

I Leave My Reputation to the Jury of Country

Hon. Mr. Emmerson's Statement on Outcome of Fredericton Case.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Toronto, June 26.—"I leave my reputation to the great jury of the country at large."

This was the statement of the Hon. H. R. Emmerson, in speaking of his libel suit against the Fredericton Gleaser. Mr. Emmerson arrived in Toronto last night and stayed at the King Edward Hotel.

In regard to his libel suit and the happenings which led up to it Mr. Emmerson had little to say. "I am not troubling about it at all," he said casually.

He said that any paper could publish what it liked about public men, so long as it believed what it published. I decided not to bother.

"It is like butting your head against a stone wall. I am satisfied so far as the preliminary examination is concerned, for they certainly failed to prove the ridiculous charge that I was ejected from a hotel with two women of ill-repute."

"I am willing to leave the public to decide whether or not I am guilty."

HUMAN SLATE PUZZLES DOCTORS

Skin Rises in Ridges as the Result of Contact.

NOT THE RESULT OF DISEASE

Writings Made by Blunt Point on Wyatt's Body Stand Out in Clear Relief.

Albany, Or., June 25.—Possessing a peculiar quality in his skin which makes it susceptible to writing with a blunt point as is paper to the marking of a pencil, Albert J. Wyatt, an Albany young man, has discovered that he is a subject of great interest to the medical world. He may be called a human slate.

When marked with a piece of wood, or even the finger the skin rises on the places touched and shows the writing in clear relief, and writing any place on the body is visible several feet away. The letters remain visible from ten to twenty minutes and then the skin gradually resumes its natural position and no scar or mark of any kind remains. Aside from this strange characteristic his skin is perfectly normal, and natural in every respect, not differing in any way from that of the ordinary man. Wyatt's body is also normal in every particular, and he is in perfect health.

His condition is truly remarkable, and while not without a parallel in medical history, it is scarcely of peculiarity in physical characteristics.

Wyatt is now in the employ of the Wells Fargo Express Company, running in its train service between Portland and Dunsmuir, Cal. He is twenty-three years old.

Wyatt's strange condition is not the result of disease. He has never been seriously ill in his life, and his skin has been susceptible to this kind of marking as long as he can remember. He has always been forced to use care in dressing, for if he accidentally brushed his neck with his finger the skin will rise like a wall, and remain that way for several minutes. Oftentimes when he had dressed hastily and gone upon the street before the skin which had raised when touched had subsided to its natural form, people have inquired how he had been burned, or received those who were then surprised that he had not been.

Kept it a Secret. These inquiries have been made many times, but Wyatt has always been very modest about his condition. Until a few weeks ago he has never told any one about the peculiar quality his skin possessed. In fact he never thought much about it. He knew his skin was different from that of the ordinary man, but he didn't realize how truly remarkable his condition was.

It was about three months ago that Wyatt first learned that he was an object of interest to science. At that time he was employed as an express messenger on the Woodburn-Springfield branch of the Southern Pacific, and in Woodburn he picked up an old magazine. He was glancing through it at odd moments while at work, and there found a story describing a man who was termed "a human slate." The man described in the story was just such a skin as Wyatt himself has. He was then being exhibited at the different medical colleges of the country and was creating a furore among the medical fraternity. It was there stated that he was the only man in the world known to be in this condition. Wyatt had hardly had time to glance at the article before his work demanded his attention, and he placed the magazine aside with the intention of saying it. But when he searched for it again it had disappeared, but he hadn't even learned the name of the "Human Slate" before he now remembered the name or date of the magazine.

But the article set him to thinking, and convinced him he possessed a peculiarity which, according to the story, had been possessed by only one other man in the world. He then told some of his associates about the story and his condition. He was promptly told he was a marvel. He also consulted two Portland physicians about his condition, and they stated that they had read of such a condition of the human skin, but this was the first case with which they had ever come in contact or had ever heard of authoritatively.

When in Albany last week Wyatt told several of his friends here about his condition. To many local people he exhibited the strange quality which distinguishes him. He then showed them how to have a picture taken showing the writing on the body.

May Exhibit Himself. Every one who hears of his condition is naturally skeptical. Many have asked what kind of acid he used to make the writing stand out so plain, but when Wyatt submitted to tests by different people with any kind of a blunt point and allowed the writing to be done on any part of his body at any time, doubt was removed. All of the Albany people who saw the experiment have no doubt of the genuineness of the strange freak of Wyatt's skin.

The writing shows best on the back or chest, but will stand out in clear relief on any part of his body, except the tougher skin of his hands. Any kind of a mark with a blunt point, preferably a piece of wood about the size of a match, will make the skin rise where touched. A blunt point must be used, for a sharp one will tear and scratch his skin like it would that of the ordinary man. The writing is always white, while the skin around it, which is not touched, remains a natural color. Thus the writing always stands out plain.

The writing rises in such clear relief that it can be seen in a good light. IT DOES CURE RHEUMATISM. Nothing penetrates to the very core of the pain like this. Rub it in and once or twice a day. Resolves pain. Sold everywhere in 25-cent bottles.

more than one hundred feet away. It requires about five minutes for the skin to rise so that it is clearly visible from fifteen to thirty minutes, gradually fading away as the color resumes its natural shape and color. When the skin has been touched it rises so far from the body that it can be felt clearly enough to be read by a person passing his fingers over it with eyes closed. Many of Wyatt's friends have urged him to exhibit himself. In fact, a Valley physician to whom he exhibited himself sent word to a friend in the theatrical business, and he has urged Wyatt to go into stardom. But Wyatt has thus far refused. He is planning to go over to Jamestown Exposition, however, and may be exhibited there. Wyatt has spent most of his life in this city and vicinity, making his headquarters in Portland since he entered the service of the express company. He is a well-known, popular young man, and is a member of the local lodges of Elks and the Knights of the Maccabees.

CZAR'S NERVES AN UTTER WRECK

Nicholas Outwardly the Same as Ever, But Inwardly Is Unstrung.

