CHAPTER XI.

Ah, if she had only had the means, how she would have left no stone unturned to reach the truth! But she was powerless. An appeal to her father met a grave and firm refusal; he believed Frank guilty, and sternly bade his daughter dismiss all thought of him from her mind. A similar entreaty to Lawyer Greville had resulted in a similar reply, and Sidney felt powerless and lonely and desolate. But Sidney's extremity was Stephen Daunt's opportunity. The deep love he had felt for her for so long was only deepened and intensified by her sorrow and depression, and by the unhappiness of her home. And one fair spring day, when the lilac and hibernum in the old-fashioned garden were in bloom, he asked her very gently, very tenderly to be his wife. He said no word of his long hopeless love; he thought she had no love to give him in return; but he could offer her a great deal of that which makes life happy; and, though at first the girl shrank back, trembling and pale as death, finally she yielded, putting both her hands in his with quivering lips and dim eyes.

And it was the news of this engagement which had brought Christine Greville to the Gray House full of anger and pain, half demented (as it were, by the long suffering she had endured, which had reached its climax now in the desertion of the only friend left to her—the friend who had shared her grief and misery, who had hoped and feared and fought blindly with her against those who thought Frank guilty, and who had believed in his innocence through all.

The awful trouble which had fallen on Christine Greville had changed her from a gentle yielding girl to a resentful, despairing sorrowful woman. She had been passionately attached to her brother, and her only hope of ever proving his innocence lay in Sidney. She herself was powerless, for her father's mandate had been spoken with a decision and a firmness against which she dared not appeal. On returning home after the coroner's inquest, he had called his household together, forbidding them ever to mention his son's name under his roof, and repeating in the most solemn manner the oath he had sworn after the inquest, to do all in his power to bring the criminal to justice. And Christine was selfish in her sorrow; she had no thought for Sidney; all her sympathy was with her brother; his suffering had obliterated all other from her mind. Night and day she pictured him hunted, hiding, penniless, starving, until her brain reeled and her heart ached to anguish. She did not remember that Sidney also had been haunted by his protection, and that it would be well, since all their sorrow was unavailing, that she should forget, if possible.

"Sidney," she said, gently, coming to her side and kneeling down with her eager, pleading, tearful face raised to hers, "have you forgotten all the happy days we had together—you and I and Frank? Have you forgotten when we were children, how he loved you, how you were always his first thought, how he always tried to please you, how he once saved your life? Have you forgotten that he always, even as a child, called you his little wife? Have you forgotten that you promised to be his wife? Will you break your word now?"

"I have forgotten nothing," Sidney answered, with a passionate gesture of pain. "How can I forget? Would I heaven I could! But although I shall always remember, what can I do? Am I not powerless? How can I help him?"

"Ah," Christine cried out, suddenly, "you never loved him—you never loved him! It was that which made him flirt with Sibil Rutledge; it was that which—"

"Hush, for pity's sake!" Sidney said, faintly, shrinking back, trembling in every limb as the hasty intemperate words fell upon her ears. "Don't say that, Christine; it is not true—it is not true!"

"It is true—you never loved him!" repeated Christine, wildly. "You will not help him!"

Sidney turned at the words, like a wounded deer at bay.

"If I did not love him, I am ready to help him," she said passionately; "and while I am powerless as I am, my marriage with Stephen Daunt will give me the means I need to help Frank! Can't you—won't you understand?"

She paused abruptly, struck by a sudden change on the face of her companion, and turned to see that Stephen Daunt had entered the room, and was standing near the door, his face so pale as the spring sunshine fell upon it that Sidney knew, and felt a great pang at her heart at the knowledge, that he had overheard the words she had spoken and would believe that they had been meant. In the momentary silence which followed, it seemed to Sidney that her heart died within her breast.

CHAPTER XII.

"I beg your pardon," Stephen Daunt said, gravely, as he entered the room where Miss Arnold and Christine Greville were conversing; "I am afraid I interrupted you. But Bessie told me you were alone, Sidney. How do you do, Miss Greville?" he added. "You are better?"

"Yes, I am better," Christine answered, ungraciously, as Sidney turned to the fire again, trying hard to regain her calmness but shivering and trembling in her excessive agitation.

"Your father is well, I hope? What charming weather, is it not?" Stephen continued, speaking with his usual easy grace, anxious to set Sidney at her ease, although his own color had not returned, and his voice was just a trifle unsteady. "Dolly wants you to come over and spend the day with her, Sidney," he added, his tone softening perceptibly as he spoke to his fiancée, who stood, a slender, drooping figure in her soft, gray dress, not daring to lift her eyes to his. "Her cold is very bad to-day, and Dr. Elliot has forbidden her to show the tip of her nose out of doors. Can you come, dear? Have you any other engagements?"

"No," she answered, faintly. "And you will come? That is right. That little sister of mine is never happy when you are out of her sight. I think. Are you going, Miss Greville? I hope I am not driving you away?"

"Oh, no!" Christine said, huskily. "I have been here some time, and we have had a long talk, and I must go. Good-bye, Sidney."

"Good-bye," Sidney answered, putting out her hand, but pretending not to see the cheek Christine offered for her kiss; and Stephen noticed how heavily her hand fell to her side when the other girl released it.

"Do not ring; I will see Miss Greville to the door," said Stephen, hastily, interrupting Sidney's movement toward the bell; and, as the door closed after them, the young girl threw up her hands with a passionate gesture of despair.

What would he think of her? she thought, bitterly. How he would despise and condemn her! Of course all would be over between them now, and she must live out her lonely life, alone, unloved, by his protection, unsheltered by his care.

In that bitter moment Sidney realized how unspokeably precious Stephen's affection had been to her, realized what happiness—subdued certainly, but none the less intense—had crept into her dreary life at the thought of the future passed by his side. Even if he did not love her, he cared for her a little, she had thought yearningly; and she would be so good a wife, so gentle, so patient, so devoted, that she would win his love in time and then they would be so happy. But now all that was over; it was not likely that he would overlook the words he had overheard, words which had been spoken in the passion and pain of the moment, with a deep trust in Stephen's nobility, which would not refuse her his help in this matter that was so near her heart. Now—what a horrible thought!—he would think that she had meant to marry him only to use his wealth to clear her former lover. She felt bowed down to the earth with shame. How should she meet him again? Whither could she go to escape the reproach in the dark eyes she loved so well? How should she bear the scorn she deserved? Ah, there was the sound of his step in the hall, his hand upon the door! Flight was impossible now; as she had sworn she must reap.

Her heart was throbbing to suffocation as Stephen Daunt entered the room and came up to the rug upon which she was standing, and she dared not raise her eyes. Had she done so, she might have fathomed the depth of his great love for her, and all the misery which followed might have been averted.

For a few moments they stood opposite to each other in silence, the young man looking down compassionately at the shrinking drooping figure, so graceful even in its humiliation, the lovely little face so beautiful in its pallor and shame, the little hands clasped tightly before her in her pain as she stood before him like a culprit before her judge. At length, when the silence had grown so oppressive that Sidney felt she could bear the uncertainty no longer, she unclasped the little hands, removed from her fourth finger the great blazing diamond hoop which Stephen had placed there, and held it out to him with little trembling fingers which shook like the leaves of the aspen tree.

Stephen put out his strong hand and took into his warm clasp not the ring only, but the little trembling fingers which held it.

"What is that for, Sidney?" he said, gently, smiling a little and speaking in a tone that he might have adopted to a child whom he was half rallying, half chiding for some foolish action. "Does it not fit properly? I got it loose on purpose, you know, dear, because I hoped to see these tiny fingers a little plumper by and by."

Public Resentment Against Noise
It is impossible to deny that the average motor cycle is more unpopular with the general public on account of the noise it makes than on any other score. This may be looking at things from a pessimistic angle, but it is useless for manufacturers and motor cyclists to shut their eyes to the fact that mechanical two-wheelers are under a cloud, and that the noise they make is always a concrete ground for public objection.

One has only to choose an arterial road any fine week-end, pick a vantage point, and wait, to realize and appreciate—however enthusiastic a motor cyclist one may be—the excuse a non-motor cyclist has for looking with distavour on the whole movement. The most objectionable machines from the noise point of view are the low-capacity, high-efficiency four-strokes, low geared and depending upon high revolutions for their power. Two-strokes generally, big singles, and the great majority of twin-cylinder machines are inoffensive unless they have been "doctored" under the misapprehension that speed varies in direct proportion to the volume of noise emitted from the exhaust pipe.

It is difficult for keen young riders to curb a natural desire to create an impression by "opening out" in crowded places, but every rider must be made to realize that the very existence of the motor cycle movement is threatened by the scores of noise. Manufacturers would do well to make a genuine move to silence their 1926 products to such an extent that some form of guarantee against police action can be given their customers, thus shifting the responsibility for noisy machines on to owners who tamper with the silencing arrangements of their machines after purchase. No sympathy could then be extended to the victims of police court proceedings on the score of noise. Manufacturers who make the silence of their machines a talking point at Olympia will do a real service to the movement.—Motor Cycle.

Hethpool Replaces Sable I.

ON BOSTON ROUTE.
The steamer Hethpool, purchased in England by Ferguson and Company, Limited, for their Halifax-St. John's-Boston service to replace the steamer Sable I, which is to open a new service to be inaugurated by the company on September 24, between Halifax, Charlottetown, North Sydney, and the west coast of Newfoundland, arrived in port last night after a record run of ten days from Newcastle-on-Tyne.

The steamer was purchased from the Tyne-Tess Shipping Company, of Newcastle, England, and has been thoroughly reconditioned, and has been newly furnished throughout. The steamer has good accommodations for 100 first and 70 second-class passengers, and has a speed of fourteen knots. Her length is 269 feet over all, and she has a cargo capacity of 76,000 cubic feet. The Hethpool is a good looking craft, and her interior finishings are especially pleasing. The steamer will be open for public inspection on Thursday.

