A DRINK OF GOLD WATER NEARLY CAUSED HIS DEATH

But Father Morrisey's Treatment Saved Francis Cassidy.

Here is his story:—
 Burden, York Co., N.B., Dec. 1, 1908.
 "At the age of 18, while having on a very hot day, I got thirsty and took a drink from a spring. I was taken suddenly ill, and consulted a skilful doctor, who treated me for indigestion for four months. But I grew worse, got so weak I could not walk, had no appetite, could not digest anything, and lost 10 pounds. I was almost dead, but as a last hope went to Father Morrisey. He gave me two months' treatment, and from the first day I began to recover. Now I am 21 years old and a very strong, healthy man. Only for the Rev. Father Morrisey, I would have been dead now."

FRANCIS CASSIDY.

Thousands of people have used Father Morrisey's "No. 11" Tablets for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Sick or Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Fullness or Weight in the Stomach, Belching of Wind and other Stomach Troubles, with most satisfactory results.

Get "No. 11" Tablet will digest 14 pounds of food, 50c. at your dealer's, or from Father Morrisey Medicine Co., Ltd., Chatham, N.B.

A CHANGE OF BAGGAGE

Butter cover it, Ezra," she said. "It scares me."

"Not yet," he answered. "I'm going to count it, and at the same time look for a clue to the owner." He stared at the money as if fascinated. He breathed hard. "There's a lot of solid enjoyment in that," he muttered.

"Ezra," said the girl sharply.

He started suddenly and began taking out the packages. Each was wrapped with a slip of letter paper, and $500 being written with a common lead pencil.

Ezra counted the packages aloud as she placed them on the floor.

Suddenly he stopped and held one up. A card had been slipped through the band that wrapped it.

Ezra pulled out the bit of paste-board and read the few penciled words on it aloud:—

"Be at Francis Garrison's office at 2 o'clock on Tuesday."

That was all.

Ezra turned the card over. It was blank on the other side.

"Francis Garrison is one of the leading lawyers of the city," said Ezra. "I have often heard his name."

"What is his reputation?"

"I fancy it must be very high."

The girl put her hand on Ezra's arm.

"You will see him tomorrow morning, Ezra."

"Yes," he said. "Francis Garrison may know nothing of the loss of this money, but he will advise me what to do."

The girl put her arm around his neck and kissed his cheek.

"Spoken like my Ezra," she murmured, and kissed him again.

The young man stooped and closed the bag.

"There," he said, "I'm glad the stuff is hidden from sight."

"And now," said the girl quickly. "I'll take charge of this. I think it will be safer with me. Besides I'm going to put a leather dressing on it that will restore the color and disguise it so that wicked eyes will never recognize it. Good night and pleasant dreams, Ezra dear—and come as early as you like in the morning."

Ezra Cranley gave his name to the trim young man at the door of Francis Garrison's office.

Presently he opened the door and Ezra picked up his bag and entered the inner room. He heard the click of a telephone receiver falling into its hook and the gray-haired man at the broad table near the window straightened up. There was another man in the room, a tall man, whose back was turned and who was staring down into the street through the most distant window.

The gray-haired man had Ezra's card in his hand.

"Sit down, Mr. Cranley," he said. "I am Mr. Garrison."

Ezra bowed as he took the nearest chair. The lawyer seemed waiting for him to speak.

"Mr. Garrison," he said, "I have come to you in the hope that you may know something about a large amount of money that was lost, or possibly stolen, yesterday. I think a slight word would help me to believe that the owner might be one of your clients."

Dainty Dishes and Home Hints

THE FLAVOR OF SALAD DRESSING
 Is greatly improved by the addition of finely chopped capers or pickles.

SALT FOR TABLE PURPOSES
 Will be improved by the addition of a very little arrowroot. This will prevent lumps.

DOOR HINGES AND LOCKS
 Should be looked to at this time of year. They should be well oiled, and then when the oil has had time to work in any superfluous grease should be wiped off carefully with a soft rag.

