POETRY.

Departure.

Art thou fled, my companion? No echo remains in the shadow, Somewhere and still in the wood, of thy wailings tender and strong.
Where, by the lakes and valleys; where,
in the forest and meadows,
May the lost singer be sought, without the mention of song?
Peace and its pleasure remain from thy lay of the eve and morning.
Given unasked, as the perfumes that flow and go wafting unknown,
Haply, some soul has received it, darkened with pride and with scorn, Sweetening the spirit forever, in a way that may never be shown.
Beauty is swept from the flowers, and grain from the stalks that are broken;
Chill is the breath of the breeze, tho'
the sun shone a summer through.
Yet, there is place in the heart for a word so long ago spoken;
Remembrances stay when the days go not back nor their labors undo.

Harsh is the voice of the sea; and the fog on its face set with frowning, Rolls away from the shore as with courses not to return.
Well thou art silent and gone, here calm in the tumult is drowning;
Tenderness lost like childhood in manhood, sullen and strong.
Where have the cadences gathered, thick from thy happiness falling?
Into some heart like a bird that fits by and is lost in the wood?
Why is the ear like a dreamer, unknow-ing the voice that was calling;
Waiting the fragment unheard of the fragment understood?
Southward thy wing and thy warble fit
among branches and flowers, Born with a passion not dead, nor to sleep with the end of a song;
Never to pause while the seasons garner
the minutes and hours,
Fragrant, and shy of singers, shunning the dissonant throng.

Art thou forever gone, or soon to return to my hearing?
Never were the fields and woods like the floor of our summer days.
Teach me once more in the spring, teach me to utter unfeared,
Pure as thou singest, the songs that may often rise.

SELECT STORY.

Last Strike at Ophir.

Ophir was the most prosperous mining camp on the western slope of the Sierra, and Wash Bonner was the most prosperous miner it contained. His claim, the "Blue Juniata," was paying enormously, and Wash had become very popular, for he gave away his money as fast as he made it. Wash was a tall, good humored Missourian, lean, light haired and sleepy. No one gave him credit for much energy or ambition, and the accident by which he had stumbled upon his claim when the camp was first settled was told far and wide as a case of "fool luck."

It happened this way: The camp began as a placer camp, and all the "claims" along the stream or on the flat were taken up, when Wash, a tall greynose of a now comper, drifted in without a dollar in his name, and stood watching the sailor company of rans away from ships in San Francisco bay as they took out their "ounce to the man" from the best washings in the camp.

"What are you lookin' at, young fellow?" said the captain of the company.
"Why don't you stake out a claim?"
"All taken," said Wash slowly.
"Go up on the top of the hill by them oaks," said the man, winking at his comrades. "More than there here."
Wash borrowed a pick, went to the place indicated and in an hour developed the most famous mine of the district. It was a curious pocket mine in a loose, broken formation, and though every one rushed to the place and staked out the whole hillside, no other claim ever paid a tenth part as much as the "Blue Juniata."

In the course of time, as the region became settled and men with families came in, Wash fell in love with the pretty daughter of a farmer in the Sacramento valley. He reviewed the past, a hundred thousand dollars had come out of his mine, and he had nothing left to show for it. He resolved that if the girl would have him he would never waste another cent. He went to the claim, worked all day, struck a "pocket," and took out more than a thousand dollars, the largest yield of a single day in the history of the mine. Then he quit work, went to the town, "spruced himself up," drove down into the valley, called on the girl, proposed and was accepted.

"Jennie," said Wash, "you've got to take me, or you want me, just as if I hadn't any mine and wasn't worth a pietyune."
"I do," said Jennie; "it's you I care for, Wash."
A month later they were married, and began housekeeping in a little house of white pine built near the mine. Then Wash began the regular development of his claim. For six months he kept up his courage, though not a dollar had come from it in all that time. They lived on what was left of the $1,000 from the wedding expenses were taken out. Then one day Wash said: "Jennie, the boys think the old mine is played out, but I don't. I'll never give it up while I live. I'll find a bigger pocket in that mountain side than any man ever yet struck in California."
He climbed the hill and began work on a tunnel which should strike the broken, gold bearing ledges at a lower point than he had yet reached.
Months more passed over the heads of the miner and his wife. One after another their friends deserted them. Their credit gave out, and they lived on game, fish and berries, so that the little money they had could all be spent for blasting powder. Every morning at daybreak Wash, gaunt and silent, went to his work, every night at dark he stumbled home to his cabin.
"Jennie," he said, "I know there is gold there. We will find it soon. I never before worked a month in the old mine without taking out something. This deadbox has lasted more than a year. It can't last always. I will find the lead again, and then we will let the rest go, and buy a farm in the valley, where we can forget about this fight."

