

"I am Going Home."

Such it is said were the memorable words often uttered by Dr. David Livingstone, the great explorer, who on his death-bed, and drawing near the last scenes of his chequered and eventful life. No one can read the short and simple story of his last illness and death, as given in our despatch of Monday, without being deeply affected. The courageous traveller had manfully struggled with disease for months, but was at length obliged to yield to its stronger power. Forced at last to give up his journey, and with a sad presentiment that his complaint would prove fatal, and that his career was almost at an end, he lay down in the hut which his faithful attendants had built for him to die in. Here in a sense alone—for no white man was near—no kindred spirit present to soothe his sufferings or attend to his wants—we can have some faint idea of the thoughts which in the intervals of pain would pass through the mind of the dying man. His life fast ebbed out, and yet the world as we may say waiting anxiously and hopefully for his re-appearance and return to civilization, to tell all that he had seen and discovered. His work not yet finished—the dream of his life not yet realized—but at the very time when it seemed near accomplishment, the Great Master whom he had served for so many years summons the weary wanderer home to that eternal rest which knows no break or disturbance. What thoughts of home, of friends, of past scenes and events must have crossed the mind of this brave Christian—of home and friends far distant, whom he would never again see in life—of scenes and events fast fading in the light of eternity. And yet the sublime faith which was the guiding star of his life—which enabled him to face and overcome dangers of extraordinary magnitude, which cheered him amid the solitudes of Africa, and gilded with hope all his self-denying efforts for the spiritual and temporal welfare of her people—this faith never forsook him, for when all else was fading from sense and sight, and even when walking through the valley and shadow of death, he could with the Christian's hope and the Christian's anticipation say—"I am going home."

Yes, verily, he who knew no home for so many years has at last found a better one than earth can supply. The brave and indomitable spirit which could not rest, but which sought to bring civilization and Christianity to the benighted tribes of Africa, has at last realized "the peace which passeth all understanding;" and all that remains of David Livingstone are now being carried to Britain to be deposited amid the tears and regrets of the nation in the great national pantheon, among the illustrious of all ages and in all walks of life. And who also better deserves the honor of being laid among the great and good of the mother land, or of having his name enshrined among the heroes of the Empire? His life from his earliest years was a heroic battle. Whether a factory boy at Blantyre, coning over his books while attending to his spindles; or as a student struggling with poverty and sacrificing all comfort in his intense desire to gain knowledge; or as a medical missionary in South Africa, patiently toiling for the spiritual and temporal good of the degraded natives; or as the fearless and indomitable traveller and explorer who for the sake of science and religion buried himself for years in the heart of Africa, and denied himself all the comforts and refinements of civilized life—in every stage of his career true heroism manifested itself. His patient endurance, his noble ambition, his Christian virtues, his fortitude, his intense love for science and desire to open up new fountains of knowledge, and above all his constant and ceaseless desire and efforts for the amelioration and elevation of the tribes among which he travelled, stamp him as a man whose like humanity rarely produces—a hero in the truest sense of the word—whose memory the world will not soon let die, and whose work will descend as a blessed heritage to generations yet unborn.

It is scarce two years since the great traveller was searched for and found by an adventurous American. The news was heard by every one as if he had heard of the safety of a long lost friend. And the fond anticipation was cherished by all in both hemispheres, that ere long he would return to his native land, full freighted with the spoils of his weary wanderings, to enrich our stores of knowledge, to unfold the geography of the vast interior of Africa, and to receive from a proud and grateful people all the honors which they could bestow on the illustrious explorer. But it was not to be. The Providence which watched over his eventful life, which guided him safely through so many dangers, decreed that he should die alone amid the scenes of his labors—that in a rude temporary hut, he, who was the superior of kings, should die unattended save by a few faithful Africans. It is not for us to question but to submit. The honors which would have been accorded him while living will be held in grateful remembrance, and we will often with mournful pride think and speak of David Livingstone, the last and greatest African traveller and devoted missionary, whose name will be enshrined among the illustrious African travellers who have gone before him, and whose deeds have shed renown on the name of Briton wherever it is known.

The temperance people in and out of Ottawa are rejoicing over the victory gained in the abolition of the restaurant connected with the House of Commons. It is worthy of note that most of the members who advocated its removal declared that they were not teetotalers.

The Hon. A. J. Smith, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, has left Ottawa for Washington to take part in the negotiations connected with the Fisheries and Reciprocal Trade between Canada and the United States.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL Clarke of Manitoba is lying seriously ill at the Russell House, Ottawa.

RE-DIVISION OF COUNTIES.—Among the bills which are to be introduced before the close of the session, one of great importance to Ontario will be brought forward for a re-division of those counties which were "gerrymandered" by the late Government in the interest of the Tory party. In the Bill it is expected that Wellington and Huron will be rectified, and Monck will not be forgotten, as it is thought better to have one bill embracing the whole work to be done, instead of legislating separately for each case where wrong has been inflicted. That wrong was inflicted on all these Counties very few Conservatives will now deny, and the sooner a fair and just re-division is made the better.

A young man named Pique has received at the hands of the Mayor of Dover, the Royal Humane Society's certificate, for having leaped from the height of forty feet into the sea, and saved the life of an artilleryman who had been blown off the Admiralty Pier, by the discharge of a gun.

There is a lady of Sagadahoc county, Maine, who has a head of remarkably fine hair. The average length is seven feet five inches. When unbraided and falling loose, it trails for quite a distance on the floor. She has refused a large offer for the hair, on which she naturally prides herself next to her head.