EMPRESS RICE
 Wash a cupful of best rice, and cook it slowly in milk till quite tender and the milk is absorbed; sweeten to taste, and flavor with vanilla. Melt three sheets of gelatin in a little milk, stir it into the rice, pour into a wet mould, and leave till cold. Serve with any kind of stewed fruit.

TEACH LEAVES
 Make a delicious flavoring for custards and milk puddings. Use 1 tbs. in summer when possible.

WHEN BAKING POTATOES
 In their "jackets," it is a good plan on taking them from the oven to make a small incision in each. The steam will then escape, and the potatoes be beautifully fluffy.

FOUR RULES FOR JAM-MAKING
 (1) Gather the fruit on a fine day
 (2) Boil it slowly before the sugar is put in, and fast afterwards. (3) Stir the jam carefully with a wooden spoon or stick. (4) Put it into perfectly clean dry spots, and cover while hot.

BEFORE TURNING OUT A PUDDING
 Let it stand for three minutes to allow the steam to escape.

STAINS ON FLANNELS
 May be removed by applying yolk of egg and glycerine in equal quantities. Leave it for half an hour and then wash out.

TO CLEAN A ZINC BATH
 Scour it well with fine coal ash moistened with kerosene, using a course cloth for the purpose. When perfectly clean, wipe out carefully, and rinse in hot soapy soda water. Buckets treated in this way will look like new.

RICE JELLY
 Is a useful summer dish for serving with stewed fruit. Wash a cupful of rice and soak in a cupful of water for two hours. Place it in a steamer with a quarter of water, and boil for three quarters of an hour, strain, sweeten, and flavor, and pour into a wet mould. When cold, turn out and serve.

WASH LISLE THREAD STOCKINGS
 In a light lather made with boiled soap. It should be only tepid when the stockings are put in, and if the water is well blueed they will keep their color well.

COFFEE BUNS
 Try this recipe: Mix three ounces of butter with three ounces of caster sugar, add a beaten egg, one teaspoonful of coffee essence. Stir the carbonate of soda into the flour, and beat both into the other ingredients. Beat well together, and bake in small buns tins in a quick oven.

Jack Robinson.

Few people who use the phrase are aware that "Jack Robinson" was a real person. As a politician John Robinson was a great favorite with George III. His political career was a long one, for he was a member for Harwich during twenty-six years, being on one occasion bitterly attacked by Sheridan, who, denouncing bribery and its instigators, replied to the cries of "Name, name," by pointing to Robinson on the Treasury Bench, exclaiming at the same time. "Yes, I could say Jack Robinson" and thus originated the saying still current.

Cost of Naval Supremacy

Eighteen miles of warships; that is what the Admiralty showed us last Saturday—three six mile lines of warships in the Solent. Never before has such a fleet been brought together. And yet we want more, and a lot more. Perhaps we may have to spend twenty millions a year on warships for some years. Naval supremacy cannot be won or held cheaply.—Clarion, London.

CANADA THE MODERN ELDORADO

The growing importance of Canada from a manufacturing point of view is attracting more and more attention throughout the British Isles, on the continent of Europe, and in the United States. Our increasing industrial interests, our immense and expanding wheat areas, our inexhaustible forests, our exhausting mines, our tremendous and unequalled water powers, together with our enviable financial position, are sufficient to make the outside world look upon Canada as the modern Eldorado. The trade in Canada is expanding beyond the fondest imagination. Our products are entering the foreign market in increasing quantity. We are inviting competition by our aggressiveness, but we are holding our own. In the markets of the Mother Country, Canadian produce, grains and manufactured articles find ready and profitable sale, while across the border and on the Continent of Europe we are building up a lucrative business. Reports tell of unprecedented trade inquiries from other nations, this being especially the case of French and German houses. Even far away South Africa wants to take more of our goods. The South American countries bid us come, as do the West Indies.—Montreal Witness.

HOLIDAYS

The boys and girls are free from their tasks for at least two months, and we can unite with them in the wish that all the good things planned may be fully realized. The children of the cities will go to the country where the time will be one long play day, and vacation will pass too soon. The village children have the benefits of country life at home, and as a rule their duties do not interfere with their hours of play.