She believed every word, for she was a loving, loyal woman, and she knew that this great awkward Missourian was a man among thousands. The very boys in the town hooted after him and called him crazy, but she knew better. Her family had once urged her to leave him and come home, but they never ventured to suggest it again. Old miners passing by looked at the claim, and said there was no gold left. Men who had thousands of dollars from her husband, and owed their entire fortunes to him, at last refused to give him credit for a sack of flour or a side of bacon.
"You stick by the mine, Wash; I'll stick by you," was all that Jennie said.
She never told her husband that she had gone to her brother, who was rich, and asked him for a little money to carry them through the winter. "Not for that spendthrift Missourian to waste," was his answer. "He can clerk in my store if he will give up his foolishness."
Wash's hair grew gray and thin. He stooped lower and lower. Deep lines were graven in his face, and his eyes became fierce and troubling. Men met him in the gulches trapping game, or down in the streams with his fish nets, and passed him by without a word. Prospectors, climbing over the hills, heard the sound of his pick as he toiled in his tunnel, and laughed him to scorn. "Because he found a few pockets he is boring right into the granite. Crazy as a loon, and his wife as bad. Her relations have done everything to help them—offered them a farm and the best kind of a show down in the valley."
It was an afternoon in October. The saloonkeeper sat on the bench by his door reading a newspaper. He heard a noise at the head of the street; the village boys were shouting. "Here comes the crazy Missourian miner!"
Wash, ragged and miserable, came in sight, and after a moment's hesitation spoke to him.
"Evening, Mr. Riley."
"I can't do anything for you."
"Mr. Riley, listen to me. I haven't a cent in the world. We've sold all our goods and worked in the mine together this month. Jennie's held the drill while I druv it. I can't get a pound of powder, but the holes are all set in the face, ready. Something tells me this time it will touch gold. I can feel it just ahead. I've felt it all along, but now it's right there, within reach of one more blast. I tell you, Riley, I know it's thar."

"You're crazy, Wash."
"Riley, you've got money. Give me one keg of powder and I'll make you a rich man. I'll give you half I take out. You don't know how I've worked this year. I've hammered from daylight to dark, gone hungry and slept cold, and fell down in a dead faint time and time over. Put your hand thar!"
He seized the saloonkeeper's hand and held it on his breast. The man felt Wash's heart sway several inches, as if it had torn loose from its place, and its wild, loud throbbing was like the beating of a mighty engine.
"Thar," said Wash, "you see I ain't for long. That mine's for my wife. She's stayed with it and with me. I ought to have dropped it and put my pride down long ago, but now it's too late. Riley, will you let me have the powder?"
"No."
Wash looked at his old enemy and turned away.
No one in all that camp understood the proud, unyielding soul that had set itself to wrestle with nature and her secret. The afternoon wore on into night, and night into morning, and morning, noon and afternoon built up another day. Wash did not come back. Some boys climbed the hill and went into the tunnel. There lay Wash, dead, at the further end of the tunnel, his pick in his hand. He had gone back to break his own way into the treasure house, but his heart had burst in the midst of a giant stroke, and he had fallen across his own weapon. There his wife had found him, and she, too, weak and sick and heartbroken, lay in a faint over his body.
Ophir camp woke with a start to some dim sense of its crime. Tender hands carried Wash and his wife out of the tunnel, and did all that could be done for the poor woman.
A dozen men went back into the tunnel from which they had taken the dead man, and looked at the place where his last faltering shock had glanced off the flinty rock.
"Boys," said one, "I'll never forget that I told Wash he couldn't have any more powder, not if he died in his tunnel. We'll set off them last blast holes just as he wanted, and then we'll bury him there where he dropped."
There was plenty of blasting powder now to be had for the asking, and in a few minutes the face of the drift was ready for the blast, the fuses set and lighted, word had got around the camp and every man was gathered at the mouth of the tunnel. A few women were in the old cabin caring for the dying wife. A long silence followed the lighting of the fuses, and suddenly the dull noise of the shock, and the fall of heavier masses of rock than usual startled the miners outside.
They ran into the tunnel with their lights. The blast had opened a wide path into an irregular cavern gleaming with gold. Above, below and on all sides was the shining, precious metal. The blast for which Wash had struggled so bravely had revealed a fortune. The excited miners rushed out again with a wild shout. A woman met them with flushed and frightened face.
"How can you make such a noise?" she said. "The poor thing's gone, crying like a baby for her dead man."
The miners drew close together, ashamed and profoundly affected. After a little a few of them went back to the tunnel and secured Wash's pickaxe, which had been lying against the wall.
"We can't bury them here, now," said one, "the mine will be worked again. They must lie on the hillside where all his old friends of twenty years ago are laid."
Wash had no relatives. His wife's brother came up and took possession of the claim, which the miners had protected against all intruders. In a few weeks it became generally understood in the region that the wealth of the "Blue Juniata" was estimated by conservative miners at a quarter of a million.
But from the day that Wash fell dead in his tunnel a blight seemed to fall on the little camp of Ophir. Mine after mine gave out; miner after miner moved away. A land slide swept off the cabin where Wash had lived, and though as I have said, the "Blue Juniata" yielded all that was expected and even more, and founded one of the great Pacific coast fortunes, none of its treasures brought happiness to those who worked it. To-day the camp is deserted and its very name a memory.

