Leave to amend a statement of claim from which was inadvertently omitted particulars of the plaintiff's damages, will be granted by the Supreme Court of Alberta, on an application to vary the findings of the clerk of the court as to assessment of damages, where such omissions was not discovered until the hearing of such application.

Lavallee v. C. N. R. Co., 4 D.L.R. 376, 4 A.L.R. 245, 20 W.L.R. 547, 1 W.W.R. 913.

AMENDMENTS—AT CLOSE OF TRIAL.

Where a plaintiff suing for purely equitable relief is shown to be dissatisfied thereto because of his own reprehensible conduct in the transaction, and his claim at law, if any, is contingent upon a future payment by an other of certain purchase money, the plaintiff's action should be dismissed without permitting him to amend his pleadings so as to obtain a declaration of such contingent legal rights; the court, under such circumstances should leave the plaintiff to establish such rights by action at law after they shall have accrued.

McCormick v. Friggs, 9 D.L.R. 681, 23 W.L.R. 183, 3 W.W.R. 852.

AMENDMENT AFTER CONTESTATION—CHANGING NATURE OF ACTION—AMENDMENT OF PLEADINGS.

Andrews v. Compagnie des Chars Urbains de Montreal, 40 Que. S.C. 499.

(§ I N—119)—TO JOIN ASSIGNEES IN FORECLOSURE ACTION.

The nonjoinder of an assignee of a purchaser as a party defendant to an action for foreclosure of the contract may be cured by amendment. [King v. Wilson, 11 B.C.R. 109, applied.]

Gale v. Powley, 24 D.L.R. 450, 22 B.C.R. 18, 32 W.L.R. 65, 8 W.W.R. 1312.

ALTERNATIVE CLAIM.

Where in an action on a promissory note, some of the makers of which are infants, the plaintiff claims as upon a joint contract only, but the note is on its face both a joint and several promise to pay, the plaintiff should, if necessary, be permitted to amend his statement of claim by claiming alternatively against the defendants severally. The effect of r. 29, 35 of the Judicature Ordinance renders the principle laid down in Chandler v. Parks, 3 Esp. 76, and Boyle v. Webster, 17 Q.B. 950, 21 L.J.Q.B. 202, 16 Jur. 683, no longer applicable.

Park v. Pullishy, 3 A.L.R. 340.

AS TO PARTIES—AFFIDAVIT.

A motion to amend, which contains allegations of fact, should be supported by the affidavit required by r. 47 of the Rules of Practice of the Superior Court. An amendment substituting one defendant for another cannot be granted; e.g., to amend a writ of summons in which the defendant is designated as "The Three Rivers Annex Land Company, a body politic," to read, "Emilie Halin of the City of Three Rivers, doing business under the name and style of the Three Rivers Annex Land Co." Simard v. Three Rivers Annex Land Co., 52 Que. S.C. 421.

SUBSTITUTION OF PARTIES.

The substitution of one defendant for another, without having recourse to the ordinary method of summons, will not be allowed under pretence of amendment.

Ellis v. Grialo, 19 Que. P.R. 332.

PARTIES—TRUSTEE.

Amendment of a statement alleging that the plaintiff sued as trustee for creditors may be properly allowed.

Hellekson v. Harrington, 10 W.W.R. 968, (§ I N—121)—AFFECTING JURISDICTION.

A plaintiff will be allowed to amend his statement of claim in an action for personal injuries by amplifying an alternative claim made therein under the Employers' Liability Act, although the statutory period within which an action under that Act must be brought has expired.

Plaintiff will be allowed to amend his declaration so as to include an item necessary to complete the amount mentioned in the conclusions of the action and omitted by error from the body of such declaration. It is not by an inscription in law, but by a declinatory exception that a defendant may deny the jurisdiction of the Superior Court to hear an action, on the ground that plaintiff has only set forth in the body of the declaration items aggregating to a sum under $100.

Morin v. Paquet, 13 Que. P.R. 195.

(§ I N—123)—TERMS—REASONABLENESS—RETRIAL.

Terms imposed by the court when allowing an amendment, that the whole action be retried and that the costs thereof be paid forthwith, are not unreasonable, and having been rejected by declining to accept the amendment and proceeding with the action, there can be no further relief.

TERMS.

A motion by plaintiff to so amend her declaration that her action should be founded, not only upon her community rights, as set forth in the action, but upon the will of her late husband instituting her his universal legatee, will be dismissed as changing the nature of the demand.

Legaré v. Verret, 13 Que. P.R. 298.

TERMS.

If a defendant obtains, in the course of a suit, permission to amend his defence by adding an important paragraph, he ought to pay, besides the fees on the motion, a fee of $10 and also the difference between the fees provided by arts. 17, 19 of the tariff, and the costs of the witnesses, if the plaintiff wants an adjournment, but not the fee provided by art. 5 of the tariff for contested or non-contested cases above $2,500.

Chene v. Chene Heirs, 15 Que. P.R. 372.

(§ I N—124)—STRIKING OUT REINSEMENT IN ANOTHER FORM, HOW TREATED.

An order striking out paragraphs of a pleading precludes their reinsement in another form in an amended pleading under cover of leave reserve to plead "any matters which may properly be pleaded in aggravation of damages."

STRICKEN OUT—DISALLOWING.

Where a plaintiff without leave files and serves an amended statement of claim pursuant to Alberta r. 179, the defendant if dissatisfied should move to disallow the same under r. 181.

P. FILING AFTER DEFAULT; TIME.

(§ I P—130)—The party seeking to file objections after the lapse of the time limited by statute should apply for an order of extension, and if he files his objections late and without leave and the opposing party moves to strike them out, the filing will be allowed to stand only upon terms of paying the costs of the motion to strike out. Re Provencher Election: Barkwill v. Molloy, 1 D.L.R. 84, 19 W.L.R. 794, 22 Man. L.R. 6, 1 W.W.R. 463.

Where a consent to file a pleading is given after the expiry of the legal delays, but before the right to a jury trial is forfeited, such consent has an interruptive effect on these delays and the plaintiff has three days from such consent to move for a jury trial. But a consent to file a pleading after the right to a jury trial has lapsed will not make this right revive. [Matthews v. Westmount, 6 Que. P.R. 52; Asselin v. Montreal Light, Heat & Power Co., 7 Que. P.R. 218; Anderson v. Norwich Fire Ins. Co., 17 Que. K.B. 361, distinguished; St. Paul Electric Light & Power Co. v. Quesnel, 12 Que. P.R. 158, followed.]

PRACTICE—APPEAL—FAILURE TO ENTER IN TIME—APPLICATION TO SET DOWN—SPECIAL CIRCUMSTANCES.

On giving notice of appeal, an appeal book was left with respondents' solicitor for approval when appellants was advised the book would be approved upon security for costs being put up. Nothing further was done for 4 weeks, when appellants on the 4th day prior to the last day for setting the case down, called for the appeal book. The book had been mislaid in respondents' office but appellants was reminded that security for costs had not been put up. Appellants then perfected the security and submitted another copy of the appeal book which was approved and returned to the appellants who, on the following day (the day prior to the last day for entry), applied to the registrar at Vancouver for entry of the appeal, but was advised the books had to be approved by the registrar at Nanaimo. They were immediately sent to Nanaimo for approval but arrived back in Vancouver 3 days late. Application was then made to set the case down for hearing. Held that as the parties were at arm's length, the failure of the appellants to send the books to Nanaimo in time for their return and entry was no excuse for failure to comply with the statute and the application should be refused.

Bouch v. Rath, 26 B.C.R. 320.

An order having been made, on the application of the plaintiff, striking out the defendant's statement of defence, unless he should file an affidavit of documents within ten days, and an affidavit of the defendant not having been filed within the ten days, the plaintiff moved for judgment as if the statement of defence had been struck out:—Held, that it was not too late for the defendant to come in and remedy his default, and he should be allowed to do so on proper terms. [Whistler v. Hancock, 3 Q.B.D. 83, and Farden v. Richter, 23 Q.B.D. 124, distinguished.] Held, also, that the affidavit of the defendant's solicitor could not be accepted in lieu of that of the defendant, although the defendant was absent beyond the seas.

Keay v. Brunner, 25 W.L.R. 500.

TIME OF PLEA—ACTION FOR RENT—DECLARATION—SERVICE—FILING.

When the plaintiff, in a summary action between lessor and lessee, summons the defendant to appear within the delay of one clear day, he retains his right to correct the summons by leaving a copy of the declaration with the defendant himself or at the office of the clerk of the court within the three days following the service of the writ. But the delay of service must be counted from the day of such filing. If the plaintiff brings his action prematurely the defendant may, on motion, demand that the delays for pleading be extended, but he cannot claim the nullity of the summons by exception to the form.

Laroche v. Poulin, 54 Que. S.C. 19, 19 Que. P.R. 433.

LEAVE.

Where 21 days have elapsed after notice of appearance, leave must be obtained for the filing of the statement of claim.

Nelson v. Balderson, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 448.

EXTENSION.

Under r. 254 (Sask.) the time limited for reply is the time fixed by the rules and not the time fixed by an order extending the time, and an amended statement of claim delivered without leave after the time fixed by the rules is irregular.

Q. SURPLUSAGE.

(§ 1 Q—135)—BURDEN OF PROOF—SURPLUSAGE IN PLEADING.

It is not necessary in an action to recover property alleged to have been sold under an invalid tax sale, for the plaintiff in his pleadings to set up the tax sale and allege it was made without authority; the proper course is to set out his title and allege the wrongful possession of the person who purchased under the tax sale.

SURPLUSAGE—REPETITION.

A paragraph of a statement of defence which merely repeats, in effect, what is more formally pleaded in other parts of the defence, may be struck out as unnecessary under Alberta r. 127.

PROLIXITY—EMBARRASSMENT.

A pleading which is merely prolix, even where it sets out verbatim documents pleaded, is not embarrassing, and the matter of prolixity is one for the taxing officer. [Theo Noel Co. v. Vitae Ore Co., 7 W.L.R.

353; Sack v. Construction Co., 7 W.L.R. 653, applied.]

PROLIXITY—NOT EMBARRASSING OR DELAYING FAIR TRIAL—NOT STRUCK OUT—ALLEGATION OF FORGERY—FURTHER ALLEGATION OF CONVICTION THEREFOR.

Mere prolixity in pleading, not such as will embarrass or delay the fair trial of an action, does not warrant the striking-out of any portions of it. In an action for conversion as a result of fraudulent negotiation of a bill of lading of plaintiff's goods, the allegation, after alleging forgery, of a conviction of said forgery, is not an embarrassing pleading and should not be struck out. Semble it is not irrelevant or immaterial.

(§ 1 S—145)—STRIKING OUT DEFENCE—LEAVE TO SIGN JUDGMENT.

A local judge has jurisdiction, under B.C. practice r. 363, to make an order striking out a defence and giving the plaintiff liberty to sign interlocutory judgment; once the judgment has been entered the plaintiff may proceed with the assessment of damages. DEFENCES TO FOREIGN JUDGMENT—"EMBARRASSMENT AND DELAY."

Where in an action on a foreign judgment the defendant sets up defences already heard and adjudicated upon by the foreign tribunal, they may, at the instance of the plaintiff, be struck out, upon the ground of embarrassment and delay, and under r. 625 (King's Bench Act, R.S.M. 1913, c. 46), the plaintiff may sign judgment.

FALSE AND VEXATIOUS ALLEGATIONS.

A statement of defence cannot be considered false, vexatious or frivolous within the meaning of r. 223 unless, so far as facts within the knowledge of the defendant are concerned, there is an admission express or implied by him that the allegations in his defence are untrue. Such admission may appear from affidavits filed by the defendant or from his examination, if such has been made part of the material to be used on the application or it may be implied from his failure to deny on oath some material fact within his knowledge. But to justify striking it out, it must be clear that the defence was false. If there is a conflict of testimony, that testimony cannot be weighed in an application under r. 223. Where the alleged fact is solely within the knowledge of the plaintiff a defendant's inability to deny it cannot be taken as an admission that the fact so alleged is true. Rule 223 is not intended to afford the plaintiff an opportunity of trying the case piecemeal, so, generally speaking, individual paragraphs should not be struck out, where the plaintiff has to go to court to prove his case.

Gentles v. Fawcett, 13 O.W.N. 376.

After a defendant, in his statement of defence, has demurred to certain paragraphs of the statement of claim as disclosing no facts upon which the plaintiff would be entitled to recover, a motion to strike out the same paragraphs as embarrassing and prejudicial to the fair trial of the action on the same grounds should not be entertained while such demurrer is pending.

APPLICATION TO STRIKE OUT DEFENCE—DELAY.

In an action of debt the plaintiff, after notice of trial served, but before the date of trial arrived, moved to strike out the whole of the defence under r. 223, on the ground that the allegations therein were false, frivolous and vexatious. Held, that the delay was not a bar, inasmuch as no prejudice to the defendant was shown by such delay. Held, also, that as the paragraphs struck out constituted the whole defence, it was proper to order judgment to be entered in favour of the plaintiff in default of amendment.

PRACTICE—APPLICATION TO STRIKE OUT—UNNECESSARY BUT NOT EMBARRASSING.

Although there may appear in the pleadings matters which are unnecessary and superfluous, if they are not embarrassing, an application to strike them out will be refused. A court of appeal will examine more carefully the reasons and pay more attention to the pleadings, and examine them more narrowly to see if any harm has been done by the rejection of the pleadings than in a case where the judge below refused to strike them out.

Wellington Colliery Co. & E. & N.R. Co. v. Pacific Coast Coal Mines, 25 B.C.R. 206.

STATEMENT OF CLAIM—DECLARATORY JUDGMENT—QUESTION OF GENERAL IMPORTANCE.

An action is not open to objection on the ground that a merely declaratory judgment is sought: Judicature Act, R.S.O. 1914, c. 56, s. 16 (b), Rule 124 (English Order XXV., r. 1) is not intended to apply to any pleading which raises a question of general importance or a serious question of law. [Dyson v. Attorney-General, [1911] 1 K.B. 410, [1912] 1 Ch. 158, followed.] The summary procedure under r. 124 can be adopted only when it can be clearly seen that the claim is, on the face of it, clearly unsustainable. [Attorney-General v. London & N. W. R. Co., [1892] 3 Ch. 274, 277; Hubble v. Wilkinson, [1899] 1 Q.B. 86, followed.] Rule 145 requires that a statement of claim shall state specifically the relief claimed; and, where a declaration is claimed, the pleading should also state what action or contention on the part of the defendants has made it necessary to ask for a specific declaration. That "doubts have arisen" is not a sufficient reason for asking the court to make a declaration. In this case, where the plaintiffs, by their statement of claim, asked for a declaration as to the "present legal effect" of a certain agreement and of a statute confirming it, in relation to the right of the plaintiffs to take water from the Niagara River for the purpose of generating electricity, it was held that the pleading, though defective, should not be struck out; and an order was made, under r. 138, for the delivery of a further and better statement of the nature of the claim.

DEFENCE—GENERAL DENIAL AS EMBARRASSING—PARTICULARS—ACTION AGAINST BANK—CHEQUES—FORGED ENDORSEMENTS.

Where a paragraph of a defence which denies each and all of the allegations contained in certain paragraphs of the statement of claim is not in compliance with rule 205 of the King's Bench rules, it is not one which should be struck out as embarrassing. Where in an action to recover the amount of cheques issued by the plaintiff, paid by the defendant bank and charged to the plaintiff, the defence alleges that the proceeds of the cheques went to persons to whom the plaintiff owed money, and the plaintiff received credit therefor, the plaintiff is entitled to particulars of the cheques which, it is alleged, were paid to such persons and the dates and items of said indebtedness; and where the defence alleges that the endorsements, if not made by the payees, shew that they were not so made and that the plaintiffs by acknowledging, without objection, the correctness of the payments thereunder so ratified such endorsements, the plaintiff is entitled to particulars of the dates of such acknowledgments. A paragraph of a defence to such an action which sets up that the endorsements, if not made by the payee, were made by the plaintiff or its agent, or at its or his request, is in violation of r. 329 and should be struck out, but if, instead of applying to have it struck out, the plaintiff asks for particulars shewing which of said cheques are alleged to have been endorsed by the plaintiff or the plaintiff's agent, or at the request of the plaintiff or its agent, such particulars should be furnished by the bank, even though the cheques have been returned to the plaintiff by the bank; and where the defence alleges fraud, the plaintiff is entitled to particulars of such fraud; and if it is alleged that the plaintiff agreed that the bank was not to be responsible for forgeries, the plaintiff is entitled to particulars of said agreement; but where the defence alleges that all the cheques were issued to fictitious persons on fictitious transactions the plaintiff is not entitled to particulars shewing which of said cheques are alleged to have been payable to fictitious persons, and what transactions are alleged to have been fictitious.

NULLITY OF WILL.

To an action based on a will, the defendant who pleads the nullity of the will, may simply pray for the dismissal of the action (as in the case of annulability.) If he prays to have it declared "that the wills which must rule the estate of the deujus are not those which she made in favour of the plaintiff, but those she made in favour of the defendant" such petition might be set aside by way of an exception to the form, but not by way of an inscription in law.

Verdon v. Clermont, 16 Que. P.R. 246.

(§ 1 S—146)—LEAVE TO AMEND—ACTION AGAINST MUNICIPALITY—LOCAL IMPROVEMENT BY-LAW.

In an action to annul an assessment by-law for local improvements on the ground of irregularity and uncertainty but without setting up any allegation of fraud against the defendant municipality, the statement of claim may be struck out if upon its face it appears that the action is brought after the time limitations contained in ss. 512, 513 of the Municipal Act, R.S.B.C. 1911, c. 170, by virtue of order 25, r. 4, of B.C. Supreme Court Rules, 1906; but leave may be given to amend by filing a new statement of claim.

Arbuthnot v. Victoria, 9 D.L.R. 564, 18 B.C.R. 35, 23 W.L.R. 563, 4 W.W.R. 145.

STRIKING ENTIRE PLEADING.

A statement of claim will not be struck out under r. 261 (Con. Rules, Oct. 1897), on the ground that the plaintiff was not qualified to maintain the action unless the lack of qualification appears from the pleading itself.

Greer v. Greer, 4 D.L.R. 169, 21 O.W.R. 139.

VEXATIOUS ACTION—BUILDING CONTRACT PREVIOUSLY LITIGATED.

A statement of claim will be regarded as vexatious, and will be struck out, if its purpose is an attempt to obtain a further interpretation and reformation of a building agreement which was already dealt with in a previous action, and the action stayed upon a reference to arbitration under the terms of the agreement, to ascertain the amount recoverable thereunder.

Dunn v. Dominion Bank, 25 O.W.R. 84.

(§ 1 S—148)—SUFFICIENCY OF ALLEGED DEFENCE.

A plea, in an action to recover a balance alleged to be due under an acceleration clause of a contract, making the entire balance due and payable on default in the payment of any instalment, that the defendant's signature to the contract was fraudulently obtained by plaintiff's agent, who concealed from defendant the fact that the contract contained such acceleration clause, cannot be struck out on the ground that it discloses no reasonable answer to the action, under the Nova Scotia practice.

Stimpson Computing Scales Co. v. Allen, 10 D.L.R. 349, 47 N.S.R. 90, 12 E.L.R. 365.

(§ I S—149)—STRIKING PART OF PLEADINGS. The superficially frivolous appearance of grounds of action in a plaintiff's declaration does not constitute ground to have them struck out on demurrer, if the matter of such allegations amount to legal grounds of action when read together with the other averments of the declaration.

Edge v. Security Life Ins. Co., 8 D.L.R. 492.

The tendency of the practice at present is against any interference with the pleadings of either party, except in the very plainest cases; the application of Ont. Con. r. 298 (Rules of 1897) is usually confined to cases where statements are made which could not be considered at the trial, and which would tend to prejudice a fair trial.

Ontario & Minnesota Power Co. v. Rat Portage Lumber Co., 3 D.L.R. 331, 22 O.W.R. 1.

In an action for damages for a refusal to license the plaintiff, a professional jockey, who had paid the required fee therefore, in order to enable him to "exercise his profession" as driver of race horses upon the race track of the defendant, a racing club owning a public franchise, that operated for gain a race-course to which the public was invited upon the payment of an admission fee, a portion of the statement of claim will, on motion, be stricken out, where its allegations in substance were that "so public is the function it (the club) exercises, that it has a monopoly of race-horse betting on its tracks, that would be criminal but for the saving grace of legislation, whereby all members of all public, at its race meetings, are forced to bet through the defendant club, which acts as stakeholder, and exacts therefor over 5% on over a million dollars a year of bettors' money passing through its hands, and from which its chief income is derived," since such allegations are merely statements of evidence pertaining to the plaintiff's claim, which, under Con. r. 268, are not properly a part of a statement of claim. A further allegation of the statement of claim, alleging in substance, that other members of such association owned and controlled other tracks where betting was done by means of book-makers in the employ of such members, will not be stricken out, since it is an allegation either historical and explanatory of the nature and composition of the association, or referable to the damages the plaintiff sustained by being prevented from driving upon the tracks of the association, as well as upon that of the defendant.

Trubel v. Ontario Jockey Club, 4 D.L.R. 86, 3 O.W.N. 1453.

In an action for slander, upon a motion to strike out, as embarrassing, certain paragraphs of the statement of defence, and also the particulars of such paragraphs which set out as true a series of alleged facts of public interest and concern, upon which the defendant pleaded fair comment in good faith and without malice, if the defendant's pleading shew that he is prepared to rely, at the trial, on the plea of fair comment and sets out the series of alleged facts as a basis upon which to submit to a jury, the question as to whether in their opinion the comments so based were fair and reasonable, the defendant will not be required to change his pleading.

Brown v. Orde, 6 D.L.R. 297, 22 O.W.F. 1002.

IRRELEVANT STATEMENTS.

On an application under r. 107 (Sask.) to strike out part of a statement of defence as unnecessary and as tending to prejudice, embarrass and delay the fair trial of the action, the fact that the objectionable plea contains considerable unnecessary matter of evidence is of itself not sufficient ground for granting the motion, the only question being whether the plaintiff has been embarrassed or prejudiced in any way by the evidence being pleaded. In a statement of defence of an action for malicious prosecution and false imprisonment, where one of the defences is that the defendant acted on the advice of counsel, it is sufficient merely to state that fact without pleading in detail what the defendant was advised by his counsel.

STRIKING OUT PART OF PLEADING ON GROUND OF FALSITY—MOTION ON AFFIDAVITS.

In an action to recover a balance alleged to be due under an acceleration clause of a contract making the entire balance due and payable on default in the payment of any instalment, a paragraph in defendant's defence denying the making of the contract alleged, is properly struck out under the Nova Scotia practice as being false, where the fact of the execution of the contract is established by affidavit and not denied, and the defendant has further pleaded, by another paragraph of the defence, that when he signed the contract, the fact of its containing an acceleration clause was not disclosed to him, and that he could not read or write in English. Under the modern practice in Nova Scotia, separate paragraphs of a statement of defence are not to be regarded as separate pleas, as was the former practice, but the defendant may rely upon the whole statement of defence. A misrepresentation as to an instrument which causes a total misapprehension of its nature by the person who signed it will entitle him to plead non est factum in an action on the instrument, but not where the person signing knew the nature of the instrument, but laboured at the time under a misapprehension of the effect or contents of the instrument.

 INAPT WORDING OF COUNTERCLAIM—AMENDMENT.

If an alternative claim in a counterclaim is embarrassing by reason of the inapt terms in which it is worded, it is ground only for striking out the alternative claim and not the whole counterclaim, which can be readily cured by amendment.

(§ I T.—150)—IRREGULAR SERVICE—PARTICULARS—"FRESH STEP"—WAIVER.

A demand for particulars by defendant is not a "fresh step" within the meaning of r. 364 (King's Bench Act, R.S.M. 1913, c. 46), and, therefore, does not operate as a waiver by the defendant of his right to have the action dismissed for any irregularities in service of the statement of claim.

(§ I U—155)—MISJOINDER—TORT AND EX CONTRACTU CAUSES—DIFFERENT DEFENDANTS—TARDY OBJECTION.

Where a plaintiff misjoins two separate causes of action (tort and ex contractu) against different defendants, either defendant ordinarily may force the irregular plaintiff to his election between the two causes; but where both defendants, without taking objection, proceed to trial, and, after separate verdicts against them, one acquiesces, while the other then for the first time objects to the misjoinder on his appeal for a new trial, the objection will not be given effect, particularly where the verdict against the appellant was trifling and the justice of the case is best met in this way. In an action en complainte the parties cannot litigate anything but the question of possession. Code cannot be claimed because of private utility.

(§ II A—173)—FACT OF JURISDICTION.

A prohibition to a Division Court (Ont.) upon the ground of absence of territorial jurisdiction in respect of a case alleged to have entered in the wrong district or division of the province, will not be granted on motion of defendant where the question of jurisdiction is raised for the first time after a default judgment has been entered against defendant and where there is no excuse shewn for defendant's delay and it does not appear that any injustice will be done by allowing the judgment to stand. B. RIGHT OR CAPACITY TO SUE.

(§ II B—175)—AUTHORITY OF HUSBAND.

In an action by a married woman separated as to property, it is not necessary that it should be said in the writ that she is authorized by her husband; it is sufficient if this allegation is contained in the declaration. The defendant, if he does not admit this fact, must deny it specially.

Barry v. Montreal Tramways Co., 49 Que. S.C. 525.

(§ II B—176)—FOREIGN CORPORATION.

Under r. 219 of the Saskatchewan Supreme Court Rules, 1911, giving any party the right to raise by his pleading any point of law and providing for its disposition by the judge before, at or after the trial, the defendant, though he failed to raise the question in his pleading, is entitled to a decision as to whether the plaintiff could succeed in the action if the statement of claim merely alleged that the plaintiff was an incorporated company carrying on business in another province, but failed to allege that it had registered under the Saskatchewan Foreign Companies Act or other facts to establish its status to sue in Saskatchewan. C. DESCRIPTION OF PARTIES.

(§ II C—180)—CIVIL ENGINEER—ACTION BY NECESSARY ALLEGATIONS — INSCRIPTION IN LAW—Q.C.C.P. 191.

When the plaintiff states in his declaration that he is a consulting engineer, and he also assumes that title and quality in the writ of summons, he is not bound to allege that he is one of the members of the Society of Canadian Civil Engineers. An inscription in law based on the omission of such allegation will be dismissed.

Dumazuel v. Denis, 16 Que. P.R. 183.

(§ II C—181)—RULES OF COURT (SASK.)—DEFENDANT SUED IN REPRESENTATIVE CAPACITY—NECESSITY OF STATING.

Rule 38 of the Saskatchewan Rules of Court provides that "if the plaintiff sues or the defendant is sued in a representative capacity the statement of claim shall shew in what capacity the plaintiff or defendant sues or is sued." Under this rule a garnishee summons against executors in respect of a debt due from the testator must be directed to them as executors and not in their individual capacity.

(§ II C—182)—PARTNERSHIP — HUSBAND AND WIFE.

If a defendant sued as doing business under a partnership name pleads an exception to the form and proves that it is not he but his wife separate as to property, who does business under such name, all that relates to the said partnership in the designation of the defendant will be struck out of the record without costs.

Lachapelle v. Picard, 18 Que. P.R. 320.

D. STATEMENT OF CAUSE GENERALLY.

Wrongful discharge, conspiracy, see Conspiracy, II B—15.

(§ II D—185)—MATTERS OF EVIDENCE NOT TO BE PLEADED—ACTION AGAINST FORMER PREMIER — ALLEGATION THAT HE ACTED AS AGENT FOR HIS MAJESTY—SUFFICIENCY OF.

Under the present system of pleading in New Brunswick, it is not necessary to allege matters which are strictly matters of evidence. In an action against a former Premier of the province, for corruptly receiving a secret commission while Premier, and in receipt of a salary from His Majesty and acting as agent for His Majesty—it is sufficient to allege that the defendant acted as agent for His Majesty, and that as such agent he received such secret commission; it is not necessary to set out that he was agent of His Majesty. Held that the allegations in the statement of claim set out in the judgment were sufficient.

The King v. Flemming, 47 D.L.R. 321.

STATEMENT OF CLAIM—STATEMENT OF CAUSE GENERALLY—HOW SET OUT.

Irrelevant, diffuse and superfluous allegations in a statement of claim may be struck out under the Ontario practice rules which permit only a concise statement of the material facts.

An action is rightfully dismissed where the plaintiff, if entitled to recover at all, could do so only on an alternative claim which was not pleaded.

NEGLECT—EMPLOYEE'S LIABILITY.

The essential function of pleadings is to give the parties notice of the case to be tried; where a statement of claim charges the defendant with negligence as the owner of a factory building, and he has shapd his defence accordingly, the plaintiff cannot, at the trial, offer to prove the defendant's liability as employer.

Boutlier v. Lewis, 35 D.L.R. 642, 51 N.S.R. 186.

ACTION FOR COMMISSIONS AND DAMAGES.

A statement of claim in an action for commission and damages for failure to deliver certain wheat which the defendant had authorized the plaintiff to sell, held to disclose a cause of action, except as to the claim for commission.

Ruchanan v. Hansen Grain Co., 10 S.L.R. 199, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 799.

ACTION FOR POSSESSION OF LAND.

In an action for possession of a house and lot the statement of claim ran as follows: That the plaintiffs are entitled to possession; that the premises were granted and conveyed by the defendant unto and to the use of the plaintiffs, their heirs successors and assigns by way of mortgage, and that the mortgage is still subsisting; that the defendant has never given up possession to plaintiffs and has remained and still remains in wrongful possession thereof. Held, that the statement of claim disclosed a good cause of action, especially in view of the allegation of wrongful possession on the part of the defendant.

PRACTICE—PARTICULARS—CLAIM FOR DAMAGES FOR BREACH OF CONTRACT.

Particulars will be ordered of a claim for damages for the defendant's alleged failure to fulfil his contract for the supply of goods to the plaintiff, showing the quantities, kinds and prices of the goods which the plaintiff alleges he was compelled to purchase in the place of those which the defendant had contracted to supply and the dates of the purchases.

Standard Supply Co. v. Toupin, 28 Man. L.R. 627.

SUFFICIENCY OF ALLEGATIONS—NOTE—PRESCRIPTION—AMENDMENT.

An omission to state, in a declaration, that the note sued on was signed or endorsed by the defendant is not in itself fatal. It may be replaced by other words implying the same meaning. The form indicated in C.C.P. is not essential. When a plaintiff asks judgment against the defendant on a note which he produces, without saying that the note is signed or endorsed by the defendant, he makes an imperfect and insufficiently detailed statement; but it cannot be said, in such a case, that there is an absolute omission of an essential statement. The rule is that when an essential statement is totally lacking, the proceedings must be attacked by inscription in law; when the essential statement is not lacking, but is insufficiently particularized, the proceedings must be attacked by an exception to form. When an essential statement is not lacking, but is defective in not saying whether the defendants signed or endorsed the notes, such informality, an allegation of payment on account shews in itself a legal connection. The insufficiency of the allegations in the declaration might have been corrected by the amendment allowed, and thus would have taken effect from the institution of the action.

STATEMENT OF CLAIM—ALLEGATION MADE BY CREDITOR OF COMPANY AGAINST DIRECTORS — WRONGFUL DEALING WITH BONDS OF COMPANY—CLAIM MAINTAINABLE ONLY BY COMPANY—STRIKING OUT ALLEGATION AND CLAIM FOR RELIEF—PLEADING OF DIRECTORS IN DENIAL AND ASSERTION OF PROPER DEALING—LEAVE TO WITHDRAW.

Canada Wire & Cable Co. v. Grant, 14 O.W.N. 79.

OMISSION TO ALLEGE DELIVERY.

A plaintiff cannot change or complete his statement of claim by his reply to the defence. Thus a vendor who claims the price of goods sold, without alleging delivery in his statement of claim, cannot plead delivery in his reply.

PRACTICE—STATEMENT OF CLAIM—MOTION TO STRIKE OUT—FRIVOLOUS AND VEXATIOUS—CONSENT JUDGMENT—ACTION TO SET ASIDE — RES JUDICATA—FRAUD—ALLEGED IN WRIT BUT NOT IN STATEMENT OF CLAIM.

An action may be brought to set aside a consent judgment on the grounds of mistake or misrepresentation. The indorsement of fraud on a writ will, on application, be struck out where there is no allegation of fraud in the statement of claim.

Washington v. Raper, etc., Burial Co., 8 O.W.N. 525.

PRACTICE—SERVICE OF STATEMENT OF CLAIM—EXTENSION OF TIME FOR—KING'S BENCH ACT, RR. 176, 396—LIMITATION OF ACTION.

By virtue of rr. 176, 396 of the King's Bench Act, R.S.M., 1913, c. 46, the court has jurisdiction to allow further time to serve the statement of claim though the application is not made till after the expiration of the six months prescribed in r. 176 and, in extraordinary circumstances, even though the Statute of Limitations has intervened in the meantime. The discretion exercised by the referee in allowing such further time was held by the court to have been rightly exercised under the following circumstances: The statement of claim was promptly handed to the sheriff for service and was returned with an affidavit of personal service on the defendant. Judgment was then signed by default. After the six months had expired defendant succeeded in getting judgment set aside on showing clearly that he had never been served, and it appeared that the sheriff's officer had served some other person by mistake. The plaintiff and its solicitor had no previous knowledge or means of knowledge of this mistake and the time within which, under the Statute of Limitations, the action could be brought had in the interim elapsed. STATEMENT OF CAUSE GENERALLY—RELEVANCY OF ALLEGATIONS—COSTS IN THE CAUSE.

Fearnside v. Morris, 2 O.W.N. 676, 18 O.W.R. 271.

HUSBAND AND WIFE—HOMESTEAD—PRACTICE—STATUTES—ACT RESPECTING HOMESTEADS, C. 29 OF 1915, AMENDED BY C. 27 OF 1916—ACTION BY WIFE TO SET ASIDE LEASE ON HOMESTEAD—MOTION TO STRIKE OUT CLAIM BECAUSE STATUTE NOT PLEADED AND NO SUCH RELIEF PROVIDED, DISMISSED.

In bringing an action founded upon a public act of the province the plaintiff need only allege such facts as bring him within its provisions and it is not necessary, though desirable, to set out the statute relied on. In an action brought by a wife to set aside a lease made by her husband to defendant to which she was not a party, defendant's motion before the local master to strike out the statement of claim as not pleading an Act respecting Homesteads, relied on, or as claiming relief not provided by the statute, was dismissed. Such motion should be made under rr. 219, 220 rather than 221.

Ratner v. Vicker, [1919] 1 W.W.R. 631. PRACTICE—STATEMENT OF CLAIM IDENTICAL WITH COUNTERCLAIM IN ANOTHER ACTION—ABUSE OF PROCESS OF THE COURT.

Plaintiff's statement of claim was struck out as being an abuse of the process of the court because the relief claimed was the same as his counterclaim in another action between the same parties.

Kybiich v. Mangus, [1919] 3 W.W.R. 632. PLEADING—EMBARRASSING PLEADING STRUCK OUT.

An allegation in the statement of claim for malicious prosecution that the magistrate before permitting an amendment to defendant's information examined defendant and announced his opinion that his action was malicious and that no criminal responsibility attached to the plaintiff, was struck out as embarrassing because not a fact material to the issue.

Bain v. Nicholson, [1919] 3 W.W.R. 1026.

E. NEGATION OF DEFENCE.

(§ II E—190)—NEGATION OF DEFENCE—CONSIDERATION FOR BILL OR NOTE.

Since it is presumed that a promissory note is based on a legal and good consideration, it is unnecessary for the statement of claim to allege facts to shew such consideration; it is for the defence to specially plead want of consideration.

ACTION ON CONTRACT REQUIRED BY STATUTE TO BE IN WRITING—COMPLIANCE NOT ALLEGED.

Whether an agreement for remuneration for the sale of land is in writing as required by c. 27 of the Alberta Act of 1906, need not be alleged in a statement of claim in an action for the recovery of the broker's commission; the lack of such writing being a matter of defence.

(§ II E—197)—MUNICIPAL OFFICER—WANT OF NOTICE—GOOD FAITH.

A public official, sued for damages on account of an act done in the exercise of his functions, can set up his status and complain of want of notice only if he has committed the act charged against him in good faith; good or bad faith is a question affecting the merits of the litigation and can only be decided upon the merits. When malice and bad faith are alleged the defendant cannot set up want of notice by exception to the form.

Paradis v. Roger, 49 Que. S.C. 7.

F. PRAYER: ALLEGATIONS AS TO DAMAGES. (§ II F—202)—ALLEGATIONS AS TO DAMAGES—GENERAL—SPECIAL—SUFFICIENCY.

General damage need not be specially pleaded, but special damage must be pleaded in order that the defendant may not be taken by surprise at the trial.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT—PLEADINGS UNDER—POWER OF ARBITRATOR TO ALLOW APPLICANT TO AMEND HIS PARTICULARS.

Moore v. Crow's Nest Pass Coal Co., 15 B.C.R. 391.

G. AVERMENTS AS TO OWNERSHIP, TITLE OR POSSESSION.

(§ II G—210)—ACTION FOR PURCHASE PRICE—SALE OF LAND.

Possession of title by a vendor suing for the balance of the purchase money of land upon an open contract, and his readiness to convey are something more than conditions precedent within the meaning of r. 154 (Sask.); they are material facts which go to the root of the action and must be pleaded in order to entitle the vendor to a judgment. [Mayberry v. Williams, 3 S.L.R. 350; Yates v. Gardiner, 20 L.J. Ex. 327, applied.]

AVERMENT AS TO OWNERSHIP, TITLE OR POSSESSION.

The defence that a chattel was purchased bona fide for value, is sufficiently raised by an allegation that it was understood between the defendant's vendor and the person from whom the latter bought the chattel, who retained the title thereto, that the former was at liberty to sell and dispose of it.

DEMAND FOR SECURITY—PLEA TO THE MERITS.

A demand for security as enacted by art. 2073 C.C. (Que.), must be made by a plea to the merits and not by a dilatory exception. [Bastien v. Desjardins, 11 K.B., followed.]

Mutual Ass'ce Co. v. Morency, 15 Que. P.R. 74.

LANDLORD'S SEIZURE IN EJECTMENT—EXCEPTION TO FORM—CONCLUSIONS—INSCRIPTION IN LAW—C.C.P. 174, 191, 1150, 1153.

A contention that the written document on which the plaintiff bases his seizure in ejectment is a deed of sale and not a lease, and that the action is not summary, must be pleaded by way of an inscription in law or a plea to the merits, and not by way of an exception to the form. The conclusions of an exception to the form, asking purely and simply the dismissal of the action, are illegal, the court not being able to decide further than what the conclusions mention and therefore being unable to reserve the plaintiff's recourse.

Bourdon v. Cohen, 15 Que. P.R. 276.

The plaintiff, in a possessory action, has to allege that he was in possession a year and a day before the controversy of which he complains. Upon omission of such an allegation the action will be sent back for inscription of the right.

Henry v. Hodge, 18 Rev. de Jur. 47.

HYPOTHECARY ACTION—REGISTRATION.

Where, in an hypothecary action, the declaration does not allege the registration of the deed creating the hypothec, the action cannot be maintained.

Drouin v. Legault, 25 Que. K.B. 74.

H. ON CONTRACT LIABILITY.

(§ II H—215)—MISREPRESENTATION—ACTION TO SET ASIDE CONTRACT.

A plaintiff in an action to set aside a contract entered into on the strength of alleged misrepresentation, must be held strictly to his pleadings as to the false statement relied on.

Medealf v. Oshawa Lands & Investments, 15 D.L.R. 745, 5 O.W.N. 797.

In an action to recover a debt an allegation of defendant's admission of the debt and promise to pay it should appear in the declaration; if it appears in the reply to defendant's pleas it will be struck, when it alleges merely a promise to pay without specifying whether it was verbal or in writing so as to afford opportunity for a demand of particulars.

Miner v. Keegan, 14 Que. P.R. 412.

ACTION BY BANK UPON MORTGAGE—ADDITIONAL SECURITY—MODE OF PLEADING.

In an action by a bank upon a mortgage upon real estate it is not necessary to allege in the statement of claim facts shewing that the mortgage was taken by way of additional security to a pre-existent debt. Where the right claimed or the defence raised existed at common law and the subsequent statute has not affected its validity, but merely introduced regulations as to the mode of its existence or performance, the statute does not affect the form of pleading. It is sufficient to allege whatever was sufficient before the statute.

STATEMENT OF CLAIM—ORAL CONTRACT—CONSIDERATION—PARTICULARS.

Harris v. Elliott, 4 O.W.N. 849, 24 O.W. R. 143.

(§ II H-218)—ON COVENANT.

As the onus rests upon the defendant in an action for specific performance of a contract to sell lands, to show that, in cancelling the agreement, the procedure agreed upon in the contract was followed, it is immaterial that objection to the sufficiency of the notice of cancellation was not taken by the plaintiff in the pleadings.

Brown v. Roberts, 2 D.L.R. 523, 17 B.C.R. 16, 1 W.W.R. 987.

(§ II H-219)—ACTION AGAINST ENDORSER OF PROMISSORY NOTE—NOTICE OF DISHONOUR.

Having regard to the statutory form of protest contained in the Bills of Exchange Act (Can.), which includes a statement of the notices of protest, a demurrer to a statement of claim which alleges protest without specifying notice of dishonour in respect of a promissory note payable in Canada, will not be allowed.

DEMAND NOTES—DEED ABSOLUTE AS SECURITY—UNCONDITIONAL LEAVE TO DEFEND.

The fact that the lender suing upon demand notes had taken a deed absolute in form as security for the payment of the debt will support an order giving unconditional leave to defend so that defendant's rights in respect of the mortgage may be tried out in the one action where his affidavit sets up a contemporaneous oral agreement that he should have a period of time not yet expired within which to make payment.

Auld v. Taylor, 21 D.L.R. 577, 21 B.C.R. 192, 3 W.W.R. 552.

BILLS AND NOTES.

In an action on a note against an endorser, no legal ground of action or "lien de droit" is disclosed, if the declaration omits to allege, that notice of the protest was given to defendant as endorser. A declaration is not demurrable if it be therein alleged that defendant has acknowledged to owe and promised to pay the amount of the note sued upon, which means a promise and acknowledgment subsequent to the maturity and failure to give notice of the dishonour of the note. Plaintiff cannot make proof of the protest of the note and of notice thereof to defendant, if the declaration omits to allege such notice. If plaintiff fails to file his exhibits with the return of the writ or with his answer, he cannot afterwards file them without any leave of the court or judge, and without any notice to the defendant. Notice of protest is insufficiently given to an endorser, when such notice is sent by depositing the same directed to the endorser's name, Montreal, in the post office, at Montreal, and prepaying postage, when defendant has under his signature on the note designated his place for the purposes of such note.

STATEMENT OF CLAIM—RELEVANCY—CONTRACT FOR SALE OF LANDS.

Shumer v. Todd, 2 O.W.N. 645, 18 O.W.R. 275.

(§ II H-223)—SALE OF GOODS.

In an action for the price of goods sold exceeding the value of $50, where there has been no acceptance or receipt of the goods and nothing given in earnest, the vendor who relies upon a written contract must allege it in his action or by subsequent amendment, and otherwise he cannot produce it or make evidence of it at the trial.

Lemay v. Lefebvre, 4 D.L.R. 833, 41 Que. S.C. 341.

J. FOR NEGLIGENCE.

(§ II J-230)—STATEMENT OF CLAIM—SUFFICIENCY OF ALLEGATIONS.

A statement of claim in writing that on a certain day, near a certain place, plaintiff's horse was killed by the defendant railway company's engine, to his damage in a certain sum, is a fairly comprehensive statement of the facts shewing what the cause of the action is for, within the meaning of s. 95 of the County Courts Act, R.S. M. 1902, c. 38, allowing a "simple statement in writing of the cause of action such that it may be known or understood by a person of ordinary intelligence what the action is brought for."

ALLEGATIONS AS TO NEGLIGENCE—COMMON FAULT—WARRANTY—QUE. C.P. 185, 191.

The principal defendant may allege that the accident in the case is due to the common fault and negligence of the principal plaintiff and defendant in warranty.

Ramsay v. Montreal, 16 Que. P.R. 199.

ACTION FOR DAMAGES—HYPOTHESIS.

Dagenais v. Dorval, 12 Que. P.R. 217.

(§ II J-231)—SUFFICIENCY OF ALLEGATION.

An allegation in the plaintiff's statement of claim for injuries received by being struck by an automobile, that such vehicle was being driven by the son of the defendant, is not a sufficient allegation of agency to render the defendant answerable, and the statement cannot, at the trial after all the evidence is in and the argument in progress, be amended to shew such an agency.

ALLEGATION OF PREVIOUS ACCIDENTS—QUE. C.P. 191.

In an action for damages, an allegation that "in fact, many accidents happened at the same place, on account of the great speed with which the defendant's cars crossed that place," will not be allowed.
Neville v. Montreal Tramways Co., 16 Que. P.R. 202.

(§ II J—234)—SPECIFYING NEGLIGENT ACT.
If the plaintiff by his action for damages against the city of Montreal alleges negligence on the city's part or defective drainage he should give the particulars of the facts constituting the negligence or of the defects in the maintenance or construction of the drains.
Capras v. Montreal, 14 Que. P.R. 372.

(§ II J—236)—STATEMENT OF CLAIM—EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY ACT (B.C.).

A plaintiff in a negligence action desiring to claim under the Employers' Liability Act (B.C.) as well as at common law, should specifically raise the claim of defendant's liability under the statute in his statement of claim.

AS AFFECTING NATURE OF ACTION.

Where, from the nature of the wrong complained of, there is more than one form of remedy, the plaintiff may elect either, and hence redress for misdelivery of goods by a carrier may be claimed either in contract or in tort.

Williams v. Government Management Board, 11 E.L.R. 10.

(§ II J—238)—NEGLIGENCE—ACTION FOR DAMAGES—FINDING OF JURY—EXCESSIVE SPEED—DEFINITION.

In an action for damages for injuries sustained by being run down by defendant's engine, the court on appeal held that the finding of the jury, that the company was guilty of negligence in not "proceeding with sufficient caution when approaching wreckage zone," was covered by the allegation of "excessive speed" in plaintiff's pleading, and excessive speed would be such speed as would be excessive under all the circumstances of the case, and that the jury had the right to pass upon the question of excessive speed. Stat. 1910, c. 7, R.S.B.C. 1911, c. 39, s. 93, in respect of a judgment obtained against him by one induced to subscribe for shares in reliance on false statements in the prospectus, must allege the responsibility of the codirectors for the issuance of the prospectus, that the subscription was made on the faith of untrue statements therein, and that the subscriber suffered loss by reason thereof; and it is not sufficient to allege merely a claim for contribution on account of the judgment against the plaintiff, and its payment by him.

Where the statement of claim in an action for damages for malicious prosecution and false imprisonment contains the usual allegations and the statement of defence denies all the material allegations, a further paragraph to the effect that “if the defendant laid or prosecuted said charge or procured the issue of said warrant, or caused the plaintiff to be arrested or imprisoned, the defendant did it on the advice of counsel,” followed by a statement in detail of how the charge was laid before a magistrate who issued the warrant of his own accord and without defendant’s request, will be stricken out on motion under r. 167 (Sask. Practice Rules, 1911), as tending to prejudice, embarrass and delay the fair trial of the action.

MALICIOUS PROSECUTION — ALLEGING TERMINATION.

In an action for malicious prosecution, the allegation that the prosecution was determined in the plaintiff’s favour is sufficient, where it sets up that “on the case being called the plaintiff was discharged from custody by the presiding judge at the sittings, whereby the said prosecution was determined,” the essential allegations being (a) that the proceedings were terminated (b) that they were terminated in the plaintiff’s favour; and it is not essential, though advisable, to set out in what manner they were terminated.

(§ II L—258)—TO REAL PROPERTY.

In an action for damages caused by the falling of the wall of a building erected upon the adjoining premises, by a contractor for the owner of such adjoining premises, the owner or occupant of the property upon which the wall fell should not rest the claim entirely upon the negligence in the construction of the building, but should plead substantively the omission of the adjoining owner to see to the doing of that which was necessary to prevent the mischief. AS TO CREDIT AND MANAGEMENT.

The plaintiffs sued upon an agreement respecting the acquisition and resale of lands for their mutual profits, claiming large sums for debt and damages. The defendant company with its statement of defence filed a counterclaim for over $2,000,000. On application of the plaintiffs, the referee made an order striking out certain paragraphs as irrelevant in an action upon an agreement between the plaintiffs and the defendant company only. Held, reversing the order, that the defendants were entitled to set up the claim that they had behind them the stability, credit, organization, name and management of the parent company, and to support that claim by alleging sufficient facts, and that all the paragraphs referred to should be allowed to stand on the record. Capital Trust Co. v. Yellowhead Pass Coal & Coke Co., 27 D.L.R. 25, 9 A.L.R. 463, 33 W.L.R. 875, 9 W.W.R. 1275.

CREDITORS' BILL.

Plaintiff brought an action to set aside as fraudulent and void as against creditors a bill of sale, and judgment was given in the action in his favour. He then claimed to have an account taken of goods levied upon by defendant under several warrants of distress issued by him against the makers of the bill of sale who were his tenants. It was held, that if plaintiff wished to attack the proceedings under the warrants of distress as part of the scheme to defeat creditors he should have done so in his pleadings, and also, that plaintiff could not raise in this way the question as to irregularity in connection with the distress proceedings, a special action being the only remedy in that case, and that remedy not being open to a person in plaintiff's position. Also, that the distress proceedings having been sufficiently pleaded were an answer to plaintiff's claim. Defendant's costs on the appeal set off against plaintiff's costs in the action.

Pitts v. Campbell, 45 N.S.R. 458.

(§ II P—288)—JUDGMENT.

If the grounds of the plaintiff's claim are not given either in the writ or declaration the objection thereto by the defendant should be taken by exception to the form and not by inscription en droit. The plaintiff who sues to recover the amount of a judgment is not required to give full particulars thereof as it is set up and filed as part of the declaration.

Cardin v. Parent, 14 Que. P.R. 61.

(§ II P—290)—FRAUD.

In an action for the rescission of an agreement for the sale of lands, and the return of moneys retained by the defendant, allegations of fraud are sufficiently made without actual mention of the word "fraud" in the statement of claim, where the allegations, if sustained, shew that the defendants were guilty of the perpetration of a fraud on the plaintiff. COUNTERCLAIM.

A counterclaim when properly drawn is not a defence, but is a new and separate action.

ACTION FOR AGENT'S NEGLIGENCE—DEFENCE.

It is no answer to an action by the principal against his agent for breach of contract resulting from the agent's wrongful disposal of a document of title to goods and the resulting delivery of the goods by the carrier before the price had been paid to such principal who was the seller and consignee, for the agent to set up that the property in the goods had not passed to the person who had wrongfully obtained possession.

LEAVE TO SERVE—NOTICE.

An application for an order to serve a statement of defence under r. 56 (Ont.) should be made on notice and not ex parte. [Joss v. Fairgrieve, 32 O.L.R. 117, followed.]

LIBEL — PLEA OF JUSTIFICATION.

The pleadings in an action for libel must define the issue which is being tried. The defendant upon a plea of justification is limited to proving the truth of his assertion, and ought not to be allowed, to the prejudice of the plaintiff, to adduce evidence which may raise a totally different issue. Confusion will arise, and a mistrial may be caused, if evidence is admitted upon the theory that the pleadings do not bind the parties, because of the power to amend. A new trial was ordered.

Govenlock v. London Free Press Co., 35 O.L.R. 79.

Can. Dig.—115.

EXCEPTION TO THE FORM — JUDGMENT — PLEA TO THE MERITS.

Though the judge who delivers the final judgment has jurisdiction to review the decision given upon an exception to the form, the latter is only provisional as between the parties, and the defendant can set up in his defence on the merits the same grounds already pleaded by the exception to the form which was dismissed. PLEA TO LIEN ACTION — PARTICULARS — VALUE OF WORK — CONCLUSIONS.

In an action in declaration of privilege, a plea which does not conclude to the nullity of such privilege, but only asks its radiation is irregular, and such conclusions will be dismissed on motion as being conclusions of a main action or of a cross-demand. A defendant who pleads to an action in declaration of privilege that such privilege is illegal must shew in what such illegality consists. If he claims that the plaintiff's works are worth only a portion of the amount for which a privilege has been registered, he must state in what those works consist.

Angrignon v. Mailloux, 19 Que. P.R. 377.

PREMATURITY OF ACTION — EXAMINATION SUR FAITS ARTICLE.

If a defendant pleads that the action of the plaintiff is premature as he had been granted a delay and being examined sur faits et articles persists in alleging that the delay had been given him, the plaintiff may proceed to judgment without other proof, and the answers of the defendant on his examination cannot be set up in his favour. If a widow sued not personally but as qualité remarries during the course of the trial a reprise d'instance will not be allowed.

— ABSENCE OF ELECTION BY PLAINTIFF TO PROCEED TO TRIAL.

Munn v. Young, 5 O.W.N. 426.

PLEAS — RES JUDICATA — NECESSARY AVERTMENTS.

In order that a defence of res judicata may succeed, it is necessary to shew not only that the cause of action was the same, but also that the plaintiff has had an opportunity of recovering, and but for his own fault might have recovered in the first action that which he seeks to recover in the second. The plea of res judicata must shew either an actual merger or that the same point has been actually decided between the same parties.

PLEAS — NON EST FACTUM — WHO MAY PLEAD — ILLITERATES.

The defence of non est factum ought not to be limited to the illiterate, so as to deprive the literate and educated people entirely of such a defence in cases where they could have read what they signed, but failed to do so.

A motion to reject an answer to plea, being a matter of form, must be proposed within the delays of an exception to the form.

Croysdill v. Mark-Brock, 12 Que. P.R. 139.

(§ III A—303)—DENIALS — PARTICULARITY.

A paragraph of a defence which, without stating any facts, says that the defendants are not and have not become liable under the ordinance or statute upon which the plaintiff's claim is based, is not permissible under the Alberta practice rules and will be struck out.

STATEMENT OF DEFENCE — SPECIFIC DENIALS AND TRAVERSALS.

The party pleading under the New Brunswick Practice Rules must make it quite clear how much of his opponent's case is disputed, and under the rule (order 19, r. 13) as to specific denials a conjunctive denial of several items of alleged trespass means only that defendant denies committing all of them; if he intended to deny committing any of them his traverse of the several items charged as trespass should be a denial of each item with the word "or" separating each denial so as to make the denial disjunctive.

DENIALS — DEFAMATION ACTION — DENYING INNUEENDO.

A defendant is entitled to set up in his pleading in a libel action that the words relied upon by the plaintiff have not the meaning assigned in the innuendo.

Robert v. Herald Co., 10 D.L.R. 21.

It is not necessary for the defendant, in an action for malicious prosecution and false imprisonment, to affirmatively plead reasonable and probable cause, the proper form of defence being merely to deny the plaintiff's allegations.

DENIALS IN DEFENCE.

Under a rule of pleading which requires each party to deal specifically with each allegation of fact of which he does not admit the truth (Alta. r. 118), denials of the allegations in each of several paragraphs of the statement of claim may be pleaded by separate paragraphs of the statement of defence alleging as to each separately that the defendant "denies each and every of the allegations and facts set forth and contained" in the particular paragraph. [Adkins v. North Metropolitan Tramway Co., 63 L.J.Q.B. 361, 10 T.L.R. 173, applied.]

Kennerley v. Hextall, 10 D.L.R. 501.

GENERAL DENIAL — FAILURE TO SPECIFY.

A general denial in one paragraph of all the allegations in a statement of claim, without specifically denying each allegation of fact as required by r. 213 (B.C.), is bad and must be disregarded. [Hogg v. Farrell, 6 B.C.R. 387, followed.]

A party litigant must assert all his rights and every title that he may have justifying his claim; it is not open to him to try the matter piecemeal.

Ontario & Minnesota Power Co. v. Rat Portage Lumber Co., 3 D.L.R. 331, 3 O.W.N. 1078, 1182, 22 O.W.R. 1.

CORPORATION — DENIAL OF AUTHORITY TO SIGN NOTE — AFFIDAVIT.

A corporation sued on a note and pleading that the note was not authorized by it, ought to follow its denial with an affidavit, without which the allegation will be struck out on motion.

Hayes v. Montreal North, 19 Que. P.R. 216.

OVERPAYMENT — DENIAL — PARTICULARS.

If the plaintiff, in answer to a plea of compensation, alleges that he had previously overpaid defendant for stone bought from him, and if the defendant replies by a general denial and joins issue with plaintiff without asking for particulars, the court should take into consideration all evidence that has been adduced before it, and render a judgment in liquidation of the account. Poirras v. Thibault, 18 Que. P.R. 77.

GENERAL DENIAL OF ALLEGATIONS IN DECLARATION — QUE. C.P. 202.

A denial made individually of all the allegations in a declaration is not a general denial excluding all other allegations.

STATEMENT OF DEFENCE — GENERAL DENIAL — FAILURE TO ALLEGE FACTS — RULE 142.

Lumpert v. Barrett, 7 O.W.N. 574.

DENIAL—SPECIAL DEFENCE.

The denial of a single allegation in the declaration does not prevent the plea, in addition, of special defences provided that they be regular, but irregular allegations pleaded in these defences, such as a demand for an account, will be dismissed on motion.

Kaufman v. Marks, 18 Que. P.R. 401.

DENIAL — TRAVERSE — AFFIDAVIT — SECURITY.

Where the authenticity of the certificate mentioned in art. 1220, C.C. (Que.) is denied, the contesting party must proceed with the formalities of art. 209, C.C.P., requiring an affidavit and the giving of security for costs. A general denegation or traverse is not sufficient.

Guitman v. Goodman, 26 Que. K.B. 270.

QUALIFIED DENIAL.

An allegation in his plea by which the defendant "denies all and each of the allegations of the declaration as stated" does not exclude any other defence.

PLEA OF NEVER INDEBTED.

Miles v. Bell, 40 N.B.R. 158.

REPLICATION — PETIS DARREIN CONTINUANCE.

The facts which have happened since the trial began, and of which the plaintiff may avail himself in a supplementary replication to the defence, should be proper facts and grounds and of a nature to overcome the defence, and not facts and grounds which tend to reform, reconstitute, enlarge or complete his action. It is by inscription en droit and not by motion that the dismissal of such a supplementary replication should be asked for. An allegation which only admits one part of the plea will not be rejected on inscription en droit.

Leduc v. St. Boleoil, 18 Que. P.R. 356.

PETIS DARREIN CONTINUANCE.

The new facts which a defendant may plead by his defence and the plaintiff by his reply, under art. 198 C.C.P., must be facts which arose before the commencement of the action, but which the declaration or the defence, as the case may be, does not refer to; they must be so pertinent to and connected with the cause that one party or the other can join issue by a general reply. A supplementary defence and a supplementary answer are each subject to the following conditions and formalities: (a) It can only be pleaded with the permission of the court; (b) that the facts pleaded are material; (c) that the facts arose since issue joined; (d) that the application to plead be supported with the affidavit required by rule 47 of the Superior Court; (e) that the application is made before final judgment, or before the verdict in case of a jury trial.

Mercurie v. Munsey, 19 Que. P.R. 182.

(§ III A—304 b) — ABATEMENT — WHAT AMOUNTS TO.

Rule 318 of the King's Bench Rules, R.S. M. 1902, c. 40, which declares that no defence shall be pleaded "in abatement," does not require that a plaintiff should be non-suited merely because the action was prematurely brought, where the disability had been removed pendente lite.

ABATEMENT.

A dilatory plea to stay the principal action will not be granted when the defendant, a joint maker of a promissory note, does not give any other valid reason for that purpose, except that the note should be paid by the other maker, when in fact the note is to be paid by him.

Droin v. Ambrose, 14 Que. P.R. 58.

B. WHAT MUST BE PLEADED.

(§ III B—305) — ESTOPEL — SPECIAL PLEADING — WHEN NOT NECESSARY.

An estoppel must always be specially pleaded unless it appears on the face of the adverse pleading or unless there was no opportunity to plead it. [Odgers on Pleading, 8th ed., 222, approved.]

MORTGAGE — REDEMPTION — VALIDITY OF FIRST MORTGAGE — JOINING PRIOR MORTGAGEE — ACTION TO ENFORCE SECOND MORTGAGE.

Where the validity of the prior mortgage is not attacked there must be an offer to redeem either expressly or impliedly in the pleadings in order to justify the joining of the prior mortgagee as a party to an action brought to enforce the second mortgage. NEGLIGENCE — INEVITABLE ACCIDENT — PARTICULARS.

In an action of negligence it is open to the defendant on the general issue to prove that the injury was due to inevitable accident without expressly pleading it; consequently the defendant who has pleaded inevitable accident should not be ordered to give preliminary particulars as to the nature of and the circumstances which led to such inevitable accident.

PARTICULARS — ACTION FOR DAMAGES — SECRETARY-TREASURER SUED FOR ACCOUNT — ALLEGATION OF PROBABLE AND REASONABLE CAUSE FOR BRINGING ACTION — C.C.P. 123.

In an action for damages against a municipality, brought by the secretary-treasurer against whom it had taken an action to account, if the municipality pleads that it had a probable and reasonable cause to believe the said action to account well founded both in fact and in law, it must state the facts and circumstances by which it was induced to take such proceedings.

Richard v. St. Ours, 15 Que. P.R. 307.

PROCEDURE — CONFESSION OF JUDGMENT — DENIAL — DEFENCE — CONCLUSION DISMISSING THE ACTION — C.C.P. ART. 527, 530.

After having brought in a confession of judgment denied by the plaintiff, the defendant, if he intends to benefit himself by this procedure, should move by his defense that his confession of judgment be declared sufficient and that the action be dismissed for the rest, but should not ask simply for a dismissal of the action. If he asks purely and simply for a dismissal of the action, and after the examination of the case the action is maintained against him he incurs all the costs of the action.

Lessard v. Auchu, 56 Que. S.C. 226.

VARIANCE — STATEMENT OF CLAIM — CASE PROVED — DEFENCE OF STATUTE OF FRAUDS — WHEN AVAILABLE — MOTION AGAINST VERDICT.

The plaintiffs, wholesale liquor dealers, alleged that in Nov. 1913, the plaintiffs agreed to pay, and did pay, the defendant $5,000 for certain leasehold premises, and it was agreed that in the event of liquor licenses being issued and in force in Ward 3 in the said town for the year 1917, the plaintiffs should pay the defendant an additional $1,000; that plaintiffs gave defendant their note for $1,000, payable 42 months after date, and it was further agreed that the note should not be negotiated and should be void if licenses were not granted as aforesaid. Defendant did negotiate the note, and plaintiffs were forced to pay it. The case proved was that the plaintiffs bought the property for $6,000, and gave in payment 6 promissory notes, payable respectively 12, 18, 24, 30, 36 and 42 months after date, and it was agreed that the last note should not be negotiated and was to be void if licenses were not granted as aforesaid: A verdict was found for the plaintiffs for the amount of the last note and interest. On motion by the defendant to set aside the verdict and enter a verdict for the defendant, on the grounds that the evidence did not support the issues raised by the pleadings, and that the agreement, not being in writing, could not be enforced under the Statute of Frauds. Held, that there was not such variance between the statement of claim and case proved as to justify the entry of a verdict for the defendant, and as the Statute of Frauds had not been pleaded or raised on the trial it was not available on motion against the verdict.

Boudreau v. Ellsworth, 46 N.B.R. 79.

WHAT MUST BE PLEADED — PART PERFORMANCE.

The equitable defence of part performance must be specially pleaded.

Griffin v. Brunton, 6 W.W.R. 1034.

(§ III B-308)—ASSUMPTION OF RISK.

The maxim volenti non fit injuria has no application nor is it material whether or not it was availed of as a plea, where in the action for negligence, the jury found that it had not been contributed by the plaintiff.

G.T.R. Co. v. Brulott, 46 Can. S.C.R. 629, affirming 24 O.L.R. 154, 19 O.W.R. 514.

(§ III B-309)—ESTOPPEL — SETTING UP CONSTITUENT FACTS.

A plea of estoppel must allege all facts upon which the party relies as constituting the estoppel, and consequently, if a defendant sued for the price of goods sold and delivered, desires to set up that the defendant had, on receiving a statement of account rendered by the plaintiff after the date of the charges in question paid the amount of same and had destroyed vouchers in faith of its being the entire account, such facts must be specifically pleaded in order to form an answer to the demand for items which were not in fact included in the account so rendered.

ESTOPPEL TO BE SPECIALLY PLEADED.

An estoppel must always be specially pleaded unless there is no opportunity to plead it; and if the matter relied upon as an estoppel appears on the face of the adverse pleading, it is ground for an objection in point of law in lieu of a demurrer.

ESTOPPEL — ASSIGNEE OF LAND AGREEMENT FAILING TO PLEAD.

Where an assignee of an agreement for sale has an acknowledgment of the debt under such agreement, and comes to trial with full knowledge of the fact that the purchaser intends to set up by way of equitable defence a claim against the assignee for defective construction of the building on the land comprised in the agreement, but fails to specially plead estoppel, the purchaser is entitled to set up a claim in connection with the construction of the building as against the assignee, in the same manner, and to the same extent, as the purchaser could against the original vendor if he were taking proceedings under the agreement.

(§ III B-312)—FRAUD.

A plaintiff suing for cancellation of an instrument given as security on the purchase of a business as a going concern upon the ground of failure of consideration, will not be permitted, after repudiating the agreement and declining to accept delivery or transfer of the assets of the business, which his vendor was always prepared to hand over in terms of the agreement, to shew that the defendant took an unconscionable advantage of him in making the contract, where he has not pleaded that the contract was voidable as an unconscionable bargain or on the ground of fraud or otherwise.

WHAT MAY BE PLEADED — NOTE OBTAINED BY FRAUD — RETAINING BENEFITS — COUNTERCLAIM FOR DECEIT.

Although a promissory note given for the purchase price of a stallion was obtained by the fraud of the payee, the note is merely voidable and not void and the maker by retaining the stallion may deprive himself of the defence of fraud, and be compelled to seek relief by way of counterclaim for deceit.

A motion for a nonsuit which the defendant had abandoned is not the proper practice to bar the limitation.

Workman v. Vineberg, 13 Que. P.R. 225.

(§ III B-319)—NOTICE OR WANT OF NOTICE.

In an action on a building contract, where it is claimed that under the contract notice should have been given to the owners by the contractor of the latter's application to the architect for a final certificate, such lack of notice must be pleaded or it cannot be raised at the trial.

PRACTICE — UNCONSTITUTIONALITY OF LAW — PLEA TO ACTION TO RECOVER PARTICULAR LEGACY — PARTICULAR LEGACY ON WHICH NO TAX IS DUE — TESTAMENTARY DISPOSITION OF DEFINITE SUM FOR SPECIAL PURPOSE.

An allegation of the unconstitutionality of a law must be expressly pleaded, and the Attorney-General should be notified accordingly, otherwise the court cannot adjudicate. A universal legatee, sued for the recovery of a particular legacy, cannot, in his plea to the plaintiff's action, raise the point that the estate's business is not settled, and that he has not yet paid the taxes due to the Crown; this last point more especially cannot be raised when no tax is due on the legacy. A provision in the will of a Dominion Government official, ordering that the amount to his credit, after his death, in the Retirement Fund provided for by R.S.C. c. 17, ss. 27-30, shall be applied to defray the cost of his funeral, does not affect a particular legacy made to his wife to whom that sum is paid by order of the Treasury Board under s. 30 of the said Act.

Bristol v. Kennedy, 8 D.L.R. 750, 4 O.W.N. 537, 23 O.W.R. 685.

When a defendant sued by several plaintiffs in the same action has different ways of pleading against each of them, he can produce separate pleadings against each of the plaintiffs, leaving to the judge to pass upon the question of costs.

ANNULMENT OF DEED — REPAYMENT OF MONEY.

A defendant may in his defence ask that the deed upon which the action is based be set aside, but not that the moneys already paid under it should be repaid to him; such conclusions can be taken only by direct action or by a conventional demand.

Compagnie des Terrains et Placements v. Provencher, 18 Que. P.R. 441.

PLEA OF COMPENSATION — DAMAGES.

Where a debtor, sued for an account, not being allowed to set up compensation by a claim for damages, a plea by which he admits the account, pleads his said claim and a cross-demand with which he follows this plea, then prays that compensation may be ordered between the said account and the damages ascertained by the judgment upon his own claim, has no legal foundation (C.P., art. 196).

Kaswan v. Solin, 24 Rev. de Jur. 226.

POSSESSORY ACTION — TITLE — POSSESSION — BOUNDARY.

In written pleadings the court ought rather to go according to the intention of the person who has pleaded rather than the literal meaning of the words employed by him. The defendant in a possessory action may plead reasons tending to establish his right of property, and even allege that he is not only the possessor but also the owner of the land, for the purpose of rejecting the action, as he can invoke his title to the property in order to determine the nature and the quality of his possession and the applicability of art. 2200 C.C. (Que.). Where there is at least a doubt as to the delimitation of neighbouring and contiguous properties, it is necessary to have recourse to an action in bornage and not to a possessory action.

Bourbonnais v. Denis, 53 Que. S.C. 286.

DEFENCE — CUMULATION OF GROUNDS.

If the plaintiff claims a fixed sum, balance for work done for the benefit of the defendant, the latter can plead that he was in partnership with the plaintiff for the construction of the works in question, and that the share due to the plaintiff is as a member of the partnership. The defendant can also plead a set-off of an ascertained and liquidated debt, and thus cumulate in his plea several grounds of defence, just as the plaintiff can cumulate several causes of action.

Gravel v. Patenaiffe, 16 Que. P.R. 32.

D. SUFFICIENCY.

(§ III D-325) — BREACH OF WARRANTY.

Where the plaintiff sold to the defendant a horse with a warranty as to age and soundness, and the horse died after the defendant had kept the horse in his possession for about 2 months without returning it, such a plea of failure to return the horse is no answer to a claim for damages for breach of warranty, however effective it might have been as an answer to a defence of fraudulent misrepresentation.

Winterburn v. Boon, 10 D.L.R. 621, 6 S.L.R. 177, 23 W.L.R. 556.

Where parts of a defendant's pleading sufficiently disclose a reasonable ground of defence against the plaintiff or a reasonable cause of counterclaim, it will not be struck out as embarrassing or as tending to prejudice the plaintiff under r. 167 of the Saskatchewan Rules of Practice, 1911. Where, in an action to recover on a promissory note executed by the defendant and another, the defence is that the note in question was given as collateral to a mortgage made by the other person in favour of the plaintiff, which the defendant executed as co-covenanter and surety, that there was a prior mortgage on the same land, which mortgage was foreclosed, thus rendering the subsequent mortgage worthless as security, a further allegation that by reason of the plaintiff's neglect to give notice to the defendant of the foreclosure and to keep alive and preserve the security of the second mortgage for the benefit of the defendant as surety, the said mortgage became worthless as a security to the defendant as such surety and that, therefore, the defendant is relieved from further liability in respect to the said mortgage and of any promissory notes given as collateral thereto, should not be struck out as embarrassing since it sufficiently discloses a reasonable ground of defence.

DOG TAX AND SHEEP PROTECTION ACT — STATEMENT OF CLAIM.

A statement of claim which alleges that within the time mentioned in s. 18 of the Dog Tax and Sheep Protection Act (R.S.O. 1914, c. 246), the plaintiff applied to the council for compensation and satisfied the council that he had made diligent search and inquiry to ascertain the owner or keeper of the dog, "without result," sufficiently states a cause of action for a mandamus requiring the council to award compensation. [Re Hogan v. Tudor, 34 O.L.R. 571, distinguished.]

PETITION—AFFIDAVIT.

Where a petition should be accompanied by an affidavit it is only as to those allegations which are not established by the record itself that the affidavit can be invoked. James Bay & E.R. Co. v. Bernard, 23 D.L.R. 701, 24 Que. K.B. 6.

AFFIDAVIT OF DEFENCE TO MOTION FOR JUDGMENT.

The grounds of defence must be disclosed in an affidavit under r. 276 (Alta.) on the hearing of a motion for judgment, and a mere statement that the defendant has a good defence on the merits is not sufficient.

Advance Rumely Thresher Co. v. Laclair, 32 D.L.R. 609, 10 A.L.R. 446, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 875.

STATEMENT OF DEFENCE — RELEVANCY — CONSTRUCTION OF TRUST DEED — CLAIM AGAINST ESTATE OF DECEASED TRUSTEE AND BENEFICIARY — ISSUES BETWEEN DEFENDANTS — REFUSAL OF MOTION TO STRIKE OUT PARTS OF PLEADING.

Lawson v. National Trust Co., 11 O.W.N. 317.

PARTICULARS.

In furnishing particulars of notices, alleged by defendant to have been given by its engineers to plaintiff, it is insufficient to furnish all the documents and writings in possession of defendant containing the written notices relied on, and extracts from the engineers' diary as to interviews, alleging that as one of the engineers is out of defendant's employment and absent the required information cannot be got from him. It is the defendant who should pick out from the material what it relies on, and as to the verbal notices given by the absent engineer it should give the best particulars it can.

Blome v. Regina, [1919] 1 W.W.R. 315.

SPEEDY JUDGMENT — MOTION FOR — DEFENCE RAISED IN PLEADINGS BUT NOT SET UP IN AFFIDAVIT OPPOSING MOTION.

Eaself v. Houston, 16 B.C.R. 353.

(§ III D—326)—AS TO CORPORATIONS.

Where an allottee, upon a public subscription for shares of a company organized under the Ontario Companies Act desires to shew irregularities in the organization of the company in seeking to avoid the allotment in an action for calls made after the lapse of a long time during which notice of his refusal to accept had been given the company, but no legal proceedings had been taken by him to declare the allotment void, he must specifically set up in his pleadings the grounds on which he relies, so that the opposing party may have a reasonable opportunity of meeting the case he proposes to advance.

(§ III D—328)—PAYMENT — TENDER — SUFFICIENCY OF PLEA OF — PAYING INTO COURT AMOUNT OF PLAINTIFF'S CLAIM WITH RESERVATION OF RIGHTS — STRIKING OUT AS EMBARRASSING.

TENDER — READY, WILLING AND ABLE.

A plea of readiness and willingness to accept delivery of chattels sold, and to pay for them, implies an ability to do so, and is therefore a sufficient plea.

COMPENSATION—NOTE.

A defendant who pleads to an action brought by an assignee of a debt, that the assignor was not his creditor at the time of the assignment, since he owed him a sum of money greater than that claimed by the action, which sum is represented by a note which he does not produce, will be obliged to produce this note on pain of his plea of compensation being dismissed.

Guilmette v. Messier, 18 Que. P.R. 234.

Where the plaintiff sued for unliquidated damages, and defendants pleaded tender before action, and paid into court a sum of money which the plaintiff accepted and obtained payment out upon an ex parte order:—Held (1) that the tender was of no value inasmuch as it was accompanied by a statement that it was to be accepted in full satisfaction, and that the defence of tender was improper; (2) that the plaintiff's conduct having been oppressive throughout the transaction, and having made an unfounded charge of fraud, he should be deprived of his costs.

COMPENSATION.

A plea of compensation even if it comprises only a part of the defence will not be dismissed on motion.

Richmond v. Sparrow, 18 Que. P.R. 12.

(§ III D—332)—JUDGMENT FOR MONEY HAD AND RECEIVED — CLAIM OF TRUST — AMENDMENT OF CLAIM NECESSARY TO MAINTAIN JUDGMENT — STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS COMPLETE ANSWER — RIGHT OF DEFENDANT TO PLEAD STATUTE.

Where a claim of trust is found against a plaintiff, the judgment being only one for money had and received, to which the Statute of Limitations would be a complete answer, the plaintiff cannot maintain the judgment as given without an amendment of the claim, and the defendant has the right to plead the statute in answer, it not being an answer to the claim as pleaded.

(§ III D-333)—TITLE TO LAND.

It is not necessary in setting up a title under a judicial sale to plead the preliminary proceedings leading up to the order or decree directing the sale if such order or decree was made by a superior court as in such case the proceedings are presumed to be regular, but the order or decree itself should be pleaded with particularity and also the proceedings subsequent thereto taken to vest the title in the party claiming thereunder.

CROWN GRANTS — ATTACKING — RIGHT TO HAVE ATTORNEY-GENERAL ADDED AS A PARTY — ACTION BY — PETITION OF RIGHT.

E. & N. Railway Co. v. Dunlop, 41 D.L.R. 737. [The judgment of the B.C. Court of Appeal reversing this judgment, 46 D.L.R. 541 was reversed by the Privy Council, 50 D.L.R. 371 and the above judgment restored.]

JOINT OWNERSHIP.

A plaintiff joint owner, whose rights are contested by a person who is in possession of the joint property, may properly plead that the courts shall declare him entitled to an undivided share in such property; and such plaintiff (while not compelled to continue in the joint ownership) is not obliged to demand distribution, he can have an interest in the estate without proceeding to a distribution, and indeed may prefer to remain in joint ownership. [Armitage v. Evans, 4 Q.L.R. 300; Cannon v. O'Neil, 1 L.C.R. 160; Pothier tit. Petition of Heirship, 9 Bugnet, p. 234, applied.] Where the plaintiffs, as some of the joint heirs of an estate, proceed against the defendant, as a person wrongfully in possession of the joint property, in an action to compel the defendant to render an accounting without in the same action demanding distribution, and where the property in question is essentially divisible in its nature, the action is well taken in this respect, and the plaintiffs may be apportioned their respective shares in the whole estate, without being forced to a distribution.

Houde v. Marchand, 8 D.L.R. 431.

IV. Cross-bill.

V. Reply.

(§ V-345)—REPLICATION — CONFESSION AND AVOIDANCE — SECURITY TO BANK — VALIDITY.

Where an action had been commenced by creditors attacking an assignment of goods to a bank as security, as being a fraudulent preference, a further plea as to the invalidity of the security under the Bank Act (R.S.C. 1906, c. 29, s. 88), though not set out in the statement of claim itself, may be set up in the replication—in confession and avoidance of that issue as set up in the statement of defence.

Laberge v. Merchants Bank, 30 D.L.R. 144, 27 Man. L.R. 84, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 115.

SPECIAL REPLY.

A defendant cannot reply specially without the permission of a judge.

Brentwood Realty Co. v. Surveyor, 19 Que. P.R. 340.

ACTION AGAINST SCHOOL COMMISSION—CONTRACT.

A contractor, who sues a school commission for work done, cannot allege in reply to a plea that if he has not been paid it is because he has refused to submit to the demands of certain commissioners.

Pion v. St. Stanislas de Montreal School Commission, 19 Que. P.R. 3. [Affirmed, 24 Rev. Leg. 397.]

TIME OF FILING.

The filing of a reply more than eight days after defence is irregular where any further step in the action has been taken between the filing of the defence and the reply. [Clarke v. Fawcett, 5 W.L.R. 322; Wright v. Wright, 13 P.R. 268, distinguished.]

A party can reply specially without permission of the judge. This permission is necessary only for the filing of additional matter.

Berthiaume v. Marchand, 15 Que. P.R. 288.

(§ V-347)—AVOIDANCE OF FORMAL RELEASE PLEADED IN DEFENCE.

A plaintiff may properly plead in reply that a release, which is set up as a defence in an action for damages for injuries sustained through the alleged negligence of the defendant, was obtained by fraud, since, under the Judicature Act, both legal and equitable questions can be disposed of in the one action; and it is not now necessary, as was the former practice, to file a bill in equity to restrain the defendant from relying on the release as a bar on the ground that it was fraudulently obtained.

Trawford v. British Columbia Electric R.

(§ V-349)—SUFFICIENCY.

A reply by defendant to plaintiff's replication in the following terms, "All and each of the allegations in the plaintiff's replication which are not in accord with those in the defendant's pleas are false, and not well founded," is equivalent to a general denial and regular.

Lagace v. Boyer, 13 Que. P.R. 265.

(§ V-351)—CHANGING NATURE OF ACTION — CONFESSION AND AVOIDANCE—STATEMENT OF CLAIM — ITS FUNCTIONS.

Facts by way of confession and avoidance are properly included in the plaintiff's reply and not by way of amendment to the statement of claim. A plaintiff may both traverse and avoid by his reply following the statement of defence.

Copesham v. Parsons, 19 D.L.R. 443, 7 W.W.R. 944.

ENDORSERS — SURETIES — STRIKING OUT.

Where some defendants, in an action by the payee of a note, do not plead and others plead that their endorsements are subsequent to plaintiff's, the latter cannot, by an answer to plea, aver that the defendants have endorsed as warrantors and sureties towards plaintiff, and such allegations will be struck out on motion.

Hutchison v. Argenteuil Granite Co., 17 Que. P.R. 434.

(§ V-352)—ACTION BY ASSIGNEE OF MORTGAGE — STRIKING OUT REPLY—LEAVE TO AMEND.

The plaintiff alleged that he was an assignee of a mortgage, and sued for the mortgage moneys. The defendant pleaded that no advance had in fact been made, to which plaintiff replied that the mortgage was really made by an agent for him. This part of the reply was struck out and leave given to amend.

(§ V-353)—DEPARTURE.

When the plaintiff's statement of claim is based entirely upon the provisions of the Assignments Act, it is a departure in pleading to set up in the reply a case based upon the Bills of Sale and Chattel Mortgage Act and such case should not be recognized.

(§ VI-355)—COUNTERCLAIM — DENIAL — WAIVER.

The necessity, under the practice rules, of pleading a denial to a counterclaim, failure of which operates as an admission of the allegations therein, except as to damages, will be deemed waived, if the defendant, without objection, proceeds to trial and offers evidence to substantiate the counterclaim. [Kerr v. Burns, 9 N.B.R. 604, distinguished.]

COUNTERCLAIM FOR FRAUD—DIRECTORS — MISFEASANCE—JOINDER OF PARTIES.

The paramount object of the Judicature Act and Rules is to enable all matters arising out of one transaction, particularly where the same parties are involved, to be disposed of in one action, and thus prevent multiplicity of suits; thus a corporation, in an action against it to recover certain moneys and securities claimed to be wrongfully obtained, has the right to counterclaim for fraudulent conspiracy and to set up an agreement that such property was given in restitution for fraudulent acts and misfeasance in office as directors, and may, for that purpose, join other persons jointly connected therewith. Tobin v. Commercial Investment Co., 27 D.L.R. 387, 22 B.C.R. 481, 34 W.L.R. 23, 10 W.W.R. 123.

AFFIDAVIT OF DEFENCE—COUNTERCLAIM.

Rule 56 (5) (Ont.) authorizes the granting of leave to deliver a statement of defence only when it sets up a further answer to the claim other than that contained in or provable under the affidavit, and does not include a counterclaim.

COUNTERCLAIM — DAMAGES THROUGH INTERIM INJUNCTION.

Where plaintiffs claimed as assignees of mining rights under an agreement which (if ever completely made) had been rescinded with the consent of their assignors before the date of the assignment, and obtained an interim injunction restraining the defendants, the grantees of mining rights from the owners of the land, from operating or trespassing on the property, the latter may counterclaim in the action for damages for being prevented from carrying on their mining operations.

Ontario Wind Engine & Pump Co. v. Michie, 15 D.L.R. 359, 5 W.W.R. 948.

SET-OFF—BREACH OF WARRANTY—NOTE.

Unliquidated damages for breach of warranty may be pleaded as a set-off to an action on a purchase price note in the hands of an assignee or trustee.

Executors & Administrators Trust Co. v. Hoehn, 34 D.L.R. 287, 10 S.L.R. 135, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 291.

COUNTERCLAIM—THIRD PARTY.

Where in a counterclaim by a defendant against a plaintiff and a third party, the matter thereof may be set up against the plaintiff as a complete defence without the third party, and the plaintiff is not interested in what is claimed from the third party, the counterclaim is improper: in such case the relief against the third party must be had under third party procedure.

Capital Loan Co. v. Frank, 37 D.L.R. 157, 28 Man. L.R. 70, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 1250.

COUNTERCLAIM—WRIT OF SUMMONS—SPECIAL INDORSEMENT—AFFIDAVIT—LEAVE TO APPEAL.

A writ of summons may be indorsed specially, and at the same time may contain another claim with respect to which there cannot be special indorsement; but the plaintiff is not given the right to have a speedy trial, under r. 56 (2), save in cases in which the whole claim is specially indorsed. A counterclaim is an answer to the plaintiff's claim within the meaning of r. 56 (1); upon a motion for judgment under r. 57 the court may either award judgment or grant a stay of proceedings under r. 117, as may be deemed proper; but, if no motion for judgment is made, and the plaintiff elects to have a speedy trial, the defendant's affidavit setting up a counterclaim is to be treated (r. 56 (2)) as, with the claim indorsed upon the writ, constituting the record of trial. Where the defendant obtains leave, under r. 56 (5), to deliver a statement of defence, that defence when delivered does not supersede the defence set up in the affidavit of merits; and it may reiterate, amend, or enlarge the counterclaim set up in the affidavit. [Davis Acetylene Gas Co. v. Morrison (1915), 34 O.L.R. 155, 23 D.L.R. 871, and Cox Coal Co. v. Rose Coal Co. (1916), 11 O.W.N. 22, explained.] An appeal by the plaintiff from an order of the Master in Chambers refusing to strike out the counterclaim and part of the defence, in an action to recover arrears of salary and commission and damages for wrongful dismissal, was dismissed by Middleton, J., in Chambers—holding as above. A motion by the plaintiff to Riddell, J., in Chambers, under r. 507, for leave to appeal, was dismissed, there being no good reason why the decision of Middleton, J., should be held to be wrong, and no case of conflicting decisions. [Robinson v. Mills (1909), 19 O.L.R. 162, and Forbes v. Davison (1916), 11 O.W.N. 86, followed.] What the defendants, in their affidavit of merits, called a counterclaim was really a set-off; but there was no objection to the parties treating it as a counterclaim—Rule 115—and they did so treat it. Semble, that the defendants were not quite regular in enlarging their counterclaim without leave; but such leave would be granted as a matter of course.

Henderson v. Henderson, 38 O.L.R. 97.

Motion by defendant to dismiss plaintiff's motion to strike out counterclaim as irrelevant and embarrassing—Plaintiff had not obeyed subpoena issued on appointment for his examination—Service of subpoena cannot be disregarded—If party served is paid necessary conduct money—Plaintiff to attend for examination at his own expense—Motion against counterclaim to stand in meantime—Costs in case.

Evel v. Bank of Hamilton, 3 O.W.N. 336, 20 O.W.R. 531.

SET-OFF—RENT—REPAIRS—PETITION IN REVOCATION OF JUDGMENT—DEFENCE (QUEL FOUNDEE)—C.C.P. 1177—C.C. (QUEL) 1188.

One sued for rent cannot plead a set-off for repairs which he has made and will make, seeing that the debt is not ascertained, and especially if he does not allege that he made a formal demand therefor. A petition in revocation of judgment asking for the filing of a plea will not be granted if it is evident that the judgment would be the same as that already rendered.

Evel v. Bank of Hamilton, 3 O.W.N. 415, 20 O.W.R. 776.

VII. Demurrer.

(§ VII—360)—DEMURRER.

In Ontario, by r. 259, Consolidated Rules of Practice, 1897, demurrers are forbidden in civil actions, and there is substituted the procedure by which a point of law is raised in the pleadings which is to be disposed of at the trial, unless a special order is made that it be earlier dealt with. Embarrassment in a defendant's pleading is where the pleader brings forward, by way of defence, matters which he is not entitled to make use of, while a pleading, bad in law, is one which does not shew a defence at all. A motion to strike out a pleading on the ground that the same tends to prejudice, embarrass and delay the fair trial of an action is not equivalent to a demurrer, filed under the former Ontario practice, since prior to the passing of r. 259 (Con. Rules, 1897) abolishing demurrers in Ontario there also existed a rule authorizing a motion against pleadings as embarrassing.

Bristol v. Kennedy, 8 D.L.R. 750, 23 O.W.R. 685, 4 O.W.N. 537.

INSCRIPTION IN LAW.

Although art. 1144, C.C.P., states that in cases not appealable from the Circuit Court issues of the law are raised by demurrer, the court, for reasons which it believes just, can consider the inscription in law as equivalent to a demurrer.

Goupil v. Van, 24 Rev. Leg. 192.

INSCRIPTION IN LAW—ACTION IN REPOSSESSION OF PROPERTY—ALLEGATIONS OF VIOLENT POSSESSION AND OF IRREGULAR TITLES—PREUVE AVANT FAIRE DROIT, C.C.P. 191; C.C. (QUE.) 2197, 2198.

In an action for the possession of real property resting on titles dating three centuries back, preuve avant faire droit will be ordered on a demurrer asking the dismissal of the action because plaintiff does not claim to be the heir of the de ejus, nor because the violent taking possession of the property by the defendant took place more than two centuries ago.

Caron v. Seminaire de Quebec, 15 Que. P.R. 302.

(§ VII—365)—FORM—OBJECTION THAT NO CAUSE OF ACTION.

In an action to enforce personal liability of company directors for workmen's wages, a general objection in the defence that the plaintiff's claim discloses no cause of action, will be struck out under Alta, practice r. 149, unless it expressly states the point of law involved.

(§ VII—375)—WHAT DEMURRABLE—LIBEL ACTION—DEFENCES.

A defendant sued for a newspaper libel may plead that the publication of the matter upon which the plaintiff relies was a part only of a series of articles of a similar tenor which had appeared in the newspaper both before and after the article complained of, and that they were published in the public interest without malice, were substantially true and were notoriously known by the public, and that they were a fair criticism of the plaintiff's conduct; such plea is not demurrable as it discloses grounds which may either defeat the action or mitigate the damages.

(§ VII—380)—QUESTIONS RAISED BY DEMURRER—THIRD PARTY JOINED—TIME.

The city of Montreal is authorized to stay an action for damages done by a third party by means of excavations in the street, and to force the plaintiff to make that third party a party defendant; but such right to stay the suit has to be urged by a preliminary exception within 3 days from the return of the action, unless there be ample justification for the delay.

Stewart v. Montreal, 15 Que. P.R. 243.

(§ VII—390)—DEMURRER OR PRELIMINARY HEARING—POINTS OF LAW DISPOSING OF CASE.

While a plea of demurrer in a civil action is no longer permissible, it is still frequently, under Ontario Con. Rules 122, 123, 124 (Rules of 1913) not only a privilege but a duty to raise in the pleadings and submit for preliminary determination any point of law substantially disposing of the whole action.

Stevens v. Moritz, 14 D.L.R. 699, 5 O.W.N. 421, 25 O.W.R. 453.

GENERAL DEMURRER—OVERRULING—COMMISSION ACTION.

An order of court disallowing a general demurrer to a statement of claim, the "matter of demurrer" or points of law not being specifically raised as required by r. 302 of the King's Bench Act (Man.), does not thereby dispose in the plaintiff's favour of all the legal questions involved in the action nor give effect to the interpretation of a commission agreement sought by the plaintiff, but is analogous to the former equity practice, that where a general demurrer is overruled without prejudice the defendant may raise the same objections at the hearing.

PRELIMINARY EXCEPTION—JOINER OF ISSUE.

When parties have joined issue, without producing any preliminary exception, on an irregularly framed petition, the tribunal shall decide upon the merits of the litigation.

I. Nature and validity of.

(§ I—3) — CHANGE OF POSSESSION — PLEDGEE'S LIENS.

There can be no valid pledge unless there has been an actual change of possession of the article pledged, in such a manner that third persons and other creditors may know that the debtor has dispossessed himself thereof. An automobile purporting to be pledged for a loan, which remains in the place where it was, is not sufficient possession on the part of the lender to establish a contract of pledge. The borrower, having made a judicial abandonment of his effects, and the effects having been sold by the curator, the lender has no privilege as pledgee, but is merely a chirographary creditor.

Payenneville v. Prévost, 25 Que. K.B. 246.

Property pledged without the owner parting with possession being a nullity, an opposition based on a contract of pledge of that kind will be dismissed on motion.

Desjardins v. Methot, 17 Que. P.R. 454.

PLEDGE OR SECURITY—POSSESSION—GARAGE—C.C. ARTS. 1966, 1970.

A contract of security or pledge is not binding unless the security is placed in the hands of a creditor or a third party as a surety for the debt, and it must remain in his possession.

Duhamel v. Lebeau, 25 Rev. Leg. 106.

(§ 1—6)—EXTINGUISHMENT.

A pledgor cannot claim the restitution of the thing given in pledge until the debt is wholly paid except in cases of misuse by the pledgee of the thing pledged.

Klock v. Molsons Bank, 2 D.L.R. 445, 41 Que. S.C. 370.

(§ 1—7)—REDEMPTION—TIME.

There being no agreement at the inception of a transaction that time should be of the essence, a pledgee cannot, of his own accord, without judicial decree, make it so as against a right to redeem.

Walker v. Johnston, 23 B.C.R. 50.

(§ 1—8)—RECOVERY OF POSSESSION.

One who holds personality as security may retake it from the owner who had obtained possession from the bailee by falsely representing that he had paid the debt for which it was held as security.

Pocock v. Novitz, 4 D.L.R. 105, 5 S.L.R. 339, 21 W.L.R. 418.

II. Rights of parties and third persons.

(§ 11—10)—INSURANCE POLICY—PREMIUMS.

A creditor, who holds an insurance policy as security for a debt, is entitled to immediate reimbursement by the debtor for the premiums which he paid on the policy because of the latter's default, without being obliged to wait until the maturity of the main debt.

St. Charles v. Ducloux, 49 Que. S.C. 188.

(§ 11—11)—PROTECTION OF PROPERTY.

It is the duty of the pledgee of shares of stock in selling them upon default to take reasonable means to prevent a sacrifice thereof, and to act as a provident owner would have done. [Latch v. Furlong, 12 Gr. 303, applied.]

Bartram v. Grice, 4 D.L.R. 682, 3 O.W.N. 1296, 22 O.V.R. 191.

(§ 11—13)—DEPOSIT OF MONEY—FORFEITURE ON DEFAULT—FORFEITURE OF DEPOSIT.

Money paid in respect of a contract of sale of a business as a guarantee that the intending purchaser would not back down after the seller imparted information of a confidential character to the buyer, cannot be recovered back by the purchaser on his repudiation of the contract, where the transaction fails of completion through no fault of the seller, if the amount so put up as a guarantee is not unreasonable.

(§ 11—20)—SALE.

A sale of shares of stock held as security is irregular and will be set aside, where the order of priority of their sale as provided in the agreement by which they were pledged, was not observed, and the purchaser had notice thereof. A power of sale in an agreement whereby shares of stock were pledged as security, which requires upon default in payment, that tenders should be advertised for 3 times in designated newspapers, with intervals of a week between each insertion, was not properly exercised, and a sale will be set aside, where a full week, excluding the day of publication did not elapse between each publication.

(§ 11—21)—PURCHASE BY PLEDGEE.

A sale of pledged shares of stock cannot be upheld where the circumstances shew that the purchaser, who paid an inadequate price, knew practically nothing about the company that issued them, or about its affairs or financial circumstances, and that he consulted with the pledgee in relation to the sale, and, was to some extent, in his employ, as the conclusion therefrom was that the purchase was made at the suggestion of and for the benefit of the pledgee. While inadequacy of price is not ordinarily a sufficient reason for setting aside a sale, yet it will have that effect when, taken in connection with other circumstances, it leads to the assumption that the purchase was made for the benefit of the pledgee.

Bartram v. Grice, 4 D.L.R. 682, 22 O.W.N. 191.

(§ 11—22)—ACTION BY PAWNBROKER TO RECOVER VALUE OF ARTICLE PLEDGED TO HIM AND TAKEN BY POLICE—ARTICLE IN CUSTODIA LEGIS—UNNECESSARY ACTION—COSTS.

Samuels v. Dominion Bank, 15 O.W.N. 219.

SALE—SECURITY FOR DEBT—POSSESSION.

A sale of movables, with no other intention than to guarantee the debt of the purchaser, is only a contract of pledge; and if the vendor remains in possession of the movables the purchaser has no lien upon them, as under Quebec law movables are not subject to hypothecation.

POOR AND POOR LAWS.

PAUPERS—POOR RELIEF ACT, NOVA SCOTIA — INCORPORATED TOWN — LIABILITY AFTER NOTICE.

An incorporated town being a poor district under the provisions of the Poor Relief Act, R.S.N.S. 1900, c. 50, ss. 22, 23, 29, on receipt of notice requiring provision to be made for the support of a pauper within the limits of the town, is bound to take steps under ss. 22, 23 of the Act to ascertain the place of settlement of the pauper, and, in the event of failure to do so, will be required to recoup the person by whom the notice is given and who has furnished the pauper with necessary support.

SUPPORT.

Where a pauper was chargeable to the defendant town, and the town authorities after being required to make provision for his support omitted to do so:—Held, that plaintiff, not being liable for the support of the pauper, was entitled under the provisions of R.S.N.S., c. 50, s. 28, to recover against the town a reasonable sum for his support and maintenance. In the absence of statutory authority provision cannot be made for the support of a pauper outside the limits of the district liable for his support.

McDougall v. Sydney Mines, 45 N.S.R. 348.

Under the Poor Relief Act (N.S.) where a pauper was supported on a farm belonging to claimant, and the latter in making her claim for assistance against the board of overseers of the poor for the district notified only one of the 3 members of the board such notice is sufficient notice to the overseers particularly where the overseers so notified had, as a result of the notice, visited the pauper and taken her deposition before a justice of the peace in reference to the claim.

SETTLEMENT.

Proceedings on the part of a municipality to confine homeless children in an industrial school under art. 4037, R.S.Q. 1909, can be taken even where no notice has been given to those who may be liable to reimburse the city for the cost of maintenance. In an action by a municipality against the grandfather of three children to recover the sum paid by the plaintiff for their support and maintenance in an industrial school, where it is alleged they were sent there at the request of the mayor, and that defendant is well able to repay, and is the only person who can do so from among those who are liable, that the father is himself confined in an institution for the insane, and the mother is in extreme poverty, and it does not appear the sum charged is unreasonable, the de-defendant is liable under the laws of Quebec even where defendant received no notice of the proceedings to confine the children, he having been aware of their condition and not having taken any steps to provide for them, although able to do so.

POSSESSION.

See Adverse Possession.

Under Chattel mortgage, see Chattel Mortgage; Bills of Sale.

LAND—IMPROVEMENT—FRAUD.

In order that a person, who in bad faith has obtained possession of an immovable, should have a right to maintain such possession until reimbursed the cost of improvements that he has made thereon, it is necessary that he should be in physical possession; that the improvements made by him should be necessary; that they had been made with his own materials. Violence and fraudulent simulation cannot form the basis of such right.

Rochefort v. Rioux, 49 Que. S.C. 514.

POSSESSION EVIDENCE—CUTTING OF HAY—ALLUVION—RIPARIAN OWNER—CROWN—OWNERSHIP—C.C. ARTS. 420, 421, 427.

In a possessory action regarding land under cultivation, the confession of the defendant that the plaintiff for two years preceding the action, has cut the hay on this lot, relieves him from any other evidence, since in a decision of a possessory action the court should consider only the material facts of the dispute which the plaintiff complains of. When the possession is certain and determined by fixed and visible marks, such as sticks and pickets placed by a surveyor, or a willow plantation, it is unnecessary to have recourse to an action to fix the limits before commencing the action in dispute. A riparian owner whose land is flooded by the waters of a navigable stream, during a great part of the year, is not by that deprived of his right of ownership in favour of the Crown. We should not consider as alluvions or as deposits, benefiting the riparian owners, the lands, which having been several times inundated by a flood, are left uncovered by the falling back of the waters, even though their surface has undergone alterations, if they have not formed a new bed for the overflowing river. These lands continue to belong to the original owner.

Traversy v. Bibaud, 56 Que. S.C. 482.

POSSESSORY ACTION (QUE.).

EXCLUSIVE POSSESSION.

The possession required to support a possessory action for repossession (en réintégration) must be uninterrupted, unequivocal and exclusive.

Tremblay v. St. Alexis, 3 D.L.R. 552.