The Hethpool was brought to Halifax by Captain Hackland, and Captain Murley, now of the Sable I, will have charge of her on the Boston service. She will leave Halifax on Saturday of this week for Boston. On September 24 the Sable I will open the new service from Halifax to Charlottetown, North Sydney and west coast of Newfoundland, while the steamer Skipper will continue on the service between Halifax, North Sydney, St. Pierre and the south coast of Newfoundland, her next sailing from Halifax being on September 30. The sailing of the three steamers will be every fourteen days from Halifax.—Morning Chronicle, Sept. 16.

A Sidelight on History
An interesting piece of secret history, which explains how the German naval signal codes came into the hands of the British Admiralty, has just been revealed.

When the German cruiser Magdeburg struck a mine near the island of Odensholm, off the Estonian coast, the crew abandoned the ship and surrendered. But it was noticed by some Russians that one of the German officers jumped overboard.

This was noted by the Russians' curiosity, the spot was marked, and a diver was sent down. He recovered the body of the officer, and it was then found that the latter had secured to his person a number of secret German naval codes.

A copy of these codes was supplied to the British Admiralty, but the Germans, unaware that they had fallen into hostile hands, continued to use them. It is stated that the possession of these German codes was of considerable value to the British Fleet during the battle of Jutland.

Sleeping Pacific Volcanoes May Wake Again

Tacoma, Wash., Sept. 1.—(Associated Press)—Ice-crowned volcanic cones along the Pacific Coast generally are presumed to be dead. Scientists, however, agree that they are not merely burned-out shells, but it is entirely possible that one or more of them might erupt at any time.

Mount Ranier and Mount Baker in Washington, Mount Hood in Oregon and Mount Shasta and Lassen-Peak in California are individuals in a great series of volcanoes that extends in a circle for 10,000 miles or more around the North Pacific ocean in both North America and Asia. There was a time, in the opinion of the scientists, when these peaks were in violent eruption at the same time, so that a chain of fire bounds the Pacific Coast, for the five peaks are so close together that any one in eruption could be observed from its nearest neighbors.

Since 1914 Lassen has been in frequent eruption and it is regarded as scientifically established that not one of the volcanoes can be called dead. All except Lassen have been quiet for several thousand years, in the opinion of expert reckoning.

During the past century there have been several minor eruptions from Mount Ranier, the mightiest of the five volcanoes. It has been hundreds of years since the great peak blew off a half mile of its top and scattered volcanic ash over large areas of water now in Washington.

Frequent Tremors.
Almost every year faint earthquakes are recorded on Ranier, and steam still issues from the crater, which is half a mile across. This steam is so intense that great caverns have been melted in the snow that fills the crater.

These caves, sheltered from the winds and warmed by the escaping steam, have often proved of advantage to persons scaling the peak. Stephens and Van Thump, the first white men to conquer Mount Ranier, more than half a century ago, undoubtedly owed their lives to these steam caves. It would have been impossible for them to have retraced their steps in the darkness, and they could not have lived through a night on the summit without blankets or other protection.

"So This is London" To-Night

"So This is London" proved to be an enormous success in the Hudson Theatre for more than a year, and in the Prince of Wales Theatre in London for over a year because it appeals to everyone's sense of humor. The three scenes of the play are all laid in London at the Ritz, Sir Percy Beauchamp's living room and Lady Buckworth's drawing room. British stolidity and conversation are contrasted with American vivacity, enterprise and slang. At the end there is a union of the second generation of the two leading characters, and the combinations of their parents for the future of the wholesale shoe business. "So This is London" is rich and abundant in whimsical humor and charm that makes genuine and hearty contentment. It is a comedy designed to make the two great English-speaking countries understand each other better for having had a good laugh at each others expense. "So This is London" will be the bill for the first half of the week, Thursday, Friday and Saturday "Wild Oats Lane," a dramatization of "The Gambling Chaplain," Matinees Wednesday and Saturday. Seats now on sale at F. V. Chesman's, Water Street.

if it had not been for the timely discovery of the warm caverns. The steam on top of Mount Ranier is so hot that it will transform a pan of snow to boiling water in ten minutes. Eggs can be cooked if placed in the hot pumice of the crater.

'Judgment of the Storm'

FAMOUS STORY WHICH WAS PUBLISHED IN THIRTY MAGAZINES AT THE MAJESTIC.

We do not pretend to be able to describe "Judgment of the Storm," and there is no other photoplay to which it can be compared. We can only tell you that it is one of the most gripping and thrilling films ever presented in this city and that you should see it while it is at the Majestic Theatre. The best snow storm scenes since "Way Down East" are pictured here and if you think you have viewed bitzards, well, "you ain't seen nothin' yet!" Heart interest has been built into this feature from beginning to end. The action flows smoothly at all times, and there are some scenes that will hold you in a vice-like grip, for instance the situation in which the boy meeting his mother for the first time in three years, believing her to have been abandoned, finds her really to be the owner of a gambling den in which there has just occurred a murder and a suicide.

There are any number of similar big scenes. As for the cast it is a wonderful one. Lloyd Hughes is an ideal selection for the role of John Trevor and gives a fine characterization. Myrtle Steadman is most appealing as John's mother. Lucille Rickson, the little girl of yesterday, is now a real looking lady and will win admirers through her work in this picture. George Hackathorne and Claire MacDowell also contribute effective roles.

THEME.—A gripping drama dealing with mother love and how a son is put to the acid test when he discovers that his mother is a gambler and responsible for the death of his sweet-heart's brother. How he offers himself in place of the man who is killed in his mother's gambling den and proves his real worth when he risks his life. Don't miss it.

HOLD SUCCESSFUL DINNER.

Upwards of sixty covers were laid at Donovan's public hostelry on Saturday night when the Committee who had charge of the Longshoremen's Labour Day Celebration were given a dinner.

The speeches of the proposers and responders to the various toasts were well reasoned and practical, and showed that in future Labour intends to use its strength for the purpose of bringing about better housing conditions in the city, the lowering of taxation on the necessities of life, and the enforcing of the City's right to its share of general and special road grants. Some of the speakers urged that necessities not luxuries were what the people want; better homes were more essential than motor roads. During the night, songs and recitations were rendered by the members. The following is the toast list:

Hunting Tuna Off Nova Scotia Exciting Sport

(By L. W. INGALLS)

The giant mackerel of the Canadian Atlantic sea-board,—known as albacore, tuna, tunny-fish, or horse-mackerel—which weigh anywhere from 300 pounds to half a ton—are fast becoming the lions of the piscatory world and the greatest object of the fisherman's sport.

Off the coasts of Nova Scotia, abundance, the "albacore" are caught by local fishermen in large sets or "traps" of netted twine. These nets are set for the ordinary or little mackerel (12 to 18 inches in length), and the big tuna either follow or chase the small fish into the traps for the purpose of eating them. The albacore in the nets are forced by the fishermen to swim into special splicer nets. The men then kill them by striking them with an axe or other sharp instrument. Even so, it is often not without a terrific struggle that the monster fish are taken. Men in the boats are frequently drenched by the splashing water, and the seas around are dyed red with the tuna's blood. Sometimes, too, the big fish break through the nets and get clean away.

Price Is Low

Until very recent years the demand for tuna has fluctuated, and the price per pound has remained low, so that a fisherman who had made an enormous catch might let most of his netted captives go free and alive rather than have them on his hands as a "dead" loss.

It is to New York and Boston that the albacore are chiefly shipped, and in those cities they are purchased and eaten principally by Italians and other emigrants from countries bordering on the Mediterranean, people who at home had been accustomed to eating the tunny-fish from the Mediterranean Sea.

Nova Scotia fishermen therefore usually endeavor to catch the fish early enough in the week to ensure their being delivered in the American cities for sale on the market on Thursday and Friday (fish-day). Before the pink-fleshed tuna are packed in ice for shipping they are beheaded and the entrails are taken out.

Such has been the history of this hunting, the season for which lasts from about the first week in July to the last day of August; but lately a new factor has arisen in regard to albacore-fishing. The Isaac Waltons of the rod and line feel that their skill in the piscatory art is challenged so long as these finny monsters of the deep remain uncaught in any quantities by the rod and reel.

Five some years ago J. K. L. Ross of Montreal captured with hook and line a tuna off Sydney, Cape Breton, which is said to have taken him six hours to "drown" (that is, to kill in the sea), and in 1924 Zane Grey, the American novelist,—fishing with rod and reel,—caught one tuna weighing 650 pounds and another weighing 758 pounds off Liverpool, Nova Scotia, yet at the present time the sport is but commencing. It is said that only four men are known to have caught the tuna with rod and reel, and three of these men are Zane Grey and his brother and J. K. L. Ross. But from Texas and from New Jersey, with the most up-to-date rods and other equipment, expert sportsmen fishermen have gone to Hubbards, N.S., the headquarters of the St. Margaret's Bay tuna-fishing, to employ their skill and wit against the albacore.

An Expert's View.

One of these men, Mr. George M. Craig, Port Arthur, Texas, who has caught tarpon and shark all around the Gulf of Mexico, and tuna at Catalina Island, California, said to a Star representative:

"It is only on the Nova Scotia coast that we know of that the tuna run so large. They run here from 500 to 1,000 pounds. They have been seen, I'm told, elsewhere in the North Atlantic, and as far as the mouth of the St. Lawrence. If there were some canning factories established in Nova Scotia, and particularly in St. Margaret's Bay, where most of the tuna are caught, a great industry could be created. Canneries, such as they have on the coast of California, would stabilize the market. The fishermen sometimes get only two cents a pound, and occasionally, when the tuna are shipped to Boston, they don't pay enough to buy the express charges."

