DEVELOPMENTS EXPECTED

All Eyes Turn to Western
Section of Battle
Line.

WILL RIGHT GIVE WAY?

If It Does Enemy's Whole Front Will Be in Danger.

[Canadian Press.]
London, Sept. 22.—1:20 p.m.—All eyes are now fixed on the western section of the great battle line in France, where the allied army is expected to descend on the German right, which already is bending backwards under persistent pressure from the British and French armies, to the northward of the River Aisne. If these German positions were once carried, strategists here are of the opinion that the whole German front will be in danger. Meanwhile, however,
"a perceptible progress" is all the light
the official chronicle permits himself to throw on the great siege of the fortified positions which now has lasted ten days.

Reproduction of Marne.
Thus far the battle of the Aisne reproduces on a larger scale the chief features of the struggle on the Marne, but whether in the final outcome the victory will rest with the same side is likely to remain a secret for a few days now.

Ten days of the most furiously contested struggle known in modern history has left both armies in such a position that neither can claim a definite advantage over the other, and the result must largely be dependent upon what reinforcing the opposing commanders are able to control.

Allies Gaining.
On the River Aisne, as on the River Marne, the Germans are thrusting persistently at the allied centre, while the French and British troops are pursuing their favorite movement of working round the German flank. Day by day
the allied line, though stationary in the centre, was, according to official statements, gaining a little ground on both wings.

If the report that General Von Kluck has moved his headquarters back to Mons be true, it will be of the greatest significance as showing his recognition of the danger which might threaten him
from an army marching from the west.
The third great battle between the Russians and Austrians in Galicia, which started with a bombardment of Przemysl, in which 2,000,000 men are said to be engaged, is expected to be in full swing within a few hours, when the whole line along the new positions occupied by the Austrians between Przemysl and Cracow will be involved.

ENEMY ATTACKED BY FRESH FORCES

Extreme Right of the German Army Encounters More Troubles—British Are Near Soissons.

[Canadian Press.]
London, Sept. 22.—4:35 a.m.—The Times military expert says that the line of the allies now extends on the east from a point near St. Die, through Lunéville, Pont-a-Mousson, Etain, Con-
sevoye, Montfaucon, Souain, Rheims, Crécy, Lorraine, Lassigny and Reims
to Leclercq.
"The news of the day," this expert says, "is the appearance of fresh forces around Craonne, 17 miles northwest of St. Quentin, attacking the German extreme right at St. Quentin.
"The British army is near Soissons.
On its left are French troops who probably reach through to Lassigny toward Ham, twelve miles southwest of St.
Quentin, and are endeavoring to close in upon La Fère, 14 miles northwest of Laon."

CAPE TOWN, Sept. 21.—A

to the naked eye.
It is near the star Achernar.

CANNOT SEE HOW KAISER CAN WIN IN PRESENT WAR

Miss Florence Egglestone, Who Was in Very Heart of German Empire, Declares That Terrible Losses of German Troops Preclude Chance of Victory.

After more than a month's practical incarceration in the very heart of the German Empire, Miss Florence Egglestone, 262 Hamilton road, the talented London violinist, returned home today,
after having passed through many harrowing experiences. Her terse summing up of the present war situation is that she does not see how Germany can possibly hold out against the allies.

Since the declaration of hostilities the gravest fears have been entertained for Miss Egglestone's safety. For a month after war broke out her parents were without a single line as to her whereabouts, and a letter, posted through the kindness of American friends who went from Berlin to Holland and thence to England, was the first intimation they had of her safety.

Mother's Joy.
As she stepped from her train at the Grand Trunk depot this morning, Mrs.
Egglestone cried to her daughter: "We didn't know if we were going to see you again!"

The expression was but indicative of the suspense in which the London girl's family and friends have been since the war clouds suddenly darkened and plunged Europe into war.

Rumors of cruelty to foreigners in Berlin, especially British, added fear
to the suspense, but Miss Egglestone escaped remarkably well.

Sets Ambush.
Much of the comfort, courtesy and security afforded her in Berlin came from the protecting arms of her music teacher, Professor Theodore Spierling.

Her home was her home, and by not betraying her unfamiliarity with the language, she was able to go about the streets and see the Russian embassy wrecked by mobs, goaded into madness
by their hatred for the Czar. She confirmed the stories that women act as conductors on the street cars, owing to the scarcity of men, and that other British women, not so fortunate in their friendships as she was, were treated harshly, some being turned out of houses into the streets.

English Passport Valueless.
When war first became a reality she procured an English passport, but this availed her nothing. As the days passed, and the real terrors of war came home to the German people, Professor Spierling and his family decided to come to New York and open up a music studio. For five weeks Professor Spierling pulled the military wires, finally securing passports for Miss Egglestone and his family. Miss Egglestone's pasport, signed by the commander, who is next in authority to the Kaiser, was issued on condition that Professor Spierling be responsible for her acts outside of Germany. With these papers and after undergoing a rigorous examination on the Holland frontier, she was able to leave Germany two weeks ago.

Must Pose As Americans.
The party travelled with 250 Americans and Miss Egglestone was the only Britisher in the party.

"It is impossible for a British subject to leave Germany without posing as an American citizen," said Miss Egglestone, "and I called for my passport from the steamer Nieuw Amsterdam, and as we got away from the coast a British cruiser sailed around us three times,
and did not allow us to proceed until
the captain had ordered down the wireless on the boat. I left Professor Spierling and his family in New York, where he is to teach. I may resume my studies with him later. The Germans treated me very courteously, but without the assistance rendered by Professor Spierling I probably would not have been able to leave the country."

Saw Many Wounded.
"In Berlin, and in fact all through Germany, the reports of the war are

ENEMY OBLIGED TO CEDE GROUND TO THE FRENCH
Allies Repulsed Violent Attacks Made on Heights of Meuse, and Captured Many Prisoners and Automobiles—Germans Reoccupy Donestee.

[Canadian Press.]
Paris, Sept. 22.—3:05 p.m.—The following official announcement was made in Paris today: "Along the entire front, from the Oise to the Woivre, the Germans manifested yesterday, September 21, a certain activity, without however, obtaining appreciable results."
First: On our left wing, on the right bank of the River Oise, the Germans were obliged to cede ground before the French attacks. Between the Oise and the Aisne the situation remains unchanged. The enemy has not delivered any serious attack, contenting himself yesterday, Monday evening, with a continual cannonading.

Always Repulsed.
"Second: On the centre, between Rheims and Souain, the enemy attempted an offensive movement, which was repulsed, while between Souain and the Argonne we have made some progress."
"Between the Argonne and the River Meuse there has been no change."
"In the Woivre district, the enemy made a violent effort; he attacked the heights of the Meuse along the front between Trevaux, Vigneulles and Houdicourt, without, however, succeeding in gaining position on these heights."
"On our right wing, in Lorraine, the enemy has again passed the frontier, using in this operation a number of small columns, Donestee, to the south of Blamont, has been reoccupied by the enemy."

Took Autos and Provisions.
"During the days of September 20 and 21 we captured 29 automobiles used in moving provisions, together with all the men attached to them. We also captured on these days numerous prisoners belonging principally to the 60th, 63th, 70th, 80th, 140th, 150th, and 160th regiments of German corps; to the Bavarian Landwehr and to the reserve corps."
"Concerning the Russians in Galicia, the rear guards of the Austrian armies have been pursued by the Russians, and have suffered considerable losses. Russian troops have come in contact with the Austrian garrison near Przemyel. The heavy Russian artillery is bombarding the fortifications of Jaroslavl."

Austrians and Germans Have Each Lost One Million—The Brutality of Kaiser's Men Equalled By Their Ally
—Cossacks Are Tortured.

[Canadian Press.]
New York, Sept. 22.—A Petrograd
cable to the Tribune says: "Specialists
here estimate that the extreme limits of Austro-German resources in men for this war do not exceed 6,000,000, about two-thirds being German and the other third Austrians."
The Germans have lost in France,
Belgium and East Prussia, together with their last losses in concert with Austria in Galicia, no fewer than 1,000,- 000 men. The Austrians in their conflict with Russia and Serbia have likewise
lost another 1,000,000 men in killed, wounded and prisoners, the latter being particularly numerous, owing to the readiness of the Slav elements—about half of the total Austrian armies—to surrender to their fellow Slavs.

