The Countess of Landon.

CHAPTER XL

The hours passed and the day began to decline. In the twilight, Royce Irene and the countess watched the beautiful face growing whiter and more ethereal with each hour.

Not one of them had spoken for some time, and it was amid deep silence that Madge gradually opened her eyes, and murmured:

"Katie, he has gone—he has gone. I shall never see him any more. But it is best—it is best that I should not. Gone! Jack, has gone! Oh, what shall I do?"

Then she looked round and tried to rise.

"The fire! the fire!" she moaned. "Irene, I am here. I must save her!" A moment later she saw and recognised Royce, and with a look of joy she breathed his name tenderly.

"Jack!"
"My darling! Madge!" he murmured chokingly, "you know me? You are better? Oh, Madge!" and he kissed her and laid her face against his.

"Dear, dear Jack!" she murmured, her sweet voice so low that the countess and Irene could scarcely hear it. "Poor Jack! How long—" she shuddered faintly.

"Don't think of it, dearest," he said. "Irene is safe, we are all safe, and please God, you will be all right."

His voice broke.
"She smiled up at him and touched his face."

"Am I very much burned, Jack?" she murmured.

"No no," he said; "not at all—not burned at all, Madge. It was—"

She sighed softly.
"I remember. It was something that fell and struck me. But I did not drop her, Jack."

"Are you in pain, dearest?" he asked.

"No," she said. "But there is a heavy weight pressing upon my side—here. I can scarcely breathe."

She looked at him with a sad tenderness.

"Jack, would you be very glad? I know that you would, dear. But I don't think I shall, Jack. Don't cry—oh, don't cry!" She felt his tears on her hand. "Don't fret about me, Jack. You have been very, very good to me. You would have been kinder, sweeter. You have never once thought of all the trouble and misery I have caused you—never once."

"Oh, Madge, Madge!" he moaned.

"Through it all you have never reproached me, and most men would. For see what harm I have done you, Jack."

"Harm?"

"Yes. I have disgraced you and all belonging to you. That—that is a hard thought for me. It would be harder still if—I thought I was going to live."

"Madge!" was all he could say in his agony.

She stroked his hand soothingly.

"It is better than I should die, Jack," she said in a low voice—"better for me. Yes, I see now that I should always have brought you unhappiness. I see it all now. I did not know when—we were married. I was ignorant, and knew nothing of the great world. But I knew now, and I am sorry—very sorry. Forgive me, Jack. But you have done that already, haven't you? You have never had an unkind thought—"

She passed to gain breath. Royce could not speak. Irene's suppressed sobs broke the silence.

Madge opened her eyes again.

"Is that Irene?" she murmured, painfully. "Bring her to me."

Irene sunk on her knees beside the bed, and took and kissed the limp

Triumphs of the Air Camera

WORLD TO BE REMAPPED FROM THE CLOUDS.

One of the most serviceable uses to which the aeroplane has been put is in the making of maps and surveys. The aerial photograph provides an ideal way of mapping out bad country, swamps, river basins, and deltas; and it also offers a unique method of studying the design and arrangement of factories and large buildings.

The aviator's camera, which has reached a higher state of perfection in Britain than in any other country, is fixed to the aeroplane so as always to point downwards towards the earth. When a snapshot is taken of a spot directly beneath the pilot, it is known as a pin-point photograph. Sometimes these photographs are taken one after another at fixed intervals of a few seconds, each one overlapping the last; all the pictures can later be pieced together to make one big map. A large map of this kind is really a mosaic built up of perhaps hundreds of small photographs fitted together with the greatest precision.

Camera With a Propeller.
To the aeroplane camera is often fitted a little propeller, which is driven by the air pressure caused by the flight of the machine, and this acts as a motor for driving the mechanism which changes the photographic plates and releases the shutter that exposes them. The camera can thus be made to take pictures automatically at regular intervals, which are arranged before a flight.

One of the greatest obstacles in the way of taking good aerial photographs has been the haze which often screens the landscape from the aviator. Light is reflected from the minute particles of haze, which "blinds" the camera, as it were, the land often appearing blurred and vague.

It was found, however, that red rays will pass easily through the haze. By using photographic plates that are specially sensitive to red rays, and placing a red glass or filter in front of the lens, beautifully clear photographs can be taken of the land in quite misty weather conditions.

Stories in Names

Very few people are aware that the name they bear may give an interesting and valuable clue to their ancestry.

Thus, if a man signs himself Harcourt or Venables, Pelham or Percival, Dawney or Daubney, he can be sure that the founder of his family was cradled in Normandy, though whether he was a lord, a knight, or a scullion may be hidden from him. Similarly, if he bears the name of any town or village in England, of a certainty that village or town was the home of his forefathers.

Even when a man's surname throws no light on his place of origin, it often gives interesting clues to past history.

Thus, if he is called Tanner or Glover, Butcher or Baker, Carter or Carpenter, he knows what was the occupation followed by the first of his forefathers to bear the label.

Similarly, the first Thwaites was a feller of woods; Jenner was a joiner; Milner, a miller; Webster, a weaver; Barker, a tanner; Lorimer, a maker of bits and spurs; Stringer, a man who made bow-strings; Tipper, who tipped arrows; Fletcher, who affixed the feathers; and so on through the long list of old-time trades.

When there was no such way of distinguishing a man it was an easy matter to identify him as the father's son. And when, in process of time, the "son's" labels grew too plentiful and confusing, the father's name was modified in other ways—such as extent, indeed, that the connection is often almost impossible to trace. Thus, the descendants of Richards to-day masquerade under thirteen disguises, from Richards and Dickson to Dickens and Hitchins.

Even names which suggest no desirable lineage are often both ancient and honorable. Mr. Buggins and Mr. Bangs will be relieved to find that their names came over with the Normans; while Mr. Snooks can point to Sevenoaks as the cradle of his family.

Chuckles in Court

AGREEMENT.
Willson Magistrate (to witness): "One of you must be telling lies."
Woman: "Of course he is, sir."

HER FINANCIAL.
Solicitor (at Shoreditch County Court): "With whom did you dance?"
Girl: "With my fiancéer."
"I suppose you mean fiancé?"
"I suppose that is the word."
"It would have been more simple if you had called him your young man or sweetheart."
"But they are all called fiancéers down here now!" said the girl.

A DATE PUZZLE.
The clerk at Willson, after reading the formal charge to a prisoner, concluding "—and on divers other dates," asked him if he had anything to say.

"Yes," said the man; "what date was divers dates?"

Heroes on Postage Stamps

A foreign country has, for the third time, honored a Briton by showing him on its postage stamps.

The Government of Greece have recently issued two new stamps, one bearing the bust of Byron and the other depicting the poet's entry into Missolonghi.

The two others who received a similar tribute at the hands of a foreign state were Admiral Lord Cochrane, afterwards tenth Earl of Dundonald, and "Nash" Bourchier, for some twenty-five years the London Times correspondent in Bulgaria.

The special Cochrane stamp was issued by Chili, in 1910, in memory of the part played by the great naval commander in freeing the South American State from the yoke of Spain.

There is probably no more romantic story in history than that of Cochrane the Dauntless. His career in the British Navy was one of exceptional brilliance, and at the beginning of last century seemed likely to bring him to the highest honors in his country's gift.

He was constantly at loggerheads with "My Lord" of the Admiralty, however, and finally a series of Stock Exchange speculations in which he had engaged gave his enemies their chance. In these speculations he had acted habitually with an uncle, and over-scandalous in his methods. As a sequel to an audacious fraud in which these persons were concerned, they were brought to trial in 1814.