Mr. Craig stated that the first fish of the season usually brings eighteen cents a pound, but when the market is glutted the price quickly drops. He declared that the Nova Scotia tuna, which has yellow fins, is the same as the blue-finned tuna, and that neither, properly speaking, is an "albacore," as the horse-mackerel is locally called. The tuna or horse-mackerel, he said, is "a species of albacore." He spoke of a record catch he had seen recently at Hubbards, when one net held over 7,000 pounds of tuna, twelve fish averaging 500 pounds each. Not long ago the writer saw twenty-three tuna together on a wharf at Hubbards, N.S., each body passing as big as the carcass of a cow or a horse. The bodies were blue-black above and a sort of silvery white beneath, and scaleless, with a series of hook-shaped bright yellow fins underneath, and above. It is known that, besides eating little mackerel, the tuna feed on squid and salmon.

The cooked flesh of the tuna is said to resemble, in taste and appearance, a very tender beefsteak.

Exhibited in Movies.

The Nova Scotia fishermen go out after the tuna when it is known that the fish are in the trap. They employ not only motor-boats, sailboats, or a boat combining both motor and sails, but small boats, and form a square or a rough circle around the netted tuna. A few years ago, it is said, the Department of Marine and Fisheries, Ottawa, sent two official photographers to Hubbards to take moving-pictures of the fishermen landing the albacore into their boats from the traps by means of a purse-like net called a splicer. These pictures were exhibited in different parts of the United States.

The following description of tuna-catching was given by a prominent citizen of Hubbards: "The fishermen sink the splicer net into the large 'trap' in which the albacore are swimming round. Then they gather up the twine of the trap, and get the albacore into a small space. The albacore then swim into the splicer net, which is pulled together by purse-lines and pulled to the side of the boat. The fish are killed with an axe, pick, or other sharp instrument. The men use a gaff to hold a fish while it is being killed. When dead the fish are hoisted into the boats by means of the gaff.

"The exciting part of all is when the fish are brought to the boat and the fishermen reach out to wound them in some vital spot. They flounder and splash and the water is reddened with blood. The fishermen are sometimes working in a Niagara of water when making a kill."

It takes a strong horse or several men pulling together to hoist one large tuna from the boat to the wharf. An ordinary-sized tuna is said to weigh more than a small shark.

Scotch the Snake

MANY LIVES HAVE BEEN WRECKED BY A SNEERING SMILE OR A SHRUG OF THE SHOULDERS.

There are those who poison the body, and those who poison the mind. The methods of each are subtle, but while body-poisoners rarely escape the meshes of the Law, mind-poisoners go free.

Their poison is administered by innuendo, subtle hint, insinuation, or half-spoken sentence, completed by a suggestive smile or a shrug of the shoulders, and a life is wrecked, ruined, and made unhappy.

It is a question which is the greater criminal—the body-poisoner or the mind-poisoner. The victims of the latter suffer cruelly, and their tortures may last a lifetime.

Now and again, but all too rarely, the poisonous innuendo holds a word too much, and the Law may take cognizance of it by an action for slander.

Make Them Speak.

Generally, however, the poison is far too subtly administered. But there is a way by which mind-poisoners may be brought to book and, in the end, exterminated. The strength of the mind-poisoner is that his or her suggestive hint is cloaked as a sort of confidential warning. They expect thanks—and secrecy. And, as a rule, they get both.

In future see to it that secrecy, which is their protection, is denied them. Artlessly lead them on until the insinuation becomes shaped and definite. Encourage them to use words instead of the suggestive shoulder shrug. Then the mind-poisoner is trapped. He or she has been guilty of defamation—the "uttering of words to a third party likely to hold a person up to contempt, ridicule, or hatred of his fellows." That's slander, and the penalty for it is heavy. You have only to communicate to the slandered person what the mind-poisoner said, and the Law can be set in motion forthwith. Better than that, sometimes, is the forced "public apology" in a score of papers, until the mind-poisoner is exhibited as a self-confessed reptile.

Borax Every-body's Helper

Those people who use "borax," a popular white trade substance, make up a strange medley, which includes doctors, ice-cream merchants, engineers, wholesale butchers, pottery makers, and linen starchers.

The engineer, for instance, likes borax, because, when he places it on metal and heats it with a soldering iron it will remove all tarnish and grease and thus make soldering or brazing two metals together an easy task.

Most doctors value borax for its mildly astringent qualities, which make it particularly suitable for the treatment of throat troubles.

Its Taste Will Please You.

A good prescription for cases of sore throat in children and adults is a gargle made with a solution of half a pint of water and one teaspoonful of borax, added to a teaspoonful of glycerine or honey. Borax has a peculiarly fresh taste, and for this reason it makes an agreeable mouth-wash when added to hot water.

A member of the borax family, boric acid, is also highly regarded by mothers and doctors as a mild antiseptic, suitable for dressing wounds and abrasions.

The ice-cream man, like others with food to keep, uses both borax and its sister boric acid.

Great masses of crystallized borax, fit for use without purification, compose the bed of Borax Lake, in California, where crystals as long as seven inches and weighing as much as a pound have been found. Primitive borax is also widely distributed in Tibet, Canada, and Peru.

YES, MY DEAR.
For honor I'll defy the strong.
I'll dare to fight against a wrong.
With all that I command
In argument I'll talk or write.
'Gainst notions false or queer,
But when my wife says black is white
I answer: "Yes, my dear!"

It matters not that I am sure
That black is black as ink,
Long would the argument endure
Dare I alond to think
And having learned a woman's
Through many a worded year
To all that Nellie's pleased in ear
I answer: "Yes, my dear!"

I go where I am told to go,
I stay where they bid to stay.
Let fools employ the stormier
I choose the easier way;
I've learned protesting much is
A shorter course I steer.
When Nell makes her position
I answer: "Yes, my dear!"

Much danger for a man and wife
In disputation lies
'No' is a word that's fraught
With strife,
While 'yes' is always wise,
With men I'll argue through the
Till every doubt grows clear,
But when my wife says black is white
I answer: "Yes, my dear!"

WHAT IS CHIROPRACTIC?

IT IS NOT MEDICINE
NOT SURGERY
NOT OSTEOPATHY

It is a scientific method of adjusting the cause of Disease without drugs or instruments, based on a correct knowledge of Anatomy, and especially the nervous system. The Chiropractic idea is that the cause of disease is in the person afflicted, and the adjustment in correcting the wrong that is producing it. The function of every organ in the body is controlled by mental impulses from the brain, which it transmits through the nerves. Any impingement of these nerves interfering with the transmission of mental impulses, (life force) which flows from the brain, results in an abnormal function called Disease. This interference is produced by a subluxated or Displaced vertebrae pressing upon the nerves as they pass out from the spinal cord.

The Trained Adjuster is able to locate the point of obstruction or interference and, by means of adjusting the subluxated vertebrae, corrects the cause, and normal conditions, or health, is the result. Investigation costs nothing, and means health and happiness. Chiropractic has gained its success by helping those cases that are regarded as incurable. So always

Bull Jumps Overboard

Quite a sensation was caused at Shea's wharf 7.30 this morning, when one of the bullocks upon being landed from S. S. Centor, broke loose, and jumped over the western end of the wharf into the waters of the harbour. Three workmen named Richard Squires, Thos. Oliver and Fred Whelan put off in a small boat to the rescue and succeeded in capturing the animal alongside a schooner about 200 yards from the wharf. The animal showed much fight in the water, and the men had all they could do to get it safely to terra firma. Mr. Squires who assisted lost a valuable watch during the rescue.

A Large Funeral

The funeral of the late Robert J. Clare, one of the Blue Puttees took place yesterday afternoon from his brother's residence Military Road, and was attended by a large concourse of people of all classes and creeds. In the procession were a large number of war veterans, companions of the deceased who had fought in Gallipoli and France, the executive and members of the G.W.V.A., representatives from the C.L.B., in addition to private citizens. The prayers for the dead were read at the R. C. Cathedral by Rev. Fr. Savin, following which the cortege wended its way to Belvedere Cemetery, where interment took place. Lieut. C. F. Garland, Vice-President of the G.W.V.A., read the War Veterans' ritual over the grave.

Progress at Dock Construction

Work on a new section of the dry dock begins this evening. Practically half the length of the dock has now been completed and if the present progress is maintained, the structure will be completed before Christmas. So far about 12 or 14 thousand yard of concrete have been poured. More than half the excavation work has also been done. The cofferdam will be completed next week as the steel piling has been driven for three fourth of the distance around the entrance. Work of dismantling the Decola has also begun. The ship will be stripped so as to permit of a wharf being made out of her hull.

Action More Laudable Than Protests

A well merited rebuke was administered by Judge Morris to the individuals who laid sacrilegious hands on the War Memorial, and the punishment imposed should have a salutary effect upon others of similar tendencies.

Indignant, however, as citizens may feel over this desecration committed by outsiders, have we even as valid an excuse for thankfulness that we are not as other men are as had the Pharisee of old? After all, his offense lay in boasting of his virtues, whereas in our case we must be held accountable for sins of omission, and it is difficult to determine what plea we could make to a charge of negligence.

Without desiring to excuse the conduct of the offenders in Friday night's affair in any way, we would point out that there is nothing to indicate that the surroundings of the Monument and the plateau upon which it stands are part and parcel of the Memorial. They are separated from it by two tracks leading to Duckworth Street, the condition of which makes them even less deserving of the name roads than the other thoroughfares in the city. All day long heavily laden horse drawn vehicles and motor trucks struggle over the incline, and the scene presented is anything but in keeping with the sacred purpose to which the site has been dedicated. Such being the conditions, is it a matter for surprise that strangers fail to be impressed with the reverence and regard in which we hold the Memorial and its precincts?