Leaves 4,000,000.
This leaves the Teutonic belligerents with four millions, to some extent made up of last-line resources—men and men over 60 years of age. Of these 1,000,000 are in army against the French and British, and another quarter to half a million on lines of communication through Belgium and occupying territories. The total, therefore, available now for taking up positions against Russia

does not exceed from two and one-half
to two and three-quarters millions.
German armies in the field doubtless suffer from the lack of food, but the populace is already feeling the squeeze, as is proved by rumors restricting the killing of cattle. The orders issued forbid killing young calves
it is in this vital work of starving Germany that the British fleet is accomplishing more far-reaching results than even the victorious armies.

Austrians' Brutality.
The Austrians are apparently showing as little mercy to the wounded as the Germans are said to be doing. An officer who has returned from a Galician battlefield says he saw numberless instances of brutality. German and Austrian officers, with their orderlies, went around this field, strewn with dead and dying. Their salutation to any dubious case was a kick in the ribs, with the order "Aufstehen!" If any signs of life were shown, the helpless sufferer was finished off by an officer's revolver or with the men's gun butts.

The fate of a Cossack who is taken alive is one to be dreaded. It is asserted that the Cossacks have inspired such fear in the enemy that when one is captured torture is resorted to before death is inflicted.

OFFICERS TO BE TRAINED IN OLD ENGLAND

Whole Camp To Be Transferred Is Ministers' Latest Scheme.

Officers Are Very Keen
Often More Zeal Than Military
Skill, Says Colonel
Hughes.

Privates Are All Fit
Plan Solves Some Difficulties,
But Entails Considerably
More Expense.

[Special to The Advertiser.]
Ottawa, Sept. 22.—Valcartier camp will be transferred to England. This is the political solution of the military difficulties which have developed in Canada's great military rendezvous on the outskirts of Quebec. The visit of Premier Borden, Sir Robert Rogers and Hon. Geo. Foster to Valcartier has resulted in this compromise.

It had been planned to send forward
only an army division of twenty-one thousand men. So great was the response that thirty-five thousand men and officers were assembled at Val-cartier in record time.

There was an unusual rush of officers to the place, and all ranks desired to go to the front on the first transport squadron.

Officers Keen.
Among the numerous gathering of colonels and majors this desire was particularly keen, and all sorts of influences were brought to bear upon Col.
Hughes and others members of the Government to obtain commissions in the first division. Col. Hughes has stated that a good many of the officers who sought places had more zeal and patriotism than military skill and experience, and that there would be a good many of the officers at Valcartier left at home. To facilitate the work of selection, Col. Hughes set the men shooting at the three and a half miles of targets he had provided there, with the idea of improving the shooting of the force and determining which of the men were most skillful with the rifle.

Test for Officers.
The test for the officers was to observe the handling of men. Military ability was to be the standard for selection of officers.

This plan of Col. Hughes of eliminating the basis of capacity promised to give excellent military results, though it produced some personal unhappiness
among the officers and gave rise to

GERMANS SHOWING LACK OF CONFIDENCE IN FINAL ISSUE

Working Fervently On Fortifications On Sambre and Across
Own Frontier—The Destruction of Rheims Only Increases French Determination.

[Canadian Press.]
Paris, Sept. 22.—6:50 a.m.—The battle of Charleroi lasted three days and the battle of the Marne covered six days,
though the retirement of the Germans commenced on the third day. Today is the seventh day of the battle of the Aisne, the most violent of the three,
but the limit of human endurance seems to have been reached as the intensity of the struggle has diminished in front of Rheims and the Argonne.

At Craonne, after a brief lull, the fighting has become fiercer again and the losses of the Germans were increased. Here alone, of the whole line, hand to hand fighting occurred yesterday. Everywhere else the invaders left the attack to the "Bummers," as they call the immense mortars which did so much damage to the cathedral of Rheims.

Only An Incentive.

German Submarine or Submarines Struck
With Terrible Result In North Sea Attack
---H. M. S. Lowestoft, Destroyers and Trawlers Are Able To Save Many.

[Canadian Press.]
London, Sept. 22.—4:30 p.m.—The British warships
Aboukir, Hogue and Cressy have been sunk in the North Sea by submarines, according to an announcement given out by the official bureau this afternoon.

Continuing, the announcement says that a considerable number of the crews of these vessels were saved by H.
M. S. Lowestoft, and by a division of torpedo boat destroyers. Trawlers and their boats also aided in the work of rescue.

The Aboukir was torpedoed first. The Hogue and the Cressy drew in close to her, and were standing by to save her crew when they also were torpedoed.

LOST SHIPS ALMOST OBSOLETE.
The Cressy, Captain Robert W. Johnson; the Aboukir, Captain John E. Drummond, and the Hogue, Captain Will-mot S. Nicholson, were sister ships. They were armored cruisers of a comparatively obsolete type, and were built fourteen years ago.

The lists of the casualties among their crews will be published as soon as they are known.

ALL SHIPS OF SAME TYPE.
The warships Aboukir, Hogue and Cressy are cruisers of the same type. Their tonnage, armament, etc., are identical.
These vessels had a displacement of 12,000 tons, were 440 feet long, 69.5 feet wide, and drew 26 feet of water. Each one had a complement of 755 men, including officers and crew.

These three cruisers had armaments consisting of two 9.2-inch guns, twelve 6-inch guns, twelve 12 pounders, and five 3-pounders. The Aboukir and the Cressy were built at Govan in 1900, and the Hogue was built at Barrow in the same year.

PRICE OF VICTORY MAY BE SHOCKING

[Canadian Press.]
London, Sept. 22.—The Daily News
publishes the following dispatch from a correspondent at some point south of Vie-sur-Aisne, France: "All day I have been travelling a little to the south of the British and French line, between Soissons and Vie-sur-Aisne, and without cessation the air has been shuddering with the bombardment going on in the north. The guns have never ceased.
When I left at dusk the deep artillery thunder was rumbling still. What progress the allies have made today I cannot say, but I do know that we are pressing against the enemy with still more men and heavier guns."

"All day long reinforcements have been pouring northward. Columns and columns of artillery and munitions have gone along. Some of the French guns are of such formidable type that it is easy to imagine what must be paid whenever they speak."

"I fear that, when the cost of the victory on this new front is known, it may shock those who at present hardly realize what kind of a war this is, into dim understanding of it. The vitality of the best of Europe's manpower is draining away rapidly enough to make a whole country one red morass."

French Bull Kills 18 German Soldiers

Enraged By Cannon Roar He Charged
The Forces.

[Canadian Press.]
Paris, Sept. 22.—1:10 a.m.—The Petit Parisien prints a story of a bull, which it says killed 18 Germans. It appears that when the peasants in the neighborhood of Segny were warned of the approach of the Germans, they opened the gates of the cattle pens and endeavored to drive the cattle to a place of safety. One enormous bull, it is said, becoming enraged by the sound of the cannon fire, broke away and charged the Germans, who looked on in stupe-
faction, believing it was some trick of the French. At the first dash the bull gored six, throwing them high in the air, others shot and wounded the animal, which, however, gored a dozen more before succumbing.

[Canadian Press.]
London, Sept. 22.—1:25 a.m.—An official list has been issued by the admiralty of the casualties on the German merchant steamer off the South American coast. It shows that nine men were killed and five seriously wounded. No officers' names appear among the dead or seriously wounded.

EIGHT HUNDRED OFFICERS LOST BY THE BRITISH

Hundred and Thirty of Them Are Known to Have Been Killed.

PERCENTAGE VERY HIGH

Coldstream Guards is Highest With Thirty-One Casualties.

[Canadian Press.]

LONDON, Sept. 21.—The part that British officers are playing in the war is illustrated by the bare testimony of the casualty lists. Seven hundred and ninety-seven officers are among the killed, wounded and missing, which is a percentage out of all proportion to the losses in the ranks. One hundred and thirty officers have been killed, 288 have been wounded and 278 are missing. Many of the missing probably must later be recorded as killed or wounded.

The Coldstream Guards Regiment holds the place of honor with 31 casualties among its officers' corps.

The King's Royal Rifles and the Suffolk Regiment have each had 25 officers killed or wounded.

Highlanders 23, the Munster Fusiliers 21, Cameron Highlanders and Cheshire Regiment, each 19.

The field artillery has lost 56 and the medical corps 52 officers.

Listed by ranks, the names of colonels and lieutenant-colonels number 32, majors 55 and captains 246.