Cochrane was brought to trial with them, and though he protested his innocence, was condemned along with the others, being sentenced to a fine and imprisonment. Ultimately he regained his liberty in 1816, on payment of a heavy fine.

Also Helped Brazil.

In 1817 he was invited by the Chilian, then in revolt against Spain, to take command of their naval forces. He did so, and it was largely as a result of his genius for naval warfare that Chili was successful in her struggle.

Milkmaid Hand-writing Competition

The Judges have handed down their decision in the Milkmaid Hand-writing Competition and we wish to congratulate the thousands of children, who entered so heartily into the contest, on the general excellence of their writing, which reflects great credit on themselves, their teachers, and their parents.

MILKMAID MILK IS THE BEST MILK MADE

The sentence which you have been writing: MILKMAID MILK IS THE BEST MILK MADE is not merely an empty sentence to be written in the hopes of winning a prize. It is a positive statement of a fact recognized all over the world, and we want you to remember this always, so that whenever MILK is mentioned, you will at once think of ple for independence. After leaving the Chilian service, Cochrane helped Brazil in her revolt against Portugal, and later took service with the Greeks. He was restored to the British Navy in 1833, and granted a free pardon, but failed to obtain the new trial which he desired. On his death, in 1860, he was buried in Westminster Abbey.

Bourchier's story is of a different kind, but almost as extraordinary. After winning a big reputation as a classical scholar at Dublin and Cambridge he became a master at Eton. His growing distress, however, obliged him to relinquish this appointment, and turning his thoughts to journalism, he was appointed the Times correspondent in Athens. Later he was transferred to Sofia, and speedily became a national figure in Bulgaria.

It would be almost impossible to over-estimate the power which this quiet, unassuming Briton came to wield in the Balkans, or the affection which he inspired.

When, in 1915, Bulgaria entered the war on the side of Germany, Bourchier's heart was almost broken, but he lived to return to Bulgaria in December, 1920. The sands of his life were running out, however, and he had only been in Sofia for a fortnight when he died.

One of the finest streets in Sofia was renamed after him last year, and in 1921 a set of nine Bouchier stamps (two of them showing him in costume), was issued by the Bulgarian Government.

As to Byron, the issue of the commemorative stamps is only one in a long list of centenary celebrations which have served to emphasize abiding hold which that romantic sonality has on the affection and pride of Greece.

A personal experience of the writer will, perhaps, best testify to the feeling towards Byron. Once at Athens in Greece, he saw a portrait of the hanging in the place of honor.

The landlord coming in as he was looking at it, the writer turned to "The poet," he remarked.

"No," said the landlord, "the liverer!"

AN OLD BOOK. As to the bygone years, I glance, I recollect one gorgeous day, when Weyman's 'Gentleman of Fraxce' was loaned me by a kindly lay: 'This book will make you sing and dance—it is a gem.' I heard him say: 'The story bound me in a spell, I could not tear away my eyes; I marked the swordsmen, fighting well, I heard the soldier's battle cries: I rose not when the dinner bell invited me to soup and pies. There is no book would hold me now, when I am called upon to dine; no output of a bulging brow, no tale or ode, however fine, would keep me from the steaming chow; hash beats the poet's ringing line, I've read a million books since then, I read them all, the grave and gay, I read through volumes in my den, I read them when I thrill again, as when I first struck Stanley J. New hosts of novelists advance as thick as chinchebugs in the corn; they come in pomp and circumstance, to new and greater splendours born; and Weyman's 'Gentleman of France,' and all such books, are laughed to scorn. But I would give, already still, all problem books I have in store, to know again the pleasant thrill I knew upon a day of yore, when Weyman's book, fresh from the mill, was loaned me by the man next door.

LONDON, NEW YORK & PARIS ASSOCIATION OF FASHION

Founded in 1879 by W. J. Herder. The Evening Telegram THE EVENING TELEGRAM, LTD. PROPRIETORS.

The Voice of the People.

The people of Newfoundland have been given the opportunity to decide for themselves whether or not honesty and integrity were to be restored in public life, or whether the country was to remain scorned by her neighbors and her name made a byword for corruption and mismanagement.

Already the results of the election are sufficient evidence of the sterling worth of the character of her people. They have shown in no uncertain manner that they are determined that the course of action insisted upon by the Telegram almost twelve months ago, and promised to be followed by the Prime Minister of that time, W. R. Warren, fully expressed their sentiments, and they have availed of the earliest opportunity to put their sentiment into effect.

In the support which has been given to Monroe and his party Newfoundland has proved to the world that she is determined to uphold Right and Justice, that sectionism shall not be permitted to undermine her constitution, and that she is still capable of carrying out the cleansing process and of setting her house in order by her own initiative.

Monroe Vindicated by Bonavista

The result of the Election in the District of Bonavista may be somewhat more striking than was generally anticipated but it does not come as a surprise to the thinking public.

The courage shown by the leader Mr. Walter Monroe in tackling the dictator in his own dominion was courage born of confidence in the independent spirit of the people. Full well he knew that his appeal would not fall on deaf ears.

The people of that great district were made to realize more fully than any other part of the island that Coakerism was a menace which was destroying that freedom of thought and action which is the sovereign right of British peoples everywhere. They have been led to see that the Union which might have proved, and should have proved a blessing to them has by misuse become the very opposite. Honest to the core, true to the principles for which their fathers fought, and trusting implicitly to the sincerity of the People's Leader they have rallied to his standard in a manner which has won for them the pride and admiration of the whole country.

Although the count has not yet closed there is everything to indicate that the rule of Coaker is a thing of the past.

All honour to Bonavista and to those who fought for a Clean up and Fair Treatment for all Inadvertently Omitted.

The letter from Mr. L. C. Outerbridge, Chairman of the Nfld. Committee of the British Empire Exhibition, to which reference was made yesterday, was inadvertently omitted and appears in this issue.

Election Returns

FORTUNE BAY. The Fortune Bay count which began yesterday morning showed at the outset that Mr. Warren the Independent candidate would win easily over his opponents. The race between Mr. Jeffrey the Monroe candidate and Mr. Lukins for the Government was close and resulted in a win for the former by a small lead.

ST. JOHN'S EAST AND WEST. St. John's East and West rolled up record majorities for the Monroe candidates. In St. John's East, the lowest Monroe candidate, Basil, the highest Government representative by 2,367 votes. In the West End Sir John Croesbie and his two colleagues exceeded all records in the votes they received, as well as in the majorities obtained. The leading Government candidate was defeated by the lowest candidate on the Monroe ticket by 1,333 votes.

FOGO. The election in Fogo district went in favor of Mr. Hibbs, Coaker candidate. He defeated Capt. Dalton, the Monroe candidate by 171 votes. The majority was nearly 100 votes short of that received by Mr. Grimes (Coaker) last year.

TRINITY. The Trinity count began yesterday evening with the 3 Government candidates leading at 1 o'clock this morning when the poll was declared. The Govt candidates winning by much smaller majorities than in the previous election. Last year Halfyard headed the poll with a majority of 1,414 over his highest opponent. His majority this year is just over 400. The Monroe candidates put up a splendid fight and deserve congratulations on the success achieved.

