CHAPTER XXIII.
A BITTER PUNISHMENT.

"No? I am glad, glad, glad! But white and thin, Blanche, eh? Poor Floris! We must nurse her now, Blanche. My darling! Ah, Heaven, how I have longed to be able to speak to her! But though I knew she was here—though I knew she held my hand, and could feel her breath sometimes—I could not speak. I suppose I was half-unconscious, eh, Blanche?"

"Yes, dear."
"Am I very much knocked about?"
She was silent.
"Oh, don't think I am anxious about my personal appearance," and he laughed weakly. "But am I too much knocked about to let her make it an excuse for putting off the wedding? I want to be married directly I can get about. Eh, Blanche?"

She nodded an assent and he went on:
"Yes, she won't refuse now. A sick man mustn't be contradicted, that you know. How long has she been lying down? I wouldn't have her disturbed for the world, but I shall be so glad to see her. Doctor," turning his head, "do you think there is any fear of my going off my head again?"

"Not if we are careful not to excite you," said Dr. Greene, looking at Lady Blanche, significantly.
Lord Norman laughed.
"Oh, you won't excite me," he said. "I have had enough in the way of excitement to outshine anything you can do in that line! I shall never forget seeing that mad boy rushing on to his death, as it seemed! Thank Heaven I was able to get up to his side in time! Poor boy! Gone home, has he? I must write to him as soon as I can—I'll get Floris to write to-day, and tell him I'm all right! When we are married he shall come and stay with us!"

He paused for want of breath, then fixed his eyes on Lady Blanche's face. "Blanche, you are a good girl! You have been helping Floris to nurse me, eh? It is just like you! You look pale and tired; you have overdone yourself. When Floris comes back I shall tell her to send you away for the whole day."

She found her voice at last. "Yes," she said, almost inaudibly, "when Floris comes back I will go away and rest. But—but she is more tired than I am, Bruce; and the doctor has ordered her to keep to her room."

"My poor darling!" he murmured, fervently. "Go to her, Blanche, and give her my love, will you? And tell her she is not to come to me on any account until she is quite rested," he added, wistfully.

Lady Blanche rose and supported herself by a chair for a moment, then she found strength to creep out of the room.

Her punishment was almost heavier than she could bear.

CHAPTER XXIV.
THE UNDELIVERED MESSAGE.

LADY BETTY was waiting for her in the sitting-room, waiting in the greatest agitation and distress, mingled with her joy for the news.

"Oh, Blanche, is he really better?" she exclaimed, forgetting her animosity for the moment.

"Yes," said Lady Blanche, curtly; "he is better, but his life hangs by a thread—I know that. I have come to ask you what you intend to do."

"To do?"
"Yes. Do you mean to see him? If you do, he will see by your face that something is wrong; he will ask you questions about—about Floris Carlisle. And what will you say? Can you keep your countenance and lie, as I have done? I have told him that she is resting."

"Oh, how could you do that?"
Lady Blanche laughed. It was an awful laugh, and it made her listener shudder.

"I would tell him anything to avert the blow! It must come sooner or later, but unless you want to kill him, let it come later."

"It is dreadful!" moaned Lady Betty. "I cannot understand it. I will never believe she has done what you say."

"Jilted him, and ran off with Bertie Clifford!" said Lady Blanche, icily. "I admire your faith. I suppose you have written to her?"

"I wrote to her before I left Ballyfoe," said Lady Betty. "I wrote to Westbury, where her mother lived. I wrote to Matilda, who first recommended her to me when she came as a companion, but I have received no answer."

Lady Blanche smiled. She knew that Josine had taken the letters from the postbag.
"How could you have received any answer, seeing that Floris Carlisle has gone with Bertie Clifford, and that Lady Matilda is on the Continent?" she said, contemptuously.

"What shall I do?" demanded poor Lady Betty, helplessly.
"Go back to Ballyfoe," said Lady Blanche, firmly. "He does not know you are here. Go back to Ballyfoe, and I will tell him that you would not see him for fear of exciting him, and that you have taken Floris Carlisle with you."

"Yes, I will go," said Lady Betty. "I will go at once. Poor Bruce, poor Bruce!"

Lady Blanche's face flushed. "Save your pity for those who need it," she said, quietly. "Poor Bruce, as you call him, is a fortunate man to have been deceived before marriage, instead of afterward," and with this last dagger thrust, she left her.

From that moment Lord Norman's recovery was rapid. At the end of the week a comfortable, the most comfortable of the Ballyfoe, traveling carriages, filled with every luxury a convalescent could require, arrived at Scarfross, and to his immense satisfaction, he started for "home," as he called it.

They started early in the morning. Lord Norman and the young doctor travelling in the big carriage, and the rest of the party travelling as best they liked.

They arrived at Ballyfoe at dusk, and were greeted by Lady and Sir Joseph Lynch with the most cordial and affectionate welcome. It was quite a reception, in fact, all the guests who remained thronging the terrace and pressing forward to express their delight at seeing him among them again.

Lord Norman, as he shook hands and responded to their kind expressions, kept glancing to the right and left and beyond them to the hall door, with barely suppressed eagerness.

"Where is Floris?" he asked, quite audibly, of Lady Lynch.
Before she could answer, Lady Blanche laid her hand softly on his arm.

"Bruce, Dr. Greene says you are to go in at once; the air is chilly for you."

He laughed grimly.
"You see, Lady Lynch, they intend to treat me as an invalid still, and I suppose I must bow beneath their tyranny! I shall see you at dinner."

"Better dine in your own room to-night, Norman, I think," said Dr. Greene. "You have done quite enough for to-day."

They escorted him to his apartments almost as if he were a royal personage, and Lady Blanche went to her own room. As she opened the door, she saw Josine standing waiting for her.

Lady Blanche started and flushed, then she closed the door.
"Is there any news, Josine?" she asked, calmly. "Josine shook her head.

"No, miladi."
"She—she has not written?"
"No, miladi, there have been no letters. If there had been, I would have intercepted them and given them to miladi."

Lady Blanche drew a breath of relief.
"Then—then you have heard nothing?" she faltered.

"Nothing of Miss Carlisle! Nothing whatever. I know nothing except that Miss Carlisle left Ballyfoe with Milford Clifford," she said, steadily.

Lady Blanche dismissed her with a wave of the hand, and sank into a chair.
She knew that Lord Norman would send for her presently, and in a few minutes his valet knocked at the door and begged her to come to his master.

She rose, glanced at her face in the glass, and followed the man. The critical moment had arrived.
Lord Norman was pacing up and down the room impatiently; his traveling cloak of sable was thrown across a chair, as if he had but just flung it off, and he made no attempt at changing his clothes.

ready there began to dawn an overpowering anxiety and apprehension. "Blanche!" he exclaimed; "what does this mean? Is she ill? For Heaven's sake, if you have any news to tell me, tell me at once. Suspense kills me—what is it?"

She moistened her lips.
"Floris is not at Ballyfoe, Bruce."
"Not at Ballyfoe!" he repeated, with wide-opened eyes and knit brows. "Where is she, then? Great Heavens! Why didn't you tell me before I left Scarfross? I could have taken train at a nearer point than this. You know I am dying to see her!"