The homes of many of the best-known families in the kingdom are in mourning. Lieut. Wyndham, of the Coldstream Guards, killed in action, was the only son of the late Right Hon. George Wyndham, at one time chief secretary for Ireland.

Lieut. Lockwood, of the same regiment, was the nephew and heir of Lieut.-Col. the Right Hon. A. R. M. Lockwood, one of the most popular members of the House of Commons.

Saturday's list announced the death of Lord Guernsey, the heir of the Earl of Aylesford, and Lord Arthur Vincent Hay, heir of the Marquis Tweeddale.

Lying in German Hospitals.

The official bureau issued the following announcement today:

"It may be of some interest and comfort to the relatives of the officers whose names appear as missing or wounded and missing, in the casualty lists issued by the War Office after the termination of the retreat from Mons, to know that letters have been arriving in London from German hospitals, in which some of them are found to be lying."

Several of them appear to be at Paderborn, Westphalia.

A letter from the chief surgeon of the hospital there to the wife of a wounded officer is given. It says:

"Dear Madam—Your husband is staying in the hospital at Paderborn. He feels well and his wound is getting on well. As he is a prisoner he is not allowed to write himself."

DISABLED CRUISER HAS BEEN BEACHED

GIBRALTAR (Via London), Sept. 21.—7:55 p.m.—It is officially announced from Gibraltar that the British cruiser Pegasus, which was recently attacked and disabled by the German cruiser Koenigsberg, has been beached.

TRENCHES WON BY GREAT SACRIFICE

Paid Dearly—Land Stubbornly Held.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—2:07 a.m.—The Daily Telegraph's Emvillie (south of the Aisne) correspondent in a dispatch dated Sunday says:

"The sixth day of the battle is being fought with the same ceaseless energy as were the previous phases. Victory on the ground is won or lost. The artillery is engaged in an incessant roar, and the troops are being given very little rest."

"Every trench won on the day has been won by the greatest sacrifices. Some of the British regiments have paid very dearly, but the French have brought up fresh heavy ordnance, and both British and French reinforcements are hurrying to the line through the railway to Soissons, directly behind the British position."

"All the while the battle has proceeded, a small army of civilians has been out burying the dead. French and British soldiers are being buried together, nearly always close to where they fell, and their graves mark the course of the battle."

"The German dead are burned. Their bodies are placed on piles of straw, and oil is poured over them, and the pyre lighted."

GENERAL BEYERS RESIGNS COMMAND

Protests Against Invasion of German Territory in South Africa.

WRITES A BITTER LETTER

Finance Minister Replies That Plans Were Made With His Approval.

[Canadian Press.]

LONDON, Sept. 21.—11:10 p.m. Brigadier-General Christian Frederick Beyers, commander-in-chief of the Union of South Africa's defence forces, has resigned his position because of his disapproval of the action of Great Britain in sending commandos to conquer German Southwest Africa.

The official press bureau tonight gave out the text of the letter of the resignation of Gen. Beyers and the reply of Gen. Jan Christian Smuts, minister of defence and defence of the South African Union.

Gen. Beyers reminds Gen. Smuts that in August he disapproved of the sending of the commandos (forces of Boer troops) to conquer German Southwest Africa, and expressed surprise that Parliament confirmed the request of the Government to conquer the German territory without any provocation to the union by the Germans. He insists that a majority of the Dutch people in the union disapproved of crossing the German frontier.

Resignation of British Ministers. Referring to a strong minority in Great Britain that has taken part in the European war for the sake of the right of justice and in order to protect the independence of smaller nations and to comply with treaties, Gen. Beyers points to the resignation of two British ministers as evidence that a strong minority cannot be convinced of the righteousness of action with Germany. As to the protection of smaller nations, Gen. Beyers says:

"I have only to indicate how the independence of the South African republic and of the Orange Free State was violated and of what weight the Sand River convention was."

South African Louvains. "It is said this war is being waged against the barbarity of the Germans. I have forgiven but not forgotten all the barbarities perpetrated by our country during the South African war. With very few exceptions, all the farms, not to mention many towns, were so many of the Louvains we now bear so much of."

Gen. Beyers denies that the Germans invaded South African territory, and declares: "If they did after the termination of the retreat from Mons, to know that letters have been arriving in London from German hospitals, in which some of them are found to be lying."

Several of them appear to be at Paderborn, Westphalia.

A letter from the chief surgeon of the hospital there to the wife of a wounded officer is given. It says:

GERMAN LEAGUE ATTACKS KAISER WHO FLED CANADA, FINALLY IN PRISON

Appeals To All To Join in Arresting Him for the Sake of Lasting Peace.

[Canadian Press.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—A special cable to the Tribune from Rotterdam says:

"An appeal to the civilized world has been issued by the committee of the German Humanity League here. It is signed by Karl Bontstein, Emil Gott, Franz Gausen, Jacob Mamelosdorf, Gustav Ochs and Ernest Schuster, and says:

"We reiterate, as men passionately loving our Fatherland, and anxious to see the German people in the union disapproved of crossing the German frontier."

Resignation of British Ministers. Referring to a strong minority in Great Britain that has taken part in the European war for the sake of the right of justice and in order to protect the independence of smaller nations and to comply with treaties, Gen. Beyers points to the resignation of two British ministers as evidence that a strong minority cannot be convinced of the righteousness of action with Germany. As to the protection of smaller nations, Gen. Beyers says:

"I have only to indicate how the independence of the South African republic and of the Orange Free State was violated and of what weight the Sand River convention was."

South African Louvains. "It is said this war is being waged against the barbarity of the Germans. I have forgiven but not forgotten all the barbarities perpetrated by our country during the South African war. With very few exceptions, all the farms, not to mention many towns, were so many of the Louvains we now bear so much of."

Gen. Beyers denies that the Germans invaded South African territory, and declares: "If they did after the termination of the retreat from Mons, to know that letters have been arriving in London from German hospitals, in which some of them are found to be lying."

Several of them appear to be at Paderborn, Westphalia.

A letter from the chief surgeon of the hospital there to the wife of a wounded officer is given. It says:

"Dear Madam—Your husband is staying in the hospital at Paderborn. He feels well and his wound is getting on well. As he is a prisoner he is not allowed to write himself."

DISABLED CRUISER HAS BEEN BEACHED

GIBRALTAR (Via London), Sept. 21.—7:55 p.m.—It is officially announced from Gibraltar that the British cruiser Pegasus, which was recently attacked and disabled by the German cruiser Koenigsberg, has been beached.

TRENCHES WON BY GREAT SACRIFICE

Paid Dearly—Land Stubbornly Held.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—2:07 a.m.—The Daily Telegraph's Emvillie (south of the Aisne) correspondent in a dispatch dated Sunday says:

"The sixth day of the battle is being fought with the same ceaseless energy as were the previous phases. Victory on the ground is won or lost. The artillery is engaged in an incessant roar, and the troops are being given very little rest."

"Every trench won on the day has been won by the greatest sacrifices. Some of the British regiments have paid very dearly, but the French have brought up fresh heavy ordnance, and both British and French reinforcements are hurrying to the line through the railway to Soissons, directly behind the British position."

"All the while the battle has proceeded, a small army of civilians has been out burying the dead. French and British soldiers are being buried together, nearly always close to where they fell, and their graves mark the course of the battle."

"The German dead are burned. Their bodies are placed on piles of straw, and oil is poured over them, and the pyre lighted."

Crippled With Rheumatism

And Skeptical After Trying Many Medicines—Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Cured Him.

When the kidneys fail to purify the blood the poisons left in the system cause pain and suffering, such as backache, lumbago and rheumatism. Read how this skeptic was cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

I also recommended the pills to a man who was a cripple from rheumatism. He was skeptical, and he said that he had tried nearly everything on earth. GERMANY NOT TIRED OF WAR, SAYS ORGAN

No Peace Till Campaign Reaches Honorable Conclusion.

BERLIN, via London, Sept. 21.—Commenting upon the alleged statement of Count Von Bernstorff, German ambassador to the United States, that his nation was looking for peace upon condition that the enemy of German territory would be preserved, or, as so claimed in Washington dispatches, the North German Gazette, the official organ, declares in its latest issue that the Government had not even considered the matter.

"The assertions are intended," the paper says, "to foster the impression that we have tired of the war. Peace overtures may not be looked for until the war is brought to an honorable conclusion."

POPE BENEDICT HORRIFIED.