RESIGNATION OF MR. BRYDOES.—It is stated that Mr. Brydoes last week forwarded to England his resignation as Managing Director of the Grand Trunk Railway. He resigned about two years ago, but was at that time prevailed on to retain his office. He will continue to perform the duties of his position until his successor is appointed. It is generally understood that he has a much more lucrative position in view.

MANITOWA MOUNTED POLICE.—This force appears to have been looked upon very favourably by young men in all parts of the country, additions from various sections having been made daily since the announcement of its formation first appeared. 15 young men arrived from Kingston on Tuesday, and proceeded to the Old Fort to report to Col. French, who has charge of the force. The inducements held out are very good, and perhaps no better opening can be found at present for young men wishing for permanent employment with good prospects of advancement.

CHAPTER XXIV.

CAMERON AND IAN BEGAN TO FEEL UNASY—FLORA MACGREGOR AND ANNE M'LEOD PRISONERS AT DROGHDAIRCH—NEWS OF THE ASSASSINATION OF NED GORDON AND HIS SISTER JEANIE—"HECTOR MUST DIE!"

When they had got up to the top of Glen Dochart, and had turned to ride along by the side of Loch Rusk, Cameron and M'Kenzie seemed to throw off their fear to some extent, and talked freely to one another. But neither of them saw a swift-footed though stealthily-moving figure which followed close behind. Had they done so, their cheeks might well have blanched with terror.

Cameron and Ian had made up their minds to go to Mr. Fender's and have the ceremonies performed at once, so when they drew to the end of their journey and had reached Strathpeffer they gave Droghdaire a "wide berth," and rode direct to Dingwall. It was evident that the snowstorm had not raged in the eastern part of the country, for as they rode through the rolling hills around were dark and bare, while the hat-stands resounded beneath the horses' hoofs.

"Tell Mr. Fender that Droghdaire wishes to see him at once," exclaimed Cameron.

"Ye can't see him," was the answer. "We must—do you hear? The business is important. But there's no use saying any more; do as I tell you, girl; inform your master that Droghdaire desires to see him immediately."

"But he's not at home, sir." "Not at home!" "No; he went away last night."

"Curse that mischance," ejaculated Cameron, savagely, a troubled expression crossing his face. "Say, girl, where has he gone, and when do you expect him here?"

"He went to Inverness, sir, and I expect him home again this afternoon." Cameron turned to Ian as he muttered— "We'll have to brave it out, M'Kenzie."

Then, aloud to the girl—"Tell him to come to Droghdaire as fast as his feet can carry him whenever he comes home."

The girl promised that she would, and in order to help her memory, Cameron threw a piece of money to her as he turned to ride away.

In a few minutes after, they were again spurring through the town on their way westward to Droghdaire. It was not without considerable reluctance that Cameron had made up his mind to pass the time there until Fender should return, for he was well aware that it was far from safe for him to remain many days longer at Droghdaire, known, as he now was, to be the leader of the Catherans of Ben-a-Chruil.

It was from Captain Winton, however, that he anticipated danger chiefly, and, as he believed that the Captain with his men were still in Wester Ross, he did not expect any mishap from the delay of a single day. Besides the day's quiet would be of use. He and M'Kenzie had schemes to concoct and plans to arrange which could be better done in the privacy of Droghdaire than elsewhere.

He was clear-headed enough to see that, although both himself and M'Kenzie were wedded to the two women, a good deal still required to be done to place them in a favorable position.

Credit Valley Railway.

Two meetings were held in Puslinch on Tuesday evening, one in Killan in the afternoon, and one at Crif in the evening in the interest of the Credit Valley Railway Bill.

On Wednesday afternoon a meeting was held in the Balconch settlement, and another in the morning at Morrison and Galt. Mr. Boles tried to refute the statements made in the Mercury respecting Mr. Laidlaw's action on the Credit Valley Acts, but failed to give proof that the statements were other than true.

Mr. Alex. Smith and Mr. A. Melvin spoke in opposition to the Bill, and Mr. Wm. Leslie spoke shortly in its favour.

Mr. Lyons said that the bonus asked for Puslinch would only be at the rate of $13 for principal alone for every 100 acres taxed.

Mr. Smith called attention to the fact that it would cost nearly $40 per 100 acres for principal, even if the $10,000 was paid now in full.

Moorefield Correspondence.

Business here is very brisk at present, notwithstanding the unfavorable state of the roads. Mud, mud, mud, is all the cry.

Mr. David Watson, one of the firm, has had a long experience, having been in the employ of some of the best mills in the Dominion.

The members of St. John's (Episcopal) Church held a tea meeting here last week, in Mr. Bell's Hall, which, despite the bad state of the roads, was a complete success.

Mr. E. Dymcs occupied the evening, and withal, the most pleasant evening they had yet spent.

A committee composed of Dr. Maudsley, J. W. Ney, E. Dymcs and John Robinson, has been formed for the purpose of receiving subscriptions and tenders for the building of a new sidewalk from the telegraph office to the railway.

There is every prospect that the work will be completed by the 1st of June.

On Monday evening last Mr. Ryan, of Guelph, agent of the Ontario Temperance League, delivered a lecture in the Baptist Chapel here, at the close of which some thirty interested in the work enrolled their names, and a lodge will be organized in a few days.

The English and Canadian Directors of the G. W. R. passed over this part of the road yesterday afternoon, on a tour of inspection.

Mr. Pratt will be in Guelph soon, and will give lectures on educating the horse.

Mr. Pratt's lectures, and having seen the practical application of his system given by him every afternoon and evening, and believing it to be far the best ever seen in Canada, we deem it of the utmost importance that all persons owning, using, or interested in horses, should avail themselves of Prof. Pratt's knowledge on that subject.