Both classes have only to be congratulated that the early years of their lives hold so much that is bright and beautiful and enjoyable.

But in the city there is another class of school-children not so fortunate. The fields and the woods are not for them, and, unless assisted, their only play ground is the public street and square—unnatural and unwholesome place at all times for idle children. The cause of these countryless school children has not been lost sight of by those kind hearted and generous people of whom every Canadian city has so large a number. Playground associations have been formed, and in many city school grounds during vacation are thrown open to the children who cannot reach the country.

Another class of children of whom the holidays are apt to be less bright than they should be are the boys on the farms. For many of them the closing of school only means the opening of several months of drudgery, and often of toil beyond what their strength should bear. There is too much of a tendency to make the boy on the farm the little man of all work, leaving him no time for play, and no play makes Jack a dull boy the old adage says. No boy is the worse for some work during vacation, for certain responsibilities, for a reasonable round of duties to perform; but they should not extend from morning until night; they should not be so onerous as to leave no time when the boy can do those things that make a boy's life worth living.

Keeping the boys on the farms too busy is also wrong from an economic point of view. It tends to develop a distaste for farmwork and farm life. As they grow up the fields and the barns are associated in their minds with toil that wearied to excess, and at which their boys' minds rebelled. The result is that as soon as they can shift for themselves they make the mistake of deserting the farms and seeking livelihoods in interior occupations. Keep the boys on the farms, and when they grow up, the farms will not need farmers; but while they are boys, treat them as boys and not as men.

BY THE WAY

Who did it?
"Ideal husbands" and "ideal wives."
Children need models more than criticism.
The genuine hustler never complains of hard times.
The hot weather is all right, don't worry it will soon be over.
Never ask a newspaper to do anything you are ashamed to do yourself.
The person who has not made mistakes is an almost extinct species of humanity so, be charitable.

Election is on in St. John County. There will be tall weeds in the corn fields and few potatoes in the hills.

The city daily is all right, but the home paper is your neighbor, that sympathizes with you in your affliction.

The pride that is taken by the merchants of this town in the appearance of their stores, is commendable.

Why not erect the proposed peace monument on the historic spot, where the battle of Gilmor's green was fought?

Canada will continue to have her Cobalts, her Gowgandus and her Klondikes, but after all, the Canadian farm will always be the source of Canadian wealth. As a wealth-producer, Saskatchewan will, therefore, occupy a former place.

Beauty is a valuable asset to any town or city. Other things being equal a stranger will carry away from a city more favorable impressions of a beautiful city than of one which is not, and in some cases the beauty will be an offset to some disadvantages.—Stratford Beacon.

What is the mean average age at which our judges are appointed? Taking the existing occupants of the Supreme Court Bench it would seem to be about fifty-three, and no better period could be chosen. It is the age which marks the maturity of a man's mental powers, the age of ripe experience and still unflagging physical strength.—Law Journal London.

The public garden, on Murphy's Corner, gives great promise this season. The Canadian Cowslip and Camellia Japonica will be in bloom in a few days. We understand that the beautiful "Fench me not" has been sold to a representative of Burdock Blood Bitters. "Fair Daffodils, we weep to see you haste away so soon. Flowers have a language of their own, and this bright particular language can be found here in "perfumed" words.

The Boy Who Didn't Pass

A sad-faced little fellow sits alone in deep disgrace. There's a lump arising in his throat, tears streaming down his face; He wandered from his playmates, for he doesn't want to hear Their shouts of merry laughter, since the world has lost his cheer; He has sipped the cup of sorrow, he has drained the bitter glass, And his heart is fairly breaking; he's the boy who didn't pass.

In the apple tree the robin sings a cheery little song, But he doesn't seem to hear it, showing plainly something's wrong; Comes his faithful little spaniel for a romp and bit of play, But the troubled little fellow sternly bids him go away.

All alone he sits in sorrow, with his hair a tangled mass, And his eyes are red with weeping, he's the boy who didn't pass. How he hates himself for failing, he can hear his playmates jeer, For they've left him with the dullards—gone ahead a half a year; And he tried so hard to conquer, oh, he tried to do his best, But now he knows he's weaker, yes, and duller than the rest.