A Level Head.

During the late strike on the New York Central Railroad, the militia were ordered to be in readiness in case of a riot, but they were not called out. In an interview, Gov. Hill said the troops were not to be called upon except in case of an emergency. The emergency had not arisen, therefore they would not be ordered out. He remarked that this was the first great strike with which he had had experience, and he did not propose to lose his head; the only point at which there had then been serious trouble was at Syracuse, and there a deputy-sheriff had lost his head and precipitated an encounter.

The strike continued several weeks, and there was riotous action at various points along the road, but the civil authorities were able to cope with it without calling on the militia.
The test of a man's real ability comes when an emergency arises which makes a hasty call on his good judgment and discretion. The man who retains his presence of mind, maintains his equipoise and exercises sound discretion at such critical junctures, is to be relied on and will be put to the front.
Men with level heads have the staying qualities which do not falter in the face of danger. Otis A. Cole, of Kinsman, O., June 10, 1890, writes: "In the fall of 1888 I was feeling very ill. I consulted a doctor and he said I had Bright's disease of the kidneys and that he would not stand in my shoes for the state of Ohio." But he did not lose courage or give up; he says: "I saw the testimonial of Mr. John Coleman, 100 Gregory St., New Haven, Conn., and I wrote to him. In due time I received an answer, stating that the testimonial that he gave was genuine and not overdrawn in any particular. I took a good many bottles of Warner's Safe-Cure; have not taken any for one year."

Gov. Hill is accounted a very successful man; he is cool and calculating and belongs to the class that do not lose their heads when emergencies arise.

Wise Words.

Going in debt—Accepting presents from people.
Would we be happier if all our hopes were realized?
Doubt is that which makes man suspicious of all his kind.
The fairest faces are those which we have never too closely scanned.
After spending an hour with a pretty fool how refreshing lonely people are.
The meanest man in the world is the man who is good because he has to be good.
A willingness to divide with his captor has protected more thieves than the law has protected honest men.
Our wisest thought is the one which we always lack words to express. Foolish thought finds easy expression.
When you feel that you can't get acquainted with a man it is a sign that he does not like you, and never will.

One way of congratulating a young man who is to marry a girl with money is to let him have anything he wants on credit.
Yesterday he prayed to be delivered from evil speaking, lying and slandering. To-day he proceeds to speak evil, lie and slander.
A woman's idea of a perfect man is a man like the man she likes best; a man's idea of a perfect woman is a woman unlike any he ever knew.
When a man tells you that salary is no object to him you have found one of two things—either a man who is a fool or a man who takes you for one.

It was Mr. Emerson who said "the first wealth is health," and it was a wiser than the modern philosopher who said that "the blood is the life." The system, like the clock, runs down. It need winding up. The blood gets poor and scores of diseases result. It needs a tonic to enrich it.
A certain wise doctor, after years of patient study, discovered a medicine which purified the blood, gave tone to the system, and made men—tired, nervous, brain-wasting men—feel like new. He called it his "Golden Medical Discovery." It has been sold for years, sold by the million bottles, and people found such satisfaction in it that Dr. Pierce who discovered it, now feels warranted in selling it under a positive guarantee of its doing good in all cases.