MOTHER AND CHILDREN BURNED TO DEATH. TORONTO, June 4. Mrs. Harry G. Peppil, the wife of Henry George Peppil, 15 Whitney Ave., Toronto, formerly manager of Aemilias Jarvis Bond firm of Bay Street, Toronto, and her two children, Ned, aged 5, and Rosemary, aged 3, lost their lives when their summer cottage at Easthorn, Lake Simcoe, was destroyed by fire at seven o'clock this morning. Allen, aged eight, the oldest daughter, and maid escaped.

THE SITUATION OF U.S.A. AND JAPAN.

NEW YORK, June 5. Rear Admiral Bradley A. Fisk, retired, in a letter to Secretary of the Navy Wilder calls attention to the present comparative strength of the United States and Japanese fleets for operations in far eastern waters, which, he said, was gravely misunderstood by the public. 'Of course I do not mean to suggest,' said the Rear Admiral, 'that war is even possible, but nevertheless it may be pointed out that the Japanese and the Americans have taken attitudes that are irreconcilable, and that the Japanese have virtually broken off diplomatic relations by giving their Ambassador a "vacation." Such attitude and such acts have usually preceded wars though they have not always been followed by wars.'

ARCTIC EXPLORATION PARTY STARTING SOON.

LONDON, June 5. The British Arctic expedition organized by George Binney will shortly sail from Newcastle. Two ships have been chartered, a 3,000 ton Norwegian whaler, and a small Norwegian sealing sloop. A seaplane specially designed for Arctic reconnaissance will accompany the expedition, which has the support of the Royal Geographical Society, the Air Survey Committee of the War Office and the Air Ministry. The chief object of the expedition is to explore North East Land, an island to the northwest of the main Spitzbergen Island. Other objects are to beat the farthest north record of sailing in navigable waters, and to investigate the northwest of the Franz Joseph Archipelago. Colonel S. E. Tennant is to lead the sledging party in North East Land, and Lieut. Albans will conduct the ground survey. The party will include Captain Helmer Hansen, who was with the South Pole expedition with Amundsen.

CONGREGATIONALISTS' UNANIMOUS DECISION.

TORONTO, June 5. The Congregational Union of Canada, representing the Congregational Churches of Canada, in annual session at Rosedale community Church yesterday reaffirmed its decision to seek organic union with the Methodist and Presbyterian Churches, and went on unanimously to record its refusal to accept amendments proposed in the preamble of bill now before the House of Commons.

NAVAL FORCES WILL SUPPRESS SLAVE TRAFFIC.

LONDON, June 5. The British Foreign Office has announced British navy in the Red Sea would receive reinforcements for the purpose of suppressing traffic in natives which is being carried on by Arab pirates on the Red Sea. The French and Italian navies will cooperate with this British. It is stated, 'The present naval force' has proved inadequate to handle the situation because numbers of islands in the Red Sea offered hiding places for pirates.

ELECTED MODERATOR.

OWENSOUND, Ont. June 4. Rev. Dr. Clarence McKinnon of Pine Hill theological seminary in Halifax, N.S., was to-night elected moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly.

WOULD FLY ALONE.

ROME, June 4. Lieut. Locatelli, the well known Italian aviator, who is to pilot one of the three airplanes which Ronald Amundsen is to lead on a flight on the north pole declared that, after consultation with Premier Mussolini, he was ready to make a polar flight alone rather than yield to the Norwegian insistence that only the Norwegian colors be flown on the arctic trip.

POSTPONED SINE DIE.—The postponed hearing of the larceny charge preferred against Sir Richard Squires which was scheduled to take place this afternoon, has been postponed sine die. It is quite probable that the preliminary hearing will not be continued until the election is over.

Large Audiences

DELIGHTFUL PERFORMANCE.

The hundreds of patrons of the popular Star Movie were again most pleased last evening at the excellent programme which they witnessed. It goes without saying that this is the theatre where you are guaranteed a most pleasant evening's entertainment, and by careful attention to the minutest detail of the business, accompanied with the careful selection of pictures, the management has built up the premier movie picture house business in Newfoundland. The feature picture of the night, was the comedy sequence "The Three Musketeers," entitled "The Must-Get-Thems," and it drew a stream from beginning to end, as the audience went away laughing. The five Hawaiians as usual went to the top. In fact, it would be impossible to mention the names of the artists to do justice to their talents. The main attraction in this line was the slow motion dance of Jonia, in her performance of the Hula-Hula, and for which she was roundly applauded. Being obliged to respond to requests, she was also the individual members of the entire company. Indelia was the attraction in the singing line, and Eddie and Charlie added new songs to their reputation, for these seem to be an example of Cope's "Stronger and stronger every day, in every way," whilst Big Bill with his jovial smile, is the favorite of all. The entire programme is being repeated this evening, and not only will it again draw a big attendance. As usual, on Friday there will be an entire change of programme. In this Indelia will, in a novel way, sing "My Wild Irish Rose," accompanied by Charlie with his new idea. This is a decidedly new and novel idea, but we cannot tell you. Come and see, and hear it for yourself to-morrow night.

Enjoyable Play

At Synod Hall

The pupils of Parade Street School staged their annual entertainment at Synod Hall last night to a capacity house. The affair took the form of a musical play entitled "Lighthouse," which the scholars gave an excellent representation of. Their parts, well served well merited applause from the entire gathering. The settings were very effective and much credit is due to Misses Jean Taylor, Louise Meyer and Edgewood, for their untiring efforts in training the pupils' talents. During the evening a goodly amount was realized by the sale of home made candy.

Just Outside the Door

WEEK-END BILL AT THE MAJESTIC THEATRE SOMETHING TO BOAST OF.

Everything from Jax to Grand Opera, including a bunch of musical comedies which will set the crowd going, arranged by the popular lady artists at the Majestic Theatre for Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Miss McShane and Habel will be at the service to the patrons with a magnificent combination of musical numbers which undoubtedly will win the approval of all. Next is "Toasty," a victim of a more than well worth the attention. The five items as set forth in the advertisement are picked from the best of their musical collection, and it might be added with the marked admiration from audiences in every theatre which the artists were engaged in the Keith Circuit. The feature here is one which was exhibited recently in Boston and New York, and is largely exploited from Coast to Coast. "Just Outside the Door," is undoubtedly one of the best. Schenck's production released to-date. It will be followed with a comedy somewhat different from the usual run.

When Sand is "Quick"

At low tide one can walk on the beach with safety. Crickets, beetles, and other insects have been seen on the beach surface. Yet when the tide is coming in the sand softens so that it yields everything upon its surface. If you want to understand about beach sand, take two jam-pots, and fill with dry sand. It takes a good deal of force to push an uncupped pencil into the bottom of either jar. Dampen the sand in one jar, and it is still difficult to penetrate, but soak the mixture with a quantity of water, and keep the pencil to the bottom with ease. This shows the "secret" of quicksand. If the grains are separated by water which is constantly coming in from below, the sand is "quick." But separating agent need not be water. It may be gas. Small patches of gas found upon a beach are the result of decaying matter, such as dead shell-fish buried beneath the surface and giving off gas. Gas bubbles from inland, in rivers, or on moorlands, are usually caused by underground springs. But quicksand is not a special sort of sand. Any fine-grained sand becomes quick in the circumstances described.