St Petersburg, June 25.—Czar Nicholas and his family have removed from Tsarskoe-Selo to Peterhof for the summer. Most extraordinary preparations were made during the winter for his visit and everything has been done which the wit and ingenuity of St. Petersburg men could devise for the safety of the Russian ruler and those dear to him. The palace has been fitted with a new system of telephones in immediate connection with the three guardhouses in the park. By pressing a button the Czar can alarm the 300 men who guard him night and day. These buttons are not only in every room in the Czar's suite, but in several places in each room.

Czar's Room Lined With Steel. The Czar's cabinet, where he works, has been lined under the leather and wood paneling with sheets of steel. And much of the beautiful undergrowth of Samosy around the palace has been cut down so that the view of the approaches may be had from the windows, and in order that less shelter may be afforded to lurkers. Two of the guardhouses are new. In the comparatively safe days before the war there was only one guardhouse and the twenty men who were then sufficient to guard this wretched potentate have now been increased to 300.

Peterhof is an idyllic spot on the southern shore of the Gulf of Finland, eighteen miles west of St. Petersburg. Peter the great built there first his summer house, Monplaisir, and then the present great palace in the style of the Versailles palaces, with innumerable statues and ornamental fountains scattered through a vast park. Catharine the Great erected the huge fountain with the famous group of Samson and the lion, and succeeding rulers added to the building and the extravaganzas of the park. A number of bijou palaces are set apart for the Czarina.

Full of Art Treasures. All the buildings without exception are stuffed full of priceless treasures of which the western world knows nothing, for it has been a rule of the Czar never to let a catalogue be made of the art treasures of Peterhof. In this secluded spot the weary autocrat has now taken his residence for the present, according to reliable accounts, completely broken in health, looking much his bold self outwardly, but below the surface a woe of unstrung nerves.

He has taken with him a host of servants whose faithfulness has been severely tested, and in addition three persons who are not servants, who are not courtiers, but who are his constant companions, one might almost say day and night.

Three Mystics With Him. One of these is a man from the south of Russia, who is generally regarded as a half wild mystic. He is consulted by the Czar on all important matters, and when Premier Stolypin or some other minister approaches the Czar for purposes of consultation he gets not the opinion of his imperial adviser, but of his nameless mystic from the south.

Another of these favorites is a woman from the Volga provinces. There is no shadow on the Czar's marital fidelity, and this woman, known as the red woman from Samara because of the prevailing color of her clothes, is a person of good character as regards purity. Besides she is ugly and no longer young. Her special province is to interpret the books of Daniel and the revelation of St. John. These writings, according to the red woman, deal with contemporary events, and especially with the trials through which Russia is passing. The third companion of the distraught majesty of Russia is a clergyman of the orthodox church who has the reputation of being a great scholar. He is the Czar's confessor and his constant companion in his numerous services of prayer.

BEAUTIFUL PIECE OF WORK

The Illuminated Address for Fireman McDonald is Completed.

The illuminated address to Fireman Dan McDonald which was ordered to be presented to him for bravery at a Richmond street fire, has been completed and signed by Mayor Judd, Ald. Gillean, chairman of No. 3 committee, and City Clerk Baker.

It is a beautiful piece of work, and was engrossed by Mr. Geo. W. Reed, of this city. When it is presented, a handsome gold watch suitably engraved, will be given Mr. McDonald by Ald. Gillean, the latter deciding to do this at his own expense when the city council refused to give McDonald anything more than the address. Ald. Gillean is very modest in regard to the watch, for his name does not appear in the engraving.

REPEAT TORTURE OF DARK AGES

The Warsaw "Third Degree" Constitutes the Limit of Brutality.

Warsaw, Poland, June 25.—All English speaking people have heard of the tortures practiced on Russian political prisoners at Riga. The recent revelations concerning them sent a thrill of horror through civilization. But hardly a whisper has reached the outside world of the atrocities perpetrated on prisoners here, although the fiendish system has been in operation for years. Its application is not confined to political prisoners. Persons accused of all sorts of crimes are subjected to it. Neither sex nor age secures immunity from it. Men and women, youths and maidens are numbered by hundreds among the victims of its barbarities. The question of guilt or innocence has little to do with it. The object is to extort a confession which will secure a conviction of somebody. The cruelties of the inquisition alone afford a parallel to it. To escape from horrible agony scores of poor wretches have been driven to confess themselves guilty of crimes which they never committed, or to accuse others of deeds of which they had no knowledge.

The Warsaw "rats" or town hall, an imposing building, is the scene of these barbarities. On the second floor is a large room stretching right across the front of the building. This is the torture chamber. Anybody is liable to undergo the "third degree" here. The police hear of a meeting in a square or a procession in the street. They surround it and the people who have the misfortune to be passing near it and drive them en masse to the town hall.

Herded Like Cattle. The big gate is opened and they are kept for the time being, in the courtyard beyond it. Then the gates are shut and the public should pry at their unfortunate fellow men, who are beaten by the soldiers and mounted police as soon as they get within the precincts of the town hall. Then they are driven into a room on the ground floor and requested to give up their passports. If, after communicating with the police in the district of the town that they live in, the passports are found to be quite satisfactory, they may be set free. But the process has taken the whole of the night, and meanwhile the people have been herded together in one room without being able to sit down, without food, drink, or fresh air.

Those who, for any reason, have fallen under the suspicion of the police are detained. They are driven to the torture chamber and there admonished to answer all questions that may be put to them. This warning is accompanied by a blow from a rifle butt, a slash from a riding whip or long pieces of India rubber tubing, which causes terrible pain without leaving much trace behind. The victims are beaten on the back, legs, breast and soles of the feet. Often their shrieks can be heard in the street outside and in the neighboring houses, in spite of the double windows and thick doors of the torture chamber.