ROME, Sept. 21 (By Way of Paris), 7:55 p.m.—When informed of the destruction of the cathedral of Rheims, Pope Benedict XV said that he "could not believe it possible in such a civilized epoch as the twentieth century to be plunged back to the time of Attila."

The Pontiff requested Cardinal Ferrari to request Cardinal Ametis, Archbishop of Paris, for full particulars, as telegrams for rheims are not accepted.

A committee was appointed to interview the official in charge, but was told that the order that newspapermen must use the back door was irrevocable.

POPULATION OF PARIS REDUCED 65 PER CENT

One-Third of Resident Families Have Departed.

[Canadian Press.]

PARIS, Sept. 21.—Official figures on the census of Paris within the city walls show that there are today in the capital 362,454, fewer families than there were in 1894. The number of households in the city is 781,200. Consequently a third of the resident families have left. Numerically as to inhabitants, the population today shows a reduction of 1,025,507, as compared to 1911. This is equal to 65 per cent of the population in normal times.

BANDIT MAY FACE ANOTHER MURDER CHARGE

MONTREAL, Sept. 21.—Ismael Boiret, one of the three bandits who escaped the gallows for the death of Constable Bourdon, of the Cote Des Neiges station, for which he, with Beauchamp and Arthur Poucault, was found guilty of manslaughter on Saturday, may now face another charge of murder.

BLUFFING THE KAISER.

A FEW days ago the world was astonished to learn that the Russian army which had been successfully raiding East Prussia was in full retreat toward the Russian frontier. Close on this announcement came reports of German successes over the Muscovites. The whole thing appeared odd in view of Russia's overwhelming superiority in numbers. Now it begins to appear as if Great Britain, France and Russia have been "hanging" a titanic bluff on the Kaiser which is working out admirably for the allies. Was the Russian raid into Prussia merely to keep a large force of Germans busy while Austria was smashed and France and Great Britain stemmed the Kaiser's advance on Paris? It was widely remarked at the time that the Russian raid was unexpectedly swift and it seems reasonable to suppose it was part of a concerted plan. It is not likely that the allies would be operating in any haphazard manner. If it is the case that General Rennenkampf's raid and retreat was a bluff, the Kaiser appears to have been badly fooled. The powerful force that he rushed into East Prussia to halt the Russians is now reported hurrying back to Belgium to save the much-harassed German right wing. With Austria completely beaten, this leaves the Russians with a comparatively clear road for the real march on Berlin. If it was a deliberately planned strategy it was beautifully played, and throws the scales of war greatly in favor of the allies. So long as the latter can keep up their present terrific hammering of the Teutonic horde of invaders, not a man can be spared to meet the Russians.

THE COMING RECKONING.

THERE will be a fine lot of penalties to hand round in Germany after this war. Thorough inquiries should be prosecuted, as after the Balkan horrors, and as many as possible of the ruffians responsible for various outrages should be tried and sentenced. Even the Germans themselves must be getting sick of their civilization and culture cry.

Hanging is too good for airmen who drop bombs on women and children or under cover of a white flag. High German officials who talk about scraps of paper should be convicted of perjury and manslaughter. The artillery officer who directed the bombardment of Rheims Cathedral should be put in an English jail for life, with a series of the most violent hunger-striking enforcements.

To talk of the Sarajevo outrage while the burners of Belgium are at large is insulting to the world's intelligence. Killing a Crown Prince was a shocking offence, but officials who sink neutral vessels by mines in the open sea should get short shrift. If it is not made clear to France and Belgium that the German murderers are to be judiciously punished, we may fear that French and Russian soldiers may yet take vengeance into their own hands. When Germans punish the sins of a few snipers upon the Belgian population in general, the German people also may be brought to book for the misdeeds of its officials and other ruffians.

At the same time, the self-restraint of the crowd at Rheims, as reported yesterday, shows which nation is the keeper of culture and Christianity.

THE "CLEAR SHINING."

WE have heard that it is a common thing in Scotland to hear a minister pray for the "clear shining after the rain." The cloudy skies of Scotland do not always yield this desirable after-effect. The great war raging in Europe is a storm of death, disease and suffering among all the nations engaged. The flower of the men of Europe, the selected young lives, go down to death with each terrific battle. As Shiel, the Irish orator, put it, "Did not the blood of England, the blood of Ireland and the blood of Scotland flow in the same stream and drench the same field? When the chill morning dawned, their dead lay cold and stark together. In the same deep pit their bodies were deposited. The green corn of spring now breaks from their commingled dust, the dew of heaven falls upon their union in the grave." The fields of France and Belgium have been "drenched" with the blood of England, Ireland and Scotland, France, Belgium and Germany, and the same "dew of heaven" will fall upon their union in the grave. Will there be the "clear shining after the rain" or will their young lives go out in death, and Europe and the world continue in darkness and war?

GERMANS ON DEFENSIVE.

THE fighting between the allies and the Germans indicates that the Germans are making a supreme effort to retire to some strongly fortified positions on their own soil. Winter is coming on, and to supply the troops with necessary food will be a much simpler task on German soil. Everything points to the Kaiser having dropped all idea of an offensive campaign for the present. That smashing advance that amazed the world, when once broken, left apparently no choice but retreat and a defensive campaign.

Since September 6, when the allies took the offensive, the Germans have been practically fighting one long rear-guard action. The armies of the Kaiser, seven in number, and totalling probably a million men, crossed the French frontier from three different directions—by Belgium, Luxembourg and Alsace Lorraine. So rapid was the a reunited France, with Alsace and Lorraine restored, prosperous and happy, Belgium compensated to the last possible degree for its agonies suffered in the cause of freedom, England, Ireland and Scotland securing a well-deserved rest from strife and taking time to put into the widest operation the splendid schemes of Lloyd George for the comfort and happiness of all the British people, including his own part of it, Wales, and in far off Russia the blessings of freedom may be carried in the fullest extent, to all its peoples, including the Jews, that in the two countries where the war commenced, without the slightest chance, Austria and Serbia, an equal measure of the benefits of peace may flow, and that over all these countries there shall preside a pure administration of justice, equal to that which has done so much to make Great Britain respected by the world and known as "British justice."

Will the "clear shining" disclose the continent of Europe ruled as truly by the people as the continent of America and Great Britain? Will the shackles of militarism be forever destroyed, and democracy take its rightful place in Europe? It will be a great forward step at a terrible cost and it is admitted that.

"There is One above,
"Sways the harmonious mysteries
"Of this world,
"Even better than prime ministers."

CLOSING IN ON THE KAISER.

CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW, the well-known American, who has just returned from Europe, says the outlook for the Kaiser is very dismal, and for Austria it is even worse. The Kaiser may say from the heart:

"Oh Lord, how are my foes increased
"Against me many rise."

The foes of the Kaiser are not by any means all armed men. He intended to take France and Belgium with a rush, but that vision of victory vanished, and in its place, he has to be contented with the fact that his armies are fighting a retreating battle with great bravery. He is learning from the allied armies, the truth of the English farmer's remark, "It's dogged as does it." Surely the fight in progress has been a dogged one and apparently orders have been given the German army to take up their next position across the German boundary, leaving an army of 200,000 men to defend the present position and retreat when they must.

When that order is carried out, which implies failure to hold back the allied armies at their present position, and means, too, the failure of the invasion of France, the fighting will be restricted to German soil and to a defence of militarism in Germany.

It is then that the truth will begin to dawn on the German people. They will realize that the Kaiser's hands are full, in any attempt he may make to hold Germany, that to do more is impossible. The allied armies will more than match the great armies of the Kaiser, and the enemies not in uniform are quite as formidable as those in the field. How will Germany, led at the rate of $50,000,000 a week, meet the combined resources of England, France and Russia? The sums levied in France and Belgium will be wiped out with tired armies, short of funds, and with more than half of the people averse to the war, when they know the truth, how long will the Kaiser be the Kaiser? The Kaiser's only hope was in a concentrated effort to achieve victory in a short time. While he had the numbers, he had not the other requisites to endure a long war. When the war is reduced to an effort to defend Germany, there will be no need to prolong it. No one threatened Germany. Failure on the sea—failure in France—failure in Austria. Add to these financial inability to match the financial strength of the allied nations, and to prevent the awakening of the German people to the truth, and the end of the great war cannot be far away. Perhaps the rumor credited to Lloyd's may be near the truth. It probably will be over before Christmas.

INCONSISTENCY.