Her heart hardened, and she met his impatient gaze steadily.
"I do not know where she is, Bruce," she said, quietly.

"Not know! What do you mean? When did she go, and why?"
"She left Ballyfoe nearly three weeks ago, Bruce—the day you started for Scarfross."

"What!" he cried, in a terrible voice—"what—where? I have had no letter! Ah, I see—you have kept it from me because I was ill. I see—I see! But for Heaven's sake, give it to me now—give them all to me—" and he held out his hand.

She shook her head.
"I have no letter for you, Bruce; she has written to no one."

His hand fell to his side.
"Written to no one, Blanche!" his face growing white. "What is this infernal mystery? Why did you lie to me the other day, and tell me she was at Scarfross? Has she not been there at all?"

"She has not been there, Bruce. She left here when you did, and we have not heard a word from her since."

He strode forward and seized her arm.
"Quick! tell me all. She is dead! I know it! I can read it in your face! Quick, tell me!"

"No, Bruce she is not dead that I know of—indeed I do not know. But—but—oh, Bruce, can you bear it?" she whispered.

"I can bear anything better than this suspense," he cried, hoarsely; "don't you see it's maddening me!"
"Oh, Bruce! Bruce!" she moaned. "It is so hard for me to have to tell you! But you will hear it from me best! Bruce, be firm, be brave! Don't look at me so, or I cannot go on!" for his eyes seemed penetrating to her soul.

He looked aside and motioned to her to go on.
"Bruce," she whispered, almost inaudibly, for her heart nearly stood still with fear, with actual fear that when her lips formed the words he should strike, perhaps kill her. "Bruce—Floris Carlisle is not worth a thought from you! She is a bad, wicked girl!"

"What!" and he laughed a short, wild laugh of mockery. "Go on, go on! You are mad! Floris is what?"
(To be continued.)

Fashion Plates

The Home Dressmaker should keep a Catalogue Scrap Book of our Patterns Cut. These will be found very useful to refer to from time to time.

A PRACTICAL SET OF SHORT CLOTHES FOR A LITTLE GIRL.

2513—This outfit comprises a simple dress, a short-waisted petticoat, and a combination garment, consisting of waist and drawers which could also serve as a model for bloomers. The dress is a design good for lawn, batiste, gingham, chambray, voile or percale. For the undergarment muslin, cambric, long cloth and nainsook could be used. If the combination undergarment is used as rompers, it could be of galatee, gingham, drill, linen, pop or percale.
The Pattern is cut in 5 sizes: 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 years. Size 4 requires, for the dress, 2 1/2 yards; for the petticoat, 1 1/2 yard; for the combination, 1 1/2 yard, of 36-inch material.
A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps.

A Dainty Dress for Party or Best Wear.

2487—In soft batiste, china silk or crepe, handkerchief linen or dimity, this will make a pretty frock. It is also nice for all-over embroidery, founcing, embroidered voile or dotted swiss. The sleeve may be in wrist or elbow length.
The Pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Size 10 requires 4 1/2 yards of 36-inch material.
A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps.

Germans Open New Offensive With Paris the Goal. The New Thrust Lacks the Punch of Previous Attacks.

OFFENSIVE OPENS.

PARIS, July 15. A new offensive last night was begun by the Germans in the region between Rheims and Argonne.

AMERICANS ATTACKED.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE MARNE, July 15.—The Germans at daylight today launched a violent attack against the American positions west of Chateau Thierry, especially near Vaux. The attack came after a most violent bombardment of high explosives and gas shells throughout the night. When the enemy infantry appeared the Americans swarmed out and met the attackers with a rain of machine gun bullets. Americans were using gas masks as they fought. Enemy bombardment of towns in the rear of the lines began shortly after six a.m. Latest reports say Americans are holding their own in fighting, maintaining their positions. Heavy shells from German naval guns are falling in regions far behind the actual battle field, many of these projectiles have fallen in the City of Meaux, 25 miles from Chateau Thierry. In many of these towns German shell fire is constant, the projectiles being from 10 and 12 inch naval guns.

Reports from American advance positions say that the Germans are handling the enemy well in desperate fighting which is continuing.

ON A FIFTY MILE FRONT.

PARIS, July 15. On the front between Chateau Thierry and the main De Massiges, the Germans attacked this a.m. The French are meeting the shock of the enemy attack with energy and the battle continues. The struggle is proceeding on a front of about fifty miles.

ATTACK ON TWO FRONTS.

LONDON, July 15. Advice received re the German offensive state that the attack began on a front of 35 miles between Chateau Thierry and Rheims, southwest of Rheims. The Germans also attacked east of Rheims between Prunay and Maison de Champagne on a front of 25 miles.

POSITIONS INTACT.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, July 15.—Word received here shows that the enemy also launched an attack east of Rheims, but on sectors on that front on which the French and the Americans are reported intact.

AMERICANS COUNTER ATTACK. WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE MARNE, July 15.—American forces on this front delivered a counter attack upon the Germans in the Vaux region this morning and drove of the enemy. It is reported the Americans have advanced their own lines a distance of several hundred yards but lacks confirmation.

THE FEELING IN LONDON.

LONDON, July 15. The feeling in London on the situation following the German attack is that developments are quite satisfactory.

ACROSS THE MARNE.

LONDON, July 15. The Germans have crossed the Marne at several places in their offensive.

SITUATION WELL IN HAND.

LONDON, July 15. The German attack in the new offensive began in the region of Vaux after a bombardment with gas and high explosive shells. American artillery replied with barrage fire. There was also heavy bombardment in the region of Gaul-Gonne, on the Marne. Reports up to 10.50 o'clock this morning show the situation well in hand.

ATTACK BROKE DOWN.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE MARNE, July 15.—It is clear that the German attack in Vaux region completely broke down under American counter attacks. Further sharp fighting is likely to develop in this area at any time. In their attack on the Marne front the Germans threw many bridges across the river. Over these the Germans are passing under a withering fire from artillery. German progress is being stayed by machine gunners. The Americans and French have resisted the enemy to the utmost and are continuing this character of resistance.

THE LIKELY OBJECTIVE.

LONDON, July 15. The immediate objective of the German attack is considered here as probably to reach Rheims by capturing hills which would protect their right flank on a further advance southward. Shortly after eleven o'clock one of the American infantry regiments launched a counter attack in the region of Condi. The operation at Vaux appeared to be a feint, for soon after it began the Germans attacked all along the Marne where they were gallantly opposed by the Americans and French. The crossing was made at the peak of the big river bend. The American machine gunners and infantry repulsed the enemy about one hour previous to the attack. The Germans were fought and died where they stood here. Others of American troops withdrew strategically as the enemy attacked from east of Chateau Thierry to along the Marne east of Dormans. Reports after 11 a.m. on the fighting to the east of Rheims said that the enemy up about one hour previous to the attack had made no progress whatever there. In the Condi region, however, before the American counter attack the German advance appeared to have eliminated the river salient. At 11.20 o'clock this morning the long range bombardment was becoming intense. The day opened sunny but low clouds are now scurrying over the battle field threatening rain. The town of Condi mentioned as the scene of the American counter attack is probably Condean Brio, which lies three and three-quarter miles south of the Marne and eight miles southeast of Chateau Thierry.