DEFENSE OF INJURY IN ALLOWING WASTE WOOD, SAWDUST, ETC. TO ACCUMULATE IN THE NEIGHBOURHOOD—PUBLIC DOMAIN—LACK OF BOUNDARIES—DAMAGES.

Proximity obliges neighbours each to use his land in such a way that he will not injure the land of his neighbor. This rule ought to be understood in this sense, that whatever liberty each may have to do what seems good to him on his own land, he may not do anything which may become a nuisance to his neighbor.

Cimon v. Bouchard, 25 Rev. de Jur. 308.

PRIVATE ROAD.

One who possesses, in common with another a strip of land which serves them for a private road may maintain a possessory action against his copossessor who has placed on the road a pent-house which impedes the passage.

OFFENCES—MAILING INDECENT PRINTS.

In the interpretation of subs. (a) of Cr. Code, s. 209, as to mailing indecent prints, etc., the words "or other publication" are to be construed as referring to matters ejusdem generis with the books, pamphlets, etc., which are previously mentioned in the sub-section and do not include indecent matter written in a private letter sent sealed; the sending of such a letter would, however, be an offence under ss. 317, 318 (defamatory libel) if sent without the permission of, and if designed to insult, the addressee; the words "matter or thing" which follow the word "publication" in s. 209 (a) refer to some other object, such as a statue or carving.

charges, stipulations and conditions that she will deem proper, provided she does it in a way that will be just to her children and for her living during her widowhood and not otherwise,” the widow has a right while she remains a widow, if she cannot fulfill her obligations, to make a donation inter vivos of the property of the succession in favour of one of the heirs, the donor reserving to herself the usufruct of this property during her life. The expression, “during her life,” contained in the deed of donation should be interpreted as meaning during her life while she remains a widow, as that was the condition contained in the will of the husband.

MODE OF.

Under a power of appointment contained in a marriage settlement or deed in trust authorizing the trustee to make the appointment “by any deed or instrument in writing duly executed or by any last will and testament to be by her duly executed,” the power cannot be validly exercised by a document intended to operate as a will and only prevented from operating as such by defective execution, there being only one witness, and which for that reason would be invalid as an appointment under the Wills Act, R.S.N.S. 1900, c. 139, s. 8.

DAMAGES—CONTRACT—COMMISSION AGENCY—BREACH BY PRINCIPAL—PERIOD OF CONTRACT — CONSTRUCTION — NO DEFINITE PERIOD — REASONABLE TIME — AGENT'S LOSS OF PROFITS.

In an agreement made by correspondence the plaintiff was to be the selling agent of defendant's goods. In a letter from defendant, setting out the proposed terms of agreement, were the words "this offer to be firm for one year." There was nothing elsewhere in the correspondence which fixed any definite time during which the contract was to continue. Defendants broke the agency agreement during the first year. Held that plaintiff was entitled to damages on the basis of loss of profits on a 2 years' contract, as being reasonable under all the circumstances. Where the contract does not fix any definite time during which it is to continue, the court will, where the contract has been acted upon, fix a reasonable time. To ascertain what is a reasonable time, the court must look at the contract, the nature of the business to be carried on, the methods necessary to be adopted to insure success, and the time necessarily occupied before these efforts bear fruit, etc.

(§ II A—5)—AGENT ACTING WITHOUT AUTHORITY—VERBAL SALE — PART PERFORMANCE — REMEDY IN EQUITY — BREACH OF WARRANTY.

Where a person assumes without authority to act as agent for another in the sale of real estate and the contract is merely verbal and consequently would not have been enforceable at law as against the supposed principal, even if he had authorized it, the equitable doctrine of part performance does not apply so as to give a remedy in equity in respect of subsequent acts of part performance by the agent so as to attach a liability for damages against him where none attached at the time of the breach of warranty of authority the latter is not a continuing warranty, but came to an end with the making of the contract. IN ELECTION CASES.

Agency in election cases differs from agency in ordinary business transactions inasmuch as, in the case of an election, the agent constituted by whatever acts are sufficient for the purpose, may bind his principal by acts which are not only outside the scope of any authority expressly given to him but which may be directly contrary to the expressed directions of the person whose agent he is held to be.

GRATUITOUS SERVICE—LIABILITY OF PRINCIPAL.

One who renders a gratuitous service to another at his request is an agent, and if he suffers wrong caused by the execution of that which the principal asked him to do, the latter should indemnify him for it.

Martineau v. Ravary, 48 Que. S.C. 176.

AGENT—CONTRACT BY—GENERAL AUTHORITY — LIMITED AUTHORITY—AFFIRMATION—ACCEPTANCE OF PART—CUSTOM.

The agent of the defendant company hired the plaintiffs, giving them a written memorandum, signed by the agent, which stated that he had hired the plaintiffs "at $3 per day. Can go on dead water. Straight time," telling the plaintiffs that "straight time" meant that they would receive $3 per day from the time they left the railway until they were done driving. The authority of the agent was to hire men for stream-driving for the defendant company, at $3 per day. It was proved that a custom, well established and well known, existed in the locality in which the hiring took place, that men were paid from the time when actual driving commenced, receiving from that time full pay, with no loss of time, until the driving was completed, and this was what was understood by the term "straight time." Held, affirming the judgment of Barry J., that the agent's authority was limited to hiring at $3 per day, according to the usual custom, and that defendant was estopped, by accepting the plaintiffs' services under the alleged contract, from disputing the plaintiffs' claim for wages from the time of leaving the train until actual driving work was begun, defendant having repudiated the agent's authority as soon as the terms of the contract were brought to its attention.

Roy v. Saint John Lumber Co.; Fisher v. Saint John Lumber Co., 46 N.B.R. 120.

AGENT'S AUTHORITY—RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF PRINCIPAL—RECEIVING PAYMENT THROUGH AGENT.

Where a principal makes out and sends to an agent for sale an account against a purchaser for the amount of the sale made by the agent, and the agent presents the account to the purchaser with a request for payment, the purchaser is justified in assuming that the agent has authority to receive payment, and, if he pays the amount to the agent the principal will be estopped from denying that the agent had authority to collect.—Where an agent has authority to receive payment of a portion of an account, and it is paid to him and credit given therefor by the principal, the debtor is justified in assuming that the agent has authority to receive the balance, unless he knew of the limitation of the agent's authority or was subsequently notified that he was not authorized to receive the same.

SALESMAN AS AGENT.

One who is appointed by an industrial company an agent to sell their products, and who is given, for the purposes of his employment, blank forms of sale containing restrictive conditions, has only a limited mandate. He can only make sales according to the conditions contained in the forms. He can neither, without obtaining authority, sell an excessive quantity of goods, nor sell them under conditions pertaining to the usual course of business and agreements so made by him do not bind the company. This is especially so in respect to a sale to one who is only the prête nom of his father, the president of the company, who thus acquires through his son, property of which he is administrator in violation of art. 1484 C.C. (Que.)

The engagement of a manager for a life insurance company is a commercial act, which can be proved by evidence. A secretary of an insurance company who is authorized to open negotiations and to have an interview with a person residing outside of the province, with the intention of engaging this person as manager of the company, does not exceed his authority in bringing this person to Montreal, and in undertaking to pay his expenses in order that he may meet the board of directors.

AUTHORITY TO SELL—PURCHASE BY AGENT—ACCOUNTING.

An agent's authority to sell does not give him the right to purchase; if he withholds from the principal an offer from a third person, in order to purchase at a lower price, he is bound to account to the principal for the difference between the amount he had paid, and the amount he had realized on a resale.

POWER OF ATTORNEY—AUTHORITY OF AGENT TO PURCHASE LAND—SUBSEQUENT ARRANGEMENT TO GIVE MORTGAGE IN PART PAYMENT.

An agent, under power of attorney, inter alia, "to sell and absolutely dispose of or mortgage real estate," etc., entered into an agreement to purchase two lots in Vancouver for which the vendor was to receive certain lands, stock in a building, and $6,000 cash. The transfers were duly executed and delivered, and the transaction completed with the exception of the handing over of the cash payment. A subsequent arrangement was made whereby, in lieu of the cash payment, the vendor agreed to accept $1,000 in cash and a mortgage for $5,000 on the two lots he had sold. An action for foreclosure of the mortgage was dismissed. Held, on appeal, that there were 2 transactions, the mortgage having been accepted under a later and distinct agreement that the agent had power under the instrument in question to execute, and the plaintiff should succeed. LAW CLERK—AUTHORITY TO PREPARE LEASE—PLEDGING CREDIT.

AUTHORITY OF DEPARTMENTAL HEAD TO PURCHASE WITHOUT CONFIRMATION BY MANAGER.

The fact that the firm had permitted one of the heads of a department in a retail store business to make purchases from the wholesaler without confirmation of same by the manager is admissible in proof of the unqualified authority of the head of the department to buy goods for his department from such wholesaler without such confirmation, although it was customary in the trade to have departmental orders so confirmed.

Duncan v. Pryce Jones, 22 D.L.R. 45.

YEARLY CONTRACT—ORDERS.

A yearly agency contract providing that the agent is to furnish at least one order for a gasoline motor during the year and that on his failure to do so the company would have the right to send him a motor and claim from him the price of it, gives the agent the whole year to furnish an order, and it is only at the expiration of the year that the principal is entitled to avail itself of his stipulated right.

Carette Co. v. Nault, 49 Que. S.C. 510.

(§ II A—6a)—WARRANTY OF GOODS SOLD.

Where a contract for the sale of an engine declared that every term of the agreement was therein expressed, and that its terms and conditions could not be varied, altered or changed, except in writing signed by the vendor, the promise of an agent of the latter, upon the engine not fulfilling its warranty, upon persuading the vendee not to return the engine, that he would rectify it, which was never satisfactorily done, cannot be set up as a defence to an action to recover the purchase price where the vendee afterwards continued to use the engine for nearly a year.

FALSE STATEMENTS BY SALES AGENT — AGREEMENT LIMITING PRINCIPAL'S LIABILITY.

A sales agent for a machinery manufacturer must be held to have authority to describe a gasoline engine to the prospective purchaser and to tell the latter what it is capable of doing, and if he falsely described it by stating that it would do something which it was not capable of doing, his principals are liable for his fraud, notwithstanding a stipulation in the signed agreement that no agreements, stipulations, conditions or warranties express or implied, verbal or otherwise, save those mentioned in writing therein, shall be binding on the principals. Ontario Wind Engine v. Bunn, 21 D.L.R. 420, 8 S.L.R. 58, 8 W.W.R. 450, 31 W.L.R. 20.

AUTHORITY TO SELL—WARRANTY.

In an action for damages for breach of warranty in the sale of a horse by an agent, authority on the part of the agent to give the warranty cannot be established merely by evidence that the agent had sold 2 or 3 other horses for his principal, there being no evidence that the principal was in the general horse dealing business.

(§ II A—7)—POWER OF ATTORNEY.

Whenever the very act of the agent is authorized by the terms of the power, i.e., whenever, by comparing the act done by the agent with the words of the power, the act is itself warranted by the terms used, such act is binding on the constituent as to all persons dealing in good faith with the agent, and the persons so dealing are not bound to inquire into facts aliunde. Notwithstanding it was stipulated in a power of attorney, under which an agent had authority to make a sale of land belonging to his principal, that any sale should be for "and in the name of" principal a contract entered into by the agent in his own name is enforceable by the purchaser against the principal. The agency of one who in his own name entered into an agreement for the sale of land he was duly authorized to sell, may be shewn, in order to bind his principal, in an action against the latter for specific performance of the agreement. [Morgan v. Johnson, 3 O.W.N. 297, affirmed on appeal.]

Morgan v. Johnson, 4 D.L.R. 643, 3 O.W.N. 1526, 22 O.W.R. 868.

An agent is not clothed with authority to make a binding agreement for the sale of land, by letters from his principal, in effect stating his price and terms of payment, and that he would refer all inquiries concerning the land to the agent, and directing that the necessary papers, upon a purchaser being found, be sent him for execution, and that he would come at any time if wanted, where subsequently and before any sale was made by the agent, the principal wrote the agent not to do anything until his arrival.

One who enters into possession of land under an agreement for its purchase made by an agent of the owner, which was not satisfactory to the latter, cannot obtain specific performance of the agreement where the agent had authority only to secure a purchaser and not to enter into a contract for the sale of the property.

That an owner of land in agreeing to sell the same dealt with the purchaser's agent and not directly with the purchaser himself, gives the owner no right to withdraw from the contract until the purchaser signifies his approval of his agent's act, in the absence of a stipulation to that effect in the contract.

Where an agent is authorized to sell land upon the terms of payment of one-third of the price in cash on signing the agreement, an agreement for sale made by him stipulating for a payment of a lesser sum on signing the agreement and for payment of the balance required to make up the one-third cash when the title and documents are accepted is not binding upon his principal. Maybury v. O'Brien, 6 D.L.R. 288, 22 O.W.R. 877, 26 O.L.R. 628, reversing 25 O.L.R. 229, 3 O.W.N. 393.

POWER OF ATTORNEY—TO BORROW.

A general power of attorney to "draw, accept, make, sign, endorse, negotiate, pledge, retire, pay or satisfy any bills of exchange, promissory notes, cheques, drafts, orders for payment or delivery of money, securities, goods, warehouse receipts, etc." confers no general power to borrow money. [Jacobs v. Morris, [1902] 1 Ch. 816, followed.]

Tai Sing v. Chim Cam, 27 D.L.R. 528, 23 B.C.R. 8, 10 W.W.R. 460.

POWER OF ATTORNEY—ACCOMMODATION INDORSEMENT.

A general power of attorney by a married woman to her husband conducting business for her, including the power to make and indorse bills and notes, is sufficient to charge her with liability on an accommodation indorsement signed by the husband on her behalf for the benefit of a third party. [Court divided. See also decision No. 1, 26 D.L.R. 194, 49 N.S.R. 409.]

POWER OF ATTORNEY—AUTHORITY TO WITHDRAW FUNDS FROM BANK—WITHDRAWAL BY SEVERAL CHEQUES—RATIFICATION.

A power of attorney filed with the bank at the time of depositing a certain sum of money, authorizing the attorney to withdraw the said sum, and give a receipt for same, and to endorse all documents and cheques and ratifying in advance all that the attorney would do to withdraw the said sum, is not exhausted by withdrawing by cheque a part of the money, and the bank is justified in paying cheques issued by the attorney until the sum deposited has been withdrawn.

Robidoux v. Royal Bank, 44 D.L.R. 765, 25 Rev. de Jur. 66.

(§ II A—7 a)—GENERAL OR SPECIAL AGENCY.

An arrangement between the owner of a farm and his brother, whereby the latter was to work the farm on shares, the owner supplying the money needed to carry on farming operations and the profits to be divided between them, does not constitute the brother either the general agent of the owner nor a special agent to purchase lumber for use on the farm, so as to render the owner liable for the purchase price thereof, it appearing that the brother conducted the farm in his own name, made the purchase in question in his own name, and credit was given to him by the seller, the brother having been prohibited from pledging the owner's credit, and the seller believing that the brother was the real owner of the farm.

AUTHORITY TO PURCHASE LAND—SCOPE—MINERALS—RESCISSION.

An agent authorized to purchase land cannot bind his principal to an agreement for the purchase of land minus the coal and minerals therein, and the principal has the right to rescind the agreement as being beyond the scope of the agency; it is not open to the vendor, where he has entered the agreement as principal, to allege that the moneys thereunder were paid to him in the character of agent only.

GENERAL OR SPECIAL AGENCY—AUTHORITY TO COLLECT—SCOPE.

An authority given by a vendor of land to a notary who drew up the contract of sale, to collect from the purchaser a cash payment due under the contract, is merely special, from which no general power to collect the other payments accruing on the same contract can be inferred, so as to charge the principal with payments thus made to such agent who fails to account for them to the principal.

AUTHORITY TO COLLECT—SCOPE.

An authority given by a principal to an agent to receive money cannot be construed into an agreement to allow the payer of the money to deduct from the same money alleged to be due to him by way of commission. [Todd v. Reid, 4 B. & Ald. 210, and Bartlett v. Pentland, 10 B. & C. 760, followed.]

AUTHORITY OF LOCAL MANAGER—SETTLEMENT OF ACCOUNTS.

(§ II A-8)—POWER TO SELL LAND—SUFFICIENCY OF.

A power of attorney to let, manage and improve land, or to sell and absolutely dispose of it as and when the agent should see fit, will permit him to make a lease of the land and give the tenant an option to purchase it at any time during the term of leasing.

AGENT'S AUTHORITY — VENDOR AND PURCHASER—SALE OF LAND.

Merely instructing an agent to give to a prospective purchaser the owner's price and terms of sale, does not authorize the former to enter into a contract for the sale of land. [Hamer v. Sharp, L.R. 19 Eq. 108; Bradley v. Elliott, 10 O.L.R. 398, applied; Rosenbaum v. Belson, [1900] 2 Ch. 267, distinguished.]

AGENT'S AUTHORITY—SALE OF LAND.

Where one of the owners of the lots of a city subdivision holds a power of attorney from his co-owners authorizing him to make agreements for sale and do all things necessary for carrying out such sales, and where such owner, acting for himself and his co-owners, holds himself out as having authority to carry out such sales, and makes contracts to effect same through a real estate agent, such owner's acts in that regard are binding upon his associates.

AGENT'S AUTHORITY — SALE OF LAND — BREACH OF WARRANTY OF AUTHORITY—BURDEN IN ACTION FOR.

To recover in an action for breach of warranty of authority as an agent, the

To transfer and to receive all monies, and to give all guarantees on mortgages or other matter. And to carry into effect the foregoing, to pass and sign all deeds, contracts and writings necessary and required, to take up his abode and generally in the execution of his function as special attorney of the constituent, and as administrator of his affairs during his absence, to do all that the attorney will judge to be useful and necessary for the constituent, the latter ratifying and promising to ratify everything which the attorney has power to do in conformity with his present powers and in addition that all acts of the said attorney relative to the investment of moneys, the sale of realty and other financial affairs and questions will receive the express approval of M. Arthur Gosselin, undersigned notary, whose advice in every case where the interests and welfare of the constituent are at stake or interested," the attorney has no power to borrow money for the constituent, but he has the right to give all credits and all guarantees. So that the constituent is responsible for any debt due to him from a third party which the attorney has guaranteed, with the guarantee to furnish and give value on any loan made by the latter by virtue of said power.

In the cases when the attorney cannot exercise his power except with the approval of a notary named by the constituent, the acquiescence of the notary will be presumed if he is the one who has acted as notary in the acts agreed to by the attorney.

SALE OF LAND—AGENT'S REPRESENTATIONS—SCOPE.

Representations by the authorized agent of a company employed to sell their lands, made to a friend in the course of social intercourse, not in the company's interest, but for the purpose of giving his friend a "tip" whereby both he and his friend might make a profit, are not binding upon the company.
C. P. R. Co. v. Aitken, 29 D.L.R. 357, 34 W.L.R. 999, 10 A.L.R. 123, 10 W.V.R. 1052.

TITLE TO PURCHASE MOVEY.

A., purporting to act on behalf of P., purchased lands from M. and gave in part payment a cheque for $1,700 on the D. Trust Co., the receipt being acknowledged in the agreement for sale. M. sued P. for the balance of the purchase moneys, or foreclosure, and P. counterclaimed for the return of the moneys given in part payment. The Trust Co. (executor of A.) disclaimed any rights to such moneys. The Trial Judge held that the purchase was beyond the authority of A., but that P. had failed to discharge the onus upon him of showing that the moneys belonged to him. The Court of Appeal of British Columbia held that P. has sufficiently established his title to the moneys claimed and judgment was given accordingly. Held, that the judgment of the Court of Appeal should be affirmed.

An agreement for commission must satisfy the Statute of Frauds, 6 Geo. V. c. 24, s. 19, as amended by 8 Geo. V., c. 20, s. 58, and be in writing separate from the sale agreement. It is a question whether the statute as amended requires the agreement to be on a separate piece of paper from the sale agreement.

PROPERTY LISTED WITH AGENT FOR SALE—AGREEMENT—INTERPRETATION.

Where an owner, with a view of selling his property, lists it with an agent, it is a question of interpretation whether the mention of the suggested terms of the proposed sale in the agency agreement was intended merely as a basis upon which the agent should negotiate, and therefore subject to modification during the negotiations without in any way varying or destroying the agency agreement, or was intended to bind the agent strictly to a sale on the named terms before he can claim his commission.

An agent with whom property has been listed for sale, but who has not an exclusive listing, in the absence of a special agreement that he is to be remunerated if he does not find a purchaser, is not entitled to a commission where the owner sells to a purchaser whom he himself has found.

SALE OF LAND—PURCHASE BY AGENT.

The purchase by an agent, of land he was authorized to sell, without the knowledge of the principal, can only be attacked by the principal; it is no defence to an action of ejectment.

CONFLICT OF DUTY—TRUSTEE—AGENT FOR PURCHASER.

Hetting v. Beech, 14 O.W.N. 326. [Affirmed in 15 O.W.N. 162.]

EXTENSION OF MANDATE—EVIDENCE—PRESUMPTION.

Under Quebec law, proof by presumption is admitted without restriction; it is admitted, even in a case where parol evidence is not allowed. Even after the mandate of a real estate agent for the sale of a property has expired, an extension of such mandate may be inferred under the following circumstances, considered together: (a) When 3 months after the delay granted to make the sale the agent transmits to the principal an offer which the latter accepts without making any remark, and that he holds this offer for 2 months and keeps complete silence; (b) when, after 2 months, he calls upon his agent to get the deed signed within 3 days, otherwise he will consider the transaction as null and void, and (c) when the deed of sale is signed by the parties within such delay. In such circumstances the agent, who sues by virtue of his mandate, is entitled to the commission agreed upon.

Parent v. Mendelsohn, 27 Que. K.B. 226.

AGENT EXCEEDING AUTHORITY—LIABILITY OF PRINCIPAL—SALE.

A joint stock company is only bound by the acts of its agents if such acts have been expressly authorized or ratified by it, or if they are connected with the purposes of its undertaking. So a company which speculates exclusively in the purchase and sale of land, without being engaged in building, cannot be made to pay for the price of construction material bought in the name of the company by one of its agents for the benefit and advantage of third persons.

Blais v. Quebec Realty Co., 27 Que. K.B. 218.

AGENTS REPRESENTATIONS—SALE OF LAND.

A principal is bound by the representation and inducements made by his agent, within the scope of the agency, while negotiating a sale of land for him, even though they be unauthorized, unless they are disaffirmed by the principal as soon as known to him.

Magrath v. Collins, 37 D.L.R. 611, 12 A.L.R. 240, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 677. [See also 32 D.L.R. 29, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 487.]

MISAPPLICATION OF PAYMENTS.

A notary who receives from the purchaser of an immovable a sum of money on account of the purchase price, with instructions to pay off the hypothecs and other charges against the immovable, who out of the same funds pays other debts of the vendor not affecting the property, exceeds his mandate and is obliged to reimburse to the purchaser the amount that he has paid without authority.

Malo v. Archambault, 52 Que. S.C. 363.

(§ II A—10)—CRIMINAL ACTIONS—AGENT'S IMPLIED POWER TO INSTITUTE ON BEHALF OF PRINCIPAL—EMERGENCY.

Authority of an agent to cause the arrest of a person on behalf of his principal may be implied in cases of emergency where the facts show that the exigencies of the occasion require prompt action in behalf of the principal. The existence of such an emergency or exigency as will justify an agent in causing the arrest and prosecution of a person on behalf of the agent's principal, cannot be implied where the arrest was caused many months after the commission of an offence against the principal.

March v. Stimpson Computing Scale Co., 11 D.L.R. 343, 4 O.W.N. 1259, 24 O.W.R. 591.

(§ II A—12)—RIGHTS OF UNDISCLOSED PRINCIPAL.

On a sale of seed flax, where the sale-note contains the name of the buyer's agent instead of the buyer's own name, but the seller when he made the sale knew who the principal was and that the sale was really being made to him and not to his agent, in an action by the principal for breach of contract, the contract will be read as made with the known principal.

Where 2 companies are represented in financial matters by a third, all with common directors, and the financial company uses money which it has in hand to the credit of one company, being the proceeds of a sale of the bonds thereof, for the purpose of redeeming certain maturing bonds of the other company pending recoupment by the sale of a further issue of that company's bonds, and the transaction upon the minutes of the financial company bears the appearance merely of a payment by it on behalf of the company whose bonds are redeemed, and subsequently, upon the failure of the expected source of recoupment the minute is changed so as to show that the financial company acted only as agent for the company whose money was used, and entries are made in the books of the respective companies, with the approval of the common directors, shewing that the bonds have been purchased by and were the property of that company, the proper conclusion is that the intention was to give permanence to the original temporary transaction, and that the bonds became the property of the company whose money was used in the purchase thereof, and not of the financial company.

That the name of the person seeking to enforce an agreement to sell land does not appear in the documents constituting the contract will not prevent him shewing that the person named in the agreement acted as his agent.

UNDISCLOSED PRINCIPAL—JUDGMENT—SETTING ASIDE.

A judgment against an undisclosed principal will be set aside where there is no evidence connecting him with the contract.

French Gas Saving Co. v. Desharats Advertising Agency, 1 D.L.R. 136.

B. AGENT'S PURCHASE OR SALE ON CREDIT.
 (§ II B-15)—AGENT'S PURCHASE OR SALE ON CREDIT.

In an action for goods sold and delivered plaintiff's evidence shewed that the goods in question were sold to men employed on board a steamer of which defendant was chief steward, and that defendant's undertaking, if any, was to pay for the goods if the parties to whom they were sold remained on the vessel after she cleared from St. John, N.B., or to return the goods:—Held, affirming the judgment of the County Court, assuming this to be the agreement, that defendant could only be held liable in damages for breach of his contract as bailee of the goods and not in the action as brought for goods sold and delivered.

(§ II B-16) — IMPLIED AUTHORITY OF AGENT IN CHARGE OF RANCH.

The defendant, who was a contractor carrying on large operations, owned a ranch where he kept horses and mules, when they were not required for the purposes of his business. The action was brought to recover $2,200 the price of a stallion which had been purchased for the defendant by the man who had charge of the ranch for the defendant:—Held, upon the evidence, that express authority to purchase was not made out, and that though ranching operations were important, they were only incidental to the main enterprise of the defendant, and therefore that there was no implied authority in the servant to pledge the credit of his master to such a large amount, and to bind the master to a purchase of such a special nature.

Stout v. Kenny, 30 W.L.R. 518.

LIABILITY OF PRINCIPAL FOR GOODS PURCHASED BY AGENT.

PURCHASING AGENT—PURCHASE OF MACHINERY ON AGENT'S CREDIT.

Johnston v. Canadian Klondike Mining Co., 19 W.L.R. 60.

(§ II B-17)—UNDISCLOSED AGENCY.

Where a promise of sale of immovable property is accepted in these words, "This promise is accepted for our client," and the name of the client is not disclosed at the time, there is a valid sale and the person accepting the promise becomes personally responsible as the purchaser unless he discloses his client's name and the latter accepts the property.

Dagenais v. Modern Realty & Investment Co., 5 D.L.R. 315, 41 Que. S.C. 428.

Where the plaintiffs, who agreed to purchase land from one who did not disclose his agency for the defendant, made a cash deposit thereon, and afterwards sent the agent an agreement of purchase for execution, with directions that, when executed, the agreement, together with a draft for the first payment be sent to a designated bank, but the defendant, who was not informed by the agent of such direction, sent the executed agreement, together with a draft, to a different bank, which returned it to the defendant without making any attempt to collect or notifying the plaintiffs thereof, a delay of a month on the part of the plaintiffs before notifying the agent of the nonreceipt of the agreement, when they stated that if they could not get the land they would be pleased to have the deposit returned, is not so unreasonable as to amount to an abandonment or waiver of the right to compel the defendant to specifically perform such agreement.

Where the husband, who appeared to be principal in the transaction in respect of work ordered done by him, was in fact acting for his wife, who was the real principal, the parties doing the work, on discovering that fact, may elect whether they will look to the husband or to the wife for payment, but are not entitled to judgment against both.

LIABILITY OF UNDISCLOSED PRINCIPAL — ACTION AGAINST AGENT—“FACTOR OR COMMISSION MERCHANT.”

M., without disclosing the fact that he was acting as agent for the Crown, purchased hay from the suppliant and was sued in a provincial court for a balance of the purchase price. At the trial that fact became known to the suppliant, but he nevertheless proceeded with the case and recovered judgment against M. Later the suppliant brought an action in the Exchequer Court to enforce the claim against the Crown. Held, the suppliant having elected to proceed to judgment against M. could not afterwards sue the Crown. That M., having been retained to make such purchases on a commission basis, was a “factor or commission merchant” and alone liable under arts. 1736, 1738 C.C. (Que.).

MANDATE — AGENT ACTING IN HIS OWN NAME — LESSEE — REPAIRS — RESPONSIBILITY—C.C. ART. 1716.

Where a tenant in a building orders, in his personal name, repairs to be made to the elevator for the benefit of the proprietor, without disclosing his authority to act for the landlord, he is an agent acting in his own name, and as such, he is liable to the third party who made the repairs, without prejudice to his recourse against the owner of the building.

Otis Fenson Elevator Co. v. David, 25 Rev. Leg. 240.

AGENCY—RESPONSIBILITY OF AGENT—BANKRUPTCY — VOLUNTARY ASSIGNMENT — SALE OF DEBTS—DELIVERY—NULLITY—REIMBURSEMENT—C.C. ART. 1491, 1494.

Generally an agent cannot be sued, but when the authority appears under the form of a sale, or of any Act whatever by which the authority apparently vests the representative with all the rights of the owner, then the agent becomes a sort of dummy and is personally responsible to a third party, even when the latter knows the true position of him with whom he is contracting. Thus in the case of a voluntary assignment made by a debtor for the benefit of his creditors, the assignees in trust who sell at public auction the book debts of the bankrupt man, among which there are debts represented by notes found in the hands of banks and which cannot be delivered, the vendor can be sued personally for cancellation of the sale on account of default in delivery and for repayment of the price paid even if the sale has been made without any guarantee whatever.

AGENT OF COMPANY—DUTY TO FURTHER BUSINESS OF COMPANY—UNFAITHFULNESS—RIGHT TO REMUNERATION.

Where the duty of an agent of a company is to carry on the business of the company so as to attract further business, his faithfulness in the performance of such duty, even without fraud, will disentitle him to any remuneration. [Canada Bonded Att'y v. Leonard Parmiter, 42 D.L.R. 342, distinguished.]

EXCHANGE OF LANDS — AGENT REPRESENTING BOTH PRINCIPALS.

Where a real estate broker acting for both parties upon an exchange of land procures a transfer to his own nominee of the lands of one of such parties for the purpose of effecting the proposed exchange, but closes the exchange agreement by transferring to the other party only a part thereof, retaining the remainder for his own benefit as a secret profit, the property so retained does not belong to the customer to whom he pretended it would have to be conveyed, if at no time in the negotiations was it offered to the latter; it should revert to the party from whom it was fraudulently obtained by the agent.

Tonucci v. Livingstone, 9 D.L.R. 659, 23 W.L.R. 29, 3 W.W.R. 770.

CRIMINAL ACTION — INSTITUTION BY AGENT — SCOPE OF AUTHORITY.

A person is not the agent of a company so as to render it liable for causing the arrest of a salesman employed by him on a charge of converting property of the company to his own use, where the only authorization of such person was the agent's contract of employment, which provided that he should employ a reasonable number of salesmen, who were to enter into contracts directly with the company and with whom all their dealings were to be directly conducted, notwithstanding the agent by the terms of his contract with the company was required to instruct them as to their duties and to assist them in their work, and notwithstanding a stipulation therein that the agent should be answerable to the company for the acts of the salesmen employed by him, and to bear any charge-backs or advances that the company might make in the salesman's accounts, or which the company should be unable to collect from them, as well as for all goods belonging to the company that might be in the possession of such salesmen.

A secret arrangement between the respective agents of the vendor and the purchaser of property that a price larger than that which the vendor is willing to accept, shall be demanded from the purchaser, and that the surplus shall be paid by the vendor to the agents, will not be upheld by the courts; and the purchaser, having paid the money in ignorance of such agreement, may recover the amount of such secret commission from the vendor. A false representation by a travelling salesman, that a certain company had gone out of business, and that his employer had taken it over, made in the course of his employment, thereby inducing a purchaser to buy his goods, the principal retaining the benefit, is an actionable wrong which entitles the company to damages occasioned thereby.

An agent to buy lands cannot hold his principal to an agreement to purchase land which is, in fact, the agent's own, if he failed to make that fact known to the principal, or to disclose all the material facts. [Quebec Bank v. Greenlees, 32 D.L.R. 282, 10 A.L.R. 419, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 746. [Affirmed in 33 D.L.R. 696, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 144.]

SALE — SECRET COMMISSION — REPUDIATION OF CONTRACT.

A sale effected under an agreement by the vendor's agent to split his commissions with the agent of the purchaser is void and may be repudiated by the purchaser; it is not necessary to prove an actual fraudulent or dishonest motive by the vendor's agent, or that the buyer's agent was in fact induced thereby to make the purchase.

COMMISSION MERCHANT — SCOPE OF AUTHORITY — NEGLIGENCE.

A contract between 2 merchants, by which one is obliged to sell at the market price vegetables the other has supplied him to be sold on commission, is a mandate and not a sale. A commission agent who has sold the vegetables for a price payable at a time longer than that authorized by his mandate, has exceeded his authority and is personally liable for the price of the goods sold. When such goods arrive during a hard frost, and the commission agent delays their unloading to prevent their freezing, he is not guilty of negligence nor responsible for the damage if they do freeze.

St. Amour v. Meunier, 25 Rev. Leg. 387.

D. RATIFICATION.

(§ II D—25)—RATIFICATION.

Where a bank's representative gives instructions to seize horses covered by a lien note assigned to the bank as security for money borrowed by the payee thereof, and the person so instructed seizes horses other than those covered by the note, at 2 different times, and the bank's representative ratified the act of such person in the second seizure and detaining of horses and instructed him not to take back the first horses seized until he saw that he had the right ones, the bank is liable for the acts of such person in seizing such horses.

Alfred Thien v. Bank of B.N.A., 4 D.L.R. 388, 4 A.L.R. 228, 21 W.L.R. 192, 1 W.W.R. 795.

AGENT'S AUTHORITY — RATIFICATION — STATUTE OF FRAUDS.

While the requirement of s. 4 of the Statute of Frauds is that writing and signature by the party to be charged or his agent are necessary to make an enforceable contract for the sale of land, the authority of the agent need not be in writing; and where two or three joint owners gave a power of attorney authorizing the third to make sales and to fix the terms of sale of the lots; and where a real estate agent was verbally authorized by such joint owner to proceed to advertise and sell the lots, and did so, and the joint owner ratified the sales so made, the agreements are enforceable under the statute against the three joint owners.

AGENT'S AUTHORITY — SALE OF LAND — UNAUTHORIZED CONTRACT — RATIFICATION.

A landowner may repudiate an agreement for the sale of land made by an agent empowered merely to find a purchaser, notwithstanding that, on being informed by telephone by the agent, that a sale had been effected and a cash payment received, but without being informed of the agent's execution of the agreement on his behalf, the principal's expressed approval of the sale, where on learning that he had been misled as to the identity of the purchaser, he notified the agent of his refusal to complete the sale, since his conduct, under the circumstances, did not amount to a ratification of the agent's act.

AGENT'S SALE OF LAND CONTRARY TO INSTRUCTIONS — REPUDIATION — RIGHTS OF PURCHASER.

The property owner is not bound by the act of his real estate agent in selling subdivision lots at a lesser price than his instructions warranted where there has been no approval or ratification of such sale by the owner; the purchaser in such case who has paid purchase money to the agent may sue the latter for its return on the principal repudiating the agent's promise of sale, as money received under warranty of authority.

Messier v. Chenery, 22 D.L.R. 527.

AUTHORITY TO PURCHASE — GENERAL OR SPECIAL.

A person originally employed as a "special agent" for purchasing certain goods may by the subsequent conduct of the parties become a "general agent" for purchasing that class of goods; such purchases being within the scope of the business entrusted to him, and a number having been ratified by his employer, parties with whom he deals have a right to assume that he has full authority to make such purchases.

ARREST — RATIFICATION — ESTOPPEL.

An employer who permits his name to be used for the purpose of a criminal prosecution thereby ratifies the act and is estopped from setting up want of authority.

Landry v. Bathurst Lumber Co., 35 D.L.R. 701, 44 N.B.R. 374.

An agent's unauthorized agreement for the sale of land can be ratified by his principal only by his unequivocal and definite assent to the transaction.

On the failure of the contractor to complete the erection of a school for the plaintiff school district, the defendant, as secretary-treasurer, and another trustee, without the authorization of formal trustee meetings, expended certain moneys of the corporation in completing the building which was afterwards taken over by the corporation and used as a school-house. There were only 3 trustees and the third was not in the Province that season:—Held, that there had been such an adoption by the plaintiff corporation of the acts of the defendant and the other trustee, that the defendant was entitled to credit in his accounts as treasurer for the moneys so paid out. [French v. Backhouse, 5 Burr. 2728; Sentance v. Hawley, 13 C.B.N.S. 458, and Bristow v. Whitmore, 31 L.J. Ch. 467, followed.] As the school building was built upon land which was not the property of the school district, the rule that an employer does not, as against a contractor, accept the work done in the erection of a building merely by reoccupying his own land, did not apply.

RATIFICATION — PURCHASE MONEY PAID.

(§ II D—26)—WHAT CONSTITUTES.

Where one who represents himself as an agent to purchase standing timber on an island enters into an agreement therefor and notifies his principals thereof and draws a draft on them in favour of the vendor marked "on account of the purchase," and his principals pay the draft, and enter the payment in their books as being "on account of the purchase" of the island, and write to the agent that they are pleased that he has secured the island and trust it will turn out a good one for timber, and subsequently send the agent to inspect the island and estimate the timber thereon, and the agent in his defence describes the transaction as a purchase, and it appears that the principals had for some time desired to purchase the island, the principals must be taken to have ratified the transaction as a purchase and cannot thereafter be heard to say that they had taken an option only.

Thomson v. Playfair, 6 D.L.R. 263, 26 O.L.R. 624, 22 O.V.R. 866, affirming on other grounds 2 D.L.R. 37.

Ratification of an agent's unauthorized agreement for the sale of land does not arise from the fact that the sum paid the agent by the purchaser was, without the principal's knowledge, included in the amount of a cheque given the principal by the agent for money actually due from him, which sum the former returned to the purchaser's agent as soon as he learned of its inclusion in the cheque.

Where an agent sold pulp wood from the land of his principal, though he was authorized in writing only to mine and explore the property, a letter from the principal stating that the matter of "selling the pulp wood would be taken up when" the agent returned to his principal's head office was insufficient to add to the agent's authority.

British North American Mining Co. v. Pigeon River Lumber Co., 2 D.L.R. 609, 3 O.W.R. 701, 21 O.W.R. 291.

Where several owners of land gave one of their number a power of attorney which authorized him to sell it and to approve on behalf of the other owners, of an offer of purchase, his tacit approval of a sale effected by a third party employed by such co-owner to sell the land must be deemed to be also their approval and ratification of the sale.

RATIFICATION—WHAT CONSTITUTES—MACHINERY ORDERED THROUGH SUPPOSED AGENT.

Where a dealer in machinery, as an alleged seller receives and undertakes to fill a machinery order from a construction company through a middleman, whom the construction company reasonably believes to be the agent of the dealer, the dealer may constitute himself a seller and the middleman's principal by estoppel, unless the transaction is disavowed and the alleged agency repudiated within a reasonable time, where it appears that the dealer had notice of the other party's reliance upon the supposed agency.

RATIFICATION OF UNAUTHORIZED ACTS.

Where a benevolent society appoints a committee to secure rooms for lodge purposes, and an officer of the society, although not a member of such committee, but with its approval, enters into a contract for the rental of rooms and makes a payment thereon, the conduct of the society in reimbursing him for his outlay adopting a vote thanking him for his services, and treating the office as binding, ratifies such agreement. Jones, 102 L.T.N.S. 92, applied.]

RATIFICATION OF AGENT'S CONTRACTS—ESTOPPEL.

Where, upon a sale, with implied warranty, of certain machinery, the alleged principal, in whose name the sale was effected, received for confirmation a copy of the agreement and held it for a protracted period without repudiation and accepted specific part payments on the purchase price, and took part in correspondence assuming the relationship of principal and agent, he is thereby estopped, in an action on the warranty, from denying the agency.

Maple Leaf Portland Cement Co. v. Owen Sound Iron Works Co., 10 D.L.R. 33, 23 O.W.R. 907. [Affirmed, 4 O.W.N. 1189.]

AGENCY BY RATIFICATION—ADOPTIVE ACTS WITH KNOWLEDGE.

An agency by ratification must be evidenced by clear adoptive acts which must be accompanied by full knowledge of all the essential facts.

Eastern Construction Co. v. National Trust Co.; National Trust Co. v. Miller, 15 D.L.R. 755, [1914] A.C. 197.

RATIFICATION CONSTITUTING AGENCY.

To constitute an agency by ratification it is essential that the agent in doing the act to be ratified shall not be acting for himself but should intend to bind a principal actually named or ascertainable. [Keighley v. Durant, [1901] A.C. 240, applied.]

Eastern Construction Co. v. National Trust Co. v. Miller, 15 D.L.R. 755, [1914] A.C. 197.

ACT WITHOUT AUTHORITY—KNOWLEDGE.

In order that a person may be deemed to have ratified an act done without his authority, it is necessary that at the time of the ratification he should have full knowledge of all the material circumstances under which the act was done, unless he intends to ratify the act and take the risk whatever the circumstances may have been.

OSTENSIBLE AGENT—ESTOPPEL—JUDGMENT—SATISFACTION.

In considering whether a person is bound by acts of an ostensible agent which are alleged to have been ratified, the distinction is to be observed between a ratification to be implied from conduct shewing an intention to ratify and an estoppel to deny ratification, the case, that is, where, without a conscious intention to ratify, the so-called principal is estopped from denying that his conduct must be treated as a ratification. In an action for a declaration that a judgment obtained by the defendant against the plaintiff had been satisfied, held that there was evidence to justify the jury in finding that there was an arrangement made between the plaintiff and the defendant's ostensible agent whereunder goods were handed over to the defendant in satisfaction of the judgment and that the agent's act had been ratified, or adopted by estoppel, by the defendant.

A creditor who has been offered by his debtor a compromise of his debt, who instructs a collection agency, usually employed by him, to see if it would not be better to accept such offer, and the agency accepts the debtor's offer and gives him a discharge, cannot, after a year's delay, repudiate the act of the agency it being equivalent to an acquiescence and ratification of the compromise.

(§ III—30)—AGENT EMPLOYED TO DO CERTAIN WORK FOR A CERTAIN SUM—COMPLETION OF WORK—WORK USELESS—RIGHT TO RECOVER AMOUNT AGREED ON.

If an agent is employed to perform certain work for an agreed amount, that amount is payable when the work is completed even should it transpire that the work done by the agent prove useless to the person employing such agent. The general principle, that a solicitor must exercise the utmost good faith in transactions with his client, does not apply where the solicitor is employed to do special work, far removed from that of an ordinary solicitor, where no had faith is shewn.

Whiteside v. Wallace Shipyards, 45 D.L.R. 434.

DISOBEDIENCE OF INSTRUCTIONS.

An agent who disobeys the instructions of his principal is liable to pay for any loss which in the ordinary course of things is the result of such disobedience.

Globe & Rutgers Fire Ins. Co. v. Wetmore 23 D.L.R. 33, 49 N.S.R. 55.

There is no cause of action for breach of implied warranty of authority of an alleged agent where there is no misrepresentation of the fact of authority, e. g., where the person signing in a representative capacity tells the person with whom he is dealing that he has no authority, but the negotiations proceed in anticipation of their being confirmed by the principal. SALE OF MONEY ORDER—ACCOUNTING TO PRINCIPAL—DEFENCE—CONVICTION FOR THEFT—C.C. (QUE.) 1630, 1709, 1713.

In an action by a principal against his agent for $3,998, representing the sale of money orders, wherein the declaration alleges a contract of agency, and also that the defendant had received for sale a certain amount of money orders "belonging to the plaintiffs upon terms requiring the said defendant to account for," verbal evidence can be admitted to prove the business between the parties and the amount for which the defendant should render an account. The facts that the principal had another person arrested and convicted for theft as agent of money orders, does not relieve the defendant of his civil responsibility to account for the sale of the same money orders.

Dominion Express Co. v. Dini, 46 Que. S.C. 396.

JOINT MANDATE—ACCOUNTING.

When heirs entrust a person with the receipt of debts due the succession, they thereby give him a joint mandate, and the agent is only bound to render a common account without specifying the share of each heir. Further, he is only obliged to pay over the balance of the account upon a joint discharge by all these principals so long as the latter have not settled their respective portions between themselves.

Martineau v. Paquet, 49 Que. S.C. 165.

AGENCY—OBLIGATIONS OF AGENT—AUTOMOBILE—RENDERING OF ACCOUNTS—C.C. ART. 1713, 1714.

A person who delivers an automobile to his agent for the purpose of selling it and allows him to use it for that purpose, can reclaim it from him even 2 years afterwards, and the car must be returned in the same condition as when it was delivered. If the machine, while in the possession of the agent, has been several times broken and repaired, if the motor has been changed in a considerable degree, and the carriage has also deteriorated, the agent must return the automobile and pay all the damages. In a case where two parties have accounts against each other, they have a right of action for rendering account, but this action is not essential when the defendant does not pretend that the plaintiff is indebted to him and all the necessary elements to decide the action are before the court.

Duranceau v. Coté, 56 Que. S.C. 127.

(§ III—31)—FIDUCIARY CAPACITY—CONFLICT OF INTEREST—AGENT'S NONDISCLOSURE—PRINCIPAL'S REMEDY.

A person in a fiduciary relation is not allowed to put himself in a position where his duty and interest conflict; he is bound to communicate all the information he has acquired respecting the property which is the subject of the fiduciary transaction, and may be held liable to account for the share of profit which in bad faith he obtained by the amount of which the person to whom he owed the duty would have benefited had disclosure been made. FIDUCIARY CAPACITY—HONEST BREACH OF DUTY—COMPENSATION.

Upon an agency contract to sell lands a breach of duty by the agent which is not tainted by dishonesty but is merely the result of a mistaken notion of his rights, will not disentitle him to commission, although he is liable to his principal for any profits illegally received. Where an option of purchase has been obtained by real estate agents to themselves from the owner under circumstances which render it voidable for nondisclosure by the agents of facts brought to their knowledge while they were acting in a fiduciary capacity for the owner, a conveyance made to the agents in conformity with such option may be set aside together with the option agreement which is impeached; and the conveyance will not operate by way of estoppel or confirmation unless it clearly appears that the owner had, in the meantime, obtained from some source the information and advice which his agents had improperly withheld, and had notwithstanding elected to affirm the transaction.

AUTHORITY—DOUBLE COMMISSION—REAL ESTATE AGENT—COMMISSION—EXCHANGE—IMMORAL CONTRACT—C.C. ARTS. 989, 1200, 1710.

A person cannot act as an agent for two parties in an exchange of property, that would be illegal, and although this fact should not be pleaded in an action for the recovery of commission, the court should, where proof is shown, take cognizance of the duty and refuse the demand.

Aubut v. Garneau, 27 Que. K.B. 474; Cote v. Détournay, 25 Rev. Leg. 63.

TACIT AUTHORITY—SALE OF REAL ESTATE—COMMISSION—SOCIETY—RENDERING OF ACCOUNT—GOOD FAITH—C.C. ARTS.
1701, 1713, 1842.

If a person at the request of another submits to him properties which ought to be offered for sale, and the latter in doing so offers him a certain piece of real estate and procures for him, at his request, an option from the buyer, there is a tacit authority conferred to the person who has acted between the buyer and seller. If, again, this representative forms an association with his employer and other persons to exploit the real estate bought, they form between themselves a society in which all members ought to act in good faith and loyalty towards each other, and this representative ought to render to the society an account of all the commission he has received from the seller.

Crown Real Estate Co. v. Mack 25 Rev. Leg. 292.

AGENCY—AGENT CONTRACTING WITH PRINCIPAL—NO CONFLICTING INTEREST.

The rule of law as to an agent not dealing as a principal with his principal rests on the consideration of a conflicting interest in the person of the agent, but where an agent contracts to raise money for his principal to be secured on mortgages by the principal on specified terms, there is no conflicting interest to prevent the agent advancing the amount himself, if there is no special stipulation to the contrary.

Gray v. Dalgety, [1919] 2 W.W.R. 953.

(§ III—32)—CONTRACT—PERSONAL LIABILITY.

Where the terms of a contract clearly indicate that an agent making the contract is to be personally liable, he is bound by the contract, regardless of his own intention, unless it can be shown by extrinsic evidence that there was an express agreement that the agent should not be liable, and that the contract rendering him liable was so drawn by mistake. CONTRACTS BY AGENT—NECESSARIES.

A person placed in charge of range cattle to find feed for them may be considered the owner's agent to contract for necessary pasturage for starving cattle which it was found en route it would not be practicable to drive to the destination of the herd.

Campbell v. Newbolt, 20 D.L.R. 897.

ON CONTRACTS.

An agent appointed by parol cannot bind his principal by deed. Under an instrument authorizing an agent to mine and explore the property of his principal and "to act for and take such action or actions as he may consider necessary in the interest of" his principal, such agent was appointed and employed to "mine and explore" only and the general words in the concluding part of the document are limited to that employment and gives the agent no power to sell trees and timber from the principal's property.

British North America Mining Co. v. Pigeon River Lumber Co., 2 D.L.R. 609, 21 O.W.R. 291.

CONTRACTS—PERSONAL LIABILITY OF AGENT.

The question whether an agent who has made a contract on behalf of his principal is to be deemed to have contracted personally, and if so, the extent of his liability on the contract, depend on the intention of the parties to be deduced from the nature and terms of the particular contract and the surrounding circumstances.

(§ III—33)—CUSTOMS BROKER—LIABILITY FOR NEGLIGENT HANDLING OF BILLS OF LADING.

A customs broker entrusted with an endorsed bill of lading solely for the purpose of clearing the goods through the customs is not justified in lending the bill of lading to the carrier to enable the latter to fix the freight charges, and is answerable in damages if the seller who has consigned the goods to himself loses them in consequence of the broker's wrongful or negligent act. A customs broker who is entrusted by his client with a duplicate bill of lading endorsed in blank to facilitate the passing of customs is liable in damages to the client if, through the negligence of the broker's agent the bill of lading is improperly delivered either to the buyer of the goods or to the railway company at destination if as a result the buyer obtained delivery without paying for the goods which were under consignment to the seller; the damage in such case is the price plus the interest at 5 per cent from the time of wrongful delivery to the date of entering judgment.

INSURANCE AGENT — LIABILITY FOR NEGLIGENCE—FAILURE TO ADVISE INSURED OF RISK IN PROHIBITED CLASS.

An insurance agent is liable for the legally enforceable damages sustained by his company where he insured against a risk contrary to instructions given him by the company, by issuing an interim receipt to the insured, but where knowledge of this fact never reached the company until the loss was sustained; it appearing that the agent acted negligently and carelessly and without due regard to the interests of his principal. The measure of damages is the sum which the company was liable for under the policy and the premium paid to but not accounted for by the agent, but the company is not entitled to the sum paid out for costs of court or counsel fees in unsuccessfully defending an action brought by the insured under the policy in question.

FILLING IN BLANKS—REGISTRATION.

The duty of an agent under the agency contract, to fill in blanks "to permit of proper registration," refers to the body of the instrument and not to the affidavit.

NEGLIGENCE OF AGENT—SALE OF WHEAT—LOSS TO PRINCIPAL—AGENT'S LIABILITY.

The prompt carrying out of the express orders of his principal by an agent even though loss results therefrom does not constitute negligence or breach of duty on his part; unless circumstances are such that no reasonable agent would carry out his principal's orders. Cockshutt Plow Co. v. MacDonald, 8 D.L.R. 112, 5 A.L.R. 184, 3 W.W.R. 488.

An agent who had no authority to bind an insurance company until it had approved an application for insurance, is not liable for failure to effect insurance upon property before it was destroyed by fire, where he agreed with the applicant only to submit his application to the company for approval, which he did without negligence, and it did not appear that he unconditionally agreed to place and effect such insurance.

Binkley v. Stewart Co., 4 D.L.R. 150, 22 O.W.R. 339.

A person employed to secure additional insurance on certain property, a correct specification of what was required being given him, who receives the policy from the underwriters and forwards it to his clients without reading it is liable for the damages sustained by the latter by reason of their being compelled, upon the loss of their property by fire, to compromise their claim against the insurance because of an erroneous specification in the policy so obtained of the prior insurance carried by them.

Rudd Paper Box Co. v. Rice, 3 D.L.R. 253, 20 O.W.R. 979, affirming 2 O.W.N. 1417.

The agency of the defendant to his son, whose negligent driving of an automobile resulted in an injury to the plaintiff, is not established by the facts that the son had the opportunity of using the vehicle whenever he liked, and that on the day when the accident occurred it was the intention of the defendant that his son should later in the day take the defendant's family riding, where it appeared that the son had obtained the car from the garage where it was kept by the defendant, and was taking a few of his own friends for a ride when the accident occurred since, at the time of the accident, the automobile was being used solely for the purposes of the defendant's son.

LIABILITY FOR NEGLIGENCE.

In an action on a fire insurance policy the defendant insurer may recover from its agent, made a third party, as damages for the latter's neglect of duty as the insurer's agent to give the insurer sufficient information of the hazardous character of the risk, resulting in too small a premium being charged, the difference between the accustomed premium which would have been charged on a proper discovery of the material facts known to the agent and the lower premium which was in fact charged upon his negligent classification of the risk.

(§ III—34)—LIABILITY OF AGENT TO PRINCIPAL FOR FRAUD.

One employed to ascertain the lowest price for which property may be purchased, who deceives his principal and induces him to pay more than the owner of the property was willing to accept, is answerable to his principal for the difference. [Hutchinson v. Fleming, 40 Can. S.C.R. 134, followed.]

SECRET PROFIT BY AGENT — REAL ESTATE BROKER — NONDISCLOSURE ON GETTING OPTION FROM PRINCIPAL.

Where a real estate broker, holding an option from his principal for the purpose only of satisfying prospective purchasers that he could carry out a sale, reports to his principal that he had been unable to get the price but would take the property himself and charge no commission, and the principal acquiesces, the agent must account to the principal for the profit made on an undisclosed resale which he had already effected at the time when he got his principal to sell to him. AGENT'S INNOCENT MISREPRESENTATION.

While liability for a fraudulent representation made by an agent would be upon both the principal and agent, the responsibility is that of the principal alone when the representations are innocently made by the agent.

(§ III—36) — COMMISSIONS — REPOSSESSION OF GOODS.

A provision in an agency agreement that no commission is to be earned or paid on "goods taken back" includes goods "repossessed" from the purchaser, under the terms of the contract of sale, owing to a default in payment of the balance of the purchase price, and if any commission has been previously paid, it is the duty of the agent, upon repossession of the goods, to refund it. [Taylor v. Laird, 1 H. & N. 266; Buttou v. Thompson, 38 L.J.C.P. 225, distinguished.]

COMPENSATION — INSURANCE AGENCY — BASIS FOR COMPUTING COMMISSIONS.

A stipulation in a contract for a fire insurance agency that the agent shall receive in addition to a regular commission a stated percentage on the "annual-net profits" from business in his territory, arrived at by deducting from the gross premiums all return premiums, rebate, losses, and loss expenses paid and commissions paid, is to be construed as a mode by which the net profits of the year were to be adjusted; the words "losses and loss expenses paid" as used in relation to such annual net profits mean losses actually paid during the year and deduction is not to be made of other losses and expenses paid afterwards in respect of that year's business.

White v. National Paper Co., 16 D.L.R. 861, 6 O.W.N. 83.

REAL ESTATE AGENT — PRINCIPAL'S DUTY.

Upon a contract by a real estate agent to sell lands for his principal, the obligation of the latter to treat the agent honestly and to do nothing calculated to deprive him unfairly of his commission is as strict as that of the agent to act honestly and to refrain from accepting (under ordinary circumstances) any commission or other benefit from the purchaser.

AGENT'S COMPENSATION — ACCOUNTING — CLAIM FOR TRAVELLING EXPENSES.

On an accounting for services of a financial agent, he should not be allowed the full amount of travelling expenses incurred upon a trip upon which he bought property for his principal, where it appears that he purchased much more property on his own account at the same time.

RIGHTS OF AGENT — COMPENSATION — RECISSION OF AGENCY CONTRACT.

On declaring a contract for an exclusive sales agency for a company for a fixed period not binding on the company as the other contracting party had failed in his fiduciary duty as a director of the company to disclose the material facts to the shareholders on arranging with his fellow-directors that the contract should be given him on his resigning his directorship, the court may award him compensation on a quantum meruit basis for services rendered as sales agent for the company in faith of the contract so set aside.

An agent is not entitled to any remuneration in respect of a transaction in which he has been guilty of any misconduct or breach of faith towards his principal.

Canadian Financiers v. Hong Wo, 1 D.L.R. 38, 17 B.C.R. 8, 19 W.L.R. 843.

Where the plaintiff was employed by 2 of the 3 defendants to attend to the purchasing of an interest in lands for their benefit under an agreement that he should receive for his services one-fifth of the net profit realized from the transaction, to which agreement the third defendant was not a party and to whom notice of making such agreement by the other 2 defendants was not brought home, the plaintiff upon rendering such services is entitled to recover from the 2 defendants who entered into such agreement with him, one-fifth of the net profits realized by the three defendants.

COMPENSATION.

Where the defendant agreed to pay the plaintiff a commission for all sales of stock the latter's subagent should make, the plaintiff may recover from the defendant profits he would have realized on sales made by such subagent under an agreement between the latter and the defendant, made without the agreement between the plaintiff and the defendant being terminated, and with knowledge on the latter's part that the subagency still existed, to the effect that the subagent was to make sales independent of the plaintiff for the same commission the defendant had agreed to pay to the plaintiff. An agent whose subagent was, to the knowledge of the former's principal, to sell shares of stock belonging to the latter, cannot recover from such principal commissions for stock personally purchased from the principal direct by such subagent on his own account.

COMMISSIONS—DEFECT IN TITLE.

AGENT'S RIGHT TO COMPENSATION — ACCEPTED ORDERS — CANCELLATION.

An agreement by a manufacturing company to pay their agent a stipulated commission on all "accepted orders" obtained by him as soon as the orders are shipped, entitles the agent, upon obtaining an order, to recover his full commission on the whole order even though only part of the order had been shipped and the remainder had been countermanded by the purchaser.

When a proprietor gives to a person, even if not a real estate agent, a writing by which he binds himself to pay to him $1,500 if he sells his property for $44,500 on certain conditions, and the latter in fact sells it for that price but at conditions a little different as to the rate of interest, but which is agreed upon between the vendor and the purchaser, the agent is entitled to his commission, not the one mentioned in the writing, but the commission settled by usage, viz., 24 per cent.

Baikie v. Latourelle, 24 Que. K.B. 171.

COMPENSATION — EFFICIENT CAUSE — QUANTUM MERUIT.

A person employed by an insurance company to effect a contract of reinsurance with another company, on the basis of a "reasonable compensation," which contract is consummated with the liquidator of the latter company, is the efficient cause of the transaction as finally carried out and is entitled to recover on a quantum meruit.

One employed to effect the adjustment of an insurance claim, but who merely assists in the prosecution of the claim, and is not the instrumentality whereby the negotiations and settlement are made, can only recover for the value of the services rendered, and not upon his retainer.

COMMISSIONS—SALE OF MINING CLAIM.

In an action by an agent for the recovery of a commission on the sale of a mineral claim, held that the evidence showed that the employment was a general one in the sense mentioned by Lord Watson in Toulmin v. Miller, 12 App. Cas. 746, the price mentioned being intended not as a hard and fast one, but as a basis of negotiations, and, therefore, the plaintiff was entitled to the agreed commission on the price obtained. COMMISSIONS — SALE OF LAND — CONDITION.

Purchasers of land agreed to pay commission on the sale to an agent, on the condition that "if J. (the vendor) is unable to deliver his property" to the purchaser there was to be no commission. Held, that the agent was entitled to be paid his commission, the purchasers having failed to prove that the contingency, the occurrence of which would alone exonerate them from liability for the agent's commission, had actually occurred and become an existing fact.

COMMISSIONS ON SALES.

Employing an agent to sell and naming a price, but not limiting the sale to that price, constitutes a general employment, and if a sale be made to a purchaser introduced by such agent the latter will be entitled to a commission, though the sale price be less than that first named. [Bridgman v. Hephurn, 42 Can. S.C.R. 228, distinguished.]

Prentice v. Merrick, 38 D.L.R. 388, 24 B.C.R. 432, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 1060.

COMMISSION — SALE OF LAND — EFFICIENT CAUSE.

Where a person discovers that another is considering the purchase of a certain piece of land and then ascertains from the owner that he will sell and pay a commission, but does not afterwards communicate with the prospective buyer, and the latter and the owner complete the sale themselves, there is no commission payable by the owner. [Burchell v. Gowrie and Blockhouse Collieries, [1910] A.C. 614, applied.]

Langton v. Nicholson, [1918] 1 W.W.R. 908.

COMMISSION — LISTING AGREEMENT — SALE BY VENDOR — MEMORANDUM OF AGENCY.

Where land is listed with a real estate agent for sale and is afterwards sold by the vendor directly to a purchaser introduced by the agent, the latter is entitled to his commission, even though the terms of sale given in the listing as the basis on which the agent is to negotiate, are not strictly adhered to. [George v. Howard, 16 D.L.R. 468, 49 Can. S.C.R. 75, followed; Herron v. Como, 16 D.L.R. 234, 49 Can. S.C.R. 1, distinguished.] It is merely the terms of the agency agreement, whether they be meagre or detailed, that must be in writing under ch. 27, 1906. Once they are evidenced by writing the meaning thereof is just as subject to interpretation as if they had been evidenced only by oral testimony. The price and the other terms of the proposed sale may or may not be mentioned. If they are, in the circumstances, an essential part of the agency agreement they ought to be in writing. But it is a question of interpretation, even since the statute, whether the terms mentioned as those of the proposed sale are intended merely as a basis on which the agent may negotiate or are intended to bind the agent strictly to a sale on the named terms before he can claim his commission. The parties to the sale, and the land and terms of sale are not necessarily part of an agency agreement at all, and, therefore, unless they are made such need not be in writing.

SALE OF LAND — DEPOSIT RETAINED AS COMMISSION — RIGHT TO RECOVER — FORM OF ACTION.

Where a vendor has agreed to pay a commission to his agent and has agreed that the amount received by the agent as a deposit from the purchaser should be retained by the agent in part payment of such commission, and has given security for the balance, the deposit must be treated as paid over to the vendor, it is no longer in the agent's hands qua deposit, and in an action for money had and received it is only from the vendor that it can be recovered. [Barnford v. Shuttleworth, 11 Ad. & El. 926, followed.] It may, however, where the circumstances support such an action, be recovered from the agent in an action for deceit.

Brunstetter v. Zushing, 14 A.L.R. 66, [1918] 3 W.W.R. 546.

COMMISSIONS—QUEBEC.

In a business affair a mandate is not presumed to be gratuitous; on the contrary, according to recognized usage, a business agency carries with it a remuneration in the form of a commission, even when none has been agreed upon.

Juneau v. Took, 54 Que. S.C. 291.

COMMISSIONS — EVIDENCE — LOST DOCUMENT.

Where papers are destroyed or not produced, unless full and satisfactory explanation is given the court ought to draw a conclusion unfavourable to the person who destroys or who does not produce essential papers.

Ingley v. Routhier, 24 Rev. de Jur. 342.

COMMISSIONS—DELAY.

When a vendor agrees to pay a fixed commission to a real estate agent if he sells the property within a certain time, the agent can claim nothing if he finds a purchaser who is unable or refuses to purchase the property, and there being no fault on the part of the vendor.

Communauté des Sœurs de la Charité de L'Hôpital Général de Montréal v. Colonial Real Estate Co., 27 Que. K.B. 433. [Affirmed, 45 D.L.R. 193, 57, Can. S.C.R. 585.]

COMMISSIONS — CONSIDERATION — ILLEGALITY—ACTING FOR BOTH PARTIES.

No one can be the paid agent of two persons whose interests are opposed, such as vendor and purchaser, or 2 persons who are exchanging. In such case, if the purchaser or one of those exchanging has promised to pay the agent a commission, knowing that the latter represents the other party also, the contract is immoral and void. A real estate agent who, entrusted by one person to sell vacant lots, receives from another an offer to exchange a property for such lots, does nothing which he should be paid for if he merely transmits the latter proposition to his first principal; and if the one who offered to exchange promised in writing to pay the agent a commission, the contract is void, as being without consideration. One who offers to sell or exchange a piece of real property, and who is rendered unable to fulfil his obligation by the fact that he has been compelled, by the judgment of a court, to reconvey the property, cannot be liable to the real estate agent, whom he had employed, for damages representing his commission. If 2 parties agree to make an illegal contract neither of them has, in such case, a right of action, and courts ought to refuse their protection to either party. They cannot even allow an action for the recovery of money paid by mistake on the execution of the agreement.

The borrower must submit his titles from the time of a sheriff's sale to the lender for examination, the sale only determining a part of the rights and of the charges which are on the immovable, and if a loan does not take place on account of the refusal to do so, the agent who has found the loan at the request of the borrower has a right to a commission of 1 per cent according to the recognized custom.

An arbitrator, appointed pursuant to a partnership agreement, for the purpose of a voluntary winding-up of the partnership, is not liable to a claimant for moneys collected by him for the firm, but which moneys really belonged to the claimant, where the arbitrator accounted to the firm for that money, although he knew that it belonged to the claimant, since there is no privity between the claimant and the arbitrator, the latter being accountable only to the firm.

The general rule involved in the maxim delegatus non potest delegare merely prevents an agent from establishing the relationship of principal and agent between his own principal and a third person without the authority of his principal as regards the service which the agent has personally undertaken to perform, but the rule is relaxed where the instructions necessarily may have to be carried out by another, in which case the original agent may appoint a subagent or "substitute" and thus constitute in the interests and for the protection of the principal a direct privity between the principal and such "substitute" (or subagent). Edgar v. Caskey, 7 D.L.R. 45, 22 W.L.R. 91, 5 A.L.R. 245, 2 W.W.R. 1036.

DELEGATION BY AGENT.

The fact that the donee of a power of attorney for the sale of land which left to his discretion the price and terms of payment authorized a third person to find purchasers for him at a stated price and on stated terms, did not constitute a delegation to such third person of the discretion lodged in the donee.

(§ I A—1) NOTE—PRIMARY LIABILITY.

A promissory note signed as security for another's debt does not create a suretyship, when it is apparent that a primary liability was intended.

Where a municipality under a special contract conditionally agrees to sell and convey certain lands to a manufacturing company; and where among other conditions of the grant the company stipulated to maintain in the manufacturing establishment so purchased from the city a plant up to a certain standard in capacity and value; and where this stipulation was guaranteed by the bond of a surety company and the manufacturing company; the fact, that, pending action on such bond for its breach, the municipality proceeds, on the default of certain other covenants of the grantee, to resume possession of the lands in question, does not necessarily affect the liability of the obligors on the bond, where the breaches of the different covenants give rise under the express terms of the contract to different and appropriate remedies; such covenants being severable, and the one independent of the other.

Guelph v. Jules Motor Co., 8 D.L.R. 635, 4 O.W.N. 401, 23 O.W.R. 823.

SECURITY FOR COSTS.

Where security for costs is given, in the Superior Court, the surety who signed the bond is not relieved by the first judgment, which may be in favour of the party giving security, but is bound, if the final judgment adjudges the costs, against the person for whom he gave security. It is not necessary for the plaintiff, suing on the bond, to prove that he has paid the costs to his attorney.

MORTGAGE OBLIGATION — TRANSFER—NOVATION—GUARANTEE TO "FURNISH AND TO GIVE VALUE"—EXTENT OF THIS GUARANTEE—C.C. ARTS. 1171, 1577, 2161 ET SEQ.

There is no novation when an obligation is transferred with a promise to furnish and give value. This guarantee is different from that of art. 1577 C.C. (Que.). The clause to furnish and give value obliges the guarantor to pay, on default of the debtor, without limiting the time, that is to say that it guarantees not only the actual solvency of the one who was indebted originally at the time of the transfer, but also at the moment of the exigibility of the debt, and this responsibility does not cease except by a personal act of the creditor, by an act or default which is imputable to him and which prevents him from subrogating the transferor to the rights, mortgages, and privileges guaranteeing the debt, by art. 1959, C.C. (Que.) or by any other reason extinguishing his obligations. The fact of not having given his address to the registrar, and of not having assisted at the sheriff's sale of the mortgaged property, are not sufficient reasons to affect the rights of the creditors. The transferee of a mortgage is not required under art. 2161, C.C. (Que.) et seq. to make known his address to the registrar.

Hodge v. Gagnon, 56 Que. S.C. 201.

QUEBEC PRACTICE — RIGHT TO SUE — DEFAULT.

A surety, who invokes the benefit of the exception of discussion, must indicate to the creditor the effects he must discuss, and advance him the necessary money for that purpose. He must further invoke that benefit by way of dilatory exception. A creditor has the right to sue the surety, without putting him in default, when the principal debtor does not fulfil his obligation.

Charlottenburgh v. Barrett, 16 O.W.N. 154.

(§ 1 A—3)—WHEN JOINTLY LIABLE—JOINT SIGNING OF CONTRACT OF SALE.

A party who signs a contract for the sale of machinery as surety for but jointly with the purchaser thereby becomes a joint debtor and subjects himself to the stipulated liability for the prompt accrual of the whole contract price upon the failure to furnish notes and collateral security before the use of the machinery.

PERFORMANCE OF CONDITION PRECEDENT.

As to the provisions of a construction contract to the effect that an architect, who was thereby empowered, under certain circumstances, to take the work from the contractor's hands and complete it, should ascertain the cost of so doing, which award should be binding upon and be paid by the contractor, does not bind a surety upon a bond given by the latter, indemnifying the plaintiff against loss or damage arising from the contractor's failure to fulfil his contract, the Trial Judge, in an action against such surety, rightfully ordered the plaintiff to furnish the defendant with particulars of loss, together with full details as to how it arose, where the only damages claimed referred to in the plaintiff's statement was the amount found by the architect to be due from the contractor to the plaintiff.

(§ 1 A—6)—FAILURE OF OTHERS TO SIGN—CONTRIBUTION—EXTENT OF LIABILITY.

Where a bank manager, when he takes the signature of a guarantor, knows that such guarantor intends that his liability shall be conditional on the signatures of the other proposed guarantors, such guarantor will not be bound in the event of those signatures not being procured. Where two or more persons join as sureties for a common principal but bind themselves in different amounts, in the event of the principal being in default they are liable to contribute to the satisfaction of the creditor's claim in proportion to the limits of their respective liabilities, and not in equal amounts. [Ellesmere Brewery Co. v. Cooper, [1896] 1 Q.B. 75, followed.]

Scandinavian v. Kneeland, 8 W.W.R. 61. CONDITIONAL GUARANTY — FAILURE OF OTHERS TO SIGN IT.

A guaranty, signed by a person conditionally upon its future signature by other persons, is not binding upon such first-mentioned person in default of the signatures of the other persons.

Robinson v. Ellis, 9 W.W.R. 934.

(§ 1 A—8)—APPLICATION OF PAYMENTS.

Where an agent has become bonded after he was in the company's debt and subsequent payments are applied in payment of specific premiums due prior to and not covered by the bond, and this to the knowledge of the debtor, the bondsmen or sureties cannot complain of such imputation of payment and be relieved from liability under the bond on the ground that if the imputation had been made against premiums covered by the bond they would be clear. [Morgan v. Western, 3 Que. K.B. 51, explained.]

London & Lancashire Fire Ins. Co. v. Hart, 8 D.L.R. 332; Northern Ins. Co. v. Hart, 8 D.L.R. 805, 43 Que. S.C. 28.

SECURITY FOR RENT—APPLICATION OF PAYMENTS.

Where a lease provides for a rent of $100 per month, the person who becomes surety for the lessee, to the amount of $200, does not become responsible for the rent of the two first months only but for $200 generally. He gives only a limited security and his obligation does not extend to the accessories of the debt, namely, interest or damages resulting from nonexecution of the principal obligation as would be the case in an unlimited suretyship. The sums received by the lessor in payment of his rent should be imputed to the amount secured, and if they are sufficient to cover it, the lessor has no recourse against the surety for the balance which may remain due.

Dumontet v. Poirier, 49 Que. S.C. 454.

B. RELEASE OR DISCHARGE.

Impairment of security discharging surety, see Sale, I C—19.

(§ 1 B—10)—CONTRACT—SURETY—RELEASE OF SURETY DEPRIVED OF RIGHT UNDER CONTRACT—OMISSION BY CONTRACTOR.

To release the contractor's surety who has guaranteed the completion of a contract for excavating a building site, there must be some act done which deprives the surety of a right under the contract or of the power to insist on its exercise, or some omission to do some act which the contractor has contracted with the surety to do or to preserve some security to the benefit of which the surety is entitled.

SURETYSHIP — PRIVILEGE — TRANSACTIONS WITHOUT SURETY—EFFECT.

Where a contract of suretyship has been formed, it is the clearest and most evident equity that the creditor and the principal debtor should not carry on any transaction without the privity of the surety. [Rees v. Berrington, 2 Ves. J. 543, approved.]

SECURITY—SEIZURE OF DEBTOR—SUSPENSION OF ACTION—C.C. ARTS. 1942, 1943.

A surety is not discharged on the dismissal of the action of a creditor; he can only ask for a discharge in so far as the latter has seized the goods of the debtor, by the surety pointing out the goods and offering him the costs of the seizure. No provision of law authorizes the surety to ask, when the principal debtor is insolvent, that he be not obliged to pay as long as the goods of the debtor are not liquidated.

Racine v. Beauchamp, 50 Que. S.C. 289.

RELEASE OF ONE NO RELEASE TO OTHERS—DOCUMENTS RESTRICTING LIABILITY—NOTICE.

Where two or more sureties contract severally, the creditor does not break the contract with one of them by releasing the other. The contract remaining entire, the surety in order to escape liability must shew an existing right to contribution from his cosurety which has been taken away or injuriously affected by his release. [Ward v. National Bank of New Zealand, 8 A.C. 755, followed.];—Held, that on the facts the defendant had failed to prove that the bank or its officers had actual knowledge of the contents of certain documents alleged to restrict the liability of the defendant on the note sued upon. The necessity for actual notice in such a case discussed.

Merchants Bank v. Guthrie, 32 W.L.R. 484, 9 W.W.R. 295.

MUNICIPAL LAW—SCHOOL DISTRICT—BUILDING CONTRACT—MISNOMER IN NAME—AMENDMENT—NO RESOLUTION UNDER SEAL AUTHORIZING SUIT.

The defendant company was surety for the due performance by G. of a contract for the erection of a schoolhouse for the plaintiff school district. There was a misnomer in the name of the plaintiff as given in the suit and there was no authority from the plaintiff under seal for the bringing of the action. Moreover, it appeared in evidence that it was a term of the contract of suretyship that the contract price was to be paid only upon certificates of the architect, whereas the amount paid to the contractor was considerably in excess of the amounts authorized by the architect's certificates. Held, that the misnomer in the corporate name was a matter for amendment, the defendants not being misled. That the objection to the absence of authority under seal should be overruled, the defendant company not having taken objection until the argument after the evidence was in. That the payment by the school district to the contractor of moneys in excess of those authorized by the architect's certificates operated to release the defendant company. Macklin School District v. Saskatchewan Guarantee & Fidelity Co., 12 S.L.R. 269, [1919] 2 W.W.R. 396.

(§ 1 B—11)—BY CHANGE OF CONTRACT—RELEASE OF SURETY.

A waiver of a claim for damages which may arise out of delays or interruptions in the performance of a contract does not constitute any material change in the contractual obligations of the parties, or enlarge the liabilities of the surety, so as to operate as a discharge of the contractor's surety.

Niagara & Ontario Construction Co. v. Wyse, 10 D.L.R. 116, 4 O.W.N. 975, 24 O.W.R. 302.

BY CHANGE OF CONTRACT.

In an action upon a bond, where the surety resists upon the plea that the contract guaranteed by the bond had been varied to the prejudice of the surety by a subsequent agreement between the principal and the obligee, the court will consider whether the alleged variance was a matter contemplated and provided for in the guaranteed contract itself, and well known to the surety from the outset.

Guelph v. Jules Motor Co., 8 D.L.R. 635, 4 O.W.N. 401, 23 O.W.R. 823.

ALTERATION OF CONTRACT—EXTENSION—LOSS OF VENDOR'S LIEN—EVIDENCE.

(§ 1 B—12)—EXTENSION OF TIME.

A surety is released by an agreement between the creditor and the principal debtor for an increased rate of interest during an extended period granted for payment, notwithstanding the surety's prior express consent to an extension simply at the will of the creditor and the principal debtor.

General Financial Corp. v. LeJeune, 39 D.L.R. 33, 11 S.L.R. 38, [1918] 1 W.W.R. 372.

EXTENSION—GUARANTY UPON ASSIGNMENT OF MORTGAGE.

The well established principle, that an extension of time given to the principal debtor without the consent of the surety thereby discharges the surety, has no application, when, upon an assignment of a mortgage, the assignor covenants to indemnify the assignee in case of defaults in payments thereon by the mortgagor that shall continue to a certain date, and the extension is given by the assignee for a period terminable prior to the time fixed for the defaults. [Prendergast v. Devey, 6 Madd. 124; Rouse v. Bradford Banking Co., [1894] 2 Ch. 32, applied.] The covenant cannot be construed as a "guaranty" and does not put the transferor in the position of "surety"

PROMISSORY NOTE — USED AS COLLATERAL FOR NOTE OF SMALLER AMOUNT—POSITION OF MAKER OF LARGE NOTE—SURETY—NO NOTICE TO BANK—RENEWAL OF SMALLER NOTE—RELEASE OF SURETY.

If the creditor grants an extension of time to the debtor, as a rule the surety is released on the presumption that such extension so incommodes the surety as to deprive him of his rights against his principal; but when the creditor does nothing to prejudice the surety after learning of his suretyship the latter is not discharged. [Bailey v. Griffith, 40 U.C.R. 418, distinguished; Devanney v. Brownlee, 40 U.C.R. 418.]

ADVANCES BY BANK TO CUSTOMER — CONTRACT GUARANTEED—SILENT AS TO TIME OF REPAYMENT — RENEWAL NOTE BY BANK—RELEASE OF SURETY.

A contract which guarantees "advances" made by a bank to a customer up to a certain amount, and which is silent as to the time when such advances should be made, and the period or periods of credit, and there being nothing to shew that any time for repayment was contemplated, and where the nature of the customer's business makes it clear that the advances were to be made from time to time, is a continuing guarantee and the guarantor is not relieved from liability by the bank consenting to take a renewal note for the amount advanced without the consent of such guarantor.

North Western National Bank of Portland v. Ferguson, 44 D.L.R. 464, 57 Can. S.C.R. 420.

COLLATERAL SECURITY—CHATTEL MORTGAGE — FAILURE TO KEEP RENEWED AS AGAINST CREDITORS—DELAY AND NEGLIGENCE OF HOLDER OF NOTE—TIME GIVEN TO PRINCIPAL DEBTOR.

Pearson v. Tibbetts, 10 O.W.N. 422.

(§ 1 B—13)—REALIZING UPON SECURITIES — VENDOR'S LIEN — PERSONAL JUDGMENT.

Where a creditor has securities in his hands for the debt guaranteed, he is entitled to realize upon those securities without releasing the surety; a vendor's assignment of the agreement of sale together with the land, covenanting to guarantee the purchaser's defaults in payments, gives the assignee the right, immediately upon the purchaser's default, to a judgment against the guarantor for the whole amount claimed and to the enforcement of a vendor's lien on the land for the unpaid purchase money, the judgment being enforceable to the extent that the sale of the property does not wholly satisfy it; and the assignor can not be heard to say that being in the position of surety, he is entitled to the securities and that by ordering a sale of the land he is thereby discharged from liability. [Pearl v. Deacon, 24 Beav. 186, applied.]

LOSS OF DISTRESS AS DISCHARGE OF SURETY.

A surety for the payment of rent is not discharged because by an assignment of the lease the right of distress is lost. [Re Russell, 29 Ch. D. 254, followed.]

IMPAIRMENT OF SECURITY.

The dealing with a security by a principal creditor, which does not prejudice the surety in a sense that he suffers pecuniary loss or damage as the reasonably direct or natural result of that act, will not discharge the surety. [Section 26 (r) of the King's Bench Act (R.S.M. 1913, c. 46), applied; Blackwood v. Percival, 14 Man. L.R. 216, followed.]

National Land & Loan Co. v. Rat Portage Lumber Co., 36 D.L.R. 97, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 269.

SURRENDERING CHATTELS UNDER LIEN NOTE.

Where a purchaser under a lien note, of certain chattels by agreement with the vendor, surrendered some of the chattels to him and received a credit upon the amount of the note and it was not shewn that the chattels returned would under any other conditions or circumstances of sale have realized a greater price, or that if the lien had been turned over to him and he had proceeded under it, the chattels would have brought more, the surety who signed the note was not released.

Toovey v. Brock, 34 W.L.R. 973.

(§ 1 B—14)—BUILDING CONTRACT—ALTERATION — NONDISCLOSURE — DISCHARGE OF SURETY.

FERRA v. National Surety Co., 39 D.L.R. 175, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 719, reversing 27 D.L.R. 518, 23 B.C.R. 15, 10 W.W.R. 526.

PRINCIPAL'S PROFITS HINDERED BY CREDITOR.

The defendant gave his promissory note as surety for the payment of the debt of P. to the plaintiff, after certain differences between P. and the plaintiff had been settled, by the plaintiff agreeing to supply a new motor to drive a tractor, over which the dispute had arisen. The plaintiff did not supply a new motor and the one supplied did not do the work, so that the profits of P. which were to reduce the debt for which the defendant was surety were too little to do so. Held, that the defendant was released.

II. Rights and remedies of surety.

Duty not to prejudice rights of surety, see Bills and Notes, V B—139.

(§ II—15)—GUARANTEE TO BANK—DEFENSES.

One who freely and voluntarily enters into guarantees and a collateral agreement with a bank, the bank acting upon them to its detriment, cannot set up the defence that he did not intend to undertake the liability shown to exist, and that he would not have entered into the guarantees if he had known the true state of the accounts.

Bank of Hamilton v. Bamfield, 40 D.L.R. 482, 25 B.C.R. 397, [1918] 2 W.W.R. 953.

SHORTAGES—GOOD FAITH OF PRINCIPAL.

A surety is not entitled to recover from the principal for money paid out for shortages in pursuance of the terms of the bond not attributable to the principal's negligence, and where he otherwise faithfully performed his duties.

NOTICE OF DEFAULT.

A surety is not entitled to notice of the principal debtor's default unless there is a contract to that effect express or implied.

INDEMNIFYING PURCHASER'S DEFAULTS—NOTICE OF DEFAULT.

The assignor of an agreement for the sale of land who covenants to indemnify the assignee for any default made by the purchaser is not discharged from liability under the covenant for want of notice of the default. [Massey Harris v. Baptiste, 24 D.L.R. 753, followed.]

CONTRACTOR'S BOND—ADVANCES TO ASSIST COMPLETION OF CONTRACT.

Where a subcontractor has completed his work and performed his contract with the assistance of advances made him by his head contractor, the latter cannot recover these advances from the surety of the subcontractor who entered into a bond conditioned for the due performance of the work, such being beyond the conditions expressed in the bond; if, however, the head contractor had completed the work on his own account upon the subcontractor's default and charged the cost thereof against the subcontractor deducting from this amount the sums due under the contract, the surety would still be liable, provided notice as required by the contract had been duly given to the surety.

Niagara & Ontario Construction Co. v. Wyse, 10 D.L.R. 116, 4 O.W.N. 975, 24 O.W.R. 302.

CREDIT FOR ALLOWANCES—WAIVED.

Where a person under bond for the performance of work waives any claim for an allowance arising out of the contract, his surety will be entitled, on the taking of the accounts, to credit for the amount voluntarily released.

Niagara & Ontario Construction Co. v. Wyse, 10 D.L.R. 116, 4 O.W.N. 975, 24 O.W.R. 302.

Where cosureties on a contractors' bond entered into a written agreement between themselves prior to the abandonment of the work by the contractors under which they jointly completed the work, the drawback of 20 per cent returned by the owner as the work proceeds from the value of all the work from the commencement of the contract is, when finally paid, to be considered as salvage attributable to the joint efforts of the sureties, and where the amount owing for the work on completion is received by one of the sureties, who was both the assignee of the contractors' rights under the contract, and the agent of his cosureties for completing the contract, he is liable to account to his cosureties for the drawback of 20 per cent.

Where cosureties upon a contractors' bond for the due performance of work, prior to the abandonment of the work by the contractors, in order to protect themselves, appoint one of their number to represent all with authority to do all things necessary for the carrying on of the work, and on their completion of the work a loss results, the cosureties are liable to the managing surety for contribution for advances made under the new obligation created by the agreement so made between themselves.

Cadwell v. Campeau, 3 D.L.R. 555, 3 O.W.N. 616, 21 O.W.R. 263.

The defence based on the right to the benefit of discussion (taking of accounts, etc.) can only be set up, under art. 177 C.C.P. by dilatory exception. Security will not be received to raise it by peremptory exception en droit. The surety for the principal debtor preventing the exception must, on pain of nullity, indicate the property of the principal debtor which he wishes to discuss and tender an amount sufficient to pay the costs. The notorious insolvency of the principal debtor evidenced by his assignment for benefit of creditors making it impossible to indicate the property to be discussed takes away his right to the exception.

Barrette v. Leclair, 44 Que. S.C. 1.

WARRANTY.

A surety who has bound himself without the consent of the debtor, cannot recover from him if he has not paid the debt. He cannot therefore, if he is sued by the creditor, call the debtor in warranty.

Howard v. Findlay, 51 Que. S.C. 375.

(§ II—16)—BETWEEN SURETIES.

One of several cosureties on a contractors' bond, who has made advances to the contractors for materials and labour which enabled the contractors to continue the work, and who has obtained an assignment of all moneys due or to become due under the contract, has no greater or higher rights than the contractors had, and he cannot, apart from contract, claim contribution from his cosureties for such advances even though these, by enabling the contractors to proceed with the work, lessened the liability of the sureties. [Ludd v. Chamber of Commerce, 60 Pac. R. 713, followed.]

PRIZE COURT.

JURISDICTION TO PRESERVE CARGO—SEIZURE BEFORE WRIT.

The Prize Court has jurisdiction, both statutory and inherent, to take all necessary steps to preserve property in its custody, and therefore an order will be made that the cargo of a seized ship should be unladen, inventoried and warehoused to protect it from damage by damp and heat. This jurisdiction begins from the "moment of seizure," and may be exercised before the issue of a writ.

PRIZE—CARGO—PLEADINGS.

Where parties appear and make claim to a cargo seized as a prize, the claimants are to commence their action by a petition or statement of claim, in the form of pleadings, to which the Crown pleads by what is technically called under the rules an answer.

PRIZE—APPRAISEMENT—SHIP—COAL.

In appraising a ship brought in as a prize the coal in the bunkers is not to be appraised as part of the ship; it should be inventoried separately. Where the appraisers have acted in good faith the court will not interfere with their judgment.

Re The "Hamborn," 17 Can. Ex. 243.

PRIZE—SHIP AND APPURTENANCES—COAL.
Bunker coal does not pass as part of a ship brought in as a prize.

PRIZE FIGHTING.

Annotations.

Criminal law; sparring matches distinguished from prize fights: 12 D.L.R. 786, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 395.

Definition; Criminal Code, 1906, ss. 105-108; 12 D.L.R. 786.

INTENT—BOXING MATCH.

To constitute a "prize fight" within the prohibition of Cr. Code s. 105, there must have been the intention of fighting until one of the participants shall have become exhausted by blows or fatigue; it is not a "prize fight" merely because the participants were paid for the exhibition.

R. v. Fleming, 30 D.L.R. 419, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 182.

WHAT CONSTITUTES—PRIZE OR REWARD.

An encounter of the nature of a fight, with fists or hands, between two persons who have met for such purpose by previous arrangement is a "prize fight" under Cr. Code, s. 105, within the statutory definition of the phrase "prize fight" in s. 2 (31), if the contest be one in which each strives to overcome or conquer the other, although there is no prize offered to the victor.

R. v. Pelkey, 12 D.L.R. 780, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 387, 6 A.L.R. 103, 24 W.L.R. 804, 4 W.W.R. 1055.

DEFINITION.

To constitute a "prize fight" under Cr. Code ss. 31, 106, the encounter must be between two persons acting together, with the intention of fighting, whether with or without gloves, till one or the other gives in from exhaustion or from injuries received. The words "encounter" and "fight" are synonymous. A sparring or boxing match for a given number of rounds, which would not ordinarily exhaust either participant, is not a "prize fight," although the boxers were paid fixed sums not depending upon the result, for giving the exhibition.

PROCURING.

CAB-DRIVER—DRIVING PROSTITUTES AND MEN TO PLACE WHERE THEY MAY HAVE INTERCOURSE—NOT GUILTY UNDER CRIMINAL CODE.

A cab-driver who uses his conveyance to drive prostitutes and men who are mutually desirous of having sexual intercourse, to a place where they can and do have it, is not guilty of "procuring" within the meaning of s. 216 (1) (a) Cr. Code as enacted by 3 & 4 Geo. V. c. 13, s. 9. The fact that it was the cab-driver who brought them together for such purpose makes no difference.

R. v. Quinn, 44 D.L.R. 707, 43 O.L.R. 385, 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 372.

ATTEMPT—FALSE PRETENCES.

Notwithstanding the special inclusion of attempts in the preceding clauses of s. 216 Cr. Code, dealing with the offence of procuring, an indictment will lie under s. 571, dealing generally with attempts to commit indictable offences, for the offence of attempted procuring by false pretences within s. 216, clause (j) as re-enacted by the Criminal Code Amendment Act, 1913, as to which s. 216 omits any special mention of attempts; the doctrine of "expressio unius, etc." does not apply to exclude the attempt of the principal offence as against the express language of s. 571.

PROSTITUTION—CR. CODE, 216.

The word "prostitution" in Cr. Code, s. 216 (amendment of 1913) means promiscuous sexual intercourse with men, and is negated where the magistrate finds that the intent of the accused man was only that the woman should become his mistress and not to bring about sexual connection between the woman and other men.

I. POWER TO ISSUE.

(§ 1—1)—POWER TO ISSUE.

An unsuccessful motion before a Division Court judge under s. 160 of the Division Courts Act to discharge garnishment proceedings does not defeat the right to prohibition for want of jurisdiction.

Re McCreary v. Brennan, 3 D.L.R. 318, 3 O.W.N. 1652.

POWER OF SUPREME COURT TO ISSUE TO COUNTY JUDGE WHEN ACTING AS MAS-TER OF SUPREME COURT (N.S.).

Since a judge of a County Court acting as a Master of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, is an officer of the latter court, and not an inferior tribunal, the Supreme Court should not issue a writ of prohibition to restrain his proceeding as such without jurisdiction; an order directed to the Master as an officer of the court is sufficient.

TO CIRCUIT COURT—INSCRIPTION EN FAUX.

Art. 50 C.C.P., does not confer on the Superior Court the right to revise judgments of the Circuit Court. It would only be in the case of a denial of justice or abuse of power causing a grave prejudice and a manifest injury that the Superior Court should exercise its right of control and of surveillance over the Circuit Court and its judges if otherwise it possesses such right. If in an action on a note the defendant states at the hearing that the note was altered after the defence was filed, he can only demand to be allowed to file a new plea under the provisions of art. 208, C.P.Q., and cannot demand the right to inscribe en faux.

Laroque v. Circuit Court of Montreal, 18 Que. P.R. 416.

DENTAL COLLEGE.

The "Board of Governors" of the College of Dental Surgeons of the Province of Quebec is not a body politic, but being charged with making rules respecting the honour, dignity and discipline of the members of the College, and of deciding upon charges brought against them, it is an inferior tribunal subject to a writ of prohibition. Although a writ of prohibition has the same object in view as a writ of injunction, it differs from it, however, in that the latter should be addressed to the litigant parties, whilst the former is addressed to the court itself.

Maillet v. Board of Governors of Quebec College of Dental Surgeons, 27 Que. K.B. 364.

(§ 1—2)—DEFECT ON FACE OF PROCEEDINGS.

Where the defect of jurisdiction is clear on the face of the proceedings of an inferior court, the issue of a prohibition, though not of course, is of right and not discretionary. [Farquharson v. Margon, [1894] 1 Q. B. 552, applied.]

R. v. Jack, 25 D.L.R. 700, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 385, 49 N.S.R. 328.

(§ 1—4)—SUMMARY CONVICTION—NON-JURISDICTIONAL ERROR—APPEAL.

Error in law upon a question apart from the jurisdiction to try, will not give a right to prohibition, and the forcing of respondent into the witness-box, whether justified or not under the provincial statute under which the prosecution was brought, does not raise the question of jurisdiction of a County Judge to hear an appeal from the dismissal of a summary conviction. [Re Royston Park and Steelton, 13 D.L.R. 454, 28 O.L.R. 629; Re McLeod and Amiro, 8 D. L.R. 726, 27 O.L.R. 232, referred to.]

JURISDICTION—EFFECT OF PRIOR PROSECU-TION.

Prohibition does not lie to raise the question whether the entry of a nolle prosequi in a prior prosecution for the same cause operated as a bar to the second prosecution. An objection on that score is one to be determined in the course of the second prosecution but does not go to the jurisdiction of the tribunal.

R. v. Spence, 31 Can. Cr. Cas. 365.

SUMMARY CONVICTION.

Where, as in the Lord's Day Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 153, s. 7, an exception is created by the same statutory clause as that which creates the offence, a summary conviction is bad if it does not negative the exemption or exception; and the objection may be raised on a motion for a writ of prohibition to restrain the enforcement of the conviction.

McBrien v. Recorder's Court, 31 Can. Cr. Cas. 352.

II. Adequacy of other remedies.

(§ II—5)—OTHER REMEDY—RIGHT TO AP-PLY FOR RELIEF TO TRIBUNAL TO BE PRO-HIBITED.

That objections to the jurisdiction of a court to entertain an appeal may be raised on the hearing will not prevent the granting of a writ of prohibition against such tribunal by a superior court. [Mayor of London v. Cox, L.R. 2 H.L. 239, followed.]

Re Buchanan, 15 D.L.R. 232, 23 Man. L.R. 943, 26 W.L.R. 447.

ALTERNATIVE REMEDY OF APPEAL.

It is not a bar to the granting of prohibition to a magistrate for exceeding his territorial jurisdiction that an alternative remedy of appeal was available to correct the absence or excess of jurisdiction.

JUDGMENT—WANT OF JURISDICTION.

Nothing shall be intended to be within the jurisdiction of an inferior court except that which is so expressly alleged, and where the objection to the jurisdiction appears upon the face of the proceedings, prohibition lies even after judgment, even though there is an alternative remedy by a motion to set aside the judgment.

Camouss Commercial Co. v. Garetson, 20 B.C.R. 448, 7 W.W.R. 219.

OTHER REMEDY.

The writ of prohibition is confined in cases where no other remedy exists.

Henry Morgan Co. v. Montreal, 24 Rev. Leg. 486.

NUISANCE—OTHER REMEDY—CERTIORARI.

Legislative authority to commit a nuisance will not be assumed where the legislative authority to a proprietor to make a particular use of his property is permissive only. The effect of such legislative authority can be examined on certiorari, and prohibition will not lie in such a case.

Montreal Abattoirs v. Cour du Recor. der, 17 Que. P.R. 305.

AGAINST SUMMARY CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS ON DEFECTIVE INFORMATION.

Prohibition may be ordered to restrain a magistrate from proceeding on an information which he had erroneously ruled sufficient to support the charge, whereas in fact it did not disclose a criminal offence; but the prohibition order will not bar proceedings on a fresh information or even upon the same information if properly amended and resworn. [R. v. France, 1 Can. Cr. Cas. 321, applied.]

R. v. McAuley, 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 145, [1918] 3 W.W.R. 178.

(§ III—10)—PERSONS TO, OR AGAINST WHOM, WRIT MAY BE GRANTED.

The Council of the Bar when investigating a charge against an advocate accused of having committed an act derogatory to the dignity of the profession exercises judicial functions; and as such constitutes an "inferior court" amendable to certiorari and prohibition. A board of conciliation and investigation appointed by the Minister of Labour to investigate a pretended dispute between an industrial company and its employees, on the application of persons describing themselves as members of a trade union that has no legal existence, who do not shew that they are authorized by a majority vote of that, nor of any other, trade union, who are not employees of the company, and at a time when there exists no dispute between the company and its employees, and neither a strike nor a lockout is imminent, is unlawfully constituted and the Superior Court, in the exercise of its controlling power over all courts and persons within the province (art. 50, C.A.P.), has the power and duty, at the instance of the company petitioning for a prohibition, to restrain such board from acting in the matter. A board appointed under the Act 6-7 Edw. VII, c. 20, is a court of inferior jurisdiction and prohibition will lie to restrain it from acting, if unlawfully constituted, or if it assumes to act in excess of its jurisdiction.

APPEAL BY INFORMANT FROM DISMISSAL OF ACCUSED ON SUMMARY TRIAL—DEFECT OF JURISDICTION.

Prohibition lies to prevent a County Court entertaining an appeal launched by an informant from the decision of a police magistrate dismissing on summary trial a charge of an indictable offence, on the ground that no appeal lies; and the prohibition motion is properly brought as soon as the notice of the proposed appeal has been filed in the inferior court to which the appeal is taken.

The arbitrators named for the purpose of an expropriation under s. 196 of the Railway Act (R.S.C. 1906, c. 37), form a court of inferior jurisdiction, and a writ of prohibition may be issued against them if they act without jurisdiction, or exceed their jurisdiction. 2. Notwithstanding the name in the book of reference sanctioned by the Railway Commission, and deposited by the company in accordance with ss. 159, 160, as being that of the owner of the land to be expropriated, if this land is alienated before the company has instituted the arbitration proceedings provided for in ss. 190 et seq. it is considered as giving notice to the new purchaser and taking up the case with him. He has the remedy of prohibition to prevent the arbitrators from taking cognizance of the matter if the company has not given him notice of its proceedings, or has only given notice to the former owner as if the alienation had not taken place. [Park & Island Ry. Co. v. Shannon, 6 B.R. 195; Jones v. Laurent, 1 Que. S.C. 438, and Atlantic & North-West Ry. Co. v. Wood, [1895] A.C. 257, followed.]

(§ IV—23)—TO SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION—EXCESS OF POWERS—HEARING AND REPORT.

The Superintendent of Public Instruction, in obeying the orders of the Provincial Secretary which governs his department, acts in administrative matters only, and is not subject to a writ of prohibition. The report of the delegate of the Superintendent upon a hearing does not constitute the trial of a person mentioned in it, and the latter is not entitled to a writ of prohibition against the delegate restraining him from all proceedings, and especially in making a report to give his opinion, or his appreciation, or a decision upon the proof made before him. If in any respect the delegate exceeds his powers, the excess in jurisdiction should be invoked in limine or at least before the enquête is finished and the case taken under consideration. A writ of prohibition cannot issue against such delegate after he has made his report and has become functus officio.

If an application for prohibition is based on the unconstitutionality of a Dominion Act, and the Attorney-General of Quebec has not been made a party to the proceedings, the court cannot, on an application by the person applying for the writ to annul the placing of the case on the roll, decide whether or not the Attorney-General of Quebec should be added as a party. Semble, that an inscription should be served on the opposite party. The date of the hearing of a case before its turn cannot be fixed ex parte without notice to the adverse party and unknown to him.