In our last reference to this matter on July 10th, we suggested that some such body as the G.W.V.A. might call a public meeting in the autumn, in order to bring pressure to bear on the authorities to take action, failing which, the citizens themselves should decide to take the matter in their own hands, and by means of voluntary workers to carry out whatever measures are necessary. We would suggest in particular that the "Blue Puttees" who are holding a reunion shortly might consider the matter, and in the event of their deciding to undertake such a movement, we can assure them that the columns of the Telegram will be at their services for the purpose of assisting to organize it.

Well Known Citizen Seriously Ill

Mr. James Lawrence, of Lawrence Bros., who has been seriously ill the last few days was paralyzed this morning. His condition is dangerous and the attending physicians are yet unable to say if he will pull through. Mr. Lawrence who is 72 years of age is one of our best known citizens.

MR. J. LAWRENCE PASSES AWAY

We regret to learn that Mr. James J. Lawrence, whose serious illness is noted above, passed away shortly before press hour.

QUARTERMASTER ON SILVER

PEPYS BEHIND THE SCENES

Sept. 18th.—Do meet this day Mr. Colman, that has but newly come to town, and do compliment me upon this my Journal, which, says he, his family and he doth enjoy reading very much, whereas I did blush mightily, being in all things, very modest. But Lord, it annoys me that he should aske of me the proper manner of pronouncing my name, being that I have already given it divers times in my Journal, and will not do so again, save this one time. Indeed, there are three ways which are proper; yet, of the three, do I prefer "Peepa," and so shall I never be called. Talking this day with Crookes concerning the City elections, and he talks of the letters which are now appearing in the morning sheet concerning the duties of the Council. But Lord, methinks 'tis the easiest thing possible for any scribe to criticise, but it do seem a strange thing to me that none that speak or write strongly for civic improvement do make an effort to have their plans adopted by standing for the Council, as, indeed, they should do. The new cooke mayd that is come to us do amaze me by the quality of her cooking, which is vastly good, nor did I ever think it possible that we might secure so great a treasure, and so advise my wife that she do all in her power to keep the wench.

Sept. 19th.—This morning, being come to McMurdo's for a drink, do meet there, Mrs. Povey and her sister, and they do keep me in gossip till long past the time that I could afford from my office. Among other things, do intimate me into a new soft drink, which is called a chocolate flip, mightily good. Anon to the Liquor Control Board's store, where do buy me some whiskey against tomorrow, and have the greatest difficulty in obtaining it, being a great crowd there, and many of them people that are going a-shooting to-morrow. This I did intend to do myself, but am in ill luck, being that there is too much work to permit me to take a holiday. My wife begs me this night that I shall take her to see "Mons. Beaucaire," in the pictures, which I did promise her to do, being that 'tis a booke I have read nigh a dozen times, yet like not the thought of Valentino doing it, having no love for the fellow's acting, which, says my wife, is naught but prejudice. Home all this night and to my work, there being enough of it to do to keep me occupied till nigh my bedd hour.

Sept. 20th (Lord's Day).—To the Church of St. Thomas, where a good sermon by Mr. Elliott, the Rector, which gives me much pleasure to listen to. To dine with my wife of a fine joint, and I greatly pleased, being cooked more to my liking than ever I have had it. Anon this day, am shown by Mr. Herder a copy of "The Thin Red Line," being the journal of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, and do contain 2 pages concerning the presentation to the Regiment by the Saint Andrew's Society of St. John's, of a set of pipes used by the pipers of the Regiment at the Relief of Lucknow. These pipes being bought in St. John's at a sale, by Dr. Campbell, are presented by him to the St. Andrew's Society which in turn presented them to their original owners, The Argyll and Sutherlands, as an appreciation of the gift, in their turn have presented an ivory mounted set of pipes to the Society. All this do make me think how many other interesting relics there may be hidden in this country that may some day come to light.

FROM OUR FYLES OF THIRTY YEARS AGO.

The S.S. Kite arrived in port at 2 o'clock to-day, Saturday (Sept. 21st), having on board Lieut. Peary and members of his Arctic expedition. Everyone is hale and hearty, but all were like the proverbial oyster as far as giving any information regarding the trip. Every man on board the Kite is under sealed orders to say nothing concerning the findings of the party. Lieut. Peary said: "Arrangements have been made to give a New York paper first information, and until then I prefer to say nothing." While we write the world is being informed of the safe arrival in St. John's of Lieut. Peary and party, and whether or not the results of his two years' exploration have been successful or not, Newfoundlanders extend to him a warm welcome. Capt. Bob Bartlett looks hale and hearty.

Reports received from the Northward says that the old mine at Tilt Cove, operated by the Cape Copper Mining Co., has been recently pumped out, and is all ready for working.

That some operations have been resumed at the litherto abandoned copper mine at Look's Harbor, N.D.B. Mr. Fitcher and Mr. Churchill are engaged in pumping operations, and have already relieved the mine of an immense lot of water.

Watch Your Telephone

A telephone receiver was stolen from the pay booth at the General Post Office on Saturday night. The thief evidently took his wire about him, and took the precaution to tie down the hook on which the receiver hangs before cutting the wire so that Central was not apprised of anything being wrong for some considerable time. Telephone receivers are just the thing for local radio reception and it is believed the receiver was stolen from the Office was done by someone sitting up a bit.

With the Gun

Messrs Neary who shot over the Three Pond Barrens, this morning secured 8 partridge and some snipe.

Hon. Frank McNamara who is one of our keenest shots left yesterday for Avondale where he will spend a week partridge shooting.

Among those who left by yesterday's express for Camp 5 were Capt. S. Courtney, Mr. Arthur Monroe and Mr. H. J. Lakin.

Mr. J. Feehan, druggist, is now on the Southern Shore busy with dogs and gun.

Two coverts of partridge were raised on the roadside near Hay Bulls Middle Pond by a car returning to the city at 7.30 last evening.

Partridge are reported plentiful on the Hodgewater Line. Large numbers of wild geese have also been seen near West Harbor.

Messrs A. Wiseman, S. Hart and H. A. Herder are at 9 Mile Post trying their luck.

Magistrate's Court

A 33-year-old labourer charged with being drunk and a second charge of stealing a pair of boots valued at $3.00 was released on a deposit to appear when called upon.

A drunk and disorderly was fined $2.00 or 7 days.

A 21-year-old labourer, convicted of the larceny of a horse and express was fined $10.00 or in default 30 days imprisonment. The accused was also convicted of a breach of Section 23, sub-Section 3 of the Alcoholic Liquors Act, and was fined $50.00 or in default 2 months imprisonment. It was his third conviction under the act.

Three men belonging to Sydney, C. B., taken in for safekeeping were taken to the home for the aged.

A labourer convicted of being drunk and disorderly, and attempting to do bodily harm to a man named Noseworthy was fined $5.00 and costs or in default 14 days imprisonment.

One drunk was fined $1.00 or 2 days and blacklisted.

A man arrested at the instance of the caretaker of the Seaman's Institute on a charge of being drunk and disorderly was convicted and fined $2 or 7 days.

Relaying Street Car Rails

Under the direction of the local foreman, Mr. Andrews, and Mr. Farquharson good progress is being made in laying the street car rails along Water Street. It is hoped to have the rails relaid by the end of the year. The seven new cars are due to arrive in December. The use of the one man safety air brake type, the south track on Water Street will be used until the new service is completed and will not be removed this season. The turn-over switch at the Railway Station has been completed. Two others, one at Holloway Street and one at Adelaide Street, will be placed as the work proceeds.

Fish Plentiful for Hook and Liners

Capt. Wesley Keen of S.S. Prospero, who returned from the northern coast at service last night, reports good fishing for hook and liners all along the coast, although there is a big scarcity of squid for bait. The Labrador fishery has been very successful and many of the schooners returned home the past week reporting for full loads. Extensive operations are going on at Hampden, the scene of Messrs. Crowe and Norrie's lumber mills. Several steamers are loading pig props there and will be ready to sail in the course of the next few days. Dr. Grenfell, who had been visiting places on the Labrador Coast in his yacht, Strathcona II., on his return to St. Anthony, brought with him several children to be placed in the Orphanages. The new General Hospital is now under course of action and will be a splendid addition to the present buildings. The Prospero brought up a number of students who put in their summer holidays at the Grenfell Institutions, and who are now returning to their homes. Fine weather was met with on the round trip. She sails again on Wednesday.

Signs of Improving Trade

"That the coming season is to be an 'Old Timer' as regards Trade, was quite evident last Saturday evening at the store of S. Richard Steele, opt. Court House. This firm is advertising a Sale of Fancy China, and to anyone entering this store—"The Shop With the Cup and Saucer Sign"—on Saturday, it would seem that Xmas Eve had come. Although extra help was called in, many customers had to leave without being served, and we have been asked to mention for the benefit of those, that this Sale will continue throughout the week. Will customers, though, please make an endeavour to make their purchases before next Saturday, and so save a repetition of what took place Saturday night.

There will be a High Requiem Mass celebrated at St. Patrick's Church on Tuesday morning at 8.30 o'clock, for the repose of the soul of the late Capt. Gerald Whitty.—sept21.1f

GENERAL ELECTION IN AUSTRALIA.

MELBOURNE, Sept. 21. An announcement has been made by Premier Bruce of the early dissolution of the parliament and an election probably on October 14. It has stirred up the Commonwealth as the issue will be joined between the Government and the radical elements involving the unofficial strike of British seamen. Premier Bruce attacked labor in a manifesto pointing out the perils of a dictatorship and saying that what he demanded was a mandate to enact measures to maintain the supremacy of Parliamentary Government, law and order.

SITUATION ACUTE BETWEEN BRITAIN AND TURKEY.

GENEVA, Sept. 21. A conflict between Great Britain and Turkey over Mosul became suddenly more serious last night when a declaration of the Turkish delegate was interpreted by the Council as a repudiation of the previous Turkish statement that Turkey would accept the decision of the Council. The British Minister declared that unless Turkey pledged a more advance acceptance of the Council, Great Britain would not consider herself bound by this decision and troops would remain in Mosul.