AMERICANS RESTORE POSITIONS.

LONDON, July 15. The American troops yielded slightly to the Germans between the town of Fossoy and the river Sur Meuse, which they had restored their positions by counter-attack, according to a despatch to the Central News.

HARDEST FIGHTING OF THE WAR.

ON THE FRENCH FRONT IN FRANCE, July 15.—Some of the hardest fighting of the war was taking place today on the front between Chateau Thierry and Massiges along a front of about 50 miles. The most violent engagements are occurring in the neighbourhood of Dormans on the Marne, where the Germans were attempting to cross the river. The latest information shows the enemy demonstration on the east limits of the Champagne is being held by the French Army under command of one of the most brilliant of France's soldiers who made his reputation in the colonies and at the Dardanelles. The German attack at the operation will as usual depend on the measure of success at any section of the line. The Allied staffs are extremely confident of their ability to hold their line, and although the enemy may advance at some points their progress it is declared will be stayed just as soon as their intentions become clear.

AMERICANS CAPTURE ONE THOUSAND AND PRISONERS. LONDON, July 15. Andrew Bonar Law, Chancellor of the Exchequer, announced in the House of Commons to-night that the Americans had captured 1,000 or more prisoners south of the Marne, after having driven back the enemy. Bonar Law read the following communication: The enemy attacked early this morning on a front of 90 kilometres, pretty evenly divided east and west of Rheims. The city itself was not attacked. West of Rheims the Germans penetrated on a front of 36 kilometres (22.37 miles) to an average depth from four to five kilometres south of the Marne. By a brilliant counter-attack the American troops drove the enemy back and took 1,000 or more prisoners. East of Rheims the enemy has been heavily repulsed and has suffered a complete check.

TURKS ATTACK BRITISH IN PALESTINE.

LONDON, July 15. Turkish troops on Saturday night attacked the British positions in Palestine. The official statement says: On Saturday night enemy attacks developed against our positions covering the passage of the Jordan and on the Abul Tellul ridges north of Jericho. Our positions about Abul Tellul at first penetrated, were entirely restored by a counter-attack by the Australians and New Zealanders. 400 prisoners were taken, including 260 Germans. By nightfall 610 prisoners had been counted.

AMERICANS FORCE GERMANS TO RETREAT. WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE MARNE, July 15.—A strong American counter-attack south of the river broke completely upset the Germans who broke in retreat. The American troops drove the enemy back all the way to the railway skirting the Marne in the region south-west of Jaugonnes. This position is now being held. In a counter-attack many prisoners were taken. They included a Major, two Captains, and 400 men so far counted. The French General Commanding the group of armies on this sector sent congratulatory message this afternoon to the American General Commanding the forces which beat back the enemy.

ATTACK MET AN IRREDUCIBLE DEFENCE. PARIS, July 15. In the desperate fighting which is reported to be going on in the Marne region the Americans have succeeded in crossing the Marne south-west of Fossoy. In the long sector between Dormans and Rheims Franco-Italian troops are reported to be resisting the German assault in the Marne section. Rheims the enemy attack has met what is characterized as an irreducible defence. The statement reads: The German attack launched this morning at 4.30 o'clock, continued throughout the day on both sides of Rheims with equal violence west of Rheims. Separate engagements were fought in the region of Rouilly, Courtezy and Vassy, south of the Marne, which the enemy succeeded in crossing at many points between Fossoy and Dormans. A spirited counter-attack, carried out by the American troops drove back on the right bank of the river the enemy contingents who had reached that bank south-west of Fossoy. Between Dormans and Rheims the Franco-Italian troops resisted with tenacity along the line of Chailion Sur Marne, Cuchery, Marfaux and Bouilly, East of Rheims the enemy attack extended from Silloy to the Man de Massiges and hit up against an irreducible defence. The enemy multiplied his efforts on Prunay and Les Marquises, and in the regions north of Promes and Souain, but was not able, despite repeated attacks, to cut into our positions.

JUSTIFIED THEMSELVES. LONDON, July 15. Sir Walter Runciman said that the House would wish to offer congratulations not only to the French, but to the American troops, who had justified themselves now for the first time on a critical occasion.

ABSOLUTELY CONFIDENT. ON THE FRENCH FRONT IN FRANCE, July 15.—On the north side of the Marne in the woods and ravines the Germans had been enabled to concentrate numbers of pontoons and ladders work bridges for a passage of the stream. When they approached however, they found that their temporary crossing places were being enfladed and their efforts must have cost them the heaviest loss. How many German divisions were thrown into the battle is not known yet, but it is evident that the reserves that had been training behind the lines were brought forward in large bodies. The indications for the present are that the principal enemy effort is being made toward Chateau Thierry, but the development of the operation will as usual depend on the measure of success at any section of the line. The Allied staffs are extremely confident of their ability to hold their line, and although the enemy may advance at some points their progress it is declared will be stayed just as soon as their intentions become clear.

AMERICANS CAPTURE ONE THOUSAND AND PRISONERS. LONDON, July 15. Andrew Bonar Law, Chancellor of the Exchequer, announced in the House of Commons to-night that the Americans had captured 1,000 or more prisoners south of the Marne, after having driven back the enemy. Bonar Law read the following communication: The enemy attacked early this morning on a front of 90 kilometres, pretty evenly divided east and west of Rheims. The city itself was not attacked. West of Rheims the Germans penetrated on a front of 36 kilometres (22.37 miles) to an average depth from four to five kilometres south of the Marne. By a brilliant counter-attack the American troops drove the enemy back and took 1,000 or more prisoners. East of Rheims the enemy has been heavily repulsed and has suffered a complete check.

ATTACK HELD UP. LONDON, July 15. The great German attack was definitely held upon the whole front east of Rheims five hours after it was launched, according to the latest advice reaching here, and the only gains worth mentioning were in the neighborhood of the Souain road and Prunay, where the enemy succeeded in penetrating about one and a half miles on a narrow front. At both strong counter attacks late in the morning. On the front west of Rheims the Germans had rather more success, but the only important gain to their credit for the morning's work was the crossing of the Marne and a zone little more than a mile beyond on a scale greater than ever attempted. This back area bombardment was systematically directed along the whole line of Chalons, Mont Mirail and Laforet-Sous-Journe, and the map shows that this line is located from 12 to 18 miles behind the French front. This is the most powerful and far-reaching variety, must have been in numbers greater than ever before. The bombardment lasted until 4.30 a.m. Then came the German attack, launched at dawn under cover of a heavy mist, which are particularly heavy in the Marne section. The French communications, however, were well maintained throughout the morning, and news of the Germans' penetrations came through promptly to the general staff, enabling proper dispositions of the reserves to be made very accurately. The general view of the men who watched the battle from afar was that the Germans have lost some of their punch since their last big attempt, for nowhere did the present attack gain the sweeping success which their previous efforts yielded them. By mid-afternoon the Entente military experts were actually feeling optimistic, although the danger wasn't yet over, but it was evident the first big rush had failed to yield the enemy anything like the result that might have been expected. One reason probably for this is that the attack this time had no element of surprise, for each knew of the German intention days in advance, and the French made their plans for it last week. Even in the main region where the Germans made their most important gain they haven't reached the high ground south of the Marne which is strategically very important. In their previous attacks the enemy used one division to each mile of front, hence it is estimated that they are using at least 60 divisions in the present operations which would mean between 700,000 and 800,000 men.