(§ V—32)—ILLEGAL AND IRREGULAR EXERCISE OF JURISDICTION.

Upon a motion for prohibition, where, in a matter in which it has jurisdiction, an inferior court has made an order which is incorrect, but which it can easily set right, the proper course is not to grant prohibition, but to enlarge the motion so as to give the inferior court an opportunity to correct the mistake, and, if it be corrected, to dismiss the motion. Prohibition is not ex debito justitiæ; it is an extreme measure, and is not granted in case of a mere illegality or irregularity not going to the jurisdiction, or where the judicial officer having jurisdiction exercises it in an irregular manner. (§ II—25)—INJURY BY ELECTRICITY—CONTACT OF TELEPHONE WIRE WITH POWER WIRE.

A telephone company empowered to erect its poles and wires on a street upon which the poles and wires of an electric power line are already strung is under a duty to string the telephone wires at a safe distance from the power wires, and where a telephone lineman is killed by the telephone wires with which he was working becoming charged by contact with an electric wire which had sagged low by the settlement or bending of the electric company's poles not resulting from any negligence on the part of the electric company, the proximate cause of the injury is the negligence of the telephone company and not of the electric company, although the latter had taken no precautions by guy wires or otherwise to obviate the effect of such sagging.

(§ II—30)—LOSS BY EXPLOSION—BREACH OF STATUTORY DUTY—UNLICENSED PERSON IN CHARGE OF BLASTING.

In an action for personal injury through alleged negligence in blasting operations, it is not sufficient for the plaintiff to shew merely that there was a breach of statutory duty in the employment by the defendants of an unlicensed person to do the blasting; it must further appear that such breach, if relied upon in proof of negligence, was the proximate cause of the accident.

III. Of loss or injury by carrier or railroad company.

(§ III—16)—EJECTED PASSENGER—KILLED AT DIFFERENT PLACE SEVERAL HOURS LATER—LIABILITY OF RAILWAY COMPANY.

A railway company is not liable in negligence for the death of a passenger, who is ejected from the train at a proper stopping place, for drunkenness and riotous conduct, if at the time he is put off the train he is capable of taking care of himself, although subsequently he wanders on to the track and several hours later is killed by another train at a place where those in charge of the latter train could not see him in time to prevent the accident.

(§ VI—105)—In order to absolve a sub-warrantor who manufactured a steel structure to support a water tank erected upon the roof of a building, from liability for damages occasioned by the fall thereof, on the ground that the walls were defective, the defective condition must be shown and it must appear that that was the immediate and proximate cause of its fall.

VII. Of injury inflicted by animal.

(§ VII—110) — ANIMALS RUNNING AT LARGE CAUSING FRIGHT OF HORSES—INJURY TO PROPERTY—REMOTENESS.

The perilous alternative one is placed in while driving away animals running at large contrary to a by-law in consequence of which his horses became frightened, causing damage to his property, does not render such damage too remote to bar recovery.

(§ I A—1)—INDIAN RESERVE—INDIANS AND PURCHASERS.

Under the Indian Act (39 Vict. c. 18, s. 31, R.S.C. (1886), c. 43, s. 42) Indians have the right to become purchasers of public lands which, on surrender to the Crown, have ceased to be a part of an Indian "reserve."

Atty-Gen'l for Can. v. Giroux, 30 D.L.R. 123, 53 Can. S.C.R. 172, affirming 24 Que. K.B. 433.

RIVER BEDS — "RAILWAY BELT" LANDS IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

The beneficial ownership of the beds of navigable nontidal waters within the "railway belt" in British Columbia, which were vested in the Crown in the right of that province at the time of the transfer of the "railway belt" lands to the Dominion of Canada, passed to the Dominion in virtue of the transfer.

CONSTRUCTION OF CROWN GRANTS.

Crown grants are to be construed most favourably for the King where a fair doubt exists as to the real meaning of the instrument.

INDIAN LANDS ON RESERVES—SURRENDER—DOMINION OR PROVINCIAL DOMAIN.

Indian lands are not possessed by the Crown in trust for the Indians who have surrendered them; they belong to it in full ownership as other public lands subject to distribution every year among the members of the tribe who have agreed to surrender them, the interest deriving from the proceeds of their sale. [Church v. Fenton, 5 Can. S.C.R. 239, followed.] When a tribe of Indians has surrendered a reserve to the Crown, the beneficial interest of the tribe in the lands of this reserve accrues to the provinces and not to the federal power.

Doherty v. Giroux, 24 Que. K.B. 433. [Affirmed sub. nom Atty-Gen'l for Canada v. Giroux, 30 D.L.R. 123, 53 Can. S.C.R. 172.]

To give title or possessory rights as against the Crown the proof should be clear and unequivocal. The occupation and use of land on the sea shore, where the acts of occupation (apart from the erection of small structures not of a permanent character) are shown to have been of a casual, temporary and irregular character, in the absence of enclosure or anything to indicate the extent of possession, are not sufficient to give title as against the Crown.

(§ I A-3)—GRANT OF BED OF NAVIGABLE RIVER—TITLE TO.

In a grant of part of the public domain from the Crown to a subject the bed of a navigable river will not pass unless an intention to convey the same is expressed in clear and unambiguous terms in the grant.

Leamy v. The King, 23 D.L.R. 249, 15 Can. Ex. 189. [Affirmed in 33 D.L.R. 237, 54 Can. S.C.R. 143.]

(§ I B-5)—VALIDITY OF LEASE—APPROVED BY ORDER-IN-COUNCIL—AMENDMENTS—

APPROVAL BY MINISTER—SIGNATURE—NO SUBSEQUENT ORDER-IN-COUNCIL—VALIDITY.

A lease of Crown land made between a corporation and a minister acting on behalf of the Crown, and approved by order-in-council, must have the indenture containing amendments to the same duly approved by order-in-council otherwise such indenture is a nullity.

The King v. Vancouver Lumber Co., 50 D.L.R. 6, affirming Supreme Court of Canada, which affirmed 41 D.L.R. 617, 17 Can. Ex. 329.

OCCUPATION LICENSE—RIGHTS OF ASSIGNEE—SALE BY CROWN BY LETTERS PATENT—COLONIZATION PURPOSES.

The assignee of the rights of one who has obtained an occupation license of a lot of public land loses his rights by the sale of the lot by the Crown under letters patent. Neither the licensee nor the assignment made to him gives a right of action against the holder of the letters patent to wood cut upon the lot by the latter. The prohibition against acquiring by letters patent, by means of transfers of occupation licenses, of more than 300 acres of land for the purpose of colonization, is of public interest, and can be invoked by all interested as well as by the Crown.

Howard v. Stewart, 23 Que. K.B. 80.

DISPOSAL THROUGH LAND DEPARTMENT—ENTRY—SALE.

The alienation by sale of Crown lands is perfected by the mutual consent of the agent of the Crown and the purchaser in respect to the property and the price independently of any title or document attesting it.

Under s. 54, of c. 43, R.S.C., 1886, and R.S.C. 1906, c. 81, s. 73, giving authority to the Superintendent-General of Indian Affairs to grant licenses to cut timber on Indian lands, the licensee is not entitled at the expiration of his term of license to a renewal of the privilege as a matter of right, but his right to such renewal must depend upon whether or not a contract has been entered into between the Crown and himself entitling him to such renewal, in view of the provisions of s. 55 of c. 43, R.S.C. 1886, to the effect that no license shall be granted for a longer period than 12 months. LEASE OF CROWN LANDS—LIABILITY FOR DAMAGE CAUSED TO FIRST LESSEE.

One who leases land from the Crown, the property being already leased and occupied by another person, and who does work upon it, is liable for the damages caused to the first lessee. A clause in the first lease that the lessee abandons all recourse for damages against the Crown of any nature whatever, does not apply to the act of the Crown itself, which is bound to provide peaceable enjoyment for its lessee, and the second lessee has no greater right than his lessor himself had.

Bonhomme v. Montreal W. & P. Co., 48 Que. S.C. 486.

(§ I B-8)—SETTING ASIDE CERTIFICATE—CANCELLING LEASE.

In proceedings on behalf of the Crown to annul and cancel a certain lease of ordinance and admiralty lands, it appeared that although there was information on their files respecting litigation at one time pending in the civil courts between the defendant's predecessor in title and other parties with respect to the property demised, the officials of the Department of the Interior issued the lease in question. It appeared, however, that at the time the lease was issued the department was not aware of a judgment in one of the civil courts which decided adversely to the rights of the defendant's predecessor in title.—Held, under all the circumstances, that the lease was issued through inadvertence and im-privately and should be cancelled. The officers of the Crown should have satisfied themselves before issuing the lease that the litigation, of which there was knowledge in the department, had first been disposed of in favour of the applicant.

(§ I B-10)—TRANSFER TO OTHERS, POSSESSION CONTINUED—RIGHTS.

Where a wharf had been built on land the title to which is vested in the Crown, and the party in possession had used the property for many years in connection with a mill on the property, and subsequently transferred it to others who also went into agent has the right to reclaim possession of possession, and continued to remain in possession, the parties so in possession have a good title against every one except the true owner, and cannot be dispossessed except by one showing better title.

CROWN LANDS—CROWN LANDS AGENT—RECEIPT—POSSESSION—TITLE OF OWNERSHIP—EXPENSES AND IMPROVEMENTS—S. REF. [1909], ART. 1559, 1562.

The bearer of a receipt of the Crown lands agent has the right to reclaim possession of his land of which he has been dispossessed by a third party, and to obtain damages, even though he cannot be declared the owner of the land. When two persons are each the holders of receipt from the Crown lands agent, for the same land, the rights of the one holding the first receipt cannot be affected by the second. The claims for expenses and improvements should form the object of a defense and not of a reply to a defense.

(§ I C-15)—RESERVATION AS TO REPOSSESSION—RIGHT OF DOMINION OR PROVINCE.

In letters patent for a water-lot in the River St. Lawrence, granted by the Crown in the right of the Province of Canada in the year 1848, the Crown reserved the right to resume at any time possession of the property upon paying to the grantee the value of any improvements and erections thereon. The right so reserved was never exercised before Confederation. Held, that the right so reserved was indivisible, and could only be exercised in respect of the whole of the land mentioned in the grant and not for a part thereof. Quere: Whether the right to resume possession enures now to the Dominion Crown, or the Crown in the right of the Province of Quebec.

The Act (N.B.) 4 Geo. V, c. 36, coupled with the provisions of the Act 3 Edw. VII, c. 19, notwithstanding any previous claims that might exist on the part of any person to the land designated therein, authorizes and empowers the Minister of Lands and Mines to sell such land and to issue a Crown grant thereof, which, when issued, is perfectly good and conclusive against all the world, and a prescriptive title can be of no avail against a grant from the Crown under these special statutes.

INDIAN RESERVE—SURRENDER—TRUST—DOMINION AND PROVINCIAL POWERS.

The surrender made by the Abenakis Indians of the Coleraine Reserve, on February 14, 1882, in favour of the Dominion Government, and accepted by it, by an order-in-council of April 3, 1882, is not an abandonment pure and simple, but a trust, by virtue of which the Dominion Government obtained the right to sell these lands for the benefit of the Indians of that reserve. The Dominion Government could legally dispose of these lands by the issue of letters patent, and confer a good title on the patentee. The Provincial Government has not acquired any right in those lands by reason of that surrender.

[Quebec Forks Mining Co. v. The defendant, S., an alien, for a number of years was a homestead entrant on land in Manitoba and entitled to a patent therefor under the Dominion Lands Act. He refused to make application for the patent, because, until the patent was registered in Manitoba, the land was not subject to the payment of certain taxes, nor to the execution of judgments against such lands. He was induced to consummate the application for patent under threat of the Dominion land-office to cancel his homestead entry, and having taken out his naturalization papers and signing the application, the patent regularly issued and was mailed to him at his post-office address. It was later returned to the land-office because not called for by him. In the meantime a copy of the patent was registered against the land, whereupon the land was sold to satisfy the taxes and judgments, and thus found its way into the hands of innocent purchasers for value. Proceedings were instituted to set aside the patent and subsequent conveyances on the ground that the patent was procured by fraud and improvidently issued. Held, the Exchequer Court has no power to review or question the validity of the judgments obtained by the creditors in the Provincial Courts: that it has jurisdiction, under s. 94 of the Dominion Lands Act (7-8 Edw. VII, 1908, c. 20) and s. 31 of the Exchequer Court Act (R.S.C., 1906, c. 140) to determine the validity of the patent, and to set aside, if need be, the registration of instruments affecting the land in the registration offices of the province. The patent having been duly issued, in conformity to the provisions of s. 90 of the Dominion Lands Act, physical delivery was not essential to render it operative or effective. Upon the registration of the patent thus issued the judgment creditors of the patentee had the right to treat it as having been regularly issued and to secure a sale of the land in execution of their judgments. Under the evidence adduced, no fraud, error or improvidence was established as would warrant the avoidance of the patent under s. 94 of the Act: the fact that the patentee, in a letter to the land-office, stated his unwillingness or refusal to sign the patent papers, when he in fact did sign them, does not shew "improvidence" in issuing the patent, particularly when his object for doing so was to defeat the payment of taxes and hinder his judgment creditors.

DOMINION—VOID PATENT TO PERSON DECEASED — CANCELLATION OF CROWN GRANT.

Apart from statutory validating enactments applicable in certain cases, a Crown lands patent issued in the name of a person already deceased at the date of the grant, with habendum to him, his heirs and assigns, is a nullity even where the death is recited in the patent together with a statement that for good and sufficient reasons it is expedient to issue the grant in the name of the deceased. A Crown grant of Dominion lands which is void by reason of its having been issued in the name of a person already deceased may be set aside and cancelled by the Exchequer Court of Canada, upon the hearing of an information in that behalf exhibited in that court by the Attorney-General of Canada. The Dominion Lands Act Amendment, 60-61 Vict. (Can.) c. 29, validating certain Crown grants notwithstanding the death of the grantee before the date of the patent and directing that the lands shall vest in the "heirs, assigns, devisees or other legal representatives of such deceased person according to the laws of the province" has no application where the death of the person named in the patent as the grantee took place before the territory in which the lands were situate was erected into a "province" of the Dominion. An agent of the Government has no authority to issue a license for the cutting of timber for the purpose of commerce on Crown lands unless the limits where the timber stands had been sold at public auction. A license granted contrary thereto is void. In a contestation of such license the contestant cannot set up nonpayment by the holder of the license of his annual fees, failure to register his title, and nonrenewal of his license. In order, under arts. 1600, 1601, R.S.Q. 1909, to constitute a sufficient title to authorize the licensee to seize timber cut in the limits in possession of a person who detains them without authority, it is necessary to prove a license which the law authorizes the agent of the Government to issue and not one which he has issued illegally.

Peterborough Realty Co. v. Ferland, 26 Que. K.B. 61.

TIMBER LEASE—SURRENDER—RENEWAL—LAND ACT—PRIORITIES—PRE-EMPTION.

The plaintiff's timber lease obtained in 1902, in accordance with s. 7 of the Land Act Amendment Act, 1901, in renewal of a lease obtained in 1888, held to be subject to Crown grants made in 1893 and 1894 to pre-emptors. [Brohm v. B.C. Mills Trading Co., 7 B.C.R. 123, not followed.] The doctrine of omnia præsumentur rite acta should apply in its fullest extent in respect to the compliance with statutory conditions in the obtaining of Crown grants for purchase or pre-emption under the Land Act, and, though it may be shewn in a proper case that irregularity, error or deception have in fact led to the issuance of such a grant, yet before it can be attacked the Crown must be at least a party to the proceedings, and the issue will, in many cases, depend upon the attitude taken by the Crown.

North Pacific Lumber v. Sayward, 25 B. C.R. 322, [1918] 2 W.W.R. 771.

PRE-EMPTION—SALE—VALIDITY—"TRANSFER"—LAND ACT.

An agreement for sale of an undivided one-half interest in a pre-emption record, entered into prior to the issue of the Crown grant, comes within the definition of the word "transfer" in s. 159 of the Land Act (R.S.B.C.) 1911, c. 129, and is therefore absolutely null and void under the provisions of said section. Where there is not enough land in a township to make out the lots as surveyed, the grantee from the Crown who first takes possession of a lot is entitled to all of the lands called for in his allotment, and a subsequent grant, the boundaries of which overlap those of the prior grant, must yield to the latter. A grant by the Crown of designated numbered lots in a township excludes the inference that such lots were included in a prior grant of a township to such grant and several others, where, in the earlier grant, the land was to be subsequently allotted or laid out to each grantee by a commission to be appointed by the Crown, and such lots were not allotted by them to such grantee. A "township grant" from the Crown to many grantees is valid although it does not specify the locality of the area to which each grantee is to be entitled, reliance being placed thereon on the Provincial allotment proceedings for the location and registering of the allotments. In a case of overlapping by a subsequent grant of part of the same land passed by an earlier grant, the constructive possession of the area is in the person who has the senior or better title. Where one acquires land from a person who obtained it from the Crown by a township grant made to several grantees although it did not specify the location or the area of the land to which each grantee was entitled, the locations being afterwards allotted them by commissioners appointed by the Crown for that purpose, no subsequent allotment will be permitted to disturb the prior allotment so made or the locations of land of which possession had been taken and held.

GRANT OR PATENT.

Where a grant from the Crown containing no special clause in respect of the water power or the building of a mill, and expressly reserving to the Crown, "the free uses, passages and enjoyment of, in, over and upon all navigable waters that shall or may be hereafter found on or under or be flowing through or upon any part of the said parcel or tract of land hereby granted as aforesaid," the grantee's rights are limited by the terms of the patent and cannot be enlarged by the official correspondence and documents of the Crown Lands Department relating to the issuing of the (§ II—24)—CONFLICTING GRANTS FROM THE CROWN — RIPARIAN LANDS — AD MEDIUM FILIUM.

In the province of Quebec, watercourses which are capable merely of floating loose logs (flottables à bûches perdues) are not dependencies of the "domaine public" under the designation of "navigable and floatable rivers and streams" within the meaning of art. 400 C.C. (Que.); consequently, the owners of the adjoining riparian lands under a Crown grant extending to the stream as a boundary are the proprietors of the banks and beds of such streams each ad medium filium, and, as such proprietors, are entitled to maintain an action to declare void the title of the holder of a subsequent Crown grant purporting to give title adversely to them to the water lots fronting the river banks at the locus in quo, and to restrain such holder from erecting works thereon for utilizing the water power.

III. Assessments.B. NATURE AND IMPROVEMENT.*(§ III B—20)—NATURE OF IMPROVEMENT.

In the case of a general work benefiting the whole of a number of bodies or divisions of marsh, such as a dam, aboiteau, etc., there is nothing to prevent the selection by the proprietors of the whole area of a commissioner for the purpose of constructing or repairing such work, and the cost may be assessed directly upon the proprietors within the whole area, notwithstanding the authority for other purposes of the commissioners of the various bodies contained within such area. Where for a long period of years one of the proprietors of land lying within one or more of the bodies or divisions contained within such area, and his predecessors in title, have assented to this method of carrying on the work, and the work has been regarded as necessary for the protection of this particular area, such proprietor will not be permitted to contest his liability to pay the amount assessed upon him on the ground that other outside areas are also benefited and that they should have been included. The word "reclaim" as used in c. 80 of the Acts of 1893 extends to marsh lands that have been already dyked as well as to lands which have not yet been dyked. The Act repealing the County of Cumberland Sewers Act provided in respect to "any pending matter or thing" that "proceedings may be continued either under the Marsh Act (R.S. 1900, c. 66) or under the Act hereby repealed."—Held, that the word "proceedings" where used was to be given the same meaning as in the Interpretation Act, R.S. 1900, c. 1, s. 15. The County of Cumberland Sewers Act of 1893, c. 80, s. 5, provided for the appointment by the commissioner "from among the proprietors of such lands" of one or more overseers. Held merely directory and that the commissioner would be justified in appointing as an overseer a person who was not a proprietor. A rate will not be set aside on account of a clerical error as to the amount, which can be corrected by the court on certiorari or otherwise. [Re Bishop's Dyke, 20 N.S.R. 263, distinguished.]

Where a municipality has by law the right to construct works of a permanent nature and obtain from a watercourse the necessary power to light a town, and to acquire by expropriation, land necessary for the completion of the works, it has no right to pay a yearly indemnity based on the value of the crop for damages caused by inundation of the land of an adjoining owner, but must expropriate the land and pay the indemnity in advance.

Where there has been no expropriation by the Crown of any easement to flood the land of a riparian owner, the injury or damage suffered by the latter from flooding, as a result of the construction of a dam by the Crown, is not actionable under the provisions of the Expropriation Act. Nor is it actionable under ss. 19 or 20 of the Exchequer Court Act; the land being situate over 50 miles from the dam, cannot be regarded as "on a public work," and no evidence being adduced that the injury resulted from the negligence of an officer or servant of the Crown acting within the scope of his duties or employment.

(§ I—1)—PRIVATE RELATOR—AUTHORITY OF JUDGE AT CHAMBERS.

An information in the nature of a quo warranto at the instance of a private relator is an "action" within the meaning of O. 52 of the Judicature Act, 1909, and a motion for a rule made to the court on previous notice to the parties affected thereby, and not by an ex parte application for a rule nisi. A Judge at Chambers has no power to grant an order nisi for an information in the nature of a quo warranto.

(§ II B—25)—MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS—DISQUALIFICATION OF COUNCILLOR.

A municipal councillor who hires his horses for work on the public roads done by direction of and under the superintendence of an overseer appointed by the council, does not, ipso facto, incur forfeiture of his seat which must first be declared vacant in the manner provided by art. 207 Mun. Code. Until that is done a writ of quo warranto against him does not lie. A councillor who gratuitously lends his horses to an inspector of highways for work done under art. 405

Mun. Code violates no law and incurs no forfeiture.

Damon v. Lamy, 44 Que. S.C. 489.

C. AS TO OFFICE.

(§ II C—30)—After the close of a municipal nomination under the Manitoba Municipal Act, R.S.M. 1902, c. 116, and after having granted a poll to take the votes for the respective candidates, the returning officer is functus officio as to the nomination and has no jurisdiction on a succeeding day to withdraw the order for a polling of the votes or to declare one of the candidates elected on the ground of disqualification of his opponent as being already an office-holder of the same municipality; there has been no "election," either at the nomination or at the polls, which could be questioned by an election petition under the Manitoba Municipal Act and the proper method of contesting the right to the office which the candidate so declared elected had assumed to fill, is by quo warranto. [Re St. Vital Municipal Election; Tod v. Mager (Decision No. 1), 1 D.L.R. 565, 20 W.L.R. 537, affirmed, as to the right to proceed by quo warranto but on a different ground.] Under subs. (c) s. 217 of the Manitoba Municipal Act, providing that a municipal election may be questioned by an election petition on the ground that the person whose election is questioned was not duly elected by a majority of lawful votes and under s. 218 of the Act providing that any election shall not be questioned on any of the grounds mentioned in s. 217 except by petition, quo warranto will not lie to question a municipal election on that ground. When after two candidates for a municipal office are nominated, objection on the ground of disqualification is made to one of the candidates and the returning officer improperly gives effect to this objection and declares the other candidate elected without the votes being taken, the right to the office is properly tried upon an information in the nature of quo warranto.

An allegation on information and belief in an affidavit filed by the relator in proceedings to contest an election, that the municipal councillor whose election is questioned is not a British subject either by birth or naturalization is not admissible under Con. R. 518 requiring affidavits to be confined to a statement of facts within the deponent's knowledge, the quo warranto motion not being an interlocutory one so as to warrant the admission of affidavits on information and belief.

Where a statute enacts that certain persons only are eligible for office, it also means that persons who are not capable are not eligible of holding such office, and the fact that their election has not been contested does not deprive interested parties from taking quo warranto proceedings and this whether such incapacity be a statutory or common law incapacity.

—RIGHT OF APPLICANT TO PROCEED TO JUDGMENT—C.C.P., ARTS. 982, 990, C.

MUN. ARTS. 227, 228.

The applicant, in quo warranto proceedings, with the object of excluding from a public office a person who holds it illegally, has the right to proceed to judgment on the merits of his application, although the respondent has withdrawn from his office. He is not bound to give up this procedure on account of offers, followed by the deposit in the clerk's office of a certificate of the withdrawal of the respondent and of the amount of the costs thus far incurred in the action.

SHERIFF — RESIGNATION — EXPENSES —

C.C.P., ARTS. 77, 987, 990, 1549.

When a writ of "quo warranto" is issued against a sheriff holding and exercising his position illegally, and when the latter resigns immediately, his resignation being accepted by the municipal council, and where he tenders and deposits the expenses of proceedings taken against him; the plaintiff no longer has an interest to proceed. If he persists, his action will be maintained only until the expenses deposited have been exhausted and will be rejected for the surplus, with costs of settling the accounts of the defense, inclusively.

Brousseau v. Latraverse, 25 Rev. Leg. 231.

DISPOSSESSING MUNICIPAL OFFICERS — ALDERMEN — INSCRIPTION EN DROIT — EXCEPTION TO FORM.

The right to demand by "quo warranto" that an alderman or municipal councillor who usurps that position may be dispossessed of it is a right which pertains to every municipal elector, and it is not necessary that the municipal elector who demands this dispossession for want of electoral status should proceed in the ordinary way for contesting the municipal election.

In any case this ground raised by inscription en droit should have been by exception to the form. It is not permissible to proceed by petition accompanying a writ of "quo warranto" in order to demand that an election be set aside and another person declared elected in the place and stead of one who is charged with usurping the position. Latomir v. Lefebvre, 47 Que. S.C. 261.

DISQUALIFICATION OF ALDERMAN—INTEREST IN CONTRACT — LESSER OF MARKET STALL.

The city of Moncton Incorporation Act, 53 Viet. c. 60, s. 6, provides that no person shall be qualified to act as alderman "who has any interest in any contract made with the council," and where an alderman of the city was shewn to be a member of a firm occupying a market stall owned by the city and holding a butcher's license from the city, which license could be cancelled by the city council for violation of the market by-laws, the court granted a writ of quo warranto calling on the alderman to shew by what authority he exercised his office.

Ex parte Gallagher; Re Fryers, 41 N.B. R. 545.

ELECTION OF SCHOOL COMMISSIONER—CONTESTATION OF ELECTION.

It is not a case for a quo warranto against the election of a school commissioner when the reasons alleged in the petition have nothing to say regarding the qualification of the candidate elected, to his permanent, temporary, or relative incapacity, or to his ineligibility, but are simply illegal and fraudulent acts committed by partisans and by the presiding officer of the election even though these acts are sufficient to have the election annulled on a contestation, in virtue of the school code.

Lottain v. Lavolette, 46 Que. S.C. 316.
CONTESTING MUNICIPAL ELECTION — PARTIES.

It is not illegal to join several defendants in the one proceeding for a writ of quo warranto when the complaints alleged against them are identical and based upon the same acts. Although an election of councillors held under the Mun. Code cannot be contested by way of quo warranto, this remedy is nevertheless well founded if the plaintiff allege facts which tend to shew that there was in fact no election at all.

Olivier v. Roger, 52 Que. S.C. 86. [Affirmed 53 Que. S.C. 136.]

AGAINST SCHOOL COMMISSIONER.

Quo warranto will not lie against a school commissioner on account of fraudulent misconduct in office.

Carriere v. Perrault, 51 Que. S.C. 237.
To constitute a contract between a municipal corporation and a councillor there must be a mutual obligation. Such does not exist in the case where a mayor, for pay, supervises the construction of works ordered by the corporation but executed and paid for by the Colonization Department of the Province. Assuming that the mayor is disqualified in such a case a writ of quo warranto issued against him will be quashed if at the time it is issued the contract had ceased to exist.

Carignan v. Neault, 14 Que. P.R. 14.
QUO WARRANTO — MUNICIPAL COUNCILOR — VALUATION ROLL — ELECTORAL QUALIFICATION — TESTIMONIAL PROOF — C. MUN., ART. 228.

By art. 228, C. Mun. Code, it is the land valuation as shown on the municipal valuation roll in force which determines the electoral qualification required for members of the council. No testimonial proof can be admitted to establish that the true value of immovables constituting the landed qualification of a councillor is greater than that carried on the valuation roll.

A motion for leave to file an information in the nature of a quo warranto against a stipendiary magistrate on the ground that he had not taken the oath of allegiance will be dismissed if the oath of allegiance has been since taken by him, although he had acted as a magistrate in the meantime; and the motion is properly refused without considering whether or not the oath is essential.

Under Consolidated Municipal Act, 3 Edw. VII. (Ont.) c. 19, s. 220, providing that in proceedings to contest the election of certain municipal officers, upon the relator shewing by affidavit reasonable ground for supposing that the election was not legal, etc., the judge shall authorize the relator upon entering into a sufficient recognizance to serve a notice of motion to determine the matter and under s. 222 of the Act requiring the relator before serving the notice to file all the material upon which he intends to rely, an application upon the hearing of the motion to file such recognizance is too late. Under s. 220, proceedings may be instituted if within six weeks after the election or one month after acceptance of office by the person elected, the relator shews reasonable ground for suspicion that the election was not legal, etc. The applica-

I. IN GENERAL.

II. JURISDICTION.

I. In general.

(§ I-1) — BRIDGE — TRAFFIC — RAILWAY AND HIGHWAY — AGREEMENT — PROTECTION.

Under an agreement with the Provincial Government of Saskatchewan, a railway bridge was erected by the respondent company over the North Saskatchewan river, with a 12 foot roadway on each side clear of the railway track, and separated from it by a fence admitted to be safe and satisfactory for the purpose. There was no provision in the agreement for protection to vehicular traffic from trains passing over the bridge. The Board refused an application by an adjoining municipality for an order, that the respondent should provide gates and watchmen at both ends of the bridge to warn the public against approaching trains, holding that the necessity for such protection was incidental to the use of the bridge as a highway.

Buckland v. C.N.R. Co., 23 Can. Ry. Cas. 13.

HIGHWAY — CLOSED — PEDESTRIAN AND VEHICULAR SUBWAY — GRADE SEPARATION — APPORTIONMENT OF COSTS — CONSTRUCTION — RAILWAY GRADE CROSSING FUND.

A municipality and a railway company by agreement (ratified by by-law) closed a portion of a highway, except for foot traffic. More than 10 years after the highway was closed the municipality, alleging an improvident bargain, applied to the Board for an order requiring the respondent to construct a vehicular and pedestrian subway under the railway at the closed portion of the highway. The Board ordered the railway company to contribute 60 per cent of the cost of the pedestrian subway, after allowing a 20 per cent contribution out of the Railway Grade Crossing Fund, but held that as to vehicular traffic the agreement must stand and that if the city wished to construct a vehicular subway, the contribution of the respondent should not be increased.

CONNECTION — TRAFFIC — INTERCHANGE — EXPENSE.

An interchange track between the lines of the C.P.R. Co. and a branch line of the G.T.P.R. Co. was ordered by the Board to be constructed at Forrest, 10 miles from Brandon, at the expense of the G.T.P.R. Co. in order to give Brandon a connection with the latter railway.

TRAFFIC — INTERCHANGE — INTERSWITCHING — FACILITIES — PUBLIC INTEREST — APPORTIONMENT OF COST — RAILWAY ACT, s. 228.

The Board under s. 228 of the Railway Act, 1906, grants, to any person or persons interested, interchange tracks and inter-switching facilities, not for the purpose of benefiting one railway company at the expense of another, but solely in the public interest, the cost of providing such facilities to be borne by the applicant industry, and the railway company to whose tracks access is desired. SIDINGS — RIGHT-OF-WAY — LOCATION — JURISDICTION — APPROVAL — HIGHWAY CROSSED BY RAILWAY — TRAFFIC — ADEQUATE AND SUITABLE ACCOMMODATION.

Subject to the jurisdiction of the Board in respect of adequate and suitable accommodation for traffic, the railway company may, after the route map has been approved, locate its tracks upon its own right-of-way without approval from the Board as to the location of these tracks, except where high-ways are crossed.

(§ 1-3)—SHIPPERS—PRIVILEGES—MILLING, MALTING, STORAGE AND CLEANING IN TRANSIT—TOLLS—UNJUST DISCRIMINATION.

Milling, malting, storage and cleaning in transit are privileges accorded to shippers by the carriers in the sense that the Board cannot order them, except to prevent discrimination, but they become enforceable rights when set out in tariffs under which shipments are made.

(§ 1-4)—SIDINGS—RIGHT-OF-WAY—REMOVAL—RELOCATION—LEAVE—INDUSTRIES—FACILITIES—C.L.

When industries have become dependent upon C.L. facilities afforded by a particular track (other than a team track) located wholly on the railway right-of-way, such track should not be removed or relocated, if the parties do not agree, without leave of the Board.

CAR SERVICE—TRAFFIC—EARNINGS—UNREMNERATIVE—OPERATING COSTS.

(§ II A—14)—SPURS—CONSTRUCTION—OWNERSHIP—AGREEMENT—RAILWAY ACT, s. 222.

A spur line constructed under s. 222 of the Railway Act, 1906, does not become part of the railway from whose line it is built under the provisions of an agreement with the owner providing that the railway company furnish the rails, ties and fastenings, which remain their property, and the owner provides the right-of-way, even if no reference is made to such agreement in the Board's order authorizing the construction of the spur, and the Board has no jurisdiction to authorize an adjoining owner to use such spur. RAILWAY ON HIGHWAY—LANDS INJURIOUSLY AFFECTED—DAMAGES.

Damages have never yet been allowed by the Board to an adjoining land owner for the construction of an electric railway along a highway. EASEMENT — COMPENSATION — CROSSING—OVERHEAD AND UNDERGROUND WIRES.

The practice of the Board has been to allow the right of way of railway companies to be crossed by the construction overhead or underground of lines of wires or water-pipes and other pipes without compensation, the Board's order merely creates an easement which can be cancelled or varied as occasion may require from time to time.

(§ II—20) — MUNICIPAL IMPROVEMENT — GRADES—DOMINION FRANCHISES — APPOINTMENT OF COST.

The jurisdiction of the Board is confined in cases of separation of grades to the public interest in so far as Dominion franchises are concerned and the proper administration of them by Dominion railway companies. It is not the business of the Board to decide an issue of municipal expediency, whether or not municipalities should make certain improvements in cases where the whole cost will be on the municipality.

GRADE CROSSINGS — ELIMINATION — CLOSING HIGHWAY.

The Board is empowered by the Railway Act, 1906, s. 238, as amended by 8 & 9 Edw. VII. c. 32, s. 5, to act upon its own motion to facilitate the elimination or diminishing of grade crossings; and for this purpose authority is conferred upon the Board to order that part of a highway be closed or to require the proper municipal authority to close it. Under ss. 8, 59, 227, 237, 238, of the Railway Act 1906, the Board has jurisdiction, in the interest of public safety, to order that a railway crossing of a highway should be protected or that the grades be separated, and to apportion the cost between Dominion and provincial railway companies and municipalities interested in the works ordered. Where the Board ordered a separation of grades and made a contribution from the grade crossing fund, the remainder of the cost was apportioned between the parties interested. [Re C.P.R. The Board has no jurisdiction under the Railway Act, 1906 (ss. 30, 268, 270, 307), to prevent the use by railway companies of any specific time, unless such use is shewn to be against the comfort, convenience and safety of the traveling public and railway employees. The Daylight Saving Act, 1918, according to the ordinary canons of construction remains in force until repealed. Parliament having stated its intention that the operation of the Daylight Saving Act should not extend beyond the year 1918, it is inadvisable that the Board should under all the circumstances take any action under it. The Board is both a judicial and administrative body, its jurisdiction is largely discretionary and in some instances legislative in its character. Re Daylight Saving Act, 1918, 24 Can. Ry. PROTECTION OF CROSSINGS — APPORTIONMENT OF COSTS.

The Board, in ordering the elimination of a level crossing and the substitution of a subway therefor, for purposes of public safety, has jurisdiction under the Railway Act, 1906, to direct a portion of the cost to be borne by a street railway company benefited or affected by such order. The power of the Board to make such order is not affected by an existing agreement whereby the company obtained rights to lay tracks.

(§ II—35) — TELEPHONE RATES — USE OF LONG DISTANCE LINES.

The Board has power under the Railway Act, 1906, to authorize an additional toll to the established rates of a telephone company for the use of its long distance lines; to order compensation for loss in local exchange business occasioned by giving independent companies long distance connection; to authorize payment of a special rate by competing companies obtaining long distance connection, though not subscribing noncompeting companies to a like toll.

Greenfield Conduit Co. v. Hetherington, 16 Can. Ry. Cas. 444.

ACQUISITION OF LANDS — SPUR.

Where a spur is built by a railway company, under an order of the Board, to handle C.L. traffic, the carrier has fulfilled its obligations when it places a car on the spur for discharging or receiving of traffic. The Board has no jurisdiction to direct the respondent to acquire land on such spur for the purpose of leasing it to the applicants for a coal shed site.

Forward v. C.P.R. Co., 19 Can. Ry. Cas. 434.

UNAUTHORIZED CONSTRUCTION OF SPUR-TRACK — TRESPASS ON LANDS OF COMPLAINANT — JURISDICTION OF BOARD — CLAIM FOR DAMAGES.

Upon a complaint of a landowner that the railway company had run a spur-track through his land, using part of his land to obtain water, and damaging his crops, it appeared that no order had been obtained from the Board authorizing the spur-track, and that no proceedings for expropriation had been taken by the company under the Railway Act:—Held, that the company was merely a trespasser, and the Board had no jurisdiction to award the complainant damages for the trespass.

AS TO CONSTITUTIONALITY — PROVINCIAL CARRIERS.

It is not the function of the Board to decide whether a section of the Railway Act Amendment (8 & 9 Edw. VII. c. 32, s. 5A), giving it jurisdiction over a provincial carrier is ultra vires or not.

(§ II—42)—VALIDITY OF ORDERS — PUBLICATION.

Publication in the "Canada Gazette" is not a condition precedent to the operation of an order of the Board even as regards general orders affecting the public; s. 31 of the Railway Act requires that judicial notice shall be taken of an order published by the Board or by leave of the Board, but in other cases the order may be proved by a certified copy under s. 69 of the Railway Act. (§ II—43)—JURISDICTION — BRIDGE — HIGHWAY AND RAILWAY — PEDESTRIAN — TRAFFIC — PUBLIC WAYS AND COMMUNICATIONS — RAILWAY ACT, s. 59.

The Board has only such jurisdiction as is given it by the express terms of the statute or by the necessary implications therefrom. Section 59 of the Railway Act, 1906, does not confer jurisdiction on the Board to order a combined highway and railway bridge. The Board having found upon the evidence that the respondent built the extensions on either side of a railway bridge for the pedestrian use of the public, it was held that the footpaths so provided were, in fact, public ways and communications. The Board has no jurisdiction to discipline or remove an employee of a railway or telephone company, the matter is entirely one of internal management of the company. [Tinkess v. (§ II—46)—JURISDICTION—APPROVAL—ASSESSMENT—SURFACE WATER—DRAINAGE—RAILWAY ACT, s. 250.

Under s. 250 of the Railway Act, 1906, the only matter open to the Board is to approve of the character of the drainage work on the railroad property, having regard to its sufficiency for railway operation, and the safety of the traveling public. Ordinarily, the Board does not interfere with an assessment under a by-law passed in accordance with the appropriate Act, and has no jurisdiction to do so, except where there are special circumstances. Where the railway company executed works for carrying the water under the railway and interfered with the culverts which formerly carried the water, so as to lessen their capacity, the company was directed to construct suitable culverts under its line of railway.

(§ II—47)—JURISDICTION OF PROVINCIAL BOARD—WORK FOR GENERAL ADVANTAGE OF CANADA—WHAT IS.

Section 306 of the Railway Act, 1888, which declares certain named railways to be "works for the general advantage of Canada," only applies to the particular railways enumerated in the section and their branch lines, but does not apply to an electric railway that only crosses one of the railways named therein; consequently such railway is not subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the Dominion Parliament, but it remains subject to the authority of the Legislature of the Province of Ontario by which it was incorporated, and to the orders of the provincial railway board.

JURISDICTION—CONTRACT AND CIVIL RIGHTS—SEPARATION OF GRADES.

The Board does not pass on matters of contract and civil rights between the parties concerned in the work of grade separation, but only directs by which party the work authorized or ordered shall be done, leaving it to that party to carry out the work properly and without undue expense, and without interference by the Board except for the purpose of seeing that its order is properly carried out.

JURISDICTION—CLEARANCES ON DOMINION RAILWAYS—STEAM OR ELECTRICITY.

The Board has jurisdiction over all clearances on Dominion railways, whether operated by steam or electricity. Under special circumstances a clearance, in the case of poles already erected of 7 feet, 3 inches, was approved, upon the company undertaking to keep its employees off the side of the cars on that side of the track on which the poles are erected, the clearance for unerected poles to be 7 feet, 6 inches.

JURISDICTION—EMINENT DOMAIN—LANDS OF PROVINCIAL RAILWAY—LOCATION PLAN.

To the extent necessary to give effect to the purpose of the Dominion incorporation, the Board has jurisdiction under the Railway Act, 1906, to authorize the expropriation by a Dominion railway company of lands of a provincial railway company, either by an order approving location plan, under s. 159, or in a proper case, by order, e.g., under s. 178, in the same manner as lands of individuals.

POWERS OF—COMPELLING RIGHT OF WAY TO PUBLIC ACROSS RAILWAY—RAILWAY CROSSED BY HIGHWAY—OPENING—RIGHT-OF-WAY.

The Board will not invoke its compulsory powers to compel a railway company to supply a right-of-way across its own lands for a municipal highway to be used for highway purposes quite irrespective of railway purposes.

Courtney v. Esquimalt & Nanaimo R. Co., 18 Can. Ry. Cas. 384.

JURISDICTION TO GRANT CROSSING—HIGHWAY CROSSED BY RAILWAY—PUBLIC INTEREST.

The Board, in granting permission under s. 237 of the Railway Act, 1906, to a railway company to cross a highway against the protest of the municipality, must be satisfied that the crossing is in the public interest—e.g., that additional facilities are necessary—but it has no jurisdiction to require, as a condition of granting the crossing, the acquisition of additional lands.

Canadian Northern Quebec R. Co. v. Montreal, 18 Can. Ry. Cas. 389.

JURISDICTION—MUNICIPAL IMPROVEMENT—SEPARATION OF GRADES—DOMINION FRANCHISES.

The jurisdiction of the Board is confined in cases of separation of grades to the public interest in so far as Dominion franchises are concerned and the proper administration of them by Dominion railway companies. It is not the business of the Board to decide an issue of municipal expediency, whether or not municipalities should make certain improvements in cases where the whole cost will be on the municipality.

Winnipeg v. C.P.R. Co., 18 Can. Ry. Cas. 317.

JURISDICTION—REOPENING TELEPHONE PAY STATION—UNJUST DISCRIMINATION.

The powers conferred on the Board in regard to telephone companies are not necessarily identical with those conferred in respect of railway companies. The powers of the Board with regard to the former are defined and restricted by 7-8 Edw. VII. c. 61, part 1, s. 5. The Board has no jurisdiction to order the reopening of a telephone pay station, although such an application may be justified under the provisions of the Act against unjust discrimination.

(§ I—1)—RIGHT OF DOMINION RAILWAY TO BUILD ON UNUSED RIGHT-OF-WAY OF PROVINCIAL RAILWAY.

RIGHT OF WAY—SUBSIDY LANDS.

There is a marked distinction between lands granted for right of way and other railway purposes and these granted as subsidies; the latter are in the same position as a cash bonus, and part of the remuneration for the building of the railway. MORTGAGE TO SECURE BONDHOLDERS—FOREIGN JUDGMENT—MERGER—PRIORITIES—"WORKING EXPENDITURE"—"ANY SUBSEQUENT TRANSACTION, MATTER OR THING"—"RENTS AND REVENUES."

By the Act incorporating the defendant railway company, 50 Vict. c. 76, s. 18 (O.), the directors were authorized to issue bonds and to secure the same by mortgaging the undertaking in the manner provided by the Railway Act of Ontario, the provisions of which were made applicable. A mortgage having been made in 1910, and an action brought to enforce it, a claim to priority over the claims of the bondholders was made by the assignee of a judgment recovered in a foreign court in 1912, upon a claim for damages for injury sustained in 1911 by a passenger by reason of the defendant company's negligence. Held, that the judgment was not merged and gone because sued upon in Ontario. By s. 44 of the Railway Act of Ontario, 6 Edw. VII. c. 30, a mortgage to secure bondholders is to be a charge on the property, assets, rents and revenues of the company, present or future, "but such rents and revenues shall be subject . . .

to the payment of the working expenditure of the railway;" and, by s. 45, the bonds are made a first charge on the company and its property, save as provided in s. 44. In 1913 the Railway Act was revised and amended, 3 & 4 Geo. V. c. 36, and by that Act (s. 48) the mortgage charge was made subject to the payment of the "working expenditure of the railway." Held, that the effect of the change as to make "working expenditure" a charge on all the assets of the company having priority over the mortgage, instead of a prior charge on "rents and revenues" only. And held, having regard to the provisions of the interpretation s. 2 (24) of the earlier Act, that the claim upon the judgment was a "working expense" of the railway. [Re Wrexham Mold and Connah's Quay R. Co., [1900] 3 Ch. 436, distinguished.] But, even assuming a favour of the claimant that the rights of the bondholders were subject to displacement by legislation giving priority to working expenses, held, that a prior charge on capital was given only "as regards any subsequent transaction, matter or thing" (Interpretation Act, 7 Edw. VII. c. 2, s. 7, para. 48 (b)), and this claim could not be regarded as a "subsequent transaction, matter or thing;" and so the claimant's priority was confined to "rents and revenues." [Kilgour v. London Street R. Co., 19 D.L.R. 827, 30 O.L.R. 603, followed.] Semble, that the assumption that the security of the bondholders might be impaired by subsequent legislation was not too favourable to the claimant. [Barnhill v. Hampton & St. Martins R. Co., 3 N.B. Eq. 371, not followed.] The claimant was given an opportunity of establishing her prior charge against funds representing rents and revenues of the company which had been used for capital expenses.

The provisions of the Railway Act, 1906, as to the organization of railway companies and the amount of stock subscriptions are provisions made for the protection of the public and must be strictly followed. Under the Act, provisional directors of a railway company have no right to carry on the business of the undertaking, their powers being limited to those specifically defined by s. 81, subs. 3 of the Act, to merely opening stock books, receiving and safely depositing stock subscriptions, making plans and surveys.

SENIOR AND JUNIOR—TITLE—RIGHT-OF-WAY.

When a railway company has secured a right-of-way, its tracks on that right-of-way, no matter when laid, are always senior to those of any railway company desiring to cross such right-of-way. [G.T.P.R. Co. v. C.P.R. Co. (Nokomis Crossing Case), 7 Can. Ry. Cas. 299, followed; C.N.R. Co. v. C.P.R. Co. (Kaiser Crossing Case), 11 Can. Ry. Cas. 432, distinguished.]

FRANCHISES.

The sale or conveyance of lands for right of way permitted under the Railway Act from institutes to railway companies, is binding upon the substitutes, notwithstanding violation of the rules respecting payment of the consideration money. Hence, when the company has paid the consideration money to the institute, instead of paying him the annual rent thereon, the substitute has no recourse against the railway company other than a right to recover his share of the consideration money, as determined at the time of the sale. He cannot claim, at the opening of the substitution, his share of the accrued value of the land sold.

(§ 1-7)—SUBSIDIES—TRANSFEEE COMPLETING WORK.

A statute authorizing the payment of a subsidy for completing the construction of a line of railway, entitles a company, as the successor of another company who had commenced the work, to receive subsidy in respect of that portion of the road forming part of the subsidized line which had been constructed by the other company.

Quebec, Montreal & Southern R. Co. v. The King, 29 D.L.R. 466, 53 Can. S.C.R. 275, reversing 15 Can. Ex. 237.

RAILWAY SUBSIDY—DUTY OF GOVERNMENT AS TO DISTRIBUTION—PENDING LITIGATION.

A Provincial Government empowered by statute with the distribution of funds under a railway subsidy contract is not justified in making payments thereon pending an action for the determination of the respective rights relative thereto and of which the Government had full notice. The proper course to be pursued by the Crown in a case where it is charged with the distribution of certain funds under a railway subsidy contract that is being litigated and a receiver appointed is either to apply to the court for a construction of the contract, and to pay accordingly, or to pay the whole amount over to the receiver to be paid out under orders of court.

A stipulation in a contract for the sale of a railway that the balance of the purchase price is to be paid from time to time to the extent of 50 per cent in Government subsidies points to the payment of the balance out of subsidies paid in respect of the residue over and above 50 per cent, not to the payment of the entirety of 50 per cent of the subsidies, as a condition precedent to a demand for payment of so much as has been paid and for an accounting thereof.

CONSOLIDATION.
Application under s. 361 of the Railway Act, 1906, for a recommendation by the board to the Governor-in-Council for the sanction of amalgamation agreements between Dominion and provincial railway companies. The Montreal Park & Island and Montreal Terminal Ry. Cos. were incorporated by the Parliament of Canada, and the Montreal Street Ry. Co., by a statute of the Province of Quebec. Agreements were made between the 3 companies apparently pursuant to the authority given in two special Acts of the Dominion incorporating the first two railway companies for the sale of these railways with their facilities and assets to the provincial railway. (1) That under ss. 361, 362 (which must be read together) the board has no jurisdiction to deal with the amalgamations of railway companies incorporated under Dominion and provincial statutes. (2) That the proper mode of procedure would be to apply as provided by the special Acts for sanction of the agreements to the Governor-in-Council.

RAILWAY ACT, R.S.C. 1906, c. 37, ss. 226, 284, 317 — REASONABLE FACILITIES — FAILURE TO PROVIDE SIDING — PRESCRIPTIVE RIGHT TO SIDING — COSTS REFUSED BY BOARD.

Plaintiff shipped produce from his warehouse over defendant's siding for 35 years. In order to provide increased accommodation, defendant in September, 1910, moved the siding some thirty feet away. Plaintiff applied to the Board to compel the defendant to provide a siding to his warehouse, and a consent order was made by the Board that the defendant move plaintiff's warehouse to a site near the siding in its new position. This was done in May, 1911. In an action for damages for depriving plaintiff of reasonable facilities between September and May; after verdict for the plaintiff:—Held, plaintiff could not acquire a prescriptive right to the use of the siding. There is no finding and no evidence to support a finding by the jury that defendant wrongfully refused or neglected to provide plaintiff with reasonable facilities for his traffic. A consent order represents the agreement of the parties thereto and not the judgment of the court making the order. The costs of application to the Board having been refused by the Board cannot be recovered in any other court.

CONSTRUCTION OF SPUR LINE FOR SHIPPER — EXPENSE — PROVISION FOR PAYMENT — DETERMINATION BY BOARD — RAILWAY ACT, s. 226.

When an order is made by the Board for the construction of a spur line for the accommodation of a shipper, under s. 226 of the Railway Act, 1906, the question as to payment of expenses should be dealt with by the Board—not only the question as to work or practices which may in the future mean expenditure, but also the disposition of the resultant cost.

The Board cannot, 7 years after the filing and approval of the location plans of a railway, by an order not based on a 162 or 167 of the Railway Act, 1906, permit the filing of a new plan to take effect as of the date of the original, so as to increase the width of the company's right-of-way.

Section 235 of the Railway Act, 1906, as amended by 1-2 Geo. V. c. 22, s. 6, does not make the payment or tender of the amount of damages the land would suffer by the building of the railway, on the highway a condition precedent to the building of such railway. The section does not give the court jurisdiction to award damages due to noise, smoke and vibration caused by operation of the railway; any such claim should be made by application to the Board.

NEGLECTANCE — RAILWAY YARD — SWITCH STAND TOO NEAR TO TRACK.

In an action by a freight conductor in the employ of the defendant company for damages for injuries sustained while making a flying or drop switch, the jury found that there was no negligence on the part of the plaintiff, but that the defendants were guilty of negligence in building the switch which the plaintiff was operating at the time of his injury. Haultain, C.J.S., on appeal held that in view of the evidence, which was conflicting, the verdict could not be said to be perverse and should not be disturbed. Newlands, J.A., thought that, the jury having held that the defendants were guilty of negligence, in having the switch too near the track, not for all purposes but for the purpose of performing the operation in which the plaintiff was injured and that operation being a proper one to be performed, at the time and having been properly performed, the verdict should not be disturbed. Lamont and Elwood, J.J.A., held that, according to the evidence, the cause of the accident was the cutting away of the engine from the cars at a point too close to the switch and whoever was responsible for this was guilty of the negligence which caused the accident. Also, the defendants could not be said to be negligent in placing the switch-stand when it was done under the advice of their railway experts, with whose opinions nearly all the experts at the trial agreed, juries could not be allowed to set up a standard which should dictate the practice of railway companies in the conduct of their business and the verdict should be set aside.

HIGHWAY—SENIOR AND JUNIOR RULE—SUBWAY—APPORTIONMENT OF COST.

A street having been opened across the right-of-way of the respondent, the applicant was given permission by the Board to construct and maintain a subway under the railway at its own expense and the respondent, under the senior and junior rule, was not ordered to contribute to the expense, but if the applicant agrees to close a neighbouring street, notwithstanding this rule and that the equities as well as the title are in the respondent's favour, the cost of the subway will be apportioned equally between the applicant and respondent.

TRACKS—PAVING—AGREEMENT—APPORTIONMENT OF COST.

Where a railway company laid "T" rails for an electric railway upon the street of a municipality under an agreement and confirmatory by-law containing the provision "the said rails to be level with the existing roadbed and that gravel be placed and maintained in good order by the company between the rails and two feet on either side thereof," such company is not bound at the request of the municipality, at a later date, to construct a permanent foundation of any character and pave between the rails. The Board has jurisdiction under ss. 5 and 26A (8 & 9 Edw. VII. c. 32) and may authorize the municipality at its own expense to change the railway grade to conform to the altered grade of the highway and, if it desires, to surface the railway right of way in the same way and with the same foundations as the adjacent highway, the railway company contributing such portion of the cost as represents its contract liability to lay gravel between the tracks and two feet on either side thereof.

Cas. 233, distinguished.] The fact that the order of the Board of Railway Commissioners does not govern the location of switch stands of a certain height, constructed according to good railway practice, does not justify a railway company placing such a stand so close to passing cars, that it is dangerous to switchmen.

BLASTING—LIABILITY.

A railway company specially authorized by Dominion Act (2 Geo. NOISE—MUNICIPAL BY-LAW—SMOKE FROM LOCOMOTIVES—PROVINCIAL COURTS.

Unless it can be established that a railway company, in carrying on its undertaking authorized by Parliament upon its own property, in a manner which is calculated to do as little harm to adjacent owners as possible, is not exercising as much care as it might, to lessen the noise of operation, the Board has no jurisdiction to interfere. It is not incumbent upon the Board to summon offending parties before the courts of the Province for violation of its own order and a municipal by-law regulating the emission of smoke from railway locomotives.

TAKING GRAVEL—TRESPASS.

Where a railway company, in entering upon land and removing soil therefrom for the purposes of the railway, does not ignore the owner or make the entry defiantly or contemptuously of him, but is reasonably justified, because of their negotiations with him or his agent, in assuming that it is acting with his consent, or, at any rate, that there will be little or no difficulty in reaching a satisfactory adjustment of the price to be paid for the soil removed, it cannot be said that the company is a trespasser. Where the wires of a telephone company crossing the line of a railway company, which is changing its system of operation from steam to electricity, require to be raised, the railway being senior in construction, the telephone company must bear the cost of raising its wires where the fee of the property crossed is in the railway company, but at highways where the only right of the railway company is to cross with its tracks, the telephone company is senior with its construction to the railway company's new overhead wires and the latter must bear the cost of raising the telephone wires. London Railway Commission v. Bell Tel. 26 D.L.R. 662, 18 Can. Ry. Cas. 435.

Under s. 159 of the Railway Act, 1906, the Board ordered that the location of the appellants' line of railway along certain streets in the city of Fort William be approved in accordance with an agreement between the appellants and the municipal corporation, but subject to the condition that the appellants shall "make full compensation to all persons interested for all damage sustained by reason" thereof. It was held, that the order must be rescinded. Under s. 237 (3) the power to award damages was in respect of construction, and s. 47 did not on its true construction extend that power to meet the case of location and as the condition failed there was no approval.

Application for an order directing the respondent to erect and maintain stations at K. and S. The respondent proposed to locate stations at L. and C. and if these applications were granted there would be 4 stations within less than 11 miles in a sparsely settled locality. The location of a station at K. would involve a yard on a grade with a bridge over a river at one end and a highway crossing in the neck of the yard, while a station at S. would be about 3 miles northerly from L. and about two miles southerly from C. It was held, that the application must be refused, and the locations proposed by the respondent approved.

Eby v. G.T.P.R. Co., 13 Can. Ry. Cas. 22.

IN GENERAL.

Application for approval of its location, "Prince Rupert westerly, mile 0 to mile 3.23." The applicant proceeded to construct the roadbed but found that it could not obtain some $400,000 under its contracts with the Government unless it was able to show that the three and one quarter miles of railway had been constructed under the provisions of the Railway Act. The applicant contended that this being merely the yard of the company, no route map or location plan was required. (1) That the company not having complied with ss. 157, 158, 159 of the Act, 1906, the application must be refused. (2) That the Board had no jurisdiction under 9 & 10 Edw. VII. c. 50, s. 2, empowering the Board to approve of works constructed without approval before December 31st, 1909, since the roadbed in question had been constructed subsequent to that date.

The provisions of the Railway Act, 1906, as to deposit of location plans in the appropriate Registry Offices, and notice of such deposit override the provisions of provincial Registry Acts, giving priority of plans formally registered in accordance with their requirements; and therefore, a highway laid out on a plan duly registered under a provincial Registry Act is junior to a railway built in accordance with approved location plan, previously deposited in accordance with the Railway Act, but not registered. CONSTRUCTION OF RAILWAY ALONG HIGHWAY—CONSENT OF MUNICIPALITY.

While it is true that the fee of highways is vested in the Crown in the right of the province for all material purposes, the occupancy of city streets by railway is a question in which the public right is entirely and adequately represented by the municipality, and the effect of s. 235 of the Railway Act, 1906, is to recognize the paramount interest of the municipality, and to require its consent as a condition precedent to the construction on the highway so far as all street railways or tramways are concerned. Even in the case of a railway which does not come within the proviso of s. 235, and even where an application is meritorious in the sense that a railway is required, that the district in question will undoubtedly be benefited to a greater or less extent by its construction, and that the proposal is supported by the majority of the property owners, the objection of the municipality to any railroad being constructed upon the highway will be given effect to. The merits of the application discussed.

OPERATION ON CITY STREETS—CONSENT OF MUNICIPALITY.

(§ II A—14)—SPURS — MAINTENANCE—AGREEMENT.

When a spur is constructed so that it becomes part of the railway company's property, the company should repair and maintain it, but where part of the right-of-way of the spur is upon the property of the railway company and part upon the applicant company's property, the railway company, in the absence of an agreement to the contrary, should maintain that part of the spur upon its own right-of-way and renew the rails (belonging to it) of the extension of the spur into the applicant company's property, but the applicant company should maintain and repair the under-structure on its own lands.

Wolfville Milling Co. v. Dominion Atlantic R. Co., 28 D.L.R. 384, 18 Can. Ry. Cas. 367.

When the order of the Board authorizing the construction and operation of an industrial spur provides that the respondent should retain the ownership of the right-of-way on which the siding is located, the Board can only authorize the applicant to take expropriation proceedings to enable it to acquire the right-of-way across the lands of the respondent so as to reach by an extension of the spur another industry which it desires to serve.

EXPROPRIATION—SPURS AND SIDINGS—JURISDICTION OF BOARD.

Spur lines constructed under the provisions of s. 222 of the Railway Act, 1906, do not ipso facto become part of the railway of the company from whose line they are built under the provisions of an agreement providing that the railway company furnish the ties, rails and fastenings, which remain their property, and the owner provides the right-of-way. Such a siding cannot be extended to the land of another owner under an order of the Board, but the Board may, in the public interest, authorize the expropriation of the right-of-way upon which the siding is built and its extension to the lands of an adjoining owner requiring railway accommodation. It was held, also, that the special provisions of the Act as to one year's limitation (see s. 242 substantially re-enacted by s. 306 of the Railway Act of 1906), relate to damages sustained by the construction or operation of the railway and do not apply to the refusal of facilities by means of a siding outside the railway as constructed, which is not an act done in the operation of the railway.

The senior and junior rule applies to the case of a railway company with prior location having a patent of its right-of-way through a farm lot, and when the owner of the adjoining lands has a patent for the severed portions subsequent to the date of the company's patent, the expense of constructing the crossing must be borne by the owner of the farm.

FARM CROSSING—LAPSE OF TIME—AGREEMENT.

Notwithstanding the lapse of time without a demand for a farm crossing, by the land owner or a conveyance of the lands taken for right-of-way for valuable consideration, the Board will apply s. 252 of the Railway Act, 1906, which provides that every company shall make crossings for persons across whose lands the railway is carried convenient and proper for the crossing of the railway for farm purposes, in all cases to which it may be applicable, unless the right to the crossing has by express terms been extinguished, either in the conveyance of the right-of-way itself or by a sufficient agreement otherwise expressed.

FARM CROSSING—CATTLE PASSES.

Where the railway was carried across a farm on a high embankment, and any crossing over it would be inconvenient for cattle to get to pasture and water unless driven, the owner of the farm crossed by the railway was held entitled to a cattle pass (not an undercrossing) in line with farm lane. FARM CROSSING—LOSS OF RIGHT BY SEVERANCE.

The mere acquisition of lands on both sides of a railway right-of-way does not per se give a right to a farm crossing. The original owner having lost his right to a crossing by conveying the lands on one side to another person, a subsequent owner purchasing the lands on both sides from different vendors does not thereby acquire a right to a farm crossing to connect them. The Board, however, has jurisdiction under s. 253, of the Railway Act, 1906, to order a crossing, which it will exercise in a proper case and on proper terms.

Montreal v. C.P.R. Co., 21 Can. Ry. Cas. 224.

HIGHWAY—DEDICATION—SENIOR AND JUNIOR RULE.

When it is sought to open a highway across a railway, there must be evidence of intention to dedicate by the owner, acceptance by the municipality, user by the public, and expenditure of public money to keep the proposed highway in repair and fit for use to bring it within the category of a public highway under the Municipal Act, R.S.O. 1914, c. 192, s. 432. Without such evidence the proposed highway is junior to the railway and under the senior and junior rule the whole of the expenditure required will be placed on the applicant. [Goodeham v. Toronto, 25 Can. S.C. R. 246, distinguished.]

Hamilton v. Hamilton Radial Electric R. Co., 22 Can. Ry. Cas. 438.

HIGHWAY — DEDICATION — ACCEPTANCE — DEVISE—RIGHT-OF-WAY.

A will devising a right-of-way to a certain class of individuals does not make a right-of-way, where it crosses a railway, a highway crossing; there being no evidence of the acceptance of a highway at that point by the municipality nor recognition of its existence by the railway company; the railway is senior to the highway at the point of crossing. [Weston v. G.T.R. and C.P.R. Cos. (Denison Avenue Crossing Case), 7 Can. Ry. Cas. 79; St. Pierre v. G.T.R. Co. (Simples Avenue Crossing Case), 13 Can. Ry. Cas. 1; Montreal v. C.P.R. Co., 18 Can. Ry. Cas. 50, followed.]

G.T.R. Co. v. Hamilton, 22 Can. Ry. Cas. 442.

APPORTIONMENT OF COST — SENIOR AND JUNIOR RULE.

In apportioning the cost of protection at railway crossings of highways which have been in existence for many years, the volume of traffic on the highway and railway respectively, which has made the crossing dangerous, is an element to which more weight should be given than the question of seniority merely.

Montreal v. G.T.R. Co., 22 Can. Ry. Cas. 444.

HIGHWAY — RAILWAY GRADE CROSSING FUND.

Where a highway crossing over a railway has not been legally established prior to April 1, 1909, it may be considered a highway crossing of the railway at grade level within the meaning of the Railway Grade Crossing Fund, s. 239 (A), 8 & 9 Edw. VII. c. 32, s. 7, and the Board may legalize the crossing and make a contribution of 20 per cent out of that fund towards the installation of gates, the remainder of the costs of protection to be borne by the applicants.

Maisonneuve v. C.N.R. Co., 22 Can. R. Cas. 446.

Application under s. 176 of the Railway Act, 1906, for leave to expropriate a portion of a piece of land for the purpose of constructing a spur across it from the applicant's branch line. The land had been acquired by the respondent from the former owner, one A. B., the respondent had been authorized by order of the Board to construct certain spurs across the land in question when the applicant's spur was constructed with the exception of the section crossing the portion of the land aforesaid. The order authorizing construction of the branch line and the said spur of the applicant was made before the respondent had acquired the land. It was held (1) that the applicant should be authorized to take so much of the land as would be necessary for the construction of its spur. (2) That if a dispute should arise as to the area necessary to be so taken, the matter should be determined by an engineer of the Board. (3) The expense of making the necessary railway crossings on the land should be borne jointly by the applicant and respondent. [C.N.R. Co. v. C.P.R. Co. (Kaiser Crossing Case), 7 Can. Ry. Cas. 297; G.T.P.R. Co. v. C.P.R. Co. (Nokomis Crossing Case), 7 Can. Ry. Cas. 299, distinguished.]

HIGHWAY CROSSED BY RAILWAY — MAINTENANCE OF TRACK LEGALIZED—PROTECTION OF CROSSING.

Upon an application to direct the removal of the respondent's track from a public highway, and by the respondent to legalize its maintenance under ss. 59A, 222, 237 of the Railway Act, 1906, the Board granted the respondent's application upon condition that upon the construction of a street railway upon the highway, diamond crossings should be installed and sufficient protection given at the crossing at the respondent's expense, and that the movement of the steam railway upon the highway should be restricted.

HIGHWAY CROSSED BY RAILWAY — TEMPORARY DIVERSION AND CLOSING—CONDITIONS — DAMAGES — COMPENSATION — RAILWAY ACT, S. 180.

The Board, under s. 180 of the Railway Act, 1906, in a proper case will authorize the construction and operation of a temporary spur upon and over a highway and the temporary closing and diversion of a portion of the highway for that purpose, imposing such conditions, including compensation to persons directly and specifically injured, as the Board thinks proper. Under s. 250 of the Railway Act, 1906, the Board has jurisdiction to authorize the laying of a gas main under the tracks of a railway company, by a public utility company, an adjacent land owner, and to fix the amount of damages payable for the privilege, imposing as terms and conditions precedent that the applicant must undertake full responsibility for maintaining the gas main and indemnify the respondent from any loss, damage or injury to its property, employees, or the traveling public.

DISPUTED ACCOUNTS—DECISION BY BOARD—JURISDICTION — REFERENCE — RAILWAY ACT, S. 60.

In a case of dispute between a municipality and a railway company over the cost of a bridge carrying a highway over a railway, of which each pays a certain proportion, where owing to the length and intricacy of the accounts it is impossible for the Board in the exercise of its jurisdiction to decide the questions at issue at an ordinary hearing, the matter was referred to a Referee under s. 60 of the Railway Act, 1906, to take the accounts and report to the Board what amount (if any) is due by one party to the other, the reference being at the applicant's risk as to costs.

SENIOR AND JUNIOR RULE — OWNERSHIP OF LAND — LOCATION — PRIOR CONSTRUCTION.

Ownership of a block of land and approval of a plan of railway located thereon do not give seniority at the place of crossing over another railway whose location plan was approved and line built prior to the construction of the first mentioned railway upon a new location on another portion of the same block of land. PROTECTION — INADEQUATE — DANGEROUS CROSSING — TRAFFIC — VOLUME — HEAVY — APPORTIONMENT OF COSTS — RAILWAY GRADE CROSSING FUND — CONSTRUCTION AND INSTALLATION.

Where two railways in close proximity cross two highways the Board decided that towers should be erected to operate pairs of gates day and night at the points of crossing, on the ground that the protection was inadequate (there being none where the junior railway crossed the highways), and the crossings were dangerous owing to the heavy volume of traffic on the railways and highways and the obstruction of the view; apportioned the cost as it considered fair under the circumstances, with the usual contribution from the Railway Grade Crossing Fund towards construction and installation.

SENIOR AND JUNIOR RULE — HIGHWAY CROSSED BY RAILWAY — STEAM AND MUNICIPALLY OWNED RAILWAYS.

A steam railway does not lose its seniority at a crossing on the highway of an electric street railway when the electric railway is acquired by the municipality. [C.P.R. Co. v. Toronto, 7 Can. Ry. HIGHWAY CROSSED BY RAILWAY — PRACTICE — JURISDICTION — PROTECTION BY ELECTRIC BELL — APPORTIONMENT OF COST — RAILWAY GRADE CROSSING FUND — CONSTRUCTION — MAINTENANCE — RAILWAY ACT, s. 239 (A).

Where a highway is senior to a railway which crosses it, it is the practice of the Board to exempt the municipality controlling the highway from any contribution to the cost of installation or maintenance of an electric bell to protect the crossing.

HIGHWAY CROSSED BY RAILWAY — PROTECTION — APPORTIONMENT OF COSTS — INSTALLATION — MAINTENANCE — OPERATION — RAILWAY GRADE CROSSING FUND.

At the crossing in question, where there are four tracks and considerable shunting traffic, protection by an electric bell is not so satisfactory as at crossings where there are fewer tracks and less shunting, and the Board directed protection by gates, operated night and day, apportioning the costs of installation, maintenance and operation. Thamesville v. G.T.R. Co., 23 Can. Ry. Cas. 33.

HIGHWAY CROSSED BY RAILWAY — BRIDGE — RECONSTRUCTION — SENIOR AND JUNIOR RULE.

Under the senior and junior rule the highway being senior to the railway no part of the cost of reconstructing the bridge on the highway over the railway should be put upon the respondent city, but the respondent tramways company being junior to the railway, one-fourth of the cost of reconstruction to make the bridge strong enough to carry electric cars should be imposed upon it. [Toronto R. Co. v. Toronto and C.P.R. Co. (Avenue Road Subway Case) 53 Can. S.C.R. 222, 20 Can. Ry. Cas. 280, followed.]

SUBWAY UNDER TRACKS — PRIOR AGREEMENT — PUBLIC PARK — APPORTIONMENT OF COST — SENIOR AND JUNIOR — RULE NOT APPLICABLE.

Where a subway was built under railway tracks in a public park, to which the railway was senior, to give access between the portions lying north and south of the railway of which the entire cost was borne by the municipality except the superstructure (borne by the railway company), and the municipality having given the land on which to lay tracks to serve elevators south of the railway, of which 6 were to be built immediately south of the railway main line, applied for a subway under such 6 tracks, the senior and junior rule does not apply, and the cost of the work will be divided equally between the municipality and the railway companies interested.

JURISDICTION — LINES — DOMINION AND PROVINCIAL — POINT OF CROSSING — RAILWAY ACT, S. 8 (A).

HIGHWAY — SENIOR AND JUNIOR RULE — LOCATION — APPROVAL — PRIORITY.

In applying the senior and junior rule between railway companies, construction of the crossing and not approval of location gives priority, but between municipalities and railway companies that principle cannot be applied, when it is sought to cross a railway by a highway where a road allowance previously existed, then no matter how long the railway may have been constructed it is considered to be junior and the railway company should instal and maintain the necessary crossing. [C.N. Ry. Co. v. C.P.R. Co. (Kaiser Crossing case), 7 Can. Ry. Cas. 297; C.N. Ry. Co. v. C.P. Ry. Co., 11 Can. Ry. HIGHWAY — CONSTRUCTION AND MAINTENANCE — APPORTIONMENT OF COST.

Where the Board grants permission to the applicant to open up a highway across the right-of-way of the respondent, the uniform practice is to place the whole cost of construction and maintenance upon the applicant, but the order may provide, if the applicant so desires, that the work of construction may be done by the respondent, the expense thereof being reimbursed by the applicant. [Weston v. G.T.R. and C.P.R. Cos. (Denison Avenue Crossing case), 7 Can. Ry. Cas. 79; St. Pierre v. G.T.R. Co. (Simplex Avenue Crossing case), 13 Can. Ry. Cas. 1; Bridgeburg v. HIGHWAY — SUBWAY — COST — SENIOR AND JUNIOR RULE.

The senior and junior rule that, when a railway is crossed by a highway, the applicant should bear all the cost, does not apply where the railway company lays out a townsite and benefits from the sale of lots; in that townsite it should assist in providing suitable facilities for the public to get across the railway property. At V. the Board directed the construction of a pedestrian subway by the railway company, the cost of the subway to be apportioned equally between the railway company and the town, and to be kept clean and lighted by the town, and, in case an extension of the subway became necessary in the future, the costs were to be apportioned equally between the parties. HIGHWAY — BRIDGE — MAINTENANCE — APPORTIONMENT OF COST.

Apart from any question of contract, the obligation of a railway company maintaining a bridge carrying a highway over a railway must be construed with regard to the requirements of the present-day traffic. In 1896, by an order of the Railway Committee, the respondent railway company was authorized to carry a highway (King Street Hamilton) over the railway by a bridge of a certain width. The order contained no provision as to maintenance, extension or widening of the bridge. Upon the growth of the city and a new district being laid out beyond the city limits, in which a new bridge was constructed on the extension of King Street, designed to accommodate a double line of street cars, the Board made an order for the construction by the Hamilton company of a new bridge of the same width and strength, in lieu of the bridge built in 1896. Under the special circumstances of the case the municipality was required to contribute 30 per cent, and railway 70 per cent of the cost. [G.T.R. Co. v. C.P.R. Co. (Myrtle Bridge case), 12 D.L.R. 475, 15 Can. Ry. Cas. 433, affirmed, sub nom. C.P.R. Co. v. G.T.R. Co., 49 Can. S.C.R. 525, 20 D.L.R. 56, 17 Can. Ry. Cas. 300, distinguished.]

Hamilton v. C.P.R. and T.H. & B.R. Cos., 29 Can. Ry. Cas. 159.

HIGHWAY—SENIOR AND JUNIOR RULE.

The senior and junior rule which is sometimes applied by the Board when determining who should pay the cost of the crossing of one railway over another, should not be applied where a highway is crossed by a railway, as the municipality being the owner of the street and now being the owner of the street railway, should not be considered junior to the steam railway company and the costs of protecting the crossing should be apportioned equally between them.

Brantford v. G.T.R. Co., 20 Can. Ry. Cas. 169.

HIGHWAY CROSSING—PUBLIC NECESSITY.

The Board will recognize the public necessity for a highway crossing over a railway especially at or near a point where for a long period the railway company has allowed the public the use of such crossing and it will order the railway company to make the crossing conform to its standard regulations affecting highway crossings as amended May 4th, 1910. The Board is not called upon to deal with the question of an encroachment by a railway company upon the highway. [Weston v. C.P.R. and G.T.R. Cos. (Denison Avenue Crossing case, No. 593), 7 Can. Ry. Cas. 79, followed.]

HIGHWAY — STREET RAILWAY — BRIDGE — APPORTIONMENT OF COST — SENIOR AND JUNIOR RULE.

Where the respondent had discharged its responsibility to maintain a bridge carrying a highway over a railway sufficient to accommodate present traffic, the Board in the public interest ordered the bridge to be widened from 40 to 56 feet to enable a street railway line to be double tracked. The proposed second street railway track being junior to that of the respondent the Board apportioned the cost as follows, 65 per cent to the respondent and 35 per cent to the applicant or street railway company. [Hamilton v. C.P.R. and Toronto, Hamilton & Buffalo R. Cos., 20 Can. Ry. Cas. 159, followed.]

Windsor v. C.P.R. Co., 21 Can. Ry. Cas. 68.

The applicant town alleged that the respondent intended to close a certain street where it crossed its tracks and asked that the respondent should bear part of the cost of protecting the crossing. The street in question had been originally a farm crossing but was now used as a general public highway crossing. The Board's officers, after inspection, reported that the crossing should be made a regular highway crossing and be fully protected by gates and watchmen. The Board ordered that the applicant should reimburse the respondent for the cost of construction, maintenance and protection of the crossing, but was entitled to receive from the Railway Grade Crossing Fund, 20 per cent of the cost of the work.

St. Pierre v. G.T.R. Co., 10 E.L.R. 381.
[§ II B—16]—CROSSING BY OTHER RAILWAY.

The obligation of the junior railway which, on obtaining by contract with the senior road the right to cross its line by a subway or undercrossing, covenanted to construct the crossing according to specifications approved by the chief engineer of the senior road, to repair it and keep it in a good and safe state, and to repay to the latter the cost of necessary work done in the event of the junior road failing to "maintain" the crossing to the satisfaction of said chief engineer, is not restricted to the keeping of the crossing in repair merely as it was when it was first passed upon by the chief engineer, but, in view of an intention to be gathered from the entire contract, may be interpreted as covering repair and maintenance which is requisite for the heavier traffic incident to the increased business which time had developed on the senior road.

"JOINING" OF TWO RAILWAYS — "CROSSING" BY ANOTHER RAILWAY.

The "joining" of two different lines of railway for which the leave of the Board is required under the Railway Act, 1906, s. 227, means joining on the same level so as to enable cars to be transferred from one road to the other. The "crossing" of two different lines of railway for which the leave of the Board is required under the Act, 1906, s. 227, means the passing of the tracks of one railway on, over, or under, the tracks of another by meeting at any angle, continuing at the same angle at the opposite side of the track, crossed and immediately leaving the track crossed.

While a C.P.R. train was approaching the crossing the signalman, being intoxicated, derailed the train, killing the fireman.

(§ II B—17)—CROSSING OF STEAM ROAD BY STREET RAILWAY.

Application that the municipally owned electric railway of the applicant upon a highway be granted leave to cross the line of the respondent by a subway instead of a level crossing. It was held (1) that it was shown that a plan shewing the location of the street was registered prior to the location plan of the respondent. (2) That the street now being within the boundaries of the applicant municipality carried with it the attribute of seniority acquired by the prior registration of the plan according to the provisions of N.W.T. Ord. c. 4, s. 75 (1901), Public Works Act. (3) That the respondent should show cause why an order should not be made for a subway, the cost to be apportioned equally between the applicant and the respondent subject to a contribution of 20 per cent, up to $5,000 to the cost of the work from the Railway Grade Crossing Fund.

Edmonton v. Edmonton, Yukon & Pacific R. Co., 13 Can. Ry. Cas. 128.

CROSSING OF STEAM ROAD BY STREET RAILWAY.

The Board granted an application, by a municipally-owned street railway, under s. 227 of the Railway Act, 1906, to cross the tracks of a steam railway on a city street, which was senior to the tracks of a steam railway. The tracks of the municipally-owned street railway were not considered by the Board as junior to those of the steam railway, and the cost of construction and maintenance of the railway crossing, as well as the installation and maintenance of the protection, were directed to be borne equally by the respondent and appellant. The Board gave leave to the appellant to appeal on two questions of law:—1, was the Board bound by the agreement between the City of Edmonton and G.T.P.R. Co., s. 7 of which provides that an application must first be submitted to the Lieut.-Governor-in-council for approval of the crossing before the application is made to the Board, and 2, if it was not so bound, do the provisions of s. 7 of the agreement mean that the railway company should not pay such expense as is placed upon it by the Board's order. The Supreme Court of Canada answered the second question in the negative. The Chief Justice, and Davies, J., in answer to question 1, said that the agreement was an element to be considered in determining the rights of the parties with respect to the cost of constructing and maintaining the crossing, or the installation or maintenance of the protection required. Idington, J.:—The question of the bearing of the relation of seniority of construction upon the determination of the proper shares of the costs respectively to be borne by crossing railways is one entirely in the discretion of the Board.

G.T.P.R. Co. v. Edmonton, 15 Can. Ry. Cas. 445, affirming 14 Can. Ry. Cas. 93.

CROSSING BY ELECTRIC ROAD — DERAIL SYSTEM.

Upon an application to have a temporary right of crossing the tracks of a steam railway with the tracks of a municipal electric railway made permanent, where the highway crossing was permanent, and the respondent steam railway company had originally consented to the temporary crossing and thereupon permanent works had been constructed by the municipality, the Board made no order but directed that unless there was an elimination of grade or change in the street car location a system of details should be installed against the electric car line on account of the dangerous character of the crossing.

Lethbridge v. C.P.R. Co., 14 Can. Ry. Cas. 345.

HIGHWAY CROSSED BY RAILWAY—STREET RAILWAY—PROTECTION.

The Board granted an application by a municipality for a crossing on the highway of a steam railway by its electric street railway to save a detour of three thousand feet on condition that the applicant pay for its own construction, its own rails, and other work and the diamonds, but the cost of protection, that is, the installation of the interlocking plant, its maintenance and operation, to be borne equally by the applicant and respondent. The municipality was not estopped, and had the right to make the application under the changed conditions, irrespective of any action previously taken by the Board.

St. Thomas v. Michigan Central R. Co., 14 Can. Ry. Cas. 338.

STEAM RAILWAY CROSSING STREET RAILWAY—SENIOR AND JUNIOR—RULE—SENIORITY AS TO OPERATION—HIGHWAY TRAFFIC.

An electric railway using a highway as a right-of-way is to be treated as an ordinary highway occupant, and therefore where it crosses a steam railway, the traffic of the steam railway should have priority, though the steam road, if junior, should pay the cost of construction and maintenance of the necessary crossing. Whether a street railway is incorporated by the Dominion or by a Province does not affect its right as to seniority as against another steam railway crossing it. The fact that an electric railway operating along the highway, not only as a street railway, but also as an interurban or radial line, is in competition with a steam railway which crosses it, does not affect their respective rights as to seniority at the crossing. Its use of the highway is an extension of the ordinary highway user and the traffic of the steam railway should have priority.

Lake Erie & Northern R. Co. v. Brantford Street R. Co., 16 Can. Ry. Cas. 244.

DOMINION AND PROVINCIAL RAILWAYS.

The Board has jurisdiction under ss. 8, 29, 32, 227 of the Railway Act, 1906, to order a single track crossing (provided under an order of the Railway Committee) of a Dominion railway by a Provincial street railway, to be changed to a double track crossing, in the public interest. The applicant which made the application for the double track crossing was ordered to furnish the necessary diamonds, and the street railway company to pay interest at 7 per cent upon the expense incurred by the applicant, the street railway company to lay the necessary tracks and connections.

STREET RAILWAY CROSSING—MAINTENANCE—DERAILMENT OF TRAIN.

The defendants having applied to the Board for authority to cross at grade the plaintiffs' tracks at a certain point, were, in June, 1904, permitted to do so, by an order of the Board, which directed that they (the defendants) should at their own expense provide a diamond for the crossing. In the same month the diamond was placed in position under competent supervision; it was carefully and efficiently built. In September, 1912, some cars of the plaintiff passing over the diamond became derailed and were injured or destroyed; the plaintiffs brought this action to recover damages for the injury and destruction, charging that it was the defendants' duty to keep the diamond and all appliances in connection with the crossing in good repair, which they had failed to do, and had so caused the derailment and damage;—Held, upon the evidence, that the derailment was not shewn to have been the result of want of maintenance or of negligence on the part of the defendants; that the defendants were not, under the order of the Board, bound to maintain and repair the diamond. (§ II B—17a)—CROSSING OF STEAM ROAD BY ELECTRIC INTERURBAN ROAD.

An application of a street railway to cross the tracks of a steam railway company at a place where the latter crosses a city street, need not be submitted to the Lieut. Governor-in-Council for approval, under s. 122 of c. 8, of the Alberta Statutes of 1907, as to steam railways under Federal control, since such application falls within s. 227 of the Railway Act, 1906 (Can.). Where, in point of time, a city street is senior to the tracks of a steam railway that cross it, the tracks of a municipally owned street railway which are subsequently laid across the tracks of the steam railway, are not junior thereto so as to acquire the whole cost of the installation, maintenance and protection of the crossing to be borne by the city, but it will be divided equally between them.

(§ II B—18)—HIGHWAY—APPORTIONMENT OF COST—SENIOR AND JUNIOR RULE.

When a railway is sought to be crossed by a highway the Board will give authority for the construction of the crossing, as long as it is unobjectionable and is constructed in accordance with the standard regulation of the Board, on terms that the cost, under the senior and junior rule, is not thrown on the respondent railway company. The local authorities will determine whether or not to construct the crossing.

m'rs v. C.N.R. Co., 28 D.L.R. 559, 19 Can.

RIGHT-OF-WAY—HIGHWAY.

The Board will not invoke its compulsory powers to compel a railway company to supply a right-of-way across its own lands for a municipal highway to be used for highway purposes quite irrespective of railway purposes.

Co., 28 D.L.R. 381, 18 Can. Ry. Cas. 384.

HIGHWAY—DEDICATION AND PRESCRIPTION.

In the Province of Quebec, as distinguished from Ontario, there are no road allowances, highways being opened across railways (1) by resolution or by-law emanating from the municipal authority,
(2) by the Lieut.-Governor-in-Council under s. 2052, R.S.Q. 1909 (3) by dedication and prescription. Where there is nothing in the application to show that the highway concerned was opened before the railway under any of the above heads, the crossing should be authorized at the municipality's expense. [Caldwell v. C.P.R. Co.,
9 Can. Ry. Cas. 497, distinguished.]

Pontiac v. C.P.R. Co., 28 D.L.R. 560, 19
Can. Ry. Cas. 298.

Where the traffic on the highway is much heavier than on the railway by which it is crossed, and protection by gates and watchmen is necessary, the Board ordered 20 per cent of the cost of protection to be paid out of the Railway Grade Crossing Fund, and the remaining 80 per cent to be divided equally between the applicant and respondent as well as the cost of operation.

HIGHWAY CROSSINGS—WHAT ARE—PRIVATE DRIVEWAY.

A private driveway across a railway used by the public as a means of access to an adjoining farm is not a highway crossing within the meaning of s. 155 of the Ontario Railway Act, R.S.O. 1914, c. 185, nor within the purview of s. 259 of the Railway Act (Can.) 1885, respecting the fence-ing and regulation of speed at crossings.

HIGHWAY CROSSINGS—DANGEROUS SUBWAY —LIABILITY FOR INJURIES.

A railway company charged with the duty under the Railway Act, 1906 (s. 241) to maintain safe structures by which any highway is carried over or under any railway, will be liable for injuries resulting from the dangerous condition of a subway constructed by the railway company at the expense of a municipality.

HIGHWAY CROSSED BY RAILWAY—RIGHTS OF ABUTTING OWNERS.

When an order has been made authorizing the crossing of certain streets by a railway, upon condition that the railway company should enter into an agreement to indemnify the city against all claims for damages by abutting land owners, the Board will not, after the execution of such agreement, order the railway company to carry out its terms.

HIGHWAY CROSSING.

Leave was granted by the Board to a municipality to carry a highway over the right-of-way and tracks of two railways by means of a bridge where no highway existed and the development of a village had been retarded for want of a crossing upon condition that the municipality bear the whole cost of construction. An easement was granted over the right-of-way, with right of support by piers without payment of compensation to the railway companies.

The Board will not require any contribution from the local authority towards the cost of protection by electric bell at a highway crossed by a railway, the question of seniority is not considered, the usual contribution of 20 per cent is made from the Railway Grade Crossing Fund and the remainder of the expense is borne by the railway company.

poration, 6 Edw. VII. c. 70, s. 9, enables it to "construct, maintain and operate"
... equipment and appliances for the supply of heat, light, water and power, then under ss. 2 (21), 235, 237, of the tion to authorize the company to lay and maintain across public highways conduits containing pressure steam.

DIVERSION — ELIMINATION — APPORTIONMENT OF COST.

Where crossings, of a highway by a railway are eliminated by the diversion of a highway, the rule usually followed by the Board is to place the greater portion of the cost on the railway and the remainder on the municipality or municipalities interested. In the present case, two-thirds of the cost was apportioned to the railway and one-third to the local authorities.

HIGHWAY CROSSED BY RAILWAY—CROSSING CREATION — RIGHT-OF-WAY — ACQUISITION — CONTEMPORANEOUS — EQUAL RIGHTS — RAILWAY GRADE CROSSING FUND—APPORTIONMENT OF COST.

Where the rights of the municipality are at least equal to those of the railway company, the creation of the street crossing having been contemporaneous with the acquisition of the land for railway right-of-way, the Board may make an order for contribution by the municipality towards the cost of protecting a level crossing by gates and watchmen. The Board has jurisdiction to make a further contribution from the railway grade crossing fund towards the cost of protection works at a crossing after contributing to the cost of installing an electric bell at the same crossing more than a year ago.

Under the senior and junior rule the junior respondent interfering with the tracks of the senior applicant, should pay all the cost of constructing the crossing and operating and maintaining the protective appliances, but where the track to be crossed was not authorized by the Board to be laid, and both parties acted improperly, the applicant should bear the cost of constructing the crossing, and the respondent the cost of maintaining and operating the protective appliances.

RAILWAY CROSSED BY HIGHWAY—DEDICATION—APPORTIONMENT OF COST—CONSTRUCTION AND PROTECTION—RAILWAY GRADE CROSSING FUND.

The Board has decided on a number of occasions, that to fix a railway company with a portion of the cost of constructing and protecting a highway crossing, there must be some act by the railway company dedicating the crossing to the public, but, where the crossing is a way of communication under the Act, the municipality will be assisted to the extent of 20 per cent from the railway grade crossing fund in bearing the whole cost of constructing and protecting a proper crossing. RAILWAY GRADE CROSSING FUND—APPORTIONMENT OF COST.

Where there has been actual long-continued use by the public (though without legal right) of a level crossing in the nature of a highway crossing over a railway, the Board, in ordering in the public interest, that the highway be legally established, and carried across the railway by means of a subway, may direct that part of the cost be paid from the Railway Grade Crossing Fund, as in the case of separation of grades at a railway crossing of a legal highway. MUNICIPALITY—BY-LAW—NEW HIGHWAY—BRIDGE.

In dealing with an application by a municipality to direct a railway company to carry a new highway across its tracks by an overhead crossing, the Board's jurisdiction is confined to giving directions as to the structure when railway property is interfered with, and upon the municipality passing a by-law providing a proper and suitable structure for the purpose an order will go approving of same, and in such case the whole cost of the new highway will be upon the applicant.

LEVEL CROSSINGS — MUNICIPALITIES AND RAILWAYS.

The rights of municipalities to apply to the Board to open level crossings, in the public interest, are higher and should more readily be given effect to than applications of railway companies to cross highways on the level.

Application to determine the character of the protection at a crossing of a highway by a railway and to apportion the cost thereof. The railway of the first respondent crosses a public highway leading to an amusement park, known as Grimsby Beach with a double track and the other respondent operates an electric railway on the east side of the highway ending a short distance south of the tracks of the first respondent. It was held (1) that one watchman should be employed from May 1 to Oct. 1, for the first year to see if that would afford sufficient protection. (2) That the township should bear 15 per cent and the first respondent the remaining 85 per cent of the cost and that the second respondent should bear no portion of the cost of protection.

S. street had been originally a farm crossing but was now used as a general public highway crossing. The Board's officers reported that the crossing should be made a regular highway crossing and be fully protected by gates and watchmen. It was held, that the applicant must reimburse the respondent for the cost of construction, maintenance and protection of the crossing, receiving from the Railway Grade Crossing Fund, 20 per cent of the cost of the protection works.

St. Pierre v. G.T.R. Co., 13 Can. Ry. Cas. 1.

Section 75 of the Public Works Ordinance, 1901 (N.W.), is not limited in its application to land in an unincorporated village or town, but applies to all lands not within the limits of an incorporated city or town. The registration in the proper land titles office of a plan of subdivision shewing a street establishes the street as a highway from the date of registration. And, where a plan shewing a street was registered before the approval of the location plan of a railway, crossing a highway, not shewn on the railway plan, but shewn by a plan registered as above, the question of seniority was decided in favour of the highway; and the railway company were called upon to show cause why they should not bear half the cost of a subway at the crossing, the highway having been included in the limits of a city.

LEVEL HIGHWAY CROSSING IN TOWN—MAIN-TAINING GATES AND WATCHMEN — NECESSITY FOR PROTECTION.

An order was made by the Board in January, 1914, directing the railway company to instal gates at a level highway crossing at First Avenue, in the town; the gates to be operated by day and night watchmen; 20 per cent of the cost of installation to be paid out of the Railway Grade Crossing Fund, and the remainder to be paid by the railway company; the cost of maintenance and operation to be also paid by the railway company.—Held, that, although the crossing had been much improved since the order, the order should not be varied. The consideration for the municipality's closing Third street consisted in the protection of First avenue by gates and watchmen at the company's expense; and there was still need for protection.

SEPARATION OF GRADES—STEAM RAILWAY AND ELECTRIC STREET RAILWAY—APPORTIONMENT OF COST.

Upon an application by a municipality for an order to carry four streets over the intersecting tracks of a steam railway company, two of these streets being occupied by the tracks of an electric street railway, the Board decided that the cost be apportioned as follows: For the streets not occupied by the electric railway, the steam railway to contribute 75 per cent, and the municipality 25 per cent of the cost; for the streets occupied by the electric railway, the steam railway to contribute 60 per cent, the electric railway 20 per cent, and the municipality 20 per cent of the cost, with contributions in three cases from the railway grade crossing fund of 20 per cent, up to $5,000, such cost to include the cost of depressing the tracks of the steam railway, and damages to its lands exclusive of the right-of-way.

PUBLIC HIGHWAY—NOT ESTABLISHED IN LAW—PUBLIC INTEREST—APPORTIONMENT OF COST—RAILWAY GRADE CROSSING FUND—RAILWAY ACT, s. 237.

In a city which was originally planned and laid out by a railway company without adequate provisions for highway crossings over its tracks, and which has grown to large proportions on both sides of the railway so that numerous crossings are necessary, and an existing highway crossing is found to be congested and dangerous, the Board may require the company to bear a part of the cost of carrying another de facto highway by means of a subway across the railway in order to relieve the congestion, notwithstanding that such last-mentioned highway has no legal existence where it crosses the tracks, and that the proposed subway construction therefore creates an entirely new public right of crossing [Regina v. C.P.R. Co., 11 Can. Ry. Cas. 165, followed.] As a general proposition, there is no objection to municipalities building subways at their own cost, if they desire to make the expenditure, provided they do not interfere with railway facilities, irrespective entirely of circumstances which would justify the Board ordering such action in the public interest under the Act.

(§ II B—20) — RAILWAY AND TRAFFIC BRIDGES—MAINTENANCE.

The Board has no jurisdiction to decide a dispute between a municipality and a railway company as to which of them is liable for the repair and maintenance of a combined railway and traffic bridge, which ends on railway property, on both sides of a river, and whose approaches run over a municipal highway; the matter is entirely between the railway company and the provincial authorities, who aided in the construction of the bridge. The usual rule as to a combined railway and traffic bridge, apart from special circumstances, is that the railway company is responsible for railway structures and the municipality for structures handed over to it for municipal and highway purposes.

An agreement by a railway company with the landowner from whom it purchased a right-of-way and as part consideration therefor to build a culvert so as not to obstruct freshet overflows which benefited his land, may be the subject of a decree for specific performance and the landowner's remedy is not one in damages only if the location and character of the culvert required are capable of precise ascertainment. A verbal agreement to construct a culvert so as not to obstruct a freshet overflow which was of benefit to the party conveying the right-of-way may be shown notwithstanding a release contained in the conveyance of all claims for severance and depreciation arising out of "the taking or out of the "construction, maintenance and operation" of the railway; such release does not absolve the railway from liability in respect of its failure to use such means to prevent damage to the landowner as are reasonably possible consistently with the proper construction, maintenance and operation of the railway.

CROSSING IN THE NATURE OF A FARM CROSSING—ACCESS TO HIGHWAY.

The Board granted a crossing in the nature of a farm crossing from the applicants' lands to a highway upon condition that all expenses of construction and maintenance be borne by the applicants and that gates be established, which must be kept closed on both sides of the railway. [New v. Toronto, Hamilton & Buffalo R. Co., 8 Can. Ry. Cas. 50, followed.]

Richards v. G.T.R. Co., 14 Can. Ry. Cas. 329.

AGREEMENT WITH LANDOWNER—JURISDICTION—CONDITIONS—RAILWAY ACT, s. 252.

The Board is unwilling to disturb agreements between railway companies and landowners as to farm crossings, to be provided, but it is not bound by such an agreement if in contravention of the Railway Act, 1906, or for other reasons void or voidable, and will in a proper case override it in order to see that the Railway Act is followed and a proper and convenient crossing given. When an agreement between a railway company and a landowner specifies a level crossing, and it appears that the company has paid larger compensation in order to avoid the construction of an under-crossing, the Board if it afterwards orders an under-crossing, notwithstanding the agreement, may insist that the parties be restored to their original position, and may require the owner as a condition of the order, to give security for the return of such part of the compensation already paid him as shall represent the excess over the compensation properly payable, having in view the improved facilities, such compensation to be determined by arbitration if necessary.

Ray v. C.N.E. Co., 16 Can. Ry. Cas. 276.

LANDS — TAKING — COMPENSATION — ARBITRATION — LIVE STOCK OR CATTLE PASS.

Upon an application, by a landowner (after receiving compensation for land taken for right-of-way) for a cattle pass, the Board ordered that the pass be built upon condition that the money received from the company be returned, and in case of disagreement that the compensation be determined by arbitration under the Railway Act. In view of the inconvenience caused upon farms in which live stock is kept amounting in some cases to the equivalent of a capital investment of $1,200, railway companies should be willing to give a live stock or cattle pass where possible.

Wilson v. Canadian Northern Ontario R. Co., 16 Can. Ry. Cas. 270.

FARM CROSSING — MAINTENANCE — CLIMATIC CONDITIONS.

A railway company is not obliged during the winter season to keep snow on a level farm crossing during mild weather, to meet a climatic condition entirely controlled by the elements.

Sagala v. C.P.R. Co., 24 Can. Ry. Cas. 386.

Application under ss. 252, 253 of the Railway Act, 1906, directing the respondent to construct a farm crossing for the proper enjoyment by the applicant of his land on the north side of the railway. The applicant's farm of 72 acres was a subdivision of a larger farm provided with a crossing, but* was worked as a separate farm only, upon its being acquired by the applicant, thus requiring a crossing to join the two portions of the farm. The practice of the Board has not been uniform, but not infrequently the entire cost of making a farm crossing has been imposed upon the railway company, especially in the Province of Quebec and Eastern Ontario, the facts and circumstances, especially the size of the farms being considered in each case. It was held, that the respondent should be directed by agreement to construct at its own expense a farm crossing for the applicant upon the dividing line between him and his neighbour.

Riddell v. G.T.R. Co., 13 Can. Ry. Cas. 216, 22 O.W.R. 331.

FARM CROSSING — OVERHEAD — AT GRADE — AGREEMENT — APPORTIONMENT OF COSTS — RELEASE — LANDS — SEVERANCE — DAMAGES.

When the landowner has received a liberal price for his land taken for the railway right-of-way, released the company by agreement from all claims for damages to the remainder by reason of severance, and been given a farm crossing at grade, the Board, although not bound by private agreements, will not grant an overhead farm crossing at a more suitable location unless the owner agrees to bear a portion of the cost. (§ II B-21a)—ANIMALS AT LARGE KILLED ON TRACK—NEGLIGENCE OR WILFUL ACT OR OMISSION OF OWNER—ABSENCE OF CATTLE-GUARDS—LIABILITY OF RAILWAY COMPANY.

Where animals at large through the negligence or wilful act or omission of the owner stray on to the right-of-way of a railway company and are there injured or killed, the company is not liable in damages, under s. 294, sub-s. 5 of the Railway Act, 1906, and the absence of cattle-guards does not render the company liable even where it is under a statutory duty to maintain them. [Clayton v. Can. Nor. Ry. Co., 7 W.L.R. 721, followed.]

PRIVATE OR FARM CROSSINGS.