Bread Car and Sloven in Collision

Mr. L. Hanlon, driver of "Our Own" bread delivery wagon was injured in a smashup on Duckworth Street this afternoon and as a result had to be taken to hospital. The accident occurred opposite Dr. O'Reilly's surgery and was caused by a collision between the bread cart and a motor car. The latter smashed the front wheel of the bread cart and caused the driver to fall from his seat and underneath the wheels. The horse bolted and Hanlon was dragged for a considerable distance before he got clear. He was picked up and brought to hospital in Dr. O'Reilly's motor car. The horse was brought to a stand still near the Crosbie Hotel.

Signs of Improving Trade

"That the coming season is to be an 'Old Timer' as regards Trade, was quite evident last Saturday evening at the store of S. Richard Steele, opt. Court House. This firm is advertising a Sale of Fancy China, and to anyone entering this store—"The Shop With the Cup and Saucer Sign"—on Saturday, it would seem that Xmas Eve had come. Although extra help was called in, many customers had to leave without being served, and we have been asked to mention for the benefit of those, that this Sale will continue throughout the week. Will customers, though, please make an endeavour to make their purchases before next Saturday, and so save a repetition of what took place Saturday night.

MAY CONSIDERABLY CHEAPER RAILWAY TRANSPORTATION.

OTTAWA, Sept. 21. An innovation designed to reduce the cause of railway transportation to extraordinary charges was tried out Saturday on the Canadian National Railways between Montreal and Ottawa. It consisted of an oil-electric train of one pull-coach separated by a Diesel engine. The coach could have bettered the regular schedule if permitted. It is believed the cost of the operation can be reduced to less than one cent a mile by the use of the new engine.

MACMILLAN EXPEDITION EXAMINING NORSE RUINS.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21. Carrying out a plan to determine whether there is a connection between the authenticated Norse ruins of Greenland and the ruins of Labrador, Commander Macmillan and the scientific staff aboard the Arctic expedition ship Peary, are visiting various fjords and ports to the south of Godthaab, Greenland. Later, with the Bowdoin, the other ship of the expedition, they will go to Labrador, and if Lieut. Commander Byrd, in charge of the navy section, deems it feasible, airplanes will be used to visit the interior ruins reported by Indians and Eskimos, but never visited by white men.

COUNCIL SEVERELY CRITICIZED.

LONDON, Sept. 21. The Council of the League of Nations to-day is sharply scored by the Times and several other London newspapers for their decision Saturday to refer the dispute between Britain and Turkey over the Mosul region of Mesopotamia to the world court of international justice at the Hague.

Three-Hour Swim to Get Help

SEVEN DROWNED AFTER A DANCE. Seven lives were lost in the sinking of a pleasure boat which was returning to Port Vendres from the Mediterranean resort of Banyuls-sur-Mer, close to the Franco-Spanish frontier.

A party of 20 members of leading local families had been to a dance at Banyuls. They prepared to return home about 1 a.m., but at the last moment 11 of them were left behind. The party in the boat was singing gaily to the strains of banjos when a strong wind suddenly rose. In a few minutes rough seas swamped the frail craft and all on board were thrown into the water in darkness.

The captain's son, M. Andre Riere, a member of the Perpignan team which won the French Rugby championship, swam to Port Vendres after a three-hours battle with the waves and gave the alarm. The lifeboat at once put out and saved a sailor who was clinging to a piece of wreckage.

Five bodies were picked up floating in the sea and two other persons are missing.

Religious Ceremony at Barhaven

Special to Evening Telegram. BARHAVEN, Sept. 21. The boys and girls of St. Francis Xavier Church, Barhaven, assisted at High Mass at the Holy Ghost which was offered up for them this morning to bless them in their studies and good deeds. Immediately after Mass, the school was declared opened when Father Cacola spoke along the lines that represented his talk to the children at Long Harbour school two weeks ago. Fr. Cacola offered testimonials in gold to be given at the end of the year for the best essays on the virtue of Holy purity and veracity.—COM.

Here is the Conciliation Board?

Evening Telegram. Sir—Its importance to the number of citizens who hold property under building leases must excuse for introducing a somewhat technical question upon your pages. That it is of more than mere academic interest will, I think, appear when I quote Sections 95 and 95A of "The St. John's Municipal Act," popularly entitled "the City Charter."

After providing in Section 94 for the lessee's rights of "twenty years' purchase" under building leases made after the passing of the Act which became law on August 2nd, 1911, the Act proceeds: "Every such building lease made shall, any clause or condition therein contained to the contrary notwithstanding, be subject to the condition that the lessee or his assigns shall have the right at any time during the currency of the lease to obtain whichever of the following privileges he desires, namely: (1) the extension of the lease beyond its original term for a term of years; or (2) the purchase of the lease or his assigns of the freehold of the land; and shall at the expiration of the lease, if the privileges of extension or purchase provided for have not been exercised, be entitled to compensation for the unexpired value of the improvements made by him or his assigns upon the said land during the term of the lease, including in the case of business premises any goodwill which may have been created by him or his assigns during the currency of the lease.

The term of such extension and the amount to be paid by way of rental for such extension or by way of compensation for such purchase or improvement shall, in default of agreement, be determined by a Conciliation Board consisting of three members to be appointed by the Governor in Council for that purpose. The Governor in Council shall have power to make rules and regulations prescribing the procedure of the said Board and the fees payable to the members thereof."

Before these sections were enacted into law they were given most minute and careful consideration, extending over several years—a degree of care accorded to few other legislative acts of our time. That they effect a considerable departure from the prevailing law is true, but that the departure was the deliberate and considered will of both Houses of the Legislature of the Municipal authorities and of the Citizens' Committee which made itself active in the matter can hardly be questioned. If any piece of legislation deserved to be promptly implemented, this was the one. Yet over four years have passed since the Act received the Royal assent, and none of the successive Governors-in-Council has even appointed the Conciliation Board, much less prescribed regulations for its procedure.

The Municipality is not to blame for the omission. It has several times petitioned successive Executives to provide the necessary machinery for putting the law into effect, the last time in June past, at the writer's instance. But none of these civic representations has been heeded.

The non-appointment of the Board introduces grave uncertainty as to the present position and rights of those and they are many—whose interests are affected. The Act's words are sufficiently plain, and were the Board in existence the position would be clear; as it is not, it is impossible to state authoritatively whether or not the benefits of these sections are available, and to what extent. Decision must rest with the Supreme Court. But even if that decision should be favourable to the lessees' rights, it is scarcely unfair that private citizens should be obliged to shoulder the expense of proceedings before that tribunal in order to discover the effect of the apathy and neglect of successive Governments. Should the decision be adverse, the inaction of the Executive will have deprived citizens of substantial benefits which it was the clear intention of the Legislature to confer. It is a nice constitutional point to decide the limits of the Executive authority in defying and nullifying legislative acts but I do not mean to debate it here.

I do not wish this letter to be understood in a party sense, or that any reader should suppose me to single out the present administration for attack on this head. I am content to point out to our present rulers an excellent opportunity of repairing an omission of their predecessors, of standing for its omission of their own and incidentally of doing tardy justice to a large body of citizens, to some of whom they owe gratitude, and to all a duty.

Faithfully yours, J. O'N. CONROY, Sept. 19, 1925.

Valentino Returns in "Monsieur Beaucaire"

Monsieur Beaucaire, the new Paramount picture directed by Sidney O'cott, which marks the return of Rudolph Valentino to the screen, will begin a 2 days' run at the Star Theatre, starting to-night. The world and his wife—particularly his wife—will see in this simple announcement visions of a film feast for which their movie appetites have been hungering these many months.

It isn't difficult to understand why this photograph is swathed with such keen expectations. Aside from the tremendous personal popularity of Valentino to whom millions pay tribute as the greatest lover of the silver sheet, film fans who have read Booth Tarkington's immortal story, with its romantic, colorful and spectacular background of the court of King Louis XV of France, recognize its remarkable pictorial possibilities. It is a story that thrills the imagination, kindles the emotions, and satisfies that fundamental human desire for love, beauty, laughter and truth.

There is something vital and appealing about the character that Valentino portrays—the brave hearted, impetuous Duke, who defies the King of France and goes to England disguised as a barber. It is a part that brings into play all those robust dramatic qualities that Valentino possesses and which have made him one of the most fascinating and compelling screen stars of to-day.

No effort, no expense was spared to make "Monsieur Beaucaire," from an artistic standpoint, "a thing of beauty and a joy forever." The gorgeous and historically correct costumes were designed and made in Paris. The glitter of gold and silver brocade, the sparkle of diamonds and sapphires, the flash of jeweled swords—all the beauty and splendor and brilliancy of the most magnificent court in the world's most romantic period are pictured with amazing fidelity. It's history come to life in all its vividness and grandeur!

We realize the painstaking care that went into the making of this production when we consider the supporting cast with which Director Sidney O'cott has surrounded Mr. Valentino: Bebe Daniels, as the Princess de Bourbon-Conti; Lowell Sherman, as King Louis XV; Lois Wilson as the queen; Doris Kenyon, as Lady Mary; Paulette Goddard, as Mme. Pompadour; John Davidson, as Richelieu; Ian MacLaren, Oswald Yorke, Flora Finch and about fifty others equally well-known.

And here's a parting word of suggestion, come early if you want to avoid the rush!

Cupid and a Camera

Dr. C. W. Sanborn, of San Francisco, is not likely to speak well of the camera now that photography has given him the surprise of his life.

According to the law reports (says a writer in the "British Journal of Photography"), the doctor had a breach of promise suit for $20,000 brought against him by Miss Beatrice Lichtenford, a Chicago typist. The doctor had fallen in love with Miss Lichtenford, but he was a cautious wooer, and to each of the letters he wrote her he appended a postscript requesting her to return the missive after she had read it. This she did.