BRITISH ADVANCE LINE. LONDON, July 15. Another attack by the British troops in the neighborhood of Villers-Bretonneux to-day resulted in a slight advance of their line, according to the official statement issued by the war office, which says: This morning we again advanced our line slightly in the neighborhood of Villers-Bretonneux and drove off a party of the enemy which attacked one of our posts. The total number of prisoners taken in yesterday's operations at Ridge Wood is 336. On the remainder of the front there is nothing of special interest to report.

ITALIAN OFFICIAL. ROME, July 15. (Official.) On the Asiago Plateau the French detachments carried out two surprise attacks into the enemy's lines north of Monte Di Val Bella. A few prisoners were taken. Enemy reconnoitering parties have been active between the slopes of Sasso Rosso and the Brenta river. A new German at-

Successful British Attack. LONDON, July 15. (Official.) A British attack in Flanders yesterday, a statement shows, was launched on a front of two thousand yards in the neighborhood of Rigwood in Dikebusch sector. The attack took the enemy by surprise, and was successful. All objectives have been gained. Not all of the material captured has yet been collected.

GERMAN OFFICIAL. BERLIN, July 15. The German official statement issued to-day admits that southwest of Ypres the British on Sunday morning gained ground against the Germans in an attack which was preceded by heavy artillery preparations. The statement follows: Southwest of Ypres the enemy attacked yesterday morning after a strong artillery preparation and penetrated our fighting zone on a limited breadth. There was artillery activity throughout the day on both sides of the Yser. It was reversed during the evening on the remainder of the front. Between the Aisne and the Marne the fighting continued lively. Local infantry engagements have taken place south of St. Pierre Aigle and in the Savieres region.

THIS EVENING'S GAME.

The first game for the H. D. Reid Trophy will be played this evening at St. George's Field. The contestants will be the Red Lions and B. I. S. As the proceeds will go towards a most worthy object, i.e., Mount Cashel, there should be a record attendance. The following is the line-up of the teams:

Fads and Fashions.
Collars are very important. The newest suits are belted. Voile is the chief rival of organdie. Bathing suits are embroidered in wool. Narrow belts that cross are still good. Waistlines are normal or a little lower. Fringe will appear on everything. Even hats are made of figured calico. Long suit-coats are already being shown. Tulle meshes are fashionable in veiling. Flying squirrel will be popular next fall.

Motor Association Adopts Rules.
The M.O.A. held a meeting last evening in the Board of Trade Rooms, in connection with finalizing the formation of the Association. Mr. F. W. Ayre presided, and the rules were read by the Secretary, and adopted. The Association will be incorporated as a company limited by guarantee, and the guarantee sum to be $1.00, and if deemed necessary, will be registered without the word limited, it being pointed out that the organization is not one designed for profit making.

Is There Discrimination?

It is somewhat surprising to find that there is so much more emphasis laid by the Customs on any attempt on the part of a seaman or passenger to evade payment of duty on some small article the tax on which might run into one or more dollars, than there is on a case of deliberate mismanagement whereby the funds of the dominion is mulcted of larger sums. In the former all the ponderous machinery at the disposal and use of the department is set in motion and the small contrabandist must either pay or be punished. The fisherman whose calling forces him to wrest wealth from the depths of ocean in all weathers, and under all circumstances: the mariner who braves the stormy seas of the Atlantic and risks his life daily that supplies may be brought in from foreign countries is watched closely by the Sherlock Holmes' of the Customs and should he fail to declare even the smallest item, swift punishment is visited upon him for the dereliction of duty. But the office holder who sits for a few hours daily at a desk and holds down more salary in one year than any ordinary fisherman makes in twice that time, is permitted to get away with sums of money and not one word in explanation can be drawn from the heads. At the present time there are officials of the police department doing special Customs duty on the South Coast. These men have been sent to certain places with specific instructions as to the particular duties which they have to perform. At the same time there are competent and capable Customs officers at these points; men who have been in the service for years and who were and are faithful and efficient in the discharge of their duties. Why this stigma on their abilities to perform the duties (and collect the duties) required of them? Why is, or was, it found necessary to send police constables to watch these men? Far better if a watch were set on the methods of conducting the city office of the department named. Then there would have been no sum of six thousand dollars alleged to be short, nor would there have been any hypotheation of monthly salaries against individual loans. It is obvious then that the dispatch of police officers to ports on the South Coast can but have been to keep a close eye on the movements of the fishermen it being evident that the Customs must suspect them of running an occasional bit of contraband, but from where, no one knows. It is rather a nice bit of discrimination and we are fully cognizant of the fact that the suspects will appreciate the solicitude with which they are being kept under surveillance. Keep an eye on the small man but never mind the big fellow appears to be the motto. Closely scrutinize every thing outside, but never mind what is being done at headquarters. However the day is not far distant when there will be a searching inquiry into the conduct of a certain department, and when the blame is apportioned, the responsible parties, no matter what their rank, will receive a commensurate punishment. The honor of those officials who are not implicated in the reported shortage demands an investigation and report in full and a thorough remodeling of the whole antiquated and fossilized system of accounting which allows such things to be done must be brought about. No business house would tolerate for a moment such a condition of affairs. Why then should a Government?

Notes and Comments

Startling disclosures are promised in connection with the "locking up" of those eligibles in a law office last week.

There is a section of the Military Service Act, which imposes a severe penalty on any person or persons who attempt to impede, persuade or induce any person or class of persons to resist or impede the Act. Does it apply in the case quoted?

Coming from Germany, of course, you have to believe it, but Munchausen never did anything to beat the feat of that German submarine commander who received a visit from a British mine who rode around in the Captain and the Llandoverly Castle and an army medical officer on board the same ship, in the conning tower of the said British mine.—Ex.

Fish is plentiful but salt is scarce. Such a cry from the outports must beat heavily on the ear drums of the Committee the members of which are responsible for the shortage, that is if there is any responsibility.

The Kaiser should have said that the Germans had embalmed, not preserved, their humanity. It died ages ago.

The people of Newfoundland have proved their loyalty by the blood of their sons shed on land and sea. Another evidence was given when a Victory Loan of $2,000,000 which was to be raised in six weeks, was subscribed in that number of days. — St. John Telegraph.

When you want Sausages, why get ELLIS'; they're the best.

Enemies Within.

In times of war an enemy within is sometimes more dangerous than the foe outside. The latter is known and is guarded against. Even an alien spy inside is not so dangerous as a traitor, an unsuspected citizen who conspires against his country. He is more dangerous still if he belongs to some educated and professional class formally legalized by the country and trusted by the people. He is still further dangerous if his profession has intimately to do with the health and welfare of the people and their ability to carry on the business of the country in such an efficient manner as to enable them successfully to repel the outside enemy.—The Wesleyan.