A Pertinent Question

Editor Evening Telegram
Dear Sir:—Seeing so much in the news of the doings of Bartlett and P. Keegan on the Saturday afternoon of May 24th, and not being a party to believe it, I would like to ask both of them what they were doing around Conception Bay at Hr. Meal, between 8 and 9 o'clock on the same Saturday morning as they must have been up pretty early to get that far and it was surely much too cold for a pleasure drive, especially when one is accustomed to indoor work all the time. They seemed to be in an awful hurry the way they were running around. One would almost think, instead of delivering circulars, they were busy picking or hunting up coal contracts or something. Guess the old Ford must have been pretty much tired out if he made a second trip around the Bay again in the afternoon, as he said in the News of June 4th. He left in the afternoon. Thanking you for space, I remain,

Taking Wild Animals' Pictures

CAMERA SUBJECTS FOUND AT THE ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS.

The London Zoo is the happiest hunting ground in the country for the camera enthusiast.

If the camera be a small one, say quarter plate, or smaller, no permit is necessary, but if larger instruments are used, or if it is desired to set up a tripod, it is necessary to ask permission, and a fee may be demanded.

As the majority of pictures taken at the Zoo must be pure snapshots, because of the life and movement there, the restriction mentioned does not hamper anybody. There is, indeed, no need to use a larger camera, because the small ones do much better work in the circumstances. The use of the long-focus lens demanded by a large camera would necessitate stopping down of the lens and long exposures. With the short focus lens of the smaller camera, it is possible to use the lens at full aperture. This enables one to give the rapid exposures necessary when live animals are the subjects.

Leave Lions Alone

The novice should not allow himself to be tempted to snap at any animals kept under cover, such as lions in the Lion House. In no such case will the light be sufficient to provide adequate exposure. Pictures of animals in outdoor cages may be taken, but those of animals behind iron bars are seldom satisfactory, and they are never very attractive, even if successful in other respects.

Thus it is hardly worth while to waste films and plates on the dangerous animals, with one notable exception. The bears on the Mappin terraces have no bars before them, and they can be photographed at close range in perfectly natural surroundings. Moreover, they seem to like the process if encouraged by tit-bits in the form of biscuits.

Fortunately many of the cages contain striking animals or birds which are quite safe, and in these cages an effort should be made to push the lenses of the camera through the bars or wire netting when taking a snap. In this class may be mentioned giraffes, wild horses, many kinds of deer, ostriches, peacocks, and eagles.

Quite apart from these, however, there are lots of subjects of great interest which can be photographed in the open, the seals being possibly the most useful for the purpose. A short time spent by the pond, preferably just before feeding time, will enable one to bag half a dozen pictures worth having. Later, when feeding takes place, there may be a great temptation to "fire-off" quite a number of snaps, but it should be resisted. The animals dine much too quickly for the ordinary snapshot camera. Those who possess high-class cameras with focal plane shutters, however, will have the opportunities here to test their skill in high speed snapshot work.

The ponds containing the larger water-fowl provide a series of really beautiful pictures throughout the day. One or more flamingos in a picture will make the most ordinary water scene attractive.

On a trip of this sort it is well to be armed with spare films or plates, and those who wish to reload their cameras during the day may be interested to know that if they consult the keeper of the wolves' den they will be allowed to use a photographic dark room, next to the den, on payment of a small fee.

Words That Make Us Wonder

Have you ever wondered how some of the queer words and expressions we use to-day first came into the language?

The expression "raining cats and dogs" originated in the days when seamen used to refer to waves on the water before a storm as "cat-paws," whilst the dog has always been regarded in northern mythology as a symbol of wind. Consequently, when a heavy rainstorm was accompanied by high winds, sailors would say "it was coming down cats and dogs."

We still use the expression "big wig," although these articles are a fashion of the past. In other days, however, a person's importance was judged by the size of the wig he wore, and therefore the highest in the land were known to the less fortunate as "big wigs."

"Pin-money" is an expression that serves to remind us of the days when pins were expensive, and husbands allowed their wives special sums for that purpose. Later on the expression was applied to a wife's pocket-money.

Another word that has an interesting origin is "handicap." This is probably derived from "hand in the cap," as in former times it was the custom to draw lots from a hat or cap.

Victory Lodge, No. 277, L.O.B.A.

Under the auspices of the above Lodge a most enjoyable evening was spent on Tuesday, June 3rd. The concert was opened by Mrs. M. Bastov, M. the following taking part: Misses Mead, Langmead, Anthony, Warren, Edgewood, Grimes and Coyle; Mesdames Hain, Bastov, Yetman; Messrs. Mercer, Taylor, Whitten and King. Miss E. Kennedy, F.M., had much pleasure in passing a vote of thanks, which was seconded by Mrs. Bastov, W.M., to all who had taken part in making the evening a most enjoyable one. The evening was brought to a close by singing the National Anthem.

Smile Awhile

Her Idea.

A big race meeting the following conversation was overheard between a sporting man and his old fashioned mother, whom he had invited up from the country.

"What on earth have you brought?" said the son, eyeing the parcel his mother carried.

"Well," replied the old lady, "you said in your letter to bring something to put on the horses, and here's an old quilt, but I want it back afterwards."

Why He Worried.

"The trouble with you is the same as with another patient of mine," said the doctor. "He worried and got nervous dyspepsia. He was worried himself to death about his tailor's bill. Now he is cured."

"But how did you cure him?" asked the patient.

"I told him to stop worrying, and he has," replied the doctor.

"I know," was the doleful answer; "I know he has. But I am his tailor."

It Wasn't Wireless.

Jones made a topping crystal set (so far as looks went) and connected up with pride and boundless hope, as soon as he got the headphones to his expectant ears he "thought he heard a noise." It was faint imitation to a brass band, miles and miles away.

He pulled the receivers away and the music swelled—he put them back again and the music faded.

It was disappointing and amazing. He would have been touching this and that until now if his wife had not popped into the house and mentioned that the Salvation Army band was playing at the end of the street.

YOUR GIRL

Will take a real interest and make a success of the fine art of cooking if you provide her with the necessary equipment at home. Just because her grandmother used an old-fashioned coal stove is no reason why the young generation should be burdened down with it. If your kitchen is equipped with a "SMOOTHTOP" VULCAN GAS RANGE, fitted with a Modern Heat Regulator, perfect results are certain.

Try this recipe for NUT BREAD: 4 cups flour, 6 tea-spoons baking powder, 1 tea-spoon salt, 1 cup sugar, 1 cup English walnuts, 1 cup milk, 2 eggs. Mix and sift dry ingredients and add the chopped nuts. Add milk and well beaten eggs. Put in two buttered pans and let stand 20 minutes. Set your oven heat regulator at 375 degrees and bake for 20 minutes. Estimates and full particulars gladly furnished by St. John's Gas Light Co.

SERVED HIM RIGHT.

He stood close together on the precipice. The roar of the waters below them was softened to a low whisper—so high were the rocks in their course. He looked at the beauty around him. They were conscious of only the ecstasy of the other's presence.

She slipped her arms around the great bulk of his shoulders, lifted her face, and closed her eyes. She knew that he was looking at her. "Dear," he said. "Dear," he continued, "your nose shines." She kicked off her shoes and leaped into the abyss.

Wembley's Wonder Railway

HOW THE NEVER-STOP TRAINS WORK.

Many visitors to Wembley will be puzzled to know just how the wonderful Never-Stop Railway works. On this track, which you will see just inside the main north entrance, run cars which travel without drivers, conductors or brakes.

These cars are propelled by an electrically driven shaft placed underneath and between the track rails. To this shaft is fixed a spiral rail which engages between rollers under each car. Thus when the shaft turns the spiral; the spiral—being engaged between the rollers—pushes the car along the track.