But she also pursued businesslike methods, and when the doctor declared that he had never proposed marriage to her, she produced photographic copies of love-letters in some of which he spoke of marriage!

"Sinners in Heaven" at Nickel To-Day

Every once in a while there suddenly appears on the film horizon a motion picture that offers something new in the way of story and theme. Originality in photoplays, as regards plot is mighty rare, and for that very reason "Sinners in Heaven," the new Paramount picture, which comes to the Nickel Theatre to-night for a three day's run, deserves to be singled out for special and honorable mention.

To many film fans the title of this screenplay has a familiar and reminiscent sound. That's because it was adapted by James Creelman from the powerful novel of the same name by Clive Arden who had the coveted honor of having his story adjudged the prize-winner in the English book competition of last year.

Alan Crosland, who produced the picture, has many directorial triumphs to his credit, but it is no exaggeration to say that he has surpassed all of his previous efforts with "Sinners in Heaven."

An indication of the extreme care that went into the making of this cinema may be seen in the array of screen talent that has been assembled for the various roles. Bebe Daniels and Richard Dix have the two featured roles, while the supporting cast includes Holmes Herbert, Montague Love and others.

Lucknow Pipes Found in Newfoundland

St. Andrews Society Return Them to the Battalion.

The following story, taken from "The Thin Red Line," the Regimental Magazine of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, tells of the discovery in Newfoundland of an historic set of pipes, and their return to the Battalion by St. Andrew's Society.

THE LUCKNOW PIPES. An historic set of pipes, played by a 93rd piper at the Relief and capture of Lucknow, during the Indian Mutiny, has recently been presented to the Battalion by Mr. E. D. Reid, President, on behalf of the St. Andrew's Society, of St. John's, Newfoundland, to whom we are very much indebted for the gift of such a unique and interesting relic of the regiment.

The Pipes are in a good state of preservation and are covered with the 93rd tartan, and are inscribed on the sole of the chanter: "L-K-W 1857-8 Mar. 19th." The ribbon streamers are very faded, but appear to be of green and purple tartan with a faint yellow line.

We must thank Lt.-Gen. Sir Spencer Ewart, K.C.B., Colonel of the Cameron Highlanders, whose father, the late Gen. Sir John Ewart, K.C.B., commanded the 93rd at the storming of the Secunderbagh during the Second Relief of Lucknow, for establishing the fact that this is a set of 93rd Pipes, from the following circumstances:—It will be remembered that the First "Relief of Lucknow" by the 78th (Seaforth) Highlanders under Havelock, terminated on 26th Sept., 1857, and only resulted in the garrison being reinforced, as it could not be extricated.

In the final "Capture of Lucknow," under Sir Colin Campbell, the 93rd was the only Highland Regiment employed, the operations finishing on 21st Nov., 1857.

In the nal "Capture of Lucknow," which ended on 21st March, 1858, four Highland Regiments took part: the 78th (Seaforth) and 93rd (Sutherland), who had been in the "Reliefs" and the 42nd (Black Watch) and 79th (Cameron).

The Piper, therefore, who carried these Pipes, must, since he inscribed them with the dates "1857-8," have served in either the 78th or 93rd, the only two Highland Regiments present at Lucknow in both these years, and the fact that the Pipes are covered with Sutherland Tartan leaves no room for doubt that they formerly belonged to the 93rd.

The identity of the Piper has not yet been discovered, the records showing that the following served at Lucknow with the 93rd during the Indian Mutiny:—

- No. 2517—Edward Macdonald, died 14th Oct. 1857. No. 2576—Henry McKay. No. 2686—James Sinclair. No. 2707—Adam Williamson. No. 3276—Alexander McArthur vice Macdonald, deceased.

And among other Pipes of the period are known to have been:—Pipe-Major Wilson. Rory MacKay. John McLeod.

and William Manson, who is shown in a group of "No. 6 or Capt. Ewart's Coy," painted in 1851, which hangs in the Officers' Mess.

From one of these Pipes, the set of Pipes descended to a relative, a Mr. Garland Gaden, of Newfoundland, at whose decease it was purchased by the Hon. Dr. Campbell, Minister of Agriculture and Mines, Newfoundland, and presented by him to St. Andrew's Society of Newfoundland on 25th Jan., 1923.

It was due to the initiative of Capt. P. F. Wilberforce-Bell, M.C., formerly Military Secretary to the Governor of Newfoundland, that the existence of these Pipes first became known, and we are most grateful to him for the trouble he has taken in the matter and also to H.E. the Governor of Newfoundland, Sir William Allardyce, K.C.M.G., for the great interest he has displayed.

As a small return for their great kindness, an ivory mounted set of Pipes, suitably inscribed, has been presented to the Newfoundland St. Andrew's Society, and we would ask them not only to accept our warmest thanks, but to believe that the Lucknow Pipes will ever be preserved as an object of the greatest historic interest by the 93rd Highlanders, to whose keepings they now return.

TO-NIGHT'S FOOTBALL. The final football game for the season takes place on St. George's Field at 6.15 this evening, when the Mount Cashel and B.I.S. teams, in the Junior League, will try conclusions. Great interest is centered in this game as the outcome depends on second place honors.

SUCCESSFUL TRIP FINANCIALLY. A committee meeting of the City footballers to Grand Falls was held recently, when all matters in connection with the financial end of the trip were finalized. A statement was read showing the cost of bringing the team in here from Grand Falls and paying their expenses while here; also the cost of sending the team to the inland town. Despite the heavy expense, the trip was a financial success. A small balance of $16.98, was handed over to the Permanent Marine Disasters' Fund.

The occasion was also taken to make presentations to Mr. T. Delahunty, manager of the team on the trip, and to Mr. E. Phelan, who handled affairs in the city. Their services were highly spoken of by the members on the team, and it was realized that it was only their efforts that made possible the financial success of the undertaking.

THE HOLIDAY ATTRACTION. C.L.B.-C.C.C. Footballers Sports. Preparations are going on apace for the Sports to be held on Wednesday afternoon under the auspices of the C.L.B. and C.C.C. footballers, and it is anticipated that an interesting evening will be in store for those who attend. Personal of the published programme will show that it contains several items that are new to the usual sports programmes here and should meet with approval. The age limit for inter-collegiate tug-of-war will be the same as that governing inter-collegiate football and not as appeared in the original programme, only for those under seventeen years of age.

The inter school relay race will be for those attending any school in the city, under seventeen years of age, each school will have three representatives. By special request, mercantile football sides have been added to the programme and if preliminary are necessary for this event, they will be run off on Wednesday morning, prior to the sports. Some good boxing exhibitions are being arranged. One will be between S. Le-

Pose and J. Phelan, which is sufficient to show that it will be, and the others promise to be equally interesting. So as to ensure a continuance of boxing only a twelve foot square ring will be used. The object for which the sports are being held is one worthy of support. The programme of events are as follows:—

Enforce the Regulations

Evening Telegram.
 Str.—Your editorial of Saturday regarding the carrying of Numbers on motor cars is timely. I have done lately, Port Union, Catalina, Little or Corner Brook you will see without any identification mark. The Highway Commission should get up and get after all cars not numbered.

Another point in connection with carrying numbers, is that at present there are at least three motor cars in St. John's bearing no mark except a crown. The law provides that numbers should be carried both on the front and rear of cars, and if considered necessary by the owners, no other ornamentation may be shown.

These various cars might be the result of the apparent laxity of the law in outports, as it is natural to suppose that the highest in the land would set the example in law observance.

Understand that the law prevents the changing of a number plate from one car to another, and therefore understand why a number plate is now carried on a MacLaughlin car is the same as that which was on a different car about ten days ago. It may be that the owner of these cars is a car dealer, and was given the privilege for demonstrating, but using a car around on private business going home to meals, and taking friends to the country is not demonstrating, and in fairness to those who pay full fees, should not be tolerated.

Members of the Highway Commission, wake up and enforce the law. The frequency of accidents (happening without serious results) calls for a more serious examination of applicants for license permits, and, to my mind, each applicant should be investigated by the Highway Commission. If it had been done, probably it would have happened that some of those concerned had no such permits, and now it is said that there are several who have driven all the summer without the possession of such permits.

The excellence of our new roads has enticed some drivers to open the road a little, so that the speed limit is considerably exceeded. This does considerable damage to the roads, particularly those which have been laid this year, and it would be business if the Highway Commission procured some motor cycles driven by plain clothes men who could hunt up these road-hogs, who, though few in number, do more damage to the road surface than the cost which these cycles would entail.

Please pardon my trespassing at such length on your space, but I appreciate what you are trying to do for the enforcement of the law, and trust that these few lines will galvanize the Highway Commission into doing their part towards that end.

Yours truly,
 MOTORIST.

ALL PARENTS DIVIDED INTO THREE PARTS.

I have met recently a man who has missed his vocation. He should have been a seafaring man. When he is on the sea his whole manner and bearing change. He seems to have come alive, to have found himself. In his ordinary clothes on the street you might not look at him twice; in his corduroys and sea coat with the wind ruffling his hair and his big bulk stretched in front of a shining wheel he is a striking and handsome figure. He would make a fine model for a painting of a sea captain. And if he had followed the sea I feel sure he would have been the thing itself. Not because his father didn't know. But he didn't follow it. Why? Because his father didn't know anything about the sea and didn't like to have his boy follow such an adventurous life? No, but because his father was a sea captain and had said his son should never follow so hard a life and one so unprofitable in a material way. It seems to me that all parents are divided into three divisions. First, the kind of father who says: "I want my son to be a sea captain or a doctor or a manufacturer of chairs because I have been a sea captain or a doctor or a manufacturer of chairs." Secondly, the father who says: "I am determined that my son shall never

Jewels in a Garden

$15,000 PEARLS PICKED UP IN CANADA.