THE Germans say that if they could dispose of the French and British, they would have no trouble in beating off the Russians. And yet they still keep up the blatant pretence that the war is one of defence against a terrible Slav foe!

They claim that their national existence is endangered by the Slav, and at the same time that their army is invincible and that no force can withstand their siege guns. This fear of the Slav is only a mask for their contemptuous hatred of France and Britain. One thing is manifest from Sir Edward Grey's "White Paper," that Germany would have made no effort at all to avert a Russo-German war if only Great Britain would have consented to stand aside on terms. Berlin thought mainly of the British and French, but she had no fear of Russia. The "Slav Peril" is a piece of sham, with the real authorities in the Fatherland.

Colossal Nerve

As an instance of colossal German nerve the Canadian Trade Journal Hardware and Metal publishes the following letter, received by a Montreal firm from the Otto Schlegel Manufacturing Company, from New York, under date of August 23:

"Dear Sir,—
"Owing to war conditions and the absolute certainty that no 'Yellow Schlegel Metal' or even Composition Leaf in books will come from Germany (the only place where it is made) for at least six months or until the German army has occupied England and the seacoast of France, we offer to you for immediate acceptance some of the remainder of our stock, laying at our office in Montreal, consisting of the following:

The Montreal firm which received the particular letter, which has been shown to Hardware and Metal, has been placing orders with this firm for considerable amounts, but the statement was made that they would go without the same quarter again. The communication was quite obviously multiphased and was no doubt sent out in considerable number.

advance that by September 6 General Von Kluck had carried the right wing of the German army to within twenty-five miles of Paris. The six other armies were in close touch with him, stretching a huge semi-circle far to the east. On September 6, the allies assumed the offensive, and have steadily driven all these German armies before them. Two of them, commanded by Generals Von Kluck and Von Buelow, have been swept back a distance of seventy miles. French Lorraine has been cleared of the invaders, and the latter are making a desperate stand at the River Aisne, just as they did along the Marne. French and British official statements show that the allies are making a supreme effort to dislodge the German right wing, which is slowly being forced back. The whole situation greatly favors the allies, as it is quite evident Germany is fighting to escape back to the Fatherland. The Kaiser's corps does not have the offensive.

VON HOLLWEG ANSWERED.

THE German Chancellor displayed poor judgment when he sneeringly asked Great Britain if she would have gone to war with France had the latter violated Belgian neutrality. Sir Edward Grey's reply that that is just what would have happened was prompt and convincing. He declared that previous to the declaration of war France had been directly questioned as to these pledges and had given assurance that they would be kept. The British Foreign Secretary went further, and stated that in 1870, when Bismarck brought up the question of Belgian neutrality, London informed Paris that no invasion by way of Belgium would be tolerated. The Kaiser had better put a check on Von Hollweg, as every time he attempts to justify the Belgian outrage he gets deeper in the mire of the world's ill-will.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

General Exhaustion has taken command of both armies.

This war will show whether it "pays" to disregard treaty obligations or to respect them.

The Kaiser is said to have wept when he signed the declaration of war. Tears of joy?

People who do not believe in hell would be convinced if they were sent to the battle line.

Reports from the Arctic say Santa Claus is working overtime on drums, swords and guns as Christmas toys.

Arthur Ellis, the hangman, is going to the war. It is hoped his execution with the rifle will be as successful as with the rope.

German naval men have been boasting "The Day" and "The Day" seems to be, if ever, sometime when they can sneak out a victory by foul means or a fog. Their naval valor is like that of a highwayman who puts a log across the railway track.

"IT'S A LONG WAY TO TIPPERARY." has become the marching song of the British army, and as it is not widely known in this country, we print the words below:

Up to mighty London came an Irishman one day,
As the streets are paved with gold, sure Singing songs of Piccadilly, Strand and Leicester Square,
Till Paddy got excited, then he shouted
to them there:

CHORUS—
It's a long way to Tipperary,
It's a long way to Tipperary,
It's a long way to Tipperary,
To the sweetest girl I know.
Good-bye Piccadilly, farewell Leicester
Square,
It's a long way to Tipperary,
But my heart's right there.

Paddy wrote a letter to his Irish Molly, Saying, "Should you not receive it, write
and let me know:
If I make mistakes in spelling, Molly
dear," said he,
"Remember, it's the pen that's bad,
don't lay the blame on me."

Molly wrote a neat reply to Irish Paddy O., Saying, "Mike Maloney wants to marry me, and so
Leave the Strand and Piccadilly, or
For love has fairly drove me silly, hoping you're the same."

HADN'T FOLLOWED THE CROWD.

Squire—I've not seen old Mrs. Wiggins lately. How is she?
Mrs. Appleby—Dead, sir.
Squire—What, joined the great majority?

PRESS COMMENT ON THE WAR

DANGEROUS GREED.
[Toronto Telegram.]
To the thousands who are hoarding unwonted quantities of provisions, it may be well to point out that if ever conditions should arise to justify keeping away from other industries and enterprises, they may find themselves in a position where there may be real occasion for fear. However law-abiding a community is, there may come a time of human want, and an empty stomach has no conscience.

THE DUTY OF THE MERCHANTS.
[St. John Globe.]
Canada is to be the Empire's granary in this time of trouble, and Canada will get much profitable business, that should keep away from other industries and enterprises of the country. The merchant at home must not be less courageous, less patriotic than the soldier at the front. The other must carry on the trade that has made the Empire great.

THE BELGIAN DELEGATION.
[La Presse.]
It is proper that the French and Catholic element of Canada, which forms a third of the population, should be especially drawn to distinguished envoys of the same language and faith. This international event is of importance beyond parallel because the cause of humanity and civilization is at stake against barbarism and we owe it to ourselves to join our action to that of other peoples.

STIMULUS TO CHARACTER.
[Ottawa Free Press.]
The necessity of showing a brave face is a stimulus to character. Mothers and wives will be emulating the Spartan virtues. They may not know of their losses, but they know that their sons and husbands are ready to give their lives for the world's liberty. Canadian women will be no less brave than their sisters in Great Britain. They will recognize that by their own efforts and willingness to hide all sorrow, they are helping to form the character of a nation.

ITALY MUST FIGHT.
[La Presse.]
The Italian people, by multiplying their demonstrations in favor of France and England, will probably force the Quirinal to declare war against the German-Austrian combination. Italy has the ambition to take back the provinces of Italy and to give their lives for the world's liberty. Canadian women will be no less brave than their sisters in Great Britain. They will recognize that by their own efforts and willingness to hide all sorrow, they are helping to form the character of a nation.

WITH BRITISH EMPIRE.
[New York Evening Post.]
Germany, having grasped her sword, is laying about her with a high hand. She is playing the outlaw game against Western Europe. Her ultimate purpose in violating international treaties is clear. If she could have beaten the armies of France and Russia, with the British Empire, she would have attained the complete dominance of Europe and become a menace to both American continents. Thinking people in the United States are with the British Empire of freedom and liberty against the German Empire of autocracy and suppression.

LET US PRODUCE!
[La Patrie.]
If the people of Canada desire they may next year export one hundred millions worth of products for human consumption drawn from out fruitful soil. Then all the articles which we have used from Germany should be replaced by similar articles made in Canada. For all true patriots the trade mark, "Made in Canada," should be a sacred emblem. Instead of folding our arms and giving up, let us produce, let us work and procure work for those who need it. There should be work for everybody on our farms and in our factories.

LYING DOES NOT PAY.
[Times.]
The arrangements which have been made to have garbled stories disseminated abroad show the importance which the German authorities attach to this trick. They think that it will have a wholesome moral effect upon us. Well, we think so, too, but not quite the moral effect they expect and desire. They can hardly arrange or defy the truth more ably than their model, Napoleon's lies never deceived us or depressed us, and in the end he had himself to confess that "to be like a bullet" was bad policy. The Germans will doubtless in time discover that he was right.

THE ENEMY IN THE CAMP.
[Saturday Review.]
It is time to speak plainly concerning the reasonable attitude of war-fighters. We must-but only wait-till the war-is-over type of patriot. The man who today is thinking still of his political and sentimental fads is a public danger—all the more dangerous because he is working like a mole in the ground—under an assumed enthusiasm—for his country. We cannot at this stage avoid suspecting his good faith. He must long ago have been convinced that every nerve of courage and our friends will have to be strained if Germany is to be successfully met.