Now, the closer together the turns of the spiral are, the more slowly the cars will move, and as the spiral turns get wider and wider apart, so the car's speed will increase. At the stations of this novel railway, therefore, the spiral turns are made very close together and the cars merely crawl along the rails. In between stations the spiral turns are gradually widened until the cars are travelling between 16 and 20 miles per hour. It is very simple.

Each car on the "Never-Stop" is about 20 feet long, and will take 24 sitting passengers and 12 standing. The trains travel along an elevated track, completing a round trip of the exhibition in about ten minutes. Another novel train service runs from the southern side of the grounds. This is the roadrail light railway. The advantage of the roadrail engine is that it can climb hills which no ordinary engine could manage, and it can also pull a load four times as great as any other engine of its own weight.

These results are obtained by providing the engine with special rubber-shod driving wheels. The driving wheels can be fitted to run either inside or outside the ordinary railway track. They run on wheel-ways of concrete, macadam, or other material with a road-like surface. Their rubber tyres hold tightly to the track, and it is this intensified grip which enables the roadrail engine to work so well. In addition to the driving wheels, it, of course, possesses the ordinary rail wheels.

The roadrail system will run from the south end of the Amusements Park, behind the Stadium, to a turning-point near Wembley Hill Station. Thus there will be complete connection between the two main entrances and the two main railway stations to London.

Absorbing Film Play at The Crescent

"BROKEN CHAINS" TO-NIGHT'S BIG FEATURE.

"Broken Chains," the big feature at the Crescent Theatre to-night, is a photoplay of intense and absorbing interest so truly, humanly and vividly acted that it will make an indelible impression upon every person who sees it.

In the hands of Allen Holubar, one of the most famous directors of action pictures of the entire industry, "Broken Chains" has been made into a brilliant, punchy drama of fighting men and beautiful women, beginning with a hold-up in wealthy Long Island home and winding a thrilling course among the lumber camps of a lawless western mountainside. The final battle between a boy who was called a coward and a brute of the hills will linger long in the memory of picture-goers as the most exciting thing of its kind ever flashed on the screen.

The program has a beautiful comedy relief with the screening of the Christie Comedy, "Green as Grass," featuring Jimmie Adams—and the musical interpretation played by Al Pittman and Frank Fusible leaves nothing wanting in that direction.

American Humour.

The professional humorists of the United States are busier than ever, and a favourite side-line—"pore" attributed to some small journal in a small town—is being steadily developed. Here are a few Swampbog news items:—

Oscar Boon was wearing gravel in his shoes the other day so that he could forget his toothache.

The Turtle Creek Editor says his town is healthier than Swampbog. As a matter of fact, Turtle Creek is so unhealthy that every family there owns its private hearse.

Our Turtle Creek correspondent writes: "A brick fell off Joe Thompson's chimney yesterday. If anything else ever happens down here I'll let you know."

The Editor was called out yesterday by Jim Todd to see a freak animal—a "wop-headed" jack. He pulled a pack of cards out of his pocket and showed us—the jack of spades. He would have been thirty years old next Thursday.

Pre-Historic Diet for Tuberculosis

His new method of treating tuberculosis by feeding the patients pure dried juice from raw meat, was described to the Academy of Sciences in Paris by Prof. Charles Richet, famous physiologist and winner of the Nobel prize for medicine in 1913.

Prof. Richet applied his method in hospital work during the war with most encouraging results. One hundred patients treated by the Professor steadily increased in weight for two months, their gain being attributed to reconstruction of muscular tissues wasted by tuberculosis.

Prof. Richet has long advocated a "cave man" diet as the only one according strictly to the dictates of physiology. His experiments with dogs have shown that those fed exclusively with raw meat flourish, while others, fed cooked meat, decline and die within a relatively short time. As it is impossible for tubercular patients to take raw meat in sufficient quantities it must be replaced with the juice which he says possesses the same therapeutic qualities and can be taken in large doses without inconvenience. He administers about 100 grains daily to a patient. The treatment, he claims, is equally good for anemic children and in cases of convalescence.

Mazy Marriages

Second marriages often cause queer muddles in the family circle. A Corsican girl recently married a man whose first wife was the sister of the girl's grandmother. Consequently she is now her own mother's grand-aunt and her grandmother's sister-in-law. To her own brothers and sisters she is great-aunt. Finally, she is her own grand-niece. Her husband is the brother-in-law of his grand-nephews and grand-nieces.

A sixty-year-old American started his family by becoming the grandfather of his six children, and his first wife's stepfather. He divorced his wife and married his mother-in-law. The widower who married in succession seven sisters must have given up trying to puzzle out his various relationships. This man started by marrying the oldest of the sisters, and subsequently right down the line. Not long ago he lost the seventh and last sister to the altar.

A German village is still hopelessly puzzled over the relationship resulting from the double marriage of a father and son. The father, a widower of sixty-eight, married the village belle. She thus became stepmother to her husband's forty-year-old son. The son, in his turn, met the girl's mother and married her. Consequently his father is now his son-in-law and he himself is his own grandfather.

In the meantime, the village belle

WHY WE BUY.

A friend of ours is considering joining a golf club. Not just because he enjoys golf and longs to play. No indeed, it is a good deal of an expense and he wouldn't think of joining just for that. But he has been rather stale in his work at the office lately and he thinks he really ought to take up golf and see if it won't do him good.

Another man whom I know has just bought a car. He will use it mostly for pleasure; but he wouldn't have thought of getting it if it weren't that he thinks he can also work it into his business in such a way as to get more work done in less time.

Not Because They Wanted A New House.

The people who lived in the pleasant but rather shabby and inconvenient middle-aged house at the end of the street have just built themselves a new and charming little modern house. The reason they took this step, as the head of the house elaborately explained to me, was that they felt that they would be able to run the more compact house more cheaply. He didn't say in just that way, but he alluded vaguely to the fact that his wife would probably not need so much help in house cleaning and that they ought to save on coal.

What clever camouflages of our own motives we all are!

Especially when it comes to something we want to buy and don't feel quite right in our minds about. There are very few luxuries that we can't justify to ourselves as necessities—say, economics—even.

"We Owe It To Ourselves." A new outfit of clothes helps one to feel more spruce, and hence able to accomplish more.

Travel freshens us up and makes us more fit.

If we have a car we won't feel we need to go away next summer and we will save the rent of the cottage. (An autumn argument. By spring it may have lost its force.)

If we make those improvements in the house, the contractor says we shall double its value if we want to sell. (Of course the contractor has no bias in what he tells us!)

You really have to dress well and entertain if you want to get business (the professional man's argument) because you have to appear prosperous to be successful. No one wants an unsuccessful doctor or lawyer.

Truth And Fiction.

In many of this type of arguments there is a great deal of truth.

And in many there is a great deal of self-kidding.

No one but yourself can really tell what is true in your case. Of course it does not always matter. You may have a perfect right to the luxury even if it is a pure luxury. But after all, isn't it really better for us not to fool ourselves? Let's have these things if we can afford them. But let's not fool ourselves by some pretence of business or household necessity. Let's not be afraid to be honest with ourselves. It's really safer and better judgment in the long run.

Prince of Metals

The Woodworth Building, New York, which is to-day the world's tallest skyscraper, approximately a million pounds of copper was used for roofings, lifts, pipes, and interior decorations.

Probably few people realize the numerous uses to which copper can be put. But one thing is certain, if the supply failed we should soon be without electric lights and bells, telephones, electric trains and tramcars—nothing of copper coinage!