Perhaps it's a medicine for you. Yours wouldn't be the first of scrofula or salt-rheum, skin disease, or lung disease, it has cured when nothing else would. Money refunded if it don't do you good.

Scientific and Industrial.

A pump chamber weighing 6000 pounds has just been cast at Pittston, Penn.

Chicago is preparing to send great quantities of milling machinery to China to be used in the gold mines.

A horse power is a power capable of raising 33,000 pounds avoirdupois through the space of one foot in one minute.

A Frenchman has invented portable tables, by nibbling at which one may sustain life indefinitely, without the use of any other food.

An English engineer proposes making double shell boilers, maintaining a pressure between them. By these means he calculates that a much higher pressure can be carried than is possible even with the coil boilers already in use. Mustard oil is being manufactured in Germany for lubricating purposes. It is said to be unaffected by cold above a temperature of about fifteen degrees Fahrenheit, and does not readily become rancid or form fatty acids likely to attack metal.

Lampblack.

Lampblack is made in much the same way as charcoal, only no wood is used. Heavy oil or tar or natural gas is burned in a close chamber, at the top of which is a tight fitting iron dome. The oil is lighted, and burns with a smoky flame, giving off small particles of carbon, which are condensed on the sides of the chamber into lampblack. When the process is finished, the dome descends and the lampblack is scraped off. It is tolerably pure, is very black and permanent, and can be advantageously used in making paint, blacking, etc.—Boston Cultivator.

A Great Event

In one's life is the discovery of a remedy for some long-standing malady. The poison of scrofula is in your blood. You inherited it from your ancestors. Will you transmit it to your offspring? In the great majority of cases, both Consumption and Catarrh originate in scrofula. It is supposed to be the primary source of many other derangements of the body. Begin at once to cleanse your blood with the standard alternative.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"For several months I was troubled with scrofulous eruptions over the whole body. My appetite was bad, and my system so prostrated that I was unable to work. After trying several remedies in vain, I resolved to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and did so with such good effect that less than one bottle restored my health and strength. The rapidity of the cure astonished me, as I expected the process to be long and tedious."—Frederick Maria Fernandes, Villa Nova de Guaya, Portugal.

"For many years I was a sufferer from scrofula, until about three years ago, when I began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, since which the disease has entirely disappeared. A little child of mine, who was troubled with the same complaint, has also been cured by this medicine."—H. Brandt, Ayres, Neb.

THE ACADIAN

WOLFVILLE, N. S., OCT. 24, 1890.

One Hundred Years.

The Hon. Samuel Chipman celebrated his hundredth birthday on Saturday last at his home in Church St., Cornwallis. Over two hundred persons attended the reception held to commemorate the event and tendered congratulations in person, and a large number of letters and telegrams were received from friends residing at a distance. The venerable gentleman appeared to be fully equal to the task of receiving the congratulations of friends, shaking hands with all and frequently entering into conversation. With the exception of his eyesight of which he has been deprived for some time his mental and bodily faculties are remarkably well retained, and the excitement and exertions of the day seemed to have but a comparatively slight wearisome effect upon him. Of his nine living children all were present except one, Joseph, who resides in Manitoba. Mr. Chipman was born in Cornwallis, and during all his life has resided in the vicinity of his birthplace. His long life has been an eventful one and he has occupied an important place in the history of our Province.

The Temperance Meeting.

The gospel temperance meeting which was announced for last Friday evening was postponed on account of the very disagreeable state of the weather. It was decided to hold the meeting on Monday evening, and though the weather still continued very disagreeable and the rain fell in torrents, the Baptist church was fairly well filled with a representative audience on that evening. Rev. Mr. Ross occupied the chair and in a few fitting remarks stated the object of the meeting and made a short address appropriate to the occasion. The other speakers were Rev. Dr. Higgins, Rev. W. R. Turner and Dr. B. V. Jones, who spoke in the order named. The addresses were all excellent and covered a wide range of thought, embracing the temperance question in many bearings. At the close a strong resolution was passed by the meeting condemning of the liquor traffic and looking forward to its suppression in our town. During the evening the choir, composed of members of the different church choirs of the town, with Mr. C. H. Borden on the cornet and Mr. G. W. Munro on the bass-viol, rendered a number of excellent selections suitable to the occasion, under the direction of Mr. G. V. Rand. Arrangements are now being made for holding another similar meeting in a few weeks. It is high time that something was done to suppress the drunkenness that has prevailed in our town to too great an extent during the past few months, and every citizen of the place should be only too glad to lend his assistance in the attempt to rid our town of this curse of intemperance.