The Act, 43 & 44 Vict., c. 43, s. 16, sub-ss. 1 and 2 (Que.), now R.S.Q. 1909, art. 6606, obliges railway companies to construct and maintain crossings upon their roads, especially where they traverse farm lands in order to establish communication between the parts so severed. This obligation exists as well in respect to roads already constructed as to those to be constructed and the crossings of the former are legal servitudes of passage for benefit of the lands on which they are found. Therefore, the companies cannot interfere with the use of the crossings by so enlarging the right-of-way as to render access to them more steep and difficult and must answer in damages for injury resulting from doing so.

Drolet v. C.P.R. Co., 44 Que. S.C. 86.

The farm crossings which railway companies are obliged to provide for the convenience of the owners of the lands the railway runs through constitute a legal servitude and such owners are not obliged to establish a title thereto. When a company has once provided such crossings as it considers necessary it cannot close up any of them on the ground that those left are sufficient. The Board has no jurisdiction to declare an existing crossing unnecessary and authorize it to be closed up.

(§ II B-22)—CROSSING NAVIGABLE WATERS—ROUTE AND LOCATION PLANS—APPROVAL—DEMOLITION OF WORKS.

Where a railway company, in the professed exercise of its powers as a railway company, and without the approval of the route by the Minister and of the location plans and works by the Board has constructed a solid filling across navigable waters, the Board, under the provisions of ss. 230, 233, coupled with the sub-ss. (h) and (i) of s. 30 of the Railway Act, 1906, has jurisdiction to order the demolition of the works so constructed.

G.T.P.R. Co. v. Rochester, 15 Can. Ry. Cas. 306, 48 Can. S.C.R. 238, affirming Rochester v. G.T.P.R. Co., 13 Can. Ry. Cas. 421.

Under s. 254 of the Railway Act, 1906, the respondent is only obliged to maintain right-of-way fences turned in to the track at each end of the bridge over the Souris river, a stream on which timber may be floated; therefore, under s. 230 the respondent is prohibited from placing fences, which would amount to an obstruction across the river.

Abrey v. C.P.R. Co., 23 Can. Ry. Cas. 17.

(§ II B-23)—OBSTRUCTION OF STREET CROSSING—STANDING CARS—OPERATION OF GATES.

To justify conviction of a railway company under s. 394 of the Railway Act 1906, for obstructing a street crossing by allowing cars to stand across the street, it must be shown by the prosecution that the obstruction was wilful, and where the crossing was protected by gates and the only evidence was of the times when the gates remained closed against street traffic for periods in excess of five minutes, a conviction should be quashed where it was not shown that any one train or car caused the obstruction nor was it shown that the delay was not attributable to the gateman rather than to the trainmen; s. 394 does not apply to obstruction caused by the gateman's neglect at a street crossing.

C. FENCES.

(§ II C-25)—FENCES—RAILWAY ACT—TWO CONTIGUOUS PARALLEL LINES—PRIVATE LANDS—RESPONSIBILITY—APPORTIONMENT OF—JOINT FEASORS.

The provisions of s. 254 of the Railway Act, 1906, as to fencing the right-of-way, apply so as to require a fence between two contiguous parallel lines of different railway companies, and default in maintaining it may involve both in responsibility for the killing of cattle straying upon the track because of a defect in the railway fencing adjacent to private lands.

RIGHT TO FENCE RIGHT-OF-WAY—INTERFERENCE WITH ACCESS TO SPRING.

A railway company which, in constructing its line and fencing in its right-of-way pursuant to its statutory right so to do, thereby interfered with plaintiff's access to a spring on the premises of another railway which he was permitted to use as a mere licensee, is not liable to him for damages for such interference.

Re Nutana and C.N.R. Co., 7 D.L.R. 888, 21 W.L.R. 380, 14 Can. Ry. Cas. 11.

A railway company which fails to maintain such fences and gates as required by the Provincial or Dominion Railway Acts commits a breach of duty and will as a result be presumed responsible for any damages caused to animals escaping on to its right of way unless it can rebut absolutely the statutory presumption that it is responsible for the killing of the animals on the track.

Rose v. Quebec Central R. Co., 3 D.L.R. 175, 41 Que. S.C. 517.

ORDERS — RELIEVING — REQUIRING — EXTENSION OF TIME—RAILWAY ACT, s. 254 (4); 1 & 2 Geo. V. c. 22, s. 9.

The obligation to fence being imposed by statute, and not, in the first place, by order of the Board, the Board will not extend the time for complying with a specific order requiring fencing, but will preferably cancel its orders on the subject, and leave all parties to the operation of the Railway Act.

Re Fencing at Savona, B.C., 16 Can. Ry. Cas. 195, 26 W.L.R. 909.

STANDARD OF—STATUTORY OBLIGATIONS.

The statutory obligation imposed upon railway companies to provide fences which would prevent cattle and other animals from getting on the railway was a sufficient protection to the public and that it was, therefore, inadvisable for the Board to prescribe any standard fence.

Re Standard Railway Fences, 29 W.L.R. 452.

Railway companies which do not maintain their fences and gates in the condition required by law are guilty of negligence and liable for the loss of animals which get on the right of way and are killed there.

INJURY TO CATTLE STRAYING FROM RIGHT OF WAY—RAILWAY ACT (ALTA.) 1907, c. 8, s. 145.

Fires, leased road, see Crown, II—20.

(§ II D—30)—NEGLIGENCE—FIXED SIGNAL—SWITCHSTAND.

A switch stand is not a fixed signal within the meaning of the railway rules and regulations, and is governed by different rules; an engineer is not guilty of negligence in passing a red light on a switch stand, although compelled by the railway rules to stop where such light is shown as a fixed signal. The words "must know" in r. 401 do not import knowledge acquired by use of the engineer's own eyes to the exclusion of every other source of knowledge, however reliable.

DERAILMENT OF CAR—EFFECT OF, IN NEGLIGENCE CASES—HOW WAIVED.

Although proof of derailment of a railway car and its resultant injury generally establishes a prima facie case of negligence against the defendant company in a personal injury action, yet the plaintiff who goes further and undertakes without success to shew specifically the cause of such derailment thereby waives the prima facie case upon which he might otherwise have relied.

COAL COMPANIES—DEFECTIVE APPLIANCES.

A coal company which operates wholly on its own lands in connection with its mines a railway, and on it carries passengers and freight, may properly be found negligent in operating its cars with a "link and pin" coupling long after the general introduction of safer and better methods, although the company may not be subject to the Railway Act, s. 264.

DUTY OF ENGINEER TO LOOK AND WARN—SPEED—JOINT OPERATION.

An engineer in charge of a locomotive is not obliged constantly to look forward to see if there is anyone or anything on the track, and he may occupy himself, while the train is in motion, in making repairs to his engine if he has given the warnings required by law at crossings and other places. Where there is no statutory regulation as to the speed of a railway train it cannot be taken into consideration to determine the cause of an accident. A railway company which grants to another company the right of running over its line and its joint operation is liable for the consequences of accidents which occur on it.

Where a person approaching a level railway crossing, which he had frequently crossed before and the dangers of which were known to him, does so without proper caution and care, and is struck by an oncoming train, his own actions being the sole and proximate cause of the accident, his claim for damages cannot be maintained. It does not become the duty of the Crown to fence, under ss. 22, 23 of the Government Railways Act, until asked to do so by adjoining proprietors. In order to succeed in an action for damages against the Crown, under sub-s. f, s. 20, Exchequer Court Act, as amended by 9 & 10 Edw. VII, c. 19, proof must be made that an officer or servant of the Crown has been guilty of negligence whilst acting within the scope of his duties, which negligence was the cause of the accident.

TRESPASSERS.

A brakeman who was employed by a railway company other than the defendant, cannot recover for injuries sustained by being struck by a train where, without the knowledge or leave of the defendant, he was in its yard looking for cars that might be delivered to his master in due course, so as to, for his own convenience, expedite their disposal, when received, since no breach of any duty owed him by the defendant was the cause of his injury; nor can he recover where, for purposes of his own, he was in the defendants' yard, by being struck by a train that gave all statutory warnings of its approach, where the plaintiff stated immediately after the accident that he saw the train coming but supposed that it was on a track different from that near which he was standing and where no peculiar circumstances are shown to require a lessening of speed in the yard below that permitted by statute.

No person has a right to pass or walk upon a railway track (except the employees of the company attached to the services of the railway). A person who crosses a railway track at a place where there is no public road or crossing is a trespasser, and has no recourse against the railway company if having also neglected all precaution he is struck by one of its locomotives. It does not make any difference that in crossing this track he is making use of a crossing which the public has been accustomed to use habitually to shorten the distance, though the company was always opposed to this practice.

Where one is injured by the want of repair of a road in the station yard of a railway company, and the road is one which is used by the public openly and constantly as a road for teams, and there is no notice or other indication that it is not intended to be so used, the fact that the company has provided another road in good repair which might have been used, is no defence, in the absence of contributory negligence, to an action for damages for such injuries.

An instruction to the jury, in an action for injuries sustained by a collision at a highway crossing, that it was negligence to run a train through a thickly settled portion of a town or village at more than ten miles an hour, is erroneous, unless qualified by stating in effect the exceptions contained in s. 275 of the Railway Act, 1906, permitting a greater rate of speed where the crossing is protected in accordance with an order of the Board or other competent authority. By reason of s. 275 of the Railway Act, 1906, as to the making of reports and inspection of accident occurring at railway crossings, that part of the section added by 8-9 Edw. VII, c. 32, prohibiting a speed of more than 10 miles an hour by trains at certain crossings not protected to the satisfaction of the railway commission where accidents resulting in bodily injury or death had previously occurred, must be held to be limited in the latter respect to accidents of which the railway company is fixed with notice by reason of physical impact occasioning the same or by reason of the train employees actually becoming aware of the accident so as to report it; a previous accident by a horse taking fright at a passing train after passing over the crossing will not bring the subs. (4) into operation where it was not observed by the railway employees so as to call upon them to make a report.

(§ II D—70)—INJURY TO ANIMALS—OWNER'S NEGLIGENCE.

Where it is shown that animals were at large, that they got upon railway property, and were injured thereon, not at an intersection with the highway, the railway company is liable under the Railway Act 1906, (s. 294), unless it can prove that the case falls within the provisions of s. 295, or that the animals got at large through the negligence or wilful act or omission of the owner. Bugg v. C.N.R. Co., 36 D.L.R. 776, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 458.

ANIMALS—FARM CROSSING—SWING GATES.

Section 295 of the Railway Act 1906, provides that "no person whose horses . . . are killed or injured by any train shall have any right of action against any company in respect of such horses . . . being killed or injured, if the same were so killed or injured by reason of any person (a) for whose use any farm crossing is furnished failing to keep the gates at each side of the railway closed when not in use." This section is no defence to an action for damages if the gates when erected would not swing, and the hinges and fastenings have not been maintained as required by s. 254 and have become useless.

Prouse v. C.N.R. Co., 42 D.L.R. 159, 29 Man. L.R. 16, 23 Can. Ry. Cas. 247, [1918] 2 W.W.R. 845.

ANIMALS AT LARGE—NEGLIGENCE—WILFUL ACT.

Section 294 of the Railway Act, 1906, as amended by 9-10 Edw. VII, c. 50, s. 8, means that if animals are allowed by their owner to be at large within one-half mile of the intersection of the railway and a highway at level, the owner takes the risk upon himself of any damages which may be caused to or by them upon the intersection, and if such damages are caused to the animals, not upon the intersection but upon the railway property beyond it, the company would be liable, unless it established that the animals got at large through the negligence or wilful act or omission of the owner or his agent.

Anderson v. C.N.R. Co., 43 D.L.R. 255, 57 Can. S.C.R. 134, [1918] 3 W.W.R. 107, 23 Can. Ry. Cas. 243, affirming 35 D.L.R. 473, 10 S.L.R. 325 at 234, 33 D.L.R. 418, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 692, 10 S.L.R. 325.

Where the by-laws of a municipality permit the running at large of animals, it is neither negligence nor a wilful act or omission within the meaning of s. 294 (4) of the Railway Act 1906, for the owner to allow them to run at large, but if such animals are allowed to be at large within one-half mile of the intersection of the railway and a highway at rail level, the owner takes the risk of any damages that may be caused to them upon the intersection, and if damage is caused to such animals, not upon the intersection, but upon the railway property beyond it, the railway company will be liable, unless it is established that the animals got at large through the negligence or wilful act or omission of the owner or his agent. [Anderson v. C.N.R. Co., 35 D.L.R. 473, followed.]

The expression "wilful act or omission" has a meaning distinguishable from "negligence," in that the former denotes a deliberate and conscious intention; hence animals on the lands of new settlers, which are kept together by means of tethering one of the oken and which escape as a result of the ox releasing himself from the fastening, are not at large through the "wilful act or omission of the owner," within the meaning of s. 294 (4) of the Railway Act, 1906, (amended by 9-10 Edw. VII. 1910, c. 50, s. 8), and entitles the owner to recover for their being killed or injured on the right-of-way of a railway company. [Parke v. C.N.R. Co., 14 Can. Ry. Cas. 247, followed.]

INJURIES TO ANIMALS—MUNICIPAL BY-LAW—ENACTMENT BY IMPLICATION—NEGLECT OF OWNER.

A municipal by-law which restrains animals from running at large for a certain number of hours of the day does not give rise to an enactment by implication permitting them to run at large during the remaining hours of the day in derogation of the common law duty of the owner to keep the animals from his neighbour's land, and there can be no recovery when they are killed on the right-of-way of a railway company, if the animals are at large through the negligence of the owner within the meaning of subs. 4, of s. 294, of the Railway Act, 1906, as amended by s. 8, c. 50, 9-10 Edw. VII. [Greenlaw v. C.N.R. Co., 12 D. L.R. 492, 23 Man. L.R. 410, distinguished; Watt v. Drysdale, 17 Man. L.R. 15, followed.]

ANIMALS ON TRACKS—ENGINEER'S DUTY.

Prima facie there is no duty on the engineer operating a railway train who discovers stray animals in danger on the right-of-way over which he is passing to stop his train for the purpose of driving such animals from the track so as to save them from injury.

ANIMALS AT LARGE—DEFECTIVE FENCE—STATUTORY DUTY TO REPAIR.

A railway company having been incorporated under Quebec statute and never having been declared to exist for the general benefit of Canada, or to come under the provisions of the Dominion statute, is only obliged to build and keep in repair such fences as were required for the protection of the animals belonging to the adjoining owner, or of those who were rightly occupying the adjoining land.

HORSES AT LARGE THROUGH WILFUL ACT OF OWNER—WANT OF CATTLE GUARDS.

It is made an absolute ground of defence under s. 294, subs. 4, of the Railway Act, 1906, to an action against the railway for Can. Dig.—121.

value of stray horses killed on its right-of-way at a place which was not a crossing that the horses got at large through the wilful act or omission of the owner, such as turning the horses out to run at large without the authority of a municipal by-law, and such statutory defence is not displaced by shewing that the horses must have got upon the railway tracks at a railway crossing where the railway had neglected to maintain cattle guards as required by s. 254 of the amendment of 1911, (c. 22). [Sporle v. G.T.P.R. Co., 17 D.L.R. 367; Clayton v. C.N.R. Co., 17 Man. L.R. 426, 435, applied; Greenlaw v. C.N.R. Co., 12 D. L.R. 492, 15 Can. Ry. Cas. 329, 23 Man. L.R. 410, distinguished.]

INJURIES TO ANIMALS ON TRACKS BY TRAINS.

The evident purpose of Parliament to deal with the whole question of a railway company's liability for injury to animals at large by the provisions of s. 294 of the Railway Act, 1906, as amended, constitutes such s. 294 a specific code laying down a general statutory liability and providing a special defence, thereby precluding the plaintiff, in such cases, from resting liability upon a breach of s. 254 read with the general provisions of s. 427. [Clayton v. C.N.R. Co., 7 Can. Ry. Cas. 355, applied.]

LIABILITY OF RAILWAYS FOR DAMAGES—KILLING HORSE ON TRACK—ANIMAL "AT LARGE."

Where a horse which had been turned out to pasture on unfenced range lands adjoining a railway took fright on being driven into camp by the owner's employee and escaped from his control and was killed by a train, the owner has no right of action against the railway company under s. 294, subs. 4, of the Railway Act, 1906 (as amended 9 & 10 Edw. VII, c. 50, s. 8), for, if he had the landowner's permission to pasture on the lands, the horse while thereon was not "at large" and if he had not such permission, the horse was put "at large" by the plaintiff's wilful act in pasturing the horse there within the exception of the enactment.

Hupp v. C.P.R. Co., 16 D.L.R. 343, 6 W.W.R. 385, 27 W.L.R. 398, 17 Can. Ry. Cas. 66, 20 B.C.R. 49.

A railway company operating under and subject to the Railway Act, 1906, is liable for killing horses at large upon a railway line, unless the railway company establishes under s. 294 (4), that the animals got at large through the negligence or wilful act of the owner or his agent, or unless the circumstances as to the manner in which the horses came to be at large are within the special exceptions from liability stated in ss. 294, 295 of the Act.

ANIMALS AT LARGE—DAMAGES—NEGLIGENCE OR WILFUL ACT OR OMISSION OF OWNER—UNENCLOSED LANDS—RAILWAY ACT, S. 294 (4).

Where a horse got at large from unenclosed lands by reason of the negligence of its owner in not properly confining it he cannot recover damages for its loss, although the animal wanders a considerable distance before getting upon the right-of-way of the defendant. [Becker v. C.P. Ry. Co., 7 Can. Ry. Cas. 29, followed.]

Wallace v. G.T.R. Co., 17 Can. Ry. Cas. 64.

The plaintiff sued for damages for the loss of a horse killed upon the defendants' track by one of their cars. The horse was admittedly a trespasser. Held that the defendants were not liable for the only negligence found by the jury, viz., that the motorman should have seen the horse on the track in time to enable him to stop the car. [G.T.R. Co. v. Barnett, [1911] A.C. 361, followed.] Judgment of the County Court of Essex reversed.

PROTECTION OF HIGHWAY CROSSING.

Prior v. C.P.R. Co., 25 O.W.R. 163.

A railway company is not liable for injuries to animals from a farm adjacent to the line of railway, which are not at large and which are killed on the permanent way, except where the plaintiff alleges and proves that the company has been guilty of negligence in the performance of duties imposed upon it by ss. 254, 255 of the Railway Act, 1906. The accident which happened was of the nature coming within ss. 254, 255 of the Act and not under s. 294 which renders the company responsible unless it shews by evidence that the animal was at large only on account of the neglect or voluntary act of its owner.

Payette v. Canadian Northern Quebec R., 20 Que. S.C. 64.

The effect of a municipal by-law which permits animals to run at large "except as prescribed or restricted by law or by this by-law or other by-laws of the municipality," is to leave the case of an animal killed by a train within half a mile of the intersection of a highway with a railway within the operation of subs. 1, s. 294, Railway Act, 1906.

Block v. Can. North. Pac. R. Co., 10 W.W.R. 1228.

Cattle running at large on the range are lawfully at large, and, if the cattle are killed on a railway track, the railway company is liable under s. 295 of the Railway Act, 1906. Bardgett v. C.P.R. Co., 10 W.W.R. 810.

ONUS—EVIDENCE.

(§ II D-71)—INJURY TO ANIMALS—DUTY TO FENCE.

Section 294 of the Railway Act, 1906, must be read with reference to conditions of s. 254, and where there is no obligation to fence there can be no liability for injury to cattle, whether "at large" or "at home;" but where there is an order compelling railway companies in general to fence, a special order partly relieving a railway company from such duty at certain portions of the locality in question does not relieve the company from liability, in the absence of evidence as to where the animals got upon the railway. [Higgins v. C.P.R. Co., 9 Can. Ry. Cas. 34, followed; Parks v. C.N.R. Co., 14 Can. Ry. Cas. 247, disappeared.] Waite v. G.T.P.R. Co., 27 D.L.R. 549, 11 A.L.R. 260, 34 W.L.R. 92, 320, 10 W.W.R. 486.

The word "negligence" in s. 294 (4) of the Railway Act, 1906, (as amended by 9-10 Edw. VII., c. 50, s. 8), is not used in the sense generally attributed to it in common law. An owner is not necessarily negligent because he leaves a large number of cattle near a railway in charge of one man. In considering the alleged negligence of the owner, the absence of a fence which the railway company was legally liable to erect should not be taken into account.

LACK OF PROPER FENCE—ANIMALS AT LARGE THROUGH OWNER'S NEGLIGENCE.

The fact that the owner of an animal turns it out to pasture on his own land beside a railway track which a company had not fenced as required by law, does not shew that the animal was at large through the negligence or wilful act of the owner so as to relieve the company from liability under s. 294 (4) of the Railway Act, 1906, for injuries inflicted on it while on the right-of-way the company's omission to construct a fence did not deprive the adjoining owner of the right to turn his animals out to pasture on his own land. [McLeod v. C.N.R. Co., 18 O.L.R. 616, 9 Can. Ry. Cas. 39, followed.]

KILLING ANIMALS—DEFECTIVE FENCE—ANIMALS AT LARGE UNDER BY-LAW.

Cattle turned out to graze on the highways as authorized by a municipal by-law are not "at large through the negligence or wilful act or omission of the owner" so as to relieve a railway company, under s. 294 (4) of the Railway Act, 1906, as amended by 10 Edw. VII., c. 50, s. 8, from liability for running down animals that came upon its right-of-way at a place other than a highway crossing, by reason of defects in the fencing which the railway company was under a statutory obligation to maintain.

Action for the value of two horses alleged to have been killed by one of the company's trains through its neglect to fence its right of way at the place in question. The horses escaped from the pasture field by reason of the defective fence (slash fence) with which it was enclosed strayed on to the unfenced right of way of the railway company and were killed by a passing train. It was held (1) that, under subs. 4 of s. 237 (now 294) of the Railway Act, 1903, the defendant escaped liability through the wilful act or omission of the owner of the animals in question by having a defective fence. (2) That, therefore, the exception in subs. 4 of s. 234, relieving a railway company from fencing did not need to be decided. [Bourassa v. C.P.R. Co., 30 Que. S.C. 385, 7 Can. Ry. Cas. 41, followed.]

Renaud v. C.P.R. Co., 13 Can. Ry. Cas. 358.

CATTLE "AT LARGE"—THE RAILWAY ACT, s. 295.

Cattle turned out upon a road allowance so that they can range upon an open section must be said to be "at large," and a railway company, even though their cattle-guards or fences are negligently constructed, are not liable for injuries thereto.

Fleming v. C.P.R. Co., 7 W.W.R. 525.

UPKEEP OF FENCES ALONG RIGHT-OF-WAY—ANIMALS KILLED WHILE WANDERING ON TRACKS.

Railway companies who do not maintain their fences and gates in the condition provided by law, are at fault and liable for the loss of animals who thereby gain access to the tracks and are killed.

Bouchard v. Quebec R. Light & Power Co., 41 Que. S.C. 385, 14 Can. Ry. Cas. 241.

ANIMALS AT LARGE—WILFUL ACT OR OMISSION OF OWNER—DEFECTIVE FENCES.

Action to recover the value of cattle found killed on the defendant's railway. The plaintiff's cattle escaped by knocking down or imping over a fence of insufficient strength and height from one pasture field to another, and from there got through the highway fence part of which was constructed of brush with poles; thence along the highway, got over the cattle guards at the crossing and were killed by a passing train. The plaintiff's son admitted that said cattle had got out to the highway more than once through the fences which he had fixed at different times in different places after they had got out:—Held, that the cattle got at large through the wilful act or omission of the plaintiff by reason of his fences both of the pasture field and at the highway being insufficient and insecure and he cannot recover their value from the defendant.

FARM FENCES.

The owner of farm property who fails to maintain his line fence is responsible for the loss of animals which, passing through a breach, stray upon a railway track and are killed. When the accident is due, at the same time, to the want of repair in the fence between his farm and the right-of-way of two railway companies parallel to each other and with no division between them, one of which companies is obliged to maintain the fence and the other owns the right-of-way on which the animals were killed, he has his recourse in warranty against both.

(§ II D-72)—HORSE KILLED ON RAILWAY—GATE TO RIGHT-OF-WAY BROKEN—FASTENED BY ROPE—PROPER CHAIN GONE—DUTY OF RAILWAY—RAILWAY ACT.

It is the statutory duty of a railway company under s. 254 of the Railway Act, 1906, to maintain proper fastenings on gates opening on its right-of-way. Evidence shewing a lack of the proper fastenings establishes a breach of this duty. [Dunford v. Michigan Central, 20 A.R. (Ont.) 577, followed.]

CATTLE-GUARDS—GATES—"UNUSED HIGHWAY"—RAILWAY ACT.

The Railway Act, 1906, does not forbid, either by s. 254 or otherwise, the erection of a farm crossing in lieu of cattleguards at a road allowance which is unused as a highway and is in fact used as farm land, and where a railway company and an adjoining farm owner concur in so treating an "unused highway" the farm owner is bound under s. 255 to keep the gates on each side of the railway closed when not in use, and damage to the owner's animals through his own neglect to perform such statutory duty is not recoverable from the railway company no negligence on the part of those in charge of the train being shewn.

CATTLE GUARDS—ONUS ON DEFENDANT.

Under s. 294 of the Railway Act, 1906, as amended by 9-10 Edw. VII c. 50, s. 8, imposing a liability on a railway company for injuries to animals "at large" on its right-of-way, the onus of proving negligence on the part of the owner of the animal in allowing a horse to be "at large" is upon the railway company.

INJURY TO ANIMAL AT LARGE—FARM CROSSING—GATES.

An animal to be "at large," under the terms of s. 294 of the Railway Act, 1906, must not be in its own pasture, but must be on a highway. Where a horse, being on its own pasture, escapes through a gate in the fence of a farm crossing, thus securing access to the line of a railway, and gets killed, in the absence of any evidence to shew that the gate was not in good order, or, in the absence of any evidence of any other fault on the part of the railway, the owner of the animal has no recourse against the company, as his horse was not "at large," and the law imposed upon him the duty to keep the gate closed.

Clare v. C.N.R. Co., 17 W.L.R. 536.

(§ II D—75)—FIRES—LIABILITY OF RAILROAD FUR.

One in possession of timber which he has wrongfully taken to his limits from government lands has a sufficient possessory title to maintain an action for their destruction by fires caused by sparks from locomotives in violation of ss. 297-8 of the Railway Act 1906, amended by 1-2 Geo. V. 1911, c. 22 s. 10).

ORIGIN—NEGLIGENCE—ONUS.

Section 297 of the Railway Act, 1906, which requires railway companies to keep the right-of-way free from dead grass, weeds and unnecessary combustible matter, applies only to a line of railway under operation, not whilst it is under construction; to charge a company with common law negligence, while constructing a railway, for causing fires by sparks escaping from locomotives, and from burning logs and rubbish necessary for clearing the right-of-way, the onus is upon the plaintiff to prove that the fire originated from the sparks, and that the defendant was guilty of negligence in setting off the fire or allowing it to escape. A person lighting a fire is not bound to prevent injury in all events, but only that injury shall not occur through his negligence.

FIRE STARTING ON RIGHT-OF-WAY—BREACH OF STATUTORY DUTY TO KEEP FREE FROM COMBUSTIBLES.

Since an absolute duty is imposed on a railway company by R.S.N.S. 1900, c. 91, to at all times keep its right-of-way where it passes through woods, clear from all combustible material, such as bushes, grass and fern, it is answerable for damages caused an adjoining land owner by fire started in an accumulation of combustible material on its right-of-way, by sparks from a locomotive.

FIRES—ORIGIN FROM LOCOMOTIVE—INFERENCE.

ORIGIN FROM LOCOMOTIVE—INFERENCE.

The fact that no fire was seen at or near a railway track until a few minutes after the passing of a railway locomotive which had not been recently inspected, justifies an inference, where no other cause seemed probable, that the fire originated from sparks from such engine, so as to fix the railway with liability under s. 298 of the Railway Act, 1906.

LOCOMOTIVE OF ANOTHER COMPANY WITH RUNNING RIGHTS.

If the operating railway company contracts to give another railway company concurrent running rights over its line, it must be taken to be "making use of" the locomotive of the company having such running rights within the meaning of s. 298 of the Railway Act, 1906, s. 298, so as to fix the granting company with liability for damage caused by sparks from a locomotive of the other company while using the line of the granting company.

Where, from the testimony, the inference is strong that sparks from a locomotive started a fire at a point off a railway company's right-of-way, where, to the knowledge of the company's servants, the fire smouldered for nearly a month, and then, fanned by a high wind, it spread, jumped across a river and destroyed standing timber belonging to the plaintiff, the company is properly held liable therefor under s. 298 of the Railway Act, 1906.

Farquharson v. C.P.R. Co., 3 D.L.R. 258, 20 W.L.R. 914, 15 Can. Ry. Cas. 190, 2 W.W.R. 165.

Under c. 91 of R.S.N.S. 1900, which requires a railway to clear from off the sides of its roadway, where it passes through woods, all combustible material, it is insurable for the value of property adjacent to its roadway that was destroyed by fire which was started on the roadway by sparks from engines, in an accumulation of dried grass, ferns, bushes, and turf.

Schwartz v. Halifax & South Western R. Co., 4 D.L.R. 691, 46 N.S.R. 20, 14 Can. Ry. Cas. 85.

FIRE—LACK OF SAFETY APPLIANCES.

The Railway Act, 1906, s. 298, places the onus on the railway company of shewing that modern and efficient appliances were used on the locomotive to prevent the sparks from same causing fires in property adjacent to the railway in order to claim the benefit of the limitation of $5,000, which is made applicable by that section in that contingency if the company has not otherwise been guilty of negligence. Noncompliance with the requirements of s. 297 of the Railway Act, 1906, which requires the company to keep its right-of-way free from dead, dry grass and weeds and other unnecessary combustible matter is negligence on the part of the railway company. [Blue v. Red Mountain R. Co., [1909] A.C. 361, 9 Can. Ry. Cas. 140, followed.] Where a timber license from the Department of the Interior stipulated that the licensee should dispose of the tree tops, branches and other debris, of the lumbering operations in accordance with the directions of the department, so as to minimize the danger of fire, but it is not shewn that any directions were given by the department in that respect, the failure of the lumberman, cutting timber by virtue of such license, to so dispose of the debris is not attributable to him as contributory negligence in an action against the railway company for the destruction of his logs by fire caused by sparks from the locomotive.

FIRE—LIMITATION OF ACTION—DUTIES UNDER PROVINCIAL STATUTE.

The Railway Act, 1906, (Can.) s. 306, prescribing a time limitation for actions for fires resulting from the construction and operation of railways, does not in any wise diminish or affect liabilities arising out of a breach of statutory duty under a provincial statute regulating the prevention of fires.

FIRE—ORIGINATING CAUSE.

In the absence of evidence of any other probable source, evidence that three locomotives of a defendant railway company passed the spot where a fire originated about the time of the fire, is evidence from which a jury might not improbably infer that the fire was caused by sparks emitted from one of these locomotives.

Learn v. Nelson, 8 W.W.R. 99.

FIRE—PROOF OF CAUSES.

Where the plaintiff does not prove that the fire which did the damage complained of was the same fire which it was found originated from a spark from one of the defendant's engines, he cannot recover. [Clark v. Ward, 13 W.L.R. 83, followed.] Margach v. Mackenzie & Mann, 32 W.L.R. 162.

III. Accidents at crossings.

(§ III—45)—CHARACTER OF CROSSING—TRESPASSERS.

The fact that a roadway used as a transmission line for the conveyance of employees, over which public travel has been forbidden, is extensively used by the public, does not necessarily constitute it a public highway so as to charge a railway company with the statutory duty to give warnings at highway crossings, and in the absence of evidence that the locomotive engineer had seen a vehicle approaching the crossing, the railway company cannot be held responsible for the collision of a train with a trespassing vehicle at such crossing. [Royle v. C.

N.R. Co., 14 Man. L.R. 275; G.T.R. Co. v. Anderson, 28 Can. S.C.R. 541; G.T.R. Co. v. Barnett, [1911] A.C. 361, followed.]

OBSTRUCTING VIEW, COLLISION WITH AUTOMOBILE.

A railway company that permits the end of a string of freight cars to project into a highway for some time, in violation of s. 279 of the Railway Act, 1906, so as to obstruct the public view of approaching trains, is liable for a collision between an engine and an automobile driven by the plaintiff who, although he exercised due care, was unable, because of such obstruction to see the engine in time to avoid the collision.

EXCESSIVE SPEED—ULTIMATE NEGLIGENCE.

The findings of a Trial Judge that an injury to a person by a moving train at a highway crossing was caused by operating the train at an excessive rate of speed, which could have been avoided by a slackening of the speed immediately upon seeing the person, will not be interfered with on appeal; the crossing being in a thickly peopled portion of the city the onus was upon the railway company to shew its compliance with s. 275 (3) of the Railway Act, 1906, as amended 1909, c. 31, s. 13. GOVERNMENTAL RAILWAY—OMISSION BY RAILWAY EMPLOYEES TO COMPLY WITH REQUIREMENTS—GOVERNMENT RAILWAYS ACT, s. 37—FAUTE COMMUNE.

B., the suppliant, was driving a horse along a road crossed by the Intercolonial railway. He was followed by his son, who was also driving. The view of the track was obstructed by wood-piles. After passing the wood-piles B. looked to the southwest to see if any train was coming, but did not look in the opposite direction. When

B. was crossing the track he heard the signal of the train coming from the northeast. B., by urging his horse, was just able to clear the train, but the boy was unable to stop his horse and sleigh. The train struck them, killing the horse, smashing the sleigh, and severely injuring the suppliant's son. The train hands had omitted to sound the whistle and ring the bell on the approach to the crossing as provided by s. 37 of the Governmental Railways Act.—Held, that the proximate cause of the accident was the negligent omission of the railway employees to comply with the provisions of the said section; but the conduct of B. in not looking both ways before entering upon the track amounted to negligence, it was a case justifying the application of the doctrine of faute commune under the law of Quebec. That upon the facts the suppliant was entitled to recover such damages as might be fixed, having regard to the extent and nature of the negligence of the respective parties.

(§ III—47)—QUESTIONS SUBMITTED TO JURY—FINDINGS—EVIDENCE—INTERPRETATION OF FINDINGS—AUTHORIZED ACT—NEGLIGENCE IN PERFORMING.

About 10 p. m. a farmer was found on the tracks badly injured with his foot caught in a "split switch" and died soon afterwards. No one saw the accident. The jury found that the death was caused by the defendants' negligence in having a split switch on a public highway and they found against contributory negligence. The court held that there was evidence to go to the jury on the question of negligence, and in basing their conclusion on a consideration of that evidence, the jury were not usurping the jurisdiction of the Board. The finding was not in the nature of a direction as to what the protection to the public should be, but a finding that from the kind and manner of construction of the switch, it was dangerous to persons using the highway, and that those responsible for its presence on the highway were negligent if it was the cause of injury. Also that an authorized act must be done not only in a reasonable way and without negligence, but there is the additional obligation upon one exercising a statutory or authorized power not to extend that power. Whatever were the rights which the defendants acquired in respect of the highway they did not extend to or include the erection and maintenance of the split switch.

(3) III—49)—PRIVATE DRIVEWAY—COLLISION—WITH VEHICLE—EXCESSIVE SPEED—WARNINGS.

The operating of an electric car at an excessive rate of speed and the failure to give proper warnings while approaching a private driveway crossing constitutes negligence at common law which renders the company answerable for injuries to a vehicular traveler resulting from a collision at the crossing. [G.T.R. Co. v. McKay, 34 Can. S.C.R. 81; Bell v. G.T.R. Co., 15 D.L.R. 874, 48 Can. S.C.R. 561, distinguished.] Govland v. H.G. & B. Elec. R. Co., 24 D.L.R. 49, 33 O.L.R. 372, 19 Can. Ry. Cas. 214.

PRIVATE CROSSINGS—DUTY OF PROTECTION.

A railway company which allows the public to travel in its cars at a place where the road is situated upon private property, owes the public there the same measure of protection as where the cars traverse the streets.

Noel v. Quebec R.L.H. & P. Co., 48 Que. S.C. 130.

(3) III—50)—LOOKOUT—BACKING ENGINE—GIVING WARNING OF APPROACH.

It is not necessary that a person about to cross a railway track at a street crossing should have actually heard the warning given by an employee standing on the tender of a backing locomotive, in order to relieve a railway company of the duty imposed on it by s. 276 of the Railway Act, 1906, in running trains not headed by an engine moving forward in the ordinary manner over a level crossing to have a man stationed on that part of the train then foremost, in order to warn persons standing on or about to cross the tracks; since the warning required is only such that, if given in time to avoid danger, it ought to have been apprehended by a person in possession of ordinary faculties, in a reasonable sound, active and alert condition.

SIGNALS—FAILURE TO GIVE—RINGING BELL—INSTRUCTIONS.

In an action for injuries sustained at a highway crossing by being struck by a train an instruction to the jury that the law requires the whistle of the engine to be sounded more than 80 rods away (which was done near another crossing more than 80 rods distant), and that the evidence showed that the bell was not rung for the latter crossing, is erroneous, and entitles the railway company to a new trial, where the failure to ring the bell was the only negligence on which a verdict for the plaintiff could be sustained, and the jury stated that they "believed that the bell was not ringing continuously," such answer being too ambiguous to sustain the verdict.

SIGNALS—FAILURE TO LOOK—SNOWSTORM.

Failure to ring the bell and blow the whistle while a train is approaching in a snowstorm within 550 feet of a highway, although there is no statutory duty to blow the whistle, may justify a jury's finding of negligence in an action for injuries to a vehicular traveler on the highway; the jury's finding negating contributory negligence, because of the plaintiff's failure to look, cannot be disregarded by the Trial Judge, particularly when the vision was obstructed by the snowstorm.

SIGNALS AND WARNINGS—INCOMPETENT BRAKEMAN.

The statutory duty under s. 276 of the Railway Act, 1906, to warn persons crossing or about to cross the track of the approach of a train backing up across the street is one for the nonobservance of which the railway company may be liable in damages for an accident resulting from the failure of the brakeman to give sufficient warning with the air whistle at the rear of the train; the placing in charge of the rear end of the train when moving reversely upon level crossings in a town of a brakeman unacquainted with the conditions existing near the crossing which would interfere with persons seeing the approaching train and without knowledge of where the crossing was, is in itself negligence for which the company is liable.

Mitchell v. G.T.R. Co., 22 D.L.R. 804, 18 Can. Ry. Cas. 188. [Affirmed in 8 O.W.N. 300.]

LOOKOUT—SIGNALS.

Action for damages for the death of C. on the ground that it was due to the negligence of the company. The accident happened about 7 p. m. on a winter's day said to be somewhat dark, while a wagon in which the respondent was simply a passenger was being driven across the tracks at the intersection of the highway. Three acts of negligence were found by the jury, to which they attributed the accident:—(1) Absence of warning signboard required by the Railway Act at highway crossings. (2) Excessive grade in highway approaching crossing. (3) Failure to give statutory signals, and negating contributory negligence. Held, affirming the judgments of the Trial Judge, the Divisional Court and the Court of Appeal for Ontario, in favour of the respondent for damages with costs.

Pere Marquette R. Co. v. Crouch, 13 Can. Ry. Cas. 247, 22 O.W.R. 333.

An action for damages for death of one G., run down by the defendants' train, while crossing a public highway. The train gave no warning either by whistle or bell. Another train was passing upon the other track in the opposite direction at the same time, which gave the necessary signals. No one saw the accident. The jury found that the accident was caused by the violation of the statutory duty to whistle and ring the bell, and negatived contributory negligence. The Trial Judge entered judgment for plaintiff for $2,000 and costs, as awarded by the jury. The Court of Appeal dismissed the defendants' appeal with costs.

Griffith v. G.T.R. Co., 13 Can. Ry. Cas. 287, 21 O.W.R. 395.

SIGNALMAN—HIRING BY ONE COMPANY AND PAYMENT BY THE OTHER—LIABILITY.

The C.P.R. Co. was held liable in damages for the death of its servant the fireman, because it was alone responsible for the negligence of the signalman, who, at the time of the accident, while adjusting the points and giving the signals for its train was, to be regarded as a person in its employment. The whole circumstances of the employment must be looked at and the real effect of the actual relation existing must not be lost sight of in deference to a formula about hiring and paying.

Pattison v. C.P.R. Co., 14 Can. Ry. Cas. 401, 24 O.L.R. 482.

AUTOMATIC BELL ALARM.

In the absence of statutory requirement, failure on the part of a railway company to maintain an automatic bell alarm at a railway crossing is not negligence. [G.T.R. Co. v. McKay, 34 Can. S.C.R. 81, applied.] Moore v. B.C. Elec. R. Co., 22 B.C.R. 504, 34 W.L.R. 469.

LIGHTING—RAILWAY AND TRAFFIC BRIDGE—VOLUME OF TRAFFIC—VEHICULAR AND PEDESTRIAN—PUBLIC INTEREST—REVENUE—TOLLS—RAILWAY SUBSIDY ACT, 63-64 VICT. c. 8.

The Board will exercise jurisdiction to require a railway company to provide proper lighting for and approaches to a railway bridge upon which provision is made for vehicular and pedestrian traffic, for the use of which bridge tolls are charged, and toward whose construction assistance was given under the Dominion Subsidy Act (1900), 63-64 Vict. c. 8.

Mahon v. G.T.R. Co., 16 Can. Ry. Cas. 268.

HAND CAR — SIGNAL — HORSES — CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

Although small hand-cars used for working on railways are not provided with any alarm signal, and although the Railway Act and the rules of the Board do not call for any, yet, as these hand-cars are not bound to stop at crossings, their drivers must signal their approach, either to avoid a collision or to enable the driver of a horse approaching the railway to watch his horse and to master it in time. Although the omission of giving such signal is an act of negligence rendering the railway company liable in the event of an accident, it is not so when a passerby, the victim of the accident, saw the hand-car coming and nevertheless took upon himself to cross the railway.

Lemieux v. Langevin, 54 Que. S.C. 542.
 (§ 111-51) — CROSSING — SIGNALS — CITY STREETS—SHUNTING ENGINE.

The requirement of s. 274 of the Railway Act, 1906, that a train on approaching a highway crossing shall sound its whistle when at least 80 rods therefrom is not applicable to an engine engaged in shunting cars in a city yard, which at no time was more than 100 yards distant from a street crossing.

SIGNALS AND FLAGMEN—YARD TRAIN.

Section 251 of the Railway Act, 1906, under which a man must be stationed on the last car to give warning of the train's approach when it is moving reversely in a city, town or village, applies to a work train operating on the surface wholly within the plant of a company subject to the Act, situate in a city, town or village as well as to cases where the streets of the municipality are crossed by the train moving backwards. (§ 111-55)—ENTERING BETWEEN GATES—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE—WANT OF WARNINGS AND FLAGMEN.

Where the erection of gates at a level highway crossing is not authorized nor required by an order of the Board, the lowering of the gates is but a warning to persons desiring to cross the tracks that it is dangerous to do so, and the entry of a person upon the portion of the highway between the gates, when the gates are down, is not as a matter of law or per se negligence, as disentitling him to recover damages for injuries sustained by him while upon that portion of the highway, by reason of the negligence and breach of duty of the railway company as to signals and warnings.

WATCHMEN OF GATES MAINTAINED BY COMPANY AND MUNICIPALITY—NEGLECT OF LIABILITY OF MUNICIPALITY.

A highway crossing the tracks of two railway companies, the Board made an order for the installation of gates to be operated by watchmen. One of the railway companies was directed to install the gates, and the cost was divided between the municipality and the two companies in certain proportions. The cost of maintenance was divided the same way. An accident having been occasioned by the negligence of one of the watchmen appointed by the company having the conduct of the work, an application was made by the other company, whose engine caused the accident, to have the damage paid by the company appointing the watchman, or to provide as to division of responsibility for accidents due to the negligence of the watchman. Held, that the watchman should be regarded as the agent of the company, whose trains or engines do the damage, and the municipality should not be responsible for any damages caused by the negligence of the watchman.

Re Royce Ave. Crossing (Toronto), 32 W.L.R. 227.

FLAGMEN—GATES.

The Board ordered that a watchman should be employed from 1st May to 1st October for the first year, to see if he would afford proper protection to the public crossing a railway at a public highway. Township to pay 15% of the cost and the G.T.R. Co. 85%; H.G. & B. Elec. R. Co. to pay nothing.

(§ IV—85)—INJURY TO PERSON ON TRACK—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

A railway company is not answerable for the death of a person who, in possession of his faculties of seeing and hearing, walks along a railway track without looking for an approaching train which he could have seen by the exercise of the most ordinary care.

Henrich v. C.P.R. Co., 12 D.L.R. 367, 15 Can. Ry. Cas. 393, 18 B.C.R. 578, 3 W.W.R. 709. On appeal this judgment set aside and judgment entered for $6,000. Taken to Supreme Court of Canada and appeal dismissed, 15 D.L.R. 472, 16 Can. Ry. Cas. 303, 48 Can. S.C.R. 557, 5 W.W.R. 1088, 26 W.L.R. 702. [See § II D—36, ante, p. 3836.]

A licensee who walks along a railway track assumes all risk of injury from being struck by trains.

Henrich v. C.P.R. Co., 12 D.L.R. 367, 15 Can. Ry. Cas. 393, 18 B.C.R. 578, 3 W.W.R. 709. [Reversed, see this title § II D—36, ante, p. 3836.]

(§ IV—91)—“LOOK AND LISTEN” DOCTRINE—CROSSING THE TRACKS.

Whether or not a person about to cross a railway track should have looked more than once to see if he could make the crossing in safety is a question of fact to be passed upon by the jury in the particular circumstances of each case.

MacKenzie v. B.C. Elec. R. Co., 15 D.L.R. 530, 19 B.C.R. 1, 16 Can. Ry. Cas. 337, 26 W.L.R. 577, 5 W.W.R. 1112.

ACCIDENT AT CROSSING—FAILURE TO STOP, LOOK AND LISTEN—DUTY OF PERSON ABOUT TO CROSS TRACK.

The duty incumbent on a person who is about to cross a railway track at a highway crossing at grade to look for moving trains is not satisfied by merely looking both ways on approaching the tracks; he must look again just before crossing.

COLLISION WITH AUTOMOBILE—DUTY OF DRIVER TO STOP, LOOK AND LISTEN.

It is not contributory negligence to drive an automobile across a railway track at a speed of eight miles an hour at a public highway crossing, although the plaintiff knew that trains and engines were liable to pass at any time, where, by reason of cars negligently left projecting into the highway it was impossible for him to discover the approach of an engine, although the statutory signals were given, where the plaintiff and those riding with him looked and listened before going upon the track without hearing the engine, which was traveling “light.”

FAILURE TO STOP, LOOK OR LISTEN.

It is a matter of common sense that a person about to pass over a railway crossing upon a level should look to see whether or not a train is approaching. The driver of a train approaching the crossing is entitled to rely upon such person using due care and stopping before reaching the track. He is not bound to anticipate negligence on the part of the person approaching the track and guard against it beforehand. He is only bound, where he has notice of the negligence, to take the ordinary means of evading its consequences. Where deceased, driving a carriage, attempted to cross the track of the defendant company without looking to see whether a train was approaching, or the direction from which the train was coming, the finding of the jury to the effect that deceased should have stopped a short distance from the track and made sure that there was no danger from trains, indicates that the efficient proximate cause of the accident was her not stopping, and that such cause was in force at the time of the accident.

INJURY TO THE PERSON—CROSSING—RECKLESS CONDUCT OF DRIVER OF VEHICLE.
Parent v. The King, 13 Can. Ex. 93.

(§ IV—98)—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE—AT CROSSINGS—RIDING WITH ANOTHER.

A person being given a gratuitous ride on a wagon and sitting beside the driver is under no duty on approaching the crossing of an electric railway to use extraordinary care as to the approach of cars; and on his being killed in a collision with a car not seen by either of them, an action on behalf of his family against the electric railway for damages for his death is not defeated by a finding that the deceased was negligent in not taking "extraordinary precautions to see that the road was clear," in view of further findings of excessive speed by the railway and that the railway motorman could have stopped the car and have avoided the accident had it not been for the defective brakes which the railway negligently maintained as part of the car equipment.

Loach v. R.C. Elec. R. Co., 16 D.L.R. 245, 27 W.L.R. 407, 6 W.W.R. 322, 17 Can. Ry. Cas. 21, 19 B.C.R. 177.

ACCIDENT AT CROSSING—RIDING WITH ANOTHER.

Contributory negligence of the person who had hired the vehicle and was himself driving it, is not attributable to the passenger who is riding with him in the vehicle and who has no control over same, in answer to the latter's action for damages against the railway, under the Fatal Accidents Act, (Ont.) where the passenger jumped from the vehicle when a collision seemed imminent and was killed and the accident was due to the company's neglect of its statutory duty under s. 276 of the Railway Act, Can., to give warning of the approach of the train moving reversely over a level crossing.

(§ IV—105)—INJURIES TO ANIMALS—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE—ONUS.

Under the provisions of sub-s. 4 and 5 of s. 294 of the Railway Act, 1906, the onus of establishing that horses were at large through the negligence of their owner or custodian, is upon the railway company seeking to avoid liability for their getting upon the right-of-way and being run down by a train.

INJURIES TO ANIMALS.

Where animals are killed while on the property of a railway company, and there being no evidence of the existence of any highway, the burden was on the defendants, under s. 294 of the Railway Act, 1906, to show that the animals were at large through the negligence or willful act of omission of the owner; and they had satisfied this onus by shewing from the plaintiff's own evidence, that when the horses were let out of the stable they could go anywhere they wished—that no restraint was imposed on them, and no care taken to see that they did not go directly to the railway track. Whether cattle are "at large" or no, depends upon whether they are under restraint or control, quite irrespective of whether they are on their owner's lands or not. Review of the authorities: If, however, the animals were not "at large" in this case, s. 294 did not apply, and the plaintiff had no cause of action because the defendants were under no liability to fence. Semble, that, upon the evidence, the injury might have been averted by more care on the part of the defendant's servants; but that was immaterial because the defendants owed no duty in respect of cattle trespassing on their property in the circumstances of this case. The defendants, in addition to pleading "not guilty by statute," pleaded a number of other defences, but no leave to do so having been obtained, they were not considered, r. 113, Judicature Act. The statement of defence was also insufficient in not stating the sections of the special Act relied on; but an amendment was permitted in this respect.

(§ V—115)—OBSTRUCTIONS OF WATER—CULVERT—NEGLIGENCE—DAMAGES.

A railway company is liable for the negligent manner of building a culvert placed in an embankment constructed for the railway if the culvert was not deep enough to carry the water where there had previously been a natural watercourse.

DRAINAGE—ADJOINING LANDS—DAMAGES.

The Board exercising the statutory power contained in s. 250 (2) of the Railway Act, 1906, to order a railway to construct a drain under its tracks for the benefit of an adjoining owner and to fix the terms and conditions, may order the work done by the railway at its own expense where the owner could have easily drained his land but for the railway intersecting the same; the statutory obligation so cast upon the railway will remain notwithstanding the land-owner's release in the conveyance of land for the right-of-way, of his claim for damages by reason of the exercise of the railway company's powers.

DRAINAGE — JURISDICTION — APPROVAL — RAILWAY ACT, s. 251.

By s. 251 of the Railway Act, 1906, before drainage works can be constructed on railway lands, the Board must be satisfied that the proposed works are sufficient and proper for railway operation and for the safety of the traveling public, and must approve the plans of such works.

OBSTRUCTION OF DRAINS AND DITCHES—INDEMNIFICATION—RAILWAY COMMISSION.

Although s. 250 of the Railway Act, 1906, gives exclusive jurisdiction to the Railway Commission to compel a company to make drainage works deemed necessary, one who suffers damages on account of the negligence of a railway company to carry out drainage works which the law required is not compelled to apply to the Railway Commission to have the works declared insufficient, before claiming damages in the civil courts. The compensation for expropriation granted to an owner of land under cultivation for all damages which he might suffer on account of the construction and laying out of a railway only covers damages which result from the construction of the railway, under the conditions provided for by the Act, and not those which result from the culpable negligence of the company to maintain ditches and drains sufficient to drain the lands divided by the construction of the way.

VII. Acquisition by government.

(§ VII—140) — "SUBSIDIES" — "ACTUAL COST" — INTEREST AND CHARGES ON BONDS.

The court was required to fix the value of certain railways to be acquired by the Crown under the provisions of 6 & 7 Geo. V. c. 22. By s. 2 of such statute it was provided that the consideration to be paid for each of the said railways should be the value as determined by the Exchequer Court of Canada, "said value to be the actual cost of the said railways, less subsidies and less depreciation, but not to exceed $4,349,000, exclusive of outstanding bonded indebtedness, which is to be assumed by the government, but not to exceed in all $2,500,000." Held, that the word "subsidies" in the above section did not relate only to those granted by the Dominion Government but extended to any subsidies granted by the provincial government to the railways in question. The court in finding the "actual cost" ought not to proceed as if the matter were an accounting between the directors of the railways and the shareholders. The duty of the court was to ascertain the value of the railways as between vendor and purchaser, and that value must be taken to be the actual cost of the railways less subsidies and less depreciation. Interest on bonds issued by the company and moneys paid on the flotation of bonds during the period of construction of the railways could not be included in "actual cost" as the term was used in the statute.

RECEIVING STOLEN PROPERTY.

PRESUMPTION FROM RECENT POSSESSION—REASONABLE EXPLANATION AS AFFECTING ONUS OF PROOF.

When the Crown has established such facts on a charge of receiving as, without more, will justify the judge trying the case without a jury in finding the accused guilty, the accused is not entitled to an acquittal unless he satisfies the onus then cast upon him, not to prove his innocence or honesty, but merely to raise a reasonable doubt of guilt. If a party is in possession of stolen property recently after the stealing, it lies on him to account for his possession, and if he fails to account for it satisfactorily, he is reasonably presumed to have come by it dishonestly, but it depends on the surrounding circumstances whether he is guilty of receiving or stealing. The reasonableness of the explanation is one for the jury or for the judge trying the charge without a jury, and depends not merely on the accused's statement but also upon the time and the manner of its being made and his conduct as consistent or inconsistent with it, as to which the failure of the accused to testify in support of his explanation might properly be taken into consideration by the jury or the judge as the case may be.

Greaves v. Cadieux, 33 D.L.R. 584, 50 Que. S.C. 361.

DONATION INTER VIVOS.

A contract of donation inter vivos is perfect without registration as between the donor and the donee. The registration of a deed of donation inter vivos is not necessary to permit a donee to acquire the title to an immovable by prescription.

Gravel v. Pare, 51 Que. S.C. 430.

PRIORITY—JUDGMENT—MORTGAGE.

A judgment registered in the Land Registry Office on an application made after the date of the execution of a mortgage by the judgment debtor, but before the application for the registration of such mortgage, takes priority, by virtue of s. 73 of the Land Registry Act, R.S.B.C. 1911, c. 127, over the mortgage. [Jellett v. Wilkie, 26 Can. S.C.R. 282; Entwistle v. Lenz, 14 B.C.R. 51, distinguished.]

SUPPLEMENTARY DEED—HYPOTHEC—THIRD PARTIES—INSOLVENCY.

Third parties cannot be bound by a stipulation in a supplementary deed fixing another period for the payment of a debt than the period mentioned in an hypothecary obligation, unless that second deed is registered. A creditor may take a personal action against his debtor and an hypothecary action against the third party in possession of the property, although the supplementary deed has not been registered, if the debtor has become insolvent, and such right is under art. 1092, C.C. (Que.). It is not necessary to have the above mentioned supplementary deed registered.

Larcher v. Kydd, 27 Que. K.B. 321.

RECORDS OF TITLE.

Under the Land Titles Act a document, the purpose of which is to charge land with a debt or loan, is a mortgage, and to be effective must be in the form provided by the Act. A document not complying with the statutory form of mortgage, can not be registered as a mortgage. The definition of "encumbrance" given in the interpretation clauses of the Act does not apply to the statutory encumbrance provided in s. 98, but the encumbrance there provided for is an instrument intended to create a charge upon land other than by way of debt or loan. An instrument, purporting to charge the land with a debt or loan, is not an encumbrance, and while in the form of an encumbrance, can not be registered as such. A document is objectionable and incapable of being registered when it contains a covenant to give a mortgage, but is not in form J or to like effect, as provided by the Act, the provisions of the Act being mandatory, and the use of the words "or to like effect" permitting only the inclusion of covenants, terms or remedies not affecting the substance of the form, and the inclusion of the covenant referred to, giving greater rights than those of a simple encumbrance, made the whole incapable of registration.

Rumely v. Registrar of Saskatchewan Land Registration District, 4 S.L.R. 466.

(§ III A—11)—RESCISSON OF REGISTRATION—PROOF OF OWNERSHIP.

A person who demands that the registration of an immovable should be expunged from the registry must prove that he is owner of the immovable, and his action will be dismissed if the property belongs to his wife.

CANCELLATION OF UNLAWFUL REGISTRATION OF A DEED.

The rules concerning the fear of eviction, the delay to have it disappear, which apply to the action to cancel a sale, do not apply to the action to cancel the unlawful registration of a deed, or of a promise of sale, as in the present case, not susceptible of registration.

E. REQUISITES AND SUFFICIENCY OF RECORD.
 (§ III B—15)—REQUISITES AND SUFFICIENCY—DEPOSIT OF MORTGAGE WITH REGISTRAR—PRIORITIES.

The mere deposit of a mortgage with the registrar of titles, although he did not endorse thereon a certificate as to the day and hour of registration as required by s. 50 of the Manitoba Registry Act, R.S.M. c. 150, amounts, under s. 49 of the Act, to a registration of the instrument so as to give it priority over a subsequently executed deed conveying the encumbered land to a purchaser for value, who did not have notice of the existence of the mortgage, although a certificate of registration in compliance with the Act was endorsed on the deed prior to the endorsement of a similar certificate on the mortgage.

DEEDS—REQUISITES—CONSIDERATION.

In order that a deed may be operative under the Registry Act it must be founded on a valuable consideration: a mere recital of such payment in the deed is not enough, and to overcome it it is necessary to prove valuable consideration and absence of notice. (R.S.N.S. 1900, c. 137, s. 15.)

DEED OF DONATION INTER VIVOS—OMISSIONS—HYPOTHECARY RIGHTS.

In the registration of a deed of donation inter vivos the omission of the following words, "and the accomplishment of the other obligations above mentioned," in a clause creating a hypothec to guarantee the payments imposed by the donation does not affect this registration nor the hypothecary rights of the parties, because it does not fall within any essential provision which should

C. NECESSITY OF RECORDING; EFFECT OF FAILURE; RELIANCE UPON RECORDS.

(§ III C—20)—NECESSITY OF RECORDING—EFFECT OF FAILURE.

The business of a real estate agent may be carried on by a sole proprietor, without incorporation, using as his business style a company name or designation without registering a declaration of such company name under the Partnership Act (Alta.) 1908, c. 5. The business of buying and selling real estate on his own account may be carried on by a sole proprietor, without incorporation, using as his business style, a company name or designation without registering a declaration of such company name under the Act.

(§ III C—21)—AS AGAINST CREDITORS AND SUBSEQUENT PURCHASERS.

The requirement of R.S.S. 1909, c. 45, relating to the registration of lien notes and conditional sale agreements, does not, by the express provisions of s. 11 thereof, apply to the resale by a vendor under such a note or agreement, upon a vendee's default, of goods or chattels of the value of $15 or over, which have in the name of the vendor, who has an office in Saskatchewan, stamped thereon or affixed thereto.

A sale of a stack of hay is invalid against an execution creditor under s. 3 of the Bills of Sale and Chattel Mortgage Act, R.S.M. 1902, c. 11, providing that every unregistered sale must be accompanied by an immediate delivery followed by an actual and continual change of possession, where the sale was made by the owner of the hay giving it and some cash in payment of an overdue note of his, held by the buyer, who permitted the hay to remain on the premises occupied by the seller where it was seized on execution by the creditor under a judgment obtained after the sale.

FAILURE TO REGISTER SUBDIVISION PLAN.

A purchaser buying under a registered plan without notice of a prior unregistered plan shewing streets and roads, and under which leases were granted of which he had no notice, is entitled to the protection of the Registry Act (Ont.), and is not bound by the prior plan.

EFFECT OF REGISTRY—NOTICE—RIGHTS OF SUBSEQUENT PURCHASERS.

To disentitle a party from insisting in equity on a legal priority acquired under a registry law, actual notice is required; after such notice it would be a fraud for the party who had bought with notice to claim the benefit of the registry law as against the unregistered claim of which he had notice. Tom Gung v. Fong Lee, 22 D.L.R. 809, 48 N.S.R. 317.

(§ III C—24)—NOTICE DEBORS RECORD—VENDOR AND PURCHASER—NOTICE OF UNREGISTERED INSTRUMENT—TIME.

A purchaser without notice of a prior unregistered instrument affecting the lands will take title free from the unregistered instrument although he received notice thereof between the date on which he completed the purchase and the date on which he registered the conveyance to himself under the Registry Act (Ont.) 1910, 19 Edw. VII. c. 60. [Millar v. Smith, 23 U.C.C.P. 47, distinguished.]

NOTICE DEBORS RECORD—PRIORITIES—MORTGAGES.

The time of "actual notice" to be regarded under the Registry Act, Ont., 10 Edw. VII. c. 60, s. 71, as displacing priority of registration, is the time at which and before which an interest in the land is being acquired: actual notice of two prior mortgages at the time of taking an assignment of a mortgage third in point of time will prevent the assignee acquiring priority over the second mortgage registered after the registration of the third mortgage so assigned, where the original mortgagee under the third mortgage also had notice of the second mortgage when he took the third. D. AS NOTICE; EFFECT OF RECORDING.

(§ III D—30)—AS NOTICE—EFFECT OF RECORDING—ACTUAL NOTICE, EFFECT OF.

Section 104 of the Land Registry Act, R.S.B.C. c. 107, does not operate to establish a title in a registered owner as against the equitable interest of a purchaser in possession of whose claim the registered owner had notice on acquiring the property. [Chapman v. Edwards, 16 B.C.R. 334, applied.]

SUBSTITUTION—SALE UNDER EXECUTION—TITLE.

A judgment creditor, who becomes the purchaser at a sheriff's sale of land under execution against an institute subsequent to the registration of the substitution, will be creating the substitution not having been registered before an abandonment by the institute, does not require a superior real right to the land as against the rights of the substitute.

GRANTEE UNDER QUIT CLAIM DEED AS BONA FIDE PURCHASER—PRIORITY TO PREVIOUS UNREGISTERED LIEN.

Under the Registry Act a grantee under a registered quit claim deed without notice, who holds the land as trustee for the payment of certain claims, stands in the position of a bona fide purchaser and has a prior right over a previous agreement by the grantor to give a mortgage and specifically charging the land with a lien inoperative under s. 7 of the Lien Notes Act, R.S.M. c. 115. APPLICATION TO REGISTER LAND AGREEMENT AND ASSIGNMENT—NOTICE TO ONE FILING MECHANIC'S LIEN.

A., as security for a loan, received from B. a conveyance in fee simple of lands, subject to an agreement for sale. A. also received, by way of separate document, an assignment of the agreement for sale, containing the usual vendor's covenants. A. then filed for registration on one application the agreement for sale and assignment, and this was not disposed of until after the sale hereinafter mentioned. A short while afterwards, mechanics' liens were filed against these lands: action was taken, judgment secured, and the lands sold to C. A. was not made a party to the action, was not brought in on the reference as to the title, and had no notice of the proceedings until several months after the sale. The registrar of the court, by inadvertence, omitted to make any mention of A.'s application for registration, although there was produced to him on the reference a certificate of encumbrance on which the application was noted. A.'s application was cancelled by the District Registrar some time after the above sale, on the ground that as the vendor was registered in fee, they could not register the vendor's assignment of the agreement. A. now sued C. for title to the land:—Held, that as C. had been negligent in not searching the records of the Land Registry office, notice could be imputed to him, even though the District Registrar had rejected A.'s application.

KNOWLEDGE OF UNREGISTERED RIGHT — RIGHT OF SUBSEQUENT PURCHASER.

Knowledge acquired of an unregistered right belonging to a third party and subject to the formality of registration cannot prejudice the rights of one who has since acquired it for value.

Doyle v. Couture, 48 Que. S.C. 124.

KNOWLEDGE OF UNREGISTERED RIGHT.

One who has only an apparent title, founded on mistake, cannot set up such title and its registration dispossesses the real owner of whose unregistered rights he has knowledge. The object of art. 2985, C.C. (Que.) is to protect one who has acquired property for value and by a registered title but not one who wishes to profit by an error in order to appropriate to himself another's property.

Sirois v. Levasseur, 48 Que. S.C. 465.

DEED—SUPPLEMENTARY AGREEMENT.

Third parties cannot be affected by an agreement, between the parties to an unregistered deed, fixing another date than that mentioned in a registered deed as the time when the payment under an obligation will become exigible.

Drouin v. Legault, 25 Que. K.B. 74.

(§ III D—31)—RECORDS AS NOTICE TO SUBSEQUENT PURCHASERS.

A purchaser of land takes with notice of the existence of a contract for its sale made by his vendor, where, at the time of purchase, an application to register such agreement, as well as the agreement itself, was on file in the land registry office.

Mills v. Marriott, 3 D.L.R. 266, 20 W.L.R. 917, 17 B.C.R. 171, 2 W.W.R. 150.

RECORDS AS NOTICE TO SUBSEQUENT PURCHASERS—SCOPE OF NOTICE.

Where an agreement of sale of land is duly registered in the registry office by the purchaser, the notice thereby imputed to a subsequent purchaser of the same land is construed as covering the prior purchaser's full rights.

REGISTRATION—AS NOTICE TO SUBSEQUENT PURCHASERS.

The principle on which registry laws proceed is that an opportunity is afforded to examine the title, and a person acquiring land ought to see if there is anything registered against such land, and for that purpose he is assumed to make a complete search in the registry office. [Trust and Loan Co. v. Shaw, 16 Gr. 446, applied.]

REGISTRATION OF SUPPLEMENTARY DOCUMENT TO DEED—NOTICE TO SUBSEQUENT PURCHASER—HYPOTHEC.

It is necessary to register the supplementary document mentioned in a deed as being annexed thereto when such document contains important clauses the knowledge of which is essential for the protection of a third party. But when in such supplementary document not registered there is found a condition that the borrower upon hypothec must make known to the lender every change in the property hypothecated under penalty of the entire debt becoming exigible, a person subsequently acquiring the property is not bound by such clause and can resist an hypothecary action.

TO EXPERTS—QUEBEC PRACTICE.

A reinscription is then necessary to enable the court to be seized anew of the cause, and this reinscription being a useful proceeding it will effect an interruption of peremption.

Mantha v. Hamelin, 14 Que. P.R. 369.

(§ 1-3)—WHAT INCLUDED IN ORDER FOR.

In an action for an instalment of purchase money due on a contract for the sale of lands the court will order a reference to ascertain what right or interest was held therein by the vendor, who, at the time and immediately before the commencement of the action, was in actual possession thereof, and under what right he holds, as well as what taxes are outstanding against it; and also require the vendor to produce all documents and writings in his possession that shew his title or interest therein; and that upon the filing of the report of the registrar either party may apply for such judgment as he may deem himself entitled to.

(§ 1-4)—POWERS OF REFERENCE.

The clerk of a court cannot, upon a reference to him to ascertain the plaintiff's damages, consider the question of the liability of the defendant in the action, since that was settled by the order of reference.

The report of the clerk of the court on a reference to him of the account of a receiver in an action for the dissolution of a partnership, must shew particularly: (1) the cash, (2) the outstanding assets, (3) the partnership liabilities, distinguishing between secured and unsecured, and those admitted, proved or disputed, (4) the individual liability of each partner for partnership debts, (5) the account between each partner and the firm, (6) the accounts of the receivers and of any auditor appointed to take the partnership accounts, (7) the interest of either partner in a mortgage on partnership land, and (8) the specific charges against the interest of each.

If in a partnership action in which both partners were equally responsible for the method of keeping the accounts, plaintiff partner files the firm's balance sheet, verified by an auditor, or other satisfactory evidence, the plaintiff's case is prima facie proved, and, if the evidence is not answered by the defendant partner, it is the duty of the Master hearing the reference to proceed with the reference without ordering the plaintiff to produce further accounts, saving the Master's right to order the production of such further accounts as he may find necessary as the reference proceeds.

REPORT AND FINDINGS.

Where mortgage accounts are the basis of a Master's report, involving the marshalling of assets as between senior and junior mortgages, and the sale of part of an incumbered estate with various equities set up by defendant purchasers, the facts upon which the Master proceeds should be set out in his report so that in case of appeal all necessary material may be before the court.

(§ 1-7)—RECOMMITMENT.

(§ I-1)—CONTRACT FOR SALE OF LAND—MISTAKE.

Where, in drafting a contract for the sale of land, the purchaser and his solicitor testified that the latter omitted a stipulation to the effect that the purchaser might encumber the lands to a certain amount in priority to a mortgage given for a portion of the purchase money, and the latter instrument contained a condition to that effect, the contract will be reformed so as to include such conditions, notwithstanding the vendor denied all knowledge of such understanding, as she had nothing to do with the transaction, which was managed entirely by her husband, who had since died.

Where the conveyance of the northern portion of a lot of land, lying on the south side of a street and having for its western boundary another street crossing the first street at an angle greater than a right angle, erroneously made the southern line of the portion sold run parallel to the street the lot faced instead of a fence and the line thereof continued running at right angles to the other street, as the parties intended, thus excluding a portion of the lot intended to be conveyed, and afterwards the owner transferred the southern part of the lot by a conveyance describing its northern boundary to be the south line of the land first conveyed and the grantee in the second deed admitted that she had bought only to the fence, the first deed will be so reformed as to make the fence and its line produced the boundary line between two parcels. (§ II B—11)—CLAIM FOR PERSONAL INJURIES — EFFECT OF RELEASE — SUBSEQUENT DEATH FROM INJURIES.

The right of action given by the Families Compensation Act, R.S.B.C. c. 82, to a legal representative or dependant of a deceased person for damages for injuries resulting in the death of such person through the alleged negligence of the defendants, may be barred by a valid instrument of releases executed by the deceased.

(§ II B—12)—RIGHT TO DAMAGES—RAILWAY INJURING ADJOINING PROPERTY.

A release of all damages which the landowner conveying a strip of land for a railway right-of-way may sustain "by reason of the construction and operation of the railway" and which does not specifically cover injuries due to the company's negligence, will not prevent a recovery for damages occasioned to the adjoining lands of the grantor by blasting operations conducted by the construction contractor, in respect of which the railway company in letting the contract was negligent in imposing no precautions for protecting the adjoining land.

RIGHT TO DAMAGES.

Where a vendor of a portion of land for the construction of a railway renounces the right to damages which may result therefrom, the renunciation only extends to those damages which are the necessary consequence of the work and not to those which can be avoided.

Marcotte v. Davis, 3 D.L.R. 851.

RIGHT TO DAMAGES.

A contract which involves the loss of a right is strictly construed. Therefore, the reservation, by the owner of land who permits it to be taken for railway purposes, of his recourse for possible damages resulting from the obstruction or closing of a way of access to the River St. Lawrence is not affected by the agreement in the sale he makes, on the same day, to the company of the same land that the price "shall include all damages . . . for the passage of the railway . . . over the land above sold."

RIGHTS IN CHURCH PEWS.

When a church ceases to be used as such or is destroyed, and is replaced by a new one, the grantees of pews have no right in the new church to the pews corresponding to those they were occupying in the old one. The contracts, by virtue of which they were occupying those pews in the old church come to an end through the destruction of the thing which was their object; and no distinction has to be made between the deeds of concession for life or of concession in consideration of an annual rent. The allotment by a vestry board to the grantees in the new church of pews corresponding to those occupied by them in the old church is illegal and null. All the pews of a new church, with the exception of the patronal pew, if one is established, must be conceded anew by auction, according to the tenure in force in the parish.

(§ III A-21)—CONVEYANCES TO—CHURCH LANDS ACT—INSURANCE.

Even though the form set forth in s. 1 of the Church Lands Act, R.S.M. 1913, c. 31, is not exactly followed, the statute applies to land conveyed to trustees and their successors and assigns in trust for a church congregation, if the name of the church or congregation is set forth in the conveyance; the trustees, though not a corporation, may hold the land and may procure the insurance of buildings on the land. It was held that the form set forth in the Act must be strictly followed.

C. RIGHTS OF MAJORITY AND MINORITY.

(§ III C-30)—RIGHTS OF MAJORITY AND MINORITY.

The trustees of a church cannot be compelled to transfer the church property to a majority of the congregation where a majority have seceded from the religious principles of the original founders and joined a different sect; the trustees may in such case transfer the property in accordance with a resolution of the members of the congregation adhering to the original doctrines, and the fact that a considerable part of the debt on the church has been paid since dissections arose, but before the actual severance took place, will not assist the secessionists in an action to set aside such transfer.

The construction of a church is an obligation of the parish which is bound to provide the expenses necessary for public worship. It has the right to be previously consulted, to discuss and decide itself, at a meeting of the parishioners, the question whether or not the church should be built. The vestry, although a corporation, has merely the powers of administration as the agent of the parishioners. Even at a meeting of the old and new churchwardens, the vestry cannot be authorized to incur extraordinary expenses without the consent of the freeholders, such as the construction of a church, even though it is intended to proceed in part only in the first place by the construction of a basement.

Although a judicial order issued in the face of an entire want of jurisdiction ab initio (as distinct from an erroneous exercise of jurisdiction), being a mere nullity, need not, strictly speaking, be set aside to avoid giving effect to its provisions, yet the better practice is formally to declare its nullity in order to restore the rights of parties on the record. Where, after trial and judgment in a County Court (Man.) action, the judge, through inadvertence, and without jurisdiction enters an order transferring the proceedings to the King's Bench, such order is a mere nullity and ought to be disregarded. LIABILITY—EFFECT OF SUIT OR RECOVERY.

The owner who brings an action of revention to recover a team of horses left in the possession of the defendant by the person by whom they had been hired from the owner, and who accepts in settlement of suit the costs and a sum of money in full value of the said property which thus passes to the defendant, does not thereby waive his right to the value of the use of the property during the interval between the institution of the suit and the settlement thereof, and has an action against the defendant to recover the same.

O'Brien v. Maloney, 1 D.L.R. 760.

ACTION—JURISDICTION—PASTURAGE AGREEMENT—RIGHT OF RETENTION.

In a revention action the jurisdiction of the Superior Court is determined by the amount at which the article sold is valued in the declaration. And when the plaintiff restricts himself to reventing the article on which he claims a right of retention, and of which he claims to have been illegally dispossessed without asking that the defendant pay the debt due to him, the court cannot give judgment outside of the conclusions, and the only question to solve is that of deciding whether the plaintiff possesses the right of retention which he claims. An agreement for pasturage of a horse is, from its nature, a lease which includes an obligation by the lessor to procure for the lessee the enjoyment of the pasturage required for feeding of the horse, and by the lessee an obligation to pay the rent or price of such enjoyment; such agreement gives the lessee authority to drive his horse into the pasturage, to leave it there to graze, and to go and seek it as he likes, but does not take away from him any right of possession of his horse, and does not give any to the lessor. A right of retention can only result from the law, or an express stipulation in the contract; it cannot be presumed, or based upon simple reasons of equity.

Paquette v. Beauvais, 24 Rev. de Jur. 428.

POSSESSION OF MOVABLE.

Seizure in revention may be exercised against one who claims to be owner of a movable although it may be in the possession of another person when the latter claims no right of property in the movable.

Belisle v. Paliquin 52 Que. S.C. 346.

TITLE OF OWNER—AFFIDAVIT—SERVICE.

A seizure in revention will not be dismissed on exception to the form because the plaintiff did not set out the title by virtue of which he claims to be owner of the goods seized. An affidavit which indicates the business premises of the deponent complies with the requirements of the law. Failure to serve or to leave with the prothonotary, for the defendant, a copy of the affidavit supporting a seizure in revention is a good ground for an exception to the form if the failure is not remedied.

Liverman v. Romero 18 Que. P.R. 231.

AFFIDAVIT—SERVICE—ADDRESS—EXCEPTION TO FORM.

If an exception to the form is taken to a seizure in revention based upon the fact that the copy of the affidavit on the faith of which it was issued was not served on the defendant or left for him with the prothonotary, the plaintiff will be given a certain time to enable him to serve such affidavit, the costs of the exception to be paid by him in any event. The fact that the maker of the affidavit, styling himself "of the defendant company domiciled at Montreal," does not give his address is not a ground for dismissing a seizure in revindication on an exception to the form.

A saisie—revindication is a conservatory measure which can be taken by one or several of the owners of the property revindicated and a dilatory exception to add the other owners as parties will be dismissed. Beaulieu v. Moquin, 18 Que. P.R. 181.

RULES OF COURT.

AMENDMENT OF—POWERS OF JUDGES—REDRAFTING.

Under r. 713 of the Alberta rules the judges of the Supreme Court are "authorized to alter and amend any rules of court or tariff of costs or fees for the time being in force or make additional rules or tariffs." This rule includes the redrafting of a rule in entirely different language if what is done is in reality merely an alteration.

ILLEGALITY OF SALE—STEAM BOILERS ACT.

Where a traction engine is not constructed in accordance with the Steam Boilers Act (R.S.S. 1911, c. 22, s. 19), but the affidavit of the proper officer of the company states that it has been constructed in accordance with the plans required, and owing to the nature of the defect, it is not discovered by the inspector of steam boilers, and the reduction in pressure required by regulation 1 of the Department of Public Works has consequently not been made, and, therefore, neither the statute nor the regulations having been complied with, the sale of such engine is wholly illegal and cannot be

WHAT CONSTITUTES — NEITHER CHATTELS NOR EVIDENCE OF CONTRACT DELIVERED—EFFECT—"MERE INTENTION" TO EFFECT AN ILLEGAL OBJECT.

A declaration by the original owner of chattels that he had sold and by the alleged purchaser that he had purchased such chattels, falls short of an actual assignment of the property in the goods where there was no delivery of either documents or chattels to the alleged purchaser, nor was intention of formality cured by a "mere intention" to effect an illegal object.

BULK SALES ACT—"LIQUOR LICENSE AND STOCK-IN-TRADE"—HOTEL FURNITURE.

The sale of a liquor license and stock-in-trade is within the Bulk Sales Act, 1910-11, c. 38, but it is a condition precedent to setting aside the sale that the purchaser must have paid some part of the purchase money or have delivered some security therefor to the vendor, without taking the steps provided in the Act for the protection of the creditors; the attacking party fails if the purchase money remained still available for the creditors. The furniture of an hotel cannot be considered goods, wares or merchandise ordinarily the subject of trade and commerce so as to come within the Bulk Sales Act (Sask.) 1910-11, c. 38.

Where plaintiffs proposed that defendant act as their agent in running a store and the plaintiffs supplied the defendant with goods, but subsequently the parties failed to reach an agreement in regard to the terms of a written contract of agency which had been drawn up, but the plaintiffs still kept supplying goods to the defendant sending him weekly invoices indicating that they were for goods "sold" to the defendant with the charge carried out, and which invoices were signed by the defendant, the course of the dealing between the parties is that of seller and buyer rather than that of principal and agent.

INSTALLATION OF MACHINERY—WORK AND LABOUR.

▲ verbal agreement for the sale and in-installation of an oil burning plant which involves the work of ripping out an old plant and affixing to the freehold the substituted equipment is a contract for work and labour and not for goods sold and delivered, which is not governed by the provisions of the Sale of Goods Act (B.C.). TRANSFER OF LITIGIOUS RIGHTS—DISCHARGING MUNICIPALITY FROM LIABILITY—TAXES ILLEGALLY IMPOSED.

A transfer by a person of all rights, actions and claims against a municipality for repayment of taxes illegally and irregularly imposed upon immovable properties and paid by him, is a sale of litigious rights permitting to the municipality to be relieved of liability in the manner provided by art. 1582 C.C. (Que.).

SALE BY INTERVENTION—WHEN ACCEPTED BY PRINCIPAL.

Henry v. Beaulieu, 47 Que. S.C. 458.

IN GENERAL.

The plaintiffs submitted a written proposal to defendant to supply and erect in operating order in the basement of defendant's theatre, on foundations supplied by defendant, an engine, generator and switchboard for a sum mentioned. The proposal embodied specifications for the engine describing an "Ideal" engine in language evidently that of the manufacturers as follows: "The Ideal engine is particularly adapted to direct connected work on account of its perfect balance, quiet running." The proposal was accepted by defendant who had previously selected the kind of engine he wanted from a number of different kinds mentioned in the preliminary discussions. The plaintiffs performed the contract, but the engine could not be made to run quietly enough to satisfy the defendant as the noise was heard in the auditorium above. Held, that the bargain was not a sale of goods but a contract for work and materials and that there was no warranty that the engine would be "quiet running" but only a recommendation of the type of engine chosen for the work required. The clause was general in its terms and had not in view any particular use of the engine. [Chalmers v. Harding, 17 L.T. 571, followed.]

Meldrum v. Martens, 17 O.W.N. 119.

OF PARTNERSHIP RIGHTS.

When an offer is made by one of three members of a firm, to the other two, to buy them out, or to sell them "his rights in said business" for a specified sum and the latter alternative is accepted by them, there is a completed contract of sale by the proposer to the acceptors. It covers the seller's share of all the assets of the firm and includes moneys in excess of $500, deposited to its credit, at the time, in a bank, a third of which the seller claims to be his under the following clause in the articles of partnership: "Profits are to be divided monthly as soon as the partnership has to its credit at the bank a surplus of $500."

School v. Sophketes, 44 Que. S.C. 404.

INSOLVENCY—REVENDEICATION.

If a merchant sends to a tailor a quantity of cloth saying, "You will pay me as fast as you sell it," it is not a sale but a mandate to sell on commission; upon insolvency of the merchant the curator may, by seizure in revendication, compel the tailor to return the goods.

Lapierra v. Beaudry, 49 Que. S.C. 399.

ACCOMPLISHMENT OF SALE—DELIVERY.

Under art. 1478, C.C. (Que.) a promise of sale is not equivalent to a sale unless it is accompanied by delivery and actual possession; this rule applies not only to a promise which is unilateral but also to one which is bilateral.

Greaux v. Cadieux, 50 Que. S.C. 361.

LITIGIOUS RIGHTS—BILL OF COSTS.

The assignment of a bill of costs in a contested case by an attorney ad litem, to another attorney who has been substituted for him, is not a sale of litigious rights.

Millette v. Mayer, 50 Que. S.C. 312.

MISTAKE AS TO PRICE—NULLITY.

Price is an essential element of the contract of sale; consequently, when the parties have failed to agree upon the price there has been no sale. Where the seller has parted with his property by reason of a mistake as to price he has the right to revendicate it without asking the rescission of the contract of sale.

Martineau v. Plante, 50 Que. S.C. 102.

GOODS OF THIRD PERSON—COMMERCIAL OR CIVIL CONTRACT.

The exceptions to the nullity of the sale of a thing which does not belong to the seller, contained in arts. 1488-9, C.C. (Que.) should be strictly interpreted. When a dealer in automobiles sells one to a non-trader, and takes from him another machine in part payment, the contract made by the dealer is commercial and that by the non-trader is purely civil. If a nontrading vendor is only the hirer of a machine which had been seized in revendication by the owner, the purchaser, although a trader in such matters, does not fall within the exceptions mentioned in arts. 1488-9.

Themens v. McLaughlin Carriage Co., 49 Que. S.C. 393.

OF THINGS SUBJECT TO LIEN.

A sale of things subject to a lien may be ordered provided the purchaser, before taking possession, fully disinterests the lien holder.

Gingras v. Maher, 19 Que. P.R. 230.

FARM MACHINERY — WRITTEN AGREEMENT FOR SALE NOT IN NAME OF REAL VENDOR — THEREFORE NO WRITTEN AGREEMENT IN FORM A. UNDER THE FARM IMPLEMENT ACT—PURCHASER ENTITLED TO RETURN OF PURCHASE-PRICE.

The defendant sold to plaintiff a tractor, but the written agreement purported to be made between the M.Coy. and plaintiff, whereas the M.Coy. had nothing to do with the sale. The court, therefore, found that there was no agreement in form A. under the Farm Implement Act between the vendog and purchaser for the sale and judgment was given to plaintiff for return of the purchase-price less the profits made by him with the machine, the defendant to have repossession.

Taylor v. Jones, [1919] 2 W.W.R. 789.

FARM MACHINERY—THE FARM IMPLEMENT ACT, SASK. 1915, c. 28—OMISSION FROM CONTRACT OF SALE OF WARRANTY CLAUSE REQUIRED BY ACT—CONTRACT INVALID—REPAYMENT AND DELIVERY UP OF NOTES TO PURCHASER AND REPOSSESSION BY VENDOR.

Under the Farm Implement Act, c. 28, (Sask.), there must be inserted in a contract for sale of a "large implement" the clause that "the vendor warrants that the said machinery is well made and of good materials," without which clause the contract is invalid. Where by mistake the vendors omitted this in their form of contract, judgment was given the purchaser declaring the agreement invalid and cancelling same and for delivery up of the notes given by the purchaser and repayment to him of the amount paid under the contract; upon payment as aforesaid and costs the vendors to have possession of the machinery. Rectification was refused because the evidence did not show that both parties intended the contract to be something other than it was.

Frost v. La Compagnie des Jardin, [1919] 2 W.W.R. 457.

CONTRACT—ENTERED INTO ON SUNDAY—VALIDITY.

A contract for the sale and delivery of goods entered into on Sunday is null and void as being in contravention of the Act to Prevent the Profanation of the Lord's Day (R.S.S. 1909, c. 69). One who has taken delivery of goods sold under a void contract must either return the goods or pay for them.

(§ I A—2) — WHAT PASSES AS APPURTENANT.

Upon an agreement to sell a hotel premises and contents as a going concern at a fixed price to which was to be added the invoice cost price of the liquors on hand, the contract will be presumed to include quantities of wood and ice kept on the hotel premises and also the food supplies.

EFFECT—WHAT PASSES AS APPURTENANCE — SALE OF MINE — RESERVATION OF "EARNINGS" TILL DELIVERY OF POSSESSION—WHAT WITHIN—COAL STORED—CASH AND BOOK DEBTS.

In a contract for the sale in presenti of a controlling interest in a colliery company of which the vendor had possession and control de facto, a reservation to the latter of the "earnings of the properties" up to the time of closing the sale, taken in conjunction with the vendor's covenant to keep the property intact in the meantime, does not operate to enable the vendor to retain coal and coke in hand at the date of the contract, nor cash and book debts then belonging to the colliery company; the "earnings" in such case are what the vendor can in the interim make by operating, manufacturing and trading in the ordinary way of business so far as the purchaser's consent can authorize him to do so, the vendor paying all the expenses of operation and upkeep and keeping for himself all the moneys representing the proceeds of coal mined, sold, and shipped during the period.

B. PASSING OF TITLE: DELIVERY.

(§ 1 B—5)—DELIVERY—TIME FOR—SILENCE OF ORDER AS TO TIME.

Shipment of goods within a reasonable time is sufficient where the written order for their purchase is silent as to the time of delivery.

DELIVERY — STANDING TIMBER — SEVERANCE — EFFECT — PASSING OF TITLE — DELIVERY — SUFFICIENCY OF — RETENTION OF VENDOR'S LIEN.

Where a bargain and sale is completed with respect to goods, and everything to be done on the part of the seller before the property should pass has been performed, then the property in the goods vests in the purchaser, although the vendor still retains his lien, the price of the goods not having been paid. [Sweeting v. Turner, L.R. 7 Q.R. 313, and Tarling v. Baxter, 6 B. & C. 360, applied.] On a sale of a quantity of logs of stated dimensions to be taken out of the seller's standing timber by the buyer by which the latter acquired the right to cut all the timber of a suitable class upon the land, the severance from the freehold makes the cut timber chattels. [McGregor v. McNeil, 32 U.C.C.P. 538, followed.]

PASSING OF PROPERTY — EXECUTORY CONTRACT—APPROPRIATION FROM STOCK.

Where an order is given for goods with an implied assent to appropriation by the seller to fill the order, the contract is an executory one of bargain and sale until the appropriation has actually been made, and property in the goods does not pass before appropriation so as to support an action for goods sold and delivered if the buyer countermands the order.

PASSING OF TITLE—DELIVERY—GRAIN STORAGE TICKET—PRESUMPTIONS, HOW REBUTTED.

The presumption raised by the taking of a grain storage ticket in the shipper's own name that he intended to retain the right of disposal and that the property in the goods did not pass, may be rebutted by evidence showing that he did not intend to retain any control or interest in the property represented by the storage ticket of an elevator company, but did intend that the whole property in the goods should pass to another having an equitable claim thereto of which he gave the elevator company notice.

PASSING OF TITLE—NEW COMPANY TO TAKE OVER BUSINESS.

Title to farm machinery purchased by the plaintiff and his associates never vested in a subsequently incorporated company, which was to take over their business, where the plaintiff, after the incorporation of the company, on being compelled to pay for the machinery received an assignment from his associates and the seller of the machinery of all their interest therein, and nothing was ever done to transfer title to the company; and the plaintiff may recover the machinery from one claiming title through the company.

PASSING OF TITLE—PERFORMANCE—DELIVERY OF DIFFERENT KIND OF ARTICLE.

An agreement for the sale of an engine with a condition that it should be of a stipulated type and power is not carried out or performed by the seller merely furnishing an engine of a different type and power. [Wallis v. Pratt, [1911] A.C. 394, at 396, applied.]

GRAIN—DELIVERY—"BUYER'S OPTION."

In a sale of grain deliverable at the "buyer's option," the seller is under no duty to procure cars for loading the grain before the option had been exercised.

Strong v. Heuer, 35 D.L.R. 396, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 764, 12 A.L.R. 173, affirming [1917] 2 W.W.R. 27.

IMMEDIATE — VESTING OF PROPERTY — DESTRUCTION — BURDEN OF LOSS.

Where there is an immediate sale and nothing remains to be done by the vendor as between him and the vendee, the property in the thing sold vests in the vendee and all the consequences resulting from the vesting follow, one of which is that if it is destroyed the loss falls on the vendee. The note of the buyer imports also an immediate, perfect, absolute agreement for sale.

Held, that a contract for the sale of certain straw and hay, the purchaser agreeing not to "use" the straw until it was paid for, was a contract for an immediate sale, and the property in the goods passed immediately to the vendee who must suffer the loss, it having been subsequently destroyed.

GOODS NOT SPECIFIED OR ASCERTAINED.

A contract for the sale of 1,200 bushels of wheat, which may be complied with by the delivery of any 1,200 bushels of wheat, is not a sale of any specific or ascertained wheat; s. 18 of the Sale of Goods Act (Sask.) applies, and no property in the goods is transferred to the buyer, unless and until the goods are ascertained.

PURCHASE PRICE—RIGHT TO REFUND.

A purchaser of goods who has paid the purchase price agreed upon, and for which he has received full consideration, has no further interest in such purchase price. The refusal of the vendor to accept a portion of the purchase price which he has agreed might be charged by the agent making the sale, does not entitle the purchaser to a refund of this amount, as having been paid for a particular purpose which has failed.

SALE OF ANOTHER'S PROPERTY — STOLEN GOODS—ATTACHMENT.

The depository of merchandise who is surreptitiously dispossessed by a person taking the name of the depositor, and who sells these stolen goods to a third person, has a right to an attachment against him. The rules of exception to the nullity of the sale of the thing stolen, contained in arts. 1488 to 1490 of C.C. (Que.), ought to be interpreted strictly and with limitation. It is sound legal doctrine that any contract or bargain may take on the character of commerciality as to one of the contracting parties and non-commerciality as to the other party; and in this case the contract is not commercial in the meaning of arts. 1488, 1489, 1490, relating to the sale of the thing stolen. Article 1489 applies only to one who exercises his trade publicly, ostensibly and habitually in the locality where he is known and the fact of occasionally selling effects at the place of business of the purchasers cannot constitute this occasional vendor "a trader dealing in similar articles." The meaning of the word "stolen" in art. 1489 should not be interpreted restrictively so as to be absolutely within the limits of the definitions of the Can. Dig.—123.

authors of criminal law, but it should be largely extended; and it is sufficient that the lawful possessor be dispossessed of the thing fraudulently, by one who wrongfully appropriated it, in order that the latter's act may constitute a theft.

Charron v. Walker, 54 Que. S.C. 439.

DELIVERY—DUTY OF SELLER.

In the absence of a counter agreement the seller is not bound to send or carry the goods to the buyer; he does all that he is bound to do by leaving or placing the goods at the buyer's disposal so that the latter is able to remove them.

DELIVERY AND ACCEPTANCE — GIVING IN PAYMENT.

Giving in payment is not an act of commerce intrinsically, but it may become so by reason of the status of the parties. Thus, when a giving in payment is set up by a trader against a nontrader, it cannot be proved by witnesses. The exception contained in art. 2260, par. 5, C.C. (Que.), which says that a sale of movables between a trader and a person who is not, is always considered to be a commercial sale, is limited to the sale, and like every exception cannot be extended. Now, according to art. 1592, C.C. (Que.), a giving in payment is not a sale, and is only equivalent to a sale when there has been delivery. When a purchaser takes possession of goods that he claims to have purchased notwithstanding the prohibition of the owner there has been neither delivery nor acceptance of these goods.

Toronto Furniture Co. v. Devon Lumber Co., 17 O.W.N. 42.

PASSING OF TITLE.

A sale of stolen property is void, and the owner has a right to an action for revindication against a purchaser in good faith who retains possession of it, without being obliged to reimburse him the price he paid for it.

Lapointe v. Charlebois, 42 Que. S.C. 57.

PASSING OF TITLE—DELIVERY.

It is incumbent on the buyer to ascertain the quantity and quality of the thing, on taking delivery at the time and place agreed upon. Hence, in the case of the sale of a crop of tobacco, where delivery was to be made at S., evidence of its quantity and quality when delivered there will outweigh that of quantity and quality found subsequently at the city of Montreal.

Piquette v. Landry, 44 Que. S.C. 517.

DISTINCTION BETWEEN SALE AND PROMISE OF SALE—VIOLATION OF PROMISE NOT FOLLOWED BY POSSESSION—THIRD PARTY PURCHASER BY REGISTERED TITLE—ADVOCATE'S AUTHORITY—FORMS OF JUDICIAL ADMISSION—REVOCATION OF ADMISSION—C.C. QUE. 1027, 1065, 1472, 1476, 1477, 1478—C.C.P. 3, 251, 286-290, 316, 359-372, 527-531, 1177.

A distinction must be made concerning a sale, as to the effects between:—(a) Its solicitation, i.e., a promise not followed by an acceptance. (b) Such a promise after acceptance, but without any obligation to buy, which is then called unilateral. (c) A promise of sale accompanied by the one of purchase, which is then called synallagmatic. (d) A promise of sale followed by possession, which corresponds to a sale. (e) The sale itself. A sale, and a promise of sale followed by possession alone imply the transfer of property; a violation of the other promises may only give rise to an action in damages, accompanied or not by an action to obtain the title, and subject to the rules of registration, in the case of several titles of acquisition to the same property. A promise of sale which does not transfer the ownership is of no value against a third person who has acquired it by a valid title, duly registered.

Cousineau v. Gagnon, 23 Que. K.B. 309.

RECOVERY OF PRICES—OMISSION TO ALLEGE DELIVERY—BILATERAL CONTRACT—CORRELATIVE ALLEGATIONS—C.C. ART. 1203—C.C.P. ART. 123.

A vendor who sues for the price of sale, should allege and prove delivery of the goods sold, for the fulfillment of his obligation to deliver is an essential condition of his right to the price.

The plaintiff cannot amend or complete his statement of claim by his reply to the defence. Thus a vendor who claims the price of goods sold, without alleging delivery in his statement of claim, cannot plead delivery in his reply.

Royal Paper Box Co. v. Drummondville Matches, 56 Que. S.C. 259.

SALE—DELIVERY—DEMAND—CANCELLATION OF SALE—C.C. (QUE.) ARTS. 1067, 1543, 1544.

A vendor has not made a proper demand on a purchaser to pay the purchase price in making his representative understand that he wished to be paid before making delivery. When some hay is to be delivered as soon as the purchaser can furnish the wagons to take it away, there is no demand to the purchaser to accept delivery of the hay when the wagons are ready to receive it. The vendor must make a proper demand on the purchaser. The vendor in default of making a demand on the purchaser to take the hay, cannot consider the sale as broken off and resell the hay to another purchaser. The damages which a purchaser can obtain from a vendor, who has made default in delivery of goods sold, is the difference between the contract price and the market price at the time when the goods should have been delivered. When in a sale of goods, the vendor is not a merchant and the purchaser is one, oral evidence is admitted in favor of the vendor.

Labeuge v. Lepage, 56 Que. S.C. 207.

HAY—WEIGHING—OWNERSHIP—RESALE—RESALES—C.C. ART. 1474.

A sale of articles described as in bulk, but to be sold by weight, as the sale of all the hay which one finds in a barn at 813 ton, is only complete after the hay has been weighed; up to that time the buyer has no absolute ownership and cannot seize and resell it.

Hurley v. Gamache, 25 Rev. Leg. 432.

SALE—CATTLE—REFUSAL BY PURCHASER TO PAY FOR CATTLE DELIVERED—NOT JUSTIFYING VENDOR IN REFUSING DELIVERY OF BALANCE—MEASURE OF DAMAGES FOR FAILURE TO DELIVER.

The purchasers under a contract for sale of cattle, fearing that the vendor was not going to continue delivery according to his contract, refused to pay for cattle already delivered, although such payment was due under the contract. This was held in the circumstances not to amount to a repudiation of the whole contract and therefore not to justify refusal of the vendor to deliver the balance of the cattle. [Principle as settled in Mersey Steel & Iron Co. v. Naylor, 9 App. Cas. 434, applied.] The measure of the purchaser's damages for such nondelivery was held to be the difference between the contract price and the current price at the time when the cattle should have been delivered; and was not limited to the amount required to make up to the purchasers the profit to them on a certain resale which they had made of the cattle; it not having been known to the parties when the contract was made that the purchasers were buying for such resale. Where the contract was for sale of "about" certain specified numbers of steers, the evidence showing that the word "about" was thus used because it was not certain that the vendor would have exactly that number and it was intended to leave room for a possible small shortage but it appeared that the vendor had the steers necessary to make the balance up to the numbers contracted for before the last day for delivery under the contract, he was held liable to be charged with the same. A delivery of 201 head was held to satisfy a contract to sell "between two to three hundred cows." Where the cattle were sold by weight the average weight of classes actually delivered was accepted as the basis of damage for certain cattle not delivered.

(§ I B—6)—INSPECTION.

A provision in a contract for the sale of logs that they are to be delivered and safely boomed in cove and notice given that the driving operations had ceased for the time being and inspection of them had been made and found satisfactory, creates conditions precedent to be complied with to the passing of the property in the logs.

BY SAMPLE.

The property in goods passes when the seller and buyer intend it shall pass—an order for goods after inspecting samples is not necessarily a "sale by sample." The property in goods so ordered, and sent by carrier, addressed to the buyer, passes upon the delivery to the carrier.

OF GOODS—GOVERNMENT INSPECTION—DE FACTO OFFICER—RECOVERY BACK OF PURCHASE PRICE.

Under a contract which provides for the sale of goods to be "Government inspected," the purchaser may recover back the purchase price which he has been obliged to pay in order to get possession of the goods, where the inspection was not made by a Government inspector, but by an assistant appointed by an inspector who had no power to make such appointment and so did not comply with the inspection stipulated for in the contract. The de facto doctrine has no application to such a case.

RIGHT OF INSPECTION.

Where goods are sold through a broker, and the seller undertakes to deliver goods of a particular quality to a carrier to be forwarded to the buyer at a distant place, to be paid for on arrival, the right of inspection continues till the goods arrive and are accepted at their ultimate destination, namely, the buyer's warehouse. Slowman v. Brenton, 8 O.W.N. 477.

(§ I B—7)—DELIVERY TO CARRIER—SHIPMENT F.O.B.—BILL OF LADING ATTACHED TO DRAFT—PASSING OF TITLE.