WAR, THE GREAT LEVELLER.
[Daily Sketch.]
At a certain recruiting office an official was leading out a very drunken and dirty, but finely-built, navy. "I want to list," said the navy. "I tell you I want to list. Ain't I good enough?" The official looked him as best he could. "You've got to sleep for an hour's time," he said. "Come back again in an hour's time." "Got 'em home; want to list, I tell you." Just then a young man came along. He was well dressed—in fact, a "nut." "What's the trouble," he asked. "I can't sign him on, sir," said the official. "He must be fully aware of what he is doing." "All right, officer, I'll take him and give him a soda. If that's no good I'll take him to a doctor. You'll see us back in an hour. I'm coming back, too." And the grimy, drunken navy and the smart young man walked down the street together, arm in arm.

When Will German Fleet Come Out of Kiel Canal?

[From Glasgow News.]
A report came the other day from a Danish source to a German paper that the British fleet was lying east of the Pentland Firth. That report may or may not have been true. In any case, a fleet might have been off Texel before the report was printed in Berlin. Nevertheless, it is reasonable enough to suppose that the majority of our battleships are for most of the time slowly cruising round near the place indicated by the Danish skipper from whom the message came. We need not here go into the lengthy though simple enough arguments which go to establish that belief, nor need we even pin ourselves to the theory that the fleet will wait patiently in that chosen spot until Admiral von Ingenohl makes up his mind to come out of Kiel. But having thus vaguely indicated the British side of the naval situation in the North Sea, and having sufficiently completed the picture by adding that squadrons of light cruisers and flotillas of destroyers are watching the German coast and the Skaggerak, and patrolling the North Sea from end to end with ceaseless activity, we may now ask what the Germans are doing and what they are likely to do.

The Kiel Canal.
In the first place, we may assume with some confidence that practically all Germany's modern battleships are lying at the Baltic end of the Kiel Canal, and a squadron of pre-Dreadnoughts and most of the destroyer flotillas lying at Wilhelmshaven at the other end. It is generally assumed, but the disposition generally assumed, that as a ship can pass through the Kiel Canal in six hours at ten miles an hour, it matters little what the precise division of the fleet may be. The essential thing is that with the exception of an odd cruiser or so watching the Belts and the Sound, and some odds and ends watching the Russians at the other end of the Baltic, the German navy is concentrated about the Kiel Canal. And the essential question for us is when and how it will come out from that refuge.

In discussing that question, it is of the first importance to remember the great strategic purpose of the Kiel Canal. That purpose, in a word, is to divide the British Navy into two portions, one of which may be attacked and destroyed before the other can come up. The canal was not built, as some appear to suppose, merely to afford the German navy a backdoor into the Baltic, nor even (though that is nearer it) to give it two passages to the open sea. For the German ships were already safe enough under the land batteries at the mouth of the Elbe without a backdoor, and the possession of two passages is only of value to the weaker fleet if it compels the stronger fleet to divide itself so as to command both. The latter object is what the Germans hope to obtain.

Waiting Game.
It is no secret, of course, that they have always considered a surprise attack to suit themselves against the British Navy, and had they deliberately gone to war with us at their own time, their first step would doubtless have been a desperate raid to come before we knew they were coming. But even if that had failed, the Kiel Canal still gives them the chance of a surprise attack and of beating us in detail. So long, indeed, as our battleships are kept in a body away to the north they can do little. Their fleet might rally out and do some damage to our patrolling cruisers, but the risk to itself for so small a gain would be too great—the game not worth the candle. But if by waiting patiently, Admiral von Ingenohl can wear out Admiral Jellicoe's patience, he may tempt him to come down and attempt something decisive, then will be the German Admiral's chance. For having to watch two passages, Admiral Jellicoe would sooner or later have to divide his strength, besides having to lie so near at hand as to expose his big ships to great risks—and then it would be time for the Germans to strike their hardest. For that reason, and for one or two others, which there is not space here to mention, we may conjecture that the German strategists will incline to play a waiting game.

The Economic Pressure.
On the other hand, there are reasons of a different sort which may move Admiral von Ingenohl to take action sooner than he wishes. Nearly fifteen stages, achieves no great success with its torpedo attacks on the blockading German navy, General von der Goltz pointed out how ruinous a maritime blockade would be for Germany, and we now see his forecast fulfilled. Germany could not, he argued, fight a long war unless she could keep open her connections by sea. Only this year again, a German writer, discussing the chance of a blockade, declared that even if it lasted for only a short time, it would be absolutely intolerable for the German nation, because it would shake their commercial system to its very depths, and would in the end threaten starvation to both army and people. Therefore bound to attempt to shake off the intolerable pressure of a blockade, and to break the chain of hostile ships, the German navy is bound to make an attempt to break the blockade.

The Bull-dog Strain

THE bull-dog is typical of the British race—men fearless in attack, grim and determined, tenacious, invincible. We in Canada are proud of the bull-dog strain in us—that quality of blood and heart that makes us dauntless and masterful. The bull-dog strain shows in us and others in times of peril and menace.

Everywhere in Canada manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers of the bull-dog breed are answering the challenges of war—the challenges of trade disturbance and business opportunity. The identity of some of these valiant-hearted merchants and manufacturers is revealed in the advertising columns of this and other newspapers, for advertisements are expressions of courage, tenacity and mastery.

Bull-dog blood shows itself and its quality in fighting.

Before You Can Fruits or Vegetables—

Carefully sterilize the jars—the wash boiler will be just the thing to do it in.

BY CAROLINE COE.

Of first importance in preserving vegetables is sterilization—that is, the process of removing by heat the bacteria that teem in all vegetables and in the air, too, and cause decomposition if they get into the preserve jars.

A wash boiler makes a first rate sterilizing vat in which to boil the vegetables to be preserved; the boiling takes place, of course, after they have been put in the jars. Have a tight cover for the boiler and a false bottom, as the jars must not come in contact with the boiler bottom. Thin pieces of wood will do, but better still is a piece of No. 16 wire netting of half-inch mesh.

Don't crowd the jars in the boiler. When they are in place pour in about three inches of water, or just enough to make steam and keep the boiler from going dry. Put on the cover and let boil for an hour. Then remove the lid and let the steam escape. The jars may be removed, or left in the boiler to cool. This boiling process should be repeated three days in succession, one hour each day. When the sterilization, or boiling is complete the jars may be used for a day or two and then examined for signs of decomposition. If they have started to spoil it will be cheaper in the end to empty the jars and try a fresh supply.

Corn.

Select full-grained ears. Shear off the grain with a sharp knife and pack the jar full. Add salt to taste, about a teaspoonful to a quart is enough. Put the rubber ring on the neck of the jar and place the glass top on loosely. Then place the glass top on the boiler and put the jars in the boiler to sterilize. Boil them as described previously one hour each day for three days.

Beets.

Although beets will keep in the cellar

over winter, it is very desirable to can them while they are young and tender, as the mature beet is apt to be stringy and lacking in flavor. Wash the young beets, cut off the tops, and put them in boiling water for about an hour and a half or until they are thoroughly cooked. Take off the skins, cut in thin slices, and pack into the jars. Cover with water and sterilize in the manner previously described. If a mild pickle is desired, make a mixture of equal parts of water and good vinegar, sweeten to taste, and cover the beets with this mixture instead of water.

Summer Squash.
Cut the vegetable into small blocks, pack in the jars, and cover with water. Add a teaspoon of salt to each quart and sterilize. It is sometimes preferable with this vegetable, however, to pare off the skin, boil or steam until thoroughly done, mash them, and then pack in the jars. This is a very slow way, but it is absolutely necessary that the interior of the jar should reach the temperature of boiling water. A jar will usually hold about twice as much of the cooked vegetable as it will of the uncooked.

Economy Pickles—A Tested Recipe.
Wash one and one-half pecks of small-sized cucumbers and place in a stone jar.

Add one cup of dry mustard to one cup of salt and one even teaspoon of powdered alum. Mix this together until well blended then stir it slowly into one gallon of cider vinegar. Turn over pickles in jar and weight pickles down. Boil for use in four days or will keep perfectly for almost any length of time.

OLD SONGS AND POEMS

Roamin' in the Gloamin'.
(Copies sent by A. Biddiphur, J. A. G.)
I've seen lots of roamin' lassies trav'lin' far and wide,
But my heart is centred noo on bonnie Kate McBride.

And altho' I'm no a chap that throws a word away,
I'm surprised mysel' sometimes at a I've got to say.