He's ashamed to tell his mother, for he thinks she'll hate him, too—The little boy who didn't pass, who failed of getting through. Oh, you who boast a laughing son, and speak of him as bright, And you who love a little girl who comes to you at night With smiling eyes and dancing feet, with honors from her school, Turn to this lonely little boy who thinks he is a fool, And take him kindly by the hand, the dullest in his class, He is the one who most needs love the boy who didn't pass.

About Prominent People
WHAT IMPRESSED HIM MOST
William Jennings Bryan has a habit when speaking of addressing his arguments to some one man in his audience. In this way, he claims, he can concentrate his thoughts much better. Once during a campaign he addressed himself particularly to an old farmer, who, he observed, followed all he said with marked attention. Bryan was much pleased. After the speech was over the candidate sought out that old farmer. "What was it that struck you most particularly about my speaking?" he asked. "Well," said the farmer, and paused, seemingly embarrassed. But Bryan urged him to explain, so at last he cleared his throat and remarked—"Mr. Bryan, you're the only speaker I ever heard whose whole set of back teeth I could see while he was speakin."

THE KINGLY ALFONSO
King Alfonso, who is fond of mingling with his people, some time back visited a small town outside Madrid, and, somewhat disguised, joined the crowd which thronged the street in order to catch a glimpse of himself. Suddenly word passed that the king was coming. A shrill female voice at his back exclaimed. "Let me get in front, will you? I've walked all the way and spoiled my new black dress. Get out of my way; I will see what the King is like." Turning round with a smile to the pushing, perspiring dame. His Majesty whispered—"Here is the King." The woman looked at him scornfully. "King, indeed!" she exclaimed. "You're more like somebody who has come to blow the poor boy up."

A GIANTIC FAMILY
The Queen of Denmark once paid a visit to the Danish colony of Iceland, where the good old bishop exerted himself to the utmost to show her everything that was worth seeing. The Queen paid many compliments to her host, and, having learned that he was a family man, graciously enquired how many children he had. It happens that the Danish word for "children" is almost identical in sound with the Icelandic word for "sheep," and the worthy bishop promptly answered. "Two hundred." "Two hundred children?" cried the Queen. "How can you possibly maintain such a number?" "Easily enough, please your Majesty," replied the prelate, with a cheerful smile. In the summer I turn them out upon the hills to grass, and when winter comes I kill and eat them!"

ON THE ROYAL MENU
Sir Harry Johnston once had the grim experience of being captured by a cannibal, who genially informed him that he was to form the "piece de resistance" of the royal menu that evening. "Eat me if you like," was

Sir Harry's calm reply. "but if you do the Great White Mother will send her soldiers, and you and your wives and your people will all be killed." This made the king waver, and after a consultation with his court he decided to forgo the meal. But it was not enough for the captive. "You must send me down the river in your best badge," he announced. "I'll my white brothers meet me." And so great an impression had his sang-froid created that this was no sooner said than it was done.

DELATED TOO LONG.
Mark Twain makes an appeal against long sermons thus: "Some years ago in Hartford we all went to church on a hot, sweltering night to hear the annual report of Mr. Hawley a city missionary, who went around finding the people who needed help and didn't want to ask for it. He told of the life in the cellars where poverty resided; he gave instances of the heroism and devotion of the poor. The poor are always good to each other. When a man with millions gives, we make a great deal of noise. Its noise in the wrong place. For its the widow's mite that counts. Well, Hawley worked me up to a great state; I couldn't wait for him to get through. I had $400 in my pocket. I wanted to give that and borrow more to give. But he didn't pass the plate, and it grew hotter and we grew sleepier. My enthusiasm went down, down $100 at a time, till finally, when the plate came round, I stole ten cents off of it. So you see a neglect like this may lead to crime.