At first glance the amount of copper used in the building trade, in comparison with the quantities of iron and steel, would seem to be negligible, but when one takes into consideration the fact that every motor-car has anything from 10lb. to 200lb. of the metal in its composition, and that there are about 3,000,000 in every railway engine, one can appreciate the extent to which the demand for it is increasing.

Our Exhibit at Wembley

LONDON, May 26.—The building is very attractive from the outside. It is surrounded by a nice lawn with pretty beds of flowers. On each side of the path leading to it are trees made by a well known Newfoundland wood-working concern, filled with spruce, pine, and other trees. On one side of the entrance there is a large cage where a fine Newfoundland dog is exhibited.

Inside, the walls are adorned with mural paintings which give a good idea of what they are intended to represent. There is one large one done from Holloway's photo of salmon jumping the falls which is particularly good, another shows the City of St. John's. There are several paintings arranged to show typical Newfoundland scenes in perspective. They are rather like plaster models with the back ground painted. There is an excellent one of Herring Neck, entitled "A Newfoundland Fishing Village." There is another of Humbermouth which gives a far better idea of things than can be got on the spot as they show it as it will be when finished. In the foreground you see the factory complete, also the railway lines and the wharves with a steamer lying alongside. You look upstream and see the dam, etc., and farther up still part of Deer Lake.

The cases of partridge, trout, etc., look very well. There were also cases containing models of the "Digby," and a large steamer belonging to the A.N.D. Company. The two sealing steamers seemed to be attracting a good deal of attention as did also the Grand Falls paper mill model. They also exhibited rolls of paper used for making "The Daily Mail."

Clouston's fish was nicely displayed in a case by itself, and The Standard Mfg. Co., and The Imperial Tobacco Company, shared another. Munn's Cod Liver Oil plant looked most imposing and his exhibit of oil in tall glass-stoppered bottles looked fine.

There was a case of leather goods, which looked very attractive, it included six nice looking pair of ladies' dancing shoes as you would want to see. There were also leather bags, pocketbooks, etc.

The Colonial Cordage Company's exhibit of ropes and twines looked very attractive.

One of the first things that meets the eye on entering the building is the display of jams. I had no idea what fine jams are made in Newfoundland and of the varieties.

Lady Allard's knitted things were attractively arranged in a glass case by Miss Furlong and Mrs. Davies. The things looked much finer and in better taste than a somewhat similar exhibition of cottage industries by St. John, N.B., in the Canadian Building, though as might be expected there were a great many more things in the latter.

I forgot to mention the large model of a caribou on the left outside the building. He is on a small mound made by sloping the turf and with the dog on the other side gives a nice little local touch.

Though our building is a little in the background it is in good position because the British Government Building is next to it. This is most fortunate as people going there can hardly miss us.

Our minerals are well set out. Each has a label saying what it was and where it came from, and there were sufficient of the samples to make a striking display. Copper ore and samples from the Silver Cliff Mine attract considerable attention.

I think we have a most creditable little show and if it does not cost more than $50,000 I think we shall have had remarkably good value for our money.

I was glad to see a fair sprinkling of the kind of people who might go fishing. I also met a naval man named Dickson, who was in Newfoundland about sixteen years ago, in the days of Captain Hibbert of the "Buzard."

They have evidently made great improvements in the last couple of weeks and there was no sign of any mud. In fact it was quite dusty. It is surprising what a lot of ground one covers in wandering about, looking at things. I invested 21s. in a pedometer the other day and it registers 10 1-3 miles for my day at the Exhibition. I don't suppose one averages 30 inches to the space which the time is set for, but after making all allowances it shows what a distance one covers on an expedition like this.

Insulin Value Shown.

Evidence that the use of insulin, the new discovery for curing diabetes, is serving to halt the mortality rate from the disease, are contained in statistics just made public by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

With the record of its 15,000,000 industrial policy holders for the first quarter of 1924 at hand, the statistical bulletin of the company announces that "mortality from diabetes declined 23 per cent as compared with the first quarter of last year among white policy holders, and 17 per cent among the colored. Each additional month helps to confirm the impression that the growing use of insulin is an important factor in bringing this about."

The death rate from diabetes for March, 1924, was 16.5 per 100,000 as compared with 22.3 for March, 1923, according to the company's figures.

Buying Enamel Ware

The first consideration when buying enamel-ware is the general standard of quality, and an article guaranteed to be British made is almost sure to be good.

The British production may be a little dearer than the imported article but it is well worth the difference in price as the deterioration of the cheaper grade of articles is very rapid as well as being dangerous to the users.

Good enamel ware has a hard, even and lustrous surface. A heavy coat of enamel is far better than thin coat as the latter is liable to splinter rather easily and also, in the case of a cooking vessel, to allow the food to burn. Appearance is a good guide to the thickness of the enamel, as also is the weight of the article.

Articles with blisters, cracks, chips and black-spotted surface should be avoided. In some enamel ware a kind of "web" will be noticed. Reject such articles as this web consists of a series of minute cracks.

Reject, also, cooking utensils which contain lead in the enamel, as this lead is liable to dissolve to a slight extent when food containing acids is being cooked. As it is not easy to distinguish the presence of lead in enamel a definite guarantee should be obtained from the dealer.

The grey enamel, frequently seen on the inside of vessels, has good lasting qualities, and is free from lead; therefore a cooking utensil so lined is a safe purchase.

Be suspicious of any irregularities in the surface, such as "blobs" of enamel. Such irregularities frequently cover a defect in the metal below.

Seamless enamel ware is less likely to splinter than that made in sections. It is well to remember, while the rim, edges and riveting of the handle should be closely watched for bad workmanship.

However good the enamel may be, it should be remembered that it will not stand violent changes of temperature. Even the best quality article will suffer if it is plunged into cold water immediately after having been heated.

The world may be going to the dogs as some old-timers say, but these same ones don't seem to be in any hurry to get out of it.

Park of Heroes

LONDON MEMORIAL FOR DEEDS OF SELF-SACRIFICE.

Beside the General Post Office, in the very heart of London's teeming city there is a little haven of rest and inspiration, a little garden of peace.

This garden was once the churchyard of St. Botolph's Church, Aldgate, but now it has become a place where tired city workers may rest awhile. By some it is called Postmen's Park, for many men from St. Martin's le Grand rest in it, but by others it is given a better name. They call it Heroes' Park, for it contains one of the finest of all London's memorials to her heroic men.

As the visitor turns into the garden he is met with a new sense of peace, for here there are green trees and beds bright with flowers, a sundial and a fountain where London sparrows chirp and flutter and in the midst there is an arcade, founded by the famous artist, George Frederic Watts, which commemorates deeds of heroic self-sacrifice, especially among those of a humble station in life.

Record of Heroic Deeds.

Although the wording of the tablets that decorate the heroes' arcade is very simple, the deeds they record are wonderful and not to be surpassed by the bravest acts of military heroism.

Could there, for example, be any nobler devotion to duty than that is recorded in these two tablets? They read: "Joseph Andrew Ford, aged 30, Metropolitan Fire Brigade, saved six persons from fire in Gray's Inn Road, but in his last heroic act he was scorched to death, October 7th, 1871." and: "Alfred Smith, Police Constable, who was killed in an air raid while saving the lives of women and children, January 13th, 1917."

Mother-Love.