CHORUS:

Roamin' in the gloamin' on the bonnie banks o' Clyde,
Roamin' in the gloamin' wi' my lassie by my side.

When the sun has gone to rest,
That's the time that we love best,
O, it's lovely, roamin' in the gloamin'.

One night in the gloamin' we were trippin' on the side,
I kissed her twice and asked her once if she would be my bride.

She was shy, so I was I were bairn
But I got brave and braver on the journey comin' hame.

Last night after strollin' we got hame at half past nine,
On a farm loved by the lassie, I asked her to be mine.

When she promised, I got up and danced the Heilan' Fling,
I've just been at the jeweller's and I've picked a nice wee ring.

Down on the Farm.
When a boy I used to dwell,
On a farm loved by the lassie,
Far away, among the clover and the trees

Where the morning-glory vines, round the cabin porch, did twine,
And the robin red-breast sang among the trees.

CHORUS:
There were brothers young and gay,
And a father old and gray,
And a mother dear to shield us from all harm.

There I spent my happy hours running wild among the flowers,
In my boyhood's happy home down on the farm.

Many weary years have passed since I saw the old place last,
And memories dear, still hover o'er me like a charm.

Every dear familiar place, every kind of loving care,
In my boyhood's happy home down on the farm.

And today as I draw near,
That old home I love so dear,
A stranger comes to meet me at the door.

There beside the old fire-place, there in my father's old arm-chair down on the farm.

Economy Cookies
It costs more to keep the cookie jar full these days than it did a year ago, but now that the school days are beginning, an empty cookie jar would be a calamity.

Here's a very good recipe for eggless cookies that will make five dozen, and you'll never miss the eggs.

Take one large cup of butter and lard, mixed; one cupful of sugar, one cupful of molasses, one-half cupful of cinnamon, one teaspoonful of cloves, one teaspoonful of soda and flour for stiff dough. Pour over the soda a little water, and mix thoroughly. Mix the ingredients thoroughly. If the dough is not properly mixed the cookies lose in flavor, and they will not be light and spongy when baked. These cookies should be rolled thinner than sugar cookies.

A good way of stiffening the bristles of hair brushes after washing is to dip them into a mixture of equal quantities of milk and water, and then dry before the fire.

To remove fruit stains from tablecloths and serviettes, apply powdered starch to the stained parts, and leave for several hours till all the discoloration has been absorbed by the starch.

SHOES FOR THE STUDENT.
For footwear the college girl will require heavy-soled tramping boots of tan calf, two pairs of buttoned boots, one pair having contrasting material in dressy style, one pair of evening slippers to match her evening frock and a pair of smart black pumps for wear on ordinary evenings with the dinner costume. It is better to provide buttoned boots than pumps for day wear with all costumes, for the little French man will be apt to dash out of doors in all sorts of weather, perfectly regardless of her foot-covering. Sometimes the uncarpeted floors and the halls are so slippery that the buttoned boots offer more protection to the ankles. Besides these items of footwear the various shoes for athletic sports must be included in the list.

Gently smear with Cuticura Ointment; wash off in five minutes with Cuticura Soap and hot water. Sample of Cuticura with 32-page book, address "Cuticura," Dept. 24A, Boston, U. S. A.

Little Hints to Help the Housewife Solve Her Problems From Day to Day. Written Especially For Advertiser Women Readers.

Cheese With Breakfast Foods

Breakfast foods are not such cheap fare after all when you begin to count the cost of sugar and cream usually served with them. But expert cooks have found a substitute for the sugar and cream and it's nothing less substantial and inexpensive than cheese. T

There are many who relish a piece of cheese with the cooked cereal so commonly eaten for breakfast, and find such a combination satisfying to appetite and taste. Oatmeal or some other home-cooked breakfast cereal prepared with cheese is palatable, and such dishes have an advantage in that they may be served without cream and sugar. Since such a dish contains considerably more of the principal item of a breakfast meal, it is a preliminary to other courses. Such a combination as cereals cooked with cheese, toast, fruit, and tea, coffee, or chocolate, makes a palatable as well as nutritious breakfast and one which does not require much work to prepare and to clear away.

A recipe for preparing oatmeal with cheese follows. Wheat breakfast foods, either parched or unparched, corn meal, and hominy may be prepared in the same way.

OATMEAL WITH CHEESE.
Two cupfuls of oatmeal, one cupful of grated cheese, one tablespoonful of butter, one level teaspoon of salt.

Cook the oatmeal as usual. Shortly before serving, stir in the butter and add the cheese, and stir until the cheese is melted and thoroughly blended with the cereal.

The cheese should be mild in flavor and soft in texture. The proportion of cheese used may be increased if a more pronounced cheese flavor is desired.

A SPLENDID STORY OF WESTERN LIFE
LATHOIA
By JOHN BRECKENRIDGE ELLIS
THE AUTHOR OF FRANK
Copyright, The Bobbs-Merrill Company.

Willow muttered deep in his throat, while his companions laughed disdaintfully.

"We've had enough of this!" Red declared, his voice grown suddenly hard and cold. "Kansas, take the prisoner, Brick Willock, as you're so fond of the kid, you can carry her."

But, "There's silence while it was being relighted. The flickering light, reddening to a steady glow, revealed no mercy or the scowling countenances about the table, and no shadow of presentiment on that of the still unconscious child."

Red went outside and waited till his brother Kimball was ready to follow him, and Brick Willock had carried out the girl. Then he looked back into the room, and saw the prisoner, who he said authoritatively, "What we've got to do ain't any easier with a lot of men hanging round, looking on."

The man who had relighted the candle, and who crouched to shield it with a hand, and the others, nodded approval. His friends were already gathered together the cards, to lose in the excitement of gambling consciousness of what was about to be done, and closed the door on the scene, and turned to face the night."

The wind came in furious gusts, with brief intervals of calm. There were no clouds, however, and the moon, which had risen not long before, shined the prairie almost as light as if morning had dawned. As far as the eye could see in any direction, nothing was to be seen but the level ground, the unbroken sky, the cabin and the little group near the other ponies.

Gledware had already been stationed with his face toward the moon, and Kansas Kimball was the only one holding his pistol. Between them and the horse Brick Willock had come to a halt, and the highwayman's neck, as if by some instinct she would cling closer to the only one in the band of ten who she feared.

Red scowled heavily. He had not forgotten Willock for beating him at cards, and his persistent opposition to his wishes; and he now resolved that it should be Willock's hand to deal the fatal blow. He had been troubled before tonight by insubordination on the part of this man of bristling whiskers, this knave whose voice was ever for mercy, if mercy were possible. Why should Willock have joined men who were without scruple and without shame? As the leader stared at him sullenly, he reflected that it was just such natures that fall at the last exchange of the highwayman's hand, and that turn state's evidence.

Yes, Willock should deal the blow, then, if he found it necessary to call all his men from the cabin to enforce the order.

The word "state's evidence" was not groundless. He would have been much more alarmed could he have known the woman, though thought that surged through Willock's brain, and the wonderful emotions that thrilled his heart, at the warm, confiding pressure of the arm about his neck.

CHAPTER II.
Brick Maker's Move.
As Kansas Kimball raised his weapon to fire, the man before him uttered a cry of terror and began to retreat.

In the full light of the dazzling moon, his face showed all the pallor, all the contractions of a coward, who though believing himself lost, had not the resolution to mask his fear. He poured forth incoherent promises of secrecy, ejaculations of despair and frenzied assurances of innocence.

"Hold! Kansas! don't shoot! Red!" "There's not a one of the bunch believes that story about the last wagon getting away and the dying wife. We know this Gledware is a spy, whatever he says, and that he brought the kid along to show the law. We know if we go back to No-Man's Land we couldn't be touched, not being under no jurisdiction, and he wanted to find us with our paint and feathers off. He's a sneaking coward, and a bullet's too good for him. I don't mind to spare him a few minutes if he's agreeable. I put it to him—would he rather the kid be put out of the way first, and him afterwards, or does he want the first call?"

"For God's sake, put it off as long as you will!" quavered the prisoner. "I swear I'm no spy. I swear—"

"I can't," Willock declared doggedly. "Oh, yes, you can, Brick. You see, I can't tend to no infant cancer, and I ain't hard-hearted enough to leave a five-year-old girl to die of hunger in the prairie; nor do I mean to take her to be tracked by. Oh, yes, you can, Brick, and now's the time."