The Visit of Lord Berosford.
Lord Charles Berosford can be sure of a rousing reception in this country. He is chief of a type fast disappearing—the rugged sailor, the old salt, the bluff sea dog, whom we all loved in the days of Captain Marryat.
None of your diplomatic concealments for him. He spoke his mind, whether on deck or in the House of Commons. The sailor is not an orator. He has, or had, a fine contempt for the merely talking person, as Carlyle had a fine contempt for the House of Commons, "buzzing and talking creatures, duller than dishwasher." He was retired; but, in an emergency, his services could be depended on. He was too big and hearty to play the courtier, and he delighted to give the Lords of the admiralty a bad half hour now and then. In Parliament he had the command of oratory which the timid speaker can offer at a moment's notice; but he on more than one notable occasion, made such a case for improvement and enlargement of the navy as compelled a reluctant government to act.

We miss the hitch in the trouser, the quid in the cheek the "shiver my timbers" of the old sea dog, who, in a rather practical manner, conquered a world-empire for Britain; but the country will be pleased to welcome one who never knew fear, who won the love of his men, and who during the course of his long service, did much to improve the efficiency and the strength of the power upon which the continuance of the British Empire depends.
Catarrah Cured or Money Back
The cause of Catarrah is a germ. It multiplies in the lining of the nose and throat, spreads to the bronchial tubes and finally reaches the lungs. Cough syrup can't follow to the lungs—it goes to the stomach—and fails to cure—Catarrah is inhaled. It goes everywhere—gets right after the germ—kills them—cures every trace of Catarrah. You're absolutely certain of cure for Catarrah, throat irritation, colds or bronchitis, if you use Catarrhoone. 25c. and $1.00 sizes sold every where.

Marriage A La Mode.
Los Angeles County, in California, has established a divorce record for the first five months of 1909. The figures indicate that one divorce has been granted since January 1 for every four marriages celebrated. This is an increase, says the Telegraph, over the ratio of 1908, when it was one to six, in San Francisco one to seven and in the whole of the United States one to twelve. Four hundred and sixty interdictory and 202 final decrees have been granted at Los Angeles in five months of the present year.

The Story of a Cruelly Wronged Man; An Echo of the Upper Canadian Rising

There is always a tendency at a national capital for the accumulation of objects of interest, and often of historical worth, to outgrow the space in which to properly display them, and sometimes even that necessary to house and preserve them. Ours is not an old country, and its capital is much younger, and yet there has already been brought together at Ottawa many things associated with our history, that recall stirring times and men who played conspicuous parts in the public affairs of their times. Among these objects are portraits of the men who have been, whose names are found on the pages of our history, and who had some hand in the making of the public life of Canada. When the new wing of the House of Commons was completed last autumn space was found in the dining rooms of the top story for hanging a number of these portraits which had never been given a proper hanging before, and several of which had been stored away in attics. They are the portraits of men long since dead, and in most cases forgotten, and yet associated with many are stories worth repeating.

MARSHALL SPRING BIDWELL

On the heavy gilt frame is this name, "Marshall Spring Bidwell." It is the portrait of a man once as prominent in the legal profession at Toronto as Blake or McCarthy were in later years; an active in politics and as zealous a Reformer as was his contemporary, Robert Baldwin, and though innocent of armed rebellion and treason, one of the most cruelly wronged men among the many victims of the upper Canadian uprising. There are many black marks against the name of Sir Francis Head, Lieutenant-Governor of Upper-Canada during rebellion times—black marks of tyranny, cruelty, insipidity and bad faith; but perhaps of all his acts none put him in a worse light than the smallness of his mind and the trickery of which he was capable that does his treatment of Marshall Spring Bidwell.

The electors of Upper Canada returned a majority of Reformers to the Legislature in 1829, and among them was Wm. Lyon Mackenzie, who then entered public life and began his long and exceedingly checked career. When the House met, it elected Bidwell Speaker, and he was re-elected in 1835. It was as speaker wearing the robe of office that he was painted the portrait now hanging in the parliamentary dining-room at Ottawa. No sooner had Sir Francis Head arrived at Toronto in 1836 than he quarrelled with the House and dissolved it. Among the defeated Reformed candidates were Mackenzie and Bidwell. The former continued to agitate and in the following year was leading an armed rebellion; the latter continued his law practice in Toronto, always true to the principles of the Reform party, always ready to give it the benefit of his deep knowledge, but always keeping well within constitutional limits and never compromising himself with actions that were treasonable. The Colonel Office had heard of Bidwell and of his ability, and had instructed Sir Francis Head to appoint him to the bench whenever a vacancy occurred, but this instruction Head determined not to carry out, for he had no sooner met the clever Reform lawyer than he took a strong dislike to him, so strong that a few months later, as soon as opportunity offered, he did all in his power to ruin Bidwell, and practically drove him from Canada.