Within a few days of enlisting the services of Scotland Yard officers, mystery surrounding the loss of a pearl necklace, value £15,000, was unexpectedly solved. The pearls belonged to the Hon. Mrs. E. J. Blyth, daughter of Sir John Brunner, and the widow of the first Lord Blyth. Their loss was discovered following a voyage from Quebec to London in the Cunard liner Ascania. Before the trip Mrs. Blyth tied the pearls up in a handkerchief, and was under the impression that she had put them in her jewel-case. This was given to the care of the purser of the ship, and reposed in the officer's safe. Round the box had been placed a piece of tape, to which was attached a receipt, and this was intact and the lock in perfect order when the case was handed back to the owner. When it was opened, however, the necklace was missing. Other jewellery, valued many thousands of pounds, had not been touched. The pearls—127 in number—were described as beautifully matched, and so renowned that a description of them was known to practically every dealer of such things in the world. Detectives carefully considered the theory that a gang of international thieves had robbed the case during the voyage with the aid of a false key. The finding of the pearls was announced by Messrs. Summers, Henderson and Co., assessors, of Lime-street, E.C., who had offered a reward of £1,000 for their recovery. The necklet was picked up in the grounds of the Chateau, Lake Louise, Alberta, by a Miss Duffitt, a resident of Vancouver. She reported her find to the management, and stated she should keep possession of the jewels pending the discovery of the owner. Mr. Summers, of the firm of assessors, remarked: "It is beyond all reasonable doubt that these are the missing pearls. When Mrs. Blyth's rope broke she wrapped the pearls in her handkerchief, and apparently must have inadvertently pulled it out of her pocket when walking in the grounds. Consequently, the pearls could not have been in her jewel case when she gave it over into the charge of the purser of the Ascania." Missing £1,000 Pearl Found. Search for a pear-shaped pearl drop to an earring valued at £1,000, lost by Lady Assheton-Smith, while walking in St. James's Park or the neighbourhood, resulted in the finding of a gem believed to be the one missing. It was discovered near the spot where it was thought to have been dropped. A reward of £100 was offered, and a number of London District Messenger-boys searched for the pearl in Victoria-street and St. James's Park.

HAPPINESS.

Old Punktown has no magic to hold ambitious lads; and so, with language tragic, they leave for other grades. The distant cities beckon, they note, and disappear, and there they find, I reckon, no joy that isn't here. In Punktown man may chortle and have his joyous fling, but he's the sort of mortal who's built to dance and sing. But if his soul is grouchy, if he's a dismal skate, he'll say the town is slow, and dead and out of date. It doesn't greatly matter just where one may abide if he's inclined to splutter his tears on every side. He'd shed his tears in Boston, he'd weep in Buffalo; all things will have a frost on wherever he may go. His grief would be terrific upon the eastern shore, and by the blue Pacific he'd wring his hands and roar. But if a human being is built the other way, in Punktown he'll be seeing much reason to be gay. No matter where he's dwelling he'll wear a cheerful face, and men will hear him telling the beauties of the place. It isn't where we're living that makes our lives worth while; the punkiest town is giving all men a chance to smile. The man who doesn't want to put up a smile at all, will beef in fair Toronto, and knock in Illinois. Paul, I hear the bitter railings of knockers as they go, they talk of Punktown's failings, she's shabby, gray and slow; they'll seek a town more snappy, where help and racket blend; but they will not be happy, wherever they may wend.

Reason and Instinct on the Road

Just now the lay Press is giving prominence to road accidents, which, the public is led to believe, can be attributed to the multitude of novice drivers on the road, and to the high speeds indulged in by the more experienced.

In an ever-expanding movement there must always be novices. This year is no different from any other year, either as regards accidents or the number of novices, in fact the proportion of the former to the latter is lower than in previous years. This the "man in the street" fails to appreciate, and once again has been asking why some form of driving test is not insisted upon before a driving licence is granted. To the average member of the non-motoring public the need for a preliminary test is so obvious that he rarely troubles to pursue the matter further, overlooking that the law demands that a driver must possess a licence before he is permitted to drive. Where an accident is caused by a novice, more often than not it is due to inexperience in road law rather than to lack of knowledge of the rules. In other words, a newcomer to the world of wheels may know all there is to know about driving, and the control of the machine, but fails to apply that knowledge at the crucial moment. The inexperienced driver acts by a method of reasoning, the experienced by an instinct which has been acquired actually on the road. There is, however, little time for reasoning in an emergency. Therefore, no preliminary test of driving skill would serve appreciably to reduce the number of accidents. In fact, it is reasonable to suppose that a novice, conscious of his lack of experience, would be less liable to cause an accident than one who by law would be regarded as proficient. If the driving test had been enforced, generally, however, accidents are caused by those who fail to apply the "Safety First" rule.—Motor Cycle.

£22,000,000 RAILWAY FOR LONDON. BOLD ANGLo-AMERICAN PROJECT. Involving a capital of £22,000,000, a bold and ambitious scheme under Anglo-American auspices has been launched to provide London with a new system of underground tubes, with 33 miles of electric railway track for speeding up and improving the goods and parcel traffic of the Metropolis. One of the main advantages claimed for the scheme is that it will relieve the congestion of the streets caused by slow-moving goods traffic. The promoters maintain that underground carriage is the "one and there is a "power within" the body that mends the broken bone. If you lacerate the flesh, there is a "power within" that heals the wound. What is true of a broken bone or of a flesh wound, is also true of burns, scalds and bruises. Nature teaches that this "power within" is the only power on earth that heals, cures or mends, and that what that power cannot or will not heal, cure or mend, is beyond the power of anything on earth. Nature teaches that the power within moves the body, regulates the heat of the body, converts common food into living flesh and blood, develops the body from a single cell to an adult organism and reproduces the species. It teaches that this power performs these physical functions by means of impulses sent over the nerves, and that when a nerve is impaired the impulses are interfered with, and the result is called disease. To cure disease the tissue interfering with the nerve must be adjusted to normal. This is what MacPherson does in his practice.

only apparent practicable solution" of the problem of street congestion. The railway would take three years to construct, and it is estimated that during that time it would give employment to 50,000 men. The details of the project are now receiving the consideration of the railways through a committee representative of the four great railway groups. The provision of the capital has been arranged through the co-operation of important American and English banking houses under conditions which provide for the distribution of the issue between the two markets. It has been arranged to form a Promotion Company, with a nominal capital of £100,000, for the purpose of obtaining the necessary Statutory Powers from Parliament. Among those actively associated with the promotion of the undertaking are Lord Askwith, formerly Chief Industrial Commissioner; Sir Henry McMahon, formerly First High Commissioner, Egypt; Mr. R. Roosevelt Leacock, New York, and Mr. Louis I. Halle, New York. The new railway, it is proposed, will link up all the principal railway goods terminal and the London docks, the markets, and trade centres. The Post Office, which is laying a tube from Paddington to Whitechapel, would be offered direct access to the new system. It is planned to give the more important of the large stores and shopping districts direct access to the system. The line would be standard gauge, worked electrically by power from the existing supply stations, and, at the various points of reception and exchange where contact cannot be obtained, electric lifts capable of moving empty or more loaded wagons at a time. It is expected that the undertaking would attract increased trade to the Port of London, which is the cheapest port in the world to enter, and in the matter of distributing after-land cargoes have been landed, the direct est.

Sing Sing is a Century Old

Exactly one hundred years ago, on May 31, Captain Elam Lynds, one of the hundred convicts from Auburn Prison, founded Sing Sing Prison on the bank of the Hudson River. It became its first warden. Since then probably 100,000 criminals have been confined there and more than 100,000 murders have been put to death in the thirty-four years since the electric chair has been used as a means of capital punishment. Of those who served time, Ferdinand Ward, a partner in the brokerage firm of Ward & Grant with General U. S. Grant, was the most noted. In social importance was Edward P. Healy, who shot and killed Jim Fisk, leader and clubman. Other notable convicts were Johnny Hope, who tunneled under the Manhattan Prison Institution and robbed the bank of $1,000,000; Al Adams, who made a big fortune by selling "bulletins" in the policy game to unscrupulous investors; and Cornelius Almon, who embezzled $750,000 from a national bank in New York. Sophie Benson, confidence woman, was the best celebrated prisoner; the prison was founded in 1825. Sing Sing has not alone been a State Prison. For many years the United States Government "farmed" many criminals there. During the Civil War military and naval officers adjudged guilty after trial by court-martial were sent there to serve their sentences. The military offenders of highest rank was Brig. Gen. Utzinger, who had organized the 6888th Central Postal Directory, a regiment of colored soldiers in New York City. He distinguished himself in the Union army and obtained command of a brigade. He was caught padding payrolls and stealing horses; he was cashiered and taken to Sing Sing in uniform, bereft of the silver which he had worn on his coat.

A few drops a few seconds—Pleasing results

Removes Tarnish—makes your brass and copper as bright as little Miss Brasso herself.

Of the prisoners who have been executed, several achieved wide notoriety. There was excitement over the execution of Carlisle Harris in 1883. He had administered poison to Helen Potts, his sweetheart, after casting her aside. Being a dental student of wealthy parents, and because the girl he killed came of a prominent family, the execution received world-wide attention. So did the execution in 1915 of former Police Lieutenant Charles Becker, charged with instigating the murder of Herman Rosenthal over gambling graft in New York. Another execution that aroused great interest was that of Gordon Hamby, the Brooklyn bank robber. Mrs. Martha Place of Brookline was the only woman ever put to death at Sing Sing.