"Red," exclaimed Willock desperately, "I tell you fair, and I tell you foul, that this little one lives as long as do."

"And what do you mean to do with her, eh, Brick?"

Willock made no reply. He had formed no plans for his future, or for that of the child; but his left arm closed round her tightly about her.

"Now, Brick," said Red slowly, "this ain't the first time you have proved yourself no man for our business, and I call Kansas to witness you've brought this on yourself."

Without finishing his sentence, Red swiftly raised his arm and fired point-blank at Willock's head as it was exposed above the sleeping form. Though very well that, at times, action is evened, and there is death in long speech, Willock's head was not so hard as he had been, and he was not so easily missed his mark, and in the climatic country, which belonged to no state and therefore to no court, extensive and deadly had been his practice, without fear of retribution.

Now, however, his bullet had gone astray. The few words which he had uttered, treated himself as an introduction to doing. They had been enough to warn Willock of what was coming, and just before the bullet struck, he was on his feet, Willock sent a bullet through the threatening wrist. The two detonations were almost simultaneous, and Red's arm, as he dropped his weapon, rang out as an accompaniment to the crash of firearms.

The next instant Willock, with a second shot from his six-shooter, stretched Kansas on the ground then, rushing forward with reversed weapon he brought her butt down on Red's head with such force as to deprive him of consciousness.

[Correspondents are requested to make their inquiries as brief as possible, and to write on one side of the paper only. It is impossible to give replies within a stated time, as all letters have to be answered in turn. No letters can be answered privately.]

Certainly, Dewdrop.

Dear Miss Grey.—As I am a constant reader of your page, I see you answer many, many questions for others. I wonder would you answer a few for me.

1. I am 16 years 6 months old, 5 feet 1 inch tall, and weigh 105 pounds. Do you think I am tall enough and weigh enough?

2. How long should my dresses be?

3. What are the meanings of Irene, Tom, Gilbert, Edwin, Eva and Irma?

4. What are the flowers for August, October, November, also March?

5. Am I too young to have a boy friend if all others are willing?

6. Are green plaid skirts and three-quarter-length coats going to be fashionable this fall?

Thanking you in advance, I am yours sincerely, ANS.—DEWDROP.

Ans.—Yes, you will doubtless add a few inches to your height in the next four years.

2. They should reach to your shoulders.

3. Irene, peace; Tom, a twin; Gilbert, famous; Edwin, gainer of happiness; Eva, life.

4. Poppies, hops, cyprianthum, violet.

5. No.

6. Yes.

Washing Baby's Coat.
Dear Miss Grey.—Please could you tell me anything that would take raw sweet apple stain out of baby's cream lustre coat, if I wash it in a suds I have been told the silk braids will turn yellow; can you give me a remedy to clean it without spoiling it?

A St. Marys reader requests the song called for "Top Old Time's Sake." I was glad to see the song. "There'll Come a Time," so I will exchange.

ANS.—Thank you for sending the verses and if you send the others you mention, they'll seem quite timely.

Regarding the coat, make a weak solution of salts of sorrel and water and saturate the stained part with this. In ten minutes wash with clear water and when nearly dry, press on the wrong side. If the entire coat needs cleaning, the best way is to wash it in cold water with white soap and a little ammonia. Rinse and blue and press as soon as dry enough.

Thanking you very much in advance, I remain, A TIERED CLERK.

ANS.—1. You weigh heavily for your age, but should be a fine, well-built girl, I fancy.

2. I feel sure that you will look nice in very pale blues, pale tans, light grey, and shades of green. Dark blues, too, should be worn.

3. You might have one made with a middie blouse; they are very practical for work such as yours. I saw a neat one the other day made of black serge in light weight, and trimmed with red buttons and narrow red braid. The skirt was of the same material, made plain, and without any trimming.

4. The basque styles are beginning to show themselves, and accordingly as we get used to them, they don't seem so impossible after all. A basque dress in navy or olive green would be stylish.

Do you know what I thought as I read your letter, and before I thought at the signature?—"This girl either needs holidays or a tonic from the doctor. Then, when I saw that you had signed yourself 'A Tired Clerk,' I was more than ever of this opinion. My dear, how I wish I could really help you! Have you any vacation this year? And any way, don't you think you are just a little bit run down? I do, and that a little more iron in your system will help you to take a braver and brighter outlook upon life, and make your work. This life is largely what we make it; if you face your daily task cheerfully, it helps to lighten the burden most wonderfully; but if, on the other hand, you think of your work as something terrible, this attitude will grow and tinge your whole life with gloom; and perhaps what is really wrong after all the time, is a disordered liver or poor digestion! Yes, I know the lot of a saleswoman is not easy, but try to see the sunny side of your work; learn to relieve just a day at a time—do not allow the burdens of next year, or next month or even next week, to oppress you! Perhaps they may never come at all!

Do try to cheer up, dear friend, and remember my advice about the doctor. Visit the mailbox again if it helps any to tell your troubles.

Man at New McCormick Plant Short-Circuits 550-Volt Current.
BODY HELD AS IN A VISE
W. G. Murray, With One Hand on Steel Frame, Groined Behind Switchboard.
With his left hand on the steel "frame" of a switch in the big oven at the new plant of the McCormick Manufacturing Company, William G. Murray, 130 Egerton street, put his right hand behind the switchboard and short-circuited a current of 550 volts through his body, shortly after 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. He was revived by the pulmotor which was rushed from the fire headquarters by Fire Chief John Aitken. His condition is not serious.

SAVED BY PROMPT RESCUE.
By the prompt action of T. P. McCormick who witnessed the accident, Murray would probably have died from the effects of the current. Mr. Murray, his wife and his mother, who were visiting him at the time, were in the plant. Murray was working in the narrow passage between two large ovens when he received the shock. He had been working on the switchboard on the steel beside it. For some reason, probably not realizing what he was doing, he groped with his other hand.

HELD FAST BY CURRENT.
The current held his right hand as in a vise. The man dropped with a scream upon iron pipes, thus making a second short-circuit. He was sent in for the pulmotor and the police ambulance. Both made their way to the plant. In the meantime a first aid nurse, who is kept always at the factory in case of accident, rendered valuable assistance. The shock had burned his hands were badly burned, almost to the bone.

Conrad Sullivan, aged 15, 573 York street, fell from his bicycle in front of the Commercial Union Assurance Co. building at 9:15 o'clock last night, and striking his head on the sidewalk, was rendered unconscious. He was carried to E. Harrison's antique store, where Dr. A. Duncan was called to attend him. He was released from the police ambulance, which had been called. Something happened to the bicycle, which was pedalling at a good rate of speed, and when it was pitched with considerable force head first over the handlebars onto the sidewalk. His condition is not dangerous.

PULMOTOR REVIVES VICTIM OF SHOCK
WOMAN'S BEST MEDICINE
Mrs. Kelly Advises All Women to Take "Fruit-a-tives."
Hagersville, Ont., Aug. 25th, 1913. "I can highly recommend 'Fruit-a-tives' because they did me an awful lot of good and I cannot speak too highly about them. About four years ago, I commenced taking 'Fruit-a-tives' for a general break-down and they did me a world of good. We bought a good many dollars' worth, but it was money well spent because they did all that you claim for them. Their action is so pleasant compared with other laxatives, that I found only pleasure, as well as health, in taking them. They seemed to me to be particularly suited to women, on account of their mild and gentle action, and I trust that some other women may start taking 'Fruit-a-tives' after reading my letter, and if they do, I am satisfied the results will be the same as in my own case."

DARING DAYLIGHT THIEF GETS $40.50
Diamond Ring Worth $75 Disappears at Same Time, As Cash.
POLICE WORKING ON CASE
Sam Badalato, East London Merchant, Missed Money and Articles Before.

A daring, daylight robbery, which took place in East London Monday morning, is at present occupying the attention of the local detective force. The fruit store of Sam Badalato, 636 Dundas street, was visited by a burglar and the sum of $40.50 and a diamond ring valued at $75 were carried away. The burglary was committed shortly after 10 o'clock in the morning, while Mr. Badalato was downtown and Mrs. Badalato was in charge of the store. The money and ring were taken out of a drawer in an upstairs room. The thief entered the store soon after Mr. Badalato had departed, and bought a bag of peanuts. He then asked Mrs. Badalato if he might leave by the back door, as he wanted to go into the lane which runs at the back of the store.