Latest From the Holyrood Church Fire.

From a letter received in the city this morning from a gentleman in Holyrood we find that the fire was first discovered at five minutes past five, and it is rumoured that the bell caused by a boy who grasped the bell with a candle, who in doing so may have been careless, with the known result. Others believe that sparks from a train which passed at 2.30 ignited the church, but this does not seem possible. Unfortunately the Blessed Sacrament was not saved, although heroic attempts by 16 soldiers led by Sgt. Morrissey, who were first on the scene, were made to force the door of the sanctuary wherein it was kept. Only a few articles, such as vases, candles, etc., were saved. The house of Moses Lewis, which was near the church, was several times endangered, and volunteers with water buckets were continually on guard, and we are pleased to state that beyond a few windows being broken, the house sustained no damage. Our informant states that the air for hundreds of yards around was filled with sparks and flying particles of burning wood, making it extremely dangerous to be near the conflagration. Needless to say the people of Holyrood feel very badly over the disaster, but we are sure that such indefatigable workers will not rest long before a new church is erected on the site of the one destroyed.

McMurdo's Store News.

TUESDAY, July 16, 1918.

That anglers need something to scare away the flies is a common-places—the selection of the proper fly, hope to use for that (when all is said and done) important purpose. Well, Tar Oil and Pennyroyal, our own recipe, does the work thoroughly and may be regarded as quite reliable for the purpose. Price 25c. a bottle.

McMurdo's Earache Drops will not only cure earache but relieve the unpleasant symptoms caused by stuffing of the ears with wax—ringing and buzzing in the ear and other forms of irritation. Price 25c. a bottle.

Here and There.

HERRING FROM GREEN BAY.—A load of herring from Green Bay arrived this morning.

EXPRESS PASSENGERS.—The following first class passengers are on the incoming express.—T. Hughes, C. A. Jones, A. G. French, Wm. M. O'Brien, S. Lardridge, G. D. Scarborough.

MOTOR VAN FOR BOWING PARK.—The wood cart of a big motor van for Bowling Park service is now being constructed by the enterprising firm of A. Carnell, carriage builders, and when completed will have seating capacity for thirty passengers.

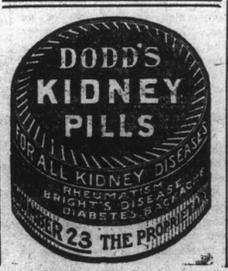

SERIOUSLY ILL.—Mr. J. Badcock who was seriously injured by being run down by a motor car on LeMarchant Road, about six weeks ago, and who was taken to the General Hospital, has since been removed and is still in a precarious condition, grave fears being entertained for his recovery.

TRAIN MOVEMENTS.

Sunday's outgoing express arrived at Port aux Basques at 7.55 p.m. yesterday.
Yesterday's outgoing express left Quarry at 7.30 a.m. to-day.
To-day's incoming express left Port aux Basques on time this morning.

EXTENDING BUSINESS.—As will be seen by a perusal of our advertising columns, Mr. W. A. O'D. Kelly has taken out a license as an auctioneer and commission agent. Household furniture and all other goods will be handled by Mr. Kelly and we bespeak for him a fair share of public patronage. Mr. Kelly's premises at the corner of Adelaide and George Streets, has recently been altered and made ready to handle the large quantity of goods which will be offered for sale.

KILBRIDE GARDEN PARTY.—Reserve to-morrow afternoon for the Kilbride Garden Party. It is looked upon as one of the special events of the season. Its nearness to St. John's and the park always entices hundreds of visitors. No one ever goes to it and comes away dissatisfied. It is universally highly spoken of as a worthy centre of attraction. The beautiful country around alone repays an annual visit and is the most fitting spot of suburban St. John's to while away a few happy hours. Art and hospitable hands have completed nature's work, so come and be happy, and drink in nature's pure air and feast your eyes on her beauty. If you come once you will come every year.

British Hospital Ships Sunk by Hun.

SINCE THE WAR STARTED.

Since the unrestricted blockade of the British coasts was declared by the German naval authorities, the Llandoverly Castle is the eighth British hospital ship to be destroyed by torpedo from an undersea boat. The record is:

Asturias—Torpedoed on the night of March 20-21, 1917. Thirty-one of the medical service and crew were killed; 12 including two women, were missing, and 39 were injured. The Asturias had been attacked off Havre on February 1, 1916, but the torpedo missed its mark.

Gloucester Castle—Torpedoed in mid-Channel, during the night of March 30-31. All the wounded saved.

Donnegal—Torpedoed on the evening of April 17, 1917. Twenty-nine wounded and 12 of the crew were presumed drowned.

Lafranc—Torpedoed on the evening of April 17, 1917. Nineteen British lives were lost; 16 German wounded were drowned, and 152 wounded German prisoners were rescued by British patrol vessels, which ran the imminent risk of being themselves torpedoed.

Dover Castle—Torpedoed at 6 p.m. on May 26, 1917, in the Mediterranean. At 8.30 p.m. she was again torpedoed, and afterwards sank. All on board were saved except six men.

Rewa—Torpedoed at midnight in January, 1918, in the Mediterranean. All the wounded were safely transferred to patrol vessels. Three Lascars were missing.

Genere Castle—Torpedoed in Bristol Channel on February 28, 1917. Two boats with 34 persons rescued.

On March 30, 1916, a deliberate attack was made on the Franco-Russian hospital ship Portugal, near Of in Eastern Anatolia, and the vessel sank in less than a minute, over 100, including many women, were killed. The hospital ships Braemar Castle and Britannic were sunk in November, 1916, but the evidence at the time was not considered conclusive as to whether the loss was caused by mines or torpedo.

The Guilford Castle was attacked in the Bristol Channel on March 14th, 1917, but the torpedo failed to explode.

Is Anything the Matter.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON.

Do you by temperament apprehend evil? I called up a near relative of mine on the long distance telephone the other night, to ask her if she could come and visit me over a week end.

"Is anything the matter?" she said anxiously, "I have minutes the connection was made, I stated my errand.

I could hear her give a sigh of relief. "I thought someone must be sick when the operator told me you were calling," she said.

Now, I am sure I must have called her at least half a dozen times in the last two summers on the long distance, and never has it been to say that anyone was sick, or that anything was the matter.

Why, then, did she expect evil? That she is of that temperament. That is the State of Mind in Which She Faces the Future.

"Is anything the matter" is the keynote of the state of mind in which she faces the future.

I think a great many people have this tendency. And I think it is a very morbid and unfortunate state of mind. Another woman told me once that she never opened a letter from her parents without wondering if there would be any disagreeable news in it.

Neither of these two women had had an unusual amount of trouble in their lives, so one cannot explain their apprehension of evil on that ground. True, they have both had trials and misfortune; but they have also had their full share of happy days. Some people may have this habit of expecting evil forced on them by bitter experiences, but, on the whole, I think it is simply a twist of temperament.