No Imprisonment for Debt.

On the first day of May, 1891, there will come into operation in this Province a law entitled "An act relating to imprisonment for debt," which provides that no person shall be arrested or imprisoned under execution upon any judgment or order obtained in the supreme, county, probate, municipal, or, if the case be, the court of sessions, or the courts of this Province, for the recovery of any debt or damage, without a special order therefor. The act nevertheless provides for examining into the affairs of the debtor upon application to a judge of the supreme court, or county court, or commissioner of the supreme court, or justice of the peace or justice of the peace before whom or in whose court judgment was obtained. The application must however be supported by affidavits setting forth and substantiating one or more of the following grounds: 1st, That the party making the application believes that the judgment debtor is about to leave the Province with intent to defraud his creditors generally and the plaintiff in particular, and that he fears the debt will be lost unless an order be forthwith issued for his arrest; 2d, That the debtor is possessed of means of paying the said judgment and of affording demand has neglected or refused to pay the same; 3d, That the debt or claim, the subject of the judgment, was fraudulent, contracted, or that the credit was obtained from the creditor under false pretences, or that the debtor wilfully contracted the debt or liability without having had at the time a reasonable expectation of being able to pay or discharge the same, &c.; 4th, That fraudulent circumstances have occurred with regard to the disposition of his property by the judgment debtor. The passing of this act will probably have the effect of making it difficult for persons of no available assets other than their daily earnings to obtain credit as heretofore.

Going West.

[The following article was intended to precede the article under the same heading in last issue, but owing to some delay in the mail did not reach us in time and as we had no notice that the article was coming the other was published first. However as each appears complete in itself we trust no harm was done. Ed.] A slight frost gives the first gentle reminder that bright sunny days will soon pass away, and that the straw hat and noisier suit must be laid aside. As a summer resort in the climate of Nova Scotia is all that could be desired. The days are bright and fine and the nights are sufficiently cool to present a strong contrast to those passed in Boston and the states south and west of that city. The scenery is diversified with hill and woods and water, and persons fond of fishing can enjoy lots of sport in the numerous lakes and rivers, where trout and salmon abound. Each summer brings more and more of the overwrought energies of American cities to recuperate their falling energies by inhaling the invigorating Nova Scotia air. To such persons Wolfville can be strongly recommended both on account of its situation on the Basin of Minas, and as a centre in the island of Evangeline, from whence beautiful water drives can be taken. It is easy of access either by way of Halifax or by way of Yarmouth. Trips can be made by steamer across Minas basin to Parrsboro, also to the islands and other places. Case Blomfield, with its many geological and mineral treasures also its extensive views is within easy driving distance. No better place for a picnic exists than the Look Off, Blomfield, from which three fine counties may be seen on a clear day. By those for whom engineering wonders have an attraction, a bird's-eye view may be obtained, from the Look Off, of the extensive dikes partly constructed by the old French settlers, the Acadians. I shall always have a pleasing recollection of days passed at Wolfville during the summers of 1888-9 and '90 and of kind friends there. As all earthly pleasures come to an end too soon. The dream of old 25 degrees below zero makes one creep. This season a failure is reported of the apple crop and a plague of potato bugs. What would Nova Scotia be without apples and potatoes! Longfellow may sing about Evangeline but the natives of Annapolis Valley would, in such a case, sing a sorry tune. On the approach of winter the birds fly to more congenial climes. I am off too.

I'm going to the West, where the boys are so free, The City of Kansas has welcome for me; The State of the Sunflower so green and so gay, Invites me to visit her, to settle and stay. The land of revolvers, quick-shooting and whiskey, Where the boys fly around when "Caw boys" grow frisky; Where the nights are so cold and the days are so hot, Where the best men are the best who gets in the first shot. The land of the "Dabbers," the horse thief and the thief, The man who lives there must indeed be a hustler. In the land of sorghum, sweet potatoes and sheep, If I should chance to die, there'll be some one to weep. With the thoughts of Old England, the land of my youth, My heart is near breaking and that is just this; The year must run onward and distance must sever, Can I ever forget? my conscience says never.

Fire on North Mountain.