The title to goods delivered to a carrier under an order for shipment f.o.b. and shipped in the name of the seller, with a draft for the purchase price attached to the bill of lading, which was sent a bank with instructions to deliver the bill of lading to the purchaser only on payment, does not pass to the latter until the condition is fulfilled or the purchaser offers to fulfill it, and demands the bill of lading. [Scott v. Melady, 27 A.R. (Ont.) 193; and Graham v. Laird Co., 20 O.L.R. 11, followed.] The refusal of the defendant, after judgment in his favour in an action on a draft for the value of goods shipped to him, which he had refused to accept because of a shortage, to consent to the delivery to the plaintiff of the bill of lading out of court, does not amount to a claim by the defendant to the bill, or to the goods represented by it.

Delivery to a carrier of the goods contracted for, to be shipped by a method different from that provided by the contract, is not such a delivery as is contemplated by s. 31 of the Sale of Goods Act, R.S.S. c. 147. Where goods sold by the plaintiffs to the defendant were, by the contract made between the parties, to be shipped by freight, and were delivered by the plaintiffs to a railway company to be shipped by express to the defendant, and were not in fact delivered;—Held, that the defendant was not liable for the price of the goods. The fact that the goods were shipped by a faster means of transportation, which might be for the benefit of the defendant, but without his knowledge or consent, could not change the rights of the parties under the contract.

McGowan Cigar Co. v. O'Flynn, 19 W.L.R. 877.

DELIVERY TO CARRIER.

A sale of things by weight, number or measure is not perfected until they have been weighed, counted or measured. Where an order for goods is sent from Montreal to a firm at Naples (Italy), to be delivered f.o.b. to an express company, the buyer's agent there, the goods become the property of the buyer at the moment of the delivery, and they remain at his own risk in transitu.

Vipond v. Montefusco, 26 Que. K.B. 490.

OBLIGATIONS OF VENDOR—DELIVERY F.O.B.—DEFECTIVE RAILWAY CARRIAGE—DAMAGES IN TRANSIT—C.C. ARTS. 1472, 1492, 1495.

A vendor of goods or merchandise, who in making delivery on a railway carriage, conforms to the agreement usually made with his purchaser, f.o.b. at a designated point, is not responsible for damages sustained by the goods in the course of the journey by reason of the defective state of the carriage. In procuring a carriage for the vendor to take charge of the goods, according to the terms of the above agreement the railway company constitutes itself the agent of the buyer; and it is against the company alone that the latter has any right of action in a case of damages to the goods in transitu.

(§ I B—8)—APPROPRIATION—BILL OF LADING—LIABILITY FOR LOSS.

A shipper of goods who has the bills of lading made to his own order, and attached to a draft drawn upon the purchaser through a bank, for delivery to the purchaser upon payment of the draft, does not thereby appropriate the goods so as to vest the property in the purchaser, and the seller is therefore liable to pay the amount of any loss or damage to the goods during transit, if the purchaser has paid the price of the goods at the time of shipment.

Prairie City Oil Co. v. Stewart Munn & Co., 32 D.L.R. 141, 51 Que. S.C. 141.

(§ I B—9)—SUFFICIENCY OF DELIVERY.

Where a contract for the sale of goods is an entire one and the vendor withholds any of the goods and chattels included, the purchaser need not accept delivery of the remaining portion, but may repudiate the agreement and recover back any money paid on account of the purchase-price.

PASSING OF TITLE—SUFFICIENCY OF DELIVERY.

Title to a quantity of grain stored in a grain elevator will pass from the seller to the buyer, where it appears that the buyer had made several purchases of grain from the seller, who carried a stock of grain in the elevator, by placing several orders through the elevator agent and then accepting a draft drawn by the seller for the purchase price each time a purchase was made, the seller in each instance executing an order on the elevator agent requesting him to deliver to the buyer the amount of grain purchased, and where it appears that the grain remained in the elevator subject to the buyer's right to remove any part of it at any time, and that some of the grain had been actually withdrawn by him, notwithstanding that no separation of the grain sold had ever been made from the rest of the grain belonging to the seller and that the elevator agent was not employed by the seller to make such sales, but the parties acted through him as a matter of convenience.

Where there is a sale of goods which at the time of the sale are not in the possession of the vendor, but in the possession of a third party, and that party is made aware of the sale and consents to the goods remaining in his possession as the goods of the vendee, that is sufficient actual change of possession to support the sale.

CONSTRUCTIVE DELIVERY—GOODS IN POSSESSION OF THIRD PERSON.

Possession is acquired not only by corporal delivery, but also by an actual and implied delivery when the purchaser takes possession of the thing sold with consent of the vendor, even when there was no contact with the thing itself. Thus one who purchases a horse in possession of a third party and notifies the latter of his purchase and asks him to keep the horse for him sufficiently takes possession of it.

SUFFICIENCY OF DELIVERY—BULK QUANTITIES.

GOODS NOT APPROPRIATED AT TIME OF PURCHASE—CANCELLATION.

The defendant having at the solicitude of the plaintiff's agent signed a contract for the purchase of certain volumes on the installment plan, the goods at the time of the purchase not being in a deliverable state, and not being actually appropriated to the contract, the defendants on the same day, by letter, cancelled the order:—Held, that the implied assent to an appropriation of the goods was withdrawn by the letter of cancellation, and that the plaintiffs could not thereafter convert the executory contract into an executed one.

TIME FOR DELIVERY.

A contract to sell a building contractor materials for railway stations, delivery to be made at the places where the materials were to be used, implies an obligation on the seller's part to deliver within a reasonable time, regardless of any car shortage on the carrying railroads.

Phipps v. Freeland, 25 D.L.R. 858, 32 W.L.R. 365.

MACHINERY—TITLE.

Under a contract of purchase, which en-

Lamontagne Co. v. Parsons, 18 Que. P.R. 313.

In a sale by a traveling salesman the contract is made at the place where the order is taken, and if the order requires ratification by the employer of the salesman such ratification will retroact to the day and place when and where the sale was made. Delivery is only an accessory to the sale and not an element in the constitution of the contract.

SALE OF GOODS—SHIPMENT BY RAIL—FAILURE TO DELIVER TO RAILWAY COMPANY—PLACE OF BREACH.

Where by a contract made in Montreal for sale and delivery of goods the vendor is to ship the goods to the purchaser at Edmonton, via C.P.R. and the purchaser is to pay the freight, the delivery of the goods to the railway company in Montreal for carriage to the purchaser in Edmonton is in the ordinary case a delivery to the purchaser, and the failure to do so is a breach of contract by the vendor in Quebec and not in Alberta.

(§ I B—13)—FAILURE TO COMPLY WITH TERMS—RE-SALE.

Where, by terms of sale of horses at an executor's sale, the purchaser was to furnish an approved note by a certain time, the fact that the executor told the purchaser that if the animals were left on his unoccupied farm they would be at the risk of the buyer, and that by the seller's direction the horses were put into a livery stable by the buyer, does not conclude the seller from claiming that title to the property did not pass where the buyer failed to furnish the note in time. Where, by the terms of an executor's sale settlement was to be made at once and the purchasers of a chattel agreed that they would furnish an acceptable note before the next evening, their failure to do so justifies a resale of the chattel by the executor where the title to the chattel did not pass to the purchaser.

Where an unconditional written order was given for the purchase of a plow, accompanied by promissory notes for the price thereof, the purchaser cannot, in an action on the notes, shew that the sale was not an absolute and unconditional one, but that it was binding only in a certain event.

Where a conditional sale of goods is made subject to an express stipulation that in case of possession being retaken and the goods being resold on his default, he shall remain liable for any loss on a resale, the resumption of possession by the conditional vendor followed by a resale by him will not cancel or revoke the whole contract so as to relieve the conditional purchaser from the stipulation by which he became liable for the deficiency.

The vendor of goods sold at auction, upon discovering that the accommodation signer to a lien note given for the purchase money, as the terms of sale required, had made false statements as to his solvency, may retake the goods from the vendee, where the latter failed to secure another satisfactory signer.

CONDITIONAL SALES — REQUIREMENTS — INTENTION TO RETAIN OWNERSHIP—HOW TO BE SHEWEN—POSSESSION.

It is necessary for a conditional vendor to clearly shew his retention of the ownership by the use of unequivocal provisions to that effect in the contract, so where the vendor of a motor car took from the purchaser a written promise to pay containing a clause that the car already in the purchaser's possession should "remain in the possession of owner until paid for," there is no effectual reservation of property as against a subpurchaser.

CONDITIONAL SALE — TAKING COLLATERAL CHATTEL MORTGAGE BESIDES LIEN NOTES.

The acceptance of a chattel mortgage by the conditional vendors covering all the conditional vendee's interest in the goods sold will not necessarily abrogate their rights reserved under the conditional sale agreement.

RECOVERY OF PURCHASE PRICE—THREATS.

Threatening the purchasers in a conditional sale of a chattel, with serious consequences if they use it, goes to the root of the contract and justifies the purchasers in regarding it as ended; the sellers cannot recover the purchase price.

Robert Bell Engine & Thresher Co. v. Farquharson, 39 D.L.R. 625, 11 S.L.R. 81, [1918] 1 W.W.R. 924.

AUTOMOBILE — CONDITIONAL SALE—INSURANCE—DESTRUCTION BY FIRE—RIGHTS OF PARTIES.

LIEN-NOTE—DEFAULT IN PAYMENT OF INSTALMENTS—SEIZURE OF GOODS—SALE WITHIN 20 DAYS — NONCOMPLIANCE WITH CONDITIONAL SALES ACT, s. 8—CLAIM FOR DEFICIENCY—CONVERSION—NOMINAL DAMAGES—WAGES—EVIDENCE—FRAUD—COSTS.

Shannahan v. Brown, 13 O.W.N. 447.

LIEN OF — ALTERATION OF CHATTEL — REDEMPTION—RESCISSION.

The lien of a conditional vendor covers the chattel in its altered condition and its equipment, as a touring car when converted into a hearse. Where under an acceleration clause the whole sum becomes due in a case of default, the purchaser, to be entitled to his right of redemption under s. 32 of the Sales of Goods Act (R.S.B.C. 1911, c. 203), on payment of the "full amount then in arrear," must tender the whole amount; the vendor's refusal to surrender possession upon a tender of the arrears does not amount to a repudiation of the contract.

B.C. Independent Undertakers v. Maritime Motor Car Co. 35 D.L.R. 551, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 22, 24 B.C.R. 305.

FIXTURE—MORTGAGE.

Under a deed of sale stipulating that the vendor shall remain the owner of the thing sold until paid for in full, the vendor remains the sole owner, and the buyer cannot legally immobilize the object purchased or grant a hypothec to a creditor.

Bernier v. Durand, 32 D.L.R. 768, 25 Que. K.B. 461.

CONVERSION — COLLATERAL SECURITY — MERGER.

One acquiring, by exchange, goods subject to a conditional sale is liable in conversion to the conditional vendor, notwithstanding that the proceeds of the transaction were used to reduce the liability under the original sale; the relation of the parties under the conditional sale is not altered by a mortgage to the conditional vendor, as collateral security, on the property given in exchange, and does not operate as a merger. (Court divided.)

LIEN NOTE—SUB-SALE—CONVERSION.

One who takes possession of goods held under a conditional sale, in the form of a registered lien note, is liable in conversion to the conditional vendor.

Wenbourne v. Case, 34 D.L.R. 363, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 150. [Affirmed in 35 D.L.R. 577, 12 A.L.R. 1, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 1260.]

"LIEN NOTE"—FARM IMPLEMENTS ACT — COMPLIANCE—PLEADING.

Where notes which are not lien notes have been taken prior to the passing of the Farm Implements Act, the Act does not apply. The "lien note" mentioned in ss. 16, 17 of the Act is not intended to embrace an order which contains a lien. A defendant relying on non-compliance with the provisions of the Act respecting Lien Notes and Conditional Sales of Goods must affirmatively plead and prove the same.

Mount v. Holland, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 1188.

CONDITIONAL SALE OF GOODS—EXTENSION OF TIME FOR PAYMENT UNDER—AGREEMENT TO GIVE MORTGAGE ON HOMESTEAD IN CONSIDERATION OF — AGREEMENT VOID UNDER DOMINION LANDS ACT—FAILURE OF CONSIDERATION—RETAKE POSSESSION ON DEFAULT—RESALE—EFFECT OF, ON CONTRACT—RESALE BEFORE POSSESSION—NO NOTICE GIVEN—RESCISSION—RETURN OF MONEYS PAID—RIGHT OF PURCHASER TO — PLEADING — AMENDMENT BY WITHDRAWING ADMISSION.

Sawyer-Massey Co. v. Dagg, 4 S.L.R. 228, 18 W.L.R. 612.

CONDITIONAL SALE.

In a contract for conditional sale, reserving to the seller the right to possession of the property until payment, repossession and resale operates as a rescission unless such resale is expressly provided for in the contract. When the contract contains no provisions as to the manner in which the resale is to be made, the parties must be held to have had in contemplation the provisions of the statute in that regard and the resale must be considered as a resale within the meaning of the statute. When the goods were resold without the statutory conditions having been complied with, the resale was not as provided for in the contract and therefore operated as a rescission, and the plaintiffs could not recover.

LOSS—BY WHOM BORNE.

Where a chattel is sold under a lien not providing that the title, ownership and right of possession is to remain in the vendor until payment is made, and the subject-matter of the transaction is, before the time for payment, lost through no neglect on the part either of the vendor or purchaser, the loss must fall upon the vendor.

Sadywryk v. Achtemyeczuk, 34 W.L.R. 502.

OF DEBENTURES SUBJECT TO APPROVAL OF SOLICITOR—BREACH.

Where a company buys the debentures of a municipality by wire, subject to the approval of its solicitor, it is a conditional sale; and the municipality is not responsible in damages if the sale does not take place, because the solicitor reported unfavourably.

Canada Investment v. Scotstoun, 48 Que. S.C. 97.

RESALE BY CONDITIONAL PURCHASER WITH VENDOR'S ASSENT — WARRANTY — BREACH.

Goods sold under a conditional sale agreement were resold by the conditional purchaser to the defendants at a price larger than the amount due to the conditional vendor. The conditional vendor assented to the sale, and the defendants agreed to pay the amount of the claim. Judgment was given in the conditional vendor's favour for the amount, and it was held that it was not concerned with the contention of the defendants that the conditional purchaser had given to them a guarantee as to the condition of the goods and that such guarantee had been broken.

Case v. Wrenshall, 30 W.L.R. 521.

RETENTION OF OWNERSHIP—IMMOVABLE BY DESTINATION—REVENDIGATION.

To convert a moveable into an immovable by destination by incorporating it in the immovable it is necessary to be owner of the moveable and the immovable. Thus, when a bar and wine cabinet are sold conditionally the vendor retaining the right of ownership until full payment is made and the purchaser places them permanently in his own hotel, the vendor has a right to revoke them as against even privileged or hypothecary creditors of the purchases. Brasserie Champlain v. St. Roch Hotel, 47 Que. S.C. 113.

CONDITIONAL SALE OF MACHINE—PROVISION FOR SALE UPON DEFAULT OF PAYMENT AND APPLICATION OF PROCEEDS UPON PROMISSORY NOTE GIVEN FOR PRICE—LIABILITY OF PERSON ENDORSING AS SURETY—REPOSSESSION OF MACHINE BY VENDOR AND USE IN BUSINESS.
Crane v. Hoffman, 8 O.W.N. 500.

SALE OF GOODS—CONDITIONAL SALE—AGREEMENT—SEIZURE OF GOODS UNDER EXECUTION—PRETENDED SEIZURE BY ASSIGNEE OF VENDOR WHEN IN POSSESSION OF BAILIFF UNDER EXECUTION — CONDITIONAL SALES ACT, R. S. O. 1914 C. 136, S. 8—RETENTION OF GOODS FOR 20 DAYS—TENDER OF BALANCE DUE WITHIN THAT PERIOD—RIGHT TO POSSESSION—PRETENDED SALE—REPLEVIN—DAMAGES.
Stock v. Meyers, 16 O.W.N. 263.

CONDITIONAL—SALE IN NATURE OF A PLEDGE—ENDORSEMENT OF SELLER'S NOTES BY THE PURCHASER — CONSIDERATION OF THE SALE.

The vendor in a sale with the right of redemption on repayment of the price or consideration, the latter being the endorsement of his notes by the purchaser to a limited amount during 2 years (a sale in the nature of a pledge as security to the purchaser, with an express covenant that the right of redemption shall be subject to his full discharge from liability as endorser), cannot claim the right of redemption on the ground that when his note endorsed fell due, the discounting bank accepted, as a renewal, the note of a third party endorsed by the purchaser and surrendered the matured one to him. This may have ended the vendor's liability to the bank, but under the rule expressed in arts. 1171, 1173 C.C. (Que.) that novation cannot be implied, and that the delegation of a new debtor does not affect it unless the creditor expressly consents thereto, the juridical relation of the vendor and purchaser, under the deed of sale, continues the same, notwithstanding the renewal made as above stated.
De Saint-Aubin v. Binet, 22 Que. K.B. 661.

SEIZURE—CONDITIONAL SALE—CLAIM—RETENTION OF RIGHT OF PROPERTY — TRADERS—C.C. (QUE.) ARTS. 1487, 1488, 1489, 1490, 1599, 2265, 2268.

One who makes a conditional sale of moveables, and retains the right of property until payment, makes a sale on a suspensive condition. He has a right to claim them from a third party as long as he is not paid, unless the latter purchaser is protected by arts. 1488, 1489, 1490, C.C. (Que.) relating to the sale of the chattels of others. Thus the vendor of a cutter and of a buggy, with the right of retention of the property who sells them to a purchaser trading in carriages and harness equipment cannot reclaim them from a third party who has received them from the purchaser as a balance on an exchange of horses. When, in a conditional sale, the vendor stipulates that in default of payment, or in a case where the purchaser sells the chattel he will have a right to retake possession, he cannot do it without making a demand on the purchaser to pay. A merchant and a business agent are traders even outside of their commercial affairs.

Legaré v. Sabourin, 25 Rev. Leg. 439.

SALE "EN BLOC"—RETENTION OF RIGHT OF PROPERTY — CONDITIONAL SALE—AFFIDAVIT — C.C. (QUE.) ARTS. 1569A ET SEQ.

The owner of chattels under a conditional or suspensive sale i. e. retaining possession of the property, is bound, even if he sells them "en bloc," to furnish the affidavit mentioned in C.C. (Que.) arts. 1569b, 1569c.
Berard v. Berard, 25 Rev. Leg. 337.

SALE—RETENTION OF RIGHT OF PROPERTY—SECRET AGREEMENT—THIRD PARTY IN GOOD FAITH—FRAUD—ACQUIRED KNOWLEDGE.

A person who sells an automobile on instalments, retaining the right of property in the machine until payment, but who, nevertheless, gives the purchaser a writing stating that the sale is absolute and that the price has been paid, cannot then assert his right against a third party who has bought the auto in good faith. But it is otherwise if the third party knew or should have known the rights of the first vendor and has not been mistaken.

Russell Motor Co. v. Bastien, 56 Que. S.C. 347.

CONDITIONAL SALES—VENDOR REPOSSESSING AND SELLING WITHOUT NOTICE — THE CONDITIONAL SALES ORDINANCE, S. 8—RESCISSION OF CONTRACT — PREVIOUS JUDGMENT FOR PRICE MADE INEFFECTIVE.

If a vendor under a lien agreement (the terms of which give him a right to sell the property "at public or private sale") repossesses the property and sells without giving the notice to the buyer required by s. 8 of the Conditional Sales Ordinance this rescinds the contract, and a judgment recovered by the vendor for the price before such repossession thereby becomes ineffective. A transferee of land from the buyer may bring action to restrain its sale under an execution issued under such judgment and to have the execution removed from his title.
Blanchette v. Massey-Harris Co. [1919] 3 W.W.R. 870.

SALE OF GOODS—CONDITION OR WARRANTY—STATEMENT IN CONTRACT HELD A CONDITION ALTHOUGH CALLED A WARRANTY —WHETHER "SPECIFIC GOODS" WITHIN SALE OF GOODS ACT. 2 (14)—AGREEMENT RESCINDED.

Defendant sold a tractor to plaintiff. Plaintiff received it in January, worked with it for some time trying it out, made frequent complaints to defendant who sent mechanics and others to try to make it satisfactory, and on Aug. 29 notified defendant that he rejected it. A clause in the contract, called a "warranty," stated that the engine would do for ploughing, which the jury found it would not do, and which statement induced plaintiff to enter into the contract. The jury also found that plaintiff did not accept the engine and thereby change any conditions to warranties. Held that the said clause was a condition, also that the goods in question were not "specific goods" within the meaning of the Sale of Goods Act, s. 2 (14) and the property had not passed to the buyer so that a breach of condition could only be treated as breach of warranty. On the findings of the jury judgment was given rescinding the agreement.

Boren v. Waterloo Boy Kerosene Tractor [1919] 1 W.W.R. 478.

(§ 1 C—16)—NECESSITY OF RECORDING CONDITIONAL SALE AGREEMENT.

Where the plaintiff sold an account register to a purchaser under a hiring and purchase agreement within the meaning of c. 42 of the Acts of Nova Scotia, 1907, and where such agreement was neither accompanied by an affidavit nor filed in the registry of deeds, the agreement, although valid as between the parties, is null and void as against the creditors, purchasers, and mortgagees claiming under the purchaser in question.

CONDITIONAL SALES—RECORDING—FILING—FOREIGN LAW DISTRICT—TERRITORIAL LIMITS OF SALE ACT.

The Bills of Sale Act (N.S.) does not apply to a conditional sale in another province of a horse afterwards taken into New Brunswick by the conditional purchaser and the conditional vendor may enforce his title in Nova Scotia against sub-purchasers.

Cormier v. Coster, 19 D.L.R. 701.

REGISTRATION—COPY OF LIEN NOTE—SUFFICIENCY OF AFFIDAVIT.

Section 2 of the Hire Receipts and Conditional Sales of Goods Ordinance (Alta.), 1911, c. 44, requiring the registration of a true copy of the writing of sale, is sufficiently complied with as to the spirit and purpose of the statute, by registering true copies of the lien notes containing the usual provisions as to the retention of title by the vendor until payments are completed, though the original order on which the sale is based or a true copy thereof has not been registered; likewise sub. s. 3 of s. 2 which requires the agreement of sale or bailment, or a true copy thereof, to be accompanied by an affidavit, stating that it truly sets forth the terms, is substantially complied with by registering several such lien notes comprising the total amount to be paid, each note accompanied by the statutory affidavit and referring to the terms of the agreement as a whole, and is sufficient to charge a subsequent purchaser with notice thereof.

LIEN NOTE—REGISTRATION — ASSIGNEE—RECEIVER.

In the absence of a statutory provision to that effect, registration of a conditional sale or lien note is not necessary to render the instruments effective as against a receiver or an assignee for the benefit of creditors, and the goods may rightfully be claimed by the conditional vendor as against the receiver or assignee.

REGISTRATION OF RENEWALS.

The amendment (by s. 8, c. 3, 1916) to the Conditional Sales Ordinance (c. 44, Con. Ord.), requiring the registration of lien agreements to be renewed, is not to be literally construed so as to nullify or cancel the agreement as between the parties thereto if a renewal be not filed.

Re Richard; Stuart Mfg. Co. and Whitaker, 11 A.L.R. 495, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 722.

REGISTRATIONS.

Contracts for sale of movables need not be registered to be effective except in the case required by law. Therefore the registration by a lessee, of the lease of the movable of another, cannot supply the defect in his title in respect to the property in the movable.

Witterman Co. v. Mongeau, 50 Que. S.C. 428.

NONCOMPLIANCE WITH STATUTE—PRIORITY OVER DISTRAINING LANDLORD.

The fact that a conditional sale agreement does not comply with the provisions of the Conditional Sales Ordinance does not disentitle the vendor from setting up a claim to the goods comprised in such agreement as against a landlord distraining for rent.

Re Osborne and Hudsons Bay Co., 8 W.W.R. 821.

(§ 1 C—17)—CONDITIONAL SALES—STATUTORY REQUIREMENTS.

The provisions of s. 1 of the "Act respecting Lien Notes and Conditional Sales of Goods," R.S.S. 1909, c. 145, requiring registration, do not apply to an assignment to a third party of the interest in the goods of the original seller or bailor in good faith for valuable consideration, and neither under that Act (reading s. 11 with s. 1) nor on other grounds does such assignment require to be registered.

Reid v. Moore, 16 D.L.R. 561, 27 W.L.R. 616, 6 W.W.R. 765, 7 S.L.R. 69, affirming 12 D.L.R. 193.

STATUTORY REQUIREMENTS.

In order that a vendor may obtain protection thereunder, there must be a literal compliance with the provisions of s. 1, c. 145, R.S.O. 1897, of the Conditional Sales Act, that sales of manufactured goods or chattels on condition that the title shall not pass, shall be valid only "as against a subsequent purchaser or mortgagee without notice in good faith for a valuable consideration . . . which, at the time possession is given to the bailee, have the name and address of the manufacturer, bailor or vendor . . . painted, printed, stamped or engraved thereon, or otherwise plainly attached thereto," and, under such Act "the use of the synonymous words in lieu of the actual name of the manufacturer or vendor is not permissible. Erison Telephone Mfg. Co. v. Elk Lake Telephone & Telegraph Co., 4 D.L.R. 576, 3 O.W.N. 1309, 22 O.W.R. 161.

A vendor of goods or chattels of the value of $15 or over, who has an office in the province, and whose name is stamped thereon or affixed thereto, as required by s. 11, of c. 45, R.S.S. 1909, relating to lien notes and conditional sales, need not, upon the vendee's default in payment, give the vendee the notice of resale required by s. 8 of the Act, since by the express terms of s. 11, the Act is not applicable to sales of goods and chattels marked with the vendor's name.

CONDITIONAL SALES — STATUTORY REQUIREMENTS.

Where goods are bought, under a conditional sale agreement, by a tenant who attached them to the freehold, under an agreement with his landlord that "they were to remain attached and become the property of the landlord as part of the freehold, such goods, after the determination of the tenancy, cannot be taken by the original seller of the goods under his lien for the unpaid purchase price, if he has not filed the conditional sale agreement as provided by s. 28 of the Sale of Goods Act, R.S.B.C. 1911, c. 203, read with s. 29.

CONDITIONAL SALE OF GOODS — STATUTORY CONDITIONS AS TO RETAKING POSSESSION AND SELLING — NONCOMPLIANCE WITH ACT—ONUS OF PROOF—RIGHTS OF PARTIES.

A purchaser for whose benefit and protection the provisions of the Lien Notes and Conditional Sales of Goods Act (R.S.S. 1909 c. 145) were passed may waive the benefits thereof. Where the purchaser expressly sets up a failure on the part of the vendor to give the notice required by the Act (see 1910-11 c. 41, s. 16, amending s. 8) before selling the goods after retaking possession, the onus is on the vendor to prove that such notice was given, and failing to prove compliance with the Act he is not entitled to the balance of the purchase money.

TO DEFENDANTS—REPOSSESSION BY PLAINTIFF—RESALE—NONCOMPLIANCE WITH CONDITIONAL SALES ACT, R.S. SASK., 1909, c. 145—RESCISSION OF CONTRACT.

A party reselling goods under the Conditional Sales Act, R.S.S. 1909, c. 145, must comply with the provisions of this statute, otherwise their action in reselling amounts to a rescission of the contract; unless there are clauses in the contract operating as a distinct waiver of the provisions of the Act. LIEN NOTE—AFFIDAVIT OF BONA FIDES—REGISTRATION.

A clause in an affidavit of bona fides required to be filed with a lien note, "that the copy of the within agreement truly sets forth the agreement between the parties mentioned therein, and that the agreement therein set forth is bona fides and not to protect the goods in question against the creditors of the said buyer or bailee," does not comply with s. 2 (3) of the Act respecting Lien Notes and Conditional Sales of Goods (R.S.S. 1909, c. 145), and the lien note cannot properly be registered, and therefore under s. 1 of the Act cannot be set up against judgments or executions against a purchaser or bailee.

REGISTRATION — DESCRIPTION OF GOODS — PROMISSORY NOTE.

In order to comply with subs. (2) of s. 2 of the Sale of Goods Amendment Act, 1916, which requires that chattels included in a conditional sale and agreement be so described "that they may be clearly identified." Held (affirming the decision of Lampman, Co. J.), that there must be such material on the face of the instrument as would indicate how the property may be identified if proper inquiries are instituted. Where a promissory note is taken as security contemporaneously with a hire receipt and the promissory note is not mentioned in the hire receipt, the hire receipt is not void by reason of nonregistration of the note.

(§ I C—18)—VENDOR'S NAME STAMPED OR AFFIXED.

The provision of s. 11 c. 45, of R.S.S. 1909, respecting lien notes and conditional sales, exempting from the operation of the Act as to recording the agreements, sales of goods or chattels of the value of $15 or over, where the name of a vendor, who has an office in Saskatchewan, is plainly stamped thereon, or affixed thereto, is not limited in its operation to the original sale only, but applies as well to resales by the vendor upon the vendee's default in making payment therefor.

CONDITIONAL SALES — VENDOR'S NAME, STAMPED OR AFFIXED—PLATE REMOVED BY PURCHASER—EFFECT—CONDITIONAL SALES ACT.

The removal of the manufacturer's name-plate, the affixing of which on a machine dispenses with the necessity of recording the conditional sale contract under the Conditional Sales Act (Ont.), will not, where the name-plate is taken off by the purchasing company, prevent enforcement of the seller's right on default to the possession and property in the machine as against sub-purchasers from them who were aware that the machine was supplied to their vendors by the manufacturer claiming the lien. CONDITIONAL SALE—VENDOR'S NAME DISPLAYED EFFECT—ASSIGNEE OF VENDOR.

The saving provisions of s. 11 of the Saskatchewan "Act respecting Lien Notes and Conditional Sales of Goods," R.S.S. 1909, c. 145, exempting from registration sales or bailments of certain manufactured goods on which the name of the manufacturer or vendor is displayed, will also exempt an assignee of such manufacturer or vendor.

REPOSESSION—EXTENT OF RIGHT—MANUFACTURING PLANT — LIQUIDATOR — SET-OFF.

When a manufacturing plant, such as a brickyard, is sold to a company, and part of the purchase price is composed of the company's stocks and debentures, and the company afterwards went into liquidation, the seller, in exercising his right to repossession of the premises under the terms of the sale, is not entitled to articles manufactured by the company, or to those in process of manufacture, and they may be rightfully claimed by the company's liquidator as the property of the company; nor is he entitled to set-off against the claim of the liquidator the amount of the debentures transferred to him as part of the purchase price.

REPOSESSION — DISCHARGE OF SURETY — IMPAIRMENT OF SECURITY.

The keeping and using of property repossessed by a conditional vendor instead of selling it and applying the proceeds toward the payment of a purchase price note, is an impairment of security which will discharge a guarantor from liability thereon.

REPOSESSION.

The repossession by a seller in accordance with a provision therefor in an agreement for the sale of goods on deferred payments is not a rescission of the agreement and a bar to recovery of the purchase-price. REPOSESSION—NOTICE BY REGISTERED MAIL —PURCHASE BY VENDOR—COSTS—ACTION FOR DEFICIENCY.

The plaintiff, under the terms of a lien note executed by the defendant in his favour, repossessed a mare, the subject-matter of the note. The notice of intended sale required by R.S.S. (1909), c. 145, s. 8, was given by registered mail, and at the ensuing auction the plaintiff himself bid thereon and, being the highest bidder, became the purchaser. On the same day he resold the mare for the sum at which he had purchased, and after crediting the amount of the resale, less certain sums charged as expenses, the plaintiff brought action for the balance owing on the note. Held, that notwithstanding the fact that the defendant (buyer) was not absent, the statute did not require the notice of intended sale to be served personally, but that its service by registered mail was sufficient. [Vanstone v. Scott, 1 A.L.R. 462, 9 W.L.R. 257 followed]; that the plaintiff could not become the purchaser at the auction, that his position was the same as if there had been an abortive sale, and that his right under the note to sell by private sale was not affected; that [following McHugh v. Union Bank, [1913] A.C. 299, 10 D.L.R. 562] the plaintiff was entitled to retain reasonable and proper costs in respect of services not provided for by R.S.S. (1909), c. 51, but that the plaintiff was not entitled to any reimbursement for his own services but merely for his actual and necessary expenses.

REPOSESSION—MACHINERY — MECHANICS' LIEN — AFTER-ACQUIRED PROPERTY — EQUITABLE MORTGAGE—"MORTGAGEE"—SALE OF GOODS ACT.

An agreement between the vendor and purchaser of mineral claims that if mechanics' liens should be filed against the property the vendor should have the right to enter and "possess himself of all machinery, fittings . . . upon the mineral claims and to sell the same" and so recoup himself for any moneys paid by reason thereof, held to cover after-acquired property, and to constitute an equitable mortgage. The vendor under such an agreement is a "mortgagee" within the meaning of s. 28, Sale of Goods Act, R.S.B.C., c. 203.

Sullivan Machinery Co. v. Bank of Montreal, [1918] 3 W.W.R. 17.

REPOSESSION—REPLACED CHATTELS—MORTGAGE.

Where by the terms of a contract of sale of personal chattels a lien is to be retained thereon in favour of the vendor until payment is made, such lien is not destroyed by any possession taken by the vendee authorized by the contract in the usual course of such business. Where by the terms of an agreement for the sale of cattle reserving a lien in favour of the vendor, the purchaser is given the right to sell cattle upon replacing them with other cattle of the same kind and value, and the purchaser replaces cattle sold by other cattle upon which he has given a chattel-mortgage to secure the purchase price, the lienholder is justified in resuming possession of the cattle.

Reyneurt v. Van Walleghem, 33 W.L.R. 336.

VENDOR RETAKING POSSESSION—RETENTION OF LIEN.

Where by the terms of a contract of sale of personal chattels, a lien is to be retained thereon in favour of the vendor until payment is made, such lien is not destroyed by any possession taken by the vendor authorized by the contract in the usual course of such business.

Reyneurt v. VanWalleghem, 9 W.W.R. 958, 33 W.L.R. 336.

VENDOR RETAKING POSSESSION—RESCISSION—RIGHT TO PURCHASE PRICE INSTALLMENTS.

An agreement for the sale of a hotel business which reserves unto the vendor the title to the property until the purchase price is paid, does not operate as an absolute sale as to render it subject to rescission on default within the meaning of art. 1541 C.C. (Que.); nor will the commencement of an action for the repossession of the property, under the terms of the agreement, amount to a rescission as precluding the vendor, by virtue of art. 1541, from claiming the balance of the purchase price due under the contract.

St. Charles v. Monette, 47 Que. S.C. 164. REPOSESSION—WAIVER—RESTITUTION.

If in a conditional sale, the vendor allows the buyer to remain in possession of the goods, after maturity of several payments, and goes on accepting instalments, he is supposed to have made his option in favour of the latter right and have given up the property in the things sold. In such a case, his recourse is for the price of the goods and not to seize them for repossession. The seller could not, in any case, seize the goods without returning what he received as instalments, unless he specially alleges that it had been stipulated that such money would be in lieu of rent of the goods.

CONDITIONAL SALE — LIEN-NOTE — BILL OF SALE — AGREEMENT TO DELIVER UP — RIGHT TO TAKE POSSESSION UNDER LIEN-NOTE.

CONDITIONAL SALE — DEFAULT — RE-POSSESSION OF GOODS — RE-SALE.

American-Abell Engine & Threshing Co. v. Weidenwilt, 19 W.L.R. 730.

D. ACCEPTANCE; RETENTION.

(§ I D—20)—OF GOODS—CONTRACT DELIVERY—ACCEPTANCE AND RETENTION — RESCISSION.

A contract for the purchase of "one Case 40 horse power gas engine" contained a clause: "In no event shall the purchaser have any claim whatever under the agreement against the vendor for any damages but only for the return of moneys paid and securities given and his claim for such shall only arise after he has returned the goods to the place where he received them." The court held that on the evidence the engine delivered and accepted by the purchaser was the engine described in the contract, that the purchaser was bound by the written contract, notwithstanding certain verbal representations that had been made by the vendor's agent, and that by paying a promissory note given in part payment, and by not returning the engine as required by the above clause, he had forfeited any right he might have had to rescission.

ACCEPTANCE—ACTION FOR PRICE—DEFENCE.

A purchaser who makes no complaint to the vendor as to the quality of goods sold, until months after the goods have been accepted and paid for, although he has complained to an agent of the vendor, who has no authority except to receive orders, cannot set up such claim in an action for the purchase price of the goods.

REPRESENTATIONS BY AGENT—RIGHT TO REJECT—AGENT'S AUTHORITY.

A purchaser having made known to the vendors the purpose for which he required a gas traction engine, so as to shew them that he was relying on their skill and ability to furnish him with one reasonably fit for his purpose, signed an order for "one of your Big Four 30 h.p. gas traction engines." The agreement provided that the order was "made upon the express condition that" it "contains all the terms and conditions of the sale . . . and cannot in any manner be changed, altered or modified without the written consent of the officers" of the company. When the vendor's agent concluded a three days' trial of the engine, under the contract, the purchaser was not satisfied with its performance. The agent, however, represented that the engine would get better with wear and that if it was not right the company would make it right, and upon this representation the purchaser was induced to settle for the purchase-price. The court held, on the evidence, that the vendors did not deliver such an engine as was called for by the order, the one delivered being incapable of developing the rated horse-power, and the purchaser was justified in rejecting it. Also that the vendors, by their conduct, were estopped from denying the agent's authority to make the representations which he made.

LUMBER IN ESSE — INSPECTION — CAVEAT EMPTOR.

The inspection of a quantity of lumber in esse at the time of the sale, followed by an acceptance of the shipment, brings into operation the rule of caveat emptor to exclude any implied warranties and settles all questions as to quality and quantity. SALE OF GOODS — REFUSAL TO ACCEPT — BREACH OF CONTRACT—DAMAGES.

British Columbia Hop Co. v. St. Lawrence Brewery Co., 17 D.L.R. 856, affirming 6 O.W.N. 114.

ACCEPTANCE—RETENTION—"TRYING OUT" THE THING SOLD.

When a sale of personality, not yet in existence or ascertained, is made with a condition that it shall, when existing or ascertained, possess certain qualities, the "trying out" of the thing sold after delivery or entry of a protest does not constitute an acceptance against the buyer, where such "trying out" was, as understood by both parties, to be for the purpose of discovering whether or not it answered the conditions of the contract.

ACCEPTANCE—RETENTION—DILATORY COMPLAINT OF SHORTAGE AND UNFITNESS.

Lapse of time before making complaint of alleged shortage of or unfitness of goods sold and delivered, and the mixing of the goods with other similar goods by the buyer, are elements to be considered as adversely affecting the credit to be given the evidence adduced for the buyer to sustain a defense based on such complaint.

ACCEPTANCE—ASSISTING SELLER IN ARRANGING DELIVERY ON WORKS—DAMAGE IN UNLOADING.

Where a contract for the supply and installation of heavy machinery requires delivery on the works to be made by the seller, and provides that the seller shall be responsible for all damages until completion, and where the seller asks the buyer to have it unloaded and advise when men are to come to install same, the buyer who gratuitously undertakes to assist the seller by hiring a competent cartage company to do the unloading at the seller's expense is not responsible for damage to the machinery in the latter's handling of same, where there has been no negligence by the buyer himself.

In an action for the price of beer and ale sold the defendant, he is liable for the value of empty barrels not returned to the seller. Under a sale of a quantity of beer and ale "a mesure qu'elle se dispensera," ten months' time is a reasonable period in which to dispose of it, after which the seller may recover its value, where it is shewn that brewers do not guarantee the soundness of beer for more than one year.

Union Brewery v. Page, 5 D.L.R. 47, 15 Rev. de Jur. 95, 41 Que. S.C. 421.

ACCEPTANCE, RETENTION.

User of the thing sold as the buyer's property, the making of extensive repairs, alterations and improvements thereto, are acts of acquiescence to the sale and will bar any resolatory action, more especially when the defendant was never notified thereof.

Jacobson v. Peltier, 3 D.L.R. 132, 42 Que. S.C. 35.

CONTRACT — DELIVERIES UNSATISFACTORY — CONTINUED ACCEPTANCE OF SHIPMENTS — EVIDENCE — RIGHTS OF PARTIES.

Duncan v. Pryce Jones, 22 D.L.R. 45.

EFFECT ON APPARENT AND LATENT DEFECTS.

A defect in the "flasher" of an electric sign consisting in the fact that it produces only a red light in place of producing simultaneously a red and white light is an apparent defect. The irregular placing of the interior wires of the sign is a latent defect, but the purchaser cannot complain of it eight months after its installation.

Macey Sign Co. v. Routtenberg, 48 Que. S.C. 316.

RIGHT TO RETURN GOODS AFTER INSPECTION — INFERIOR QUALITY.

When a purchaser has examined merchandise before buying, and has not objected to the price on account of its inferior quality, he cannot afterwards refuse to accept and pay for it on account of such inferiority; in such case the vendor is not a guarantor.

Martin v. Galibert, 47 Que. S.C. 181.

An order for a quantity of goods ordered by defendant through a broker from G, was by mistake filled from plaintiff's goods, which were stored in the same warehouse. Defendant, with full knowledge of the facts, having retained the goods and used them as his own, it was held, dismissing the appeal, that the law implied a promise on the part of defendant to accept the goods and to pay for them at the invoice price.

OF DEBTS.

The buyer of a debt who, after having accepted a first transfer, received from the same seller another one containing, in addition to the first, other claims against new debtors, and who instead of notifying the seller of his refusal to accept the second transfer keeps it in his possession during several years, and meanwhile proceeds to collect the debts from the two debtors, has thereby tacitly accepted the last transfer. Where a transfer of claims contains the debts of several debtors, and the buyer, without positively accepting, collects the debt of any one of the debtors, he accepts tacitly the whole transfer.

Mackay v. Temple Baptist Church, 25 Que. K.B. 417.

DELAY — WARRANTY — PATENT RIGHTS.

A delay of four months after the delivery of a machine is too long to refuse to accept it on account of defects. If considerable changes are made by a buyer to a machine sold and delivered, it amounts to an acceptance. Where a machine is bought in the United States, there is no warranty, on the part of the vendor, that it can be used in Canada as against any patent rights which might exist in this country.

Southern Can. Co. v. Whittall, 50 Que. S.C. 371.

SALE OF A STEAM ENGINE — EVIDENCE — FACT OF KEEPING THE ENGINE AND OF USING IT OUGHT TO BE HELD AGAINST THE DEFENDANT — C.C. 1012, 1720, 1721, 1722.

The fact that the defendant kept and used the steam engine in question, and moreover the admissions of the defence and the general facts set out by the evidence show the action to be well founded in right and in fact.

Lemire v. Bourque, 25 Rev. de Jur. 221.

USER — TESTING THRESHING ENGINE — REASONABLE TIME.

The receipt of an engine, the property therein not having passed, and user of it for threshing purposes for about 30 days, and the signing of an acknowledgment that an expert had spent a certain number of days in repairing it and had made it satisfactory, held, under the circumstances, not to constitute an acceptance. From August to spring cannot be regarded as an unreasonable time for the rejection of an engine, where the vendor by painting the engine has made inspection on the part of the purchaser at the time of delivery ineffective and has delayed the time of effective inspection until the spring, when the paint came off.

When the subject-matter of a sale of personality is not in existence, or not ascertained, at the time of the contract, and engagement that it shall, when existing or ascertained, possess certain qualities, is not a mere warranty, but a condition, going to the very identity of the thing sold.

WHAT AMOUNTS TO.

An assertion by a lessor of farming lands who granted the use of a traction engine to his lessee, that the engine, which was essential to the working of the lands, was in good working order, amounts to a warranty, when made with the intention that the lessee, who did not have any special knowledge on the subject, should rely thereon.

REPRESENTATIONS—FAILURE OF CONSIDERATION—FINDINGS.

Whether there were representations by the seller from which the existence of a warranty could be deduced, or misrepresentation amounting to a failure of consideration, must be gathered from the totality of the evidence, and the jury's findings must be definite.

Robertson v. Norton, 30 D.L.R. 369, 44 N.B.R. 49.

CONTRACT—SPECIAL CLAUSE—MEANING OF.

A purchase contract containing the following clauses:—There are no representations, warranties or conditions, express or implied, statutory or otherwise, other than those herein contained, nor shall any agreement collateral hereto be binding upon vendor unless it is in writing hereupon or attached hereto and duly signed on behalf of vendor at its home office. No agent or employee of vendor is authorized to alter, amend or enlarge this contract in any particular. Such parts or portions of said goods as are not manufactured by or for vendor or are second-hand or rebuilt or repaired are not warranted expressly or impliedly by statute or otherwise. The warranty herein does not apply to second-hand or rebuilt machinery which it is agreed is not warranted. Held, in view of these clauses, that the purchaser could not recover for any alleged breach of implied warranty contained in a verbal agreement made during negotiations and before the contract was signed. [Schofield v. Emerson-Brant-

WARRANTY OR CONDITION—STIPULATION AS TO QUALITY AND PACKING—FOOD ARTICLES.

A buyer who contracts to purchase food articles of a certain quality to be packed in a certain manner purports a condition not a warranty, and he cannot be compelled to accept the articles not so packed or be liable for their contract price, unless from the conduct of the parties a new contract can be implied.

GOOD WORKMANSHIP—BREACH—PROXIMATE CAUSE—ONUS.

In an action for breach of warranty that only the best workmanship and material will be used in the construction of boilers, the onus is upon the purchaser to establish that the leaks and cracks which rendered the boilers unfit to use were the direct and not the probable cause of bad workmanship. ACTION FOR SETTING ASIDE A SALE—DEFECT OF STUBBORNNESS—ITS EXISTENCE AT THE TIME OF THE SALE—BURDEN OF PROOF—PRESUMPTION—C.C. (QUE.), ART. 1238, 1522.

In an action to set aside the sale of a horse founded on the defect of stubbornness in the animal, the plaintiff must prove the existence of the defect at the moment of the sale, no presumption arises against the purchaser by the fact that the animal has shown this defect 8 days after the sale and since that time.

Houle v. de Grandpré, 55 Que. S.C. 214.

FARM IMPLEMENT ACT—SECOND-HAND MACHINERY—GROUND FOR REJECTION.

Different considerations arise on a sale of second-hand machinery from those arising on a sale of new machinery. Consequently where, on the sale of a second-hand kerosene-burning engine by a farmer, a necessary attachment was without the knowledge of the parties, missing, such defect did not warrant a rejection of the engine or a refusal to pay therefor, inasmuch as the missing part, while essential to the operation of the engine, was easily procurable at almost any place of business and very inexpensive, costing only a few cents. The provision of the Farm Implement Act (1915, c. 28) applies only to dealers in implements and not to a farmer making an isolated sale of a second-hand engine.

FARM IMPLEMENT ACT—PAROL EVIDENCE—COLLATERAL AGREEMENT.

Quere, whether the Farm Implement Act, 1915, c. 28, applies to an individual sale by a farmer of a second-hand implement. Evidence is admissible to shew that a written contract for the sale of farm machinery was subject to collateral verbal agreements or conditions. [Brownsberger v. Harvey, 2 S.L.R. 481, followed.] On the sale of a farm engine of a stated horse-power the ability of the engine to develop such horse-power is a condition.

Case Threshing Machine Co. v. Welsh, [1918] 3 W.W.R. 57.

FARM MACHINERY—AMBIGUOUS DESCRIPTION—RATED POWER—NOTICE OF DEFECTS—ACCEPTANCE—SET-OFF.

The defendants agreed to purchase from the plaintiff an engine described as "One Case 40 Horse Power Case Gas Engine." The plaintiff delivered an engine which, however, failed to develop its rated horse-power when operated on kerosene, and when operated on gasoline burned an excessive quantity. Experts sent by the plaintiff to demonstrate the engine's ability instructed the defendants, upon the failure of the engine to operate on kerosene, to go ahead with their work on gasoline and that an expert more familiar with the kerosene type of engine would be procured and the engine made to operate on kerosene. The defendants accordingly proceeded to operate the engine on gasoline, but it consumed such an excessive quantity thereof that its operation was either altogether unprofitable or much less profitable than it should have been. The agreement provided that the purchaser should not be entitled to make any claim for breach of warranty unless he complied with certain provision as to the giving of notice of defects, and the defendants did not comply therewith. The plaintiff, failing to make the engine operate satisfactorily on kerosene, the defendants continued to keep and operate the engine on gasoline. In an action on promissory notes given for the purchase price, held that the description of the engine in the order was ambiguous, and that evidence was admissible to shew what type of engine was intended. That, on the evidence, the engine ordered was a kerosene-burning engine that would develop 40 horse-power, and that the vendors had failed to deliver such engine, Can. Dig.—124.

and that such failure was a breach of condition to which the provision as to the giving of notice did not apply. That in any event the vendor, having in a manner not contemplated in the order undertaken by its own agents a test or demonstration, and thus acquired a more accurate knowledge of defects than could be contained in a written notice, the purpose for which the sending of notice was intended, had disappeared and the failure to send notice could not be set up. That the defendants were entitled to set off in reduction of the purchase-price the diminution in value of the engine delivered over that of the engine ordered. [Hart-Patt v. Wells, 11 S.L.R. 132, applied.]

FARM MACHINERY—"STRAW BURNER."

Where there has been a sale of a threshing engine with a "straw burner," the fact that the buyer has some trouble in burning straw therewith is not a ground for holding that he did not get a "straw burner."

Nichols & Shepard v. Chamberlain, [1918] 3 W.W.R. 308.

ANIMALS KNOWN TO BE DISEASED—DUTY TO WARN.

On a sale, without warranty, of an animal known to the seller to be affected with a certain contagious disease, there is no common-law duty upon the seller to warn the buyer of the disease, where the latter is reputed to be possessed of more than ordinary skill and knowledge in the treatment of animals, the disease in question is fairly common in the neighbourhood, the buyer knows that the animal is suffering from some complaint, although not the particular nature of it, and the buyer refuses to complete the sale until he has had the animal in his possession a certain time. [Ward v. Hobbs, 4 App. Cas. 13, followed; Urch v. Strathcona Horse Repository, 2 A.L.R. 183, and the interpretation therein put on Ward v. Hobbs differed from; Clarke v. SALE OF GOODS — FARM MACHINERY — ALLEGED VERBAL AGREEMENT ON SALE OF ENGINE UNDER WRITTEN CONTRACT.

An alleged verbal agreement on the sale of an engine was given effect to in view of the clause in the written contract of sale against any verbal agreement. [Advance Rumely Thresher Co. v. Keene, 47 D.L.R. 251, [1919] 2 W.W.R. 143, followed.]

Service v. Advance Rumely Thresher Co., [1919] 2 W.W.R. 646.

NEW AND SECOND-HAND ENGINE—QUALIFIED WARRANTY.

The difference between a new and a second-hand engine is a difference of kind and the delivery of the latter cannot be a compliance with an order for the former. It is not merely a difference of quality against which the purchaser must protect himself by obtaining a warranty. On a contract of sale the parties may stipulate that the rights or obligations which would otherwise attach to a sale should not apply to the sale in question, but a clause altering or limiting the effect of a contract for the sale of a specified article cannot be held to alter the subject-matter of the sale, nor to give the vendor a right to supply any article he may choose, unless clear language to that effect is used. An order for a specified engine is not any the less so, because the order contains a clause that the engine is not sold by description. A condition in the following words, "There are no representations, warranties or conditions, express or implied, statutory or otherwise other than those herein contained, nor shall any agreement collateral hereto be binding upon the vendor unless it is in writing hereupon or attached hereto and duly signed on behalf of the vendor as its said home office," applies only to the sale of a specified article and has no application until the article ordered has been delivered or an article different from that ordered has been delivered and accepted by the buyer in fulfillment of his orders.

Hart-Parr Co. v. Jones, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 888.

LATENT DEFECTS—HORSE.

Every latent defect which affects the usefulness of the thing sold constitutes a defect for which the contract may be rescinded. Chronic nephritis in a horse in such a defect. A vendor, making use of the warranty given to him by his auteur as to the character of the thing sold, makes this warranty his own and assumes original responsibility.

WARRANTY—MEASURE OF DAMAGES.

(§ II A—26)—EXPRESS.

Where a traction engine was sold upon the order of the buyer and upon the receipt thereof the seller shipped the engine and the order contained the warranties of the seller on its face and the seller's agent, without any knowledge on the part of his principal at the time the order was made or when the engine was shipped, gave the buyer, instead of a copy of the order, a somewhat similar document which had on its back warranties which, as far as they went, were practically the same as the ones in the order and the buyer was not told by the agent that it was a copy of his order and no fraud was practised upon him, and where it appeared that if the buyer had read it that he could not have avoided learning that it was no copy of the order, he was bound by his order and was not justified in considering the warranty in the instrument given him, the only express warranty, and ignoring the special provisions in the warranty clauses in the order signed by him which were not contained in the other document.

A notice of the failure of an engine to fulfil a warranty sent by the purchaser to the vendor at Winnipeg, and not to him by registered mail to Searforth, as the contract of sale required, is not a sufficient compliance therewith.

BREACH.

The representation by a seller of bees that they had been inspected and were clean and all right is a warranty that they are free from foul brood sufficient to permit a recovery for its breach.

EXPRESS WARRANTY—WHAT CONSTITUTES—HORSE.

An affirmation by the seller as to the character of goods made at the time of the sale thereof is a warranty provided it was so intended and was relied upon by the purchaser, e.g. that a horse was a good horse to pull and was 11 years old.

STATEMENTS BY AUCTIONEER—REPRESENTATIONS—GOODS NOT AS REPRESENTED.

An affirmation by the vendor through his auctioneer at the time of sale is a warranty provided that it appears in evidence to be so intended; and on a breach of such warranty the purchaser is entitled to be indemnified for his loss. Section 16 (1) of the Saskatchewan Sale of Goods Act, R.S.S. 1909, c. 147, relating to implied warranties on the sale of chattels, does not apply to a sale under an express warranty.

Massey-Harris Co. v. Elliott, 11 D.L.R. 632, 4 W.V.R. 134.

The warranty implied by law on the sale of a chattel is superseded by a guaranty in a written contract for the sale of an engine, that it was free from latent defects, and that it should, under certain fuel conditions, develop 50 horse-power, without varying more than 2 per cent in speed under differing load conditions.

Canada Producer & Gas Engine Co. v. Hatley Dairy, Light & Power Co., 4 D.L.R. 599, 22 Que. K.B. 12.

ACTION TO SET ASIDE A SALE—HIDDEN VICE —KICKING HORSE—C.C. QUE., ARTS. 1522, 1530.

A horse kicking in the stable is a hidden vice which the vendor should guarantee against. The purchaser has a right to return the horse and annul the sale.

Reeves v. Beauchamp, 25 Rev. Leg. 213.

An implied warranty on the sale of a chattel exists, where the contract of sale provides that it was not sold by description, and that there was no condition or warranty either general, express, or implied, set forth than the condition and warranties set forth therein.

Lethbridge Sash & Door Co. v. Taylor, 7 D.L.R. 913, 3 W.V.R. 82.

Where an order for the purchase of a traction engine signed by the buyer upon the receipt of which the seller sent the engine, warranted that the engine would successfully operate a threshing outfit of the size and capacity usually operated successfully by an ordinary steam engine of the same actual brake horse power and that the engine should develop a certain horse-power and if it did not, the seller was, by a clause in the warranty part of the order to be notified and given reasonable time to get to the engine and test it, and, if unable to make the engine develop such horse-power, to take it back and replace it with another or, in place of this, to refund any payments made on the condition that no further claim was to be made against the seller, and where the order in one of its warranty clauses stated that if the purchaser failed to make the engine work satisfactorily through improper management, inefficient operators, or neglect to observe the directions of the manufacturers, the purchaser was to keep the engine and to pay all necessary expense incurred by any man sent at his request to put the engine in condition for successful operations, a compliance by both parties with the above provisions of the order should operate as a determination of all controversies respecting the subject-matter, and, therefore, in an action by the buyer for breaches of the warranties in the order set out above and for the breach of the implied warranty arising under par. 1 of s. 16, R.S.S. 1909, c. 147, providing that there shall be an implied condition in sale of goods that if the particular purpose for which they are required is made known to the seller thus shewing that the buyer relied on the seller's judgment and if the goods are those which the seller sells in his business, in which action it was found by the Trial Judge that the only breach of warranty the evidence shewed under the Act aforesaid, or under the order of purchase, was that the engine did not furnish the horse-power stipulated and in consequence did not successfully operate a threshing outfit according to the first warranty set forth above, no recovery can be had by the buyer on claims for breach of warranty, or by the seller on a counterclaim for the services of the experts to make the engine work properly where the evidence did not sufficiently shew that the buyer failed to make the engine do satisfactory work through improper management or inefficient operators as alleged in the counterclaim.

An auctioneer who sells goods, not as principal, but as auctioneer only, though not naming his principal then present and in possession of the goods, does not, without more, warrant the title to the goods sold; he does no more than engage that he is in fact instructed and authorized by his principal to sell. [Wood v. Baxter, 49 L.T.N.S. 45, followed.]

IMPLIED.

A representation by a seller that a cow was "due to calve" on a certain day, does not amount to a warranty that the cow was "in calf;" all that the expression imports is a representation that the cow had been bred to a bull at a time from which it was expected the cow would calve on the day specified.

Wilson v. Shaver, 8 D.L.R. 627, 27 O.L.R. 218.

STATED CONDITIONS AND WARRANTIES EXCLUDE IMPLIED WARRANTY, WHEN.

A stipulation in the agreement to sell a tractor engine that it is sold subject to the stated conditions and warranties and no other excludes any claim upon the basis of an implied warranty. [Sawyer-Massey v. Ritchie, 43 Can. S.C.R. 614, followed.]

IMPLIED WARRANTY—PROVISION AGAINST—HOW CONSTRUED.

The implied warranty that on a sale of personally the thing sold shall be reasonably fit and proper for the purpose for which it was designed, cannot be evaded by the seller inserting a provision in the contract of sale whose language does not clearly deprive the buyer of the benefit of the implied provision, especially where the inserted clause appears on its face to have a distinctly different function.

(8 II B—30)—WARRANTY—FULFILLMENT.
A contract for the sale of a portable engine is not fulfilled by furnishing an engine that, by reason of its construction, is not portable.

Massey-Harris Co. v. Elliott, 11 D.L.R. 632, 4 W.W.R. 134.

Where a motor car company advertised a car for sale "that never goes lame, backed by a five years' guarantee;" and the sale is made under an agreement to supply a written guarantee, but without any agreement of the scope of guarantee in the agreement of sale, the presumption is that the warranty is to be in accordance with the advertisement.

"NEW 1912 CARS"—FRAUD.

Oriental Transfer Co. v. Winton Motor Car Co., 20 D.L.R. 953.

SPECIFIC GOODS—WARRANTY AND CONDITION—BREACH—DAMAGES.

Where, under s. 50 of the Sale of Goods Act (c. 203, R.S.B.C.), acceptance is inferred after the lapse of a reasonable time for the rejection of goods, a breach of condition entitling to the right of repudiation, particularly in a sale of specific goods, may be treated as a breach of warranty under s. 19, which will entitle the buyer under s. 67 to further damages in consequence thereof in addition to the extinction or diminution of the price. [Poulin v. Lattimore, 9 B. & S. 259, followed.]

British American Paint Co. v. Fogh, 24 D.L.R. 61, 22 B.C.R. 97, 32 W.L.R. 142, 8 W.W.R. 1331.

"GELDING"—"RIGGOT."

An agreement for sale being for a "gelding," there is an implied condition that the subject of the sale shall be the "gelding" of horse-dealing commerce; this condition is not complied with by the delivery of a "riggot," although both parties honestly believed at the time of sale that it was a gelding and in a proper action the purchaser is entitled to damages.

Klengon v. Goodall, 6 O.W.N. 674.

"AGAINST ALL DEFECTS," MEANING OF.

One who in an agreement for swapping horses acts as owner of the horse he exchanges as well as contracting party, will not be allowed, in an action for resiliation, to claim that the horse was not his and that he was acting for a third party. In such an agreement the warranty "against all defects" means a warranty that the horse is free from all defects concealed or apparent, maladies of every kind and from anything which would make it unfit for use.

Fortier v. Tanguay, 44 Que. S.C. 440. The admission, on examination as a witness, by the seller, as to a mare that he knew it was bought for breeding purposes, and that he had represented it to the purchaser as being from eight to nine years old, but without warranty, is a commencement of proof in writing which entitles the purchaser to give oral evidence of the warranty of the vendor that the mare was of the age mentioned. The representations by the vendor, as admitted by himself, were such as to lead the purchaser into error on a material element in the sale and, therefore, to make it void.

Boulanger v. Fortier, 41 Que. S.C. 389. (§ II B—31)—SCREENED COAL.

A contract for the delivery of "screened coal" is carried out by the delivery of coal properly screened at the mine, although owing to the soft and friable nature of the coal more slack is produced in transit than would be produced from coal from other mines.

TRADE DESIGNATION.

On a contract for the supply of a certain quantity of a factory product, under its trade name (e.g., waxed splits of leather), to a dealer in the same trade, there is a presumption that the contract is for goods of a quality which will answer the trade designation under which they were sold, and the vendor is liable, as for breach of warranty, in respect of any portion which is so inferior in grade, either from a defect in the material itself or in the process of manufacture, as not to be merchantable goods under the trade designation.

Schrader v. Robson Leather Co., 3 D.L.R. 838, 3 O.W.N. 962.

C. OF QUALITY, GENUINENESS, OR FITNESS.

(§ II C—25)—BY SAMPLE.

A contract made by correspondence for a carload of specified articles of a specified grade "to be the same size and quality as samples submitted" is a sale by sample, and not a sale of a quality or grade.

Lachute Shuttles Co. v. Frothingham, 8 D.L.R. 417, 22 Que. K.B. 1.

Where "seed flax" is sold by sample and the buyer would require an intricate analysis and test by a Government official in order to detect the presence of noxious mustard seed in the sample, the onus is not on the buyer to make a test involving such unreasonable trouble, and upon injury resulting to the buyer's land from "seed flax" contaminated with noxious mustard seed, the seller may be held in damages for same, without the Government test.

Where a quantity of fruit purchased by a dealer from the grower for export to the English market and re-sale at a profit was discovered upon inspection not to be of the grades and quality contracted for, the buyer has the right either to reject the lot and to go into the market and replace the fruit in accordance with the contract grade, and hold the vendor responsible for the difference between the contract price and the market price; or he may retain the fruit, relying on the warranty or description of grade, and recover the loss sustained based on the market price at the time of the discovery of the fraudulent packing as compared with the contract price.

Where a dealer in motor cars contracts to supply a car which shall be in all respects (except upholstery) the same as a certain car previously sold to a specified third party, the seller is bound to furnish a car duplicating such sample in appearance, equipment, and method of construction, and as efficient and satisfactory in operation, and in all other respects as good, as the sample, with the qualification mentioned as to upholstery, there being in the circumstances an implied warranty that the car should be fit for use in the manner in which such a car ordinarily would be used. [Drummond v. Van Ingen, 12 A.C. 284; Mody v. Gregson, L.R. 4 Ex. 49; Randall v. Newson, 2 Q.B.D. 102, applied.]

Where a manufacturer or dealer contracts to supply an article which he manufactures or produces, or in which he deals, to be applied to a particular purpose, so that the buyer trusts to the judgment or skill of the manufacturer or dealer, there is in that case an implied term or warranty that it shall be reasonably fit and proper for the purpose for which it was designed. [Canadian Gas Power & Launches v. Orr, 23 O.L.R. 616, applied.] Where the plaintiff bought from the defendant an engine with a distinct understanding as to the purpose for which the engine was to be used, that it was to be applied to a particular purpose which required particular qualities, and the defendants represented to the plaintiffs that they could supply the engine required, and the plaintiff trusted to the defendant's judgment and skill in doing so; there is in such a contract an implied term or warranty that the article shall be reasonably fit and proper for the purpose for which it was designed; and the fact that upon the engine shewing defects from time to time the plaintiff and the defendant for several months made joint efforts to put it into running order does not estop the purchaser from insisting upon the warranty against inherent defect and weakness. Where dealers sell an engine with an implied warranty as to fitness for a particular purpose, with certain provisions in the contract for replacing defective parts, such provisions have not the effect of impairing the obligations of the implied warranty but are in law considered as quite distinct therefrom. [Canadian Gas Power & Launches v. Orr, 23 O.L.R. 616, 26 Can. S.C.R. 614, followed; Sawyer & Massey Co. v. Ritchie, 43 Can. S.C.R. 614, distinguished.]

Alabastine Co. v. Canada Producer & Gas Engine Co., 8 D.L.R. 405, 30 O.L.R. 394, 23 O.W.R. 841.

A defence that the failure of machinery to work satisfactorily was due to its ill-usage by the vendee in not properly oiling it, fails, where it is shewn that oil was properly applied, but by reason of a concealed defect in workmanship, it did not reach the proper bearing surface.

Canada Producer & Gas Engine Co. v. Hatley Dairy, Light & Power Co., 4 D.L.R. 599, 22 Que. K.B. 12.

IMPLIED WARRANTY—FITNESS FOR SPECIFIC PURPOSE—SELLER'S SKILL NOT BELIED ON.

The provisions of clause 1 of s. 16 of the Sales of Goods Ordinance, c. 39, Con. Ord. 1898, to the effect that there is an implied warranty that goods sold for a particular purpose shall be reasonably fit for such purpose, does not apply where the defects complained of were discovered by the buyer at the time of the delivery and the goods were retained by him without objection, the defects complained of being entirely within his own knowledge, since the provisions of clause 1 apply only where the buyer relies upon the seller's skill and judgment.

DEFECT IN QUALITY—DAMAGES—EFFECT OF RESALE.

A purchaser of goods is not deprived of his right to set up a counterclaim by reason of a defective condition of some of the goods, in an action by the seller against him for the contract price, merely because the purchaser made no attempt to settle with persons to whom he had resold part of the goods claimed to be defective, although he had been requested to do so by the seller.

Berry v. McKenzie, 10 D.L.R. 641, 6 A.L.R. 17, 23 W.L.R. 886, 4 W.W.R. 438.

IMPLIED WARRANTY—FITNESS FOR PURPOSE.

OF FITNESS.

A warranty that an engine was "capable of doing good work" is not a warranty that it was "capable of filling silos," a work requiring greater power than the engine was warranted to have.

Caldwell v. Cocksbutt Plow Co., 18 D.L.R. 722, 30 O.L.R. 244.

OF FITNESS—PURCHASER'S OWN JUDGMENT AND SKILL—EFFECT.

The implied warranty that a machine sold by a manufacturer or dealer shall be fit for the particular purpose for which it is to be used, does not import that the machine will accomplish the purchaser's purpose, where the purchaser has relied on his own judgment and skill rather than the vendor's advice. [Shepard v. Pybus (1842), 3 M. & G. 868, followed.]

Hopkins v. Jannison, 18 D.L.R. 88, 30 O.L.R. 305.

IMPLIED WARRANTY OF FITNESS — CAVEAT EMPTOR.

There is no implied warranty of fitness in a sale of machinery not manufactured by the seller, and after the goods have been inspected, in the absence of any fraudulent concealment, the rule of caveat emptor applies.

Robertson v. Norton, 30 D.L.R. 369, 44 N.B.R. 49.

WARRANTY IMPLIED AS TO QUALITY—MANUFACTURER'S OBLIGATION TO SUPPLY NEW COMMODITY.

Prima facie a person sending an order for an engine to the manufacturer thereof is entitled to receive an engine new in all its parts, and the manufacturer's noncompliance in this respect (although as to parts of small value compared with the price of the engine) may vitiate the contract.

Prima facie a person sending an order for an engine to the manufacturer thereof is entitled to receive a new engine, and where the seller varies the implied warranty in this respect by representing that the engine delivered in response to the order has not been used except for "a little use on the fair ground," the alleged variance will be strictly construed. [See also Haug v. Baade, 15 D.L.R. 520.]

SOUNDNESS OF ANIMAL—PROMISE TO GIVE WARRANTY—BREACH.

Since equity looks upon that as done which should have been done, it is of no importance where, in a sale of an animal the seller promises to give a written warranty of soundness, that the warranty is not deduced in writing and a malformation of the animal's foot constitutes an unsoundness which will render the seller liable for breach of the warranty, if such unsoundness was existent at the time of the sale, although the purchaser had heard from others that the animal was unsound. [Head v. Tattersall, L.R. 7 Ex. 7, applied.]

WARRANTY OR CONDITION—QUALITY—INSPECTION.

A representation that a car-load of hay is all of a particular quality is a condition, not only a warranty, and a purchaser is justified in refusing the hay upon discovery that it is not of the quality represented, notwithstanding that after partially examining it in the car he took delivery, and resold it, the inferiority not being apparent until the hay was unloaded.

IMPLIED WARRANTY AS TO FITNESS—BREACH—FARM MACHINERY ACT.

Neuman v. International Harvester Co., 37 D.L.R. 766.

FARM MACHINERY—STATUTORY REQUIREMENTS AS TO BOILERS—NONCOMPLIANCE WITH.

Regulation 1 of the Department of Public Works, issued under s. 19 of the Steam Boilers Act, R.S.S., c. 22, controls and forms part of the specifications set forth in the regulations, and shows that an absolute compliance with the regulations is not required by the department, and that a sale could be made of engines which do not strictly comply with the regulation, and the effect is, not to prohibit the sale, but to penalize the engine by reducing the pressure allowed, and consequently does not render any sale void on that account.

Scott v. Fisher, 14 O.W.N. 217.

SOUNDNESS OF ANIMAL.

The written statement of a veterinary surgeon, read at the public sale of a mare, "that he had the mare under his care for abscess caused by strangles, but that she would soon be cured without difficulty," only expresses the opinion of the veterinary surgeon and does not constitute a warranty by the vendor.

Poupart v. Beaudin, 24 Rev. Leg. 149.

ANIMAL—LATENT DEFECT.

Intermittent lameness is a latent and redhibitory defect. The exchange of a horse suffering from such lameness, due to a hard tumor on the horse's shank, when the owner declares to the party with whom he makes the exchange that such lameness is accidental and curable is void and may be set aside.

Rochon v. Lavigne, 24 Rev. Leg. 112.

A mare inclined to become frightened and unmanageable has a latent defect which renders the sale of such an animal void. Charron v. Longtin, 24 Rev. Leg. 109.

Horrocks v. Signal Motor Truck Co., 16 O.W.N. 132. [Affirmed, 17 O.W.N. 1.]

CONTRACT FOR SALE OF MOTOR-TRUCK — KNOWLEDGE OF VENDOR OF PURPOSE FOR WHICH TRUCK INTENDED—ARTICLE DELIVERED NOT REASONABLY FIT FOR PURPOSE—FINDING OF TRIAL JUDGE ON EVIDENCE—TRUCKS SOLD BY MANUFACTURER AS OF HIS OWN MANUFACTURE—TRUCK ACTUALLY MANUFACTURED BY ANOTHER — IMPLIED WARRANTY — PROPERTY NOT PASSING TILL PAYMENT IN FULL—RIGHT OF PURCHASER TO RESCIND CONTRACT, PAYMENT IN FULL NOT HAVING BEEN MADE.

The plaintiff bought from the defendants, a manufacturing company, a motortruck for use in the plaintiffs' business of carriers. The defendants were informed of the purpose for which the truck was required and the character of the work it would be put to, and they knew the character of the highways upon which it was to be used. The contract was in writing. The truck was described in the writing as a "Sawyer-Massey motor-truck." The price was $5,600, $1,000 of which was paid in cash, the balance was payable by instalments, for which the plaintiffs gave promissory notes. Each note, in addition to identifying the contract of sale and the subject-matter, provided that "the article for which this note is given shall remain the property of Sawyer-Massey Co. until all notes or renewals given in settlement are paid in full;"—Held, in an action for rescission of the contract, that the defendants must be regarded as having undertaken to furnish a truck suitable for the plaintiffs' purposes. [Bristol Tramways etc. Carriage Co. v. Fiat Motors, [1910] 2 K.B. 831; Canadian Gas Power & Launches v. Orr, 23 O.L.R. 616, and Alabastine Co. v. Canada Producer & Gas Engine Co., 30 O.L.R. 394, followed.] It appeared in evidence that the truck sold was not manufactured by the defendants, but was built for them by another company, and sold under the "Sawyer-Massey" name:—Held, that, in the absence from the contract of specific words to the contrary, there is an implied warranty, in the nature of a condition or undertaking, where the vendor is a manufacturer, that the goods are of his manufacture. [Johnson v. Raylton, 7 Q.B.D. 438, followed.] And held, that there was a breach of this warranty or condition, the truck not being in any proper sense a "Sawyer-Massey motor-truck." Judgment was given in favour of the plaintiffs declaring the contract rescinded and directing the return of the money paid and delivery up of the promissory notes in the defendants' hands.

Randall v. Sawyer-Massey Co., 43 O.L.R. 602.

Plaintiff sued defendant to recover the price of a gasoline engine sold to defendant. It appeared that defendant had given an order for an engine warranted to be well made of good material and durable, and which stated that there were no conditions or warranties in connection with the sale other than as set out therein. The order was also expressed to be subject to the right of the defendant to cancel before a certain date if he found an engine that suited him better. On this reservation being brought to the attention of the company's sales manager he wrote the defendant specifying the qualities of the engine, comparing it with other engines, and guaranteeing it to develop 25 horse power, although nominally rated at 20 horse power, and as a result of this letter the defendant purchased the engine. The engine would not develop 25 horse power nor 20 horse power, and was unable to do the work for which it was procured, and the defendant returned it. The learned trial judge gave judgment for the plaintiff for the amount of its claim, and for the defendant by way of damages for his counterclaim for the full amount of the sale price, treating the matter as if there had been a total failure of consideration. On appeal it was held, the letter written by the company sales manager is a subsequent agreement by the company for the purpose of inducing the defendant to purchase, and the provision in the order excluding all warranties other than therein expressed could apply only to what had taken place up to that time, and did not affect any subsequent warranties, and consequently the warranty was binding upon the plaintiff company. (2) That the breach of warranty complained of being that contained in the letter as to the ability of the engine to do certain work, and not of the warranty of quality contained in the order, the defendant had no right to return the engine, as provided in the original order, and obtain an award on the basis of entire failure of consideration, but was entitled only to damages on the basis of the difference in value between the article delivered and the value of an article of the quality represented in the letter.

The Manitoba Windmill and Pump Co., v. McLelland, 4 S.L.R. 500.

Plaintiff sold defendant a gasoline engine guaranteed to be made of good material and in a workmanlike manner. The defendant accepted the machine and employed three different men having ordinary experience in operating such engines to operate it, but none of these men could get it to work. The company gave, it was found, no evidence which shewed that the failure of the defendant to operate the engine was due to any fault of the defendant. The Trial Judge gave judgment for the plaintiff for the price of the machine, but allowed the defendant on counterclaim by way of damages the whole price of the engine. On appeal it was held, that the meaning of the warranty in question was not that the various parts of the engine were made in a workmanlike manner, but that the engine as a whole was made in a workmanlike manner; that is, that when completed it could be operated. (2) That such a warranty is not satisfied by shewing that the engine could be operated by experts, but must be so constructed that it can be operated by any person possessing the skill and knowledge necessarily possessed by the average operator. (3) The defendant having shown that the engine could not be operated by the average operator, the onus was cast on the plaintiffs of shewing that the machine was in proper shape when delivered, and this not having been done the defendant was entitled to damages on breach of warranty.

"HEALTHY AND CLEAN"—REHIBITORY DEFECT.

The sale of a mare made with warranty against any concealed defect or illness not perceptible on a medical examination by the veterinary does not cover defects which could be discovered by attempting to drive the mare, such as those of kicking, baulking, or stubbornness of an unbroken mare. The words "healthy and clean" signify only exemption from redhibitory defects.

WARRANTY OF FITNESS AND GENUINENESS—MOTOR TRUCK—BREACH OF WARRANTY—DAMAGES.

Defendants sold a motor truck to plaintiffs, whose purchasing agent knew nothing about motor trucks, on the representation that it was a "three-ton Mack truck" and that it was so rated, while, in fact, the said truck was classified by its maker as a two-ton truck.—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to damages for breach of warranty, the issue being not whether a new truck would carry three-ton loads for a period of several months without breaking down, but whether it was, in the judgment of those skilled in the manufacture of trucks, capable of doing and maintaining that for a period which could be considered the life of the truck.

Victoria Saanich Motor Transportation Co. v. Wood Motor Co., 20 B.C.R. 537, 29 W.L.R. 904.

Plaintiffs approached defendant with a view to selling him a piano, and defendant stated that the piano which he had in mind to purchase was one manufactured by the Heintzman Co., known as "The Classic." They stated they had a piano of that description which they could sell at a lower price, and stated that it was of the same quality as "The Classic" manufactured by the Heintzman Co. The defendant then gave the order and they shipped to him a piano manufactured by them, and called "The Classic," which the defendant refused to accept. It was shown that the Heintzman piano was a high-grade piano, while the one shipped was a low-grade piano. In an action for the price it was held, that the sale was one by description, and there was an implied condition that the goods should answer that description, and, as the piano shipped did not answer that description, the defendant was entitled to refuse to take delivery.

Mason & Risch Co. v. Mooney, 4 S.L.R. 303.

Plaintiff, being desirous of securing flax for seed, heard that defendant had seed flax for sale, and went to him with a view to purchasing. He inquired of defendant whether such seed was clean and free from noxious weeds and mustard, and was assured that it was. Plaintiff, therefore, as it was found, on the strength of such representation, purchased from defendant sufficient seed for the land to be sown. When the crop came up, it was found to be full of mustard, a very noxious weed. It was found that the crop had been deteriorated by at least 25 per cent by reason of this mustard, and that to eradicate it, the land would require to be summer-fallowed during the two succeeding seasons. The plaintiff also relied on the provision of c. 128 R.S.C. and the Noxious Weeds Act of Saskatchewan, prohibiting the sale of unclean grain. It was held, that it was the intention of the parties that the representations made by defendant at the time of sale should form part of the contract, and what took place constituted a warranty. (2) That the seed sold did not comply with the warranty, whereby the plaintiff suffered damage, for which he was entitled to recover, the damage sustained being that which would naturally flow in the ordinary course of things from the defendant's act. (3) The damage contemplated in this case would be the amount of injury which would ordinarily flow from a breach under the special circumstances made known at the time of sale, and which would be injury to crop, loss of crop and injury to land. (4) In assessing such damages, the injury to crop by reason of loss occasioned by the growth of mustard should be allowed, and also the loss of the use of the land for the following year, when it would require to be summer-fallowed, the fair rental of the land being the basis of such damage. (5) Chapter 128 R.S.C. did not assist the plaintiff, as flax was not mentioned in that Act, nor did it apply to sales by a farmer at his own granary. (6) That the provisions of the Noxious Weeds Act of Saskatchewan, prohibiting the sale of unclean grain gave no cause of action to the plaintiff, that statute being passed for the benefit of the general public, and had nothing to do with the private bargains of individuals.

CONTRACT—BRICK-MAKING PLANT—SALE AND INSTALLATION—CERTAIN CAPACITY REQUIRED—TEST—COMPANY—ACTION—STATUS—APPEAL—REHEARING—B. C. STATS. 1917, c. 10, s. 2 (3).

A contract for the sale and installation of a brick-making plant provided that the final payments therefor should be made within certain periods after the plant was completed and had been demonstrated to be of a capacity of 17,000 good merchantable bricks in 10 hours or 34,000 merchantable bricks in a day of 20 hours. It appeared from the evidence that the presses have to be worked 6 or 7 hours to produce the necessary quantity of unbaked bricks to fill the retort in which they are hardened by steam, so that when the plant is started the hardening section of it must remain idle for 6 or 7 hours. An action for the balance of the purchase price was dismissed on the ground that it had not been demonstrated the plant was of the required capacity. Held, that in making a test of the capacity of the plant allowance must be made for the initial time required to produce the necessary quantity of unbaked bricks to fill the retort and that the time for the test should then start when both sections of the plant are working continuously.

Komnick System Sandstone Brick Machinery Co. v. B.C. Pressed Brick Co., 26 B.C.R. 191, [1919] 1 W.W.R. 645, reversing judgment of Clement, J.

COAL—SPECIAL PURPOSE—IMPLIED WARRANTY OF FITNESS—PURCHASER SELECTING AND MIXING GRADES—WARRANTY NOT APPLYING.

Plaintiff sold defendant a certain quantity of lump coal, subsequently together a certain quantity of lump coal and a certain quantity of slack coal. The first consignment, after sale, was lost at sea but defendant received and used the balance. The court found on the evidence that plaintiff was aware that the coal was intended for a special use, viz., for steaming purposes. In giving the order for the coal, defendant made his own selection of grades. Lump coal is a superior, slack coal an inferior, quality. They were used by defendant in mixture. Through the loss of the first consignment the mixture was depreciated in quality. The coal as used failed to fulfil the purpose intended. On defendant claiming on an implied warranty of fitness it was held that, though if plaintiff had simply sold for steaming purposes a certain quantity of coal, or possibly if the order for the lump coal or slack coal had been given and filled separately, and the coal used separately, there would have been an implied warranty of fitness for the purpose intended, such warranty did not apply where the two grades were (by direction of defendant) shipped, and used, together.

(§ II C—36)—SEED.

Where grain is sold as "seed flax" by sample and the seed delivered does not correspond with the sample, the delivery being contaminated with noxious mustard seed, the seller may be held in damages under s. 17 (2) (c) of the Sale of Goods Ordinance N.W.T. Ordinances (Alta.) 1911, c. 39, although the buyer may have omitted to examine the goods delivered but relied upon his warranty and examination of the sample. Where a contract is made for the sale of goods by description there is, under s. 16, subs. 1, of the Sale of Goods Ordinance N.W.T. Ordinances (Alta.) 1911, c. 39, an implied condition that the goods were reasonably fit for the purpose intended; and if, by acceptance of the goods, this implied condition were waived, and reduced to a warranty only, such warranty would be covered by s. 13 of the same Ordinance. Where grain is sold as "seed flax" and it was at the time of sale contaminated with noxious mustard seed, the seller may be held in damages for a breach of warranty under s. 16 (1) of the Sale of Goods Ordinance N.W.T. Ordinances (Alta.) 1911, c. 39, on the ground that the seed was not reasonably fit for the purpose for which it was intended. Where a contract is made for the sale of goods by sample there is under s. 17 (b) of the Sale of Goods Ordinance (Alta.) 1911, c. 39, an implied condition that the bulk should correspond to the sample.

Byrnes v. Symington, 12 O.W.N. 107.

Plaintiffs, being desirous of purchasing flax for the purpose of seed, approached defendant, who dealt in flax, with a view of purchasing. They told defendant that they required the flax for seed, and asked if he could supply them. The defendant stated that he would give them what he could from his granary, but that he had a mortgage on some flax to be delivered later, and they could have that if they were satisfied with it. On this other flax being brought in, the plaintiffs examined it, and, on being asked how they liked it, stated it was all right and they would take it. They now alleged the flax to be unfit for seed, and that by reason thereof they lost the crop which they should have had during that season, alleging that, in buying, they relied on the defendant's skill and judgment to supply flax reasonably fit for the purpose required, it was held, that while the purpose for which the flax was required was made known, in order to raise an implied warranty of fitness, there must be evidence that the buyer relied on the seller's skill and judgment, and from the circumstances of this case no such implied warranty could be found.

(§ II C—37)—FITNESS FOR BREEDING.

A sale of a stallion cannot be rescinded by the purchaser because of the animal's vicious disposition where the evidence showed that it had been quiet and gentle while the vendor owned it, except on one occasion when it attacked him, of which the vendor told the purchaser before the sale, though subsequently the horse became entirely unmanageable and dangerous.

PEDIGREE—FITNESS FOR BREEDING—DAMAGE—QUANTUM.

That a mare was sold as standard-bred with a pedigree but no pedigree was furnished by the seller as agreed, is ground for awarding damages to the buyer for the diminished value because of the absence of the pedigree; but notice to the seller is not to be implied from such circumstance that the buyer was purchasing for breeding purposes; nor can damage be awarded in respect of lost profits because of the buyer's inability to register the mare's colts, where the buyer had not informed the seller that he was buying for breeding purposes. [Sapwell v. Bass, [1910] 2 K.B. 486, and Hadley v. Baxendale, 9 Ex. 341, applied.]

WARRANTY—FOXES—FITNESS FOR BREEDING—INTERPRETATION.

STALLION—FITNESS AS FOAL-GETTER.

Where an agreement for the sale of a stallion stipulates that in the event of its deficiency within a fixed period as a foal-getter, a substitute stallion will be furnished in exchange by the seller, provided certain stated particulars (customary and reasonable) shall be recorded and furnished by the buyer, such particulars will be construed strictly as a condition precedent to the special remedy so stipulated, and the seller's omission to furnish the usual printed tally sheet for the record does not impair his right to insist upon the condition. The implied warranty of merchantableness in clause 2 of s. 16 of the Sales of Goods Ordinance, c. 39, Cap. Ord. 1898, is negatived where the buyer makes an examination of the goods on its delivery and, though found to be defective, fails to reject them.

The unloading of such merchandise as shovel handles by the buyer and taking them into his store, where it is shown that inspection in the cars would not be practicable, and would entail payment of demurrage or storage charges, does not constitute acceptance of the goods, where, after examination of the goods and discovery of defects, the buyer promptly notifies the seller of his refusal to accept them; under such circumstances the buyer need not bring a redhibitory action under art. 1530 C.C. (Que.), but can bring an action for rescission of contract for nonfulfilment of the vendor's obligation (art. 1065), and therefore the buyer is not obliged to bring suit immediately.

F.O.B.—REFUSAL OF INSPECTION—LIABILITY.

In a sale of goods f.o.b. subject to inspection, the seller's refusal, after the goods have been shipped, to guarantee the buyer against any loss he might suffer on a resale owing to inferior quality, is not a refusal to permit inspection and the buyer's nonacceptance of the goods on the ground of such refusal renders him liable to the seller for damages for nonacceptance.

OF GOODS BY SAMPLE—OPPORTUNITY TO INSPECT — ACCEPTANCE OF GOODS — IMPLIED WARRANTY—GOODS NOT UP TO SAMPLE—RESCISSION OF CONTRACT—DAMAGES.

In a contract for sale by sample the following conditions are implied: (1) that the bulk shall correspond with the sample in quality; (2) that the buyer shall have a reasonable opportunity of comparing the bulk with the sample; (3) that the goods shall be free from any defect rendering them unmerchantable which would not be apparent on reasonable examination of the sample. If, after an opportunity is afforded to the buyer to compare the bulk with the sample, he proceeds to take the goods into his possession or deals with them, he will not be allowed to repudiate the bargain in toto and claim that the property has never passed but he is driven to rely upon the implied warranty, the condition becoming a warranty on change of ownership, for the breach of which compensation can be sought only in damages.

IDENTITY OF ENGINE ORDERED—DIFFERENCE IN QUALITY—CAVEAT EMPTOR.

Where an engine is identically of the same make as the one ordered, the difference between a new engine and an old engine is a difference in quality and not in kind, and any warranty in respect thereof is excluded by the terms of the agreement. The defendant having ordered the identical engine that was shipped to him, he was not entitled to any other engine, and was not justified in refusing to accept delivery or to make settlement, but such engine was nevertheless subject to the warranties contained in the original agreement, and as the Trial Judge's judgment was to the effect that there was a breach of warranty, there should either be a new trial on that question, or a reference to ascertain the amount the defendant would be entitled to set off against the plaintiff's claim. The engine delivered not being new in all its parts, differed in kind and not simply in quality from the engine which was ordered, and within the contemplation of all parties to the agreement; and the warranties in the agreement would only become operative as against the defendant when an engine of the kind contemplated by the parties had been furnished; the inspection made by the defendant of the engine was of such a casual nature that the doctrine of "caveat emptor" had no application. The parties had appropriated in fulfillment of the contract, or more correctly, in substitution for the engine ordered, the engine which was inspected by the defendant and shipped to him, and there being no express warranty with respect to that particular engine, the defendant could not now say that it failed to fulfill any warranty expressed or implied contained in the original agreement.

Haug v. Baade, 8 S.L.R. 126.

REJECTION BY PURCHASER.

The sale of a system of lighting by gasoline, made on the condition that it will give satisfaction, gives the purchaser the right to give notice to the vendor of his refusal to accept it, and in such case the latter is obliged to remove it. The purchaser is not obliged to give the vendor the reasons for his refusal, nor to submit them to the court.

DUTY TO EXAMINE—AGENT—LIABILITY.

INSPECTION.

In an action for breach of a contract of sale of oats by the vendee refusing to accept delivery on the allegation that the oats were unmerchantable, it appeared that there was no express warranty of quality by the seller, that the seller had not grown them, had not been guilty of any fraud, and that the vendee might have inspected the oats at the time of entering into the contract had he so desired.—Held, that the case was one to which the maxim caveat emptor applied, that vendee had no right to refuse acceptance of the oats, and was liable in damages for breach of contract.

The seller is not bound by reason of defects which, at the time of the sale, are apparent and which the buyer might have known of himself. If a buyer purchases hay, with the intention of reshipping it to a foreign country, it is his duty to examine it at the time of delivery, or at least before reshipping, and if he neglects so to do and such hay is reshipped, the vendor, in the absence of fraud on his part, cannot be held responsible for defects which may have accrued after delivery, or which, if they had in effect really existed at the time of delivery, might have been detected by the buyer, by a mere external inspection of such hay.

A purchaser has no recourse against a vendor for apparent defects, the existence of which the purchaser has been able to find out himself. A person who has purchased artificial stone, and who complains that, at the time of the sale, the stone was of bad quality, being too green and badly manufactured, will have his action dismissed, as the defect which he claims is an apparent defect which he might have noticed at the time of the delivery.

NONACCEPTANCE—PURCHASE BEFORE ARRIVAL OF GOODS AT PLACE OF ACCEPTANCE AND BEFORE LEARNING CONDITION OF GOODS OPENING UP CAR AND ATTEMPTING TO SELL—EQUIVALENT TO ACCEPTANCE—STILL ENTITLED TO ACTION FOR BREACH OF WARRANTY—COURT REFORMING PLEADINGS TO ENABLE COUNTERCLAIM FOR BREACH OF WARRANTY.

Defendant company purchased potatoes from plaintiff which the court found did not fulfill an express warranty as to soundness in the contract. As to car No. 3, plaintiffs' action for price failed as defendant had on its arrival at defendants' warehouse (where under the contract acceptance was to take place) and before ascertaining its condition and wiring nonacceptance, opened up the car and attempted to sell the contents and was held to have thus accepted the goods. [Parker v. Palmer, 4 B. & Ald. 387 followed.] But defendant could still bring action for breach of warranty. And as defendant had counter-claimed in the same action for breach of warranty in connection with car No. 2, purchased and shipped under the same contract, which counterclaim was held to be well founded, the court reformed the pleadings by amending the counterclaim to extend it to the car No. 4 and directed reference as to damages on the counterclaim as amended.

E. TEST AND DEMONSTRATION.

(§ II E—44)—WRITTEN NOTICE OF DEFECTIVE WORKING OF MACHINE.

Written notice by the buyer of the defective working of an engine in pursuance of his contract of purchase, required as a condition to the buyer's right to return the engine for breach of warranty, may be waived by the seller sending out an employee to remedy the defects after the time for giving such written notice had expired.

ENGINE—WARRANTY—HORSE-POWER.

A clause in a contract for the purchase of an engine requiring notice to be given in case of any defect in "workmanship or material" does not apply to a warranty that the engine will develop certain horsepower, but only to the warranty that it is well made and of good material.

WARRANTY—APPROVAL OF THIRD PARTY.

Where the defendant agreed to return the price of an automobile sold the plaintiff, which proved defective, if it were not pronounced satisfactory by a designated person by a certain day, the money must be refunded where the car did not work to the latter's satisfaction at that time; the vendor has no right to demand that it be returned for further repair and to have a further submission and test of same on a subsequent day by the person designated.

Saermann v. E.M.F. Co., 12 D.L.R. 191, 24 O.W.R. 779, affirming 4 O.W.N. 1137.

The purchaser of a drill outfit cannot escape liability on notes given for the price thereof by shewing that a verbal agreement had not been carried out whereby the seller was to send him an expert driller at his expense to assist in digging the first well, and to remain until the first well was completed, and that, if such were not done, the notes were to be void.

Ontario Wind Engine & Pump Co. v. Eldred, 2 D.L.R. 270, 5 S.L.R. 194, 20 W.L.R. 697, 2 W.W.R. 60.

Where machinery is sold with a warranty that it shall work to the satisfaction of the purchaser, it is the duty of the seller to thoroughly test it, under conditions similar to those in which it is to be used before delivering the machine to the purchaser.

Bonin v. Ontario Wind Engine & Pump Co., 6 D.L.R. 785, 18 Rev. de Jur. 446.

Where a contract for the purpose of a gas producer, a gas engine, and an air compressor for starting it, provided that the vendor should for one year replace, free of charge, all defective parts; that the vendee could not reject the plant except for failure to develop the power guaranteed, and that the machinery should be tested at the vendor's factory; and the vendee was, by the terms of the contract, "urged to be present at the final test," the vendee is not concluded by a shop test of which he was not notified and which he did not attend, since such test was intended as an additional inducement to purchase, and not to put a vendee in a position of having irrevocably committed himself to the purchase on the test proving satisfactory.

Canada Producer & Gas Engine Co. v. Hatley Dairy, Light & Power Co., 4 D.L.R. 599, 22 Que. K.B. 12.

Action for price of a hot air furnace installed by plaintiff in defendant's house on the stipulation that it should be installed on trial, and if not found satisfactory to be taken away, and a new one put in its place:—Held, that upon the evidence the condition had not been complied with, and the defendant was not liable for the price of the furnace installed.

—HAY REJECTED AS NOT UP TO STANDARD.

Poirier v. The King, 9 E.L.R. 375.

IMPLIED WARRANTY OF FITNESS—EXERCISE OF JUDGMENT BY PURCHASER.

The plaintiffs sued for damages for breach of an implied warranty upon the sale of flax by the defendants to them, that the flax was fit for seed:—Held, on the evidence, that the action failed because the plaintiffs purchased the flax on their own judgment, and because they failed to establish that it was not reasonably fit for seed purposes.

SHARES—DEFENCES—SALE OF GOODS ACT.

Where an agreement for the sale of shares of stock is absolute and unconditional, it is no defence to an action on a promissory note for the purchase price thereof, that the plaintiff agreed to obtain the shares from a party to whom he hypothecated them and failed to do so, or that the note was delivered on condition that it be subject to the approval of the pledgee who refused to accept it, if the plaintiff can otherwise be required to give title to those shares; the Sale of Goods Ordinance (Alta.) does not apply to a sale of company shares, as under s. 2 (1) of the Ordinance the word "goods" does not include choses in action, and, therefore, the liability for a refusal to pay the purchase price note is not to be fixed by the statutory measure of damages for breach of contract of sale.

An elevator operator, though he is required to receive all grain offered and to give either storage receipts or cash purchase tickets therefor, under the provisions of subs. (1) and (2) of s. 157 of the Grain Act (Alta.), is not protected by the provisions of that Act in buying grain, where he knew that such grain was under seizure by one claiming a lien under the Thresher's Lien Ordinance (Alta.) and where he failed to make proper enquiries as to the right of the vendor to sell the same; the Grain Act, under the circumstances merely protecting the elevator operator from liability for receiving the same.

If an amount has been paid on the price of sale and the buyer refuses to execute his contract, the seller can keep what he has received. The following contract: "M. A. binds himself to pay to Mr. Durand the sum of $1650 for the goodwill only of the license for the sale of spirituous liquors," is not a sale of the license itself, but of the privilege which it gave the owner of the license to have it renewed.

Archambault v. Durand, 25 Rev. Leg. 288.

§ III A—50—GOODS TO BE PROCURED—PROMISSORY NOTE.

One who sells goods to be procured from another, or sells for that other, and receives in his own name a promissory note in payment, is not an indorsee for value without notice of the promissory note so given him.

Robertson v. Norton, 30 D.L.R. 369, 44 N.B.R. 49.

OPTION—RETENTION OF GOODS—REMEDY—DETINUE.

An option to a purchaser to keep the containers of the sold merchandise at a fixed price is, when exercised, a sale, enforceable in an action for goods sold and delivered, and not in detinue.

At the expiration of the time limit in an option agreement with a broker, the owner is entitled to consider the matter at an end, unless the broker can shew either that there was an entirely new agreement, or that the terms of the old option were either by express agreement, or by implication continued until the sale was effected, he can only recover on the basis of a quantum meruit.

NONDELIVERY—MEASURE OF DAMAGES.

The rule for measuring damages for non-delivery of goods laid down in the Sales of Goods Act (R.S.S. 1909, c. 147, s. 49 (3)), namely, that where there is an available market the measure of damages is prima facie to be ascertained by the difference between the contract price and the market or current price at the time or times when the goods ought to have been delivered, is inapplicable where the price has been prepaid, and in such case, if the market price is higher at the time of trial than at the time specified for delivery, the damages are to be measured by the latter price.

ACTION TO SET ASIDE A SALE.—SALE OF HAY—DELAY—C.C. QUE. ART. 1530.

One who buys hay and receives delivery the following day, and immediately reports alleged defects in the hay cannot, when he is sued, 15 days later, refuse payment for the reason that the hay was not of the quality agreed on. He ought to take the initiative himself, and sue his seller to annul the contract of sale, within 9 days after the discovery of the alleged defects, the grounds set up in the defence being of the nature of an action to set aside the sale.

ANIMAL—REDHIBITORY ACTION—DELAY.

A redhibitory action, commenced 30 days after the sale of a horse, is not brought within a reasonable delay, when the purchaser might have ascertained the animal's defects the day after the contract, and when the parties live in the same place.

Sutherland v. Portelance, 24 Rev. Leg. 473.

ASSUMPSIT—ATTACHMENT.

If goods are delivered to a person who asserts that he never bought them, but who refuses to return them, the plaintiff's action should be in revendication or payment of their value, in default of their being returned, and not by an action of account for sale and delivery of goods.

Léger v. Viau, 53 Que. S.C. 501.

AUCTION SALE—LIABILITY OF PURCHASER—DELAY—DAMAGES.

As a general rule the purchaser of goods sold at public auction, who does not immediately pay the price at which the article was knocked down to him, must pay damages for his failure to do so. But, if such person had been in the habit, for many years, of buying at the same auction rooms, and that according to the custom of the vendor he was always granted a delay of three, five or even eight days, he should not be held responsible for his default in payment unless the vendor at the opening of the bidding had given notice that no delay would be allowed for payment for goods sold.

VENTE A REMERE—REDEMPTION—ACTION TO COMPEL.

A purchaser with a right of redemption, having become irrevocable owner by failure of the vendor to redeem within the stipulated delay, has no right of action to compel him to redeem. He cannot claim the price of merchandise delivered in consideration of the sale on the ground that the contract is one of security and only intended to guarantee payment of the price of the merchandise.

Landry v. Nicole, 51 Que. S.C. 253.

PRICE PER POUND—WARRANTY OF QUANTITY—WORDS WRITTEN ON CHEQUES GIVEN IN PAYMENT—ESTOPPEL—CLAIM FOR SHORTAGE.

The plaintiffs had in their yard a quantity of "scrapped" copper-wire, which they estimated at about 70 tons. The defendant negotiated with the plaintiffs' manager for the purchase of the wire, and was told that it had not been weighed, but was estimated at 70 tons. A bargain of sale and purchase was made at 15 cents per lb. There was no written memorandum of the bargain. The weight turned out to be only 100,700 lbs. The defendant paid the plaintiffs a sum based upon that weight at 15 cents per lb., less a sum representing his loss of profit upon 39,300 lbs., the shortage; and the question in this action was, whether the sale was of 70 tons or of such quantity as the plaintiffs actually had in their yard. On the defendant's cheque for the first payment made on account of the price were written the words "on a/c purchase 70 tons copper." Another cheque contained the words "payment on purchase copper-wire." The defendants had the opportunity of examining the wire before purchase. The defendant was not buying for any purpose which required 70 tons or about 70 tons. The defendant took from the plaintiffs a written warranty of title. Can. Dig.—125.

to the wire, but did not ask for or receive a warranty as to quantity. Held, that the sale and purchase were not of 70 tons, neither more nor less, but were of all the scrapped copper-wire the plaintiffs had and were offering for sale. The words written on the cheques simply ear-marked the transaction in which they were given, and the cashing of them did not estop the plaintiffs from shewing the truth of the matter.