After the first installment of torture the questions begin. At one time—until a few months ago—two police officers named Konstantinoff and Grun were the chief agents in this terrible method of making the evidence fit the crime. They were assisted by a lot of lusty and callous attendants. But both these monsters are dead, having been killed by the friends of their victims. At present Ivan Pietrovitch Ivanoff is doing their work and in a way which proves he has learned his lesson well. He works under a public prosecutor, or procurator, Alexis Sergeevich Alexeff. Both of them visit the scenes of political outrages, as it is their business to collect materials in connection with the trial which must inevitably follow, whether the guilty persons are caught or not. If these first beatings have not much effect Ivanoff uses more drastic measures. It does not matter that the victim often knows nothing about the crime in particular, or revolutionary societies in general. Ivanoff has got hold of them and means to make use of them. Not only that, but other prisoners are placed within earshot of the torture room that they may hear the shrieks, become unweary, and confess what they know—or don't know.

One Fiendish Device. The victim is strapped onto a table, face downwards and beaten on the spine. But not with an India rubber tube this time. A small wooden box is put on his, or her, spine and beaten with a hammer. Those who have experienced it say that the agony thus produced beggars all description. The more delicately the victim has been nurtured, the worse is the pain, which shoots through every nerve in the body each time the hammer touches the little box. When this form of torture has been applied for some time, Ivanoff again repeats his questions. Should the answers still be unsatisfactory, the rack is applied, hair is torn out by the roots, teeth broken, and ears cut off.

It must not be forgotten that often these victims are entirely innocent of the crime Ivanoff accuses them of, that he knows it, and only tortures them to get evidence for one of his "cases" so that he may get a reward and promotion.

THE "MAIL-ORDER" VOTE.

The water commissioners are about to launch their plebiscite, or mail-order vote, as it has been facetiously called. The commissioners are in a difficult position, and can scarcely be censured for trying to unload responsibility, but it is doubtful whether their new-fangled expedient will hasten a solution of the question.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE IN SCANDINAVIA.

The Scandinavian countries are setting a pace to the rest of Europe in the matter of the enfranchisement of woman. No sooner has the first election taken place in Finland under the new constitution conferring the parliamentary franchise on women than a long step in the same direction is taken by Norway.

Sweden is another Scandinavian country in which the woman suffrage movement has advanced. As far back as 1726 women voted in church matters, but it was not until 1862 that they were given a voice in public affairs.

Canada is booming as is no other country under the sun; but where would it have been today if the immigration department had continued to be as dead as it was ten years ago?

The dinner to Mark Twain by the Pilgrims' Club, of London, was a sincere tribute to the most representative American man of letters. And who so appropriate to propose, the toast to Mark as the witty author of "Obiter Dicta"?

members of parliament. They vote for the county council, which elect the House of Lords, and thus have an indirect voice in the choice of the first chamber. Besides possessing the school and municipal suffrage they are eligible to vote for members of the provincial diets, and are qualified as members of boards of education, municipal relief committees and parochial boards.

Of all these countries Denmark is the only one where women do not possess the right to vote, although six years ago the premier promised that the first reform movement on his programme would be the extension of municipal franchise to women.

THE NATIONALISTS AND THE GOVERNMENT.

The decision of the Irish Nationalists to hereafter pursue an independent course in parliament means the collapse of a species of coalition between the Liberals and Nationalists which has existed for twenty-one years.

Their alliance with the Liberals has not brought what the Nationalists yearn for, but the Governments of Gladstone and Campbell-Bannerman have displayed an honest desire and made earnest efforts to right the wrongs of Ireland.

The Hound of the Baskervilles

BY SIR A. CONAN DOYLE.

"Shall we move farther back upon higher ground?"

"Yes, I think it would be as well."

So as the fog bank flowed onwards we fell back until we were half a mile from the house, and still that dense white sea, with the moon slivering its upper edge, swept slowly and inexorably on.

"We are going too far," said Holmes. "We dare not take the chance of his being overtaken before he can reach us. At all costs we must hold our ground where we are." He dropped on his knees and clasped his ears to the ground. "Thank God, I think that I hear him coming."

A sound of quick steps broke the silence of the moor. Crouching among the stones we stared intently at the silver-tipped bank in front of us. The steps grew louder, and through the fog, as though by a certain, there stepped the man whom we were awaiting. He looked round him in surprise as he emerged into the clear, starlit night. Then he came swiftly down the path, passed close to where we lay, and went on up the long slope behind us. As he walked he glanced continually over either shoulder, like a man who is ill at ease.

"Hiss!" cried Holmes, and I heard the sharp click of a cocking pistol. "Look out! It's coming!"

There was a thin, crisp, continuous patter from somewhere in the heart of that crawling bank. The cloud was within fifty yards of where we lay, and we glared at it, all three, uncertain what horror was about to break from the heart of it. It was at Holmes' elbow and I glanced for an instant at his face. It was pale and exultant, his eyes shining brightly in the moonlight. But suddenly they started forward in a rigid, fixed stare, and his lips parted in amazement.

Lestrade gave a yell of terror and threw himself face downwards upon the ground. I sprang to my feet, my inert hand grasping my pistol, my mind paralyzed by the dreadful shape which had sprung out upon us from the shadows of the fog. A hound it was, an enormous coal-black hound, but not such a hound as mortal eyes have ever seen. Fire burst from its open mouth, its eyes glowed with a smouldering glare, its muzzle and its hackles and dewlap were outlined in flickering flame. Never in the delirious dream of a disordered brain could anything more savage, more appalling, more hellish, be conceived than that dark form and savage face which broke upon us out of the wall of fog.

With loud bounds the huge black creature was leaping down the track, following hard upon the footsteps of our friend. So paralyzed were we by the apparition that we allowed him to pass before we had recovered our nerve. Then Holmes and I both fired together, and the creature gave a hideous howl, which showed that one at least had hit him. He did not pause, however, but bounded onward. Far away on the path we saw Sir Henry looking back, his face white in the moonlight, his hands raised in horror, glaring helplessly at the frightful thing which was hunting him down.

But that cry of pain from the hound had blown all our fears to the wind. If he was vulnerable he was mortal, and if we could wound him we could kill him. Never have I seen a man run as Holmes did that night. I am reckoned best of foot, but he outpaced me as much as I outpaced the little professional. In front of us as we flew up the track we heard scream after scream from Sir Henry and the deep roar of the hound. I was in time to see the best spring upon its victim, and I saw him to the ground and worry at his throat. But the next instant, Holmes had emptied five barrels of his revolver into the creature's flank. With a last howl of agony and a vicious snap in the air, it rolled upon its back, its feet pawing furiously, and then fell limp upon its side. I stooped, panting, and pressed my pistol to the dreadful, shimmering head, but it was useless to press the trigger. The hound was dead.