Get It Untwisted Quickly. And a very unhappy twist, and one that anyone who possesses it, ought to try to untwist.

Simply don't let yourself be always ready to ask, "What's the matter? Just refuse to permit your mind to offer you only unpleasant explanations of any delay or any unexpected happening.

Perhaps I shouldn't say "simply," for there is no use pretending it is simple. No effort at mind control is simple. But all such effort is worthwhile and this not the least.

It breaks Down Your Morale. I am not one of those who believe that expecting any definite evil will bring it. But I do believe that constantly expecting evil of all sorts, will break down your morale and bring upon you the evil of sick nerves and an enfeebled mental resistance to trouble.

I have another friend who, when I call her on the telephone, always opens the conversation with "What's the good word to-day?"

Isn't that a much happier, saner attitude in which to face anything that may come, than an is-anything-the-matter attitude?

I fell from a building and received what the doctor called a very bad sprained ankle, and told me I must not walk on it for three weeks. I got MINARD'S LINIMENT and in six days I was out to work again. I think it the best Liniment made.

HIGH COLLARS.

Although the fashions have permitted woman to wear low collared gowns on most all occasions, both during the day and evening there are many business women who have clung to the high starched collars. The result of high collars is a distinct line around the top of the throat and the tightness makes the throat muscles baby and results in the skin becoming not only discolored, but scraggy and loose as well.

Should such a condition exist, the neck must be exercised, massaged and treated with a bleaching and astringent. Good results may be secured by spreading a bleaching skin food on a cloth and binding it around the neck. This should be worn during the night. In the morning after the neck has been thoroughly washed, cold water cloths should be applied to contract the pores and later an astringent lotion rubbed in.

The complexion of the back and shoulders are often neglected. I think that this is due to one's inability to get as good a look at it as they do the face, nevertheless, an ill-colored or fat back is often the means of marring one's good appearance.

As an aid to beautifying the back and shoulders, I would suggest the free use of the friction band each night and morning directly upon the skin. If you do not possess a friction band, make one, it is made as follows:

Fold a rough towel so that it will be three times its original thickness, sew the folds together on sides and ends, crochet strings from ends and fasten to rings sufficiently large to permit thumb to pass through.

MAN'S DESSERTS. If you deserve to win, you will. If victory is in your soul, You'll find the courage and the skill To get you to the distant goal.

You will not have to cry for aid. Nor turn to others through the day; You'll stand to duty undismayed And single-handed fight your way.

Success comes not to timid hearts. Men must deserve to wear the crown; It is not won by cunning arts. Fame tramples all the cowards down.

Mark well the right law of life And from your purpose never swerve. Out of the conflict and the strife Men win no more than they deserve.

The German Atrocity.

(New York Times.)

The Allies in the presence of the crowning atrocity of the torpedoing of the "Llandovery Castle" have a duty to perform. There is no naval means of preventing a recurrence of submarine horrors. A German officer when captured recently said: "We are going to win, or we are going to Hell." The Germans are not going to Hell. The United States, with the inexhaustible wealth of its resources, will see to that. The evidence of our determination is given in the announcement that we are now going more than our army in France a million of these men have been sent overseas in the last two months, an achievement unparalleled in military history. Defeat of Germany is inevitable, and it will be complete. But if there is a hell for Germans in retribution, the parliaments and legislatures of the Allies should insure that retribution.

The British Seamen's Union has blazed the way by proclaiming a boycott against Germans after the war for their misdeeds at sea. Mr. J. Havelock Ellis declared in a speech at Albert Hall that 250,000 men in the shipping industry had determined not to tolerate a German in a British vessel into any German port for a term of years, "in retaliation for the shameful assassination of 15,000 noncombatant seamen." The sinking of the Llandovery Castle calls for action by the statesmen of the Allied countries. It is for them to formulate and sanction a plan of retribution to punish Germany for her crimes on the high seas, her violations of international law, her terrible inhumanities. To talk of reprisals is vain. They would react upon innocent men in the hands of the enemy, not would they be preventive or properly punitive. The punishment should take the form of ex-communication, isolation, deprivation, until the guilty nation makes amends and qualifies for readmission to civilization. It would be a powerful and effective weapon. Notice of retributive retaliation might have the effect of stopping the Germans from running amuck at sea, although that is unlikely at this stage of the war. Germany would have to serve a sentence of punishment in any event, and the terms and conditions could be mitigated only by prompt and adequate reparation.

A Dose of their Own Medicine.

"The mind of Cologne just now, is far more different from what the mind of Cologne was six months ago, than is the mind of any western belligerent from what it was four years ago. And Cologne is only a beginning of what may be done for the conversion of the North German.

"In the West every one has known German outrage from the very beginning of the war, invasion, or at the very best the necessity for bearing with reverse and humiliation. The original British divisions had not landed and been deployed in line more than a few hours before they had to suffer the terrible ordeal of the first days of the war had suffered arson, massacre, rape, pillage, and inhuman insult after a fashion which no Christian nation had yet known. With Northern France it was the same; and the captives had gone into Germany by tens of thousands. The monuments of antiquity were ruined, the decencies of life dissolved, and a sort of chaos seemed to have come.

"It is nearly four years since that time. In all these four years the British, the French, the Belgians, and in their turn the Italians (to mention only the West) have acquired a complete experience of Prussian war and of what it means to have an inferior put for a moment over his superior.

Four Years Since. "Meanwhile the German himself, the author of all this abomination, was immune. He suffered military casualties; but those are normal to war. He saw none even of his most offensive modern erections destroyed; not one of his principal towns heard the noise of the aeroplane dropping above it; no open coastal place of his suddenly suffered murder from the sea. As his own civilian commerce was destroyed no civilian sailors or unarmed passengers of his own people suffered inconvenience, let alone indiscriminate murder by sea. The war was still to the German the thing it had been for us in the past before the present campaign: lamentable for death and privation, but not affecting the core of the nation, its soil, its life as it were.

"The development of our great raids of reprisal have changed all that, and they will continue to change it more and more."—Hilaire Belloc, in Land and Water.

THE LINE OF ADVANCE.

FRENCH ARMY HEADQUARTERS, July 15.—(Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency)—The new battle front is naturally bisected by the town of Rheims and the Montagne de Reims, a great mounded mass seven hundred feet high. Eight miles to the south of this point the Germans attacked the Montagne de Reims frontally and therefore disposed their line in two wings to advance independently with Rheims as the pivot. Chateau Thierry may be taken as the extreme western limit of the attack at the present time. From Chateau Thierry the river is the dividing line as far as Verdun, from which point the line runs northward in the direction of Rheims crossing the broad belt of hills separating the Marne from the plain of Rheims. From Verdun to a point west of Rheims marking the eastern limit of the Marne sector of attack, and advance of twelve miles over the same distance in this sector would give the enemy possession of Epernay.

JOURNALISTS ENTERTAINED.