CASH ON DELIVERY—DEDUCTION.

Where a thing purchased is to be paid for in cash on delivery and the vendor receives from the purchaser a letter to the effect that he will not deduct from the price the amount of a claim which the vendor denies, the vendor is not bound to deliver.

Where goods are purchased for shipment f.o.b., and are billed in the seller's name, and the bill of lading, with a draft for the purchase money attached, sent a bank

RIGHT OF ACTION—DELIVERY F.O.B. CARS—REFUSAL BEFORE DELIVERY TO ACCEPT—RESULT AS TO FORM OF ACTION.

In an action for goods sold and delivered the plaintiff must establish appropriation of goods in pursuance of the contract so as to vest the property in the goods in the buyer; if the latter repudiates the contract before delivery has been made to the carrier at the place where the contract provides for delivery f.o.b., and refuses to accept the goods from the carrier, the action should be a claim in damages for non-acceptance and not for goods sold and delivered.

RIGHTS AND REMEDIES OF PARTIES—IN GENERAL—RIGHT OF ACTION—DAMAGES.

Where there has been no breach of warranty by the conditional vendors and there is no right to return the goods, the conditional vendee who has returned them to the premises of the conditional vendor is not thereby entitled to defend an action brought by the latter on the lien notes where the conditional vendor has not exercised its right to repossession and has done nothing inconsistent with the right of the conditional vendee to the possession of the chattels in question.

International Harvester Co. v. Leeson, 23 D.L.R. 674, 31 W.L.R. 219.

EFFECT OF INCORPORATION ON LIABILITY FOR PRICE.

When a person does business under a firm name and gives orders to a manufacturing company, and afterwards turns his business into a stock company under the same name, of which he becomes the manager, and continues to give orders to the same company in his own name, the latter has no personal recourse against him if it was aware of the constitution of the company and if the goods were delivered and charged in its books to and partly paid for by the company.

Rolph v. Villeneuve, 47 Que. S.C. 29.

LATENT DEFECTS—REMEDY OF PURCHASER—REHIBITORY ACTION.

The principle of art. 1530 C.C. (Que.) respecting the delay within which the purchaser may bring a rehibitory action equally applies to the action quantum minoris and the action for damages in compensation for the prejudice caused by latent defects. A purchaser cannot, then, bring any one of these actions if he has been in charge of the goods purchased for several months and has finally disposed of them at a reduction. Letters or telegrams of protest or of refusal, declaring that the goods refused are defective, are insufficient; it is the action itself which should be brought with reasonable diligence.

QUALITY.
To an action for the price of goods sold and delivered there may be set up by way of total or partial defence, damages for breach of contract resulting in a diminution of the value of the article sold. The defendant had this right before the Judicature Act and it exists independently of the rules relating to set-off and counterclaim. Only damages so diminishing the value of the goods, however, can be so set up and not any other damages arising from the breach of contract, the latter being recoverable only by way of cross-action or counterclaim, and delay in delivery does not so touch the value of the goods as to permit for damages arising therefrom being set up as a defence by way of diminution of the price.

DEFECTIVE QUALITY — ACCEPTANCE — C.C. QUE. ARTS. 1493, 1506, 1522—RECUPEMENT OF PRICE.

When a purchaser of a car of lumber, although complaining of the quality of part of the goods received, accepted the quantity complained of together with the rest of it, and, moreover, sold the whole of it to a third party, he thereby, gives effect to the contract, and cannot claim a diminution of the price on the ground that said part of said lumber was not of quality or grade agreed upon.

Cameron v. Faust, 46 Que. S.C. 491.

(§ III A—53) — QUANTITY — ALL LOGS WHICH VENDOR "SHALL CUT" — CONSTRUCTION.

A sale of logs to be cut by a jobber in these words "all white pine logs which N_o shall cut, etc.," must be construed as meaning as many as the jobber will cut, and not the specific number which he may have contracted to cut, notwithstanding a mention made in the sale, and the annexing thereto of a copy of the jobber's contract, by which he undertook to cut 50,000.

Bank of Ottawa v. East Templeton Lumbering Co., 44 Que. S.C. 295.

ACTION FOR DIMINUTION OF PRICE AND REPAYMENT—SALE OF GOODS—GUARANTEE OF QUALITY—DELIVERY—DEFICIENCY—DELAY IN COMMENCING ACTION—C. C. QUE. ARTS. 1504, 1507, 1530.

In a sale of goods carried in the cars of a railway company, the agreement "quality and quantity guaranteed at out turn" constitutes a conventional guarantee of quality and of quantity at the moment of unloading and covers the delivery up to unloading. If, at the time of the delivery, there is found to be a deficiency in the quantity sold and paid for, the purchaser has an action for diminution of the price and for recovery of the money which he has so paid. This action is not subject to the short period of limitation of an action for setting aside a sale; it is only prescribed by 3 years.

Porter v. Bouchard, 55 Que. S.C. 412.

QUANTITY—RESCISSION.

A purchaser of a quantity of cord-wood of a stated measurement, among which the vendor delivered wood of a shorter length than that stipulated, may keep the wood by paying the contract price for the quantity delivered. He is not bound to ask for an annulment of the sale or refuse the wood on such ground.

La Pierre v. Pelchat, 20 Que. P.R. 212.

WEIGHING.

A sale of an undetermined quantity of tobacco, which is drying on the ground at the rate of so much a pound, is not a sale in lump or by weight. In a sale by weight, if the purchaser refuses to accept and weigh the goods sold, the vendor may, after offering to determine the weight and to deliver it, weigh it himself and claim the price from the purchaser.

Jubenville v. Lafond, 54 Que. S.C. 377.

SALE OF GOODS—FAILURE OF VENDOR TO SUPPLY — DAMAGES — MEASURE OF INCREASED COST OF PROCURING MATERIAL—FAILURE OF CAUSING DELAY AND EXPENSE TO PURCHASER—REMOVEDNESS OF DAMAGE.

Plaintiff was given damages for defendants' failure to supply sand and gravel pursuant to contract, the damages allowed being for increased amounts paid by plaintiff to procure the material; but he was not allowed for additional loss through having to continue the employment of a large number of skilled workmen for many days while he was waiting for material or for delays through bad weather in the fall after the time when he could have completed his work but for the defendants' default, such damages being too remote.

Stewart v. Stonevall Gravel, [1919] 1 W.R. 344.

MANUFACTURE OF SPECIFIC ARTICLE—UNDERTAKING TO DELIVER BY NAMED DAY—DELAY—PENALTY OR LIQUIDATED DAMAGES.
Peele Island Navigation Co. v. Doty Engine Works Co., 23 O.L.R. 402, 18 O.W.R. 599.

(§ III A—54)—DEDUCTION FROM PRICE—FREIGHT CHARGES.

On settlement for building materials bought under a contract requiring payment of the freight charges by the seller to the place of delivery, the buyer is entitled to a deduction for such charges and for customs duty paid by him at the point of destination.

RIGHT TO REJECT—INCOMPLETE SHIPMENT—F.O.B. SALES BY WHOLESALE.

A buyer of goods to be shipped f.o.b. at the dispatching point, with settlement by sight draft, with bill of lading attached, is justified in rejecting the goods if, on inspection of same with the carrier on their arrival, it is found that a part of the goods contracted for have not been included; the buyer in such a case is justified in declining to accept the goods or pay the draft until the shipment is complete.

SHARES—PROMISSORY NOTE—DELIVERY—NOVATION.

Where a promissory note is given for company shares, and made payable in another jurisdiction concurrently with the delivery of the shares, the seller is not entitled to maintain an action upon the original contract in the Court of Quebec, if he is unable, as a result of an attachment by his creditors in the other jurisdiction, to produce the note and tender delivery of the shares. The note does not operate as a novation of the debt.

Saunders v. Deavitt, 28 D.L.R. 546, 49 Que. S.C. 445.

DELIVERY F.O.B.

When goods are bought f.o.b. at New York, the freight from New York to Montreal to be paid by the purchaser, the delivery of the goods to a railway company designated by the latter entirely frees the vendor from all responsibility, which from that time falls on the purchaser.

Spiegelberg v. Helleur, 24 Rev. Leg. 147.

DAMAGE IN TRANSIT.

In shipping goods the shipper acts as the agent of the person to whom the goods have been consigned, and the latter is responsible for the cost of carriage and obliged to bear the losses and damages which may happen during transportation.

National Breweries v. Guillemette, 50 Que. S.C. 329.

REPUDIATION OF CONTRACT BY BUYER—FAILURE OF SELLER TO PREPAY FREIGHT AS AGREED.

(§ III A—55)—WHERE VENDEE IS LIABLE ON "QUANTUM VALEBANT."

Notwithstanding a special contract for the sale of a quantity of goods at a specified price, where the vendee accepts a certain number of the goods, he is liable for their value on quantum valebant, though the goods accepted were not up to the contract. [Cutter v. Powell, 6 Term R. 320, 2 Smith's L.C. 9th ed., 1912 (and similarly 11th ed., 1903, Vol. 2, p. 24), followed.] Where a vendee becomes liable on quantum valebant for goods sold and delivered, the liability accrues as soon as the goods are retained by him, notwithstanding that the period of credit under the original agreement had not expired.

(§ III A—56)—CHATELS—CONDITIONAL SALE—COLLATERAL LAND MORTGAGE.

The fact that an agreement for the purchase of chattels provides that the buyer shall give the seller a mortgage on certain designated land to secure the payment of the purchase money does not render a mortgage, given in compliance with such stipulation but contained in an instrument separate and apart from the agreement of purchase, although executed simultaneously therewith, void under Alta. Stat. C. 5 of 1910 (2nd sess.) as a "charge or encumbrance" on land contained in or annexed to an agreement for the purchase of chattels. [Smith v. American-Abell, 17 Man. L.R. 5, followed.]

(§ III A—57)—ON BREACH OF WARRANTY—ACTION FOR BALANCE OF PRICE—EVIDENCE—SET-OFF—DAMAGES—FINDINGS OF TRIAL JUDGE—APPEAL.

Morgan v. Gordon, 2 D.L.R. 889, 3 O.W.N. 971.

Upon the failure of an engine to conform to a written warranty, the neglect of the purchaser to give notice thereof to the vendor by registered mail at his place of business, as the contract required, precludes the setting up the breach of warranty in an action to recover the purchase money.

Where a contract for the sale of several articles of machinery is expressed to be di-visible, and the warranty given thereon is expressly made applicable to each article, separately, though the articles are intended to be used together and to form one outfit, a defect in one article will not entitle the purchaser to rescind the whole contract or to refuse payment for the articles which are not defective, but relief will be confined to the defective article.

Bell Engine & Threshing Co. v. Wesenberg, 3 D.L.R. 550, 3 O.W.N. 1169, 21 O.W.R. 969.

The fact that a subwarrantor had received pay for an article furnished a warrantor, does not absolve the former from liability to the plaintiff in warranty for damages caused by defects in the thing warranted.

Wilson v. Vogel; Vogel v. Gardiner; Gardiner v. Locomotive & Machine Co., 4 D.L.R. 196.

ALLEGED BREACH—REMEDY—CONDITIONS OF SALE AND WARRANTY UNFULFILLED—NO REMEDY BEFORE FULFILLMENT.

When a sale of goods has taken place and warranty given to the purchaser, he must claim under breach of warranty either setting up a reduction in the price or an action for damages; and cannot, in action, in an action against him for the purchase price, rely on the alleged breach to justify a defence of failure of consideration.

Edwards v. Pearson, 50 D.L.R. 600, [1919] 3 W.W.R. 505.

In an action by the buyer for breach of warranty on the sale of a motor car, where the evidence as to the efficiency of the car is conflicting, the court will sua sponte, appoint an expert to determine and report upon the efficiency of the car, even where the seller will not assist in proving the actual condition of the car; the onus being upon the buyer to establish the breach complained of.

Middleton v. Black, 2 D.L.R. 209, 21 W.L.R. 249.

RIGHTS OF PARTIES ON BREACH OF WARRANTY — NOTICE OF DEFECTS — IMPUTED KNOWLEDGE OF CONTENTS OF WRITTEN AGREEMENTS.

White v. Hobbs, 16 D.L.R. 880, 6 O.W.N. 314.

DELIVERY—TIME—BREACH OF WARRANTY.

Where a valid sale is made of goods in existence and ready for delivery when the sale is made, the contract of sale not being severable, and the property in the goods passing to the purchaser at the time of the sale; the breach of any condition to be fulfilled by the seller can only be treated as a breach of warranty and not as a ground for rejecting the goods and treating the contract as repudiated, unless there is a term in the contract express or implied to that effect. Where no time is mentioned a contract must be executed within a reasonable time.

REPRESENTATION AS TO QUALITY AND SIZE—BREACH—DAMAGES—ALLOWANCE TO VENDEES AND TO SUBVENDEES ON RESALE—PAYMENT INTO COURT—RULE 308—COSTS.

Where there has been a representation and warranty the vendees are entitled to a reduction in the contract price for a breach of that warranty, the amount being the actual reduction in the value of the goods by reason of the breach. Allowances must also be made to subvendees who bought the goods on the same warranty. The vendees are not prejudiced by payment into court and must have their costs in the action from the date of payment in. [Mondel v. Steel, 8 M. & W. 858, 151 E.R. 1288; Dingle v. Hare, 7 C.B. BREACH—SECTION 5 FARM MACHINERY ACT, 4 GEO. V., 1913, ALTA., c. 15—DAMAGES.

Section 5 of the Farm Machinery Act (Alta.) 4 Geo. V., 1913 (Alta.), c. 15, amply covers warranties and breaches in respect to the sales of farm implements, and it is unnecessary to have recourse to the general conditions referred to in s. 16—Sales of Goods Ordinance. Relief for breach of warranties referred to in the said s. 5 of the Farm Machinery Act is found in damages, not in rescission of the contract.

BREACH OF WARRANTY—DEFECTIVE TRACTION ENGINE—LIMITATION OF LIABILITY.

In an action by the seller for the price of a traction engine the buyer is entitled to counterclaim for all damages resulting from a failure of the engine to fulfil the purpose for which it is to be used, and such right is not affected by a condition in the contract against liability for secret defects.

MISREPRESENTATION AND WARRANTY—ACTION FOR BREACH.

Where the contract of sale of an interest in a business is silent as to warranty, evidence is nevertheless admissible to prove representations made at the time of entering into the contract and intended as a warranty to have been untrue; an action in damages as for breach of warranty upon such misrepresentations will lie whether the representations were fraudulently made or not. [Bentsen v. Taylor, [1893] 2 Q.B. 274, 280, applied.]

WARRANTY OF TITLE—OUTSTANDING MORTGAGE.

A purchaser is entitled to be indemnified by the immediate seller where the title to the article sold fails by reason of an outstanding chattel mortgage.

Sharp v. Ingles, 23 D.L.R. 636, 21 B.C.R. 584, 8 W.V.R. 1325, 32 W.L.R. 150.

INSTALLATION OF MACHINERY—BREACH OF WARRANTY—MEASURE OF DAMAGES.

Where, after the installation of a new burning plant, it fails to operate as economically as warranted at the time of the sale, and the work performed proves of no value and less economical than the old equipment, which necessitates the removal of the new plant and the reinstalling of the old system, the buyer may rightfully recover all expenses incurred and damages suffered in connection with the construction of the new plant and the reinstatement of the old one, against which no counterclaim for the price is maintainable. [Basten v. Butter, 7 East 479, applied.]

British American Paint Co. v. Fogh, 24 D.L.R. 61, 22 B.C.R. 97, 8 W.V.R. 1331, 32 W.L.R. 142.

SALE OF BOAT—MISREPRESENTATION OF AGE.

Representing a boat to be only 8 years old, where it, in fact, appears to be 14 years old, does not establish fraud or misrepresentation in defence of an action on a promissory note given as part of the purchase price thereof.

BREACH OF WARRANTY—REDUCTION OF PRICE—SET-OFF—INSCRIPTION EN DROIT.

An inscription en droit cannot be taken against a defence setting up in compensation a debt which can only be claimed by a conventional demand. One who has sued for the price of an automobile sold with warranty, and who sets up in compensation a sum of money resulting from damages suffered to the automobile through no fault of his, does not exercise a recourse for damages but a demand for reduction of the price under arts. 1511, 1518, C.C. (Que.).

Iacroix v. Giguère, 48 Que. S.C. 81.

WARRANTY AGAINST LATENT DEFECTS—SALE OF COW.

The purchaser of a cow who, on the day of the sale, finds, on milking her, that she has inflammation of the udder, should immediately notify the seller. An action to cancel the sale brought after 13 days, is too late, and disregards the rule as to diligence, in such cases, of art. 1530, C.C. (Que.).

(§ III A—58)—TENDER OF SECOND SAMPLE—REFUSAL TO INSPECT.

The buyer is not entitled to withdraw from his contract on the ground that one box of merchandise (e.g., evaporated apples), forwarded as a sample, was not satisfactory, where the contract of sale contained a stipulation that it was "subject to the approval of five boxes, when ready for shipment;" the buyer must still inspect and pass upon a shipment of five boxes forwarded for the approval of the buyer in accordance with the terms of the contract and if the buyer refuses even to inspect these shipments, on the ground that the rejection of the one box operated as a termination of the contract, the seller may resell the goods and recover damages. Graham Co. v. Canada Brokerage Co., 10 D.L.R. 107, 24 O.W.R. 277.

PURCHASE OF STOCK OF GOODS—FAILURE OF PURCHASER TO PAY—DAMAGES—LOSS ON RESALE.

Hutchinson Co. v. McGowan, 5 O.W.N. 27, 24 O.W.R. 969.

RESALE.

When the seller of goods calls on the buyer to take delivery at the appointed time, and informs him that if he is not prepared to do so, he, the seller, knows parties willing to buy, to whom he can sell the goods, and the buyer acquiesces in that course, the sale is not thereby cancelled, and the seller has a right to recover from the buyer the difference between the price agreed on between them, and that for which he sells to third parties.

Daigle v. Brochu, 44 Que. S.C. 397.

(§ III A—59)—POWER OF RESALE—HOW EXERCISED—NOTICE OR DEMAND.

M. bought cattle from T., leaving them in possession of T. for future delivery, and paying a deposit upon their purchase price. M. failed to take delivery on the date fixed, and upon subsequently asking for them, T. refused to give them up, and thereafter sold them to another purchaser—Held, that as T. had not demanded from M. or notified him to take delivery of the cattle, he could not exercise a right of resale, and that his repudiation of the contract gave M. an immediate right of action.

Molyneux v. Traill, 9 W.V.R. 137, 32 W.L.R. 292.

B. LIEN FOR PRICE.

See Ante, I C.

(§ III B-60)—LIEN FOR PRICE—STOPPAGE IN TRANSIT.

The unpaid vendor of goods has the right to resume possession of them while in transit, so long as delivery within the meaning of art. 1492 C.C. (Que.), has not been made to the vendee, notwithstanding any sale or transfer by the latter to a third party, and without the necessity of revindication or other judicial proceeding.

Abinovitch v. Ehrenbach, 41 Que. S.C. 55.

LIEN NOTE—DEFAULT IN PAYMENT—RE-TAKING POSSESSION OF GOODS—COMPLIANCE WITH SS. 7, 8 OF SALE OF GOODS ACT—ONUS OF PROOF.

The onus of proving compliance with ss. 7, 8 of the Sale of Goods Act rests upon the plaintiff. [Sawyer-Massey v. Bouchard, 13 W.L.R. 394, followed; Massey-Harris v. Elliot, 11 D.L.R. 632, inapplicable.]

Armstrong v. Larson, 30 W.L.R. 545.

TERMS OF PAYMENT—TIME.

In the absence of any mention of a time limit within which the payment of goods sold and delivered was to be made it will be held that the vendor is entitled to claim payment immediately on the delivery of the goods. A sale of effects made under the following conditions: "Terms, September, October, November and December, net 25 per cent" means that the goods were sold for their face value and were to be paid, without any discount deducted or interest added, by four equal payments during the months respectively.

Horton v. Deeb, 54 Que. S.C. 35.

(§ III B-61)—VENDOR'S LIEN.

The failure to insert the name of the vendor in the space intended therefor in a lien note given for property purchased at an auction, which provided that "the title, ownership and right of possession of the goods for which [the] note [was] given shall be and remain at my risk in . . . until this note . . . is paid in full," does not affect the vendor's title to and ownership of the personality sold, where the terms of sale, which were known to the vendee, required such a note to be given. [Kirk v. Urwin, 29 L.J. Ex. 345, applied.]

VENDOR'S LIEN—LOSS OF—PARTING WITH POSSESSION.

A vendor's lien for the price of chattels sold is lost when he parts with possession by a wrongful sale of the chattels to another.

McGregor v. Whalen, 20 D.L.R. 489, 31 O.L.R. 543.

CONDITIONAL SALES—RESERVING PROPERTY IN GOODS UNTIL PAID FOR—PARTIAL PAYMENTS AS LIQUIDATED DAMAGES—VENDOR'S LIEN.

Under a conditional sale contract which contains in addition to the reservation of property in the goods until paid for, a stipulation that in case of default the sellers may retain all partial payments as liquidated damages, and may also retake possession, the sellers may avail themselves of their common law right of suing for the instalments as they become due or prove against the purchasing company in liquidation proceedings, and still retain the property in the goods. VENDOR'S LIEN—POSTPONEMENT OF—NON-INTERFERENCE WITH FINDINGS OF TRIAL COURT.

Wade v. Johnston, 31 D.L.R. 555.

LIEN AGREEMENT—AGENT TO RECEIVE PAYMENT AT A CERTAIN TIME—GENERAL AGENCY TO RECEIVE PAYMENT.

A lien agreement in which a bank is named to receive the money due under the agreement on or before a certain date does not constitute the bank the agent to receive the money generally or at any other time than on the date on which the payment becomes due.

WILL—DIRECTION FOR SALE OF PROPERTY TO PERSON NAMED—SECURITY FOR PAYMENT OF PRICE—EXECUTORS—VENDOR'S LIEN.

A testator by his will directed that his business should be sold and that his brother should "have the privilege of first purchasing the same;" in the event of his purchasing, the stock was to be sold to him at invoice prices, he was to receive the fittings and fixtures free of charge, was to have a year to pay the price, and was to pay a fixed monthly rental for the business premises for one year; after the expiration of the year, the rental was to be fixed by the executors. By a codicil, the testator directed that the purchase-price should be paid in monthly or quarterly instalments, and the whole should be paid within one year from the date of the purchase. The brother elected to purchase upon the terms stated in the will:—

Held, that the executors were entitled to the security of a vendor's lien, and that the purchaser was entitled to take only subject to that lien.

Re Harris, 43 O.L.R. 476.

VENDOR'S LIEN—NOTICE.

When the proprietor receives personally from the supplier the building materials accompanied by invoices indicating their nature and the cost thereof, and signs said invoices as having received the same, this is sufficient to comply with the notice required to secure the supplier's privilege.

Desnoyers v. Therrien, 15 Que. P.R. 239.

VENDOR'S LIEN.

Laidlaw v. Vaughan-Rhys, 44 Can. S.C.R. 453.

(§ III B-62)—RECLAIMING PROPERTY.

When pulp wood from his principal's land was sold by an agent without authority, the principal is entitled to follow the pulp wood into the buyer's hands. [Greer v. Faulkner, 40 Can. S.C.R. 399, affirming Faulkner v. Greer, 16 Ont. L.R. 123 followed.]

B.N.A. Mining Co. v. Pigeon River Lumber Co., 2 D.L.R. 609, 3 O.W.N. 701, 21 O.W.R. 291.

UNSATISFIED JUDGMENT AGAINST VENDOR—BREACH OF WARRANTY — NONPAYMENT OF PURCHASE-PRICE—SET-OFF—SEIZURE.

An unsatisfied judgment against the vendor of a motor car for breach of warranty in connection with the sale of the car cannot be set off against the purchase-price of the car, and does not prevent such vendor from seizing the car under a lien agreement for nonpayment of the purchase-price.

CANCELLATION—MUTUAL CONSENT—RATIFICATION—SETTLEMENT OF ACCOUNTS—C. ARTS. 1539, 1540.

After the sale on instalments of an automobile, the vendor, in default of payment on the part of the purchaser, went to the domicile of the latter where his wife was found alone, and with her consent took back his car; the purchaser instead of reclaiming it, sued for damages, alleging that the vendor had acted illegally. Held that the vendor, not having committed any wrong in fact, or any violence, was justified in taking back his car, and moreover, that the purchaser had not disavowed the consent given by his wife by commencing an action for recovery of the car, but had sued for the return of the money he had paid and for damages. In these circumstances, the purchaser has no other right than those under arts. 1539, 1540, C.C. (Que.) i.e., the right to a settlement of their respective claims with regard to the car.

SALE OF GOODS—CONDITIONAL SALE—LIEN—NOTES—REPOSSESSION—“SEIZURE”—VENDOR DEEMING HIMSELF INSURE.

Peterson v. Johnston, 17 W.L.R. 596.

(§ III B-64)—STOPPAGE IN TRANSIT—INSOLVENCY OF VENDEE—GOODS IN CUSTOMS.

Under art. 1543 C.C. (Que.) as amended, an unpaid vendor has the right of stoppage in transitu where goods have been sold and shipped to a vendee within 30 days of the insolvency of the latter, even where delivery has been made but not where goods have been sold and shipped to a limited liability company more than 30 days before the date of the winding-up order if the company had taken delivery of the goods. Goods deposited in a customs warehouse or held by a carrier pending the passing of an entry through the customs may be stopped in transitu by an unpaid vendor, where the vendee has become insolvent. An unpaid vendor of goods has the right of stoppage in transitu in the event of the vendee's insolvency while the goods are still in the course of transit; their retention by the carrier entrusted with the delivery of the goods, or the handing of them over to a wharfinger, or to the selling agent of the vendor, will not defeat this right.

Florsheim Shoe Co. v. Boston Shoe Co., 9 D.L.R. 602.

SALE OF GOODS—VENDOR'S LIEN — INSOLVENCY OF PURCHASER.

The vendor of moveable goods payable on the instalment plan and delivered to the purchaser, may, later, validly agree with the latter, that until the price is paid, the goods sold will remain his property although in the purchaser's possession. Therefore, in case of the latter's bankruptcy before the happening of the condition, the vendor may exercise with respect to the goods sold, all the remedies of an owner.

William Lloyd Machinery Co. v. Publishers Press, 23 Que. K.B. 184.

(§ III B-66)—ACCEPTANCE OF NOTES—LIABILITY OF JOINT MAKER.

Promissory notes jointly signed by father and son, which are given in payment of a threshing outfit sold to the son under an agreement signed by the father as co-purchaser, will render the latter primarily liable as a joint purchaser and not as surety.

ACCEPTANCE OF NOTES.

If the purchaser of a stallion did not, before the agreement for sale was made, have notice of an attack it had made on the vendor, and that was sufficient to amount to misrepresentation sufficient to avoid the sale, it was waived by the giving of a note for a part of the purchase money after learning such fact.

McPherson v. Faris, 5 D.L.R. 385, 4 A.L.R. 373, 21 W.L.R. 654, 2 W.W.R. 643.

(§ III B-66a)—LIEN FOR PRICE — LIEN NOTES—TAKING AFTER SALE—RIGHT OF SUBSEQUENT PURCHASER.

A lien note to the seller given for unpaid purchase money by the buyer of chattels long after the transaction of sale and after title had passed to the buyer, will not be effective to confer a title or right of seizure as against a subsequent purchaser from the original buyer taking without notice of the original seller's pretended lien.

LIEN NOTES—ABSENCE OF PROVISION FOR SEIZURE—RETAKING OF POSSESSION — RESCISSION.

The note which defendant gave plaintiffs for the price of an automobile purchased from the plaintiffs contained a provision that, until the note should be paid, the automobile should remain the property of the plaintiffs. After default in payment, the plaintiffs retook possession of the car apparently intending to keep it as their own. Held, following Sawyer v. Pringle (1891) 18 A.R. (Ont.) 218, that the plaintiffs had, by such action, rescinded the contract of purchase and could not recover in an action upon the note.

Boyce Carriage Co., Ltd. v. Squires, 25 Man. L.R. 47, 7 W.W.R. 555.

ACTION FOR PRICE—LIEN NOTES—PROOF OF DELIVERY OF GOODS.

Actual delivery of goods need not be proved in an action on a lien note given as security for the purchase price of such goods.

International Harvester Co. v. Jeelson, 7 W.W.R. 590, 30 W.L.R. 293.

LIEN NOTE — REPOSSESSION — MORTGAGE — CONVERSION.

A lien note which entitles the holder, in case of default in payment of the debt, to take and hold possession of the chattel until the note is paid, or to sell it by private or public sale and apply the proceeds in payment of the note, does not give the holder a right to convert the chattel to his own use, or to mortgage it to another, without being answerable for the conversion.

Mellis v. Blair, 27 D.L.R. 165, 22 B.C.R. 450, 10 W.W.R. 241.

LIEN NOTES.

In order to justify the retention by the holder of a lien note upon a resale of the chattels for which it was given, of the expenses of retaking them, he must show that the charges were fair and reasonable, and they were actually paid or incurred by him. The fact that a lien note was assigned by the payee will not prevent him maintaining an action thereon, notwithstanding it was not assigned to him in writing before suit was begun, where the assignment was to a bank as security only. [Covert v. Janzen, 1 S. L.R. 429, followed.]

(§ III B—69)—LIEN ON LANDS.

Where an implement company sells certain machinery and its attachments, taking for the purchase price the buyer's so-called promissory notes, appending to the notes a specific lien agreement as well as an agreement to execute a mortgage against his lands, for the price of the goods, the delivery of all the goods is, by necessary implication, a condition precedent to the operation of the lien and execution of the mortgage against the lands; yet if some of the attachments are missing and their non-delivery is subsequently compromised orally between the seller and the buyer by a stipulated allowance satisfactory to the buyer, the seller is not thereby disentitled to the collateral security by way of lien on the lands, for the price as so reduced. [Rustin v. Fairchild, 39 Can. S.C.R. 274, discussed and distinguished.]

C. RECISSION.

(§ III C—70)—RECISSION BY BUYER FOR DELAY—ACQUESCENCE BY SELLER.

On notice by a buyer of building materials of rescission of his contract as to undelivered materials, for the seller's failure to deliver within a reasonable time, the seller's conduct in asking withdrawal of the cancellation, in stopping further preparation of the materials, and in afterwards negotiating for a new contract, constituted acceptance of the cancellation and acknowledgment of the right to cancel.

INNOCENT MISREPRESENTATIONS — LACHES — EFFECT.

Where the buyer by his own acts so deals with the property purchased as to put it out of his power to return it to the seller in like condition as when it was bought, and this after ascertaining that the seller had made material misstatements as to the subject-matter in the negotiations, damages will not be awarded in the absence of any warranty if there was no fraud and the statements were made in a belief of their truth, but semble, the buyer might have rescinded had he acted promptly on learning of the misrepresentation.

Humber v. McConnell, 19 D.L.R. 766.

OBLIGATION TO RETURN SUBJECT-MATTER, HOW LIMITED.

While ordinarily a purchaser of personalty who elects to treat the contract as repudiated is bound to restore the article which has been furnished to him in the condition in which it was, yet, where his inability to do this is not the result of any thing he has done, but is due to the thing sold breaking down, owing to defects for which the other party is responsible, it is sufficient if the purchaser offers and is ready to return it in the condition in which it thus was after the breakdown.

DEFICIENCY IN QUANTITY.

An action for rescission as distinct from an action for damages may be supported by proof of innocent representations as to quantity, where the deficiency between the actual quantity represented and that existing is so great that the buyer cannot be said to have received what he bargained for.

O'Connor v. Sturgeon Lake Lumber Co., 17 D.L.R. 316, 7 S.L.R. 60, 27 W.L.R. 813, 6 W.W.R. 701.

SALE IN VIOLATION OF STATUTE.

It is ordinarily the duty of the seller to know of the defects in the engine he sells, and where the legislature has imposed a duty on him and prohibits any sale not in accordance with the statute, making the seller liable to a penalty, but does not in express terms prohibit the purchase nor make the purchaser liable to any penalty even though he buy with knowledge that the specifications have not been statutorily complied with, the legislation must be deemed to have been passed primarily for the protection of the purchaser, who is entitled to have the purchase price returned; the seller being entitled to possession of the engine. [Kearley v. Thomson (1890), 24 Q.B.D. 742; Moses v. Macferlan, 2 Burr. 1005; Lodge v. Nat. Union Inv. Co., [1907] 1 Ch. 300, applied.]

CONTRACT—"IN GOOD RUNNING ORDER"—CONDITION NOT CARRIED OUT—RETURN OF DEPOSIT.

A contract for the sale of a separator contained a stipulation that the separator was to be put in running order. The machine was never put in running order although the plaintiff had the necessary parts needed in stock. The court held that the defendant had not agreed to buy the various parts of a separator but a separator in good running order, and as he had not been able to get that article he was entitled to have the contract rescinded and his deposit money returned.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENT—AGENCY OF VENDOR FOR PURPOSE OF SELECTION OF PARTICULAR INSTRUMENT—REVOCATION BY PURCHASER BEFORE APPROPRIATION TO CONTRACT OF PARTICULAR INSTRUMENT—SUBSEQUENT APPROPRIATION—REFUSAL OF PURCHASER TO ACCEPT—LEGALLY APPROPRIATED ARTICLE NOT TENDERED.

MINERAL CLAIM—THIRD PARTY.

A sale of mineral claim, by a person having the right to convey title, will not be set aside at the instance of one claiming an interest under an unwritten agreement where there has been no fraud on the part of the purchaser, especially if there has been delay in bringing the action.

Reynolds v. Jackson, 41 D.L.R. 168.

DELIVERY IN INSTALLMENTS—DEFAULT.

The failure of a seller of lumber who had contracted to ship the lumber at regular intervals to ship the anticipated quantity, held not to entitle the purchaser to repudiate the contract.

Meadowcreek Lumber Co. v. Adolph Lumber Co., 25 B.C.R. 298, [1918] 2 W.W.R. 466. [Reversed 45 D.L.R. 579, 58 Can. S. C.R. 306, [1919] 1 W.W.R. 823.]

ACCELERATION CLAUSE—DEFAULT—WAIVER.

Although a contract for the sale of goods on the instalment plan contains an acceleration clause making the full amount of the unpaid purchase-price due and payable on default in payment of any instalment, yet if the seller accepts an overdue payment, without objection, he cannot take advantage of such clause in respect to the delay in the payment of such instalment.

Advance Rumely Thresher Co. v. Grenier [1918] 3 W.W.R. 497.

RESILIATION CLAUSE.

An "ipso facto" resiliation clause is not a power given the vendor to cancel the contract, but the contract continues to exist so long as the vendor has not shewn his intention of cancelling it. The vendor, therefore, may always, if he sees fit, ask the fulfillment of the contract. If the vendor seeks the enforcement of the resiliation clause, he must return the money and things he has received.

Lesage Packing Co. v. Lesage, 53 Que. S. C. 491.

WHAT CONSTITUTES — REMEDIES—BREACH OF WARRANTY.

A breach of warranty as to the quality of goods sold entitles the buyer to damages for the difference in value but not to the right of rescission; nor will the seller's dealings with the returned article in an attempt to remedy its defects amount to acts of ownership so as to operate as a rescission.

REPOSESSION AND RESALE—ASSERTION OF OWNERSHIP.

Where a vendor repossesses an article sold under an agreement which provides for repossession and resale, and acts in reference to the article in a manner not provided for in the agreement, the purchaser may treat the contract as rescinded, if the acts of the vendor amount to an assertion of unqualified ownership of the article, or if, as a result of such acts, the value of the article is depreciated.

REPOSESSION AND RESALE—RETURN OF PAYMENTS.

The repossession of animals by a vendor in the exercise of his lien under a conditional sale and their subsequent resale subject to the ratification of the defaulting vendee, without exercising any rights of ownership over them by the vendor, does not operate as a rescission of the contract as to entitle to a return of the payments in restitution of statu quo.

WRONGFUL CANCELLATION OF ORDER — RECOVERY BACK OF DEPOSIT.

The person who contracts to purchase a chattel, in this case an automobile, and makes a deposit along with his contract, cannot recover the deposit upon his wrongfully assuming to cancel the order and refusing to take delivery; the money paid is no less a deposit because it is a part payment. [Howe v. Smith, 27 Ch.D. 89, applied; Snell v. Bricks, 20 D.L.R. 269, 49

Can. S.C.R. 366; Kilmer v. B. C. Orchard Lands Co., 10 D.L.R. 172, [1913] A.C. 319, distinguished.]

WHEN REFUSED—IMPOSSIBILITY OF RESTITUTION.

Where as part of the transaction in the sale of an automobile the seller is also required to procure a loan for the buyer to meet the purchase price, the buyer, after receiving the benefit of the loan cannot claim a rescission of the sale for misrepresentations as to concealed defects, where from the nature of the contract the parties cannot be completely restored to their original position.

BREACH OF WARRANTY—RECOVERY OF PAYMENTS.

R. agreed to buy from M. well-smoked haddies. At the request of H., who purported to act for M., R. paid M.'s draft for the price of the fish and the C.P.R. charges for freight, in order to facilitate H. in getting the fish as speedily as possible into cold storage:—Held, that upon the haddies turning out not to be well smoked, R. was entitled to a return of the moneys paid.

Small v. Dominion Automobile Co., 8 O.W.N. 256.

SALE ON APPROVAL—REVENDEICATION.

A person who delivers goods for trial, or with a promise of sale under a suspensive condition reserving to himself the right of ownership in the goods, is not such a seller as may exercise the action in rescission of sale or of revendication under art. 1543, 1908 C.C. (Que.)

Hyatt v. Herlihy, 50 Que. S.C. 163.

(§ III C—72)—RESCISSION—FRAUD AND MISREPRESENTATION—TRADE CUSTOM.

A representation made on the sale of an automobile that it was a "perfectly new car" will be a ground for rescission of the contract by the party deceived who had accepted delivery of the car on the faith of the representation, where the car was in fact a car which had been sold and used during the previous season and had since been "rebuilt," and where the vendor knew that the purchaser in requiring the assurance that it was a "perfectly new car" meant that it had not been previously sold and used and was ignorant of the trade custom set up by the defense of treating "rebuilt" cars as new. [Erlanger v. New Sombrero Co., 3 A.C. 1218, applied.]

FRAUD—PUFFING.

Mere puffing and favourable comment on the part of an agent or promoter to present his company shares to an intending investor so as to induce the investor to purchase, do not constitute misrepresentation or fraud.

North West Battery v. Hargrave, 15 D.L.R. 193, 23 Man. L.R. 923, 26 W.W.R. 331, 5 W.W.R. 821, 1002.

OF ENGINE—CONDITION—ENGINE ORDERED NOT DELIVERED—ACTION FOR PURCHASE PRICE—RESCISSION OF CONTRACT.

It being a condition of the sale that a threshing engine shall be a 25 h.p. engine, the purchaser is entitled to have the contract rescinded and the deposit returned to him upon the admission of the vendor in an action brought by him to recover the balance of the purchase price, that the machine was in fact a 22 h.p. standard machine, although the purchaser has retained and used the machine through two seasons upon the vendor's continued assurances that he would put it in good working order, if the purchaser did not know until the trial that the machine was not in fact a 25 horse power machine such as he had contracted to purchase.

Cushman Motor Works v. Laing, 49 D.L.R. [1919] 3 W.W.R. 494, affirming [1919] 2 W.W.R. 311.

MISREPRESENTATION—REMEDY—ACTION FOR BREACH OF WARRANTY.

The provisions of the Sales of Goods Ordinance (Alta.) are not inconsistent with the right of a purchaser to be relieved from a sale induced by a fraudulent misrepresentation as to a material fact; his remedy in such case is by rescission and restitution, and not for an action for breach of warranty.

FRAUD AND MISREPRESENTATIONS—SALE OF COMPANY SHARES—RETURN OF MONEY PAID WITH INTEREST—PRINCIPLE AND AGENT—EVIDENCE.

Seagram v. Kemish, 14 O.W.N. 187, affirming 13 O.W.N. 321.

ASSIGNMENT—FRAUD—JOINDER OF PLAINTIFFS.

A vendor to whom a purchaser has transferred a pretended debt in partial payment of the price of a sale, may demand that the transfer be annulled on the ground of fraud and claim the price of sale from the purchaser. Such a demand does not annul the sale itself.

Comtois v. Pesant, 24 Rev. de Jur. 566.

MISREPRESENTATION—AGENT.

A material false representation, inducing a sale, entitles the purchaser to rescission, even if made innocently by an agent.

Gibson v. Cottingham, 32 D.L.R. 213, 23 B.C.R. 393, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 496.

FRAUD—REMEDY.

The rules of law relating to the effect of fraud and misrepresentation upon a contract for the sale of goods are expressly preserved by s. 58 of the Sale of Goods Ordinance save in so far as they are inconsistent with the express provisions of the ordinance. There is nothing in the ordinance which is inconsistent with the right which the law gives a man to be relieved from a contract into which he has been induced by the fraudulent misrepresentation in a material respect of the other party to it.

FRAUD AND MISREPRESENTATION—SALE OF COMPANY SHARES—RETURN OF MONEY PAID WITH INTEREST—PRINCIPAL AND AGENT—EVIDENCE.

Sorgam v. Kemish, 13 O.W.N. 321.

RIGHT TO PURCHASE MONEY.

The general rule of law laid down in art. 1538, C.C. (Que.) to the effect that in an action for the rescission of a sale for non-payment of the price, the buyer may pay the price with interest and costs of suit at any time before the rendering of the judgment, does not apply when the parties, in a deed of sale, have defined their legal rights by stipulating that if the purchaser should fail to make any payment within a certain delay, the sale shall be considered null and void, without any notice or legal proceedings.

Watson v. Morgan, 11 O.W.N. 125.

FRAUDULENT REPRESENTATIONS—DELAY.

A stipulation in a contract of sale that the purchaser may annul the sale within a month from the date, if the thing sold is not such as it has been represented, the sale will nevertheless be annulled by the court, after such delay, if the purchaser has been the victim of false representations amounting to fraud.

De Sable Union v. Warren, 24 Que. K.B. 111.

LATENT VICE OF ANIMAL AS GROUND FOR RESILIATION.

The vice of kicking in a horse, when latent, gives right to a rescission of the contract of exchange or sale between the parties.

Bibeau v. Leclerc, 47 Que. S.C. 272.

FRAUD AND MISREPRESENTATION—SALE OF ANIMAL—EVIDENCE—FAILURE TO PROVE FRAUD.

Peppiat v. Reeder, 8 O.W.N. 84, 332, 526.

FRAUD.

The purchaser of the stock in trade en bloc of a merchant who fails to obtain the names of the unpaid creditors who furnished the goods in order to pay them out of the purchase money cannot invoke his good faith; when for fear of fraud the law declares certain acts to be void its provisions cannot be evaded on the ground that proof could be made that the acts were not fraudulent. Such purchaser cannot put aside the claim of a creditor because some of the goods which he furnished were not contained in the stock sold, having been previously disposed of.

Stocks v. Boulier, 3 O.W.N. 277, 20 O.W.R. 421.

-(§ III C-73) — REPUDIATION BY BUYER—GOODS NOT APPROPRIATED TO CONTRACT—DAMAGES.

Where goods for future delivery are sold under an implied term that the seller may appropriate the goods to the contract, the authority so to appropriate is withdrawn by the buyer's notice of repudiation of the contract; it is, not open to the seller thereafter to select and ship the goods and to sue for the price as upon an executed contract, but his remedy is only for damages for the buyer's failure to carry out the agreement. [Hochester v. De la Tour, 2 El. & Bl. 678, 118 Eng. R. 922; Tredegar

FAILURE TO SUPPLY ENTIRE ORDER.

Rescission of an entire contract of sale for the seller's omission to supply all of the several articles included in the order is a right which must be exercised as to all or none, and retention of part of the goods is a waiver of the right as it disaffirms that the contract was an entire one. Victor Mfg. Co. v. Regina Trading Co., 14 D.L.R. 801, 6 S.L.R. 302, 26 W.L.R. 157, 5 W.W.R. 624.

ORDER FOR CHATTELS GIVEN UNDER SEAL—RIGHT OF OFFERER TO WITHDRAW FROM PURCHASE BEFORE ACCEPTANCE.

Garr Scott Co. v. Ottoson, 21 Man. L.R. 462, 16 W.L.R. 663.

(§ III C—74) — REJECTION — RETURN IN "REASONABLE TIME"—QUESTION OF FACT.

Whether a purchaser at an auction sale, which was fraudulently conducted in that the seller employed a "puffer" to bid up the price far beyond the actual value of the chattel, has repudiated the purchase and returned the chattel within a reasonable time, is a question of fact in each case.

BY DESCRIPTION—FAILURE TO COMPLY WITH—REJECTION OF GOODS.

Under a contract for the sale of a portable engine it may be returned to the dealer where, upon a fair test, on account of its construction, it does not prove to be portable nor to work satisfactorily as such. Massey-Harris Co. v. Elliott, 11 D.L.R. 632, 4 W.W.R. 134.

ACCEPTANCE WITHOUT INSPECTION—GOODS UNMERCHANTABLE.

A purchaser who accepts delivery and resells the material purchased, shipping it a long distance without making any examination as to its quality or condition, is guilty of imprudence; on the goods proving unmerchantable he is entitled to have the contract rescinded and the purchase money returned but not to damages for freight demurrage or loss of profits.

REJECTION OF GOODS—DELAY—TENDER—PAYMENT.

When a vendor, upon the complaint of the purchaser that the thing sold is defective, undertakes to take it back, asking delay for doing so, the purchaser is no longer bound to bring his action for cancellation of the sale within a reasonable time after the sale. He can make use of his recourse any time before prescription is acquired. A purchaser who sues his vendor for cancellation of a sale is only bound, in making a legal tender, to request the vendor to come and take the thing sold, wherever it is. A defendant cannot allege default or insufficiency of tender when he refuses to pay in any case.

Boivin v. Les Allumettes de Drummondville, 54 Que. S.C. 337.

REJECTION OF GOODS.

The obligation of the purchaser of goods to use diligence in demanding cancellation of the contract of sale only exists in the case of warranty against latent defects in the goods sold. The right to demand cancellation for breach of warranty against eviction or warranty by contract is only subject to the prescription of thirty years. An action brought against a foreigner within a reasonable delay is evidence of diligence and the judgment given therein interrupts the prescription.

Lapierre v. Drouin, 41 Que. S.C. 133.

Where a purchaser of an unexpired lease of a hotel and the chattels contained therein pays part of the purchase price for which a receipt is issued by the seller setting forth the terms of the contract and the seller told the buyer that the lessor of the premises would have to be satisfied with the new tenant, but did not disclose to him or to the agent that there was an arrangement between him and his lessor by which the lessor was to get a certain percentage of the purchase price in the event of the sale of the unexpired term and it subsequently developed that the lessee refused to carry out this arrangement but tried to get the purchaser to pay all or part of this sum to the lessor, the purchaser is justified in rescinding the contract.

A vendee of chattels, upon rescission of a contract of sale for the default of the vendor, has a lien thereon for the purchase money he has paid on the contract, which lien is not displaced by the recovery of a judgment against the vendor for the amount so paid.

Canadian Gas Power & Launches v. Orr, 4 D.L.R. 641, 3 O.W.N. 1362, 22 O.W.R. 351.

(§ III C—74a) — DEFAULT OF VENDOR—LIEN OF VENDEE.

Upon breach of warranty by a seller of goods the court, on giving a judgment for the return of the purchase payment to the buyer, will direct that upon such refund being made the goods be returned to the seller. [Canadian Gas Power v. Orr, 4 D.L.R. 641, applied.]

D. RIGHTS OF BONA FIDE PURCHASERS. (§ III D—75) — TITLE TO ANIMAL SOLD BY POUND-KEEPER.

Where a plaintiff claims title to a horse under a bill of sale from a pound-keeper, sold under the provisions of the Rural Municipality Act (Alta. 1911-1912, c. 3, ss. 206 et seq.), the onus is upon him to show that there were no irregularities in the sale proceedings.

INVALID REGISTRATION OF LIEN NOTE.

A purchaser in good faith for valuable consideration obtains title to the chattel which was the subject of the sale although he had notice that the seller had given a lien note at the time that such seller bought the chattel, if such lien note was not registered as required by the Conditional Sales Act, (Sask.) which provides that the seller shall not be permitted to set up a right of property or right of possession under the unregistered lien note as against the sub-purchaser from the party to whom he gave possession under a conditional sale. PURCHASE FROM WIFE OF CONDITIONAL OWNER—FAILURE TO REGISTER LIEN NOTES—RIGHTS OF PARTIES.

The buyer of a horse from the wife of a previous purchaser who had obtained it upon a conditional sale contract will, if he buys with the acquiescence of the conditional purchaser, be entitled to the like protection because of the failure of the conditional vendor to register his lien notes under the Lien Notes Act (Sask.) as a purchaser from the husband who gave the lien notes would have been entitled to, where the purchase from the wife was carried out in good faith and for valuable consideration.

Where "The L. M. Ericsson Telephone Manufacturing Company," the vendor of a telephone switchboard, affixed its name thereto as the "L. M. Ericsson Tel. Mfg. Co.," it is not entitled to a lien thereon, under c. 145, s. 1 of the Conditional Sales Act, R.S.O. 1897, for unpaid purchase money as against a purchaser who, in good faith, for a valuable consideration and without notice, acquired title through the vendee, as there was not a sufficient compliance with the provisions of such Act.

Ericsson Telephone Mfg. Co. v. Elk Lake Telephone & Telegraph Co., 4 D.L.R. 576, 3 O.W.N. 1309, 22 O.W.R. 161.

RIGHTS OF BONA FIDE PURCHASERS.

A good title to a horse is acquired by one who, for a valuable consideration, purchased it from a dealer in such animals in the usual course of business, without notice that the person from whom the dealer obtained it had reserved the title thereto by an agreement that the law did not require to be registered, in which he was described as a dealer in horses. A purchaser who has not had delivery of the thing purchased cannot revendicate it from a third person who, in good faith, has subsequently acquired it from the same vendor and has been put in possession of it.

GOODS UNDER EXECUTION—PURCHASER IN GOOD FAITH — "TRADING IN SIMILAR MATTERS" — REIMBURSEMENT — THINGS OF MINIMUM VALUE — C.C. QUE. ARTS. 1487, 1989.

The sale of goods which are under execution, by the judgment debtor to a third party in good faith, is like a sale of a thing stolen. The judicial guardian of these goods has the right to recover them from the hands of the purchaser, reimbursing him for the price he has paid in accordance with art. 1489, C.C. (Que.).

But, the purchaser cannot, in order to justify the retention of part of the goods seized and sold, plead that they have no value. He must return them in their entirety in the condition in which they were received.

Bourdeau v. Capuano, 55 Que. S.C. 135.

PAROL CONTRACT—PASSING OF PROPERTY—PURCHASER WITHOUT NOTICE — BILLS OF SALE ACT.

In an action of trover for the conversion of pulpwood, the evidence was that under a verbal contract, one P., in consideration advances made and to be made, agreed to get out and deliver to the plaintiff 5,000 cords of pulpwood: the wood to be marked in the woods with the plaintiff's mark, the letter "Q," and to be the plaintiff's property immediately it was cut, and to be delivered to the plaintiff along the railway track at Peters Siding.

Held, affirming the Trial Judge, that if the jury found the pulpwood in question was cut and marked with the plaintiff's mark, or, if not so marked, if it could be identified as pulpwood cut under the contract, it was the plaintiff's property as against the defendant, a purchaser for value, without notice, and the contract was not in contravention of the provision of the Bills of Sale Act, C.S.N.B. 1903, c. 142.
 Quebec Forest Products Co. v. Shannon, 46 N.B.R. 294.

IV. Bulk sales.

(§ IV—90)—BULK SALES—"ENTIRE CROP" OF POTATOES—ESTIMATED QUANTITY—EFFECT OF.

A contract for the sale of "the entire crop of merchantable potatoes" to be raised on a specified ranch in a season at market price for September, is not restricted as to the quantity affected by a statement in the contract that the vendor "estimates" the yield at "600 tons more or less;" the purchaser is bound to take the entire crop, although it amounted to double the estimate.

Hanmond v. Daykin, 18 D.L.R. 525, 19 B.C.R. 550, 6 W.W.R. 1205, 29 W.L.R. 763. SETTING ASIDE—STATUTORY PERIOD.

A sale declared void as not having complied with the provisions of the Bulk Sales Act is void only as against the claimant who has brought action within the 60 days prescribed by the Act, and is binding as against those who have not attacked it within that time, and they will not be allowed to come in subsequently and share ratably with the one who, by his diligence, has succeeded in having the sale set aside.

BULK SALES ACT.

A sale of a stock of goods in bulk, unaccompanied by any payment in cash or by promissory note, or other document for the purchase price, is not within the Bulk Sales Act (Sask.), 1910-11, c. 38, s. 3, and is not fraudulent and void thereunder.

Pearl v. MacDonald, 33 D.L.R. 19, 10 S.L.R. 6, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 1118.

STOCK IN TRADE—GOOD-WILL.

The sale of a stock-in-trade includes essentially the good-will, which embraces the name, the title, the sign and everything which may help the buyer to retain the customers and notify them of his acquisition of the business.

Barlow v. Turner, 51 Que. S.C. 52.

AFFIDAVIT—SCHEDULE OF CREDITORS.

In a sale en bloc under arts. 1569a et seq. C.C. (Que.), the purchaser is not personally liable on account of a false statement in the affidavit of the vendor. The vendor in the sworn declaration must mention all the creditors and not only those to whom he is indebted in respect of the goods sold en bloc; a default in doing voids the sale. It is incumbent upon the purchaser to demand and see that this affidavit is made in conformity with the law and he should bear the consequences of defects in form which are in it. A creditor of the vendor not so mentioned can take advantage of a defect in form, even when the goods that he sold to the vendor were not included in the stock sold en bloc, provided that his claim was prior to such sale.

Montreal Abattoir v. Picotte, 52 Que. S.C. 373.

RECOURSE OF CREDITORS—NOVATION.

The object of the arts. 1569a to 1569e, C.C. (Que.), is to permit a merchant debtor to dispose en bloc of his business property and stock, or the greater part of it, so as not to make himself liable to a capias or a seizure before judgment, but the other property of the merchant is not affected. Thus, a creditor can take advantage of these provisions by presenting to the purchaser his total claim against the vendor, without losing his remedy against the other property of the debtor, the presentation of the claim not effecting a novation.

Patenaude v. Beaudin, 51 Que. S.C. 509.

SALE EN BLOC—CREDITORS—PAYMENT.

The transferees of the sale price of a business sold en bloc for a price payable by monthly instalments, when the vendor undertook that he would himself pay all his creditors, have no right to claim from the purchaser the payment of one of the instalments so long as those creditors have not been paid, inasmuch as up to that time, under art. 1569a C.C. (Que.), the sale is null as far as the creditors are concerned.

Duhamel v. Graves, 24 Rev. Leg. 388.

The nullity declared in arts. 1569a et seq. C.C. (Que.) as a penalty for noncompliance with the formalities requisite to the validity of a sale en bloc, is not absolute but relative. It can be invoked only by creditors whose claims are prior to the sale and not by the curator in insolvency of the estate of the vendor, for the benefit of all the creditors, whose claims are subsequent to the deed attacked.

Gagnon v. La Banque Nationale, 54 Que. S.C. 259.

SALE OF GOING CONCERN—LIST OF CREDITORS—OMISSION.

There is no legal relation between the creditor of a trader and the purchaser of the latter's business, if his name does not appear on the sworn list of creditors furnished by the vendor; and the creditor cannot sue the purchaser to recover what the vendor owes him.

St. Amour v. Pusie, 54 Que. S.C. 386.

MEANING OF "GOODS, WARES OR MERCHANDISE"—LIVERY BUSINESS.

A transfer of a livery stable, including the horses, fixtures, harness, wagons, good will of the business, etc., is not such a "sale or transfer of a stock of goods, wares or merchandise" as to come within the provisions of the Bulk Sales Act, B.C. 1913, c. 101.

Brown v. McLeod, 8 W.W.R. 110.

SALE EN BLOC—STATUTORY FORMALITIES—AFFIDAVIT OF NAMES OF CREDITORS—NONCOMPLIANCE—PRESUMPTION AS TO FRAUD—ARTS. 1569c, 1569b, 1569a, C.C. (Que.)—ART. 646, C.C.P.

Rousseau v. Heirs of A.J. Dubuc, 25 D.L.R. 854, 47 Que. S.C. 127.

BULK SALES—SALE BY CHATTEL MORTGAGE—STATUTORY REQUIREMENTS.

A sale of stock-in-trade by a chattel mortgagee is not within the Bulk Sales Act (B.C.) which is not intended to destroy a security of that nature and enable the general creditors of a mortgagor to share equally with a secured creditor.

Drinkle v. Regal Shoe Co., 20 B.C.R. 314, 7 W.W.R. 194.

BLACKSMITH'S SHOP.

The provisions of arts. 1560, etc., C.C. (Que.) as contained in c. 39 of 1 Geo. V. (1910), which impose certain formalities for the protection of creditors in the case of sales en bloc of stocks in trade or of merchandise, do not apply to the sale by a master-blacksmith of his shop with tools and working material, such a seller not being a merchant or manufacturer, but an artisan. The fact that a person has admitted that he is a merchant or manufacturer, or that he assumes that character without having it, does not suffice for considering him as if he actually were a merchant or manufacturer.

Wilson v. Chaput, 50 Que. S.C. 321.

(§ IV—91)—BULK SALES—STATUTORY REQUIREMENTS—SALE OF HOTELKEEPER'S BUSINESS NOT INCLUDED.

An hotelkeeper operating under a license granted him under the Liquor License Act, R.S.M. 1913, c. 117, restricting the conduct of his business and the place of sale of liquors by him is not a "trader" or "merchant" within the meaning of the Bulk Sales Act, R.S.M. 1913, c. 23, so as to bring a bulk sale of the hotel equipment and stock within the requirements of that statute.

BULK SALES OF GOODS BY TRADER — STATUTORY REQUIREMENTS.

STATUTORY REQUIREMENTS—WAIVER.

When a trader is endeavouring to uphold a transaction which without the waiver of his creditors would be in plain disregard of the Bulk Sales Act, it is his duty to shew that the statute does not apply to the transaction by the clearest proof of such waiver as the statute calls for. (Semble): A waiver under the Bulk Sales Act, to be effective, must be given before the sale is completed.

Walter v. Ledue, 8 W.W.R. 360.

BULK SALES—DEBTOR AND CREDITOR.

Articles 1569a, 1569b, 1569c, 1569d, 1569e added to C.C. (Que.) by 1 Geo. V., c. 39 (Que.) are only intended to protect unpaid creditors whose goods formed part of the stock which their debtor sold en bloc. Hence, those persons whose goods were disposed of before the "bulk sale" cannot benefit by the provisions of said articles.

Ramsay v. Turcotte, 42 Que. S.C. 459.

SALVAGE.

See TOWAGE; SEAMEN; ADMIRALTY; SHIPPING.

(§ I—1)—MOTION TO STRIKE OUT PARTY—RIGHT OF ACTION BY PURCHASER — PRACTICE IN SALVAGE ACTION.

A plaintiff who complains that his name is being used without authority may be retained as plaintiff if he has acquiesced in the action being prosecuted, although he may not have originally instructed the solicitor. The purchase of an interest in a ship after the performance by it of salvage services does not necessarily disable the purchaser from prosecuting an action to recover same, when defended by underwriters. It is proper to have the master and crew before the court in an action for salvage. The maritime lien for salvage arises when the service is performed. It is not necessary in a salvage case to add cargo or freight unless a claim is made against them. When actions are brought by the same plaintiff in courts of different local jurisdictions, but by the same procedure, and the judgments in which are followed by the same remedies, such action will be treated as prima facie vexatious.

Johnson v. S.S. "Charles S. Neff," 18 Can. Ex. 159.

(§ I—2)—DEFINITION OF — PROOF—"OFFICIAL LOG"—AMENDMENT TO LOG—MERCHANT SHIPPING ACT, ART. 239 AND FOLLOWING.

During a heavy easterly gale, the "Commodore," towing the barge "St. David," and bound from Valdez to Anyox, B.C., had her rudder carried away and 2 of her 4 propeller blades broken, and was rendered practically helpless. She was drifting and leaking fast and was flying distress signals. The plaintiff managed to make fast a line to the "Commodore" and after twice breaking away succeeded in towing defendant into safety. Held, that the services rendered were skilful, considerable and meritorious, and, while not in a strict sense unusually hazardous, were in the nature of salvage services and not merely of the nature of towage. That the "log" kept in this case was an "ordinary ship's log" and not "official" within the meaning of s. 239, Merchants Shipping Act, 57 & 58 Vict., 1894, c. 60, and statements therein should not be accepted in evidence for the ship, but might be used against it to correct a statement made at a subsequent time. One year and 4 months after the accident, it is asked to add sheets of manuscript notes to the log, alleged to have been made by the master, but not proved to have been made at the time nor for the purposes of incorporation in the "log." Held, that permission to so amend the "log" will be refused.

The "Andrew Kelly" v. the "Commodore," 48 D.L.R. 213, 19 Can. Ex. 70, [1919] 1 W.W.R. 1059.

RIGHT TO — TOWAGE WITH APPRECIABLE RISK.

Where a large boat picks up and tows into harbour a gasoline passenger launch which had become disabled through depletion of the gasoline supplies and was drifting in the track of large vessels in an inlet, an allowance should be awarded on a salvage rather than a towage basis, although the gasoline launch was not in immediate danger, if there was an appreciable risk to the larger boat in her manoeuvres by being carried by the tide to a position close to the land.

Grand Trunk Pacific Coast S.S. Co. v. The Launch "B.B." 17 D.L.R. 757, 15 Can. Ex. 389, 6 W.W.R. 711.

TOWAGE—COSTS.

When about twenty miles out from Kingston the sole engineer on the tug "Dixon," towing 2 barges, fell overboard and was lost. He was the only one on board who knew anything about engines and the tug was, in consequence, without means of keeping up motive power. She was drifting and was in a position of actual or apprehended danger, and was signalling for help, when the "Keyvive," with some risks to herself, took them in tow and brought them to safety. Held (1), that the claim arising thereunder was one of salvage and not merely of towage. (2) That the act of plaintiff in claiming an excessive amount and having the ship arrested therefor was oppressive, and costs relative to the arrest and release on bail, and applications relative thereto will not be allowed him.

The "Keyvive" v. The "S. O. Dixon," 48 D.L.R. 114, 19 Can. Ex. 87.

MORTGAGEE AS SALVOR—VOLUNTEERS.

The recovery of a sunken dredge, with its contents, constitutes a salvage service creating a maritime lien. Where the mortgagee of the dredge employed others to perform the work of salvaging and is neither the owner nor charterer of the salvaging vessels, he cannot claim exemption from the rule that a salvor must be one personally engaged in the work done.

Simpson v. The "Kruiger," 19 Can. Ex. 64.

RIGHT TO.

The S.S. "Berwindmoor" was picked up some seventy miles S.S.E. of Sable Island in a disabled condition (in consequence of having lost her rudder) by the S.S. "Energie" on the morning of Nov. 27 and brought into the port of Halifax. The position in which the ship was found was a dangerous one at that time of year. During the operations heavy weather prevailed for the greater part of the time, in consequence of which the salvaging ship lost a number of lines, one of her anchor chains and anchor, had her windlass broken, and sustained other damage which necessitated detention and repairs at Halifax. The time consumed in the salvaging work and in the consequent repairs amounted to 11½ days. It was held that the services rendered by the "Energie" were of a meritorious character and that the sum of $12,500 would be a reasonable allowance therefor, to be apportioned $10,500 to the owners of the ship and $2,000 to the officers and crew. When the "Energie" with the "Berwindmoor" was within 15 miles of the mouth of Halifax harbour, the weather at the time being fine and there being nothing to prevent the "Energie" completing her work without assistance, the S.S. "Mackay-Bennett" was taken down by the agent of the owners of the "Berwind-moor," and, by the directions of the agent, a line was put on board the disabled ship from the "Mackay-Bennett" and that ship assisted in the further work of getting the "Berwindmoor" into port, and held, that, under the circumstances, the services rendered by the "Mackay-Bennett" could only be regarded as in the nature of towage-salvage, but that, having regard to the size, power and equipment of the ship, the ordinary rule in relation to remuneration for towage services should not apply.

ACTION OF IN REM VERSO—STRAY LOGS—COSTS OF SALVAGE—SURRENDER C.C. ART. 1046.

One who of his own initiative undertakes to salvage stray logs drifting in a stream or a river, has no recourse against the owner for the cost of salvage, if the latter prefers to give up the property.

Rousseau v. Breakey, 56 Que. S.C. 255.

(§ I-3)—DERELICT—ABANDONMENT OF VESSEL.

A vessel cannot be derelict before abandonment; derelict is a term applied to a thing abandoned and deserted at sea by those in charge of it without hope on their part of recovering it and without any intention of returning to it.

Humboldt v. The Escort, 8 W.W.R. 194, 30 W.L.R. 911.

(§ I-4)—APPREHENDED RISK OF DANGER—NATURE OF SERVICES—COMPENSATION.

Where there is apprehension of risk, or danger, to a ship, though no immediate risk or danger, the services voluntarily rendered such ship are in the nature of salvage services and though danger to the salvaging vessel is an ingredient of such services, it is not always necessarily present, and is not essential, but the degree of danger to life and property of the salvors is an element to be considered in arriving at the measure of compensation.

Clayoquot Sound Canning Co. v. S.S. "Princess Adelaide," 48 D.L.R. 478, 19 Can. Ex. 128, [1919] 3 W.W.R. 241.

CLAIM—BASIS OF ASSESSMENT—DERELICT—ACTUAL ABANDONMENT.

A salvage claim is not to be assessed on the basis of the salvaged boat being a derelict merely because she was on the point of being abandoned by her master and crew; there must be an actual abandonment to constitute a derelict and it must be without hope of recovering it or of returning to it.

The "Humboldt" v. The "Escort No. 2," 20 D.L.R. 899, 20 B.C.R. 595.

WAGES—LOSS OF EARNINGS.

Where the wages of the crew of a ship which has been salvaged are paid by the salvors, a lien therefor attaches, and can be enforced against the salvaged ship. No lien attaches in a case of attempted salvage where the services rendered produced no result, and contributed in no way to the subsequent saving of the boat. [Note.—On the first question decided above reference should now be made to a decision of Hill, J., in "The Petone," [1917] P. 198, reported since judgment was given in this case.]

(Canadian Dredging Co. v. The "Mike Corry," 47 D.L.R. 495, 19 Can. Ex. 61.

MODE OF ESTIMATING AMOUNT — COSTS — DISTRIBUTION.

In finding the value of salvage services, amongst other circumstances the court must consider the degree of danger to which the salvaged vessel was exposed, and from which she was rescued by the salvors, and the risk incurred by the salvors in rendering their services and the mode in which the services were rendered. The value of the vessel salvaged, while important, is not decisive. There is a difference owing to conditions rendering disaster less probable in the amount to be allowed for salvage services on the Great Lakes and on the high seas.

Johnson v. S.S. "Charles S. Neff," 44 D. L.R. 148, 18 Can. Ex. 168.

EXTRAVAGANT CLAIM — TENDER — PAYMENT INTO COURT — COSTS.

Where plaintiff named an extravagant sum for salvage services in his statement of claim, but the services were meritoriously rendered and the defendant did not tender or pay into court any moneys to cover the demand, the court declined to deprive plaintiff of costs although awarding a sum quite disproportionate to the amount claimed.

Brister v. S.S. Uranium, 15 Can. Ex. 102.

SHIPPING — EFFICIENT SERVICE — REASONABLE AWARD — AMOUNT.

A steamship of the approximate value of $45,000, carrying a cargo of deals of the value of $25,000 in respect of which the freight when earned would have amounted to $13,375, went aground on a shoal on the coast of Prince Edward Island, and lay in an exposed and dangerous position. The plaintiff sent his salvage steamers to the grounded ship, pumped water from her hold, and set a gang of men to jettison part of the cargo, which was boomed and towed ashore where it was afterwards sold. It was agreed between the agent of the underwriters and the plaintiff that if the plaintiff failed to get the defendant steamship off the shoal, the plaintiff would get $1,500 for loss of gear, but no arrangement was made in the event of success. The plaintiff succeeded in getting the steamship afloat some 3 days after she grounded. The steamship then proceeded under her own steam to Halifax, but one of the plaintiff's steamers stood by her until she was docked.—Held, that under all the circumstances and considering the respective values of the ship and cargo, the plaintiff was entitled to a salvage award of $8,000.

Brister v. S.S. Bjorgviu, 15 Can. Ex. 105.

AWARD — AMOUNT — VALUE BASED ON DEPRECIATION OF SHIP.

The O., a freight steamer, fully laden with coal, had gone ashore on Danger reefs, at the northerly end of Thetis Island, and about seven and a half miles, by ship's course, from Ladysmith, B.C. She had sprung a leak and the water had put out her fires. About ten feet of her forefront was on the rock, while her stern was in deep water. The P. sighted the stranded vessel in the night-time and went to her relief, taking in a hawser passed to her by the O., and waiting for the tide and daylight. Just before 6 o'clock in the morning, the P. started to pull straight ahead at full speed, and shortly succeeded in getting the O. off the reef. The P. then cut the O.'s hawser, so as to lose no time, backed up to the O. and made fast to her with the P.'s hawser, and succeeded in towing her under forced draft into Ladysmith, where the O. was tied up to a wharf in a position of acknowledged safety.—Held, that the services performed by the P., while without the specially meritorious features of saving human life or danger to herself and crew, were as skilfully conducted as the nature of the case permitted, and valuable, and as such were entitled to corresponding recognition, even though they were of short duration. Salvage awarded in an amount of $2,200. In finding the value of the ship and cargo, the district registrar allowed a yearly depreciation in the value of the ship of 7 per cent, following a practice with reference to wooden vessels said to prevail in British Columbia. Held, that whatever may be said of the allowance of such a depreciation in the case of wooden vessels as a rule, it must always very largely depend upon the manner in which the vessel was originally constructed and the care she had subsequently received, but, in any event, it could not be applied to the ship in respect of which salvage services were rendered in this case, as she is a better built ship than the average, and has been well cared for and maintained.

Dunsmuir v. The Otter, 18 B.C.R. 435.

RELATIVE LIABILITY OF SHIP AND CARGO.

Where no specific agreement is made for a sum certain, the rule in a salvage action is that the interests in the ship and cargo are only severally liable, each for its proportionate share of the salvage remuneration.

(§ 1-5)—SUDDEN FREEZING OF WATER—TIMBER TAKEN OUT OF THE STOCKADES AND ADRIET.

When in an action by way of seizure and sale the plaintiff claims logs carried from the stockades by a sudden freezing of the waters, and which the defendant has seized. The defendant has no serious right to contest the ownership of the property, or to allege that the wood in question is on the contrary the property of other companies not parties in cause. The defendant right is take possession to insure payment of his rights of salvage and not to claim the property. He pleads the right of others in pleading the right of property of other companies. Furthermore if the defendant had the right of retention until payment of salvage, be it by action or by exception, he ought to ask, not to be dispossessed of the wood in question before being reimbursed for the sum to which he would have a right. He should take steps to this end and in this case, not having done so, having sought only to renew the action, the court cannot do it for him.

(§ I A—1)—SEPARATE SCHOOLS—SECTION 17 OF SASKATCHEWAN ACT—WHOSE "RIGHTS AND PRIVILEGES" ARE PRESERVED THEREBY.

Section 17 of the Saskatchewan Act which preserved any right or privilege with respect to separate schools which any class of persons had at the date of passing the Act operates only in favour of the minority in any school district; the majority in a district had no "rights or privileges" with respect to separate schools because the school of the majority whether Protestant or Roman Catholic is in Saskatchewan always the "public school."

THE WORD "SCHOOL" DEFINED — ONTARIO PUBLIC SCHOOL ACTS.

The word "school" as used in the Ontario Public School Acts prior to that of 1896 is not prima facie to be interpreted as meaning "department" for which there is a teacher occupying a separate room with a separate register, but is to be given its ordinary and popular meaning—a place or establishment for instruction.

(§ I A—5)—LEGISLATIVE POWER.

The court will prevent the invasion by a municipal council of the legislative territory assigned to a school board, and will compel by mandamus the discharge of a council's statutory duties which are merely ministerial and ancillary in their nature; and necessary for properly carrying out the lawful action of a school board. The fact that the ratepayers disapprove of the action of a school board is no excuse for interference by a municipal council. A school board is supreme within the limits of its own jurisdiction, and a municipal council has no right to review or render nugatory the action of a school board in the exercise of a power given by statute to the board.

LEGISLATIVE POWER — MENNONITE SETTLEMENT — SPECIAL PRIVILEGES — COMPULSORY SCHOOL ATTENDANCE.

The compulsory provisions of the School Attendance Act, 1916 (Man.), c. 97, are binding upon Mennonites who settled in Manitoba under an arrangement with the Canadian Government made in 1873, and a Mennonite who neglects to send his child aged between 7 and 14 to a public school is liable to summary conviction and fine under that Act. The special provisions as to education in the settlement arrangement do not in fact interfere with the compulsory provisions of the provincial law and furthermore could not bind the Province of Manitoba as to its jurisdiction in educational matters conferred by s. 22 of the Manitoba Act, 33 Vict., (Can.), c. 3, confirmed by 34-35 Vict., (Imp.), c. 28.

(§ I B—12)—ATTENDANCE.

Where both parent and child have their permanent and principal place of residence within the limits of a school district, the child is not to be deemed a "nonresident pupil" and the trustees of the school district have no right to claim the payment of nonresident pupil's fees as a condition of such child being allowed to attend school.

RESIDENCE—RATES.

There is no duty cast upon a school board to receive within its schools children who are not resident within its own municipal district.

Patterson v. Victoria School Trustees, 24 B.C.R. 365.

TRANSPORT OF PUPILS—MANDAMUS—DISCRETIONARY MATTER.

The powers of the Superior Court, by virtue of art. 50 of C.C.P., do not extend to matters which are discretionary. So, the court cannot order school commissioners to transport children free of charge to schools of a school municipality, seeing that the Act states that they "may" do it "if necessary," and that, consequently, it is not imperative but only optional.

C. HEALTH REGULATIONS.

(§ I C—16)—VACCINATION—POWERS OF HEALTH BOARD.

A regulation by a Provincial Board of Health prohibiting, under the Public Health Act (Alta.), admittance of a pupil to any school unless he produces evidence of successful vaccination, is, as respecting the mode of enforcement, in conflict with the Truancy Act providing for compulsory attendance, nor within the excusable exceptions enumerated therein, and, therefore, ultra vires.

A. EMPLOYMENT; QUALIFICATION.

(§ II A—30)—QUALIFICATION—EMPLOYMENT—FORMALITIES OF CONTRACT.

A contract of a teacher with school trustees in New Brunswick is not invalid because not under the corporate seal of the trustees. [Alexander v. School Trustees, 39 N.B.R. 397, applied.]

Quinlan v. School Trustees, 14 D.L.R. 376. TERMS OF EMPLOYMENT—SCHOOL ACT.

Neither teachers nor trustees may contract themselves out of the School Act (Sask.), and any term in such a contract which is inconsistent with any provision of the Act will be void.

Haves v. Loyola School District, 34 W.J. R. 799.

ENGAGEMENT OF UNQUALIFIED TEACHER—UNAUTHORIZED TEACHING OF FRENCH—SEPARATE SCHOOLS ACT, s. 80—REGULATIONS OF DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION—MISCONDUCT OF TRUSTEES—PARTIES.

In an action by a ratepayer of a Roman Catholic separate school section against the trustees of the section and a teacher engaged by them, to restrain the trustees from continuing to employ the teacher—Held, (1) that the engagement of the teacher was illegal, because she had not the necessary qualification, and such qualification as she had, had not been validated by the Minister or Department of Education. (2) That the use and teaching of the French language in the school section as carried on by the defendants were unauthorized. (3) That s. 80 of the Separate Schools Act, 3 & 4 Geo. V. c. 71, was not applicable to this case, and did not create a domestic forum for the disposal of it. (4) Semble, that the word "prevail" in the regulation of the Education Department prescribing the course of study in a school section "where the French or the German language prevails," means "gain the mastery" or "predominate." (5) Held, that the conduct of the defendants, in disregarding and defying the rulings and remonstrances of the Department and its officers, was recalcitrant and recusant. (6) That the teacher was a necessary or proper party to the action. (7) That there should be a judgment for the plaintiff enjoining all the defendants as prayed, and for the recovery of nominal damages and full costs against the defendants the trustees personally.

BILINGUAL—TEACHER—QUALIFICATION—DUTY OF SCHOOL COMMISSIONER—MANDAMUS—PUBLIC INSTRUCTION—SECTION REF., [1909] ARTS. 2586, 2709, 2717.

School commissioners are obliged to employ, for teaching in the model school of their municipalities, teachers having a model French and English diploma. If they neglect to do this, a mandamus may be applied for. However, if it is impossible to procure the services of a teacher having the certificate required by the Act, the commissioners can, with the permission of the superintendent of public instruction, engage a competent teacher although not provided with a bilingual total diploma corresponding to a teacher's certificate.

Doherty v. School Commissioners of St. Gilles, 56 Que. S.C. 532.

B. COMPENSATION; SALARY.

(§ II B-35)—ADVANCE BY OFFICER BEFORE SCHOOL TAX AVAILABLE—RIGHT OF REIMBURSEMENT.

A school trustee who is also secretary to the board has a right of action against the board to recover the amount of a teacher's salary advanced by him where the necessary money had been voted and the advance was made with the concurrence of his cotrustees in reliance upon his being reimbursed when the school tax should be collected, the assessment of which had been duly authorized.

Quinlan v. School Trustees, 14 D.L.R. 376.

The plaintiff, an unlicensed teacher, was employed to teach in a school district for one term, under a written contract purporting to be made by the defendants, who are school trustees, incorporated under the Schools' Act, C.S.N.B. 1903, c. 50. The contract was signed by two out of the three trustees but the corporate seal was not affixed to it and no meeting of the trustees was held to authorize the contract. Under this contract the plaintiff taught for one full term. In an action to recover the amount agreed to be paid to her, it was held (1), that the contract was made by the school trustees as a corporation and not as individuals. (2) The contract is unenforceable because under c. 50, it is ultra vires of the school trustees to employ an unlicensed teacher. (3) The defendants are not liable on a quantum meruit for the services of the plaintiff because (a) the employment of the plaintiff was ultra vires, and (b) there was no completed work which the trustees could accept or reject.

Trustees of School District of Bright v. Verxa, 40 N.B.R. 351, 10 E.L.R. 1.

C. REMOVAL; DISMISSAL.

(§ II C-40)—NOTICE — SUFFICIENCY — RESOLUTION—SEAL.

The engagement of the principal of a high school, terminable upon a month's notice, is sufficiently terminated by communicating to him the resolution of the board that he "be given a month's notice to resign"—the exactness of the language being unimportant; the notice need not be under the corporate seal of the board.

Smith v. Campbellford Board of Education, 37 D.L.R. 506, 39 O.L.R. 323.

NOTICE OF DISMISSAL.

A motion adopted by school commissioners ordering the secretary-treasurer to notify "two teachers that the commission does not any longer require their services for the year 1913-1914," although passed in regard to both of them together, is of legal effect, provided each of such teachers receives individual and separate notice of dismissal.

Leroux v. Commissioners of Schools of St. Emile, 50 Que. S.C. 316.

III. Officers and elections.

A. OFFICERS.

(§ III A-55)—At a meeting of school commissioners (Que.) regularly opened with only three members present, a motion by one to appoint another of them chairman of the meeting is carried by the concurrence of the person so nominated, and is not subject to reconsideration or repeal by the whole meeting on the late arrival of two other members opposed thereto.

SCHOOL COMMISSIONER—DISQUALIFICATION—CONTRACT WITH COMMISSION.

Martineau v. Dansereau, 12 Que. P.R. 199.

POWERS OF SCHOOL BOARD—SELECTION OF TEACHERS.

Resolutions of a "separate school" board purporting to delegate to the chairman of the board power to discharge, select and engage teachers, are ultra vires.

DELEGATION OF AUTHORITY BY SUPERINTENDENT AS TO HEARING CHARGES—POWER AS TO.

The superintendent of public instruction has the right to delegate to a Judge of the Superior Court the power conferred on him by art. 2536, R.S.Q. 1909, to have a hearing upon certain accusations made against one of the members of the Catholic School Commissioners of Montreal.

Therrien v. Mercier, 24 Que. K.B. 352.

SCHOOL COMMISSIONERS—CHOICE OF SCHOOL SITE—MODE OF REVIEW—CHOSE JUDGE.

There is no other remedy in law to have quashed for illegality a resolution of the school commissioners deciding to acquire a certain land for a schoolhouse than the appeal given to the Circuit Court by R.S.Q. 1909, art. 2981. The judgment of the Circuit Court upon such appeal is final, and is chose juree between the parties. Any subsequent action in the Superior Court to have such resolution quashed, and an application for an injunction to prevent the commissioners from carrying out these resolutions, cannot be maintained because it would constitute an appeal from a judgment of the Circuit Court when the law refuses it, and because the Superior Court has no jurisdiction to decide such application.

Paquin v. School Com'rs of St. Genevieve, 47 Que. S.C. 218.

CONTINUATION SCHOOL ACT—BOARD VACANCIES—MANDAMUS.

Members of a township council who refuse to discharge their duties under the Continuation Schools Act, R.S.O. 1914, c. 207, in filling vacancies in the board of trustees of a township continuation school, may be compelled to do so by mandamus; a formal demand and refusal need not be shown, but refusal may be inferred from their conduct.

Re West Nisourri Continuation School, 33 D.L.R. 209, 38 O.L.R. 207, varying, as to costs, 11 O.W.N. 197.

REGULATIONS AS TO TEACHERS AND LANGUAGE—B.N.A. ACT.

The Ontario Legislature has power under s. 93 of the B.N.A. Act (inter alia) to regulate the manner of conducting schools in the province, to determine the qualifications required by the teachers, and to regulate the use of the French language in the schools; and a regulation of the Department of Education dealing with these matters does not conflict with those rights and privileges with respect to denominational schools which any class of persons had at the passing of the Act.

Ottawa Separate School Trustees v. Mackell, 32 D.L.R. 1, [1917] A.C. 62, 115 L.T. 793, affirming 24 D.L.R. 475, 34 O.L.R. 335. [See 12 O.W.N. 401.]

LIABILITY OF SCHOOL TRUSTEES—WRONGFUL DISBURSEMENTS—COURT COSTS—RESOLUTION—ALTERATION OF MINUTES—PARTICIPANTS.

VACANCIES—RESIGNATION—INABILITY TO ACT.

A school commissioner who hands in his resignation can no longer exercise his functions even if the resignation is not accepted. If he resigns and at the same time sends to the secretary-treasurer a certificate attested under oath stating his inability to act on account of illness, the production of the certificate vacates his position independently of the resignation.

Carrière v. Perrault, 51 Que. S.C. 237.

Where the election of a chairman at a meeting of a board of commissioners has taken place in obedience to statutory requirements at the hour fixed for the session and while a quorum was present it cannot be considered to have been accomplished by trickery or stratagem, and cannot be reconsidered or disregarded at an adjourned sitting.

Demers v. Moffet, 18 Rev. de Jur. 419.

BORROWING—VAGUE RESOLUTION—AUTHORIZATION—RATIFICATION.

A resolution adopted by school commissioners authorizing their secretary-treasurer "to borrow in the name of the school commission a few hundred dollars to meet expenses of betterments and repairs, and for the reduction of debts," does not give the right to this officer to contract a debt upon a note of $1,100 with interest at 6 per cent per annum. A resolution authorizing an indeterminate and indefinite borrowing, leaving to the secretary-treasurer the discretion of determining the amount to borrow, is illegal and ultra vires. It follows that the note given by the secretary-treasurer in the name of the school commission for such loan is void. In order that there may be ratification by the principal he must have knowledge of the agents excess of his powers and have the willingness to ratify it. So the negligence of the school commissioners to check over the accounts of that secretary-treasurer, who had illegally contracted a loan, is not a ratification of his conduct if they were ignorant of what he had done. Articles 232, 234, et seq., of the School Code, which requires the authorization of the superintendent of public instruction and of the Lieut.-Governor-in-council, and which impose certain formalities in order to contract a loan, apply only to loans of a permanent character which requires the issue of debentures or bonds, but does not affect temporary loans for costs of administration. School Commissioners of Ste. Elisabeth v. Lafrenière, 27 Que. K.B. 73.

OFFICERS.

If all the qualified members of the board are present at a meeting, the absence of a notice convening it cannot afterwards be invoked.

Giasson v. Les Commissaires d'Écoles de Farnham, 14 Que. P.R. 137.

COMMISSIONER OF—REGULARITY OF APPOINTMENT—ABILITY TO READ AND WRITE.

In order to exercise the office of school commissioner two conditions are required; regular appointment to office and proper qualifications. Failure to know how to read and write constitutes an incapacity rendering his exercise of office unlawful and is not a mere defect of eligibility covered by the failure of the voters to contest his election within 15 days before the Circuit Court. [Bonin v. Page, 9 Que. P.R. 177, overruled.]

Desaulniers v. Desaulniers, 9 D.L.R. 201, 22 Que. K.B. 71, 19 Rev. de Jur. 352.

QUO WARRANTO—SCHOOL COMMISSIONER OUGHT TO KNOW HOW TO READ AND WRITE BUT NOT NECESSARILY FLUENTLY—S.R.P.Q. 2639—C.M. 227.

It is not necessary, according to the law of public instruction, that a school commissioner know how to read and write fluently, in order to be deemed to know how to read and write.

Carrière v. Richer, 25 Rev. de Jur. 443.

(§ III A—56)—BOARD DELEGATING ITS POWER—IMPAIRING EFFICIENCY OF SCHOOLS—REMEDY.

Where a School Board has delegated its discretionary and quasi-judicial duties and functions to another and thereby impaired the efficiency of its schools, the court will remedy the wrong.

Mackell v. Ottawa Separate School Trustees, 18 D.L.R. 456, 7 O.W.N. 35.

RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF MEMBERS OF SCHOOL BOARD — DISCRETIONARY AND QUASI-JUDICIAL POWERS — DELEGATION OF POWERS.

The discretionary and quasi-judicial powers vested in a School Board in matters relating to the schools under its control are so limited that the business of the Board must be regularly conducted within its jurisdiction in the bona fide discharge of its duties and in harmony with the laws of the province and the regulations of the Department. A School Board in matters relating to the discretion of judgment is bound to exercise such functions so that the whole question must be presented to the Board, should be weighed and considered by the Board and must be determined upon by the Board, nor has the Board the power to delegate duties or functions of this character to another instead of exercising its own judgment and discretion throughout.

OBIGATION TO CONVEY PUPILS TO SCHOOL—DISTANCE OF "FURTHER THAN ONE MILE."

Under a by-law passed pursuant to sec. 91 (a) of the Public Schools Act, R.S.M. 1902, c. 143, to the effect that trustees shall provide suitable arrangements for conveying to and from school "all pupils who would have further than one mile to walk in order to reach the school," the distance between the house where the school children live and the road over which the van provided by the trustees passed should be taken into account, and also the distance from the school gate into the school building.

SCHOOL DISTRICT—PLEADING—RATEPAYERS SUING TRUSTEES—FORM OF ACTION.

In an action by ratepayers of a school district complaining of the act of the trustees in moving the school, if they do not constitute a majority of the ratepayers they shall plead as individuals and as suing on behalf of themselves and of the class to which they belong. In an action claiming an injunction against moving a school and damages, the trustees should not be sued, nor be held responsible, as individuals, but as a board, unless they are shown to have acted in bad faith, or at least willfully.

SCHOOL TRUSTEES—CONTRACT WITH SOCIETY TO WHICH TRUSTEES BELONGED—VALIDITY—SCHOOL ORDINANCE, s. 102.

RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF MEMBERS OF SCHOOL BOARD.

School commissioners are subject to the right of supervision by the Superior Court; and a suitor who demands the annulment of a resolution of the school commissioners "because it is illegal and constitutes a flagrant injustice to his rights," thereby sets up facts sufficient to give jurisdiction to the Superior Court.

Chaîne v. School Commissioners of St. Severe, 18 Rev. de Jur. 508.

CHANGE OF SCHOOL SITES IN A DISTRICT—INTERPRETATION OF SCHOOL-LAW.

In this case the respondents were obliged to change the present location of the school because it did not fulfill the conditions the rules required. It was not easily reached by the teachers nor was water of good quality provided. It was not required by law that the new site chosen by the respondents ought to be in the same centre of the district, which was moreover impossible. Taking into consideration all the circumstances of this case the respondents exercised wisely their discretionary powers in passing the resolution of July 23, 1918, which decreed the change of the school site, and consequently the appeal should be dismissed with costs.

(§ III A—58)—REQUEST FOR THE RECONSTRUCTION OF A SCHOOL IN THE CENTRE OF THE DISTRICT WHICH CONSTITUTED AN ANNEXATION—RIGHT OF APPEAL TO THE CIRCUIT COURT—ART. 2981 R.S.Q. 1909.

There is no appeal from a resolution of a school board, refusing a request that they rebuild the school in the centre of the district which has been annexed, art. 2981, R.S.Q. 1909. It would be unjust to change the site of the school at the request of the assessed portion which for 20 years never complained of the existing state of affairs. Hamel v. School Board of St. Damase, 25 Rev. de Jur. 393.

SCHOOL LAW — RESOLUTION OF SCHOOL BOARD—CHANGE OF A SITE OF SCHOOL HOUSE—APPEAL—JURISDICTION OF THE CIRCUIT COURT—R.S.Q. 1909, ART. 2988.

It is a principle that a law is not repealed unless it be so in formal terms, or that it be incompatible with the new law dealing with the same subjects. Article 2988 R.S.Q. 1909, allowing an appeal to the Circuit Court from a resolution of school trustees concerning the district schools or the construction of school houses, has replaced art. 2055 R.S.Q. 1888. Article 2988 does not give the Circuit Court such extensive powers as the superintendent of public instruction had by reason of art. 2055. The Circuit Court in this case has only the usual jurisdiction of the Court of Appeal. It is a recognized rule that where a question of fact arises, a court of appeal does not lessen or modify the judgment of the first instance, unless it contains serious mistakes, or applies erroneous principles, or omits to take into consideration the evidence or part of the evidence, or unless it has acted in bad faith.

Lamarche v. St. Michel de Napierreville, 25 Rev. Leg. 342.

B. ELECTION.

(§ III B—60)—NOMINATION OF CANDIDATES—PARTICULARS.

Under art. 5422 R.S.Q. 1909, the nomination paper of each candidate in an election, held under the provisions of the School Law Act, should designate his domicile and his profession and occupation, in a manner sufficient to identify him and under art. 5429: the nomination which does not conform to these requirements is invalid and should not be given any effect.

Gauthier v. Poitras, 49 Que. S.C. 232.

SCHOOL COMMISSIONERS—ILLEGAL ELECTION—CONTESTATION—QUO WARRANTO.

When, at an election of school commissioners where four candidates are nominated, the presiding officer assumes the power to declare that two of them are not qualified to exercise the functions and are ineligible, and proclaims the other two elected, without voting, there is, on his part, "non-observance of the formalities required," within the meaning of art. 2672, R.S.Q. 1909, which gives the right to contest the election, and which contestation, under art. 2673 shall be tried and decided by the Circuit Court or the Magistrate's Court to the exclusion of every other court. Consequently, remedy by quo warranto before the Superior Court cannot be had for the purpose of declaring that the trustees who were proclaimed elected have forfeited their office.

Lorrain v. Trudeau, 45 Que. S.C. 235.

(§ III B—61)—SCHOOL COMMISSIONER—NOMINATION BY BOARD—PETITION IN CONTESTATION—QUO WARRANTO—R.S.Q. 2692—QUE. M.C. 120.

The nomination of a school commissioner by the Board of School commissioners cannot be contested by a petition in contestation of election, but by the remedy of quo warranto. A school trustee, who has left his domicile in the municipality for which he was nominated, can no longer sit as such trustee, and resolutions adopted at meetings where he took his seat at which there would not have been a quorum without him, are null. As such a trustee is not acting in good faith, he cannot be considered as an officer de facto.

(§ IV—70)—RIGHT TO TAX EXEMPTED COMPANIES — MUNICIPAL BY-LAWS FIXING ASSESSMENT OF COMPANIES — PUBLIC SCHOOLS ACT—MUNICIPAL ACT—VALIDATING LEGISLATION, HOW LIMITED.

That municipal by-laws fixing the assessment of certain power companies had been confirmed by the Ontario Legislature will not prevent the operation of the restriction imposed by the Public School Act and the Municipal Act, [R.S.O. 1914, c. 266, s. 39, and R.S.O. 1914, c. 192, s. 296 (e)] by which no municipal exemption by-law in whole or in part shall be held or construed to exempt from school rates; this restriction applies not only to by-laws passed under the general powers of a municipality but also to special by-laws exempting from municipal assessment of any nature or kind beyond the rates of an agreed annual assessment and the assessment for school rates is not limited by the by-law. An attempted purchase of a school site by a rural school board, to be paid for by debentures, before the proposal for the loan has been submitted to and sanctioned at a special meeting called for that purpose, and the debentures duly issued in pursuance thereof, does not comply with s. 44 of the Public School Act, R.S.O. 1914, c. 266, and is therefore invalid and nugatory. APPEAL FROM A RESOLUTION PASSED BY THE SCHOOL COMMISSIONERS REVOKING A FORMER RESOLUTION RELATIVE TO THE DISTRICT SCHOOLS OF THE MUNICIPALITY—QUESTION AS TO THE RIGHT OF APPEAL—IS THE APPEAL IN FACT AND IN LAW WELL FOUNDED IN THIS CASE—C.C. QUE. 496.

On May 20, 1917 the school commissioners of St. S. passed a resolution subdividing the town into six districts, and set out the limits of these districts according to law. Public notice of the resolution and of the division was given by the secretary-treasurer. The six districts were then created and existed in law and all proceedings taken at the said sitting where only certain proceedings intended to put into execution the said resolution forming these districts. The court is not now concerned with ascertaining whether these proceedings were regularly taken. The resolution of May 20, was repealed by another resolution of respondents; it is this resolution that is appealed. There cannot be any doubt that the appeal is in conformity with art. 459 of the School Law. There is here no question of a case under art. 490. The respondents have used one of the powers given them by law in changing the boundary of the districts created May 20, and as a result there is an appeal from their decision and this court has jurisdiction under art. 496. On the merits the evidence shows that both in law and in fact, the said petition in appeal is well founded and should be maintained, with costs.

Martin v. The School Commissioners of St. Samuel, 25 Rev. de Jur. 167.

SCHOOL LAW — DIVISION OF DISTRICT — SCHOOL HOUSE—MANNER OF APPORTIONING THE VALUE—S. REF. [1909], ARTS. 2596, 2758.

When a school district is divided, the part where the school house is situated retains the ownership of it, but it should make the other a remittance the amount of which is established pro rata, according to a land valuation of the properties which were taxed for its construction. This apportionment should be based upon the valuation roll in force when the school house was constructed, and not on that in force at the time of the division of the district.

Marcotte v. School Commissioners of Notre-Dame-de-Portneuf, 55 Que. S.C. 15.

DIVISION OF DISTRICT—COMPULSION TO ATTEND PARTICULAR SCHOOL.

Prima facie, every resident of a school district has the right to send his children to the school of that district so long as the children conduct themselves in conformity with the rules of that school, and the rates, if any, required to be paid on their behalf have been fully paid. This, however, does not give him the right, where there is more than one school in the district, of determining to which particular school they shall go.

(§ IV—72)—LIABILITIES — SCHOOL BOARD AND OFFICERS.

Apart from the express provisions contained in c. 50 of C.S.N.R. 1904, whereby school trustees may borrow money for certain purposes, the trustees would have no power to bind the school board by a promissory note signed by them as trustees and discounted with a bank, although this were done for the purpose of raising money to pay current liabilities in connection with running the school.

CONSOLIDATION OF SCHOOL DISTRICTS—VALIDITY OF DEBENTURES.

Section 219 (g) of the Public School Act providing that the signature of the Provincial Secretary and the Seal of the Province affixed to school debentures shall be "conclusive evidence that such corporation has been legally formed," precludes an attack as to the validity of the various proceedings leading up to the consolidation of a school district, and constitutes the debentures thereof indefeasible securities in the hands of their holders.

SCHOOL DISTRICT—LIABILITY FOR TORT—ACTS COMPLAINED OF NOT AUTHORIZED AT MEETING—MALICIOUS ABUSE OF LEGAL PROCESS—ABSENCE OF REASONABLE AND PROBABLE CAUSE.

Action against a school district for damages for malicious abuse of legal process was dismissed because the acts complained of were not authorized at a meeting of the board according to s. 105 of the School Act, and because there was no evidence of malice or absence of reasonable and probable cause, which are necessary ingredients in such an action.

Pollon v. Kobzar School District, [1919] 3 W.W.R. 771.

(§ IV—74)—SCHOOL TAXES—WHAT MAY BE INCLUDED — DEFICIT FROM PRECEDING YEAR.

A high school board may, in the absence of mala fides or any deliberate intention to postpone the debts incurred in one year to the next, include in the amount to be levied by a township corporation for school purposes for the ensuing year, the amount of a deficit arising from unforeseen contingencies during the preceding year, which was met with money borrowed by the board. [Atty.-Gen. v. Lichfield, 17 L.J.Ch. 472; Jones v. Johnson, 5 Ex. 862; and Haynes v. Copeland, 18 U.C.C.P. 150, followed.]

SCHOOL TAXES—REQUISITION BY TRUSTEES—LEVY BY MUNICIPALITY—LEVY ILLEGAL, IF SUFFICIENT FUNDS IN HAND TO MEET REQUISITION.

Under s. 24 (a) of the School Assessment Ordinance (Alta.) and s. 295 of the Municipal District Act (formerly the Rural Municipality Act) it is the duty of the municipality to levy and collect the taxes requisitioned by the school trustees and pay the proceeds thereof to the treasurer of the school district. Under s. 308 of the Act the amount so requisitioned becomes a debt due and owing by the municipality to the district. If at any time after paying the amount requisitioned there is a balance to the credit of the municipality it should be utilized in meeting the next requisition, but if the municipality has funds on hand sufficient to meet the requisition it is illegal for it to make a new levy and retain such funds. The school rate struck in a district should not be more than reasonably required to meet the amount of the requisition.

SEPARATE SCHOOLS—TAXES.

The scheme of the Separate Schools Act (Ont.) c. 71, 1913, R.S.O. 1914, c. 271, is that the school board and not the municipal council is empowered to impose the school rates, but the board may cause the rates to be levied either by its own collector or by the municipal council.

COMPANY TAX—APPORTIONMENT—SEPARATE SCHOOLS.

A separate school board cannot obtain a share of the school taxes of a company by notice under s. 93a of the School Assessment Act (Sask.), as amended 1912-13, c. 36, s. 3, requiring the company to apportion school taxes between public and separate schools according to the religious belief of the shareholders, and the failure of the company to make any apportionment, if the company is not shewn to have any shareholders of the religious belief to which the separate school pertains, for s. 93a, if constitutional, applies only to companies who could apportion under s. 93, and s. 93a is unconstitutional and ultra vires of the Saskatchewan Legislature.