The love of a mother for her home and children and her willingness to sacrifice her own life in the attempt to save them has seldom been more nobly displayed in the heroism of Elizabeth Coghlan. The tablet to her memory reads:

"Elizabeth Coghlan, aged 26, of Church Path, Stoke Newington, died to save her family and home by carrying blazing paraffin into the garden, January 1st, 1902."

Perhaps the most wonderful of all are the records of the heroism of little children.

There is "Harry Staley, of Kilburn, aged 10, drowned in attempting to save his brother after he himself had just been rescued."

Youngest of all is a boy, only eight years of age, who saved the life of his sister. His memorial says: "Harry James Bristow, aged 8, at Walthamstow on December 30th, 1890, saved his little sister's life by tearing off her flaming clothes, but caught fire himself and died of burns and shock."

Their Lives for Others.

The story in every case is the same. Ordinary common men, women and children, leading simple, commonplace lives, but ready, when the sudden trumpet call of duty and humanity came, to answer it without thought and to sacrifice their very lives in the service of others. Their tale is summed up in the splendid nobility of the dying of little Solomon Galaman, a boy of eleven, who is commemorated for saving the life of his little brother by pushing him away from a cart under which he, himself, was crushed.

Just before he died the heroic lad said to his mother: "Mother, I saved him but could not save myself."

Shoes from Sharks

The shark was formerly regarded as an undestorable and forbidding inhabitant of the ocean—horrible when alive and useless when dead. Nowadays it is used for a variety of purposes.

A considerable amount of "cod-liver oil" is really shark-liver oil, and is just as good, for it possesses medicinal properties of the same character. Shark-fin soup is appreciated by the Chinese. The fins are boiled and treated until they take on the appearance of fan-like flakes and fragments of pure gelatine.

The eyes of the shark, after they have been boiled, lose their outer covering, and the residue becomes quite hard and has a sort of shifting light in its texture. These are mounted on tie-pins or other forms of jewellery and present an unusual appearance.

A valuable part of the man-eater is the skin. The thin outer skin is removed by a secret process, and when dried it has a remarkable hardness, and is used by cabinet-makers for giving polish to hard woods, ivory, and so on.

The inner skin is tanned so carefully that it eventually yields a waterproof, non-cracking leather. Different parts of the skin give different shades of colour, and the tanning process succeeds in preserving these dark greens and browns so that shoes, travelling bags, purses, belts and similar articles made of the skin have quite a handsome appearance.

Hampshire "Fags"

The newspapers have recently been demanding a reduction in the price of tobacco, seeing that the profits of a certain tobacco corporation run to upwards of $5,000,000.

The reason why tobacco is so valuable and therefore a revenue-producing commodity, is that this country is supposed to be incapable of producing its own crop of the tobacco leaf. Yet that is scarcely a statement of fact, for last summer Mr. J. Brandon, of Redfield, near Church's Crookham, Hampshire, grew twenty-three acres of tobacco, and got about 300lb. of dried leaf to the acre, or 18,000lb. of tobacco from his total acreage.

The best of the "bright" tobacco, the young leaves cured to artificial heat, is said to compare favourably with the Rhodesian product of the same kind.

Seeing that France has to-day 31,000 acres under tobacco, the question of tobacco culture seems one for consideration in this country, especially now that the Hampshire cigarette is a reality and not a dream.

That Important Funny Bone

WIVES WITH A SENSE OF HUMOUR.

A man told me (writes Dorothy Dix) that he did not marry until he was forty-five years old because he was determined not to marry any woman who did not have a sense of humour, and it took him that time to find one.

A wise man! It is a million times more important for a woman to have a well-developed funny-bone than it is for her to have a Grecian temple, get when men decide to marry they pick out a girl for a wife because she has soulful blue eyes, without observing whether they look on the funny side of life or take a dark, pessimistic view of it. Which is one reason why domestic life is so merry just to the average husband.

It is absolutely essential for a woman to have a sense of humour if she is to be an agreeable partner, because a woman's existence is made up of little, nagging things at which she must either laugh or cry. If she cannot laugh them off, they get on her nerves, and she goes to pieces.

Women Who Wreck Marriages.

Neurotic, haggard women, who cannot see a joke, all systems and sanatoria and divorce courts. The women who wear the smile that won't come off set to be fair, fat, and forty, and you couldn't get their husbands away from them.

It is the lack of a sense of humour that causes women to make tragedies instead of comedies out of trifles. Take the servant trouble, for instance. Women worry themselves over the mistakes of an inexperienced maid, and it never occurs to them that the blunders are screamingly funny incidents that they pay money to see imitated in theatres.

Of course no one wants the soap to be seasoned with sugar instead of salt, but the mistress who can get a laugh instead of a headache out of the mistakes of her maid saves her own face and that of the girl, whom she later trains into being a good servant, about half.

Whether a woman makes a success or failure of matrimony depends altogether on whether she has a sense of humour or not. If she can see her husband as one of the most mirth-provoking, side-splitting, uproarious human jokes that Nature ever perpetrated she will be happy. But if she sees him as an Awful Problem, or a subject for reformation, neither one of them will ever know a happy hour.

The women who wreck marriages are the ones who take their husbands seriously, and who get tragic every time their husbands look at another woman, or fail to come home at the appointed hour, and who weep when their husbands forget an anniversary or fail in some little attention they consider their due.

The women who keep their husbands amused from the altar to the grave are the husbands who laugh over their little faults and peculiarities. They make a joke of their husband's weakness for a pretty face; they have a dozen funny stories to tell about how they helped their husbands out of scrapes, and, instead of feeling ill-used when their husbands forget their birthdays they go out and buy themselves a particularly nice present, which he pays for without a murmur because he knows that a wife with a sense of humour is worth anything she costs him.

A sense of humour is just the sense of proportion that enables us to see things in their true relation to life; it is the thing that keeps us from making mountains out of molehills, and that gives us the courage to smile instead of cry.

A Little Surprise.

A young man managed to get into conversation with a pretty girl during a railway journey. He was very pleased with himself, and when the train arrived at his destination he said to the girl: "The afraid you wouldn't have been so nice to me if you had known I was a married man."

"Oh, as to that," answered the girl, "you might be a little surprised to know that I have just come out of prison after serving a sentence for bigamy."

Can Imagination Kill

ASTONISHING INCIDENTS WHICH HAVE PROVED THAT IT CAN.

That imagination can cure, or at least alleviate, certain ailments, probably no medical man would deny. It can even simulate pains and diseases, but it is certainly startling to learn that it has the power actually to destroy life.

That this is so is proved by a large number of well-authenticated cases, the most astounding of which is perhaps the following:

A porter of a Siberian railway was accidentally locked in a refrigerator van attached to a train. On the arrival of the train at its destination the van was opened and revealed the man's body stiff and cold in death lying on the floor, on which he had written in chalk a pathetic record of his sufferings from the intense cold, to the last message, feebly scrawled with his falling hand: "I am dying. Good-bye!"

A Mock Execution.

The amazement of the discoverers of this tragedy may be imagined when they observed that the temperature of the man was normal—about 50 degrees—a circumstance which was explained by the fact that the refrigerating apparatus was out of order. The intense cold so graphically described had existed only in the dead man's fancy. He had been killed by his own imagination!

Still more striking evidence of the power of imagination is furnished by the recent report of a tragedy in Paris.

An art-student living in the Latin Quarter had committed some offence which so roused the anger of his fellow-students that they decided to punish him. He was haled before a mock court, solemnly tried, and condemned to execution. He was led from the judgment chamber to a neighbouring room, dimly lighted and with black-draped walls, where a masked headman, axe in hand, awaited him by the side of a block.