LONDON, July 15.—(Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency)—The party of Canadian journalists who are guests of the Ministry of Information, visited a large military centre in England to-day, where they witnessed the final gas mask tests before the men of the drafts were sent to France. They also witnessed gun drill and barbed wire parade, in which the Canadians completed a section of fifty yards of entanglement in twelve minutes. The party was subsequently present at the splendid bayonet display by men from the provinces of Saskatchewan, Alberta and Quebec, many of whom only eight weeks ago were working on Canadian farms. Then followed a march past of a battalion composed of all boys who enlisted under age. Some had served from fifteen to eighteen months in France and have now been returned for training, till they become of age. Addressing the men of the Alberta battalion Mr. W. A. Buchanan, M. P. for Lethbridge, Alberta, said that what he had seen had made him prouder than ever of Canada and her army. The people of Canada, he added, are with you heart and soul and will stay with you until the end. Sir Edward Kemp, Overseas Minister of Militia, presided at a luncheon tendered the visitors at which Generals Turner, Hughes, Elmslie, MacDonald, Thacker, Foster and McDougall were among those present. They had precisely the same food as served the Canadian soldiers. Sir Edward Kemp in welcoming the journalists said he desired to hide nothing. He was only anxious that the visitors should see everything connected with the administration of the Canadian forces. The Minister paid tribute to the work of the Canadian military administration, emphasizing that nothing would divert their determination to win the war and make this department of the Government a model of efficiency. There could be no peace until Germany was brought to her knees. Germany had raised with her own blood hands a wall higher than a tariff wall, and speaking for the Dominions no German goods would be able to surmount that wall. Mr. Rinfret, of LeCanada, Montreal, said that no Province had been more obedient to the conscription law than Quebec whose soldiers were fully worthy of their brothers in arms. E. Norman Smith, of Ottawa, also spoke.

siding at Roulers, ammunition dumps at Warneton, and Spaume, Docks at Bruges, and dredging parties at Zebrugge were heavily bombed. Nine enemy machines were brought down and three balloons shot down in flames. Five of our machines are missing.

BERLIN REPORT.

BERLIN, To-day.—The official statement reads: To the southeast and east of Rheims we penetrated into parts of the French positions.

WAR REVIEW.

(By the Associated Press).—The expected renewal of the German offensive in France has begun. Fierce battles are in progress on both sides of the famous cathedral city of Rheims, which, since the last offensive along the Marne has stood at the apex of a sharp salient into the German line. West of Rheims, the Germans, under pressure of numerous troops, the launching of which was preceded by a veritable hail of high explosives and gas shells, have been enabled to cross the Marne at many places. East of the city, however, they have been held for small gains, by the tenacious resistance of the defenders of the line. Altogether the two fronts aggregate 65 miles in length. American troops are fighting valiantly on the sectors they have been holding, and at two points have met with notable success. At Vaux they not alone broke down a violent attack by the enemy but drove him back many hundred yards and only returned to their former positions when the advance of the Germans Southeast of Chateau Thierry across the Marne, made the reoccupation of their trenches of strategic value. Along the Marne, between the town of Possey and the river Sur Meuse, where the Germans crossed the Marne, the Americans in a strong counter attack forced back the enemy to the right bank of the stream. At other points of the river they used to great advantage, their machine guns against the enemy elements crossing the river on pontoon bridges, killing or wounding many of them. In the counter attack near Possey between 1,000 and 1,500 prisoners were taken by the Americans. The Germans in addition to their tremendous expenditure of explosives and gas shells, used numerous tanks against the defenders, and also opened, with numerous naval shells from 10 and 12 inch pieces. The details of the strategic scheme the enemy has in view have not been unfolded. It seems apparent, however, that the main objective in the first stages of the offensive is the throwing of their line South on both sides of Rheims, enveloping that city and forcing its capitulation. From the gaining of the South bank of the Marne and the straightening out East of their line towards Verdun, also may be in the program of the German High Command. Success in these movements would be of great strategic value to them, if it is intended ultimately to attempt to drive into Paris. While the Germans are making their drive in the South, the British around Ypres are making a series of attacks on their line towards Verdun, and the French and Italians in the mountains daily are harassing the enemy with patrol attacks of considerable violence and bombardments. In the few instances where the Austrians in this region lately have tried to take strategic positions, they have met with almost instant repulse. In Palestine, Turkish and German penetrated British positions North of Jericho, but almost immediately were ejected to the rear. In the Caucasus, 250 German, British and American troops are now in control of the entire Murman coast in Northern Russia, according to an unofficial advice. It is through this territory that it is expected ultimately to tend into Russia by way of the Arctic Ocean. In violent fighting with the Bolshevik forces in the Ukraine, the German and Italian forces have captured the important commercial city of Hazan lying on the Volga River, 430 miles East of Moscow.

ALLIES HOLDING THEIR OWN.

PARIS, To-day.—The Allies continue to hold their own, according to the latest advice received here to-night, along the front in France and that is the most and best that can be expected in so early a stage of the offensive, before the German effort has reached its full development. For once the Germans are defeated with their own weapons. The sky is overcast, the weather is unsettled, and most important, the wind is Southwesterly. This is a vital gain for the defence for it makes it difficult, if not impossible, for the enemy to make extensive use of gas on which they usually count. Cohesive action is out of the question when troops are muzzled for long hours with masks, and officers can't communicate orders and each man is thrown on his own resources. As a result, weight of numbers, which is always on the side of the attacking army at the beginning, is a deciding factor. Another advantage which the Allies have had in this offensive is that it was expected just where the attack was delivered. It was considered logical, even unavoidable, that Von Gallwitz's army, the only one not used in this year's offensive, should be chosen to carry out these operations.

SHATTERED FOR THE PRESENT.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE MARNE.—(By the A.P.)—The

German prisoners taken in the counter attack by the Americans at the bend of the Marne, number between 1,000 and 1,500. They include a complete brigade staff. The fighting continues with fierce intensity in this district, and the battle rages with equal ferocity on the right, where the French are said to have delivered a smashing blow against the enemy. From this sector of the front it appears that the German offensive, at least for the present, has been badly shattered. The Americans now command the river front at the bend. At the left of the bend, the famous German 19th division has made repeated attempts to cross, but all assaults have been smashed by the splendidly directed fire of the American guns, and not a single German has succeeded in getting over at this point up to 9 o'clock to-night.

NOON.

GERMANY'S VISION.

LONDON, To-day.—(Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency)—In view of the triumph of the military party in Germany as is evidenced by the fall of Von Kuehlmann, the Foreign Secretary, it is interesting to note what their leading newspapers, the Kreuz Zeitung, has to say about Germany's war aims, after remarking that only waitings can be believed in the possibility of an understanding with England. It proceeds to say, "Victorious Germany will have no paper agreements, she will simply require of England, France, Belgium and Portugal the cession as an indemnity, such portions of their respective possessions as she may need for the establishment of her Central African Empire, East Africa, Togoland and South West Africa are to be the corner pillars of this new colonial empire which Germany intends to develop into a great military power with carefully protected wireless stations, roads, railways, shore batteries and depots for raw materials, food and munitions; the Kreuz Zeitung adds, before the eyes of the German public the idea of a great army of German natives, remaining that the Kreuz Zeitung, especially, provide excellent material for soldiers. It declares that, in the military training of colored auxiliary troops, Germany intends to take a great place among the nations. This new policy will, says the Kreuz Zeitung, be the result of the victory of German Mittel Africa an armed and strong force of white and colored protective troops, which will permit contiguous opponents to send a single man from African soil to the European seat of war unless they wish to abandon their own colonies.