Sir Henry lay insensible where he had fallen. We tore away his collar and Holmes breathed a prayer of gratitude when we saw that there was no sign of a wound, and that the rescue had been in time. Already our friend's eyes had opened, and he made a feeble effort to move. Lestrade thrust his brandy flask between the baronet's teeth and his frightened eyes were looking at us.

"My God," he whispered. "What was it? In heaven's name, was it?"

"It's dead, whatever it is," said Holmes. "We've laid the family ghost once and for ever."

In here size and strength it was a creature, which was lying before us. It was not a pure black hound and it was not a pure mastiff, but it appeared to be a combination of the two—gaunt, savage, and as large as a small lioness. Even now, in the stillness of death, the huge jaws seemed to be dripping with a bluish foam, and the small, deep-set, cruel eyes were ringed with fire. I placed my hand upon the glowing muzzle, and as I held them up my own fingers smouldered and gleamed in the darkness.

"Phosphorus," I said.

"A cunning preparation of it," said Holmes, sniffing at the dead animal. "There is no smell which might have interfered with his power of scent. We owe you a deep apology, Sir Henry, for having exposed you to this fright. I was prepared for a hound, but not for such a creature as this. And the fog gave us little time to receive him."

"You have saved my life," said Holmes. "Having first endangered it. Are you strong enough to stand?"

"Give me another mouthful of that brandy and I shall be ready for anything. So! Now, if you will help me up. What do you propose to do?"

"To leave you here. You are not fit for further adventure tonight. If you will wait one or other of us will go back with you to the Hall."

He tried to stagger to his feet; but he was still ghastly pale and trembling in every limb. We helped him to a rock, where he sat shivering with his face buried in his hands.

"We must leave you now," said Holmes. "The rest of our work must be done, and every moment is of importance. We have our case, and now we only want our man, the murderer of the man whom we are hunting."

And now I come rapidly to the conclusion of this singular narrative, in which I have tried to make the reader share those dark fears and vague surmises which clouded our lives so long, and ended in so tragic a manner. On the morning after the death of the hound the fog had lifted, and we were guided by Mrs. Stapleton to the point where they had found a pathway through the bog. It helped us to realize the horror of this woman's life when we saw the eagerness and joy with which she laid us on her husband's track. We left her standing upon the thin peninsula of firm, peaty soil which tapered out into the wilderness. From the end of it a small wand planted here and there showed where the path zigzagged from tuft to tuft of rushes among those green-scummed pits and foul quagmires which barred the way to the stranger. Rank reeds and lush, slimy water plants sent an odor of decay and a heavy miasmatic vapor into our faces, while a false step plunged us more than once thigh-deep into the dark quivering mire, which shook for yards in soft undulations around our feet. Its tenacious grip plucked at our boots as we went, and when we stepped into it it was as if some malignant hand was tugging us down into those obscene depths, so grim and purposeful was the clutch in which it held us. Once only we saw a trace that someone had passed that perilous way before us. From amid a tuft of cotton-grass which bore it up out of slime some dark thing was projecting. Holmes sank to his waist as he stepped from the path to seize it, and had we not been there to drag him out he could never have set his foot upon firm land again. He held an old black boot in the air. "Meyers, Toronto," was printed on the leather, inside.

It was evident to us that all pursuit was in vain until the fog had lifted. Meanwhile we left Lestrade in possession of the house while Holmes and I went back with the baronet to Baskerville Hall. The story of the Stapleton could no longer be withheld from them together, he and I, to mark the pathway through the mire. Oh, if I could only have plucked them out today. Then indeed you would have had him at your mercy!"

It was evident to us that all pursuit was in vain until the fog had lifted. Meanwhile we left Lestrade in possession of the house while Holmes and I went back with the baronet to Baskerville Hall. The story of the Stapleton could no longer be withheld from them together, he and I, to mark the pathway through the mire. Oh, if I could only have plucked them out today. Then indeed you would have had him at your mercy!"

said Holmes. "Tell us then where we shall find him. If you have ever aided him in evil, help us now and go alone."

"There is one place where he can have fled," she answered. "There is an old tin mine on an island in the heart of the Mire. It was there that he kept his hound, and there also he had made preparations so that he might have a refuge. That is where he would fly."

The fog bank lay like white wool against the window. Holmes held the lamp towards it. "See," said he. "No one could find his way into the Grimpen Mire tonight."

She laughed and clapped her hands. Her eyes and teeth gleamed with a fierce merriment. "He may find his way in, but never out," she cried. "How can he see the guiding wands tonight? We planted them together, he and I, to mark the pathway through the mire. Oh, if I could only have plucked them out today. Then indeed you would have had him at your mercy!"

green-scummed pits and foul quagmires which barred the way to the stranger. Rank reeds and lush, slimy water plants sent an odor of decay and a heavy miasmatic vapor into our faces, while a false step plunged us more than once thigh-deep into the dark quivering mire, which shook for yards in soft undulations around our feet. Its tenacious grip plucked at our boots as we went, and when we stepped into it it was as if some malignant hand was tugging us down into those obscene depths, so grim and purposeful was the clutch in which it held us. Once only we saw a trace that someone had passed that perilous way before us. From amid a tuft of cotton-grass which bore it up out of slime some dark thing was projecting. Holmes sank to his waist as he stepped from the path to seize it, and had we not been there to drag him out he could never have set his foot upon firm land again. He held an old black boot in the air. "Meyers, Toronto," was printed on the leather, inside.

PITTSBURG RICHES SOAKED IN BLOOD

Coroner Reveals Tragedy of Steel Making.

DEATH BUSY IN THE SHOPS

Year's Fatalities Comprise Human Sacrifice to Industrial Progress.