SCHOOL TAXES—FUNCTIONS OF BOARD.

The school board of a township school district in Ontario has the legal right itself to receive whatever money it regularly calls for and to arrange and liquidate its own debts unhampered by the township council. UNION SCHOOL SECTIONS—APPORTIONMENT OF TAXES.

The assessors of municipalities comprising a union school section under the Public Schools Act (R.S.O. 1914, c. 266) have power under s. 29 (1) of the Act to apportion the amount to be paid respectively for school purposes, and in so doing should equalize the assessments in the municipalities, having regard to the actual values of the properties assessed. They are not bound by the values appearing on the assessment rolls and any irregularity in the manner of determining the amounts, does not afford an excuse for failure to levy and collect the sums required.

SEPARATE SCHOOLS—ASSESSMENT.

Where the minority ratepayers in a district have established a separate school under the School Act (Sask. 1915, c. 23, s. 39) all the ratepayers of the same religious denomination in the district are bound to contribute to the support of such school; a ratepayer of the same religion cannot elect to be a supporter of another school.

DIVISION OF DISTRICT—VALUATION OF TAXABLE REAL ESTATE.

When a school district is divided by the formation of a new district, the part in which the school-house is situated retains the property thereof, making a refund to the other part. The amount of such refund is established proportionately to the value of the real estate of the two sections of the divided district at the time of its division, and not to their respective value at the time of the construction of the school house.

TAXABLE PROPERTY—TELEPHONE LINE.

The poles and wires of a telephone line do not constitute a taxable property under the terms of art. 2521, para. 15, of R.S.Q. (Public Instruction Act), and are not subject to the imposition of school taxes.

Commissaires d'Ecoles de St. Alphonse v. Continental Heat & Light Co., 53 Que. S.C. 285.

A ratepayer not of the same religious denomination as the minority of the ratepayers who have established a separate district school is to be assessed as a public and not a separate school supporter.

ACTIONS FOR SCHOOL ASSESSMENTS—JURISDICTION.

Under art. 2971, R.S.Q. 1909, school commissioners may bring action for the recovery of school rates notwithstanding the provisions of art. 2872, and the Circuit Court and District Magistrate's Court alone have jurisdiction in such actions whatever may be the amount claimed.

School Commissioners of St. Paul v. Compagnie de Placements de la cité, 51 Que. S.C. 185, 18 Que. P.R. 298.

The jurisdiction of the Circuit Court over actions to collect school taxes is exclusive of that of the Superior Court and governs the case of hypothecary action, as well as others for the collection of school taxes. In the law relating to public instruction in the Province of Quebec, provision is made for the manner of collecting the school tax (a) by a warrant of seizure signed by the chairman of the School Board, and addressed to a bailiff for the seizure of the debtor's moveable property; (b) through the secretary-treasurer of the county council for the sale of immovable property of the debtor. The above remedy is exclusive of the action at law.

School Commissioners of St. Joseph-de-Bordeaux v. Gagnon, 18 Que. P.R. 149, 51 Que. S.C. 175.

TAXATION.

The law relating to public instruction (arts. 2521 et seq. R.S.Q. 1909), in declaring that the valuation of property made by the municipal authorities shall serve as the basis of the assessments to be imposed by school corporations (art. 2836) does not thereby authorize school corporations to tax all property valued in the municipal roll. School corporations cannot tax all property valued in the municipal roll but only so much of such property as they may tax under the law of public instruction, i.e., that which constitutes "real estate" under that law (art. 2521, pars. 15, 16).

A ratepayer, a municipal elector, who is called upon to pay a special school tax for a loan intended to be applied to the building of a school house, has a special interest sufficient to entitle him to contest by direct action the legality of the resolutions of the school commissioners authorizing the loan and the construction. The text of art. 2746, R.S.Q. 1909, which declares that "school houses should be built conformably to plans and specifications approved or furnished by the superintendent" is imperative and should be rigorously observed by the school commissioners. (1884), so that such lands could not be subsequently granted by the Crown to another without the consent of the trustees of the school district under the 1882 amendment to the school Act, notwithstanding a school house was not erected thereon until twelve years later, although s. 30 of the Public School Act of 1872 required that the trustees should take possession of land acquired or given for school purposes.

PILOTAGE RIGHTS—QUEBEC HARBOUR.

The Act 4-5 Geo. V., c. 48, has not abrogated all the powers of the corporation of the pilots for the harbour of Quebec. The Act has only taken away from it the powers concerning the relations between ship owners and the public in general with the pilots, and has left the rights affecting only the pilots themselves and their relations, privileges and obligations as members of the corporation of pilots. The order-in-council of May 8, 1915, adopted in virtue of that Act, and which orders that the account of pilotage of a ship shall be paid to the pilot himself, only intends to indicate the person to whom the ship agent must pay the pilotage dues. It does not declare the pilot the owner of those dues; the latter must immediately turn them over to the pilots corporation so that they may be divided between all its members according to the law of 1860.

are taken by the ship), may include the sum due him under "the lay" in an action for wages against the ship; the sum so due is not subject to forfeiture under a clause in the articles providing for the forfeiture of a "bonus" in case the seaman leaves his employment before the final termination of the whaling season.

WAGES—DISMISSAL—JURISDICTION.

Action by a sailor, who has been dismissed without cause, claiming the equivalent of wages which he will lose during the rest of the season, is not an action for wages withdrawn from the jurisdiction of the Superior Court by the Canada Shipping Act (R.S.C. 1906, c. 113). Section 162 of the Act, which provides for an indemnity equal to one month's wages, in addition to wages earned, when a seaman has been dismissed without cause before having earned one month's wages, does not apply to the case of a sailor who has performed more than one month's service.

Simard v. Canada Steamship Co., 50 Que. S.C. 105.

WAGES—JURISDICTIONAL AMOUNT—EX-CHEQUEUR COURT.

The effect of s. 191 of the Canada Shipping Act (R.S.C. c. 113) is to require the plaintiff to recover at least the minimum amount of wages specified, and the Exchequer Court has no jurisdiction where the amount bona fide claimed is in excess of the minimum, but the amount recovered is less. [The Harriet, Lash 285; Gagnon v. The Savoy, 9 Ex. 238, followed.] The jurisdiction of the Exchequer or Admiralty Court under the Canada Shipping Act (R.S.C. 1906, c. 113, s. 191), over claims for seamen's wages, depends upon the amount of recovery, not the amount sued on. Where the amount of recovery is less, although the amount sued on is more than $200, the court is without jurisdiction. Several such claims may be consolidated into one action in order to confer jurisdiction.

Cowan v. The "St. Alice," 17 Can. Ex. 207, 21 B.C.R. 540, 32 W.L.R. 17, 8 W.W.R. 1256.

WAGES.

In proceedings for the recovery of seamen's wages had before a stipendiary magistrate the magistrate found that the wages claimed were due and gave judgment in favor of the claimants and a warrant issued under which defendant, a constable, levied upon the vessel of which plaintiff was master. There being nothing on the face of the warrant disclosing error on the part of the magistrate. It was held that the court had no jurisdiction to retry the matter or reverse his finding. Also, that the warrant, being good, on its face protected the constable levying under it and defeated the action brought against him. And also, that it could be clearly inferred from the face of the warrant that the magistrate had jurisdiction.

If an individual charges verbally a certain person, whom he points out to a constable, with having committed a larceny, such officer would be entitled to arrest such person without a warrant, but, in the absence of a charge, the constable has no authority to interfere with any person or property, or to enter anyone's

A seizure of goods under authority of law requires that there should be a formal taking possession of the articles seized and a dispossession from the person having the custody thereof by the seizing officer. A letter or notice addressed by a food inspector to a company having certain articles in storage not to dispose itself of said articles or otherwise dispose of the same does not constitute a valid seizure of said articles.

(§ 1-7)—EXECUTION OF WARRANT—SUNDAY.

A search warrant for liquor issued under the Canada Temperance Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 152, cannot be executed on a Sunday.

(§ 1-10)—FORCE IN EXECUTING SEARCH WARRANT ON GAINING HOUSE CHARGE—PRODUCING WARRANT.

An officer executing a search warrant is protected only in so far as he uses no more force than under the circumstances is reasonably necessary. In the execution of a search warrant on a gaming-house charge under Cr. Code, s. 641, where the place is not a dwelling house or part of a dwelling house, the police officer executing it must have the search warrant with him in order to exhibit it for inspection if asked for, but it is not obligatory where it is not a dwelling house that the officer should first demand an entrance or signify the cause of his coming before breaking in.

ILLEGALITY OF ARREST OF PERSON LURED BY POLICE INTO SUSPECTED GAMING HOUSE AFTER THE RAID—CR. CODE, S. 641.

A search order issued under Cr. Code, s. 641, in respect of a suspected gaming house, may authorize the arrest of all persons who are "found therein;" but this does not authorize the police executing such search order to arrest a person who was not there when the raid took place but whom they induced to come there by telling him that the place had been raided and that others placed under arrest wanted to see him. His arrest under such circumstances is a misuse of the search order and is illegal. [R. v. Pollard, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 35, 13 A.L.R. 157, applied.]

R. v. Kostich, 31 Can. Cr. Cas. 407.

IRREGULARITY—TEMPERANCE ACT.

A summary conviction under the Ontario Temperance Act is not affected by any irregularity in the information for the search warrant, as a result of which the prosecution was enabled to prove the finding of liquor on the premises and drinking carried on with others than persons there resident. [R. v. Swartz, 37 O.L.R. 103, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 90, applied.]

R. v. Lake, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 138, 38 O.L.R. 262.

TEMPERANCE ACT—STATING GROUNDS OF SUSPICION.

Reasonable grounds of suspicion required by law to appear in an information for a search warrant for liquors under the Canada Temperance Act are disclosed where a hotelkeeper is the accused and the informant swears that he knows that intoxicating liquor is being brought to defendant's hotel and persons are resorting there, as the deponent has good reason to believe, for the purpose of drinking the same.

FALSE STATEMENT IN WRITING—COLLUSIVE FIXING OF PRICE BY EMPLOYEE.

Where by collusion between the seller and the buyer's employee whose duty it was to fix the prices at which the buyer would purchase, such prices were systematically doubled or trebled over the ordinary rates, and these prices were restated in the seller's account copied from the buyer's order form, and the employee so dishonestly crediting fictitious prices was receiving cash presents from the seller as a share or bribe for the continuance of the fraud, charges under the Secret Commissions Act (Can.) 1909, are sustainable against the seller, not only in respect of the corrupt gifts, but for issuing a statement of account false and erroneous in a material particular intended to mislead, and also in respect of the fraudulent order form as to his privity to the use of same to deceive the buyer.

SUPPLYING EMPTY CARS—PUBLIC INTEREST—CRIMINAL OFFENCE—§ 8 & 9 EDW. VII. c. 33, s. 3(a)—RAILWAY ACT, ss. 317, 427, 431.

The Board should not take action under s. 431, against a railway employee for taking a bribe to supply empty cars contrary to ss. 317, 427, unless where it considers there has been a failure on the part of the railway company to administer such discipline as the public safety demands. In such a case the proper remedy is for the local Crown Attorney to take criminal proceedings under § 8 & 9 Edw. VII. c. 33, s. 3(a).

SEDITION.

Annotation.

Sedition—Treason: 51 D.L.R. 35.

(§ 1—1)—SEDITIONS INTENT—OFFENSIVE EXPRESSIONS OF DISLIKE TOWARDS BRITISH "SUBJECTS."

It is always open to a judge or a jury to infer a seditious intent from words spoken and the circumstances under which they are spoken. One of the forms of seditious intent is an intention to raise discontent or disaffection among His Majesty's subjects or to promote feelings of ill-will and hostility between different classes of His Majesty's subjects. To be a "subject" within this definition it is not necessary to be a natural born or naturalized British subject. The term will include all the persons subject to His Majesty's laws, whether included in the term British subject in its narrower acceptance or not. Very offensive expressions of dislike towards Englishmen purely by themselves cannot be considered as seditious.

R. v. Felton, 28 D.L.R. 372, 9 A.L.R. 238, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 207, 33 W.L.R. 157, 9 W.W.R. 819.

INTENT—QUESTION FOR JURY—REPETITION—EVIDENCE—NEW TRIAL.

On a charge under Cr. Code, s. 134, of speaking seditious words, the question of seditious intent is one for the jury. A new trial will not be granted in respect of a conviction for uttering seditious words, because of the prosecution eliciting on cross-examination of defendant's witness that the persons to whom the words were uttered had repeated them to the witness on an occasion when the accused was not present.

R. v. Manshick, 32 D.L.R. 584, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 17, 27 Man. L.R. 94.

(§ 1-5)—SEDITIONOUS WORDS.

A charge of speaking seditious words with intent in contravention of Cr. Code, s. 134, may be supported by evidence of seditious words openly expressed in a public place to a mere acquaintance, although others were not in a position to overhear what was said; the jury is entitled to draw inferences both as to the probability of the conversation being repeated by the person addressed and as to the possible effect on such person's loyalty.

R. v. Cohen, 28 D.L.R. 74, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 302, 9 A.L.R. 329, 34 W.L.R. 210, 10 W.W.R. 333.

NATIONALITY OF HEARERS.

Alien residents of Canada owe a temporary allegiance to the King while they reside under his protection and are included amongst the King's "subjects" in the sense in which that term is used in a charge for speaking seditious words with intent to raise disaffection or public disorder amongst His Majesty's subjects, and it is, therefore, unnecessary to prove on the trial that any of the hearers were natural born or naturalized British subjects. Under Cr. Code, ss. 132, 134, it is an indictable offence to speak seditious words, i.e., words expressive of a seditious intention, and a conviction will be sustained if the words were a slander on the British Government and were uttered either with the intent of raising disaffection and discontent among His Majesty's subjects, or with intent to promote public disorder by insulting and annoying the hearers so that a breach of the peace is a probable consequence.

R. v. Felton, 28 D.L.R. 372, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. Dig.—127.

Cas. 207, 9 A.L.R. 238, 33 W.L.R. 157, 9 W.W.R. 819.

SPEAKING SEDITIOUS WORDS.

To constitute the crime of uttering seditious words, more must appear than the expression of disloyal and unpatriotic sentiments in a private conversation. [R. v. Cohen, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 302, 28 D.L.R. 74, distinguished.] A count of an indictment charging the use of seditious language with intent "to raise disaffection amongst His Majesty's subjects, or to promote feelings of ill-will and hostility between different classes of His Majesty's subjects" will not, on appeal, be held invalid for duplicity where no objection was taken to same at the trial.

R. v. Trainor, 33 D.L.R. 658, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 232, 10 A.L.R. 164, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 415.

SEDITIONOUS LIBEL—INTENT.

Defamatory words likely to stir up and excite public discontent and disaffection will constitute a seditious libel under Cr. Code, s. 132, as being "expressive of a seditious intention," if they are found to have been published with intent to have the seditious effect alleged; the question of the existence of such intention in any particular case is one for the jury, and while it may be inferred by them from the nature of the publication, the verdict against the accused must be set aside and a new trial ordered if the Trial Judge declined to charge the jury in any way as to the intention of the accused. [Reg. v. Burns, 16 Cox C.C. 355; R. v. McHugh, (1901), 2 Irish R. 569, approved; R. v. Aldred, 22 Cox C.C. 1, disapproved.]

(§ 1-20)—SEDITIONOUS WORDS—EVIDENCE OF PREVIOUS STATEMENTS—INTENTION.

On a charge of uttering seditious words, evidence as to previous statements of the accused are admissible to prove intention. The words, "Everyone who gives to the Red Cross is crazy. If no one would give to the Red Cross the war would stop. The other country would beat this country if no one would give to the Red Cross," held, under the circumstances in which they were spoken, to be seditious as being calculated and intended to stir up discontent and disaffection among His Majesty's subjects.

(§ 1—1)—STATUTORY ACTION—BREACH OF PROMISE OF MARRIAGE ALSO CHARGED.

An instruction to the jury, in an action for breach of promise and for seduction alleged to have taken place in reliance upon such promise, that the plaintiff could not recover unless the breach of promise was shown, is erroneous; but, since the instruction was more favorable to defendant than to the plaintiff, it forms no ground for an appeal by defendant from the verdict given against him.

Collard v. Armstrong, 12 D.L.R. 368, 6 A.L.R. 187, 24 W.L.R. 742, 4 W.W.R. 879.

RIGHT OF ACTION NOT AFFECTED BY MARRIAGE.

The right of action in her own name given to any female who being unmarried has been seduced, is not taken away by her subsequent marriage.

Brown v. Nolan, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 1463.

SUFFICIENCY OF PROOF AND ALLEGATIONS—PRESUMPTION.

Section 4, Ordinance No. 8, 1903 (2nd sess.), provides that an action for seduction may be maintained by an unmarried female who has been seduced, in her own name, in the same manner as an action for any other tort, and that in any such action she shall be entitled to such damage as may be awarded in an action under the section. Held, that although the statement of claim did not allege that the plaintiff was unmarried and that fact was not proven at the trial by direct evidence, the trial proceeding on the assumption that such was the case, objection to absence of proof of that fact could not be taken for the first time on appeal. [R. v. Cowburn, ex parte Frith, 19 Ch. D. 419 at p. 429, 51 L.J. Ch. 473, 45 L.T. 120.] The word "seduction" in the above section has no different meaning from that which was its ordinary and legal signification before the ordinance was passed, and that, therefore, evidence sufficient to support the conclusion that the plaintiff was enticed and persuaded by the defendant to commit the act was sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to damages and that the allegation in the statement of claim that the seduction was "under promise of marriage" could be treated as surplusage. In the absence of evidence of loose behaviour by the woman, the presumption is that there was enticement by the defendant and the burden of shewing that the plaintiff cannot succeed on the ground that she was at least equally morally guilty is on the defendant. Under the ordinance, damages is the gist of the action by the woman seduced.

ACTION BY MOTHER FOR SEDUCTION OF DAUGHTER—DEATH OF FATHER BEFORE SEDUCTION—REMARriage OF MOTHER—STEPFATHER LIVING AT TIME OF SEDUCTION BUT DYING BEFORE ACTION—CAUSE OF ACTION—SEDUCTION ACT, SS. 2, 3—MARRIED WOMEN'S PROPERTY ACT, S. 4 (2)—TRUSTEE'S ACT, S. 41.

Action by a widow for the seduction of her daughter, a child of her first husband, who died before the seduction. Before the seduction, the plaintiff married again; her second husband was living at the date of the seduction, but died before the action was brought, and before the birth of the daughter's child. Held, having regard to the provisions of ss. 2, 3 of the Seduction Act, R.S.O. 1914, c. 72, of s. 4 (2) of the Married Women's Property Act, R.S.O. 1914, c. 149, and of s. 41 of the Trustee Act, R.S.O. 1914, c. 121, that the action was maintainable by the mother: the stepfather was eliminated by the words of s. 2 of the Seduction Act, "whether she remains a widow or has married again." [Entner v. Benneweis, 24 O.R. 407, distinguished.]

Stoner v. Skene, 44 O.L.R. 609.

(§ 1—2)—ACTION BY INJURED WOMAN—LOSS OF SERVICES.

The question of loss of service does not arise in an action brought by an unmarried woman for seduction under the N.W.T. Ord. (Alta.) 1911, c. 117, allowing such an action, and the recovery of damages for her personal benefit.

(§ 1—3)—SEDUCTION ACT, P.S. SASK. 1909, c. 139, s. 4—PREVIOUS UNCHASTITY OF PLAINTIFF—EFFECT—DAMAGES.

The question of a plaintiff's previous unchastity does not necessarily enter into consideration in an action for seduction under promise of marriage and this question does not enter into an action for seduction brought by a parent or master, where the gist of the action is loss of service.

R. v. S. [1919] 1 W.W.R. 977.

SEDUCTION UNDER PROMISE OF MARRIAGE OF GIRL UNDER TWENTY-ONE.

Apart from any question of corroboration, a promise of marriage cannot be predicated upon a mere question by the accused to the complainant asking if she loved him enough to live with him as he had money enough for two and her assent by answering "yes," so as to support a charge under Cr. Code s. 212 of seduction under promise of marriage. R. v. Spray, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 152, 20 B.C. R. 147.

PROOF OF AGE.

Upon indictment of the prisoner, under s. 212, Cr. Code, for an offence committed upon a woman under 21, it was held, that, the woman's mother being dead, the evidence of herself and of a woman with whom she had gone to live when quite young, was admissible to prove her age. [Reg. v. Cox, 1 Q.B. 179, followed.] The omission to include s. 212 of the Code in the provision (s. 684), which makes it competent for the judge or jury to form their own conclusions as to the age of a person from his appearance, has not the effect of rendering this class of evidence inadmissible.

R. v. Spera, 28 D.L.R. 377, 34 O.L.R. 539, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 180.

(§ II-7)—PREVIOUSLY CHASTE CHARACTER. "Previously chaste character" of a girl, as it concerns the offence of seduction (Cr. Code, ss. 211, 212, is not limited in its meaning to the physical condition of virginity, and notwithstanding that condition at the time of the alleged offence it may be shewn in defence of the charge by her admissions or otherwise that the girl had previously committed acts of gross immorality with a man and had exhibited a disposition for lewdness.

R. v. Fiola 41 D.L.R. 73, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 125.

EVIDENCE OF PREVIOUS CHASTITY.

On the trial of a charge under Cr. Code, s. 211 for seducing a girl between 14 and 16, of previously chaste character, testimony is admissible on behalf of the accused to prove prior specific acts of illicit intercourse between the girl and another man.

R. v. Pieco, 35 D.L.R. 124, 10 A.L.R. 403, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 435, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 892.

PREVIOUS UNCHASTITY—BURDEN OF PROOF.

In a prosecution for having had illicit connection with a girl of previous chaste character (1) the onus of proving unchastity is on the defendants, (2) the girl's admission of carnal connection with the defendant on a previous occasion is not necessarily binding upon the trial judge, and (3) evidence of occurrences on an occasion subsequent to the offence charged is not receivable as corroboration.

R. v. Farrell, 29 D.L.R. 671, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 273, 36 O.L.R. 372.

UNDER PROMISE OF MARRIAGE—CRIMINAL CODE (1906) S. 212.

The promise of marriage referred to in s. 212, Cr. Code, must be an absolute promise and not a conditional promise only to be performed in the event of pregnancy happening, or it will be insufficient to support a charge of seduction under promise of marriage. The words "previously chaste character" as used in s. 212, as to seduction under promise of marriage, do not necessarily imply that the female shall be "virgo intacta."

The King v. Comeau, 5 D.L.R. 250, 46 N.S.R. 450, 11 E.L.R. 37, 104.

PREVIOUS CHASTE CHARACTER.

Where the girl had been seduced by the accused in a foreign country and came to Canada with him, the resumption of illicit intercourse in Canada under promise of marriage will not support a charge under Cr. Code, s. 212, of seducing a female of "previously chaste character" unless there is evidence that between the acts of seduction there was such conduct and behaviour on her part as to imply reform and self-rehabilitation in chastity. [R. v. Loughheed, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 184, approved.]

R. v. Hauberg, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 297, 8 S.L.R. 239, 31 W.L.R. 779, 8 W.W.R. 1130.

(§ II-8)—GIRL UNDER SIXTEEN—PREVIOUS CHASTE CHARACTER — PREARRANGED PROSTITUTION.

Where the girl was physically chaste, a conviction for her seduction when under the age of 16 may be supported under Cr. Code,

I. Of what demands.A. IN GENERAL.

(§ I A—1)—ACCRUAL OF RIGHT AFTER ACTION.

A defence by way of set-off, which accrued after the writ was issued in the original action, cannot be set up as an answer to such action.

Windsor v. Young, 24 D.L.R. 652, 43 N. B.R. 313.

RELATION TO SUBJECT-MATTER—EMBARRASSMENT—DELAY.

Kearns v. Kearns, 3 D.L.R. 872, 3 O.W.N. 1151.

OF WHAT DEMANDS.

A set-off, agreed to by both parties before action brought, is equivalent in law to a payment.

Caldwell v. Hughes, 10 D.L.R. 788, 4 O.W.N. 1192, 24 O.W.R. 498.

UNLIQUIDATED DEBT.

A litigious debt is not liquidated and cannot be set up in compensation of a claim which is admitted to be exigible. Such a claim by the defence can only be enforced by means of a reconventional demand.

Forget v. Cauchon, 49 Que. S.C. 422.

OF WHAT DEMANDS—CONTRACT FOR SALE OF MINING SHARE—FAILURE OF PLAINTIFFS TO FURNISH SHARES—COUNTERCLAIM—LEAVE TO AMEND.

Neil v. Woodward, 18 O.W.R. 230.

DEBTOR AND CREDITOR—SET-OFF—SOLDIERS RELIEF ACT—MORTGAGE ACTION—COSTS OF PROCEEDINGS TO DEFENDANT PROTECTED BY THE ACT—SET-OFF OF SUCH COSTS AGAINST MORTGAGE DEBT.

Even if the Statute of Set-off is in force in Alberta it is not applicable so as to entitle a defendant who is protected under the Soldiers Relief Act against an application made by plaintiff in a mortgage action, to recover his costs of such application and prevent their being set off by the court against the mortgage debt. The Statute of Set-off could only apply if the mortgage debt were unenforceable, whereas it is debt in respect of which the right of action is merely in suspense.

Metals v. Frost, [1919] 2 W.W.R. 247.

(§ I A—2)—BREACH OF WARRANTY—DIMINUTION OF PRICE.

Where there is a breach of warranty on the sale of goods the buyer may set up the breach in diminution of the price without a cross-action or plea of set-off in respect thereof.

Balmain v. Neil, 11 D.L.R. 294, 41 N.B.R. 429, 12 E.L.R. 376.

ILLEGAL SEIZURE—COUNTERCLAIM FOR DEBT.

A defendant may be allowed by way of counterclaim all amounts due from the plaintiff to him at the date of the counterclaim, including overdue instalments of the purchase price of goods returned to the plaintiff and accepted by him after action brought by the plaintiff for illegal seizure thereof.

Matthews v. Heintzman, 16 D.L.R. 522, 7 S.L.R. 101, 27 W.L.R. 675.

BREACH OF CONTRACT — UNLIQUIDATED DEMAND—SET-OFF.

WHEN REFUSED—WANT OF PARTICULARS—PERFORMANCE OF CONTRACT.

The amount of damages assessed on a counterclaim for breach of contract will not be deducted from the amount awarded the plaintiff, where no particulars are furnished and no proof of damages offered to support the counterclaim, and where the jury has also found that the defendant had accepted what the plaintiff did as a fulfilment of the contract.

ACTION ON NOTE AND CHEQUE—COUNTERCLAIM FOR DAMAGE FROM IMPROPER PERFORMANCE.

To a demand based upon a note and a cheque given in payment of the price of construction and repairs damages resulting from the poor execution of the work cannot be set up in compensation.

Pelouquin v. Clermont, 47 Que. S.C. 403.

SALE—RESPECTIVE APPEALS OF THE PARTIES TO A CONTRACT AGAINST EACH OTHER—PROCEDURE—CROSS ACTIONS—C.C. QUE. 1523, 1526, 1527, 1530.

A defendant sued for the price of a threshing machine sold and delivered, did not defend the action, but set up a cross action alleging defects in the machine and claiming damages and interest. The position taken by the defendant is illogical in not having contested the action of the plaintiffs, who have established their claims, and whose action should be maintained. This action being confirmed, there cannot of necessity remain any credence of damages which the defendants by cross actions wish the court to adjudge the plaintiffs. The two judgments are incompatible. Moreover they are equally incompatible by the fact that the purchaser kept the goods as to which he now sets up a hidden defect.

Tremblay v. Danours; Danours v. Tremblay, 25 Rev. de Jur. 234.

BREACH OF CONTRACT.

In an action by a contractor against building owners to recover a balance alleged to be due for work done under a building contract and for extras, and upon a counterclaim by the defendants for damage done to their goods by the plaintiff and for delay. It was held, that the question of completion or non-completion, in any particular case, must depend upon the terms of the contract and the facts and circumstances of the particular case; and, where there is honesty and a bona fide intention to complete, there is completion if the contract is completed in all essential and material respects, and there exist only slight imperfections, in the work or slight deviations from the specifications, which can be easily cured and corrected at an expense trifling as compared with the amount of the contract price; and in this case, there was completion in that sense. And held, also, that, if there was non-completion, the architect, having under the authority of a clause in the agreement, elected to give a notice to the plaintiff calling his attention to certain parts of the work remaining incomplete, requiring him to complete them within three days, and stating that, failing compliance, the contract would be cancelled and the work completed by the architect, had, by taking advantage, on behalf of the defendants, of the benefits of this clause, conferred upon the plaintiff the corresponding benefits, viz., that the work must be paid for by the defendants with a deduction of the cost of such labour and materials as was incurred in completing the contract; and, an election having once been made, neither the owners nor the architects could withdraw. Held, also that, the architect, by his absolute refusal to deal with the question of damages, which necessarily involved the question of allowances for delays, abdicated his quasi-judicial office; and, therefore, the ascertainment of the amount of the damages—involving the allowance for delays—was for the court. And held, that, once the owner has seen fit to take possession of a building, although this may have no bearing on the question of completion or non-completion, it prevents the owner from claiming so-called liquidated damages for non-completion.

Watts v. McLeay, 19 W.L.R. 916.

(§ I A—3)—ACTION FOR CONVERSION—TRESPASS—LIBEL AND SLANDER—COUNTERCLAIM FOR BALANCE UNDER CHATTEL MORTGAGE.

Action for damages for goods and chattels wrongfully taken, for trespass and for libel and slander. The defendant counterclaimed for damages for non-delivery of hay according to contract, balance due under chattel mortgage and the balance of an account. The jury found a verdict for the plaintiff on the libel count; the plaintiff was non-suited in regard to his claim for slander and other claims. Judgment was given for the defendant on his counterclaim for damages in the amount of the balance due under the chattel mortgage, also judgment for the balance of account due. Judgment was accordingly given to both parties and the costs were adjusted, following Shrapnel v. Lang, 20 Q.B.D. 334, and Atlas Metal Co. v. Miller, [1898] 2 Q.B. 500.

L'Esperance v. Mollot, 31 W.L.R. 503.

(§ I A—5)—WAGES.

A claim for wages can neither be made the subject of a set-off nor used as a defence to an action for tort.

Hamilton v. Vineberg, 4 D.L.R. 827, 3 O.W.N. 1337, 22 O.W.R. 238.

B. RECOURSEMENT.

(§ I B—10)—ACTION ON NOTE—DAMAGES ARISING FROM CONTRACT FOR WHICH CHEQUE GIVEN—C.C.P. 191—C.C. QUE. 1065.

The plaintiff sued on a cheque and note. The defendant proposed to offset the claim by damages due him by the plaintiff. As the damages were the direct result of non-fulfilment of the contract for works undertaken by the plaintiff, and of which the cheque and the note claimed represented the price and value, a set-off was allowed.

(§ I C—15)—DEBTS—TRUST FUND—WINDING-UP ACT.

Re Canadian Home Investment Co. 37 D. L.P. 598, 24 B.C.R. 294, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 629.

MUTUAL DEBTS—TORT AND CONTRACT—LIQUIDATOR.

A claim in detinue and a claim on a promissory note or on an account are not "mutual debts" within the meaning of a 126 of the Judicature Act, R.S.O. 1914, c. 56; therefore a claim on a note or an account cannot be set off under s. 71 of the Winding-up Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 144, against an action by a liquidator for the recovery of certain chattels and damages for their wrongful seizure, and the defendant is merely entitled to rank as a general creditor up to the assets in liquidation. [Eberle's Hotels & Restaurant Co. v. Jonas, 18 Q.B.D. 459, followed; Moody v. Can. Bank of Commerce, 14 P.R. (Ont.) 258, distinguished.]

Wade v. Crane, 27 D.L.R. 179, 45 O.L.R. 402. [Affirmed in 37 D.L.R. 412, 55 Can. S.C.R. 208.]

A third person brought into an action by the defendant's counterclaim against the plaintiff, cannot himself set up a counterclaim against the defendant.

Hamilton v. Vineberg, 4 D.L.R. 827, 3 O.W.N. 1337, 22 O.W.R. 238.

EXCHANGE OF LANDS — ENFORCEMENT — COUNTERCLAIM FOR DAMAGES.

An agreement for the exchange of lands is not unilateral, but mutually dependent on reciprocal acts, which will disentitle a party to counterclaim for damages if he is unable to carry out his part of the contract by reason of a defect in the title.

MUTUALITY OF CLAIMS—BREACH OF WARRANTY—ACTION ON NOTE OF SHAREHOLDER FOR GOODS SOLD TO COMPANY. Shareholders of a company, when sued on their individual note given for part of the price of a machine sold the company, cannot set-off or counterclaim for a breach of the warranty accompanying the sale, which did not amount to a total failure of consideration, where the company retained and used the machine without objection, since there was no mutuality of contract between the plaintiff and the makers of the note.

COMPENSATION—CLAIMS ANTERIOR TO THE SUIT—OPPOSITION DEBT EASILY LIQUIDATED—INSCRIPTION IN LAW—C.C., ART. 1188—C.P., ARTS. 217, 645.

A defendant sued in respect of any particular claim, may, if he chooses, defend the action on its merits, and is not obliged to set up counterclaim, in his favour, arising out of other transactions. Nothing prevents him subsequently opposing the latter by way of legal compensation, in an opposition to the seizure of his moveables. An inscription in law to such an opposition will be dismissed.

Weisman v. Eagle Publishing Co., 56 Que. S.C. 464.

MUTUALITY—UNLIQUIDATED—QUEBEC LAW—COMPENSATION.

A defendant sued for an amount due for goods kept in a cold storage establishment cannot demand compensation for damages to these goods, because his claim is unliquidated and not easy of proof, although these damages are connected with plaintiff's claim.

Dominion Fish & Fruit Co. v. Harris Aitair Co., 15 Que. P.R. 72.

In an action for goods sold and delivered defendant sought to avail himself of a set-off against the person employed to manage the business on behalf of the plaintiff. It was held, that the burden was upon defendant to show that he believed the manager of the business to be the principal at the time the goods in question were purchased or that the plaintiff by his conduct induced such belief. Also, assuming a partnership to be established, defendant could not succeed inasmuch as, upon a settlement of the partnership accounts, there would be nothing coming to the partner against whom his claim was asserted.

CROSS ACCOUNTS—SETTLEMENT—OVERDUE ACCEPTANCE—JUDGMENT FOR AMOUNT BY DEFAULT.

Densmore v. Hill, 9 E.L.R. 475.

D. AS AGAINST TRANSFEREE OR ASSIGNEE. (§ I D—20)—TRUSTEE AND CESTUI QUE TRUST.

There may be a set-off against the trustee of a debt due from the cestui que trust in respect of the fund to which the latter would be entitled on its coming into the trustee's hands. [Bankes v. Jarvis, [1903] 1 K.B. 549, 72 L.J.K.B. 267, followed.]

Royal Trust v. Holden, 22 D.L.R. 660, 21 B.C.R. 185, 8 W.W.R. 500.

AS AGAINST ASSIGNEE—DAMAGES FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT.

In an action to recover the amount due on a mortgage given by defendant to secure the performance of an agreement of sale, a claim for damages for deceit inducing the making of the contract cannot be pleaded as a set-off, under 1 Geo. II. c. 22 (amended and made perpetual by 8 Geo. II. c. 24) either against the original party or against his assignee, but the proper remedy is by way of counterclaim under s. 291 of the King's Bench Act against the original contractor only.

Cummings v. Johnson, 13 D.L.R. 343, 23 Man. L.R. 740, 24 W.L.R. 144, 25 W.L.R. 31, 4 W.W.R. 543.

AS AGAINST ASSIGNEE—NONFULFILLMENT OF CONTRACT SUED UPON.

Where receivers and managers of a manufacturing company, appointed in a bondholders' action with power to continue the business, proceeded to carry out the company's existing contracts for the supply of customers, but reserving the power afterwards to refuse to fulfil the same, their subsequent refusal to carry out a current contract gives rise to an immediate cause of action for damages against the company which the customer is entitled to counterclaim in an action for the price of goods sold and delivered under the contract, even as against assignees of the latter claim to whom it had been pledged as security for advances to the receivers as such, where notice of such assignment was not given to the customer until after the notice of refusal.

E. BY OR AGAINST DECEDENT'S ESTATE.

(§ I E—25)—WHAT SUBJECT OF—ACTION ON BEHALF OF ESTATE—PERSONAL DEMAND AGAINST EXECUTOR.

A mere personal demand against an executor is not a proper subject of set-off against an indebtedness due him in his representative capacity.

OF AND AGAINST JUDGMENTS.

Where damages have been awarded in respect of part of the plaintiffs' claim and the defendants succeeded in part on their counterclaim for damages for breach of contract, the court may direct a set-off of the damages pro tanto.

Municipal Construction Co. v. Regina, 2 D.L.R. 690, 5 S.L.R. 78, 20 W.L.R. 405, 1 W.W.R. 958.

Where plaintiff obtains a judgment for a sum of money against defendant, and where, on an opposition to annul same, the defendant opponent sets up two certain accounts against plaintiff contestant exceeding in amount the judgment, and the opposition is maintained and the judgment declared compensated and extinguished; the right of the defendant opponent, in recourse against the plaintiff for the excess, will be adjudged in the same proceeding. A judgment may be extinguished by set-off (compensation) under C.C. (Que.), by an account when both are equally liquidated and demandable where the subject of each is a sum of money.

A person cadant, by way of defence to an action, invoke a plea which, although being capable of reducing the amount claimed by the operation of judicial compensation, would not by its nature reduce or extinguish the right claimed. Such pleas should be invoked by a cross action even when they are based on the same contract as the principal action.

Liability for negligence or breach of duty, see Negligence.

(§ I—1)—LEVY BY, UNDER EXECUTION—JUDGMENT CREDITORS' PRIORITY ON MONEYS REALIZED—RIGHT TO, OUT OF SHERIFF'S BANK ACCOUNT—TRUST.

While the relation of debtor and creditor exists between the sheriff who has levied money under an execution and the judgment creditor entitled thereto, there is also a fiduciary relation-ship between them, and the judgment creditor can follow the moneys so received by the sheriff at least where the actual cheques received by the latter were paid by him into his "in trust" bank account and so separated from his personal funds; and the judgment creditor is entitled to such moneys in bank in priority to a garnishment thereof attempted by the sheriff's personal creditor.

LIABILITY.

The authority of a sheriff as to official acts, i.e., acts which a private individual could not do, is confined to the county of which he is sheriff.

Malouf v. Labad, 3 D.L.R. 755, 3 O.W.N. 1235, 22 O.W.R. 99.

LIABILITY FOR NEGLIGENCE OF DEPUTIES.

In Saskatchewan all the employees in the sheriff's office are appointed directly by the government, and the sheriff is not responsible for the negligence of any such employee.

NEGIGENCE—LAND TITLES ACT—EXECUTION.

Under Saskatchewan legislation a sheriff in that province occupies a position entirely different from that of a sheriff in England and in most of the other Canadian provinces; the sheriff's office in each district in Saskatchewan is a department of the civil service and, therefore, the doctrine of respondent superior does not apply; the sheriff is responsible in respect to negligence only for his personal negligence and such negligence cannot be attributed to him while he is lawfully on his vacation. [Great North Ins. Co. v. Young (32 D.L.R. 238, followed.) Nor does s. 118 of the Land Titles Act, which imposes upon "the sheriff or other qualified officer" the duty of transmitting to the registrar a copy, certified under his hand and seal, of a writ of execution placed with him apply to him while he is lawfully on his vacation at the time the writ is received at his office.

Money paid to a sheriff by the defendant upon arrest for debt under C.S.N.B., 1903 c. 20, s. 5, is held by the sheriff as a statutory trustee and the interest, if any, upon such money must be accounted for by him in the same way as the principal.

McKane v. O'Brien, 40 N.B.R. 392.

(§ 1—3)—RIGHT TO COLLECT FEES AND CHARGES.

The onus is on a sheriff claiming poundage, to satisfy the court that a compromise payment is the direct consequence of the seizure and not of an agreement entered into previously between the parties. A sheriff is not entitled to poundage or possession money under an execution, levied subsequently to a winding-up order under s. 23 of the Winding-up Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 144, as the seizure is illegal. [Shaver v. Cotton, 25 A.R. (Ont.) 426; Keating v. Graham, 20 O.R. 361, applied.]

Richards v. Producers Rock & Gravel Co., 17 D.L.R. 588, 20 B.C.R. 100, 27 W.L.R. 890. [Appeal to B.C. Court of Appeal dismissed, June 25, 1914.]

BAILIFF—DISTRESS FOR RENT—CHARGES.

Where a sheriff acting as a bailiff, distrains for rent, he is entitled to charge only the same fees as a bailiff or other person would be entitled to under schedule A of c. 65, R.S.B.C. 1911, and not to the usual sheriff's fees in a proceeding to collect money.

POUNDAGE—"SUM MADE"—EXPENSE.

Money expended upon property after seizure, in order to render it salable, forms no part of the "sum made" by the sheriff, within the meaning of the tariff of sheriff's fees, and the sheriff is not entitled to poundage upon the sums which he retains to cover his own expense.

Sturgeon v. Henderson, 37 D.L.R. 54, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 56.

POUNDAGE—WITHDRAWAL OF EXECUTION.

Where execution creditors withdraw the execution, after a claimant has claimed property in the goods, the sheriff has no right to poundage under r. 495.

Imperial Elevator & Lumber Co. v. Hodel, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 1158.

FEES—TRAVELLING EXPENSES.

A sheriff who serves in one trip different writes on different defendants is entitled to his travelling fees on each writ served.

LIABILITY FOR TAKING EXCESSIVE FEES—PENALTY.

Nicholas v. Creighton, 11 D.L.R. 835, 13 E.L.R. 275.

If a sheriff seizes land, which has been subdivided into lots according to a registered plan, he has a right to a fee each of the lots so subdivided even if the land is sold en bloc as being only a single holding.

Laurin v. Senecal, 18 Que. P.R. 4.

FEES—SALE OF LAND.

The sheriff's fees on an order for sale of land should be taxed by the prothonotary of the district in which the writ was issued and not by that of the district for which the sheriff is appointed. If, pursuant to a judgment, several lots are sold en bloc as forming only one holding, the sheriff has a right to one fee only.

Campbell v. Gimple, 7 W.W.R. 337.

POUNDAGE FEE—INTERPLEADER.

A sheriff is not entitled to a poundage fee where the claimant of the goods seized succeeds on an interpleader issue, although the seizure was made under the explicit instructions of the solicitors for execution creditors.

SHERIFF'S FEES—SEIZURE OF IMMOVABLES.

A sheriff has no right to a fee for searches in the registry office, but may appoint a bailiff and pay him a fee and his travelling expenses. He may charge for his report. If the instructions to the sheriff divide the lots to be seized into blocks, without specifying that the lots should be sold as one property, and without any permission to sell en bloc being obtained, the sheriff has a right to a fee upon the additional lots.

Negligence of a gross description must be proved in an action for damages founded on negligent navigation resulting in injury to a passenger carried gratuitously in a motor boat.

DAMAGE TO TUG—FORCED ON ROCK THROUGH BREAKING OF BOOM BEING TOWED OFF SHORE BY ANOTHER TUG—INEVITABLE ACCIDENT—"FOUL ANCHORAGE"—TUGS WITH TOWS OF BOOMS—UNUSUAL ACTION OF TIDE AND CURRENT.

Damage to plaintiff tug by being forced on rock through breaking of boom which was being towed off shore by defendant tug, held to have been caused by inevitable accident, and not by fault of anyone connected with defendant tug the master of the latter not having failed to take any reasonable precaution which ordinary skill and prudence could suggest. In certain circumstances where the question of safety to a ship, including her tow, is involved, she is justified in taking that degree of risk which the circumstances may justify; e.g. the rigour of the elements may impose a common risk upon all who seek refuge in a common harbour—and constitute "a cause which a ship could not resist." And in weighing these circumstances there must be considered the facts that tugs with tows of booms are of an unwieldy nature and the booms are easily broken up by rough water and they cannot face a state of weather which would present no damage to ordinary vessels; and in a haven require a considerable amount of space for a clear anchorage which may not be available in time of danger when many vessels are forced to resort to it for as much shelter as may be possible, in which circumstances it comes down to a question of good seamanship. A master is entitled to rely upon the ordinary action of tide and current where he has no reason to anticipate that the ordinary risk has been increased.

DAMAGE TO CARGO—EVIDENCE—"APPARENT GOOD ORDER AND CONDITION"—"SEAWORTHINESS"—NEGLIGENCE—LIMITATION OF LIABILITY.

In an action against a shipowner for damages for negligently injuring a cargo it is not necessary to prove that any acts of commission or omission of a negligent nature by the defendant were intentional, it is sufficient to show that ignorance governed his actions. [Hayn v. Culliford, 4 C.P.D. 182, followed.] Where a bill of lading admits the receipt of goods "in apparent good order and condition" and they are not so delivered, but there is no evidence to prove that they were in proper condition when loaded, negligence is not, therefore, to be presumed. The words quoted mean nothing more than that there was nothing specially noticeable about the goods which would require to be marked on the mate's receipts. [The Pearlmoor, [1904] P. 286, at p. 292.] Evidence adduced by a shipper as to the condition of a shipment at the time of loading held to be sufficient to make out a prima facie case which the defendant was required to meet and which, it was held, the defendant did meet. Negligence of a shipowner relied upon as the basis of an action for damages because of deterioration of a cargo must be shown, even if proven, to have been the cause of such deterioration. [Smith v. Baker, 5 T.L.R. 518, followed.] In an action by a shipper against a shipowner for breach of a contract to deliver goods in apparent good order and condition, the onus is upon the defendant, upon proof of failure to so deliver, of showing that notwithstanding such fact, it is not liable. The fact that a cargo is improperly stowed in that it is not supplied with sufficient ventilation may be "unseaworthiness" as far as such cargo is concerned. [Rathbone v. McIver, [1903] 2 K.B. 378, followed.] Where a steamship line, operating presumably up-to-date ships manned by competent officers, has in carrying on its business for a number of years deliberately adopted a certain system as to the carriage of grain cargoes, without any apparent objection being raised thereto by shippers, such system should not be held to be improper, unless it is shown that a contrary system is well recognized as proper and necessary. In an action against a shipowner for failure to deliver a cargo in the condition it was in when shipped, evidence as to the condition in which other shipments of the same kind of goods, shipped over different lines, were in upon delivery at nearby ports during the same season should not be entirely ignored on the question of the sufficiency of ventilation given the cargo in question. The "seaworthiness" of a ship in the sense that it was fit and properly equipped to carry the cargo in question at the time and place where it was loaded held to have been proven. The fact that a cargo is insured does not affect the shipowner's liability for its deterioration. A clause in a bill of lading limiting the shipowner's liability for damage to a cargo, held merely to limit the total liability of the shipowner to the cash value of the goods at the point of shipment.

The duty of a charterer is carried out when he has supplied cargo in dimensions such as are usual at the port of loading for ships of the size of the chartered vessel. The charterer cannot be held liable under the demurrage clause of the contract for delay in loading and discharging the cargo caused by faulty construction of the ship.

CARRIAGE OF GRAIN—DAMAGE BY WATER—HOLE MADE IN SIDE OF SHIP—EVIDENCE AS TO CAUSE OF HOLE—“SEAWORTHINESS”—“DUE DILIGENCE”—“NEGLIGENCE”—PERILS OF NAVIGATION—WATER-CARRIAGE OF GOODS ACT, 9 & 10 EDW. VII. C. 61, SS. 6 AND 7 (D.)—FINDINGS OF TRIAL JUDGE—APPEAL.

"Seaworthiness" includes not only staunchness in the sense of being built to withstand the elements without injury to the hull, but also comprehends a condition which will include the safety of the cargo, both from perils of the sea as commonly understood, and from causes not accompanied by violence of the elements, such as leakage. A grain cargo must be carried dry, and the seaworthiness of a vessel in relation thereto will depend upon her capacity in that respect. The words "exercises due diligence to make the ship in all respects seaworthy," in s. 6, mean not merely a praiseworthy or sincere, though unsuccessful, effort, but such an intelligent and efficient attempt as shall make it so, as far as diligence can secure it. Under s. 7, Water Carriage of Goods Act, 9 & 10 Edw. VII., c. 61 (Can.), the shipowner must show that the loss occurred from a danger of the sea or arose without his actual fault or privity or that of his agents, servants or employees. The onus is on him to bring himself within the exceptions. If a hole that was found in the side of a barge was made by striking the dock, owing to bad steering, it was not caused by a peril of the sea. [*Lennard's Carrying Co. v. (§ III—10)—QUANTUM MERUIT—OVERHEAD CHARGES—CONTRACTOR'S PROFITS—COST OF CONSTRUCTION—WITNESSES—CREDIBILITY.

The plaintiffs were owners of marine construction works and shipyards and had large capital invested and had large contracts on hand from the Government for the construction of drifters and trawlers for war purposes. The work in question was accepted by the plaintiff only after pressing and urgent request from the defendant, whatever the cost might be, as emergency work and to oblige him, in order that the ship might get out of the river before the close of navigation. Plaintiffs were obliged to take men off other work and went behind on Government contracts. Held, that under all the circumstances of the case, and considering the abnormal state of business and the advanced prices prevailing during the war, 90 per cent of the cost of labour, as an overhead charge, plus 10 per cent on the total cost as contractor's profits, were fair and reasonable items to be added to the actual cost of labour and materials, in arriving at the valuation of the work done by plaintiff. That "cost of construction" includes, besides actual cost of labour and materials, an allowance for overhead expenses, and a profit on the capital employed in producing an article or doing a piece of work. That where the Trial Judge did not hear or see the witnesses, an Appellate Court is as competent to appreciate the facts and estimate the credibility of the evidence as the court of first instance.

DEPRIVING VESSEL OF BERTH AT DOCK—LIABILITY FOR RESULTING INJURY.

Where, while the plaintiff was warping a boat into a berth at a dock with lines fastened to the dock, those in charge of the defendant vessel, knowing of the plaintiff's intention, so manoeuvred their boat with the aid of its auxiliary power, as to take possession of the berth and exclude the plaintiff's boat therefrom, so that the latter was compelled to lie in a dangerous position in a stream, and on the ebbing of the tide, fell over and was wrecked, the defendant boat is answerable in damages; the taking of the berth away from the plaintiff's vessel under the circumstances was an unreasonable exercise of the right of navigation.

ILLNESS OF SEAMAN—MEDICAL ATTENDANCE—SERVICE EX JURIS.

Although a vessel and its owners are under obligation to bear the expenses of the illness of a seaman in the services of the ship in addition to his wages while ill, at least so long as the voyage is continued, there is no implied contract in respect of the physician's charges between the shipowner and the physician called in by the seaman to attend him while visiting in port during the employment; and leave under N.S. Order 11, s. 1, to serve process out of the jurisdiction should be refused the physician suing the shipowner for the account where there was neither an express contract by the latter for the services rendered the seaman, nor circumstances from which a direct contract to pay could be implied. A pilot, duly qualified and licensed as such under the Pilotage Act, s. 28, c. 80, R.S.C. 1886, now forming part of the Shipping Act, c. 113, R.S.C. 1906, s. 448, so long as he conforms to the regulations and has not been duly condemned for any of the offences for which the pilotage authorities may try him, and suspend or dismiss him, is quite independent of the pilotage authority, and entitled to follow his calling as provided by s. 38 of the Pilotage Act, now s. 459 of the Shipping Act, and the pilotage authority has no arbitrary authority to interfere with the tenure of his office or rights as a licensee. A pilotage authority, in dismissing a pilot for neglect and incapacity by resolution alone, without any complaint, notice, or investigation, has not complied with the statutory requirements and has not exercised any judicial functions and is liable for damages in an action by such pilot.

Where a summary conviction of a seaman for desertion under the Canada Shipping Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 113, s. 287, as amended by 1907, c. 46, does not shew that the ship was registered in one of the provinces at the time of the offence, the defendant will be discharged in habeas corpus proceedings from custody under the commitment following such conviction. It is not a ground for discharge on habeas corpus that the summary conviction and commitment purported to include as one offence the desertion of a seaman and also his refusal to do duty which are declared to be offences by the said Shipping Act, as amended.

Re Dalton, 30 D.L.R. 659, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 142.

A certificate of discharge furnished by the master of a ship to the second officer under s. 176 of the Canada Shipping Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 113 (Form K.) is not a certificate of service within s. 123 of that Act making it an offence for a person to fraudulently make use of a certificate of service to which he was not entitled. The offence of making a false representation for the purpose of obtaining a certificate of competency as master of a passenger steamer under the Act, is negatived if it appears that there was no guilty knowledge or intent on the part of the accused and that the only error in his application papers was that believing that service as second mate counted in like manner as would service as first mate, he represented that he had served as mate "on a certain boat for a year," whereas a part of the time had been served as second mate and the remainder as mate (i.e., first mate), particularly where the examining officer when called as a witness testified that he would have passed the applicant's papers had the actual facts been shewn.

(§ I A—6) — WOMEN — DISCRETION OF BOARD OF EXAMINERS.

By the common and public law in force in the Province of Quebec, women, on account of their sex, have always been excluded from the practice of the law, as it has been the case, from time immemorial, in England, France and other countries until, in some of them, special laws have permitted women to become members of the legal profession. Old prohibitive laws, in England, having that object, have never been repealed. The interpretive rule of the Civil Code, art. 17, s. 9, and of the R.S. 1909, art. 21, which declares that the masculine gender includes both sexes, has no application in such a case. The context of the law constituting and regulating the Bar of the Province of Quebec, shows that it is applicable to the masculine gender only. The power given to the council of each section of the Bar of the province of Quebec to appoint examiners is not a power delegated to them by the general corporation, but is a distinct power which appertains specially and exclusively to each of them. The Board of Examiners for the admission of candidates to the study or practice of the law must be guided in this decision by the principles of the law, and they have no absolute discretion to exert. A person of the female sex is not included within the purview of the Bar Act of the province of Quebec, and cannot be admitted either to the study of the law nor to the practice of the legal profession. A married woman could not be admitted to the practice of the law as a member of the Bar without the authorization of her husband or of a judge.

(§ I A—9)—STRIKING OFF FOR CAUSE—SUBSEQUENT APPLICATION TO RESTORE TO ROLL.

In considering the question of restoring to the rolls a solicitor whose name had been stricken off by order of the court, the court will consider (a) the character of the charges which led to the disbarment, (b) the sufficiency of the punishment by deprivation of the right to practise since the order was made; (c) the restoration made to the parties who had complained, (d) the probability of the solicitor not offending in the future.

(§ I B—14)—MISAPPROPRIATION OF FUNDS—SUSPENSION UPON PAYMENT—COMPROMISE.

A compromise with his clients on a percentage basis is a sufficient compliance with an order of court suspending the disbursement of a solicitor upon his payment of the claims misappropriated in another jurisdiction.

II. Relation to client.

A. IN GENERAL: LIABILITY.

(§ II A—20)—RELATION TO CLIENT—TAKING CONVEYANCE FROM—STATING CONSIDERATION—DUTY OF SOLICITOR—VALIDITY AS TO ACTUAL INDEBTEDNESS.

The true consideration for a conveyance of property from a client to his solicitor must be expressed in the deed, since it cannot be otherwise shown. In taking the conveyance, a solicitor assumes the heavy responsibility of showing that he exercised as great diligence for the best interest of the vendor as though he were dealing with a stranger in the former's behalf. Notwithstanding the general rule that the misstatement of the true consideration in a deed from client to solicitor vitiates the conveyance, such a deed, when given as security for money actually due the attorney, will be upheld to that extent as an equitable mortgage, where no fraud in the transaction was alleged, and cancellation of the deed was not claimed.

Duffy v. Mathieson, 13 D.L.R. 587, 13 E.L.R. 73.

WHEN RELATION EXISTS—MISAPPROPRIATION BY—WHO MUST BEAR LOSS.

A solicitor employed by a vendor to prepare a conveyance of land is the agent of the latter and not of the purchaser, notwithstanding that he had been previously employed by the purchaser to investigate the title, and afterwards to prepare an order on a third person for the payment of the purchase money to the vendor; and, where the latter negligently permits the solicitor to obtain possession of the cheque given by such third person in payment of such order, the loss of the money through misappropriation by the solicitor falls on the vendor.

NEGLECT OF DUTY.

The burden of proving negligence is primarily upon the plaintiff suing a solicitor for neglect of duty, but when once established it is for the solicitor to prove that the client was not injured by it.

LIABILITY FOR NEGLIGENCE—MEASURE OF DAMAGES.

Registering a conveyance in disregard of his client's instructions, and neglect to insert a necessary and usual covenant for the protection of his client, render a solicitor liable for all the pecuniary loss the client sustains through the negligence and breach of duty.

PROFESSIONAL MISCONDUCT—RETENTION OF CLIENT'S FUNDS.

A solicitor is not guilty of unprofessional conduct, or misconduct as a barrister, solicitor or attorney of the court, in retaining moneys placed in his hands by a person to whom, through mental and physical incapacity, a curator was subsequently appointed, the solicitor having guaranteed to a doctor and landlady the payment of sums of money for care of mentally afflicted person.

FRAUD—PURCHASING PROPERTY OF JUDGMENT DEBTOR—TRUST.

A solicitor is not guilty of fraud in purchasing the property of a judgment debtor of a client whose judgment is for interest, where the property when offered at public sale under the judgment would not sell, the solicitor does not release the judgment against it and the transaction realizes for the client, who wants money, not property, a sum sufficient to cover the judgment and the solicitor's costs and disbursements; under such circumstances the solicitor will not be declared a trustee of the property for the client.

Term 1800, nor the statute of 3 Jac. 1, c. 7, s. 1 (Imp.), requiring an attorney to serve his client with an itemized bill before action, applies to services in the inferior courts or for services on a preliminary examination on criminal charge. Even if fees for services which only a counsel could render cannot be recovered in this province, an attorney is not barred from recovering for services properly rendered as such, merely because he is likewise a barrister.

A solicitor, who is retained by his client to assist him in procuring a tribal transfer of Indian lands and agreeing to an equal division of profits realized therefrom, stands in fiduciary relationship throughout the transaction and is bound to account to the client in respect of such profits though the transaction was later completed by the intervention of a third party at the instance of the solicitor.

CONTRACT TO DO A SPECIFIC ACT—LIABILITY—TORT DISTINGUISHED.

Where a client purchasing certain lands entrusts his solicitor with a cheque for the amount of the purchase money with specific instructions not to pay it over until the taxes on the land shall have been paid, the solicitor's undertaking to follow such instruction constitutes a positive contract to do a specific act and his subsequent breach thereof is so construed as distinct from a breach of a general duty, arising out of the retainer, to bring sufficient care and skill to the performance of the contract.

NEGLIGENCE.

A solicitor is not to be held liable in a negligence action brought by his client against him, merely because his advice on the question of the applicability of a Statute of Limitations to the client's case against a municipal corporation may have been wrong or was not sustained by the court, if the solicitor's opinion was honestly formed and given in good faith upon the question of law.

We may add that S. was in to sign the papers to-day but our Mr. K. being engaged in court did not look over the agreement,” was an undertaking by the solicitors personally and not a mere undertaking by the client G., a man of no means.

A notary who acts as agent for a client in carrying out a loan, but who is not engaged as a notary, has no right to one month's notice of action accorded to a public officer, where he is sued for return of funds, entrusted to him, and not for damages. The limitation of 6 months in favor of judges of sessions, police magistrates, justices of the peace or any officers whatever, according to R.S.Q. 1909, arts. 3384 to 3388, does not apply to a notary so acting.

LIABILITY—NOTARY—LOAN OF MONEY—NEGLIGENCE OF NOTARY—C.C. ART. 1053, 1701.

In the case where a woman aged 75 years, without experience or education, made a mortgage loan of $2800 on an apartment house giving to her notary instructions to see to the drawing of the deed to make sure that she had a first mortgage, to make sure that there was no claim registered against the property, and to take out a policy of insurance to guarantee her loan, and that later on it was discovered that she had been the victim of a swindler who had given her a mortgage on a vacant lot worth at most $650. The notary has carried out his instructions with negligence, and is liable for the damages which the lender has suffered.

B. AUTHORITY.

(§ II B—25)—OF SOLICITORS.

Where solicitors have appeared for a company and the action has been contested down to judgment, neither the company nor the plaintiff can then raise any question as to the authority of the solicitors on the ground of defects or omissions in the organization of the company of which the latter had no notice.

INSTRUCTIONS—ERROR IN PLEADING.

A misstatement of certain allegations of fact, made by a solicitor in drawing the plaintiff's pleading, owing to wrong or misleading instructions having been given, is merely a statement of fact made improperly by an agent, and cannot be read as evidence against his client after the pleading has been corrected by amendment.

AUTHORITY TO SUBSTITUTE COUNSEL—DISAVOWAL.

A contract between an attorney and his client is a mandate of a special nature and differs from the ordinary principles of a mandate, in that it is presumed to exist and that the client can decline responsibility for what is done in his name only by disavowal. Thus, when an attorney specially retained in a case is replaced at the hearing by a colleague, the client cannot refuse to pay him the costs of the cause without disavowal, even though he denied at the hearing that the substituted attorney represented him.

Pélissier v. Houle, 48 Que. S.C. 341.

(§ II B—26)—AUTHORITY AT SALE UNDER EXECUTION, HOW LIMITED.

Where an execution creditor places the conduct of the advertised sale under the execution in the hands of his solicitor, this constitutes such solicitor the agent of the creditor, whether the solicitor was, or was not, the solicitor of record in obtaining the judgment basing the execution.

UNUSED CLAIM — AUTHORITY TO CONSENT THAT TEST CASE SHALL CONTROL.

An agreement entered into between plaintiff's solicitor and defendant's solicitor, although made with a view to avoid multiplicity of action, whereby plaintiff's solicitor agreed before action brought that the result of a pending action against the same defendant, in which he represented another plaintiff, should control the outcome of the unused claim against the same defendant, will not be given effect to by the court where it appears (1) that the agreement in question was made under the mistaken belief that the material facts in the claim of the other plaintiffs and upon which the question of liability hinged, were identical with those in the pending case, and (2) where it appears that the plaintiff's solicitor had no authority to bind his clients to such an agreement.

AUTHORITY TO SETTLE ACTION—DISAVOWAL.

One who, having a claim for damages in consequence of an accident, entrusts his cause to an attorney with instructions to effect a settlement of it the best he could without action, not wishing to take the risk of having to pay the costs, cannot disavow the authority of his attorney if the latter presents a petition for authority to sue under the Workmen's Compensation Act and afterwards settles the case for the costs only. It is essential, in the action in disavowal, for the client to prove that the act of which he complains works him a prejudice. On default of allegation and proof for this purpose, the action will be dismissed.

Fontaine v. Cabana, 48 Que. S.C. 230.

(§ II B—28)—TO ACT FOR BOTH PARTIES.

A solicitor who acted for the plaintiff in a mortgage foreclosure proceeding, may act for a defendant therein, where it appears that the interests of the two parties are not adverse, or that the interest of the plaintiff in the subject-matter of the litigation had ceased. A motion on behalf of a subsequent mortgagee to obtain payment from the proceeds of the sale of the encumbered property under a prior mortgage, will be denied where the motion was made by the solicitor of record of the plaintiff in the foreclosure proceedings, without it appearing that the rights of the two mortgagees were not adverse, or that the plaintiff's interest in the litigation had ceased.

(§ II B—29)—TO PAY OFF JUDGMENT AGAINST CLIENT.

Where the plaintiff was acting as solicitor for the defendant and in the course of doing the latter's legal business paid certain registered judgments against his client, in order to enable him to transfer certain property that he desired to sell, the solicitor is entitled to be reimbursed for the money paid by him to discharge the judgments on proof of instructions to pay the judgments.

(§ II C—30)—QUEBEC TARIFF.

The tariff of advocates for the Province of Quebec does not apply as between solicitor and client, but only as between the successful attorney and the losing party. Where an advocate acts as arbitrator and mediator at the request of his client, and without being appointed by authority of the court, he is entitled to recover his fees from his client on a quantum meruit basis irrespective of the tariff for advocates. Such services are professional services of an advocate and are recoverable as such.

COMPENSATION — LITIGATION IN WIFE'S NAME—HUSBAND'S LIABILITY TO SOLICITOR.

Beek v. Lang, 16 D.L.R. 878, 6 O.W.N. 253.

Where the bill of costs of the solicitor against his client, brought in for taxation at the instance of the client, consists of a lump sum charged as a "fee on settlement," in addition to disbursements, and the amount allowed by the taxing officer in respect of such fee was based upon a percentage of the value recovered or preserved by the solicitor for the client, a question of the principle of taxation is raised and the client may appeal from such allowance although he has not carried in written objections for review before the taxing officer, the rules as to written objections (Manitoba King's Bench Rules 968 and 969) not being applicable to questions of principle. Re Solicitor, 3 D.L.R. 718.

Where no specific notice of any claim for a lien as to their costs appears to have been given at any time by the solicitors representing the prevailing party in an action to the party against whom judgment was rendered and who settled with the winning party at a sum less than that which the judgment called for, the court will, in the absence of evidence that there was collusion or improper conduct on the part of the losing party aiming to deprive the solicitors of their costs, refuse to grant a petition by such solicitors asking for an order declaring them entitled to a lien upon the judgment recovered by their client and for the payment of these costs by the losing party.

Grocers' Wholesale Co. v. Bostock, 4 D.L.R. 213, 22 O.W.R. 786.

Where a client delivers money to his solicitor not as a retainer but as security for the payment of his remuneration, the latter is bound to account therefor, and to deliver to the client a bill of his actual charges, which will be referred for taxation. A writing signed by a person in custody on a criminal charge which stated that "I hereby retain (a solicitor) to make application for my release from gaol, and hereby deliver him a cheque for $300 as retainer," the cheque being claimed by the solicitor as a retainer and not as remuneration for his services, is not an agreement in writing with the client respecting the "amount and manner of payment for the services of a solicitor in respect of the business done or to be done by him" within the meaning of the Law Reform Act, 9 Edw. VII. c. 28, s. 22 et seq., which permits agreements in writing between solicitor and client respecting the amount and manner of payment for either past or future services. A retainer is a gift of money by a client to his solicitor outside of and apart from his remuneration, which he is not bound to bring into account, but in order that it be construed as a retainer the former must know the true nature thereof as a gift. A solicitor cannot elect to render services gratuitously and keep as a retainer money received from his client, where the latter did not understand the nature of a retainer, and supposed such money was delivered as security for the remuneration of the solicitor, or as a part payment thereon.

BILL OF COSTS—SUFFICIENCY OF—IMPROPER STATEMENT—DISALLOWANCE OF ITEM—RECOVERY ON REMAINDER OF BILL.

The fact that the main item in a solicitor's bill of costs was improperly stated does not prevent him recovering from his client for such items as were properly stated. A lump charge by a solicitor in a bill of costs for litigation in a certain manner as settled by agreement between the parties, and as fixed by a private Act of Parliament at a designated sum, is not such a bill of fees, charges and disbursements as is required by s. 34 of the Solicitors Act (Ont.), 2 Geo. V. c. 28. [Williams v. Griffith, 6 M. & W. 32, distinguished.]

FEES—TAXATION—SOLICITOR AND CLIENT—ALLOTURE.

Rule 736 of the Saskatchewan Con. Rules of Practice, 1911, providing for solicitors' fees as set out in Sch. 1 of the tariff of costs, applies to control the fees chargeable by a solicitor to his client in respect of the court proceedings to which the tariff applies. The allotment of a judge is necessary for the taxation of increased counsel fees under the Saskatchewan tariff of costs, 1911, even as against the client on a solicitor and client taxation.

A bill of a solicitor's costs which, although itemized in respect to the services performed, does not state the amounts charged for each service, but instead claims a lump sum, does not comply with s. 34 of the Solicitors Act, R.S.O. 1897, c. 174, 2 Geo. V. c. 28 (R.S.O. 1914, c. 159). [Wilkinson v. Smart, 33 L.T.R. 573; Blake v. Hummell, 51 L.T.R. 430, followed. See also Gundy v. Johnston, 12 D.L.R. 71; Re Johnston, 3 O.L.R. 1, distinguished.]

The fact that there is no tariff of charges provided therefor presents no obstacle to the taxation of a solicitor's bill of costs the principal items of which are for conveyancing. A judgment may be rendered in favour of a solicitor in an action on a bill of costs for such of the charges as are properly itemized and which, therefore, are subject to taxation; but if he takes such judgment to the exclusion of other charges which have not been properly itemized, he cannot afterwards deliver and tax a further bill in respect of the latter. [Compare s. 35 of the Solicitors Act, R.S.O. 1887, c. 147, 2 Geo. V. In respect of a charge made in a solicitor and client bill for a service which by the tariff of costs is to be fixed in the discretion of the taxing officer, testimony of other solicitors practising in the same locality is not admissible to prove what would be a fair and usual charge for the service in question, but the taxing officer is to exercise his own discretion in the matter. [Howard v. Burows, 7 Man. L.R. 181, distinguished.]

COSTS—SECRET COLLUSIVE SETTLEMENT—POWER OF COURT.

Where the plaintiff and defendant make a settlement of the matter in litigation behind the back of the plaintiff's solicitor, and this is done collusively with the object of depriving the plaintiff's solicitor of his costs, the court may, on the latter's application, order the defendant to pay such costs in full; and such liability is not limited by the amount of the collusive settlement between the parties.

TARIFF OF FEES—VALUE OF ADVOCATE'S SERVICES.

The advocate's tariff of fees is a reasonable estimation of the value of the services of an advocate, and there is a presumption that it shall apply in ordinary cases, but this presumption may be rebutted by shewing that the case was one of unusual or unexpected importance or duration, requiring special knowledge and preparation, and the advocate is entitled to recover the value of his services, taking into consideration the amount involved.

Duff v. Upton, 25 D.L.R. 466, 48 Que. S.C. 503.

TAXATION OF SOLICITOR'S BILL—EXAMINATION AS TO MEANS.

This was a matter wherein the clients had applied under the Legal Professions Act to tax a solicitor's bill. This bill had been taxed, and, on appeal, the taxation was fixed at $577 odd. Afterwards judgment was entered, and Hunter, C.J., on application, directed an examination of the clients in aid of judgment. In this order directing the examination it read that the clients were to disclose their property, means, etc., of paying the judgment without mentioning the fact that they were trustees, and this order had never been appealed against. On the examination of the client, he refused, on advice of his counsel, to answer any questions except such as related to the trust estate, and this motion was made to compel him to attend at his own expense and answer the questions as regards his property and means of paying this judgment. Murphy, J., held that the order, not having been appealed against, settled the question of liability, and that the clients were personally responsible to the solicitor, but, outside of this, he was of the opinion that, under the authorities, the clients were personally responsible to the solicitor, citing Official Manager, G.T.R. v. Brodie, 22 L.J.Ch. 514, 3 De G. M. & G. 146; Muir v. Glasgow Bank, 4 A.C. 337.

An application for increased counsel fee will be refused; r. 222, 226 give the court power to reduce fees, but not to increase them.

Hewitt v. The "Skeena", 20 B.C.R. 481.

CLAIM FOR SERVICES—QUANTUM MERUIT—TARIFF.

According to the actual condition of the jurisprudence, an attorney has a right to claim from his client the value of his professional services as established by evidence, and not by the tariff, which has application only for determination of the amount that the party concerned should pay to the attorneys of his opponent.

Loranger v. Denis Advertising Signs, 48 Que. S.C. 19.

TARIFF OF ATTORNEY'S FEES—CHARGE FOR LETTER.

An attorney has a right to the fee established by art. 82 of the tariff of fees to attorneys for having written a letter to a debtor at the demand of the creditor who can refuse to accept the amount of the debt if those fees are not paid at the same time. In such case he should bring his action for the amount of the debt only, as the fees for the letter are not exigible when there is an action; and the offer of the defendant of the amount of the debt made before the action, although corresponding to the amount claimed, will in these circumstances be declared insufficient.

Perreault v. Breitman, 48 Que. S.C. 172.

APPEARANCE BEFORE PARLIAMENTARY AND GOVERNMENTAL BODIES—VALUE OF SERVICES—DISCRETION OF COURT.

One who needs the services of an attorney and benefits by those which are rendered is bound to pay their value. The courts have a discretion in appreciating the value of services rendered by attorneys in judicial matters. But when it is a matter arising outside of the domain of the administration of justice, such as appearing before governments and parliaments, the court cannot supplement the evidence given by the parties.

REASONABLENESS OF CHARGES.

An advocate, who notifies his client in writing that he will not take his case less a certain retainer, and receives no answer, is justified in interpreting such silence as an acquiescence, and when the case is finished he has a right to his specified retainer particularly where it may be considered just and reasonable for the work done and the extra study required.

Fontaine v. Morrison, 51 Que. S.C. 81.

The plaintiffs were a firm of barristers and solicitors. A. of that firm was retained by defendant to act as counsel in a suit then pending. It was found that defendant agreed to pay for this the sum of $100 per day. The trial lasted seven days. One day was occupied in consultation and two days going and returning from the trial, and a proper bill for $1,000 was rendered. In an action to recover the balance due it was held, that the defendant, by agreeing to pay the fee stated, had contracted himself out of the Legal Profession Act, and the court could not order taxation, but must give judgment for the plaintiffs.

Allan v. Dangerfield, 4 S.L.R. 363.

COUNSEL FEE—TAXATION—QUANTUM—APPORTIONMENT OF FEE.

The quantum of a counsel fee to be allowed by a taxing master or judge should be the same, irrespective of whether it is taxed between party and party or between solicitor and client. The distinction between a solicitor and client taxation and one between party and party is that in the latter taxation only those charges will, as a general rule be allowed which are strictly necessary for the prosecution of the litigation or are contained in the tariff of fees, while in the former a solicitor is entitled to be paid by his client for all services rendered by him at the express or implied request of the client, even though such services are not covered by the tariff or are not chargeable against the opposite party. SETTLING PARTNERSHIP ESTATE.

When an advocate has been appointed by a partner to settle the estate of the partnership jointly with another advocate, acting for the other partner, if it appears that he acted not only as an arbitrator, but also in his professional quality of advocate, he is entitled to claim from his client the value of services due in his quality of advocate and arbitrator.

unconditionally, contracts with the firm, and is bound to accept the services of any one of its members for the conduct of his case. Hence, he cannot repudiate a claim for fees on the ground that he had expected the personal services of the member of the firm to whom he addressed himself, and that another had appeared and acted instead.

COUNSEL FEE—QUANTUM TAXATION—APPORTIONMENT.

(§ II C—31)—CONTINGENT FEES.

In the absence of a contract made under the provisions of the Law Society Act (Man.) between solicitor and client, there is no authority for fixing the remuneration of a solicitor upon the basis of a commission or percentage of the amount recovered; a solicitor's fee on settlement in a matter where large interests are involved may be taxed by analogy to the usual allowance for counsel fees.

CONTRACT FOR CONTINGENT FEE.

One D retained a solicitor in connection with certain divorce proceedings pending in the United States, entering into an agreement for an expressed consideration to pay the solicitor $300 for such services. Subsequently the solicitor received the proceeds of a loan obtained by D, and was asked by the latter to account, whereupon he deducted $300 and paid over the balance. It did not appear that the proceedings in respect of which the solicitor had been engaged were terminated. On a motion to compel the solicitor to deliver a bill, it was held, that, notwithstanding an agreement to pay a fixed amount for fees in respect of any particular matter, the court, if not satisfied that the amount so agreed upon is reasonable under the circumstances, may direct a bill to be delivered and taxed. (2) But, as it was not shown that the relationship of solicitor and client had been ended, or that the proceedings in respect of which the solicitor had been engaged had been terminated, no order could be made.

The allowance of an appeal from the taxation between solicitor and client of a lump sum (in this case $3,500), as a fee on settlement and a reference back for reconsideration will not invalidate another finding by the taxing officer of the same amount where new evidence has been taken by him to fix the value of the services in question.

SETTLEMENT NEGOTIATIONS — REMUNERATION.

In the taxation of a bill of solicitor and client for effecting a settlement of matters in litigation, and conducting such litigation, the taxing officer has a wide discretion as to the amount to be allowed to the solicitor as a "fee on settlement," and, in determining the amount of that fee, he should take into account all of the facts and circumstances, the amount involved in the litigation, the result achieved, the time spent in negotiations, etc., but the quantum should be fixed in accordance with the principles of the tariff promulgated under the King's Bench Act, and not upon the basis of a percentage in the absence of an express contract for a commission even if the latter be permissible under the Legal Profession Act, R.S.M. 1902, c. 95, s. 65, to cover such services. [Re Johnston, 3 O.L.R. 1; and Re Attorneys, 26 U.C.C.P. 495, distinguished.]

I. Right to remedy

A. IN GENERAL.

(§ I A—1)—RIGHT TO REMEDY.

In an action for specific performance, the plaintiff's readiness and eagerness to perform his part of the contract must be judged as of the time the action is commenced.

Evans v. Norris, 8 D.L.R. 652, 5 A.L.R. 320, 22 W.L.R. 818, 3 W.W.R. 532.

AGAINST CROWN—REMEDY FOR DAMAGES.

Specific performance cannot be decreed against the Crown, and where there is a valid contract which it refuses to carry out, the only remedy is damages for breach of the contract.

WHEN PRECLUDED BY RIGHT TO DAMAGES—PURCHASE OF REAL ESTATE FROM NON-OWNER.

The purchaser of real estate from a party who is not the owner, but a lessee in process of becoming such by payment of rentals during an unexpired term, can have no action against the seller for specific performance; but his proper remedy is for recovery of damages for breach of contract.

Moquin v. Dingman, 44 Que. S.C. 341.

(§ I A—2)—MUTUALITY OF OBLIGATION OR REMEDY.

One cannot be compelled to specifically perform a contract for the sale of land owned by him, which was made by a person who acted without instructions from or the authority of the owner.

MUTUALITY — CONDITIONS — EXECUTORY AGREEMENT—SALE OF BUSINESS.

B. did not pay his $10,000. The document was left with a solicitor acting for both parties:—Held, that specific performance could not be obtained by G. against D.; inasmuch as the payments by D. and B. were mutually conditional. Held, also, that the agreement was never concluded.

Dow v. Body, 30 W.L.R. 248.

(§ I A-3)—CERTAINTY OF TERMS.

Where the terms of a contract are reasonably certain and complete so far as essentials are concerned, though the manner of payment is left open for adjustment between the parties, specific performance will be decreed.

Martin v. Jarvis, 31 D.L.R. 740, 37 O.L.R. 269.

Where it appears that the terms of a written agreement are indefinite or uncertain, specific performance will not be decreed. Specific performance of a written instrument will not be decreed where it is shown that the instrument did not contain the whole agreement of the parties, but that it was the intention of the parties at the time of the execution of the instrument that a formal agreement should be later entered into between them. If two parts of a contract are mutually exclusive, specific performance of one part may be decreed if specific performance of the whole is impossible. But where the two parts are dependent one upon the other, and it is impossible to decree specific performance of the one part, it will be denied as to the entire agreement.

CERTAINTY AND DEFINITENESS.

A memorandum of sale of land which recites a consideration of $2,700 and provides for 6 yearly payments aggregating $2,400 only, does not contain all of the terms of the contract between the parties so as to satisfy the requirements of s. 4 of the Statute of Frauds, when the document is silent as to the manner of paying the remaining $300 whether in cash or otherwise, nor can it be presumed even as against the vendor that such balance was to be paid in cash, although the purchaser assents thereto by his pleading.

Specific performance will not be decreed of an agreement containing terms that are vague or uncertain, such as "to give back an agreement on the land" in part payment.

Campbell v. Bare, 31 D.L.R. 475, 27 Man.L.R. 191, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 283.

CERTAINTY AND DEFINITENESS — TIMBER MEASUREMENT.

A contract for the sale of standing timber which states that the price to be "on the basis of fifty cents a thousand stumpage net," but making no provision for the method by which, or the persons by whom, such measurement is to be made, is not enforceable by specific performance.

McMillan v. Cameron, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 946, 24 B.C.R. 176. [Affirmed, 24 B.C.R. 509.]

(§ I A-5)—DEFAULT ON INITIAL PAYMENT — WHEN REMEDY APPLIES.

Where a lease, not under seal, contains a clause giving to the lessee an option to purchase the premises for a certain sum, of which part is to be paid in cash, and the remainder secured by mortgage, and a letter is written within the time prescribed, notifying the lessor of the exercise of the option by the lessee, but no tender is made of the cash payment, an action for specific performance will fail, because of the absence of any tender, and the plaintiff cannot rely upon a tender made on the day following the issue of the writ.

Miller v. Allen, 7 D.L.R. 438, 4 O.W.N. 346.

Where a purchaser, under an agreement to purchase lands, insists upon something unprovided for in the agreement as a sine qua non of his performing his own express obligations under the contract, he thereby raises an impassable barrier to his own action for specific performance. Where an agreement for the sale of land expressly requires payment of $10,000 on the purchase price contemporaneously with the execution of the document and where the purchaser prior to the execution thereof knew of an outstanding mortgage amounting to much less than the subsequent instalments of the purchase price, his explicit refusal to comply with the provisions for the $10,000 payment gives his vendor the right to treat such refusal as an abandonment, or, at least, a repudiation of the agreement entitling the vendor to rescind. Where an agreement for the sale of land expressly stipulates for a down payment of $10,000 on a $33,750 purchase, and there is outstanding a mortgage (of which the purchaser had notice prior to the agreement) which amounts to less than the balance of the purchase price, if the purchaser refuses on an objection to title based upon the outstanding mortgage to make the down payment, the vendor is entitled upon reasonable notice to cancel the contract, and where such notice is given and the purchaser still refuses to comply he cannot afterwards enforce specific performance.

(§ I A-9)—KNOWLEDGE OF PLAINTIFF AS TO DEFENDANT'S INABILITY TO PERFORM.

Where house premises were sold for a lump sum and the purchaser knew that the vendor had title only to the frontage of 20 feet occupied by the dwelling, and a right-of-way jointly with an adjoining owner over and upon a passageway 8 or 9 feet wide at the side of the house, but the property was in good faith described in the contract of sale as having a frontage of "24 feet more or less" (that frontage being the basis of the tax assessment) the purchaser who has declined either to receive back his deposit or to accept the property as it stands without abatement in price and who has insisted upon his requisition of title for the full 24 feet frontage or compensation for a deficiency of 4½ feet without reference to the value of the right-of-way, will not be allowed, after the dismissal of his action for specific performance against the vendor tried upon that issue, to change his position upon an appeal from such dismissal and to then elect to take specific performance without compensation, if such claim would raise a new cause of action not upon the record, especially where there was no evidence that the value of the 20 feet frontage and of the vendor's rights over the passageway which the vendor offered to convey was any less than would have been the value of the frontage contracted for, and where the contract provided that the agreement should be null and void if any objection to title was insisted upon, which the vendor was unable or unwilling to remove.

Bullen v. Wilkinson, 2 D.L.R. 190, 3 O.W.N. 859, 21 O.W.R. 427.

VENDOR AND PURCHASER.

Specific performance of an agreement for sale of land with abatement will not be granted where the vendor has expressly represented that he was not the owner of all the land conveyed and could not sell all of it without having his act ratified.

Wilson v. Patterson, 39 D.L.R. 642, 14 A.L.R. 162, [1918] 1 W.W.R. 999.

(§ I A—11)—PERSONS ENTITLED TO ENFORCE—PLAINTIFF DISQUALIFYING HIMSELF.

One who has disqualified himself from performing a contract to give $1,500 and a particular lot for a certain farm property by conveying the lot to a third person, cannot compel specific performance by the other party.

Smith v. Kilpatrick, 11 D.L.R. 161, 42 N.B.R. 103, 12 E.L.R. 557.

Where the terms of an agreement for the sale of a mine are uncertain, and it further appears that this agreement was not the final agreement but that a more formal agreement was to be drawn up later, the fact that part of the purchase price has been paid by the purchaser, is not such part performance of the contract as would entitle him to specific performance, and he will have to avail himself of another remedy for the recovery of the moneys so paid.

In an action by the purchaser for specific performance of an agreement to sell land, if it appears that the vendor has a part interest only in the land, the purchaser is entitled to specific performance to the extent of such interest, with compensation in respect of any outstanding estate. [Kennedy v. Spence, 24 O.L.R. 535, 3 O.W.N. 76, followed.]

Gottesman v. Werner, 3 D.L.R. 296, 3 O.W.N. 1042.

SALE—ENFORCING PARTIAL PERFORMANCE—ONE OF SEVERAL JOINT OWNERS.

Where the proposed purchaser knew that the vendor was not the sole owner and the vendor did not assume to contract as such on taking a deposit and giving a receipt embodying the terms of sale expressed to be "subject to owners' approval," the purchaser, on the co-owners' rejection of the agreement, is not entitled to specific performance pro tanto for even the partial interest which his vendor had.

SUBSTANTIAL PERFORMANCE.

Although, in an action for specific performance, the court cannot order a defendant to execute a deed of sale which is not in conformity with the conditions of the agreement of sale, nevertheless the defendant is not thereby relieved from the execution of his obligation; upon being placed in default, he may be ordered to sign a deed in conformity with the stipulations of the contract, and to pay costs.

Ménard v. Thout, 50 Que. S.C. 289.

(§ I A—12)—PERSONS ENTITLED TO ENFORCE PERFORMANCE.

An injunction will not be granted to enforce specific performance of a contract or to prevent the other contracting party securing others to perform what was to be done, when the party claiming that relief had wrongfully refused to carry out his part of the contract and still persisted in so doing.

Wills v. Central R. Co., 19 D.L.R. 174, 24 Que. K.B. 102.

Where land is described in a letter from the owner to a real estate broker, which letter also contains the words, "I hereby give you the right to sell the above property," and the broker arranged for a sale thereof with the plaintiff, who executed a formal agreement of sale, and where the subsequent conduct of all the parties and the evidence in the case shews that the ordinary meaning of the word "sell" was considered as modified or restricted, the plaintiff is not entitled to specific performance of the said agreement of sale as against the owner.

Though payment of a cash deposit on a purchase of land is not such part performance as to remove the case from the operation of the Statute of Frauds, yet a receipt given for said deposit which sets out a sale by an agent, upon terms authorized by his written instructions from the owner, may furnish the written memorandum of the sale required by the statute, so as to warrant specific performance as against the owner.

A trifling deficiency in the amount tendered as the balance due under an agreement for the sale of land, will not necessarily disentitle the purchaser to specific performance of the agreement.

Gillespie v. Wells, 2 D.L.R. 519, 22 Man. L.R. 356, 21 W.L.R. 231, 2 W.W.R. 272.

The granting of relief in a proceeding for the specific performance of a contract, lies in the discretion of the court, and will not be exercised arbitrarily or capriciously, but only where it would be inequitable to deny such relief.

Fuller v. Maynard, 5 D.L.R. 520, 3 O.W.N. 1602, 22 O.W.R. 809.

PERSONS ENTITLED TO — DEFAULT ON INSTALLMENTS—REALTY SALE.

In a speculative land purchase payable by instalments, the purchaser not being in possession, his failure to meet the purchase instalments either because of holding off to watch the ebb and flow of the land market or through gross negligence, disentitles him to specific performance, where he has not shewn himself "ready or eager" to perform his part of the contract.

(§ 1 A—13)—TENDER—OFFER TO PERFORM.

Tender of a deed of land to be given by the vendee in exchange as part of the purchase money and of the balance of the adjustment money, is waived by the vendor's unwarranted notice to the vendee that the vendor considered the contract off, and the purchaser's action for specific performance is not barred by the failure to make the tender. [Cudney v. Gibbs, 20 O.R. 500, applied.]

Norman v. McMurray, 10 D.L.R. 757, 4 O.W.N. 1256, 24 O.W.R. 532.

A party cannot call upon a court of equity for specific performance unless he has shewn himself ready, desirous, prompt and eager, to perform his own part of the contract.

(§ 1 A—14)—CONDITIONS OF CONTRACT—CLAIMANT NOT HIMSELF IN DEFAULT.

An action for specific performance at the suit of the alleged purchaser is defeated by nonperformance by him of one of the essential conditions of his right under the contract, such as punctual payment under an option; and the fact that the vendor had during the currency of the option, conveyed the land to another will not excuse the plaintiff from strict performance on his part of the conditions of the agreement unless he can shew that the defendant's default had prevented him.

Roots v. Carey, 17 D.L.R. 172, 49 Can. S.C.R. 211, 6 W.W.R. 27. [Leave to appeal to Privy Council refused May 7, 1914.]

A court of equity may either relieve against, or enforce specific performance, notwithstanding failure to keep the dates assigned by the contract either for completion or for the steps towards completion, if it can do justice between the parties and if there is nothing in the express stipulations between the parties or in the nature of the property or surrounding circumstances which would make it inequitable to interfere with and to modify the legal right.

Hicks v. Laidlaw, 2 D.L.R. 460, 22 Man. L.R. 96, 20 W.L.R. 479, 1 W.W.R. 1008.

A claim for specific performance must fail where the alleged contract failed to become complete because of failure to accept the offer within reasonable time.

Kelly v. Holley, 8 D.L.R. 176, 22 Man. L.R. 601, 22 W.L.R. 587, 3 W.W.R. 412.

FAILURE AS TO TIME.

Under an agreement to sell lands, where the purchaser, by his continued default on an instalment of the purchase price, placed upon the contract the earmarks of abandonment, and thereby entitled the vendor to cancel the contract, but, instead of cancelling, the vendor brought action to compel payment of the purchase-price under the terms of the agreement, this election by the vendor entitled the purchaser (had he acted promptly) to have the sale carried out.

FAILURE AS TO TIME.

Under an agreement to sell lands, where the purchaser, by his continued default on an instalment of the purchase price, placed upon the contract the earmarks of abandonment, and thereby entitled the vendor to cancel the contract, but, instead of cancelling, the vendor brought action to compel payment of the purchase-price under the terms of the agreement, this election by the vendor entitled the purchaser (had he acted promptly) to have the sale carried out.

DEFERRED PAYMENTS—PENALTY CLAUSE—RELIEF AGAINST FORFEITURE.

As against a penalty clause intended to secure punctual payment of the deferred payments under a land purchase agreement which purported to authorize the vendor on certain defaults to repossess the property and to absolutely forfeit all payments made, equity will relieve upon the purchaser promptly taking action to reinstate his right and offering to perform the obligations of which the penalty clause was intended to secure performance, unless the purchaser has by conduct making such a course inequitable precluded himself from that relief; and specific performance may be granted against the vendor still in control of the property he has claimed to repossess. [Wallace v. Hesselein, 29 Can. S.C.R. 171, distinguished.]

Bark Fong v. Cooper, 16 D.L.R. 209, 49 Can. S.C.R. 14, 27 W.L.R. 174, 5 W.W.R. 633, 701, reversing 11 D.L.R. 223, 18 B.C.R. 271, 24 W.L.R. 294.

A decree for specific performance of an agreement of sale will not be refused because of any misrepresentations by the purchaser, unless they are material, that is, relate to some part of the contract or its subject-matter. Misrepresenting the seller's chance of sale or the probability of his getting a better price for his property than the buyer offers is not a material misrepresentation. [Archer v. Stone, 78 L.T. 34, and Vernon v. Keys, 12 East. 632, 4 Taunt. 488, followed.]

Dart v. Rogers, 21 Man. L.R. 721, 19 W.L.R. 326.

B. ORAL CONTRACTS.

See Solicitors, II B-25.

(§ I B-15)—ORAL AGREEMENT OF VENDOR TO REPURCHASE—STATUTE OF FRAUDS AS A DEFENCE—ACTION BY VENDEE FOR SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

An agreement whereby the original purchaser was to resell the lands to the original vendor may be set up by the latter as a defence to such purchaser's action for specific performance although the resale agreement was upon terms which did not effect a rescission of the original contract and would not be enforceable in a separate action because not sufficiently evidenced in writing to comply with s. 4 of the Statute of Frauds.

VERBAL CONTRACT—PART PERFORMANCE—STATUTE OF FRAUDS.

Beck v. Dunbar, 12 D.L.R. 762, 6 S.L.R. 353, 4 W.W.R. 1319, 25 W.L.R. 11, affirming 8 D.L.R. 648, 6 S.L.R. 353, 22 W.L.R. 878, 3 W.W.R. 613.

PARTIAL AGREEMENT—PART PERFORMANCE—STATUTE OF FRAUDS—REALTY SALE.

A verbal arrangement for the sale of land, indefinite in its terms (for example, as to description and rights of way), falling short of an agreement ad idem is not sufficient basis on which to decree specific performance upon acts of part performance referable thereto, which, had they referred to a definite contract, might have taken it out of the Statute of Frauds.

STATUTE OF FRAUDS—SPECIFIC ENFORCEMENT OF ORAL CONTRACT—MOTHER AND SON.

Specific performance of an agreement between a mother and son, whereby the mother promised to buy the son a farm, "when he got married and wanted to set up for himself," if he would stay at home and work the farm she possessed till all the debt were paid, will be decreed, on its being clearly proved that the son had worked on the farm without wages, and completely satisfied his part of the contract, and that a farm had been bought for him of which he had possession, the acts of performance being sufficient to satisfy the Statute of Frauds and corroborate the agreement.

The court will not hesitate to enforce a family agreement admittedly calculated to promote the interest of the whole family, but the evidence must clearly establish that such an agreement was arrived at, and the necessary formalities complied with as though the contract were between strangers, so that the agreement must either be in writing to satisfy the Statute of Frauds or there must have been done such acts of part performance as to take the case out of the statute. [Williams v. Williams, L.R. 2 Ch. App. 294; Orr v. Orr, 21 Gr. 425; Jibb v. Jibb, 24 Gr. 487, followed.]

STATUTE OF FRAUDS—PART PERFORMANCE—CORPORATE SEAL—COMPLETENESS.

Taking possession of land and removing gravel therefrom in pursuance of a part agreement for a lease are acts of part performance which take the case out of the Statute of Frauds, and specific performance of the agreement will be decreed; where there is part performance, invalidity of the agreements cannot be set up because of the want of the corporate seal of the lessee, or the absence of seals to municipal resolutions authorizing it. The agreement is not incomplete because it provided that a survey or description of the land, and the demise thereof, should be prepared by the municipality's clerk.

King (Tp.) v. Beamish, 30 D.L.R. 116, 36 O.L.R. 325.

LEASE—ORAL—PART PERFORMANCE—EQUITIES ARISING—DECREE.

Although an agreement for a 5-year lease is not in writing if there has been a sufficient part performance unequivocally referable to the agreement, and equities have arisen from the acts of part performance which render it unjust not to decree specific performance, such specific performance will be decreed.

OF RECTIFIED INSTRUMENT ON PAROL EVIDENCE—MISTAKE.

The court has jurisdiction (in any case in which the Statute of Frauds is not a bar) in one and the same action to rectify a written instrument upon parol evidence of a mistake and to order the agreement to be specifically performed. [Rudd v. Manahan, 5 A.L.R. 34; Olley v. Fisher, 34 Ch. D. 367, followed.]

Howard v. Stewart, 31 W.L.R. 204, 8 W.V.R. 616.

PART PERFORMANCE OF VERBAL CONTRACT—AGREEMENT FOR SALE OF LEASEHOLD—STATUTE OF FRAUDS.

When a contract resting on parol or partly on parol has been partly performed by the purchaser, the vendor will be precluded from setting up the Statute of Frauds, and specific performance will be decreed if the contract is proved; so where the court found that the plaintiffs had entered into an agreement with the defendants, which was not entirely in writing, for the sale of a leasehold property, and had put them in possession and the defendants had paid part of the purchase price, made repairs to the property and collected the rents, specific performance was decreed.

CONTRACT TO DEVISE LAND—LEGACY IN LIEU—ELECTION.

A monetary bequest in lieu of a contract to devise land puts the legatee to election between specific performance of the devise or the acceptance of the legacy in lieu thereof; but specific performance will not be decreed unless the legatee is first willing to disclaim the legacy.

(§ I D—25)—MUTUAL MISTAKE AS TO LOCATION OF CHATTEL SOLD.

Specific performance of a contract for the sale of a lumber company's moveable machinery and equipment will be denied, in the absence of an express agreement for their delivery to the purchaser, where there was a mutual mistake as to the location of the chattels; and the purchaser did not promptly notify the seller of his inability to find them, and refused to make any effort to recover or to aid the seller in recovering the chattels from the person who had wrongfully taken possession of them.

Hamilton v. Smyth, 13 D.L.R. 55, 24 O.W.R. 809.

MISREPRESENTATION—EFFECT.

Specific performance of a contract to purchase a livery stable business will not be decreed where the vendee was induced to enter into the agreement by the vendor's misrepresentations as to the profits of the business, the ages of the horses, the condition of the building, and the habits of his only competitor.

An underwriting agreement providing for subscriptions to an issue of debentures, whereby subscribers agree to give money by instalments or otherwise in exchange for debentures or bonds is tantamount to an agreement to borrow and loan money, and hence is not susceptible of specific performance.

(§ I D—27)—PARTNERSHIP—AGREEMENT FOR ONE PARTNER BUYING OUT THE OTHER.

While an agreement for the purchase by one partner of the other's share may be the subject of specific performance in a proper case, that remedy must be refused where the alleged agreement was vague and uncertain as to whether the liabilities were to be assumed or divided and as to other material points.

(§ I E—30)—AGENT'S RECEIPT—PURCHASER IN POSSESSION—PRINCIPAL'S INSTRUCTIONS—FORMAL AGREEMENT.

Specific performance may be ordered in respect of a sale of land evidenced by an agent's receipt for the cash payment, which in itself shewed the total price, the terms of the deferred payments and the rate of interest thereon, where the purchaser had been let into possession and the money he had paid had been retained by the vendors for an unreasonable time without repudiating the sale made by the agent, and by other acts recognizing the purchaser as such, although such sale may not have conformed with his principal's instructions, and the principal was not named therein, and although the agent's receipt had stipulated that it was a "voucher for the money paid pending the execution of the formal printed agreement of vendors," and that, in default of execution by vendors, money was "to be repaid on demand;" the reference to the formal agreement (which never was executed) may be treated as a mere expression of the vendor's wish that the agreement should be put into more formal terms than were contained in the receipt.

McDonald v. Leadly, 20 D.L.R. 157.

RIGHT TO REMEDY—PERFORMANCE OR OFFER TO PERFORM.

In order to entitle a party to a land contract to specific performance, he must shew himself to have been prompt in the performance of the covenants entered into by himself or shew his willingness to perform them within a reasonable time. Tytler v. Genuing, 16 D.L.R. 581, 27 W.L.R. 330, 6 W.W.R. 191, 24 Man. L.R. 148.

NOTICE OF RESCISSION—RIGHT TO REMEDY.

A vendor suing for a declaration that the sale had been rescinded and payments made had been forfeited for the purchaser's default by reason of notice given under the contract or in the alternative for specific performance, is not barred from the latter remedy by its allegation in the pleadings that notice of rescission had been duly given where this was denied by the defendant's pleading and no proof was adduced that the notice had been given.

Manufacturers' Life Ins. v. Walsh, 20 D.L.R. 504, 8 A.L.R. 90, 7 W.W.R. 808.

CONVEYANCE OF FARM BY PARENTS TO SON—BOND FOR MAINTENANCE—CONSIDERATION.

Prier v. Prier, 17 D.L.R. 832, 7 O.W.N. 22.

OBJECTIONS TO TITLE—REFUSAL TO ACCEPT CONVEYANCE.

Fine v. Creighton, 16 D.L.R. 872, 6 O.W.N. 115.

One of two owners of partnership real property, holding a power of attorney from the other partner authorizing him to lease the property and to consent to the assignment of an existing lease upon said property, which lease contained an option to purchase exercisable at any time during the term of the lease, may bind the other partner to an agreement consenting to the assignment of that lease and giving a new option for the same amount and with a like limitation as to time as was contained in the original lease, especially where the agreement made by the one partner was shewn to the other and no objection was interposed for several months.

Morrison v. Bernhardt, 7 D.L.R. 278.

