance in itself."

"Romance," he snarled. "That's the trouble with the world—romance and the absurdities it brings to pass.

"You're bitter," murmured Marian, prodding for information.

"I'm getting souse," he corrected. "Hence I'm better instead of bitter," he added with one of his sudden smiles. His face sobered as abruptly. "I see I've aroused your curiosity," he continued. "Better satisfy it and make you feel comfortable. Well, why not?"

Marian was swift to disclaim any curiosity, but he plunged headlong into a swift, highly condensed narration. "Met a girl here three years ago, just after I finished college. Fell in love—crazily in love. Love's always crazy, for that matter. We were engaged for two years. Were to have been married this summer. A year ago she threw me over. Married a fellow with a pile of money. I've been trying to forget. Hard work, along with periodic dallying with drink, didn't make me forget. As a last resort, I decided to run up here, where it all started, and soak up the atmosphere of the place ad libitum, and if possible, ad nauseum. Sort of an heroic love-cure I had in mind," he finished.

"I hope it's working," answered Marian, as the other jabbed the water savagely with his paddle, sending the canoe forward.

"Oh, it's working all right," he said grimly. "I'm going to recommend it hereafter for all similar afflictions I observe among my friends. Being in love is a point of view. Get sufficiently saturated with it, and the cure is effected. No doubt, I'd have got over the disease quickly enough if she had married me. It's the infernal hang-over, following a throw-down, that it's hardest to get rid of."

To-morrow—The Super-Man.

Wedding Bells.

A very pretty wedding took place on Sunday night at the R. C. Cathedral, Rev. Father Sheehan officiating, the contracting parties being Mr. John Boone, of this city, to Miss Kitty Power, of Dunville, Placentia. The bride was attired in navy blue with hat to match, while the bridesmaid was dressed in sage blue with hat to match. Mr. Joseph Boone, brother of the groom, was best man, and Miss Annie Power, cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid. The wedding supper was held at the residence of Mrs. Power, George's Street, aunt of the bride, and was kept up till the wee small hours of the morning. Mr. and Mrs. Boone were the recipients of many costly presents.