Pittsburg, Pa., June 24.—The grim and tragic side of Pittsburg's industrial supremacy, as reflected in the coroner's log-book of violent deaths, is beginning to arouse a feeling of horror at the frightful cost of the wealth which its millionaires are piling up.

When the coroner closed his log for 1906, he found that in the year he had been called on to record a total of 2,660 deaths. Of these 919 were the result of accidents in mill, mine, or on railroad, the industries most essential to the city's progress. Sufficient more of the total number of deaths in the same causes to make more than 50 per cent of all the deaths the cost in human life of the steel and money made in Pittsburg for 1906.

Appalling as these figures are, the chances are that a new record will be established this year. Already in the five months that have elapsed, 1,095 deaths have been recorded in the coroner's log, and of these 344 came suddenly and violently in the mills and mines and on railroads that gridiron the city. In the same period last year the total number of deaths recorded was 1,015, and those laid at the door of the city's industries numbered 240.

250 Deaths Every Month.

While in the aggregate these figures may seem abnormal, they are recorded so regularly that their magnitude is scarcely realized. The average number of deaths reported to the coroner is about 250 a month, and there is little variation from this from year to year. Comparing the loss of life from accidents with the tonnage and production of the Pittsburg district, one life has been snuffed out for every 50,000 tons of coal that is shipped, and the annual shipment is about 50,000,000 tons. For every 3,800 cars that carry freight out of or into Pittsburg some soul has given up the ghost. This is exclusive of cars that are carrying freight through to other points.

Every 7,600 tons of the 7,000,000 tons annual production of iron and steel have been put out at the cost of the life of one of the manipulators somewhere in its manufacture, and of the 800,000 tons annual output of steel rails every 87,000 tons have been put upon the market only after some one of its producers has laid down its life.

Reaper Seeking a New Record. No other city in the country approaches Pittsburg's ghastly record of human lives sacrificed on the altar of progress. Every day and every night the clouds of black smoke that arise ceaselessly and the glare of the furnaces furnish a funeral pyre for those whose lives have been snuffed out in the making of the city's steel and wealth.

Day by day the death log of the county coroner, the bare official record demanded by law, keeps track of these victims. The coroner deals only in the hardest facts of broken hearts and suffering of broken hearts and homes, entailed in his entries, are beyond his province. Name, place, date, and cause he can give of almost every casualty, but that is all. Sometimes even the name is lacking, for when a man, unknown, as often happens, is swallowed up in a giant ladle of molten steel, identity becomes a mere numeral in the log-book.

There is a gap and sorrow in some unknown, unheard of home, but the industrial juggernaut goes on belching out steel and crushing out more entries for the coroner's record.

Flesh and Blood in the Log?

Although the coroner's log is the tersest kind of a casualty list it is possible to glean from it some idea of the manner in which death comes to the workers. Molten metal figures, the workers, as often happens, "burned" by molten steel and died. That is the obituary of scores. Often a blast furnace bursts. That scatters death and sometimes a fate worse than death which does not figure in the coroner's log.

THE UPSPECTING OF A HUGE LADLE

The upsetting of a huge ladle of molten steel is no uncommon thing in the mills. Men work there at a frantic pace. Demand runs far ahead of the output of the mills, and no time is wasted in the making of steel. Men who work always alongside of death are not especially careful. Thus, often, the ladles spill over. Sometimes in these a man vanishes. But the rails go out. Imagine traveling over rails of partly of flesh and blood. The log-book of the Allegheny County coroner says it is possible.

Then there are the giant rollers that crush out steel plate and often human lives, and murderous machinery that is everywhere a death trap for the unwarly workman. The record contains, also the names of men who worked, for an instant, too near the great electric cranes, those huge mechanical arms that, with almost human precision, pick up massive pieces of structural steel about the plants and place them wherever may be indicated at the simple moving of a lever.

Railroads Swell Total. The mines and the railroads supply their quota to the coroner's log. Falling slate, gas explosions, derrick, falls from scaffolding, in the shunting cars, and other accidents on the rail, all help to swell the cost in human life.

Not all the violent deaths, however, can be classed as accidents in the "workshop." The inordinate demand for labor necessarily attracts a large percentage of the country's immigrants. Six days in the week supplying the human force and muscular power to the integral machinery, these aliens, surfeited with the freedom of their newly-adopted country, resort on their one holiday to the festivities and customs of their former homes. Weddings, christenings, balls and parties, at which various alcoholic beverages are used most copiously, are held. Quarrels result frequently, knives and firearms are used, and there are hospital cases to be cared for. Deaths not infrequently result from these sources, and so commonplace are these reports that it is counted a slow night in local newspaper offices if at least a dozen have not been reported by Sunday midnight.

FRANCE MAKES PUBLIC CONDITIONS OF WAR ALLIANCE WITH SPAIN.

Paris, June 25.—The official text of the French-Spanish understanding was published today. It declares that each government is firmly resolved to maintain intact its insular and maritime possessions in the Mediterranean and Atlantic, and binds each country in the event of circumstances arising which threaten to modify the status quo to consult the other with the view of "common action." The latter is the most important provision, amounting practically to a military convention for the mutual guarantee of their possessions.

In a note for transmittal to the powers, each country distinctly points out that the agreement was made in the interest of peace, as the status quo cannot be modified without prejudicing the vital interests of the signatories.

The declarations contained in the agreement were exchanged May 16.

SUBSIDIES OBSTRUCTED

Proposed Extension of British Columbia's Grant Arouses Churchill.

London, June 26.—In committee of the House of Commons on the British North American bill Sir F. Banbury during an amendment that the period during which the annual grant of $100,000 is to be made by the Dominion to the Province of British Columbia should be extended from ten to thirty years. Sir F. Banbury was speaking when the House adjourned. Mr. Churchill said it was a most disgraceful and flagrant act of obstruction.

STORY MADDENED PARENT

Exhausted by the struggle and with her mental faculties dulled by the stimulant, the witness declared that she recalled nothing more until she regained her senses in bed late that night at the home of County Clerk E. L. Kidd, where she had been visiting Miss Kidd. She testified that on the following morning, when her father asked her for the cause of her illness, she unconsciously, she related to him on bended knees the statement she made today. This recital, the defense contends, so affected the mind of Judge Loving that he committed a crime, which, according to his statements, could have been prevented by no power "except the Almighty."