On Wednesday evening, Oct. 15th, Mr. J. Bennett who lives on the North Mountain on the road known as the Ross Creek Road, had the misfortune to lose his house with all its contents by fire and worst of his youngest son about 10 years old perished in the flames. The family had retired for the night, and all were sound asleep when near midnight one of his sons who slept upstairs awoke nearly stifled with smoke. Making his way to the chamber door, he on opening it found the room outside and below it on fire. He then found a window open and it, and commenced trying to wake his brothers who were stifled with the smoke. He finally succeeded in getting them out of the window except his youngest brother whom he could not find, and finding himself being overcome with the heat and smoke and knowing that his father and sister were still asleep in the lower part of the house, he escaped through the window himself and succeeded in awakening and getting his father and sister out but the poor little boy perished in the fire. The whole family escaped with only the clothing they slept in and were unable to save anything as the whole house seemed to be a seething mass fanned into a sheet of flames by the gale which was blowing at the time.—Canning Gazette.

CARD.

TO THE ELECTORS OF WARD 7: Having become well acquainted with the County business during four years of office, now just ending, I again offer you my services as a representative in the Municipal Council. I shall aim to do my duty conscientiously without fear or favor.

Vacation Penellings.

Another drive equally pleasant and of about the same distance was that to Saxton's River. This is one of the prettiest places we saw while away. Some time before reaching this exceedingly picturesque spot the stranger's eye is attracted by three imposing brick structures, which adorn an eminence overlooking the valley. These are the Vermont academy buildings, as this village takes no little pride in being the seat of this institution which has the reputation of doing excellent work. These buildings are very conveniently arranged. The one which stands in the centre contains the class-rooms and chapel, and is of easy access from either of the other two, one of which is the young ladies' dormitory and the other the gentlemen's dormitory. To the rear is a large and commodious dining hall where the ladies and gentlemen assemble three times a day. This makes it very pleasant for all, and doubtless, forms no mean factor in their education. The residence of the president is a modest but very neatly kept cottage. Miss Wadsworth, recently of Acadia Seminary, has occupied a position on the staff of our school during the past year. Our visit was during vacation and an air of solemn quiet seemed to pervade the entire place. One's footsteps along the halls and corridors reverently disturbed the hush that reigned there. The course at this institution extends over four years. The graduate is then prepared to enter some college. The youth of Vermont certainly have within their reach every facility for laying the foundation of a broad and liberal education. We learned that the attendance for the coming term was likely to be unusually large. Albrod and Ackworth are also tidy villages within easy driving distance of Bellows Falls. Saw, shingle and grist mills are located there and are the source of quite flourishing industries. A visit to Mr. Russell's stock farm was much enjoyed. This farm is very large and is yearly becoming more productive. A few years ago this farm composed several and was owned by different individuals. The owners complained to Mr. Russell that the condition in which he kept the river at certain seasons in order to drive down logs, was detrimental to their interests. He told them to save any trouble he would buy their farms. He did so and began improving and building them up at a great expense. He has a great deal of bottom land very rich which the greater portion of the work is done. He uses a fertilizer a waste substance which comes from his paper mills. This is put on the sand and then plowed down, after which grass-seed is sown and the following year there is generally a good crop of hay. The manager informed us that he had just commenced his plowing and had 50 acres more to do. But this farm's greatest attraction is its stock. Last winter 97 head of pure Holsteins were wintered but the herd had been reduced to about 75. They were all very large and handsome, and showed that great care had been taken of them. A flock of 36 heifers formed a very pretty sight as they were grazing in the pasture. Those disposed of during the summer had been sold at fancy prices. The Holstein seems to command high prices about that part of Vermont. WILLIS.

BEATS OUR DOCTORS

—AND— PIERCE'S INSTITUTION.

LOWER ECONOMY, JUNE 25th, 1890

Mr. J. B. Morte, Bridgeton, N. S.

DEAR SIR,—I hereby certify that I was troubled with Chronic Diarrhea for five years, which was brought on by liver and stomach trouble. During that time I had treatment from five doctors and a month's medicine from Pierce's Institution, Buffalo, all of which did me little or no good. Last November I commenced taking Dr. Norton's Dock Blood Purifier, at which time I was unable to work and all of my food went to water, dare not eat any meat of any kind and had given up to die. I only used two bottles of the medicine and am now well and strong, and would highly recommend it to all who are affected as I was.

Yours truly, CHARLES W. McLELLAN.

VOUCHED FOR.

Of this case I am personally known to the facts and assure you that your medicine has done a great deal of good to many in this place.