FAVORABLE TO ALLIES.

PARIS, To-day.—The first day of the German offensive is clearly favorable to the Allies, says a semi-official statement issued late Monday night. The French defensive line has not been unfolded, and is still intact. While in previous attacks, the enemy, thanks to surprise, carried important positions like the Chemin-des-Dames and advanced several miles, this time the battle has entailed only fluctuations of a few hundred yards.

TRUSTING THE WEATHER PROPHETS.

PARIS, To-day.—The German offensive, which started yesterday morning, had been held up for several days because German meteorological experts had advised the High Army Command that the weather prevailing would soon end, and conditions would be more favorable for attack. This statement is made by an American army officer whose rank records him to speak with authority. The officer said Germany had sixty weather experts at the front and much importance is always attached to their reports. A statement which seems to be verified by fact, that in all the previous German offensives, the weather has been reported to enemy operations.

BIG DEFEAT FOR HUNS.

PARIS, To-day.—The first day of the offensive was a big defeat for the enemy, says the Havas correspondent on the French front. On the entire attacking front the enemy was not able to break our positions. The slight advance made may be considered as nothing. A count of the efforts displayed and losses sustained. A general impression of confidence reigns within the French lines. French aviators were very active in harassing the enemy and destroyed two barges loaded with German troops.

EXCHANGE OF PRISONERS.

LONDON, To-day.—A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph from Amsterdam, says the Holland News Bureau announces that the agreement between Great Britain and Germany for exchange of prisoners, was signed Sunday at the Hague, and will be submitted to both Governments for ratification. The despatch adds that the agreement includes a number of provisions regarding treatment of prisoners and settles the lot of those interned in Holland and Switzerland.

PARIS HEARS THE GUNS.

PARIS, To-day.—Violent artillery fire continued last night on the fighting front and residents of Paris again heard the roar and saw the flashes of the guns. There was a dim glimmer in the sky resembling summer lightning, varied now and then by a red flash reflected from low clouds. The reports of guns were more faint than on Sunday night and Monday, and were not so loud as heard. An intermittent dull muttering, punctuated by occasional heavy thunders from French batteries, kept up during the night. Houses in the suburbs were shaken slightly, and in some places the rattling of the earth was sufficient to displace pictures on the walls.

GERMANS STRIKING FAILURE.

PARIS, To-day.—The failure of the enemy appears all the more striking if infinite small results obtained be compared with the important advantages which he thought he was going to attain. Orders found on prisoners show that the troops of the Crown Prince were to have camped at Epernay on the night of July 15th, at Chalons on the 16th and at Sedan, 26 miles south of the Marne, on the 17th. The Imperial General Staff left no stone unturned to gain a decisive success, and thirty to thirty-five divisions had been put into the line, that is about one division to two metres. The enemy losses were considerable. A one shock division, which according to plan was to have been relieved on the evening of the 15th, had to be sent to the rear to be patched up on the morning of the 15th. East of Rheims, hundreds of German dead hang on the trench wire, and beside them are many smashed tanks which the enemy used to support the infantry. To sum up, the first day's operations were perfectly satisfactory, the enemy neither surprised our command as to the date nor as to the place of his offensive.

THE NATION UNDER

Some Impressions My Soul by a Man Front—for the are Critic

A Letter Addressed to The London Times by Michael Furse, Bishop of Pretoria. (To The Editor of The Times.) Sir,—I have just returned from the front, where I have spent the last month in giving what help I could to our chaplains and troops in Northern France and Flanders. It was the most glorious month I have ever spent, and I want, if I can, to pass on to others a few of the impressions which were burnt into my soul during that time—for the days are critical. I have never doubted that the spirit of our troops was as fine as men told me it was, but I never realized how fine it was until I had lived in it and with it. It beggars description; it is amazing. It is all the more so when you realize, as you do when you are up at the front that this spirit is here in spite of the fact that this man who shows it in their bosoms is not somehow the nation is not backing them as the nation could and should. That I am convinced, is the feeling right through the Army in France and Flanders; and the reason for it is not far to seek.

At The Front. After fighting desperately day and night for days and weeks, with frightful losses, the men who are left are so tired and need a rest. When they are "pulled out" to get this rest, and after three days are sent back into the firing line again, the only conclusion they can draw is that there are not enough troops available to take their places. When a battalion of infantry—and, as was recently the case in the Ypres salient, regiment after regiment of cavalry, too—have to slip in trenches after day and night after night, being pounded by high explosives from enemy guns, with no guns behind them capable of keeping down the enemy's fire, then the conclusion they draw is obvious—namely, that the nation has failed to provide sufficient guns or ammunition to meet the needs of the enemy. When night falls and day after day, the men in the trenches know that for every one and grenade or rifle grenade or trench mortar bomb which they throw the enemy they will get back in answer anything from five to ten, then the conclusion they draw is also obvious—namely, that the nation does not somehow realize the situation, or, if it does, has not made it its business to supply what is necessary. Man for man they know that they have nothing to fear either from German infantry or cavalry; they have proved it again and again. But they know also that it is little short of murder for a man to be sent back into the firing line to face an enemy army equipped with big guns and the right kind of ammunition, unless there are at least equipped with equally effective munitions of war. There can be only one impression left on the minds of men in such a case, and that is, that somehow or other the nation does not know the truth, does not understand, and is not acting as they do, for knowing the old country as they do, they have no doubt that if Germany can produce these things we can, if we will. And yet, in spite of it all, they carry on, they keep cheerful, they do their best, they die gladly. The fact is that an nation we are just gambling on our spirit. We know it to be there; we recognize it as the finest thing in the world; we believe it is unconquerable, whatever happens. So it is; but it will not win the war alone. It is this spirit, backed by guns and high explosives—legitimate munitions of war—which is going to smash this enemy out, and nothing else. Let one think that we are going to do it by depending to the level of the German Imperial Staff and using any sort of gas. This talk of reprisals by gas perhaps next we shall hear of reprisals by poisoning water supplies! It is simply another method of choking the nation and blinding its eyes to the real issue—the adequate back

We offer you a $100 Bond in the road on the following terms:—
FOR ONE YEAR, 6 P.C. IN CASH AND 40 P.C. IN SHARES.
FOR TWO YEARS, 12 P.C. IN CASH AND 50 P.C. IN SHARES.
FOR THREE YEARS, 18 P.C. IN CASH AND 60 P.C. IN SHARES.
FOR FOUR YEARS, 24 P.C. IN CASH AND 80 P.C. IN SHARES.
 It's up to you whether you invest for one year or for two, three or four years. Your interest will be paid twice a year and your stock bonus will be paid at once.
 The investing public isn't usually offered free common shares with a Bond issue, but this is a "strictly inside" proposition.
 Those who delay ordering will receive less free shares than those who order within the next fifteen days.
ASK US TO GIVE YOU FULL PARTICULARS.