Whether the story told by the nineteen-year-old girl today can be disproved by the prosecution remains to be seen, for on the damaging of it hangs the fate of the defendant. They assert that it can be shown that the crime laid at the door of Estes, now in his grave, was impossible. The rebuttal by the prosecution will be probably the most important, though not the most sensational, feature of the case. How much of the evidence they already have can be introduced is yet to be determined, and a legal contest as to admissibility will be waged tomorrow because the defense have already announced that their case is nearing an end.

Miss Loving admitted that she had taken two drinks with young Estes during the drive, the first being at Estes' store. She was asked about other occasions when it is charged that she drank whisky, but the prosecution objected on the ground that it had no bearing on the case.

The defense waived the question for the present, but may insist upon similar ones later in the trial. Aside from the testimony of the young girl the examination of two physicians concerning the possible injury of Judge Loving at the time of the killing, and the testimony of the defendant and Harry Sned were features of the trial.

Case Like Thaw's

Dr. Wm. Tunstall, of Lovington, who saw Judge Loving before and after the shooting, testified that he thought Loving did it while insane. Tunstall is a practicing physician of Nelson County. He based his theory partially on his personal knowledge of Loving, who, he said, went on frequent drunken binges, ending in delirium tremens. Judge Loving, he thought, was deranged for over an hour.

Dr. Melvin, of Halifax, who has for 45 years practiced medicine, stated that he had passed upon the mental condition of many people and he testified that continued drinking brought on excitement, which often ended in insanity.

After an argument of an hour, Judge Barksdale permitted the defendant, who was on the stand this morning, to relate a conversation with his brother-in-law, Harry Sned, who told him of the alleged drugging of his daughter which led to the killing. "This revelation came to me as a thunderbolt from a clear sky," said the defendant. "I loved my daughter and no power on earth could have estranged my heart from her."

Here the witness wept, and several of his relatives gave way to tears. Continuing, Loving said: "In this condition of mind, I went out intending to put that man to death. I got my shotgun and drove at once to Lovington. When I got there, I found a boy and asked for Estes, but I called he was at Oak Ridge. I went out to Oak Ridge and I inquired for Estes. I learned that Estes was in a car at the station. I then turned my horse to a livery stable and got out of the buggy, and loaded my gun. I saw young Estes in the car with two negroes and waved them aside and said to Estes: "You are the young man who takes ladies out driving and drugs and ruins them?"

"I heard no reply, and when he made motion as if to leave the car, I shot him. I then surrendered myself to the nearest magistrate."

Instructor Shoes
For Children's Growing Feet
MADE IN 35 STYLES AND FOUR WIDTHS
THE TETRAULD DISTRIBUTING CO.
Sole Selling Agents for Canada, MONTREAL.

Your children's shoes should be more carefully chosen than your own. Your feet have stopped growing, the bones are hard and the joints strong. Your feet can much better stand the cramping of a badly fitting shoe. But just think what an ill-shaped shoe does to your children's tender feet. They need room to grow, the bones are soft, the joints easily distorted. Yet every child's shoe made in this country but one, is thrown together without regard to these conditions. Only one children's shoe—the Instructor Shoe—is made in natural shapes. We make a study of children's feet. Our lasts are all modelled on Nature's lines. In the Instructor Shoe each toe lies perfectly flat and straight, the shoe fits snugly over the instep, there is absolutely no cramping. All other shoes for children are made from scraps of poor leather. The Instructor Shoe is made from the centre of the best hides we can buy. We have produced in the Instructor Shoe the best shoe in the world for children's growing feet. Examine one closely and you'll agree with us. If you shoe dealer cannot show it to you write to us and we'll tell you who can. The name "Instructor Shoe" is stamped on the sole of the genuine.

ORCHARD'S STORY FIERCELY ATTACKED Defense Has Many Witnesses to Show Private Grudge Against Steunenberg.

West Lambton Liberals in Big Rally at Sarnia Three Thousand Heard Addresses by Messrs. Aylesworth and Graham.

FORCING CHINA'S HAND Japan Determined to Settle Manchurian Timber Disputes.

Boise, Idaho, June 25.—The first direct testimony in defense of Wm. D. Orchard was offered today. It was chiefly directed towards showing that Harry Orchard, after blaming ex-Governor Frank Steunenberg for the loss of his interest in the Hercules mine, threatened to have revenge by the independence explosion, when they were frequently seen together and afterwards, when Sterling called off a bloodhound that was following Orchard's trail and justified the inference that mine-owners inspired the crime.

Sarnia, June 25.—West Lambton Liberals, at the number of over two thousand, attended the grand rally and picnic at Lake Huron Park today, and heard addresses by Hon. A. B. Aylesworth, Hon. Jacques Bureau, Hon. George P. Graham and Mr. F. P. Pardee, M. P., West Lambton. The town was gay with flags and streamers and the visitors were given a royal welcome, with a band in attendance. The park is on the shore of Lake Huron, and under the oaks overlooking the lake, a platform had been erected for the speakers. Mr. Stephen Burnham, of Sombra, president of the West Lambton Reform Association, presided.

Mukden, June 25.—Without waiting for an announcement of the policy of the new Manchurian administration, Japan, on the grounds of defense of her treaty rights, has begun a programme apparently directed toward forcing action by China. It is reported that the Pekin Government already has asked to reopen negotiations toward reaching an agreement in the timber dispute. All Manchurian industries on the Yalu River are in suspense on this account.

—Miss Lula Scott and Miss Gertrude Hefferman have returned home after spending a week in Toronto.

—The vaudeville at Springbank Theatre last night attracted a fair audience and appeared to please.

—The condition of Col. John Macbeth, who has been seriously ill for some time, is slightly improved today.

—Col. A. M. Smith left yesterday for New York, from whence he will sail in a day or two for England via the White Star line.

—Mrs. J. C. Chesborough and daughter of Chicago, are the guests of the former's sister-in-law, Miss E. Chesbrough, 472 Park Avenue.

—Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Thompson, and little daughter Katherine, Hargrave street, Winnipeg, spent the past two weeks with Mr. and Mrs. John Lockhead, King street.

—Mrs. E. Clegg, of 221 William street, and her son, Fred, have left for Aguascalientes, Mexico, to visit Mrs. Clegg's son, J. H., who is superintendent of the Mexican Central Railroad.

—The marriage took place at St. Peter's Palace yesterday morning of Miss Agnes Glead, to Mr. Charles Stanilaus Hevey, son of Bailiff Hevey of this city. Rev. Father White performed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Hevey left immediately after the ceremony for Hamilton, where they will reside.

—The employees of the McCormick Manufacturing Company yesterday presented Mr. Hugh Newell, who is leaving for New York, with a purse of gold. Mr. Newell, who has been an employee of the company for over 46 years in the capacity of candymaker, is one of the best known residents of East London. Mr. Thomas Duff read the address and Mr. O. Richards made the presentation.

—Among recent Anglican appointments mentioned in today's Globe is that of Rev. W. T. Hallam, B. A., of Lindsay, who will be in charge of St. Andrew's Church at Center Island. The young clergyman referred to is the son of Mr. Thomas Hallam, C.P.R. engineer, for many years a resident of this city, but now doing duty in Toronto. Besides ranking high in his university studies, young Mr. Hallam is a clever musician, and has been known to alternate between the pulpit and the organ in the absence of an organist.

—Miss Laura Rose, of Guelph, and Miss Helen McMurchie, of Harrison, are the two delegates, who will give addresses at the summer meeting of the Coldstream Women's Institute tomorrow afternoon and evening. The meetings are free to all, and it is hoped that there will be a good attendance. Miss Rose and Miss McMurchie are also to address a meet-

—Mr. Chester McFarlane, of South London, who has been on a two weeks' trip to Montreal, Quebec and Murray Bay, has returned home.

—Mr. George F. Driscoll, formerly manager of the Bennett Vaudeville Theater in London, and who has been for some time superintendent of the theatrums being established by the Bennett people in almost every city in Canada, is in London, conferring with the head office. Mr. Driscoll has very many friends in London, who are happy to renew old friendships.

—The Calgary Daily Herald says: A very quiet, but one of the prettiest weddings of the week, took place on Wednesday afternoon, June 12, at the manse, when Miss C. McDonald, London, Ont., and Mr. A. H. Borman, rancher, Calgary, were united by the Rev. Mr. Clark. Only the immediate friends of the bride and groom were present. The bride looked charming in a traveling costume of brown chiffon broadcloth, with hat to match. The happy couple left, amid showers of rice and many good wishes, for an extended trip through California and Eastern States.

—The Calgary Daily Herald says: A dozen passengers who were aboard an Otaway avenue car were last night compelled to alight at Lyle and Dine streets as the car went into the barns at 11 o'clock. The passengers then waited for another car, but they were disappointed, and finally had to walk home in the rain. It appears that a car was off the track in the south end, and that when the track was finally cleared all the other cars went in the barns instead of completing the trip.

—The death of Mrs. R. Parker, widow of the late C. W. Parker, occurred yesterday at the family residence, 562 Richmond street. Mrs. Parker had been a resident of the city for many years. She is survived by five daughters and two granddaughters. The daughters are Mrs. W. Green, Mrs. George Grisman, Mrs. James Pope, of this city; Miss Rose and Miss Tillie, at home. The granddaughters are Misses Florence Grisman and Miss Edna Pope. The funeral will be held from the family residence tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

—A HARD ROW TO HOE. The workers on the Dundas street sewer east of Maitland street, have literally "a hard row to hoe." The sandy soil is easy enough to get through, though of course every foot of the trench's sides has to be well shored up. But there is a closely planted lot of big shade trees on the south side of the street, encroaching on the roadway so much that the trunks of the maples and the side of the sewer trench are in a straight line, so that all the roots of these trees on the side next the street have to be cut away. What effect this operation will have on the future growth of these trees remains to be seen. Certainly the network of roots causes digging to be a difficult task.

Special attention is called to the auction sale of choice lots, belonging to McMullan estate, South London, fronting on Orchard street, on Saturday, 25th inst., at 3 p.m., on the grounds. These are choice lots, close to street railway, and beautifully situated. See posters for full particulars.

WEDDED IN THE WEST

Mr. Harry Latta, Former Londoner, Married at Strassburg, Sask.

The Mountaineer, a paper published in Strassburg, Sask., contains the following account of the marriage of a well-known former Londoner:

"A very pretty home wedding took place at the residence of Mr. W. Seller, of Strawberry Hill Farm, when his eldest daughter, Isabella Maud, was united in marriage to Mr. Harry Latta, one of our rising young business-men and a son of the late John and Eliza Latta, of London, Ont.

"The father gave the bride away at 5 p.m. Mrs. (Rev.) Elton, of Earl Gray, presided at the piano and Mr. Elmore Seller, groom's uncle, at the Grand Estella Latta, a cousin of the groom, acted as bridesmaid and groomsmen.

"The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Elton, of Earl Grey, assisted by Rev. Mr. Heathfield, of Strassburg.

"The bride looked exceedingly pretty robed in a gown of white silk, trimmed with Valenciennes lace, and carried a bouquet of white roses and maiden-hair fern. The bridesmaid wore a dress of crepe de chine, trimmed with lace and insertion, and carried a bouquet of pink roses.

"After congratulations and a sumptuous wedding breakfast, Mr. and Mrs. Latta left for Winnipeg to spend their honeymoon, after which they will reside in Strassburg. The bride wore a going-away dress of brown lady cloth, with trimmings of silk braid, and hat to match."

SOME OF NATURE'S CURIOUS CAPRICES

Picks Out the World's Arcadias for the Great Cataclysms.

Apparently every earthquake or volcanic eruption represents a grim joke on the part of mother nature, for it is usually those spots that have been favored with a wealth of the most exquisite scenery and delightful character that suffer.