The condemned man, now reduced to a state of abject terror, was blindfolded and made to place his head on the block. The executioner then took a wet towel, and raising it brought it down sharply on the man's neck.

The Fatal Test

For a few moments there was a profound silence, broken at last by shouts and laughter. "And now for the funeral!" shouted one of the hilarious student. The victim of this cruel joke was raised. His body hung limp and heavy in the executioner's arms. He was dead!

A few years ago an eminent French doctor was permitted to test the effect of imagination on a convict under sentence of death. The man was blindfolded, strapped on a table, and told that an artery would be opened and that he would be allowed to bleed to death. Close to his head was placed a bowl of water, which, when released, flowed through a tube and dripped into a basin on the floor. The preparations made, the doctor slightly scratched the convict's neck with a needle. The tap, as they turned on, and the water began to drip, drip at short and regular intervals.

Five minutes passed, and then the tap was turned off. The man was lifted from the table. He was dead. The dripping water had drained his life away as effectually as if each drop had been his heart's blood.

No Trace of Poison.

A somewhat similar experiment was tried not long ago on two other convicts, also under sentence of death. In one of the prison cells a woman had died from a very virulent attack of Asiatic cholera. On the following day one of the doomed men was placed in the infected cell without any knowledge of his danger; his fellow-convict was taken to another, perfectly sanitary, cell, which he was told was the one in which the cholera victim had died.

So perished was this man that before he had been many hours in the cell he developed symptoms of cholera, from which he died within twenty-four hours. His companion, however, who had actually run the risk, but had been ignorant of it, was none the worse for his adventure.

In another case reported from America, a young woman, deserted by her lover on the eve of her marriage, decided to commit suicide. She bought sufficient carbolic acid to kill half-a-dozen people, drank it, and died within a few hours, leaving behind a confession of her act.

Despaired of Life at 50 Strong and Well at 70

Mr. Jacob H. Mackesy, 336 Midland Ave., Midland, Ont. writes:—

"I have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for over 20 years and I feel that I owe my life to them. I suffered severely from rheumatism and heart failure. One doctor just gave me one year to live, and even told me I might be found dead at any time. A neighbor advised Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and I have been using them as needed ever since. I am now 70 years of age, weigh 217 pounds and can work as well as any young man."

One pill a dose, 2 to a box, all dealers or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

GERALD S. DOYLE, Distributor.

When, however, a post-mortem examination was made, no trace whatever was found, either of a corrosive acid or of any poison. She had consumed a harmless fluid, believing it to have been carbolic acid.

The Unseen Hand.

And not only can imagination kill; it can cause actual bodily injury. Among many well-authenticated cases, this was proved by the experience of a flight-commander, of which Mr. Arthur Machen, the author, tells the following amazing story:—

One day, when a young airman was ordered to go up by his commander, he begged him to let him off. "I feel nervous," he pleaded; "and I'm sure if I go up I shall crash. Mayn't I put it off till the morning?" The commander was adamant. "Don't be an ass!" he said; "of course you must go up."

"All right," said the boy, "I'll go up, but I shall be killed; and I'll haunt you!" The boy went up; and, as he feared, crashed and was killed. Then, says Mr. Machen, "the flight-commander went off his head, and was delirious for days. He kept crying out that the dead airman was strangling him; that his hands were gripping his throat. They could not pacify him, and at last he was taken to the hospital. And when he got to the hospital there were black finger-marks about his throat!"

Fighting Forgers

The extreme difficulty of detecting a forged cheque, and the responsibility involved in the declaration of the forger, is not apparent to most people.

It is a curious fact that those depositors who adopt peculiar signatures, accompanied by quaint flourishes, in the hope of minimizing the risk of forgery, defeat their own ends because of the comparative ease with which a skilled forger can imitate such originals.

The plain, straightforward signature, devoid of unnecessary flourishes or additions, is the hardest to forge; any slight deviation from the usual script springs to the eye at once.

Where flourishes and ornaments exist, the forger concentrates on making an exact copy of these, knowing that the cashier looks to them for identification purposes, because every signature is bound to vary slightly from its fellows.

Forgers, like most law-breakers, usually betray themselves by a careless slip after expending the whole of their energies upon the actual name.

Only a few days ago a forged cheque was detected, not on account of the signature, but because the word "forty" in the body of the cheque was spelt correctly, while the customer whose signature the cheque purported to bear invariably wrote "fourty."

Canadians Wild Flowers

BRANCHING WOOD VIOLET.

The branching wood violet bears the botanical name of Viola Canadensis. It is a first cousin of the ordinary violet and holds a high place in the affections of all lovers of wild flowers. Some of the white violets have a mild perfume, a faint echo of their richly scented cousins. This Canadian violet has blue veined white petals flushed with pink outside, and is beautiful in its daintiness. It grows up straight and tall, and is found blooming in the sheltered places early in May and continues blooming throughout the summer. The side petals are bearded, which provides a foothold for the bees, which fertilize the flower, while hunting for the nectar contained in the dainty heart of the whole violet. It looks almost as though the violet had built its beautiful seat as a special invitation to the bee.

Breeding Precious Stones

Precious stones have always been the centre of superstition. One of the most curious of these is, perhaps the belief that it is possible to "breed" certain gems.

This strange belief was formerly widely held. One of the earliest inquiries made by the Royal Society of England was into this very subject. Learning that diamonds were found in gravel, and that if the gravel were left undisturbed a second crop would materialize, the society began to dream dreams. So they asked one of the ship's captains afflicted to them, to investigate the matter. Unfortunately there is no record as to the result of this gentleman's inquiries, but one fears that the society found it rather disappointing.

From the East comes a similar tradition regarding pearls. For long ages it has been believed in the Orient that it is possible to "breed" pearls by keeping them in rice. There is no evidence to support this belief, but to this day the pearl fishers of Borneo place every ninth pearl they find in a bottle of rice.

Rather more scientific were the old Buddhist priests, who anticipated the modern methods of obtaining cultured pearls by some centuries. They used to introduce tiny images of Buddha into oysters, which they had caught, and then put them back into the water. When later, the oysters were fished up, these images would be covered with pearls. The broken pearls, showing the images inside, were claimed as proof of the universal power of their deity.

One pretty story, which has come down to us from remote ages, explains the origin of pearls by saying that they are dew-drops that have fallen at night into oysters floating with their shells open. The lustre of the pearl, says this legend, depends on the moon. If the night is clear and moonlit, the pearls are bright; if, on the other hand, it is cloudy, and the moon is hidden, the pearls are dull.

Swedes Start to Enforce Better Business Methods

Stockholm, May 7 (A.P.)—Believing that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, representatives of a number of industrial organizations in Sweden have formed a central institute for the prevention of graft. The function of the organization is to keep an eye on any persons in business who are exposed to the temptation of bribery, and to nip in the bud any attempt at corrupt practices. The membership includes the association of hotels and restaurants, and associations of brewers, dealers in lumber, hardware, automobiles, books, paints, the corporation of iron master, importers of coal, etc.

While there have been no cases of corruption on the part of high public officials, there have been a few cases of petty graft recently where unwarranted personal commissions have been collected by agents for deals carried through. The new institute has broadcast demands for confidential reports of suspicious circumstances. These will be investigated immediately, and where guilt is found, the offenders will be brought to justice.