THE UPRISING OF 1837

During the long, and for the most part bitter, political conflict that preceded the uprising of 1837 Bidwell took a useful and conspicuous part. He was the avowed enemy of rule by a little oligarchy of selfish men, for that was in short what rule, by the family Compact under Sir Francis Head amounted to, and whether or not he had lost hope of bringing about a reform and securing a responsible government by peaceful, constitutional means, it is certain that he never aided or abetted the armed uprising that Mackenzie stirred up during the first week of December, 1837. Bidwell had very little hope of the success of the enterprise, but had succeeded, and had a reformed government been established through such means it is likely he would have accepted office in it. And such a government would have required the co-operation of the great Reform lawyer of the day.

When Mackenzie's companies of farmers drawn mostly from the northern part of York County, appeared before Toronto, Head, in order to gain time, so as to permit the militia of the Hamilton district to come over before there was any clash with the rebels, had a flag of truce sent over to Mackenzie and Lount, the pretext of the mission being to prevent the effusion of blood. Thinking, of course, that Head was acting in good faith, Robert Baldwin the great reformer consented to go on the mission, but not alone. Bidwell was then asked to be the second man. He declined to have anything to do with the embassy, and finally the second place was filled by Dr. Ralph who did not dare decline, fearing that such a course would direct suspicion to him, which would be dangerous, for he was co-operating with Mackenzie, and so liable to arrest for treason.

MACKENZIE'S PORCH DEPARTURE

Bidwell remained at home. Two days later the skirmish took place at Montgomery's tavern, when Mackenzie's defeated and dispersed. Before the tavern was burned by Head's order, in one of the rooms was found a large carpet-bag containing Mackenzie's papers, among them being the "rolls" bearing the names and addresses of almost every insurgent of the Province. The Gov. found these papers of great service in the prosecutions for treason which soon filled the courts. That Mackenzie should have these papers where they could so easily fall into the hands of Head "was little less culpable than a wilful betrayal of his adherents."

Another article of booty found on the premises was a flag on which was inscribed these words: "Bidwell and the glorious minority, 1837, and a good beginning." The Tories tried to make much of this discovery, hoping, no doubt that it would connect one of the ablest of their political opponents with the uprising. However, they were disappointed, for the rather suspicious banner, was easily accounted for. It was simply a company's banner used in election contest five years before. The rebels had pressed it into their service, and the figure 7 was substituted for the figure 2. The discovery of this flag seemed a trifling matter, and yet it contributed to the ruin of Bidwell's career in Canada, which was now within a few days of its close.

Sir Francis had not carried out the instructions of the Colonial Office, respecting the appointing Bidwell to the bench. Justification must be found, and the best, he thought, would be to show that Bidwell was unworthy of the advancement. There existed to ground on which to base a charge of treason and yet the possibilities of such a charge being laid were used to frighten Bidwell and cause him to leave Canada forever. Sir Francis was ably assisted by the Attorney-General, Hagerman, who knew that Bidwell's presence in the country must operate as a bar to his own elevation to the Bench.

On the morning after the defeat of the rebels at Montgomery's tavern Bidwell was informed that his letters at the Post Office had been confiscated. In a state of great agitation he called at Government House. Sir Francis handed over the letters unopened. Bidwell offered to open them there, but Sir Francis refused to test Bidwell's loyalty by any such means. However, the Lieutenant-Governor did not hesitate to work on the man's fears, telling them that martial law was about to be proclaimed, and that he could not hope to escape arrest. Bidwell was a man of poor health, and his stock of physical courage was not great, and further at that time he did not know that Sir Francis had been instructed to make him a judge. Alarmed he readily played into the hands of the unscrupulous Lieutenant-Governor. He set out at once for Niagara, and crossed over to the State of New York.