Pent forces of the inner earth do not vent themselves on the rock-bound coasts of Greenland, on the arid stretches of western prairies, in the deserts of Sahara, in the snowy wastes of the country of the earthquake and of the volcano, in the Bay of Naples, Martinique, St. Thomas and Valparaiso.

Where there is tropical luxuriance that charms men away from the colder and grayer north; where a sense of peace and riot of color and luxuriant plant life, such as the northern never sees in his own region, hold out their appeal; where the sheltering palm sways, the sky and sea alike are deep blue and the air never loses its balmy and sleepy restfulness, there is the country of the earthquake and of the volcano.

One versed in knowledge of the occult or the mysteries and secrets of nature might say that times come when mother earth regrets having so bountifully blessed a charming country, and in a fit of suddenness or a desire to chasten its people and awaken them from their day dream, turns and at a stroke wipes out all the glorified landscape.

BEAUTIFUL LANDS DEVASTATED.

Jamaica devastated, Kingston slipping into the sea, San Francisco overturned, Martinique blown to pieces by the eruption of Mount Pelee, the idyllic Italian country near the Bay of Naples forever at the mercy of the insatiable Vesuvius, which after two thousand years of malignant activity is still ready at a moment's notice to belch out its molten lava, are all examples of how treacherous the most perfect arcadia may be.

In connection with the latest of these visitations, the Jamaica earthquake, it is notable that among those who had lived at Kingston, grief over the destruction of the lovely aspect of the country was second only to pity expressed for the human suffering entailed by the catastrophe.

"A land of dreams" is a term frequently applied to this picturesque island that rises mountain high out of the painted waters of the Caribbean, its jagged summits seeming to reach to the azure sky, while the coral and limestone feet are washed in the ocean. For splendor of tropical forests it could bear comparison with any country. Even to the height of 5,000 feet there is abundant plant life, and on the level the forests are one endless succession of wonders. Trees 200 feet tall, having at half their height branches which would be considered big trees farther north, divide the attention with a root of many-hued flowers, of which the dazzling red poinsettia is the queen both for height and color.

Valleys and valleys of beauty all their own, abundant in this island of enchantment, and little cascades and rills dashing over sheer rocks reveal themselves to the fascinated eye through-

THE CAR CHECKERS' STATEMENTS.

To the Editor of The Advertiser:

Being one of the nine checkers who struck work on June 19, at the Grand Trunk sheds, and being anxious that the public should know the facts of the case, I would thank you to give me space for this letter in your valuable paper. In the first place we did not ask for a raise, but on, or about April 28, we were called into the office and told by the foreman that a ten per cent raise had been granted us by the company. That would give the checkers $47 per month and porters 14 1/2 cents per hour, to commence May 1. We worked on, looking for the fulfillment of the promise, until June 18, when at noon the same day we were shown a letter, by the foreman stating that, through some misunderstanding, our checks would only be made out for $45 00.

We met together and considered it very unfair treatment and decided to quit work until the promised ten per cent raise was granted us. It was our promise although it were to cost us our positions. This we did, with the result that our places were all filled and we were paid off in full. The two dollars short on the checks for May, also at the rate of $47 00 for June, were called into the office and we gained the money promised. This was all we asked for. Yours sincerely,

BURIED CHILD ALIVE

HIDEOUS MURDER CHARGED TO A PENNSYLVANIA STEPFATHER.

Westchester, Pa., June 25.—Irwin Lewis, stepfather of Mary Newlin, aged 5 years, whose body was buried in a pit in the barnyard, at her home near Avondale, on Friday, was committed to prison yesterday, following an inquest into the case, on a formal charge of murder.

Before the inquest Lewis made a partial confession to District Attorney MacElree, in which he said that he had buried the child in the pit in the barnyard. He said he saw her fall, and when he went to pick her up she was dead. He feared he might be accused of killing her, and he tied a burlap bag over the head, fastened a cord about the neck and buried the body in the pit in the barnyard.

The inquest was held at Avondale, a small village near the Lewis home. Dr. U. S. Gifford, the coroner's physician, who made the post-mortem examination of the body, testified that death was caused by suffocation or asphyxiation, and there was nothing in the condition of the body to show that the child had sustained such injuries as to cause her death.

District Attorney MacElree then repeated the partial confession of Lewis, and the jury returned a verdict that the child came to her death, at the hands of Irwin Lewis.

Immediately after the inquest Lewis was taken before Justice of the Peace Lipp, where a formal case was made out against the accused, and he was committed to prison.

The condition of the body when found and the testimony of the coroner's physician leave little room for doubt, according to the district attorney, that the child was buried alive.

HIDEOUS MURDER CHARGED TO A PENNSYLVANIA STEPFATHER.

Westchester, Pa., June 25.—Irwin Lewis, stepfather of Mary Newlin, aged 5 years, whose body was buried in a pit in the barnyard, at her home near Avondale, on Friday, was committed to prison yesterday, following an inquest into the case, on a formal charge of murder.

Before the inquest Lewis made a partial confession to District Attorney MacElree, in which he said that he had buried the child in the pit in the barnyard. He said he saw her fall, and when he went to pick her up she was dead. He feared he might be accused of killing her, and he tied a burlap bag over the head, fastened a cord about the neck and buried the body in the pit in the barnyard.

The inquest was held at Avondale, a small village near the Lewis home. Dr. U. S. Gifford, the coroner's physician, who made the post-mortem examination of the body, testified that death was caused by suffocation or asphyxiation, and there was nothing in the condition of the body to show that the child had sustained such injuries as to cause her death.

District Attorney MacElree then repeated the partial confession of Lewis, and the jury returned a verdict that the child came to her death, at the hands of Irwin Lewis.

Immediately after the inquest Lewis was taken before Justice of the Peace Lipp, where a formal case was made out against the accused, and he was committed to prison.

The condition of the body when found and the testimony of the coroner's physician leave little room for doubt, according to the district attorney, that the child was buried alive.

The rose is the emblem of secrecy in Greece, and was formerly hung over the table where guests were entertained, in token that nothing heard there was to be repeated. Hence the expression "keep your secrets under the rose."