The prison was built on its present site because stone was plentiful nearby, and the State wished to use prison labor to quarry limestone. Some of the stone taken out by convicts was used to build the State Capitol in Albany. When the prison was started, in what was known as Sing Sing Village, it was named Mount Pleasant Prison. Several years later it was renamed "Sing Sing" from the village. The name became so fastened to the institution that the State formally renamed it Sing Sing Prison.

Sing Sing is a name taken from the Indian words "Ossine, Ossine." It means stone upon stone. That is exactly what the prison is: stone upon stone. The town eventually changed its name—let the prison have Sing Sing, and renamed itself Ossining. Prior to 1877 there was no wall around the prison. The old cell-block, with its dingy stone cells that are still in use and its iron-barred doors and windows, were relied upon to hold the prisoners safely captive. But escapes were so numerous, by horse and carriage, by steamboat and by train, that the State was forced to provide further safeguards. After Steve Boyle and four other desperadoes took a locomotive away from an engineer on the railway, Denis Casin, in 1875, fled with it. The State set about building the twenty-foot wall that now encloses the institution.

Fifty-Fifty!

The Secretary of State for Air, Sir Samuel Hoare, told an amusing story a little while ago of an airman who took a friend for a trial flight at a Hendon gathering. When they were about 3,000 feet up, the pilot executed a nose-dive. "There!" he exclaimed, as he righted the aeroplane. "Jolly exciting, wasn't it? Well, let you that fifty per cent. of the people down there thought we were falling." "Very likely," said the passenger. "And fifty per cent. of the people up here thought so, too."

PRINCE'S 23 YEARS IN AN ASYLUM

Egypt, a land of mysteries, tragedies, and romances, has produced no stranger tragedy than that provided by the life of Prince Saïf-Ed-Din. Twenty-seven years ago, when the Prince was just emerging from his teens, he was in the enjoyment of his great estates and leading the life of an Eastern potentate. His sister was married to Prince Fuad, now King Fuad of Egypt, and to all seeming life was as merry as a marriage bell. But Prince Saïf-Ed-Din and the sister of Prince Saïf-Ed-Din did not live happily together, and one day the lady told her brother a story which, whether true or not, so incensed him that, arming himself with a revolver, he went out in search of Prince Fuad. The pair met; there was a violent scene; the revolver crashed, and the man who was eventually to become

King of Egypt, fell, badly wounded. The assailant was arrested, and, in due course, was brought before the Courts and sentenced to seven years' penal servitude on a charge of attempted murder. This sentence, however, was in a short time reduced to four years, but when the prince had served two years in an Egyptian prison he was found to be insane, and, for some reason or other, was brought to England and placed in Titchhurst House, Titchhurst, Sussex, a private asylum, in which there are several other distinguished patients. There the prince has remained ever since, despite repeated efforts by his mother, Princess Nowd Jan Kanem Effendi, to obtain his release. The princess, who lives in Constantinople, and has frequently visited England on her son's behalf, was in London the other day, and instructed her solicitor to issue a writ against the British Government, claiming a sum of four and a half millions—two millions in respect of damages for the detention of her son, and £2 millions on account of the revenues of the sequestered estates. The sequestration of the estates took place at the time the Prince was convicted of the attempt upon the life of Prince Fuad, and since then the estates have been administered by Egyptian officials. The princess seeks to recover her income as well as the release of her son. Prince Saïf-Ed-Din himself makes no complaint. He apparently looks upon Titchhurst House as his home. He indulges in tennis, enjoys a dance, and is frequently seen driving about the countryside with his faithful attendant, an ex-British soldier. Whilst his mother declares that the prince is not insane, the authorities say that he is, and decline to release him. Titchhurst House is pleasantly situated in a picturesque part of Sussex, and the prince is known and liked by the country folk, who give him "good-day" as he passes by in his carriage.

of radio-active material had led to the conclusion that a period not shorter than 1,000,000,000 years, and not longer than 10,000,000,000 years, had elapsed since the final solidifying of the earth's crust.

"Even the shorter period, the speaker commented, gave ample scope for what he described as the 'drama of evolution'."

"Professor Lamb went on to discuss the fascinating problem of the earth's interior. An immense period of time, he indicated, would be necessary for the earth's core to fall to one-half of its original temperature. 'In the space of time I have mentioned,' he said, 'the great mass of the earth could hardly have cooled very much from the temperature when it was in a state of fusion,' i.e., molten."

"The speaker was left with the impression of a red-hot, molten mass in the earth's interior, a mass which even a thousand million years have not sufficed to cool."

"In the professor's words, the exterior of the earth 'might be floating on an internal globe of liquid—but he hastened, with true scientific caution, to add that 'no assertion is really made, or is necessary, to this effect.'"

"Geologists and biologists, on the one hand, and students of physics on the other, used to be at odds on fundamental questions bearing on the age of the earth; the former called for a longer period for working out the drama of evolution; but the physicists would allow," said the Scotsman.

"It appears that their conclusions have been brought nearer by study of the processes of radio-active change; and later discoveries may bring them closer still."

"There is, indeed, a prospect that physics may be found 'atoning for the grudging allowance of time it was once disposed to accord for the processes of geological and biological change' by demanding not eleven or twelve, but thirteen figures to express the earth's crust, and to account for the existing heat and density of its interior."

"We are invited to figure it 'as a steam boiler jacketed with a layer of asbestos.' It is a cooling bath, possessed of varying degrees of rigidity and elasticity, varying also in density as regards not only core and envelope, but different areas of its surface. 'The earth hath bubbles as the water hath'; these bubbles are represented by the mountains, and, strangely enough, the portions of the crust overlaid by the mountains are of lower gravity, on the whole, than the oceanic areas."

"Like pie-crust, it is in parts overdone and in parts underdone, and the underdone parts are those that are under water. What influence the forces that produce the tides exercise on the internal constituents of the earth has yet to be exactly ascertained; but we have got so far as to estimate, more or less accurately, from observation, not the time, distance, and locality of earthquakes, but the depth and position of the foci from which the earth waves originate."

"All the same, 'the innermost core of the earth'—from the centre to about one-fourth of the radius—remains a 'somewhat mysterious' region; no doubt it will be reported upon accurately by some future President to some future Association meeting."

Lost Mexican Market

NEW CHANCE TO WIN IT BACK.

The resumption of diplomatic relations with Mexico, which was announced by the Foreign Office recently, may give Britain an opportunity to regain some of the lost trade which has gone to Germany and the United States.

Capt. Frederick Rhodes, a mining engineer in Mexico, who has been in England since January consulting with the Foreign Office, said that during the two and a half years since relations had been broken off, Germany and the United States had made a careful study of the Mexican market, and are supplying all that Britain was formerly supplying quicker and at lower freight rates.

"But," he said, "Britain can recapture this trade if manufacturers will set out to do it. Mexico wants machinery of all kinds, and among the big orders which Mexico will be giving during the next few months are machinery for the sugar industry to replace that which was destroyed in the last revolution, and cement for a 1,200 miles road from the United States border to Mexico City."

"A great web of roads is to be built all over the country to carry fast motor transport, and the cement for these roads will probably be ordered from Britain, because in Mexico they regard English cement as the best."

Little Jack Rabbit

by David Cory

Well, little folks who read my daily stories, here we are again, you and I, waiting to hear what happened at the Baby Elephant's birthday party. The little fellow was just cutting the birthday cake, wasn't he? The little candle in the centre flickered and flared in the wind that blew through the open door. Only one little candle, for the baby elephant was just a year old, you remember.

"Be careful not to burn the little finger on the end of your trunk," warned the big Circus Elephant, as the little fellow held the knife above the frosting that glittered and glistened like a snowbank in cold December. Then, Oh so care-ful-ly, he cut the cake in four pieces, one each for the little rabbit, the Yellow Dog Tramp, the Circus Elephant and himself.

"Let me blow out the candle," shouted Billy Breeze from the trottoirs, and the next minute through the window came a puff and a puff and out went the candle, flickery sick.

"Ha, ha," laughed the Yellow Dog Tramp, on finding a big bone on his plate. "This suits me to a T. Lolly-pops make rabbit hops, but a juicy bone has a taste all its own," and taking it between the front paws, he commenced to gnaw away to his heart's content.

When the cake was all eaten, the peanuts were passed around and the ginger pop poured into shiny tin cups:

After that everybody sat out under the trees and sucked lollypops. "Goodness me, the baby elephant was so happy that he trumpeted every now and then, and sometimes often. Yes, the kind old Circus Elephant, with the help of Little Jack Rabbit and the Yellow Dog Tramp, had given that baby elephant a lovely time.

By and by, and none too soon, the thoughtful Yellow Dog Tramp remarked: "We must be going home. We have a long way to travel." Just then who should come by but the Old Dog Driver atop his Billy Goat Stage Coach.

"Hold on!" trumpeted the big Circus Elephant. "Want a couple of passengers?"

"Pulling in his Billy Goat Team, the Old Dog Driver took from between his teeth his corncob pipe and answered: "All right. I'm going to Rabbitville, Down through the valley and up the hill!"

"Good-by," cried the little rabbit, hopping into the stage.

"Good-by," barked the Yellow Dog Tramp, jumping in after the nimble little bunny. Then away went the Billy Goats, tossing their horns, which were tipped with shiny silver caps, and throwing out their hoofs, shod with bright iron shoes. Down through the valley and into the Whispering Glen, far from the homes of mortal men, they sped. Clatter, clatter, went the old coach, rolling from side to side, but the Old Dog Driver never fell from his seat. He had driven too long to lose his balance. Yes, indeed. Then along the Winding Trail through the Shady Forest until, by and by, after a while, and a humperly mile, and many a smile, the old stagecoach stopped on the Sunny Meadow just for a minute to allow the Billy Goats to drink at the cool Bubbling Brook. Then down the Old Cow Path, ripperly rip, it rolled, stopping by and by at the little gate in the white picket fence. There stood sweet Lady Love, waiting for her little rabbit son.

And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.