ADMITTED TO BAR OF NEW YORK.

Shortly after he was admitted to the Bar of New York City he began the practice of the legal profession. Competition there he found much keener than he had ever experienced in Toronto, but gradually he made his presence felt. The case that first brought him into prominence was that of James Fenimore Cooper, the matchless writer of historical Indian novels, against W. L. Stone, editor of the Commercial Advertiser, for libel arising out of a review by Stone of Cooper's "History of the United States Navy." Bidwell appeared for the defendant, and the manner in which he conducted the case established his reputation at the New York Bar. For more than a quarter of a century his career in the land of his exile was one of uninterrupted success.

In the following year Sir Francis passed through to New York on his way home to England. Bidwell called upon him at the old City Hotel, and in the course of their conversation Sir Francis admitted that he had refused to appoint Bidwell to the Bench, and the latter frankly stated that he considered his practical banishment arbitrary, unjust and cruel. Bidwell then left the room without leave of Sir Francis. The two never met again.

Mrs. Sir JOHN A.

When the Reform party came into power under the leadership of Baldwin Lafontaine Bidwell's friends urged him to return to Canada. It was suggested that he be made a judge, but as at that time there was no vacancy on the Bench nothing came of it. In later years Mr. Bidwell was solicited to return by Sir John Macdonald, who met the exile in New York. However, Bidwell never came back. He lived out his life in New York, where he was held in high respect (dying there on October 24th 1872).

Such was the remarkable story of that early Speaker of the Assembly of Upper Canada, whose portrait now has a place on the walls of our House of Parliament.

Nothing in the way of a cough is quite so annoying as a tickling, teasing, wheezing, bronchial cough. The quickest relief comes perhaps from a prescription known to Druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. And besides, it is so thoroughly harmless that mothers give it with perfect safety even to the youngest babies. The tender leaves of a simple mountain shrub, give to Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy its remarkable curative effect. It is truly a most certain and trustworthy prescription. Sold by All Dealers.

The Awakening of England

The fear of the future is not that Britain will not win if she prepares, but that the time to prepare will be denied. When England is roused she is safe, but the rousing may come too late. When England is roused, her position for offensive war is so supreme she may count on winning. Not so with defensive war. Her position is dangerously weak when attacked and forced to the defensive. The conclusion is therefore that when she has shaken herself free from slumber by strengthening her navy, by exchanging shams for realities in her army and her schools, by purging her religion of folly and unpariticism and by accepting the European situation in its naked reality, she should then invite Germany to explain why she builds thirty-three Dreadnoughts without coal capacity, and why she borrows money to build them. Whatever the answer, those German Dreadnoughts should never be completed. If the British system is a worthier and a higher ideal than the Jack Boot policy of Germany, then it is contrary to reason and to sense that Britain, naked and untrussed, should leave her rival free to pick the moment for attack. Moral sanction for taking the initiative belongs to England. Germany is now the master of the Continent of Europe. Heaven has never yet allowed any nation to be master of the world by land and sea. England from the earliest times was the nation told off to vanquish and overcome the would-be master of Europe. To shirk the new contest is to perish. Humbly, and as one people to accept our burden, and to bare it as those here it who made the Empire, is the way of life. Our fate is settled, not in the north Sea or German Docks, but in the hearts of the British people.—Arnold White.

A tickling or dry cough can be quickly loosened with Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. No opium, no chloroform, nothing unsafe or harsh. Sold by All Dealers.

Twenty-Nine!

If a man is going to commit a crime during his life time, the chances are that he will do it at the age of twenty-nine. It is a remarkable fact that statistics have shown that man is more dangerous at this period of his life than at any other. Next to the age of twenty-nine, the greatest number of criminals have been aged twenty-one, twenty-even or forty-five. The intervening years, in which men do not commit as many crimes, have not been explained by expert criminologists who have made investigations proving the above statement to be true.