Where, under an executory contract for the sale of land providing for the payment of the purchase price in instalments, the vendee made default in the payment of an instalment when due, though it was expressly agreed that time should be of the essence of the contract, and notice was given by the vendor to the vendee declaring that the agreement was terminated pursuant to the terms of the contract, yet a forfeiture will not be allowed by the court where it appears that a substantial amount, both absolutely and relatively to the whole purchase price, has been paid and the default had continued for only two months after the notice was given, at which time the vendee tendered the amount in which he was in default, and the vendee may notwithstanding be declared entitled to specific performance of the contract.

Under an agreement to sell lands, where the vendor after default on an instalment of the purchase-price brought action demanding, under an acceleration clause, payment of the full balance of purchase-money, and the purchaser tenders only the amount of the defaulted instalment when the vendor was entitled to the full balance, this shows on the purchaser's part a want of readiness and eagerness to carry out the contract and is in effect an abandonment of it, and when followed up by a notice of rescission from the vendor, a subsequent action by the purchaser for specific performance must fail. [Harris v. Robinson, 21 Can. S.C.R. 404, applied.]

Dunlop v. Bolster, 6 D.L.R. 468, 2 W.W.R. 550, 21 W.L.R. 695, reversing 4 D.L.R. 451, 4 A.L.R. 408, 20 W.L.R. 561, 1 W.W.R. 981.

Where a completed agreement for the sale of land, of which there is a sufficient memorandum in writing to satisfy the Statute of Frauds, is varied by a subsequent parol agreement, the parol variation may be ignored, and specific performance may be granted of the original agreement; but if the plaintiff admit the parol variation and the defendant insist upon it, specific performance may be refused, unless the plaintiff allows to the defendant the benefit of the variation.

In a speculative purchase of vacant lands where the purchaser on the monthly instalment plan makes a few small monthly payments, and then for some years is neither ready nor willing to make any further payments and makes none, and where the vendor urges him to keep up the payments but without effect, and where, upon a tender subsequently of the balance of the purchase price the vendor refuses to accept it or to carry out the contract, a suit by the purchaser for specific performance or in the alternative a refund cannot be maintained, and this especially where time was expressly of the essence. Where a purchaser buys vacant land on the small monthly instalment plan and after a few monthly payments shows no further intention during a period of three or four years of continuing the payment of the instalments, such conduct on the part of the purchaser not only disentitles him to the equitable relief of specific performance but amounts to a repudiation of the contract.

Handel v. O'Kelly, 8 D.L.R. 44, 22 Man. L.R. 562, 22 W.L.R. 407, 3 W.W.R. 367.

A summary application under the Vendors and Purchasers Act, 10 Edw. VII. (Ont.) c. 58, is substituted for an action for specific performance of a contract to sell lands when the contract is admitted and the only question is as to title.

Re Jones and Cumming, 2 D.L.R. 77, 3 O.W.N. 672, 21 O.W.R. 248.

Specific performance cannot be granted to enforce against his personal interest in the lands a contract to which the defendant was not a party made by a person deceased, of whose estate he is the personal representative where the suit is brought against him in his representative capacity only.

Adolph v. Good, 1 D.L.R. 750, 5 S.L.R. 106, 20 W.L.R. 401, 1 W.W.R. 936.

Where the Statute of Frauds is pleaded in an action for specific performance of an agreement for the sale of land, the question raised is really one of fact as to the intention of the parties; if their intentions were that the existing writing should contain the whole agreement, and nothing more was contemplated than is expressed therein, the statute affords no defence, notwithstanding that it was intended that a more formal agreement should be drawn up subsequently; but, if it was contemplated that such formal agreement should include material provisions not contained in the existing writing, the statute is a good defence, because a memorandum, to satisfy the statute, must contain the whole of the terms agreed upon.

Strickland v. Ross, 5 D.L.R. 706, 5 S.L.R. 347, 21 W.L.R. 945, 2 W.W.R. 887.

Where the only written evidence of an agreement for the sale of lands is in the form of a receipt for part payment of the purchase price which does not purport to contain all the terms of the agreement made by the parties and does not state the time when the balance of the purchase price shall be payable, specific performance cannot be ordered if a plea of the Statute of Frauds is raised by the vendor, even though the purchaser offers to pay cash instead of deferring any payments. [May v. Platt, [1900] 1 Ch. 616, 622, applied.] Where the written evidence of a contract for the sale of lands is a mere receipt, and where the terms including interest on deferred payments are missing therefrom and were oral only, if the defendant is not obliged to seek any special equitable favour in defending himself against the plaintiff's claim for specific performance, the court under its equitable jurisdiction, cannot impose terms upon him to prevent effect being given to his plea of the Statute of

Frauds. Green v. Stevenson, 5 O.W.R. 761, applied; Martin v. Pycroft, 2 DeG. M. & G. 785, 42 English Reports 1079, distinguished.]

Rogers v. Hewer, 8 D.L.R. 288, 5 A.L.R. 227, 22 W.L.R. 807, 3 W.W.R. 477, reversing 1 D.L.R. 747, 5 A.L.R. 227, 19 W.L.R. 868, 1 W.W.R. 481.

Where, under a contract for the sale of land providing for payment in four instalments and making time of the essence of the contract, the vendee defaults in the payment of the last two instalments, though the first two instalments amounted to one-half of the entire purchase price, he is guilty of such laches, in waiting three years before bringing his action, as will defeat his right to specific performance.

McGreevy v. Hodder, 8 D.L.R. 755, 4 O.W.N. 536, 23 O.W.R. 699.

Specific performance may be granted of a contract for the sale of land at the suit of a purchaser who failed to pay the purchase price when due, though time was made of the essence of the contract in that regard, where it appeared that the vendor who, to the knowledge of the purchaser, was merely a holder of an agreement for the purchase of the land from the owner, refused a request for inspection of such agreement, and ignored a subsequent demand for a solicitor's abstract of title, both the request and demand being made by the purchaser before the first instalment of the purchase price was due. [Cushing v. Knight, 6 D.L.R. 820, 46 Can. S.C.R. 555, distinguished.]

Newberry v. Langan, 8 D.L.R. 845, 47 Can. S.C.R. 114, 23 W.L.R. 92, 3 W.W.R. 42, affirming 2 D.L.R. 298, 20 W.L.R. 826, 2 W.W.R. 10.

The purchaser under a contract for the sale of land whereby it was stipulated that the price was to be fixed later by officials of a railway company acting in the same interests as the vendor, is not entitled to specific performance if he has rejected the prices fixed by those officials, and in consequence the parties came to no agreement as to the price.

Frewen v. Hays, 8 D.L.R. 715, 106 L.T. 516, 2 W.W.R. 861, affirming 16 B.C.R. 143.

OMISSION OF MATERIAL TERM.

Specific performance of a contract for the sale of land will be refused where the vendor was led to believe by her agent and by the vendee on signing the contract that a clause had been inserted therein in accordance with the agreement between the vendor and the vendee, that the former might recede from the bargain within 10 days if she desired to do so.

Sheardson v. Good, 11 D.L.R. 318, 24 O.W.R. 658, 4 O.W.N. 1344.

UNDISCLOSED COAL RESERVATION—DEDUCTION FOR.

Where a vendee agreed in a contract for the sale of lands, to give such title as his original Crown grant contained, and produced a certificate of title shewing a reservation by another of the coal under the lands, and the vendee, who at the time of entering into the contract was unaware of such reservation, did not demand rescission of the agreement on that ground, specific performance may be ordered against an assignee of the vendee who will be required to pay the amount due under the contract, less compensation for the value of such coal rights.

Dagenais v. Denis, 11 D.L.R. 676, 24 W.L.R. 441, 4 W.W.R. 839.

AGENT'S RELATIONSHIP WITH PURCHASER.

It is a ground for refusing specific performance to the alleged purchaser that the latter is an employee of the vendor's real estate agent who made the contract, although such employee's compensation may have been upon a commission basis only and not on salary, if the business relationship of the purchaser to the agent was not disclosed to the vendor who lived in a distant city and was not aware of same. [McGuire v. Graham, 16 O.L.R. 431, applied.]

Arnold v. Drew, 11 D.L.R. 72, 24 W.L.R. 51, 4 W.W.R. 433.

PAYMENTS — FAILURE TO MAKE WITHIN STIPULATED TIME—DEFAULT—WAIVER.

Specific performance of a contract to sell land will be ordered after the default of vendee as to time, notwithstanding it was made the essence of the contract, where after such default, the vendor recognized the validity and continued existence of the contract by negotiating with the vendee in relation to the sale.

Dahl v. St. Pierre, 11 D.L.R. 775, 4 O.W.N. 1413, 24 O.W.R. 705, [affirmed, 14 D.L.R. 314, 25 O.W.R. 261.]

WRITTEN CONTRACT OF SALE—ADJUSTMENT OF REBATE CLAIM — SMALLER SUM ACCEPTED IN LIEU OF LARGER.

Where the first deferred payment on a sale of lands was settled between the parties by the acceptance of a promissory note for a lesser sum in satisfaction thereof as an adjustment of the purchaser's claim for a rebate founded upon equitable grounds, the purchaser may obtain specific performance of the written contract as varied by the adjustment so made.

TIME OF ESSENCE—RELIEF FROM FORFEITURE.

Where the payment of the purchase money and interest will compensate the vendor for default in payment under a contract for the sale of land and the vendee has not disentitled himself by laches or delay from seeking relief from a forfeiture, specific performance may be decreed at the suit of the vendee, notwithstanding conditions of the agreement that time should be of the essence, that on default the vendor might treat the contract as cancelled, and that all payments made should be forfeited; the latter stipulation being regarded as a provision for a penalty. [Re Dagen-

OPTION FOR PURCHASE OF LAND—IMPROVEMENTS.

Specific performance of an option agreement for the sale of land will not be refused merely because of inadequacy of price as a result of appreciation in value before the exercise of the option; or improvidence in making it on the part of the vendor, who, although well able to transact business, was physically incapable of attending in person to the details thereof.

Specific performance of a contract for the sale of land assigned by the vendee in defiance of a covenant against assignment, will not be decreed on behalf of the assignee in the absence of the vendor's consent to the assignment. Specific performance of a contract for the sale of land will not be decreed where the plaintiff does not allege or show that he has made and is and always was ready and willing to make the stipulated payments and otherwise to perform his part of the contract.

Goode v. Buro, 12 D.L.R. 263, 6 S.L.R. 92, 24 W.L.R. 569, 4 W.W.R. 1009.

ABANDONMENT—BECOMING TENANT.

Specific performance of a parol contract for the sale of lands, which had been sufficiently performed so as to take it out of the Statute of Frauds, will be denied where the vendee, by payment of rent and otherwise, abandoned all rights under the contract and became merely a tenant.

Edmonton Construction Co. v. Maguire, 12 D.L.R. 376, 6 A.L.R. 91, 24 W.L.R. 672, 4 W.W.R. 1062.

NONPAYMENT—BETTERMENTS — READINESS TO PAY.

Where a vendee, who had greatly increased the value of land by his labour and expenditures, although he had not met his stipulated payments, was excluded by the vendor from the land because of such default, specific performance will be decreed, although the time for payment may not have arrived, where the vendor, who had received a substantial portion of all the crops raised on the land, refused to accept payment for the land, which the vendee was ready and willing to make, except on conditions he could not rightfully impose.

FORFEITURE—RELIEF—LACHES.

Specific performance of a contract for the sale of land will be denied where the vendee does not seek relief or tender payment for more than 3 years after notice of the forfeiture of the contract for non-payment.

INADEQUACY OF PRICE.

Specific performance of a contract for the sale of land will not be denied to the purchaser on the ground that an unconscionable advantage was taken of the vendor, or of inadequacy of consideration, where the statement of defence admits that the defendants had asked the plaintiff to carry out his agreement and set up in answer to the action that he had then refused to complete the purchase.

Baxter v. Bradford, 12 D.L.R. 581, 18 B.C.R. 369, 24 W.L.R. 973, 4 W.W.R. 1325.

FAILURE OF VENDEE TO TENDER DEED AND MAKE CASH PAYMENT — TIME AN ESSENCE OF THE CONTRACT.

Specific performance of a contract for the sale of land of which the vendee was in possession, although he had not made expenditures in reliance on the agreement, will be denied where the contract, of which time was of the essence, was cancelled by the vendor for the failure of the vendee to prepare and tender a deed for execution, or to make the stipulated cash payment and give a mortgage for the deferred payments, within the time and manner specified in the agreement.

Brickles v. Snell, 30 D.L.R. 31, [1916] 2 A.C. 599, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 1059, reversing 20 D.L.R. 209, 49 Can. S.C.R. 360.

VENDOR READY AND WILLING TO COMPLETE—REPUDIATION BY PURCHASER.

Reynolds v. Foster, 9 D.L.R. 836, 4 O.W.N. 694, affirming 3 D.L.R. 506.

An agreement to assign a contract for the sale of land with all arrears and taxes paid is not complied with by assigning a contract in default, where such default might be a bar to the enforcement of the contract in an action for specific performance, as it would be when time was expressly made of the essence of the agreement. [Brickles v. Snell, 30 D.L.R. 31, followed.]

Douglas v. Sharpe, 32 D.L.R. 101, 9 S.L.R. 411, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 577.

LAND OPTIONS—REVOCABILITY.

An option to purchase land for a fixed time for which no consideration is given creates merely a personal right revocable at any time before it has been formally accepted, and is, therefore, not subject of specific performance.

Clendenning v. Cox, 26 D.L.R. 729, 49 Que. S.C. 71, reversing 45 Que. S.C. 157.

PROPERTY SITUATE IN FOREIGN COUNTRY.

An agreement to sell land situated in a Province of Canada may be ordered by a court thereof to be specifically performed by a vendor resident in the province despite the fact that a part of the price to be paid is land situated in a foreign jurisdiction: there is mutuality of remedy when the parties can obtain similar remedies in different jurisdictions.

SETTLEMENT OF ACTION—JUDGMENT—NON-COMPLIANCE.

Where an action coming for trial is settled by the parties, and the terms of settlement are incorporated in a formal judgment providing for an exchange of properties which the plaintiff has failed to comply with, the defendants' remedy is in an action for specific performance and not by an order directing an assessment of damages.

McTavish v. McLeod, 26 D.L.R. 272, 9 W.W.R. 1121.

WHEN REMEDY REFUSED—TIME AS ESSENCE.

In an action for specific enforcement of an agreement for the sale of land, courts of equity, which look at the substance as distinguished from the letter of agreements, no doubt exercise jurisdiction which enables them to decree specific performance in cases where justice requires it, even though liberal terms of stipulations as to time have not been observed; but they never exercise this jurisdiction where the parties have expressly intimated in their agreement that it is not to apply, by providing that time is to be of the essence of their bargain, unless the parties have expressly or by implication waived such provision. [Kilmer v. R.C. Orchard Lands Co., 10 D.L.R. 172, [1913] A.C. 319, distinguished.]

MISDESCRIPTION OF QUANTUM.

A contract of sale which describes the land as having a "frontage of approximately 75 feet on Queen Street," which, in fact, only had a frontage of 70 feet, constitutes a misdescription materially affecting the value of the subject-matter, of which the court will not decree specific performance.

Floyd v. Hanson, 24 D.L.R. 320, 48 N.B.R. 339.

DEFICIENCY IN VALUE—MISDESCRIPTION.

On a contract for the sale of land where the vendor is able to perform the contract in substance, but not completely, he is nevertheless entitled to compel specific performance by the purchaser, the vendor making compensation for the deficiency in value. [Flight v. Booth, 1 Bing. (N.C.) 370, applied.] This principle is not limited to cases in which the vendor is protected by the ordinary condition as to misdescription.

Springer v. Anderson, 9 W.W.R. 922.

EXCHANGE OF LANDS—PROPERTY SITUATE IN FOREIGN COUNTRY.

The court has jurisdiction to decree specific performance of a contract for the exchange of lands situated within the jurisdiction of the court, at the instance of a foreign plaintiff whose land is situated in a foreign country and who is ready and willing to perform his part of the contract. Tucker v. Jones, 25 D.L.R. 278, 8 S.L.R. 387, 9 W.W.R. 620, 33 W.L.R. 1. [Affirmed, 30 D.L.R. 228, 53 Can. S.C.R. 431, 10 W.W.R. 1117.]

SALE OF LAND BY COTRUSTEE—BINDING

REFLECT ON OTHERS.

An agreement for the sale of land made by one of the trustees named in a will is not binding upon the other, and cannot be specifically enforced against him, regardless of a direction in the will of the deceased trustee that the agreement made by him should be carried out.

EXCHANGE OF LANDS—MISE EN DEMEURE—PROOF OF OWNERSHIP AND TENDER OF DEED—SUFFICIENCY.

In an action for an order to execute a conveyance, the plaintiff, purchaser, or vendor should first put en demeure the other party; this proceeding should be such as to put him in a position to defend himself and to know that he can himself fulfil his obligations. Thus, if it is a case of an exchange of property, he should establish that he is owner of the immovable exchanged and tender a deed signed by him, accompanied by his documents of title, and if there is a payment it should be made by a legal tender. A document for exchanging properties which does not mention where the immovable exchanged is situated, does not give its official number nor refer to any evidence of title, if it is only an agreement for sale sous seing privé signed by a company not a party to the exchange, is informal, and cannot be used to prove the contract in favour of the owner of the immovable.

Trudel v. Marquette, 24 Que. K.B. 279.

FORMATION OF CONTRACT—OFFER — NEGOTIATIONS — POSSESSION TAKEN BY PURCHASER—INCOMPLETE AGREEMENT.

Kempfenfeldt Land Co. v. Fox, 9 O.W.N. 80.

REGISTERED PLAN.

A purchaser who agrees to purchase lots according to a registered plan is bound by the agreement; whether the registered plan creates a restrictive covenant or not is immaterial; if the vendor offers the purchaser exactly what he agreed to buy specific performance will be enforced.

Sumner v. McIntosh, 40 D.L.R. 301, 11 S.L.R. 152, [1918] 2 W.W.R. 293, affirming 35 D.L.R. 336, 10 S.L.R. 63, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 1404.

TIME OF ESSENCE — EXTENSION.

Specific performance of an agreement for sale of land will be enforced, notwithstanding a clause making time of the essence, and that the contract is to be null and void if the interest is not promptly paid when due; if the vendor agreed to an extension of the time of payment and the notice definitely fixing the time in which payment must be made is unreasonable in the circumstances. [Kilmer v. B.C. Orchard Lands, 10 D.L.R. 172, [1913] A.C. 319, followed.]

Tooley v. Hadwen, 41 D.L.R. 190, 13 A.L.R. 447, [1918] 2 W.W.R. 812.

ONE PURCHASE CONTEMPLATED — DIFFERENT PARCELS OWNED BY HUSBAND AND WIFE SEPARATELY — WIFE NOT JOINED AS PARTY — STATUTE OF FRAUDS.

Kidd v. Millar, 40 D.L.R. 729, 13 A.L.R. 282, [1918] 2 W.W.R. 366.

Plaintiff, through an agent, applied to purchase certain land from defendant. A price was quoted and accepted, and a deposit paid. It was also understood that a formal contract was to be drawn up. Several letters passed between the parties after the acceptance of the price quoted, and in these letters terms were discussed; but it did not appear that the plaintiff specifically agreed to the terms quoted. No formal contract was ever drawn up. In an action for specific performance it was held (1) When a proposal is made and accepted and reference therein made to a formal contract, although not expressly stated to be subject to such formal contract being prepared and executed, it becomes a question of construction whether the parties intended that the terms agreed on should merely be put into form or whether they should be subject to a new agreement, the terms of which are not expressed in detail. (2) The parties here having contemplated a formal contract being prepared and there being many necessary matters as to which no agreement had been concluded, it must be held that there was no concluded contract of which specific performance could be ordered.

Ross v. Eastern Saskatchewan Land Co., 4 S.L.R. 346.

NONCOMPLIANCE WITH ESSENTIAL TERMS.

Specific performance of an agreement for the exchange of lands will not be specifically decreed at the instance of a party who is in default in respect of an essential term of the agreement. [Brickles v. Snell, 30 D.L.R. 31, followed.]

Douglas v. Sharpe, 32 D.L.R. 101, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 577. [Affirmed by Supreme Court of Canada, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 1177.]

DESCRIPTION—ENCROACHMENT.

Where an agreement of sale of land sufficiently describes the land, a minor encroachment upon the land does not prevent the vendor from making title in accordance with the contract, specific performance will be decreed.

Foster v. Goodacre, 34 D.L.R. 42, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 636.

A purchaser of land from A, whose only title to the land is under an agreement of purchase from B the owner, may, after default of A in carrying out his contract with B, on notifying B of his interest and tendering the full amount owing to him by A, if it be refused, maintain an action against both A and B for specific performance and for an order that B convey to him on payment of the amount due under his agreement with A. [Smith v. Hughes, 5 O.L.R. 245; Dyer v. McMillan v. Pink, 14 O.W.N. 212.

TITLE — EARNEST — COMMENCEMENT OF PROOF IN WRITING—PAROL EVIDENCE—C.C. QUE. 1233, 1477.

In an action to compel the execution of a deed of sale, a cheque dated on the day of the sale, made by the purchaser to the order of the vendor and bearing the words "on account of a sale of his property," which cheque the vendor keeps in his possession, is a commencement of proof in writing sufficient to allow parol evidence of the sale, especially when those facts are corroborated by admissions of the party itself. At the time of the proposed deal, either the earnest which has been given may be abandoned by the party who has given it, if he desists from his promise, or else the party who has received it must pay double the amount of the earnest if it is he who withdraws from the agreement. But when the earnest is given after the contract has been made, the parties are no longer free to withdraw, and the giving of the earnest serves to establish the making of the contract.

Bricot v. Brien, 23 Que. K.B. 565.

AGREEMENT OF SALE—REGISTRATION.

The recourse of the purchaser in the case of breach of agreement of sale, which has not been followed by possession, is by action for specific performance. Such breach does not give rise to a petitory action, it confers merely a personal right or one between debtor and creditor, and it does not permit of any registration.

(§ I E—31)—EFFECT OF DOWER INTERESTS—INTEREST OF NONREGISTERED GRANTEES.

The purchaser's interest under a contract of sale registrable under the B.C. Land Registry Act, 1906, c. 23, in the register of charges, is only such an interest in the lands as is commensurate with the relief which equity would give by way of specific performance; and his contract with the registered owner of an indefeasible fee will not be effective as against a claim under a valid but unregistered deed admitted by the vendor whereby her title was reduced to a claim for dower and the fee belonged to right to another whose title was shewn in answer to the purchaser's action for specific performance; section 75 of the Act made the deed inadmissible in disproof of the purchaser's title to a charge under his contract, but it remained properly admissible on the question of the extent to which specific performance ought to be granted under that contract.

Howard v. Miller, 22 D.L.R. 75, [1915] A.C. 318, 20 B.C.R. 227 at 230, reversing Sup. Ct. of Can. 4 W.W.R. 1193. [Applied in Central Trusts v. Snider, 25 D.L.R. 410.]

OPTION TO PURCHASE—FAILURE OF CONSIDERATION.

An option given by defendant to plaintiff to purchase land is nudum pactum and unenforceable where the consideration therefor is not paid.

McGregor v. Chalmers, 11 D.L.R. 157, 24 W.L.R. 176, 4 W.W.R. 256.

OPTION—CONTRACTS.

When $5 has been paid for an option for purchase of land under which a first payment of $1,000 is stipulated to be made if the option is exercised, a tender of $995 on the last day of the option is bad, unless the option stipulates that the consideration therefor shall in the event of sale be applied on the deposit.

An agency contract between the owner and a real estate agent is not necessarily established by the owner's answer quoting price sent in reply to a telegram from the real estate agent asking the best cash price although it also stated a reason for an immediate answer that the sender had a man "who will buy this if he can get it right," and the owner may still shew that his negotiations with the sender of the telegram were only as with a prospective purchaser.

(§ I E—33)—NOTICE TO COMPLETE.

Facts known to the vendor, at the time the contract was made, as having influenced the purchaser to agree to the time fixed for completion in a contract for sale of land, will be considered in determining what is a reasonable notice where the contract does not provide that time shall be of the essence of the contract.

RESCISSIION—NOTICE—TENDER OF TITLE—REASONABLE TIME.

A letter by the purchasers to the vendor, giving notice of intention to rescind the contract if completion should be delayed beyond a named reasonable time, having been made impracticable by the act of the vendor's agent in stating a wrong address in the agreement, and the vendor's neglect to rectify the error, prevents such vendor from insisting on this condition of the right of rescission. The failure of the vendor to prepare and tender, within a reasonable time, the transfer which was to have been prepared disentitles such vendor to ask for specific performance of the agreement.

(§ 1 E—35)—DOUBTFUL TITLES.

Where the vendor has contracted to sell subject to an unmaturing incumbrance or charge which by the terms of the contract he represents to be subject to a privilege of prepayment at any time, not however contained in the mortgage, and the contract does not reserve to the vendor the right to rescind if he shall be unable or unwilling to remove an objection to title, the vendor is not entitled to rescind on the purchaser insisting on specific performance of the contract under the best conditions procurable: the vendor in such case must either obtain the mortgagee's consent to prepayment or give some equitable indemnity securing the purchaser against loss in respect of the refusal of the privilege guaranteed under the contract. [Wilson v. Williams, 3 J.F. N.S. 810, and Nimmons v. Stewart, 1 A.L.R. 384, followed.]

ABSENCE OF TITLE IN VENDOR—INNOCENT MISTAKE.

Specific performance will not be granted, where a widow, in the honest belief that she could deal with the property of her deceased husband, entered into an agreement for the sale of certain lands belonging to the estate of the deceased, of which she was administrator in another province but not in the province where the lands were situate and in which she had upon her husband's intestacy a beneficial interest to the extent of one-third only after the debts of the estate should be paid.

Specific performance of a contract to sell real estate will not be ordered where the prospective vendors are executors and trustees of the individual estate of their testator who held the property as a trustee only if the court considers the will was insufficient in form to constitute the vendors trustees with power to convey the trust estate, although it was stipulated by the contract that the purchaser would accept a transfer from the vendors as executors and trustees on their having the probate sealed under Manitoba laws.

Mansfield v. Toronto General Trusts Co., 1 D.L.R. 503, 22 Man. L.R. 49, 20 W.L.R. 344.

DOUBTFUL TITLES — DECISION ON VENDOR AND PURCHASER APPLICATION.

A dismissal of a summary application made by a vendor under the Vendors and Purchasers Act (Ont.), is not decisive on the question of title so as to preclude the vendor from bringing an action for specific performance, since the whole case is not exhaustively treated on a vendor and purchaser summons, but the proceedings merely deal with isolated points arising out of or in connection with the contract of sale.

Cameron v. Hull, 9 D.L.R. 843, 23 O.W.R. 736.

DOUBTFUL TITLE—WAIVER BY PURCHASER—DISCRETION OF COURT.

Where the title to land is doubtful the court will refuse specific performance of a contract to purchase, unless the purchaser has by his conduct waived his ordinary equitable right to a good title: acts of ownership do not necessarily constitute such a waiver, if satisfactorily explained and the court may in its discretion allow the purchaser to repudiate notwithstanding such acts.

Belder v. Whitney, 49 D.L.R. 153, [1919] 3 W.W.R. 627.

DOUBTFUL TITLE—CAVEAT—REMOVAL.

Where a vendor within a reasonable time removes a caveat against the title founded on an agreement imposing burdens on the land he is entitled to specific performance of the agreement of sale. [Greer v. Clarke, 27 D.L.R. 699, 9 A.L.R. 533, followed.]

Pugh v. Knott, 36 D.L.R. 52, 12 A.L.R. 399, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 95.

LAND SITUATED IN ANOTHER PROVINCE — TITLE.

In an action for the specific performance of an agreement for sale of lands situated in another province, where the plaintiff shewed a prima facie title to the land, a reference should be directed to the Master to report as to whether the plaintiff had a good title. Under the circumstances the plaintiff was not debarred from specific performance because he had not title at the time agreed upon for completion, nor by the fact that his vendor had conveyed the property to a third party.

Fort George & Fraser Valley Land Co. v. Wilson, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 351.

EXCHANGE OF LANDS—DOUBTFUL TITLES.

Where in an action for specific performance of a contract for exchange of lands the issue of title is raised, but not prominently put forward in the pleadings, the court will direct a reference to the local registrar to afford the parties an opportunity of taking all proper objections on that ground. [Mayberry v. Williams, 3 S.L.R. 350; Lucas v. James, 7 Hare 410, followed.]

Tucker v. Jones, 25 D.L.R. 278, 8 S.L.R. 387, 133 W.L.R. 1, 9 W.W.R. 620. See also 30 D.L.R. 228, 53 Can. S.C.R. 431, 10 W.W.R. 1117.

EXCHANGE OF LANDS—DEFECTIVE TITLE.

A party seeking specific performance of an agreement for the exchange of lands is not entitled to the remedy if he delays the perfecting of his title for an unreasonable time.

(§ I E—36)—IMPOSITION OF TERMS—COMPENSATION OR ABATEMENT.

On an application to discharge the purchaser from the contract for want of a good title in the vendor following a decree obtained by the latter for specific performance, a discharge should be refused in respect of trifling defects of title if the vendor submits to make compensation or to permit an abatement of the purchase money. [Halkett v. Dudley, [1907] 1 Ch. 590, followed.]

IMPOSITION OF TERMS UPON ORDER COMPLETING SALE.

An interim order may be made, in an action of specific performance brought by the vendor, in which both the purchaser and an adverse claimant are joined as defendants, allowing a sale of lands to be carried out pending the trial of the adverse claim against the vendor (notice of which is the sole objection to the purchaser closing) on proper terms to secure the claimant if he should substantiate his claim at the trial, and a vesting order may be made thereon in favour of the purchaser as to all the estate and interest in the lands of the other parties to the action.

Jennison v. Copeland, 3 D.L.R. 52, 21 O.W.R. 689.

JUDICIAL DISCRETION—JUDGMENT IN THE ALTERNATIVE.

In an action for specific performance of an agreement for the sale of land, where it appears that the agreement in question was drawn up by the plaintiff, and prepared in such a manner as to leave room for want of understanding on the part of the defendant of the meaning which the plaintiff asserts it was intended to convey, and where the terms in regard to a purchase money mortgage on the land contained in the agreement are ambiguous, the court may in its discretion order specific performance according to the defendant's interpretation or in the alternative a dismissal of the action.

(§ II—40)—ORDER FOR—FORM AND SCOPE OF—EMBODYING ORDER TO PAY IN PURCHASE MONEY.

In an action by a vendor against a purchaser, an order for specific performance and an order for the payment into court by the purchaser of the balance due and owing for purchase money may be embodied in the same judgment. [Robinson v. Galland, 37 W.R. 396, followed; Schurman v. Ewing, 7 W.L.R. 610, and Hargreaves v. Security Co., 19 D.L.R. 677, disapproved.]

DISCRETION OF COURT TO GRANT—TITLE ACQUIRED PENDENTE LITE—RESCISSON—PLEADINGS.

The right of the plaintiff to a decree for specific performance is an equitable right and is always a matter for the just discretion of the court. A vendor suing for specific performance is not entitled as of right to a reference as to title or to prove his title acquired pendente lite; the court may refuse specific performance although title had been got in by the plaintiff before the trial, if he had unreasonably neglected to obtain the title which he had the right to call for after the purchaser had made an offer to complete the sale, and did not in fact have a title to convey until after the purchaser had pleaded the rescission of the agreement.

WHEN GRANTED—CONFIRMATION OF TITLE—RIGHT OF VENDEE TO COSTS.

A vendor suing for specific performance may make title even at the trial and if he does so and there has been no repudiation, he is entitled to a decree for specific performance, but the defendant purchaser, where title has not previously been made, is entitled to costs up to and including confirmation of report on title. [Halkett v. Dudley, 76 L.J. Ch. 330, [1907] 1 Ch. 590, followed.]

Magrath-Holgate v. Countryman, 22 D.L.R. 684.

VENDOR'S ACTION.

In a vendor's action for specific performance where the purchaser has defaulted in his payments, the judgment may direct payment of the arrears with interest and costs to be made by the defendant purchaser to the plaintiff or into court within a limited time with leave to the parties to apply.

Prevey v. Security Coal Mines Co., 11 D.L.R. 33, 24 W.L.R. 342, 4 W.W.R. 636.

ENFORCEMENT ON STRICT TERMS AS TO DILATORY PLAINTIFF.

Where a purchaser of realty is clearly in default, in that although he has accepted the title he has not tendered the conveyance nor the overdue balance of the purchase money, while his claim against the vendor for specific performance may be enforced, such enforcement will be made subject to strict terms of prompt performance on his part.

In an action to enforce specific performance of a contract for the sale of land which stipulated that the purchaser upon completing payment should have a Torrens title to the land, the court has the power to decree a conveyance in respect of such title as the defendant has and also to award damages for breach of the agreement to give a Torrens title even though the land is not within its jurisdiction and though the defendant did not own the land at the time the contract was entered into, if he took over the vendor's rights in the agreement and received the greater part of the purchase money with full knowledge that the plaintiff's contract with the owner called for a Torrens title.

Smith v. Ernst, 3 D.L.R. 736, 22 Man. L.R. 363, 2 W.W.R. 498, 21 W.L.R. 483, affirming 2 D.L.R. 213, 20 W.L.R. 772, 1 W.W.R. 1250.

Where in addition to a claim for specific performance of a contract for the sale of land, a claim is made by the purchaser for compensation for an alleged deficiency in the quantity, a court of equity has a discretion to refuse the relief sought and to leave the purchaser to his rights at law if any.

Bullen v. Wilkinson, 2 D.L.R. 190, 21 O.W.R. 427.

DAMAGES IN LIEU OF—ENFORCEMENT PREVENTED BY DEFENDANT'S WRONG.

A court possessing the former jurisdiction both of the common-law courts and of the courts of equity may, in an action brought by the purchaser for specific performance, award in lieu thereof damages for nonperformance in addition to the return of purchase money paid, where there had been a part performance by admitting the purchaser into possession and the vendor was the owner able to give title but resold to another in fraud of the plaintiff, notwithstanding that there was no contract in writing under the Statute of Frauds. [Lavery v. Pursell, 39 Ch.D. 508; Re Northumberland Avenue Hotel Co., 23 Ch.D. 16, distinguished; Elmore v. Pirrie, 57 L.T. 333, applied.]

McIntyre v. Stockdale, 9 D.L.R. 293, 27 O.L.R. 460, 23 O.W.R. 586.

PARTIAL TITLE — CY-PRÈS EXECUTION WITH COMPENSATION.

The court will not order specific performance cy-près with compensation of a contract made in her individual capacity only by the widow of the deceased owner for the sale of the fee where her interest was in fact only a one-third share after the payment of the debts of the estate.

PERFORMANCE PRO TANTO AND COMPENSATION — VENDOR AND PURCHASER.

Where the defendant, who had agreed to exchange real estate with the plaintiff, was unable to convey a small parcel of the lands to the plaintiff, the latter is entitled to be placed as nearly as possible in the same position as he would have occupied had the defendant carried out his agreement: the plaintiff may elect to take specific performance pro tanto with an abatement in price in respect of the part for which title cannot be given, but the abatement will be based upon the actual value and not upon the inflated value assigned to such parcel in the exchange agreement.

VENDOR NOT SOLE OWNER OF PROPERTY AGREED TO BE CONVEYED—ABATEMENT IN PRICE FOR PORTION TO WHICH TITLE CANNOT BE GIVEN.

If a man having only a limited interest in one parcel of land, but entitled to the entire fee in another, chooses to enter into a contract for the sale of the whole, representing it all as his own, it is not competent for him subsequently to set up his lack of ownership in the whole as a reason for nonfulfillment of the contract. The purchaser is entitled to have the contract carried out so far as possible, with an abatement in price for the portion for which title cannot be given.

Halldorson v. Holizki, 47 D.L.R. 613, [1919] 3 W.W.R. 86, affirming [1919] 1 W.W.R. 472.

(§ II—43)—BINDING EFFECT ON PARTIES.

Where the plaintiff brought an action upon an agreement entered into between him and the defendant to have the same cancelled and to have a cash payment made thereon declared forfeited, and the defendant, by counterclaim resisting the plaintiff's claim, sets up an agreement to sell or purchase land and asks the court to order specific performance, he necessarily submits on his part to perform it and the judgment which he afterwards succeeds in obtaining is as binding upon him as it is upon his opponent. When in such a case judgment goes for the defendant, he cannot, when the litigation has finally ceased, complain that owing to the delay caused by the litigation, which was wholly due to his opposition to the plaintiff's claim, the property has so much decreased in value that it is now inequitable to compel him to accept it.

Leckie v. Marshall, 4 D.L.R. 94, 3 O.W.N. 1527, affirming with a variation, 20 O.W.R. 117.

(§ II—45)—JUDGMENT—ORDER FOR POSSESSION—TIME LIMITED TO REMEDY DEFAULT.

Under ordinary circumstances where the court allows a purchaser, in possession under a contract for sale of lands, a period of time within which to remedy his default in payment of the purchase price, it will not include in the judgment for specific performance in favour of the vendor a direction that the purchaser deliver up possession to the vendor at an earlier date than the expiry of that period, although the contract gave the purchaser a right to possession only "until default."

PROHIBITION—COMMISSION DEC. 21, 1918, UNDER PUBLIC INQUIRIES ACT—COMMISSIONER NOT A COURT—REMEDY OF PROHIBITION NOT AVAILABLE.

Appeal from judgment allowing the issue of a writ of prohibition against Clement, J. as Commissioner proceeding with the inquiry as to unlawful importations of liquor into British Columbia, and unlawful sales of liquor within the province under the Royal Commission dated Dec. 21, 1918, issued under the Public Inquiries Act, on the ground that the said commission was ultra vires. Held, that prohibition did not lie because the commissioner was in no way acting judicially; he was in no sense a court.

That part of the Workmen's Compensation Act (B.C.) (6 Geo. V., 1916, c. 77) which purports to warrant the payment of compensation to seamen or their dependents for accidents or death by accidents upon

The enactment of legislation establishing a Workmen's Compensation Commission or Board is within the competence of a provincial legislature. But the provisions of such enactment in relation to the appointment and payment of the salary of the Board are ultra vires as they conflict with the powers reserved to the Dominion under ss. 96, 99, 100 of the B.N.A. Act.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS—TAXATION—B.C. MUNICIPAL ACT, 1914, C. 52, S. 133—COUNCIL OF MUNICIPALITY PASSING BY-LAWS NOT TO COMPLETE WORK AUTHORIZED BY EARLIER BY-LAW—ASSESSMENT FOR WORK PARTIALLY COMPLETED—NO JURISDICTION EXCEPT UNDER S. 10, C. 45 OF 1916.

Council of defendant municipality in 1911 passed by-law no. 1147 authorizing certain street construction work. In Dec. 1915, the council under s. 133 of c. 52 of 1914 (Municipal Act), passed by-law no. 1868 reciting that said work had been carried out in part and that the council deemed it inadvisable to complete it, and enacted that an assessment be made on the lands benefited by the work so carried out in part, and submitted it to the Lieut. Governor in council for approval. In Sept. 1916, the council passed by-law no. 1925 which, reciting the steps previously taken, levied and fixed the assessment necessary to provide for the proportion of the costs of the work to be borne by the owners of the property immediately to be benefited and the city respectively, and such by-law received the sanction of the Lieut. Governor-in-council. In passing by-law no. 1925 the council proceeded under said s. 133. Section 10 of c. 45 of 1916 which became law May 31, 1916, says the council may provide under certain conditions that work undertaken and carried out in part shall not be completed, a condition being that if the special assessment roll with respect to the work undertaken has not been made and confirmed (and this had not been done in the case in question) the council may pass a by-law amending the by-law authorizing the construction of the work in so far as it related to the extent of such work held, the council had no jurisdiction to pass said by-law no. 1925. The original by-law no. 1147 should have been amended to effect the necessary substitution in accordance with said s. 10 of c. 45 of 1916, which confers the sole power of an assessment such as was attempted.

Mason v. Victoria, [1919] 1 W.W.R. 562.

(§ I C—25)—INVALID IN PART.

The provisions of the Extra Provincial Corporations Act, R.S.O. 1914, c. 179, except the latter part of s. 16 (1) are ultra vires in so far as they apply to a company incorporated under the Dominion Companies Act, R.S.O. 1906, c. 79, for carrying on business in Ontario, and with its chief place of business in Ontario, such company is precluded from carrying out its objects and undertakings in Ontario until it becomes licensed; it is subject to the penalties prescribed in the Act for carrying on business, and is prohibited from holding lands for the purposes of its business without being licensed under the Act. That part of s. 16 which provides that so long as a company remains unlicensed it shall not be capable of maintaining any action or other proceeding in any court in Ontario in respect of any contract made in whole or in part within Ontario in the course of or in connection with business carried on contrary to the provisions of s. 7 is ultra vires. ASSIGNMENTS ACT, S. 52 — PUNISHMENT FOR CONCEALING OR MAKING AWAY WITH PROPERTY, ULTRA VIRES—EXAMINATION OF ASSIGNOR AND PUNISHMENT FOR NON-ATTENDANCE, ETC., INTRA VIRES.

Section 52 of the Assignments Act, R.S.M. 1913, c. 12, in so far as it provides for punishment of the assignor for concealing or making away with property in order to defeat creditors is ultra vires of the provincial legislature. The Assignments Act is not bankrupt legislation and does not trench upon Dominion rights. It is a wise provision against the disposition of property beyond the control of creditors and a protection generally against a preference to any favoured creditor. It is therefore a subject of property and civil rights within the province, and an examination of the assignor as provided for by the Act, and (under the B.N.A. Act, s. 92, subs. 15) the enforcement thereof by the imposition of punishment as provided for under said s. 52, is within the power of the provincial legislature.

(§ I G—75)—STRICT OR LIBERAL CONSTRUCTION.

The requirements of s. 16 of the Placer Mining Act, 1896, that every extension of a

(§ 1 G—82)—MUNICIPAL ASSESSMENT ACT—
—IMMATERIAL OMISSION.

The Municipal Assessment Act (R.S.M. 1913, c. 134) although in part adopted from the Ontario Act, differs from it in that it contemplates that resident and nonresident owners shall be put upon a practical equality; the omission of the assessor to insert the word "nonresident" in the column for names of owners as required by s. 20 of the Manitoba Act is a formal not a material matter, and when the address is inserted after the name the defect is cured by s. 63 of the Act. Power granted under 43 Viet. (Man.) c. 36 to a company to "break up, dig, and trench so much and so many of the public streets, roads, squares, highways, and other public places in any municipality . . . as may at any time be necessary or required for laying down or erecting [or repairing] the mains, pipes or wires to conduct" gas or electricity, will permit the erection of poles therein to carry wires necessary for the conveyance of electricity.

A clause in a general Act making it a condition precedent to the erection of electric light poles and wires, in a municipality, that the consent of the municipal council shall be first obtained and that the whole work incident to the erection of the poles shall be under the supervision of an appointee of the council, is not inconsistent with nor superseded by special provisions contained in the Act of incorporation of an electric light company conferring upon it the power to erect poles in a street, and to operate the business of the company and making the company responsible for damages caused in carrying on or maintaining their works.

—INTENTION.

The amendment to the Local Improvement Act, R.S.O., 1914, c. 193, made by the statute 4 Geo. V. (Ont.), c. 21, s. 42, is intended to give dissentient land owners a remedy analogous to those given by counter-petition and by notice to the council, and provides an appeal from the discretion of the council in undertaking the work at all or in respect of some detail of the work such as the apportionment of the cost; but when the work has been executed in assumed conformity with the council's declared intention, an appeal does not lie to the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board to review the council's discretion.

A special provision of the legislature in regard to the submission of a by-law to the electors, avoids the necessity for compliance with the general provisions relating to the same class of by-law.

(§ II A—96)—PUBLIC INQUIRIES ACT—INTENT—"GOOD GOVERNMENT"—"ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE IN THE PROVINCE"—B.N.A. ACT—CRIMINAL LAW—JURISDICTION OF PROVINCE.

The expression "good government," as used in the Public Inquiries Act (R.C.B.C. c. 110) as amended by c. 30, 1917, is not to be taken in the wide sense which such expression bears in the B.N.A. Act in relation to the powers of the Dominion, but rather to the exercise of the executive and ministerial functions and to the management and conduct of official business, within the scope of the power given to the Province by s. 92 (16) of the B.N.A. Act, to legislate in respect of merely local matters within the Province. By the expression "administration of justice in the Province" in the Act 1917, c. 30 (3), it must be assumed that the legislature did not intend to include any matter not included in the phrase as used in the B.N.A. Act. By the B.N.A. Act, s. 91 (27) the criminal law, including the procedure in criminal matters, is assigned to the Dominion. Such a commission in so far as it is created for the purpose of inquiring into punishable violations of law, and ascertaining the malefactors with a view to prosecution, is also in violation of Imperial statutes 16 Chas. I., c. 10, and of 42 Edw. III., c. 3, which statutes are still in force in Canada and the provinces except so far as altered by a competent legislature.

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY ACT—LEGISLATIVE INTENT.

A statute such as an Employers' Liability Act should not, upon any assumption or presumption of mistake or omission on the part of the legislature in the expression of its intention, be treated as extinguishing rights of action which it does not expressly or by necessary implication abrogate. LIQUOR ACT—REPEAL—EFFECT.

The repeal of s. 40 of the Liquor Act (Alta.) as it stood in 1917 and the substitution of the new s. 40 of 1918 has the effect of confining within the new section a conviction against s. 23 before the defendant can be charged with having committed a second offence.

SUPREME COURT ACT—AMENDMENT.

The amendment of the Supreme Court Act of 1915 was intended to ameliorate the position of a defendant against whom a judgment is recovered. The amendment does not give the court power to commit a

The Opium and Drug Act, Geo. V. 1911 (Can.), c. 17, s. 3, contemplates that a penalty shall be imposed on each person offending, not that each offence shall be punished; a conviction against two or more persons jointly and a joint order to pay a fine are therefore invalid and will be quashed.

The King v. James, 39 D.L.R. 377, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 204, 52 N.S.R. 244.

The language of the Railway Act, 1906, expresses an intention to preserve intact all powers conferred by previous special Acts of incorporation upon companies within its scope, except where otherwise specifically mentioned. Section 248 of the Act, shews that, where Parliament intended by that Act to interfere with the powers of companies other than railway companies, it has done so by special provision.

In an action on a promissory note which, but for part payment, would be barred by the Statute of Limitations, where a legislature re-enacts that portion of the English statute of 21 James I. which places a time limitation upon actions for simple contracts, without making any reference to established judicial interpretations of that statute, and without embodying them in the Legislative Act itself; it will be presumed that the legislature must have intended those judicial interpretations to be applied.

LATER STATUTE TO CONTROL—ACTS OF SAME SESSION—REPUGNANCY.

If there be a repugnancy between two statutes passed at the same session of the legislature, the later statute will prevail, and where there is no other mode of distinction as to date, the chapter of the annual statutes bearing the higher number may be presumed to be later in date. INTENTION OF LEGISLATURE—DUTY OF COURT.

The rule by which the courts are to be guided in construing Acts of Parliament is to look at the precise words, and to construe them in their ordinary sense, unless it would lead to any absurdity or manifest injustice, and if it should, so to vary and modify them as to avoid that which certainly could not have been the intention of the legislature. Where the legislature has used in the enactment in question language so free from ambiguity and so clear and explicit as to leave no doubt as to its meaning, the court must construe the enactment according to its expressed intention. Held, that under the Act respecting public streets in the city of Saint John (1917, 8 Geo. V. c. 48, N.B.) the city had jurisdiction to pass a by-law forbidding the construction or maintenance of any surface opening in any sidewalk or the use for vaults, . . . of the space beneath the sidewalks . . . unless a permit was first obtained, and vesting the land under the sidewalks in the corporation, notwithstanding that the Act deprived the owner of land vested in it before the passing of the Act.

VANCOUVER INCORPORATION ACT—"JUDGE OF THE SUPREME COURT"—JUDGE ACTING AS "PERSONA DESIGNATA."

Section 127 of the Vancouver Incorporation Act, 1900, provides that any person interested may apply to "any judge of the Supreme Court," and on production of certain specified evidence the judge, "after at least 10 days' service on the corporation of a rule to shew cause," may quash the by-law for illegality. On an application under this section a judge acts persona designata and not judicially.

Section 27 (a) of the Chinese Immigration Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 95, as amended by 7 & 8 Edw. VII, c. 14, s. 6, has relation to the original act of landing. A Chinaman who has regularly landed and paid the tax and been granted the certificate to which he is entitled is not liable under the provisions for re-entry (ss. 20 & 21, c. 95) for an isolated and, perhaps inadvertent, act of departure from Canada for a short time, without giving notice thereof.

Jurisdiction is not conferred on the Railway Board under the Railway Act, 1906, s. 176, to authorize a railway operated under Dominion law to use or occupy lands which at the time of the application for the approval and of the approval of the location of the Dominion railway had become the property of a railway operated under provincial law.

LANDLORD AND TENANT—STATUTE 8 ANNE, c. 14, s. 1—REASON FOR PASSING—PROTECTION OF LANDLORD—CREDITORS—COLLUSION OF—JUDGMENT—BY LANDLORD—EFFECT OF.

The statute 8 Anne, c. 14, s. 1, was passed to protect the landlord against frauds which might be committed by his tenants, particularly by those colluding with creditors to issue writs of execution; it contemplates only executions issued by third parties, and does not entitle the landlord to a preference in respect of rent for which he himself had taken judgment and issued the execution under which the fund in question in the sheriff's hands was realized. ACTION AGAINST HEIRS OF DECEASED PERSON—PLEAS—EXCEPTION TO FORM—QUE. C.P. 135, 606.

Article 135, C.C.P., was introduced into the Code of Procedure to give the creditors of an estate a prompt and easy way of summoning before the courts the heirs, whoever they may be, known or unknown, of that estate. That article gives a right of action which is more of the nature of an action ad rem rather than in personam; therefore such an action is not taken against a particular heir, but against the assets of the estate, as provided for in C.C.P. 606. Those assets are often, during the delays of acceptance, in danger of disappearing, or in some similar danger, and the legislature wished to give to the creditors the benefit of an immediate seizure. From that indetermination, and from the particular character of the action resulting therefrom, it follows that the person receiving the summons can set up only two pleas, viz.:—his lack of right to inherit, or that the claim is ill-founded. But, as no personal judgment can be pronounced against him, he cannot plead to the form, since the attacked proceeding cannot cause him any prejudice.

GENERAL WORDS.

The general language of the City Act, 1915, (Sask.), c. 16, s. 204, as to licensing businesses and callings is to be read as subject to the specific legislation controlling the practice of law contained in the Legal Profession Act, R.S.S. 1909, c. 104, and to exclude any power by the municipality to impose an annual license fee upon practising barristers and solicitors; a summary conviction of a barrister for nonpayment of a business license tax in respect of his office premises was therefore quashed.

R. v. Macdonald, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 311, 33 D.L.R. 770, 10 S.L.R. 138, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 269.

When there is an evident conflict between the spirit and the letter of the law, the courts, by logical interpretation, will endeavour to give effect to the intention of the legislature by making it prevail over the text incompatible with the object of the law.

(§ II A—97) — INCONSISTENT DEPARTMENTAL RULES—LICENSE TO CUT STANDING TIMBER.

Any regulation or contract whereby the Crown binds itself to grant a license to cut timber on Indian lands from year to year, practically in perpetuity, is ultra vires, as being contrary to the terms of R.S.C. 1886, c. 43, and the later revision R.S.C. 1906, c. 81, since the lands in question are held by the Crown in trust for the Indians and the only right conferred by the statute is the granting of a license for one year.

(§ II A—98)—GIVING EFFECT TO ENTIRE STATUTE.

Statutes are to be construed in accordance with the ordinary rules of the common law and are not presumed to make any alteration therefrom further than what the statute itself expressly declares: hence the Workmen's Compensation Act must be read together with C.C. (Que.) arts. 1953, 1954, which lay down the general rules as to responsibility.

MUNICIPAL ORDINANCE (ALTA.) — CONSTRUCTION OF.

The purport of a. 87 of the Municipal Ordinance (Alta.) is referable to the actual physical condition of the traveled roadbed and while a town could, no doubt, under s. 85, erect street lights, as the words used in s. 87 except the general word "works" all refer to the actual roadbed, the word "works" itself should also be confined to things done in the way of improving that roadbed, as distinguished from anything done to furnish better lights thereon, which form only an incidental feature of the system erected as a commercial undertaking by the town not in exercise of its governmental functions but in its capacity as a quasi private corporation, under powers given it in its incorporating ordinance (see Ord. 43 of 1901).

Salt v. Cardston, 46 D.L.R. 179, [1919] 1 W.W.R. 891.

In deciding a question of statutory construction, a court of justice is not entitled to speculate as to which of two conflicting policies was intended to prevail, but must confine itself to the construction of the language of the relevant statutes taken as a whole.

GIVING EFFECT TO ENTIRE STATUTE.

Although the language of s. 193 of the Ontario Railway Act, 1906 (now R.S.O. 1914, c. 185), is wide enough to embrace all street railways, tramways, and electric railways situate within the province, it must be read with ss. 3, 5, as based upon s. 79 of 4 Edw. VII. c. 10, and by virtue thereof applies only to railways subject as such to provincial jurisdiction.

LOOKING TO ITS ENTIRETY.

To interpret a statute the effects which result from the whole of its provisions should be considered whatever may be the expressions used, unless the latter are not very clear.

Association of Architects v. Paradis, 48 Que. S.C. 229.

(§ II A—100)—AMBIGUITY—REASONABLENESS.

Upon a question of construction of certain words in a statute, if the words in themselves are susceptible of either of two meanings, the court will adopt the more reasonable construction.

(§ II A—101)—PENALTY FOR INFRACTION UNDER BOTH FEDERAL AND PROVINCIAL LAW.

Where an act which is not an offence, at common law is the subject of a distinct, absolute prohibition by provincial statute on public grounds, the offence so created is one for the wilful commission of which an indictment will lie under Cr. Code, s. 164, where no other mode of punishment is expressly provided by law.

When a statute creates an exception to a rule for a special case, this exception cannot be extended to another case even one in pari materia.

Cedars Rapids Mfg. & Power Co. v. Lacoste, 24 Que. K.B. 207.

(§ II A—103) — CONTEMPORANEOUS AND PRACTICAL CONSTRUCTION.

The rule as to giving to the words of a statute their plain and ordinary meaning, when applied with due regard to the law existing in Canada at the time of the passing of the B. N. A. Act, gives to the words "solemnization of marriage" as contained in subjects which a provincial legislature has jurisdiction under subs. 12 of s. 92, of the Act, an effect in the nature of a limitation upon the words "marriage and divorce" as contained in subs. 26, s. 91, of the Act as regards the constitutional power of the Parliament of Canada to legislate upon the subject of marriage. The words, "the solemnization of marriage in the province" as used in subs. 12, s. 92, of the B.N.A. Act, prima facie, import all that was ordinarily meant by solemnization in the systems of law in force in the various provinces of Canada at the time of the passing of the Act, including conditions which affect the validity of the marriage.

(§ II A—104)—MEANING OF WORDS—MANDATORY OR DIRECTORY.

In s. 20 of the Motor Vehicle Act, 2-3 Geo. V. (Alta.) c. 6, the expression "greater speed than one mile in four minutes" means any speed for any distance less than a mile which if continued would result in a full mile being covered in less than four minutes, the word "speed" as therein used meaning rate of motion, and the words "one mile in 4 minutes" simply supplying the measure of the same.

The infliction of the penalty provided in s. 3 of c. 34 of the *Con. Ord. (§ II A—105)—"OR OTHER SAWN LUMBER"—EJUSDEM GENERIS RULE.

The words "or other sawn lumber" following the expression "boards, deal, joists, lath, shingles" in the B.C. Forest Act, 1912, s. 100, are limited in their application by the "ejusdem generis" rule of construction, and the sawn product to which the general words apply must fall within the same class as the particular products to which reference is made.

(§ II A—106)—PUNCTUATION.

Punctuation in a statute does not follow settled rules and does not, therefore, change the usual sense of the words used nor affect what results from the context and from a comparison of the French and English versions. In the expression "lands vacant, and used for purposes of agriculture," the comma does not enlarge the copulative value of the conjunction "and" nor introduce the disjunctive sense of two kinds of land.

(§ II B—110)—IMPERATIVE WORDS—"APPEALS SHALL BE DETERMINED."

The provision of subs. 7, s. 204, of the Village Act, R.S.S. 1909, c. 86, that "all appeals shall be determined before the 30th day of September," is imperative, and the judge has no jurisdiction to hear the appeals or give his judgment after the date so fixed. Fares v. Rush Lake, 28 D.L.R. 539, 9 S.L.R. 115, 33 W.L.R. 978, 10 W.W.R. 13.

Subsection 5 of s. 3 of the Workmen's Compensation for Injuries Act, R.S.O. 1897, c. 169, making the employer liable where the injury is caused "by reason of the negligence of any person in the service of the employer who has the charge or control of any points, signal, locomotive, engine, machine or train upon any railway, tramway or street railway," should receive a liberal construction in the interests of the workman.

Martin v. G.T.R. Co., 8 D.L.R. 590, 27 O.L.R. 165, 15 Can. Ry. Cas. 1.

If the liability expressly imposed upon the "employer" or "undertaker" by the Workmen's Compensation Act, 2 Edw. VII. (B.C.) c. 74, now R.S.B.C. 1911, c. 244, for injury to a workman by accident arising out of and in the course of employment is to be cut down at all, or if the "employer" or "undertaker" is to be relieved from it to any extent, this must be done either by some statutory provision express or implied, and not by any conjecture as to the policy of the Act which its language does not suggest, even where that conjecture may be that the purpose of the Act in question is a shifting from the province to the employer as a quasi duty to provide for the destitute.

CONSTRUCTION—CROWN COSTS ACT, s. 2—SUMMARY CONVICTIONS ACT, s. 80—NO COSTS ON APPEAL IN FAVOUR OF OR AGAINST CROWN.

Section 80 of the Summary Convictions Act providing that upon any appeal the court to which the appeal is made "may make such order as to costs to be paid by any party as it thinks fit" does not authorize an order as to costs in favour of or against the Crown within the exception in s. 2 of the Crown Costs Act.

R. v. Volpatti, [1919] 1 W.W.R. 358.

(§ II B—111)—PENAL STATUTES.

When the legislature has plainly said that a certain act shall not be done, the legal consequences following a violation of that provision are neither greater or less by reason of the fact that the legislature has or has not imposed a penalty for such violation. [Melliss v. Shirley, 16 Q.B.D. 446, distinguished; and see Stat., Alta., 1913, 2nd session, c. 2, s. 9.]

PENAL STATUTE — INTERPRETATION — STRICT READING — GAME ACT, ALTA. (1907, 7 EDW. VII. C. 14.)

The power given to a justice of the peace to declare a forfeiture under s. 34 of the Game Act, 1907, 7 Edw. VII. (Alta.) c. 14, and amendments thereto is, by a strict reading of the Act, limited to "game," and under the interpretation given to that word by subs. 1 of s. 2 of the Act "beaver" are not game. The court will not read additional words into a statute for the purpose of extending a penal clause.

Re Edmonton Hide & Fur Co., 48 D.L.R. 181, [1919] 3 W.W.R. 53.

LITERAL CONSTRUCTION.

The literal construction of a section of a statute should not be adopted if it results in an absurdity or an inconsistency with the intention of the legislature as apparent from the whole statute. [Ex parte Walton, 59 L.J. Ch. 657, followed.]

Re Richard Brothers Co.; Stuart Mfg. Co. and Whitaker, 11 A.L.R. 495, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 722.

PENAL STATUTE.

In penal legislation, the words of a statute must be interpreted favourably to the persons supposed to have incurred the penalty.

Association of Architects v. Garipey, 50 Que. S.C. 134.

(§ II B—112)—STATUTES IN DEROGATION OF COMMON LAW.

In applying a statute making exigible what was not exigible at common law, attention must be paid to the exact wording of the statute; and, when the statute prescribes a method of procedure, that method must be followed, at least in substance. [Goodwin v. Ottawa & Prescott R. Co., 22 U.C.R. 186, followed.]

Malouf v. Labad, 3 D.L.R. 753, 3 O.W.N. 1235, 22 O.W.R. 99.

Where a statute creates an obligation not existing at common law, and provides the means by which that obligation is to be enforced, the jurisdiction is exclusive of any other jurisdiction.

(§ II B—113)—MUNICIPAL POWER IN DEFINING BOUNDARIES OF PROPERTY.

The Special Survey Act, R.S.M. 1902, c. 158, authorizing a survey by a municipality for the purpose of correcting errors in prior surveys and for the purpose of defining and establishing the boundaries of property is not a statute which confiscates property, but is curative, remedial and beneficial in its purpose, and as such should receive a generous interpretation so as, if possible, to carry out the intention of the legislature in making certain and defining property rights.

STATUTORY GRANTS.

Where the legislature requires that privileges shall be granted by by-law, they cannot be granted or acquired in any other manner, e.g., by overt act, waiver or acquiescence either by a committee of the council or by the whole municipal council itself.

Montreal Street R. Co. v. Montreal, 3 D.L.R. 812, 23 Que. S.C. 412.

STATUTES OF LIMITATION.

Statutes of Limitation are to be interpreted as beneficial statutes inasmuch as they are "Acts of peace," and the rule of strict construction does not apply to them.

Noble v. Noble, 9 D.L.R. 735, 27 O.L.R. 342.

STATUTORY GRANTS — EMINENT DOMAIN.

Statutes purporting to confer a power to acquire land compulsorily under eminent domain process for the benefit of a power company or the like, are to be construed strictly.

Thomson v. Halifax Power Co., 16 D.L.R. 424, 47 N.S.R. 536.

REMEDIAL LEGISLATION.

The construction of a statute which, although the apparent logical construction of its language leads to results which it is impossible to believe those who framed or passed the statute contemplated, and from which the judgment recoils, should not be held to be the true construction of the statute. [Reg. v. Clarence, 22 Q.B.D. 23, followed.] Remedial statutes should receive a benevolent construction.

Re Drewery Estate, 9 W.W.R. 628, 956, 33 W.L.R. 73.

(§ II B—114)—AMENDMENT — REPEAL — EXEMPTION.

Where a statute merely intercepts a particular class of cases from a general prior law which continues in force, a repeal of the intercepting statute returns that class of cases to the operation of the general law.

Ex parte Bradbury; R. v. Chief Constable of Halifax, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 68, 30 D.L.R. 756, 50 N.S.R. 298.

(§ II B-115)—MAKING VOID A LEGITIMATE TRANSACTION.

The Bills of Sale and Chattel Mortgage Act, 10 Edw. VII, (Ont.) c. 65, being one which makes void perfectly legitimate and proper transactions, must be read strictly.

Sturgeon Falls v. Imperial Land Co., 7 D.L.R. 352, 23 O.W.R. 170, 31 O.L.R. 62.

A taxing statute receives strict construction and full effect is given to imperative language. Where a statute creates a tribunal or officer with limited authority and confers jurisdiction, the conditions and qualifications annexed by the statute to the exercise of the jurisdiction must be strictly complied with.

Sterling v. Cumberland School Trustees, 49 N.S.R. 125.

(§ II B-117)—THRESHERS' LIEN ACT.

(§ II B-118)—CORPORATIONS.

The conversion of a public company into a private company is not to be deemed to be impliedly prohibited under the maxim "expressio unius" by reason of a statutory enactment as to the method of converting private companies into public companies where the purpose of the enactment is merely to make provision for publicity in constituting public companies.

(§ II B-119)—DUTIES — CUSTOMS.

In construing customs and revenue laws, the intention of the legislature, in the imposition of duties, must be clearly expressed, and, in cases of doubtful interpretation, the construction should be in favour of the importer, nor are duties or taxes to be imposed upon terms of vague or doubtful interpretation. [The Queen v. Ayer, 1 Can. Ex. 232, 270, 271; Cox v. Rabbits, 3 A.C. 473; Partington v. Att'y-Gen'l, L.R. 4 H. L. 100, applied.]

C. ADOPTED OR RE-ENACTED STATUTES.

(§ II C-120)—In any case where an ancient English statute has been the subject of a long series of judicial interpretations, and a settled rule of English law adopted by the highest courts in England has been laid down in regard to that statute, a jurisdiction, whose legislature has enacted a statute in practically the same terms, is bound by those judicial interpretations, in the construction of its own new statute enacted in the same terms as such ancient statute.

(§ II C-120) — STATUTE ADOPTED FROM ENGLAND — ADMIRALTY CRIMES.

The effect of the Alberta statute of 1910, c. 2, s. 3, amending the Judicature Ordinance c. 21 (Alta.), s. 21, is to introduce the English Practice Rules thereafter passed from time to time so far as they can be applied subject to the provisions of that ordinance and the Alberta rules of court.

RE-ENACTED STATUTES — ORIGINAL CONSTRUCTION, EFFECT OF.

Where a statute has been re-enacted, a construction given to the former statute by the courts ought to be adopted or at least it is a circumstance to which weight must be given.

SETTLED INTERPRETATION IN ANOTHER PROVINCE.

Where a statutory provision is adopted from another jurisdiction after having been in force there for a long period, the judicial decisions of that jurisdiction upon its interpretation should be followed unless there are very strong reasons for a contrary view. (§ II D—125)—CONSTRUCTION — CHATTEL MORTGAGE — RENEWAL STATEMENT FILED BY ORDER — VALIDITY — RIGHTS OF EXECUTION CREDITOR.

The effect of s. 25 of the Bills of Sale Act, R.S.C. c. 144, is that where an order is made to file a renewal statement subsequently to the date fixed by the Act, and that renewal statement is filed, the mortgage retains its validity, and is only void because of the delay as against those who had acquired rights during the interval between the date upon which the renewal should have been filed and the date upon which it was actually filed; a creditor of the mortgagor must have taken out execution in order to acquire such intervening right.

RETROACTIVE IN TERMS — EFFECT — CONTRACT FOR SALE BY LAND COMPANY.

Section 68 of the Manitoba Joint Stock Companies Act, being in terms retroactive and applicable to past transactions, has the effect of declaring invalid executory contracts of sale by a land company made prior to its passing as to which there was neither the authorization of a shareholder's meeting or of a director's by-law specially authorizing such agreement.

RETROSPECTIVE OPERATION — EFFECT ON EXISTING CONTRACTS.

The "Farm Machinery Act" (Alta. 1913, c. 15), whereby every "farm machinery" contract includes a warranty as to (a) good material, (b) proper construction, (c) good working order, (d) freedom from defects, and (e) durability, is not construed so as to have a retrospective effect and cannot therefore be applied to a "farm machinery" contract made prior to the enactment.

Benson v. International Harvester Co., 16 D.L.R. 350, 6 W.W.R. 242, 27 W.L.R. 513.

RETROACTIVE OPERATION — CERTIORARI — APPEAL.

Where a revised statute declares that a conviction under the prior law shall be considered as a conviction for a similar offence against the revised Act, this implies retroactivity of the new law as to the remedy against a conviction rendered after the revised Act came into effect upon a complaint laid before that time.

The repeal of s. 10 of the Married Women's Relief Act (Alta. 1910, 2nd sess., c. 18), which removes the qualifications as to the right to relief, is of no retroactive effect as to rights adjudicated upon and vested prior to the repeal.

HIGHWAYS — 59 VICT. C. 11 — TRANSFER FROM ONTARIO TO DOMINION — HIGHWAYS POTENTIALLY EXISTING AT TIME — CONSTRUCTION.

The proper construction of s. 2 of 59 Vict. c. 11, authorizing the transfer from the Government of Ontario to that of the Dominion of any lands theretofore taken by the railway company for its roadbed is, that such transfer shall not affect or prejudice the rights of the public with respect to the only common and public highways which were in existence at that time, namely, those potentially existing in the 5 per cent acreage reserved in all government lands by the Order-in-Council of 1866.

C.P.R. Co. v. Department of Public Works (Ont.), 45 D.L.R. 413, 24 Can. Ry. Cas. 231, 58 Can. S.C.R. 189.

A proceeding to ascertain by arbitration the compensation for land taken for a public street, which has been referred to a single arbitrator by the Court of King's Bench by virtue of a provision of a city charter under which the proceedings were instituted, constitutes a "legal proceeding or other remedy for ascertaining or enforcing" a liability, which was exempted by 1 Geo. V. c. 13, s. 2, in repealing rr. 773, 774, pertaining to the power of the Courts of King's Bench to deal with awards on motion, as to any rights acquired or liabilities incurred before the coming into effect of the repealing Act.

V. c. 23, making the loss under a policy of fire insurance payable in 60 days after the completion of the proofs of loss, unless a shorter period is provided by the contract, and by s. 199 to the effect that no objection to the sufficiency of such proof shall be allowed as a defence by the insurer, are retroactive and apply to an action commenced before such amendments were passed, since they are mere matters of procedure.

SUBSTANTIVE RIGHTS DISTINGUISHED FROM PROCEDURE, RETROACTIVE EFFECT.

In a matter of substantive rights, as distinguished from mere matters of procedure or practice, a statute is not presumed to be retroactive.

Richards v. Collins, 9 D.L.R. 249, 27 O.L.R. 390, 22 O.W.R. 592, 23 O.W.R. 499.

A statutory enactment that gives the right to litigants, in certain cases, to carry a suit from an inferior to a superior court or jurisdiction, is not a law concerning procedure, but deals with and confers a substantive right. It is not, therefore, retroactive and can only apply to cases that arise after it has come into force.

Montreal v. Delisle, 44 Que. S.C. 412.

RETROACTIVE OPERATION.

A statute should not be construed so as to have a retrospective operation unless its language is such as plainly to require such a construction.

FARM MACHINERY ACT — RETROACTIVE OPERATION.

The Farm Machinery Act (Alta.), 1913,

LAW SHORTENING TIME OF APPEAL — RETROACTIVE OPERATION OF.

A law shortening the time to appeal does not apply to cases pending before a lower court at the time the law passed. [Lefebvre v. Wilder, 23 Que. K.B. 25, followed.]

Quebec & Lake St. John R. Co. v. Valhieres, 23 Que. K.B. 171.

An Act which shortens the time for appealing does not apply to judgments rendered in actions of which a lower court has been seized, and which have been before it prior to the Act coming into force. [Couture v. Bouchard, 21 Can. S.C.R. 281, and Lawrence v. Hodgson, 1 V. & I., 372, followed.]

Lefebvre v. Wilder, 23 Que. K.B. 25.

(§ II D—126)—RETROACTIVE OPERATION — ACTION AGAINST MUNICIPALITY FOR DEFECTS IN HIGHWAY.

(§ II D—127)—CHANGES OF PROCEDURE — RETROACTIVE.

Whether an action to be brought against a municipality for the reimbursement of a government fund for moneys chargeable to the municipality should be brought in the name of one public officer or of another, is a mere matter of procedure as to which statutes are ordinarily retrospective; and the amending statute, 4 Edw. VII. (Can.), c. 23 s. 86, vesting in the Crown instead of in the militia officer a right of action for the expense of troops requisitioned in case of riots, enables the Attorney-General of Canada to sue for reimbursement of the Consolidated Revenue Fund (Canada) for such expenses incurred prior to the amendment.

Attorney-General of Canada v. Sydney, 16 D.L.R. 726, 49 Can. S.C.R. 148.

III. Repeal; Amendment; Revision, Re-enactment.

Repeal by implication, see Municipal Corporations, II A—30; Costs, II—28.

(§ III—130)—STATUTE TO REVISE AND CONSOLIDATE — OMISSION.

The omission in an Act to revise and consolidate existing statutes on a given matter, of an enactment in one of the revised and consolidated Acts, is not an implied repeal thereof and it remains in force. Hence, if an existing Act, a right to redeem property sold for taxes by a city, is given, with a proviso that privileged and hypothecary claims shall thereby revive, a subsequent Act "to revise and consolidate the different acts of the legislature relating to that city," that embodies the enactments for the sale of property for taxes and its redemption, but omits the proviso for the revival of privileged and hypothecary claims, will not be deemed to repeal the latter by implication and it continues in force and vigour.

Kennedy v. Godmaire, 44 Que. S.C. 323. (§ III—131)—GENERAL AND SPECIAL LAWS.

In construing a remedial Act of Parliament the construction should be a liberal one giving effect, if possible, to all parts of the Act. A remedial statute relieving mortgagors in default from acceleration clauses, which covers by the express statutory provision "any mortgage" is not limited to mortgages made subsequent to the passing of the Act.

Chapter 22 R.S.B.C. 1897, as to a surviving husband's tenancy by the courtesy in his wife's lands is to be interpreted as subject to the modifications introduced by the same Act as that by which the R.S.B.C. were declared to come into force and effect expressly subject to the amendments accompanying such declaratory Act.

SPECIAL AND GENERAL PROVISIONS — PEEVISHING EFFECT.

A special section of a statute (subs. 100 of s. 54 of the Municipal Act, B.C. 1914, c. 52), prevails over a general one (subs. 27 and 155 of s. 54), and a section which imposes a restriction must prevail over one which is silent as to the restriction.

AMENDMENTS TO GENERAL ACT — PRIVATE ACTS — EXPROPRIATION.

Amendments to a general statute cannot affect the same sections which are included in a private statute. The Act 3 Geo. V. c. 42, enacts that expropriations in the future, shall be made by a judge; it does not apply to companies previously incorporated by private statute which mentions the special form of expropriation with experts.

Provincial Light, Heat & Power Co. v. Litchenheim, 16 Que. P.R. 140.

(§ III—132)—TEMPERANCE ACT — AMENDMENT — OFFENCE PRIOR.

As regards an offence committed prior to the Nova Scotia statutes of 1915, c. 30, the provision contained in the latter statute implying that a liquor licensee in the city of Halifax might be convicted under ss. 9 and 30 of the Nova Scotia Temperance Act 1910, c. 2, as amended by N.S. Acts 1911, c. 33, of sending intoxicating liquor into a prohibited district, is not to be taken into account in construing the Temperance Act as it stood at the time of the alleged offence.

Kelly v. Scriven, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 187, 28 D.L.R. 319, 50 N.S.R. 96.

(§ III—134)—EFFECT ON EXISTING PROCEEDINGS.

A statute amending the law as to the selection of names to be summoned for the jury panel for criminal trials will be presumed not to affect a trial at an assize for which the panel of jurors had already been summoned under the former law then in force.

R. v. McNamara, 16 D.L.R. 356, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 351, 27 W.L.R. 33, 19 B.C.R. 175, 193.

The Interpretation Act of Ontario, 7 Edw. VII. c. 2, s. 7 (52), has changed the previous rule of law by enacting that a re-enactment, revision or consolidation of a statute shall not be deemed an adoption of the judicial construction which the same or similar words in the prior statute had received.

The rights of a lessee to cut timber acquired under a lease from the Crown, pursuant to R.S.O. 1897, c. 36, s. 40, are not affected by the repeal of the said Act in 1906, 6 Edw. VII. c. 11, s. 232, as the latter statute provided that such repeal should not affect any rights acquired or any act or thing done under the repealed statute, nor are such rights affected by the terms of the later Act, the Mines Act, 1908, 8 Edw. VII. c. 21. [Gordon v. Moose Mountain Mining Co. (1910), 22 O.L.R. 373, followed.]

CLAIM AGAINST TOWNSHIP FOR INJURY TO SHEEP — DOG TAX AND SHEEP PROTECTION ACT, R.S.O. 1914, c. 246 — ACT REPEALED BY 8 GEO. V. C. 46 — CAUSE OF ACTION ARISING BEFORE REPEAL — EFFECT OF REPEAL — DAMAGE ASSESSED BY CORPORATION — APPLICATION FOR MANDATORY ORDER TO AWARD — APPEAL.

The repeal of a statute does not affect the rights of complainants which arose before such repeal, but the prerogative writ of mandamus cannot be awarded in an action to enforce the rights in question. On a proper application the complainants are entitled to a mandamus to the members of the township council ordering them to make the necessary inquiry and award under the statute (R.S.O. 1914, c. 246, s. 181).

REPEAL OF — EFFECT ON EXISTING RIGHTS AND REMEDIES.

judgment of the court, the law attacked has been repealed by the legislature.

(§ III—136)—TEMPERANCE ACT.

The provision of the Interpretation Act, R.S.N.S., c. 1, s. 8, to the effect that the repeal of any enactment "shall not revive any Act or provision of law repealed by such enactment or prevent the effect of any saving clause therein" does not prevent Part II of the Nova Scotia Temperance Act, 1910, being applicable in the city of Halifax upon Part I. becoming applicable in that city, notwithstanding the form of amending statutes, N.S. 1911, c. 33 and N.S. 1916, c. 22.

(§ I—5)—FIRST ACTION DISMISSED—SECOND ACTION VEXATIOUS — JUDGMENT—TIME LIMIT FOR BRINGING SECOND ACTION — ONTARIO INSURANCE ACT, R.S.O. 1914, c. 183, s. 194.

Where the issue in an action has been determined, a second action for the same cause is vexatious, and the court may stay proceedings in this action. A judgment in the first action will have the effect of determining all issues which are, or might be, raised, as far as the claim set up in the action is concerned.

ARBITRATION CLAUSE IN CONTRACT — ONUS OF DISPLACING.

The party opposing a motion to stay proceedings because no arbitration had taken place under the arbitration clause of a construction contract must adduce proofs by affidavit of the genuineness of his contentions that the arbitration clause no longer applies, or that he should not be bound thereby; it is not sufficient merely to allege in the statement of claim facts which, if proved, would shew a case for the exercise of a judicial discretion to refuse a stay.

(Ont.) c. 69, all things necessary to work out mechanics' liens, quoad the land, are within the jurisdiction of the officer hearing the mechanics' lien actions; but such officer has no power, merely because there are mechanics' lien actions already pending against both the contractor and the owner, to stay proceedings in an action by the contractor against the owner for damages for breach of an alleged agreement to supply materials to carry on a construction contract made between them, in which action the contractor is not claiming a lien.

Dick v. Standard Cable Co., 7 D.L.R. 64, 4 O.W.N. 67, 23 O.W.R. 19.

Until a judgment of the Supreme Court of Canada has been certified to the court below, a judge of the Supreme Court has jurisdiction to order a stay of proceeding pending an appeal to the Privy Council. Where the plaintiffs in an action have succeeded at the trial and in the Provincial Appellate Court, and the defendants have elected to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, in which also they have been unsuccessful, and, while the Supreme Court still had jurisdiction over the case, a judge of that court has refused a stay of proceedings pending an appeal to the Privy Council, and it appears that there has not been any miscarriage of justice through accident, mistake or otherwise, but that every question in dispute has been fully considered, and that the case involves merely a question of fact and nothing of public importance, and that the Privy Council is likely to refuse leave to appeal a Judge of the Provincial Court of first instance should not grant a stay of proceedings pending an appeal to the Privy Council.

CRIMINAL PROSECUTION.

In provinces where there is no grand jury system and therefore no indictment the case is not in the provincial Supreme Court for trial until a formal charge in lieu of an indictment has been preferred, and a stay of proceedings by the Attorney-General cannot be entered under Cr. Code, s. 962, in the event of no formal charge having been laid. [Note that for purposes of s. 962 the term "indictment" includes a formal charge under s. 873 A by the interpretation clause, s. 2 (16), as amended 1907.]

TO ENABLE SUMMONING PRINCIPAL DEBTOR—ACTION ON GUARANTEE UPON DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP.

If, on dissolution of a partnership, one partner guarantees a debt due to his copartner, he becomes a surety for the debtor, and if he is sued by his copartner he has a right to a stay of proceedings by dilatory exception in order that he may summon the principal debtor in warranty. The formal abandonment by a creditor of the benefit of seizure, deprives him of the right, in an action brought against him, to a stay of proceedings in order that he may seize and sell the property of the original debtor as provided by art. 177 C.C.P. par. 5.

Findlay v. Howard, 24 D.L.R. 229, 24 Que. K.B. 59.

APPEAL PENDING — TERMS AS TO COSTS.

On an application for a stay of proceedings on a verdict pending an appeal, the stay was refused except on terms of payment of the amount of the verdict to the successful party and the taxed costs to his solicitor, the former giving security for repayment in case of the appeal being successful, or consenting that the amount be paid into court, and the latter giving an undertaking to repay the costs if so ordered by the Appeal Court.

VOLUNTEERS AND RESERVISTS RELIEF ACT.
A stay of proceedings under s. 62a (18) of the Land Titles Act on the grounds that the person making the application is entitled to the protection of the Volunteers and Reservists Act should be granted. A stay under that section contemplates the imposition of terms and the possibility of the cancellation of the stay and is to be granted not as a matter of right, but as a matter of discretion.

A railway company which is obligated under a by-law granting it the right under certain conditions to construct, maintain and operate an electric railway, to pay an agreed rate for every mile or pro rata for a portion of a mile of railway operated, is liable to pay only for the portion of railway actually operated if, however, the effect of the by-law is that the whole railway is to be operated, the company is liable in damages for non-performance of this condition, the damage being equal to the amount the company would have had to pay had the whole line been operated.

(§ 1-3)—AGREEMENT BETWEEN RAILWAY AND COUNTY—JURISDICTION OF PROVINCIAL BOARD—USE OF HIGHWAYS—SWITCHES.

It is within the jurisdiction of the chairman of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board to construe an agreement between a county corporation and a railway company granting power to enlarge the number of switches operated by the railway company upon a highway.

A stipulation in an agreement between a county corporation and the railway company which deals in several respects with the entire line of an electric railway, that the company may construct, put in, and maintain such switches, and turn-outs, as may from time to time be found necessary for the operating of the company's line of railway on a named street, is to be construed as of general application to the whole of the line upon the street named and not merely to the line of extension of the railway on that street which the agreement authorized.

RIGHTS IN, AND USE OF, STREETS AND HIGHWAYS.

Paragraph (b) of s. 8 of the Railway Act, 1906, purporting to subject to the Dominion Railway Act the through traffic upon any railway or street railway authorized by special Act of a provincial legislature which connects with a Dominion railway, although such provincial railway or street railway had not been declared by Dominion statute to be a work for the general advantage of Canada, is ultra vires of the Parliament of Canada.

ALTERATION OF ROUTE — MUNICIPAL CONSENT.

The Toronto & York Radial R. Co., by the terms of its franchise and by legislation, is authorized to deflect its line from Yonge St. Toronto, to a private right of way owned by it; the deflection is for the purpose of enabling it to operate the railway already located and constructed, and therefore municipal consent is not necessary.

REPAIR OF ROADWAY — "TRACKS" — POWERS OF RAILWAY BOARD.

The obligation imposed upon a street railway company by its agreement with a municipality, that the former should "keep clean and in proper repair that portion of the travelled road between the rails, and for eighteen inches on either side thereof," does not extend to the doing of works which would give the roadway between the rails a new character, and the word "track" in s. 3 of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board Amendment Act, 1910, does not include the roadway between the rails, under which the Board has no jurisdiction to order the street railway company to pave that part of a road used by the railway.

Under ss. 21, 22 of the Ontario Railway Municipal Board Act, R.S.O. 1914, c. 186, the defendant company is liable for expense incurred by the plaintiff in removing snow and ice from the streets of the city, which it was the duty of the defendant company to remove. The refusal of the plaintiff's engineer to instruct the defendant company as to where such snow should be deposited does not release it from its liability for non-removal.

(§ 11-15) — NEGLIGENCE — ESCAPE OF ELECTRIC CURRENT — JURISDICTION OF COMMISSIONER — APPEALS FROM — CONSTITUTIONALITY — APPOINTIVE POWERS.

On the hearing of this appeal five chief points were considered:—(1) Was the appellant company liable for damage resulting from its negligence, (2) was it liable aside from negligence, (3) was the order of the commissioner within his powers, in directing certain specific things to be done, (4) is the statute intra vires the legislature, or does it conflict in part with s. 91 of the B.N.A. Act, 1867, (5) can the Supreme Court hear, on an appeal under the statute, an objection to the jurisdiction of the commissioner, on the ground that the part of the statute which provides for his appointment is ultra vires, or is that a point of law as to which the decision of the commissioner cannot be appealed from? The commissioner decided that the company was liable for negligence, and the effect of the equal division of the Judges of Appeal was, of course, to leave his judgment undisturbed. The general effect of the marked difference of opinion is to leave unsettled all the questions.

(§ III A—20)—TRACKS—ALTERATION OF GRADE—MUNICIPAL REGULATION.

Where the pattern of rails laid by a street railway company is approved by the municipal authorities, a removal of the tracks by the municipality for the purpose of altering the grade of the street does not give it authority to order the company to replace them with rails of a different pattern, but it may require the company to keep its tracks level with the altered grade on a sufficient foundation, although it cannot require the use of any particular foundation.

(§ III A—20)—BY MUNICIPALITY—GROOVED RAIL—NEGLECT—NUISANCE.

The use of a grooved rail at street intersections by a municipal corporation authorized by statute to build and operate a street railway, is not negligence, such a rail being in common use and necessary for its purpose. Neither, in the use of such a rail, can the corporation be deemed to maintain a public nuisance, for the legislature, in authorizing the construction and operation of the railway,, must be taken to have authorized the use of such rails as were necessary for its reasonable operation.

A tramway conductor who permits a woman to enter the car during disorder or riot, makes the tramway company liable; and if in the tumult the woman receives a blow which causes her a miscarriage, the company is liable for the damages which ensue. A miscarriage resulting from a fall is not too remote an injury to entitle the victim recourse; it is a direct injury which gives a right to compensation. There is nothing contradictory in a jury's verdict declaring that a woman was injured as the result of a wound inflicted on her by the conductor in pushing her back, and the fault of the company consisted in the conductor allowing the victim to get into the car when there was a brawl; the first act being the cause of the accident, the second is the fault of the company. able fault for which the tramways company is responsible, due to the negligence of the motorman to diminish his speed. Acts which would not have constituted an inexcusable fault if the attention of the employer had not been called to them, become such fault if, for the purpose of economy and increase of its profits, it has neglected to take measures which were pointed out to it for the protection of its employees or the public. A plaintiff suing in damages by reason of a collision at a street crossing can give evidence of several accidents having already occurred at that place, and that the defendant had done nothing to prevent them, an inscription in law made to such evidence will be refused.

DAMAGES—NEGLIGENCE—JURY — ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS—MEANING OF UNCERTAIN—NEW TRIAL—COUNTY COURT — NEW TRIAL ORDERED AT CLOSE OF HEARING—JURISDICTION—COSTS.

In an action in the county court for damages for injuries sustained from a fall when alighting from a street car, the plaintiff claimed that after the car had stopped at its usual stopping place at a road crossing, it started again before she had got down from the step and threw her to the ground. The evidence of the conductor on the car was that she stepped off the car as it was slowing down and before it had reached the crossing. The jury found the defendant guilty of negligence and the plaintiff not guilty of contributory negligence, but in answering a question as to what the defendant's negligence was, stated "in allowing plaintiff to alight while car in motion as claimed to be by conductor." The Trial Judge ordered a new trial. Held, on appeal (1) that in view of the uncertainty of the meaning of the jury's answer as to what the defendant's negligence was, coupled with the finding that the plaintiff was not guilty of contributory negligence, there should be a new trial. (2) That the Trial Judge in ordering a new trial at the close of the case, was acting without jurisdiction. (3) That the appellant, although obtaining an order for a new trial, having failed in all its grounds of appeal and the respondent having an order he did not ask for, there is good cause for disposing of the costs otherwise than following the event, and the order should be costs in the cause.

The refusal of a conductor of a street railway to change a $5 bill, which was offered by a passenger to permit the latter to pay his fare, and at the same time warning the passenger that he should either pay or leave the car, does not constitute an injury which will give the passenger a right of action for damages against the company, as responsible for the act of its employees. The company will be held to change a reasonable amount not exceeding $2 but it will not be held to change $5 or any other bill of a greater amount which the passenger may offer in payment.

DUTY WHEN APPROACHING A CROSSING.

It is quite a frequent and expected practice for the public to cross a street behind a car stopped at a corner of a street. This crossing being dangerous on account of a car which may be coming in the opposite direction, it ought to be the object of special precaution on the part of the employees of the company. And a car passing another car at rest, discharging passengers, ought to go at such a speed as to enable it to be stopped almost instantly. And a motorman, at a moment when, by the presence of another car at rest, is unable to see persons approaching from the other side of the street, ought to keep his attention absolutely riveted so as to be able to avoid any danger which might arise.

NEGLIGENCE—BRAKES ON CARS RELEASED BY CHILDREN.

A company which, by its employees, without the authority of the owners of a railway, moves cars placed on a track at the top of a grade for the purpose of being unloaded further down the grade, and merely hand brakes them, without securely air braking and blocking them, assumes the risk of the cars being started down the grade by mischievous boys releasing the brakes, and is responsible for all resulting damage to life or property.

REAR END COLLISION.

Where it appears from plaintiff's own evidence that he was familiar with a rule of the railway company calling for a five minute interval between cars and he, as motorman of a car, failed to observe that rule, which failure on his part caused a collision with a car ahead, a verdict by the jury in his favour will be set aside and the action dismissed on appeal.

(§ III B—28)—COLLISION WITH AUTOMOBILE—THEATRES—SPEED.

Running a street car at a high rate of speed at a place where people were leaving a theatre, thereby colliding with an automobile proceeding out from thereabouts, is negligence for which the railway company is responsible; where both are at fault the company may be condemned to pay half of the damages claimed.

Fairbanks v. Montreal Street R. Co., 31 D.L.R. 728.

ACCIDENT AT STREET CROSSING—EXCESSIVE SPEED OF CAR.

It is actionable negligence to run a tram-car toward an intersecting street at an unlawful rate of speed without attempting to slacken speed on discovering an automobile on or near the track in a position of danger.

COLLISION—SPEED AND SIGNALS—INCOMPETENT MOTORMAN—FINDINGS OF JURY.

Where the only finding of the jury on the question of negligence in a collision case against an electric railway company was, that the defendants were negligent in appointing an incompetent motorman, it is to be assumed that the jury found in defendants' favour on the other questions raised in the case, such as the speed of the car, the failure to sound the gong, the sufficiency of the brakes, and the alleged operation of the car on the wrong track of a double track system.

Mehner v. Winnipeg Electric Co., 21 D.L.R. 786, 25 Man. L.R. 384, 18 Can. Ry. Cas. 179, 8 W.W.R. 517.

RATE OF SPEED.

Where a municipal by-law fixes a limit of speed, e.g., 8 miles an hour, for the street cars of a company, such company is not thereby authorized to run its cars at such maximum speed regardless of conditions and circumstances; hence a speed of not more than 5 or 6 miles an hour may be imprudence on a dark, rainy night on slippery rails and on a dimly lighted street, and if such car causes injury to a person crossing at the intersection of streets the company will be liable in damages.

Montreal Street R. Co. v. Conant, 7 D.L.R. 261, 14 Can. Ry. Cas. 305, 22 Que. K.B. 212, 19 Rev. Leg. 71.

EXCESSIVE SPEED AND LACK OF WARNING—CROSSING STREET WITH REASONABLE CARE.

Where the substance of the jury's findings in an action against a street railway for running down and killing a foot passenger crossing the street, is that the death was caused by negligence in operating their car at an excessive rate of speed and in failing to give due warning of the approach of the car, and that the deceased, having looked up and down the street and seen no car, had exercised reasonable care, judgment must be entered for the plaintiff, if there was evidence upon which reasonable men might find, as the jury did, that defendants were guilty of negligence and that the deceased had exercised reasonable care. [Cooper v. London Street Ry. Co., 9 D.L.R. 368, 15 Can. Ry. Cas. 24, 4 O.W.N. 623, applied.]

Ramsay v. Toronto R. Co., 17 D.L.R. 220, 30 O.L.R. 127, 17 Can. Ry. Cas. 6.

EXCESSIVE SPEED—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE—CAUSA CAUSANS.

A carriage driven by plaintiff was overtaken and run into by one of the defendant's tram cars, with the result that plaintiff was severely injured and his carriage damaged. The Trial Judge found that the car was being run at an excessive rate of speed under the circumstances, but that plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence in that he did not look or listen to see whether a car was approaching, and that the motorman did everything possible after he became aware of the danger to avert the accident, and dismissed plaintiff's action. Held, allowing plaintiff's appeal. The accident was wholly due to the negligence of defendant and there was no evidence of contributory negligence on the part of plaintiff. Assuming plaintiff to have been guilty of contributory negligence the decisive cause of the accident was the excessive speed at which defendant's car was running as the result of which the motorman was disabled from avoiding the accident after he saw that it was imminent.

Morris v. Halifax Electric Tramway, 59 N.S.R. 451.

(§ III B—29)—STOPPING POINTS FOR BOARDING CAR—SIGNALS.

If a person desirous to get on a car signals a motorman to stop at a place other than at regular stopping point, this latter is not obliged to pay attention to him. But if the motorman returns the signal, and slackens the speed of the car, he thereby assumes the obligation of seeing that the passenger is safely embarked; if he starts the car before the passenger is safely aboard and the passenger sustain injury, the tramways company is liable for all damages suffered.

McGill v. Montreal Tramways Co., 49 Que. S.C. 326. [Affirmed 30 D.L.R. 487, 53 Can. S.C.R. 390.]

DANGEROUS PLACING OF POLE — WANT OF LIGHTS—COLLISION.

A street railway company is not liable for injuries resulting from a collision of an automobile driven at night with a wire pole erected between the tracks, where the placing of the pole was done in pursuance of a municipal by-law and under the supervision of the city engineer, and there being no municipal regulation as to lighting the pole.

RIDING ON PLATFORM—PLATFORM PART OF CAR.

Dynes v. B.C. Electric R. Co., 15 B.C.R. 429.

(§ III B—31)—EQUIPMENT OF CARS.

A street railway company is obliged to use the best known appliances to conduct its business with safety to the public, and the use of the ratchet brake instead of the more modern electric air brake is in itself a fault.

Edmunds v. Montreal Street R. Co., 8 D.L.R. 772, 15 Can. Ry. Cas. 19.

UNUSUAL JOLTING OF CAR—DUTY OF SERVANTS IN CHARGE—NEGLIGENCE—INJURY—DAMAGES—EVIDENCE.

If there is unusual jolting or bumping of a street car it is the duty of the servants in charge of the car to ascertain why the bumping is going on. Failure to do this is negligence for which the company is liable in case of injury to a passenger, caused by the sudden stopping of the car, owing to the falling of a brake-shoe. Where there is enough in the evidence to make it a fair question for the jury whether the injury was the cause of the disease or merely aggravated it, or whether the injury and the disease were in anyway connected, there is sufficient evidence on which they may properly find a verdict for the injured person.

Scott v. Toronto R. Co., 48 D.L.R. 569, 45 O.L.R. 511.

NEGLIGENCE—LOOSE TROLLEY ROPE.

Allowing a rope attached to a trolley pole to hang loose, and capable of being blown out by the wind and entangling persons waiting for cars, is negligence, for which a person injured in consequence thereof may recover.

The obligation of a street railway company to a passenger who has not completed his journey but who has alighted for the purpose of transferring to another car is greater than it would be to a passenger who has completed his journey, but even as to such a passenger the company is bound to provide a stopping place at which the passenger can proceed to the sidewalk without having to pass through a deep pool of water or subjecting him to the danger before he has reached the sidewalk, assuming that he has not unnecessarily delayed in crossing, of being struck by a car when swinging around a curve existing at the stopping place.

DUTY AS TO PERSONS ON OR NEAR TRACK.

A motorman seeing a vehicle driving at right angles to his track, as if to cross, is justified in not reversing his controller until he sees that the driver of the vehicle does not intend to stop at the track and allow the car to pass, but the moment he perceives that there is danger it is his duty to act as promptly as he can to avert the danger.

DUTY ON SEEING PERSON OR VEHICLE ON OR NEAR TRACK.

It is the duty of a street railway company to run its electric cars on city streets under such control and at such rate of speed and accompanied by such warning, that the motorman will be enabled to take reasonable precautions to avoid a collision when an emergency arises by a vehicle necessarily turning upon the tracks in a crowded street.

DUTY ON SEEING PERSON NEAR TRACK — WARNINGS — ULTIMATE NEGLIGENCE.

A motorman approaching a crossing, who has given the statutory warnings, is not bound to give additional warnings to persons approaching it, unless he had reason to believe that they were oblivious of his presence and of danger in crossing the track; his failure to do so, in the circumstances, does not constitute ultimate negligence.

(§ III B-35)—NEGLECTANCE TOWARDS PASSENGERS.

The fact that the motorman and the conductor exchanged places on a street car in contravention of the company's rules, and that the conductor so permitted to drive the car allowed it to collide with another car either from negligence or incompetence, may form the basis of an action by a passenger for the resulting personal injuries he received.

INJURY TO PASSENGER — FALL CAUSED BY BREAKING OF STRAP — PRIMA FACIE NEGLIGENCE — RES IPSA LOQUITUR — ABSENCE OF EVIDENCE OF INSPECTION — FINDING OF JURY — NONDIRECTION — NEW TRIAL — HUSBAND JOINED AS PLAINTIFF.

The fact that the strap by which the plaintiff was supporting herself, standing in the car, broke when called on to bear the strain, cast upon the company the burden of shewing that the breaking was not due to any negligence on its part. The case was one for the application of the rule res ipsa loquitur. [McPhee v. Toronto, 9 O.W.N. 150; Sangster v. Eaton, 25 O.R. 78, 21 A.R. (Ont.) 625; Eaton Co. v. Sangster, 24 Can. S.C.R. 708, and Toronto R. Co. v. Fleming, 47 Can. S.C.R. 612, followed.] The company adduced evidence for the purpose of rebutting the prima facie presumption which arose from the breaking of the strap, but made no attempt to shew that the strap had been inspected or tested, or that any system of inspection or testing was in use, nor to shew how long the strap which broke had been in use. The jury should have been instructed that the burden of rebutting the presumption of negligence which arose from the breaking of the strap was upon the company, and that unless that burden had been satisfied the plaintiffs were entitled to succeed; and, the jury not having been so instructed, and their findings as to negligence being unsatisfactory, the ends of justice would be best served by setting aside the judgment and directing a new trial.

(§ III B-36)—INJURY TO DOG—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

For the plaintiff suing an electric railway company for having run down and killed a valuable dog owned by him, to have allowed the dog to follow the rig in which he was driving along the street car track in a city at a distance of 100 feet or more is such contributory negligence as will disentitle him to recover where the jury has found that the plaintiff did not have his dog in proper control while on the street.

Lucas v. Toronto, 22 D.L.R. 601, 8 O.W.N. 253.

(§ III B-37)—OPERATION OF STREET RAILWAY—FRIGHTENING HORSES—DAMAGES—QUANTUM—FINDINGS.

The defendants were held by the Trial Judge liable in damages to the plaintiff for injury to a team of mares, owned by him, which were frightened upon the highway by the negligent operation of an electric car of the defendants and injured; and the damages were assessed at $100. Upon the defendants' appeal, the court en banc refused to interfere with the finding of negligence; and upon the plaintiffs' cross-appeal to increase the damages, the court also declined, upon the evidence, to vary the Trial Judge's assessment.

C. CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

(§ III C-40)—BOARDING CAR WHILE IN MOTION—WARNINGS AGAINST.

Disregard of a warning prominently displayed at the point of entrance to a street car that persons should not get on the car while it is moving, may constitute contributory negligence on the part of the passenger which will prevent his recovering damages for injury to his foot by having it caught in the step riser which was defectively and improperly built, if it appears that the plaintiff's foot could not have slipped into the opening left in the riser had he boarded the car when it was stationary.

Black v. Calgary, 24 D.L.R. 55, 31 W.L.R. 191, 8 W.W.R. 646.

ULTIMATE NEGLIGENCE—EXCESSIVE SPEED.
Running a street car at an excessive speed can only become ultimate negligence for which there is liability notwithstanding the plaintiff's contributory negligence, in cases where the motorman could, or should have, avoided the accident, but failed to do so.

BOARDING MOVING CAR—JOLT—VERDICT—EVIDENCE.

Plaintiff, a passenger, got on the lower step of one of the defendant company's trolleys. She was warned by the conductor not to get off until the car stopped, but was thrown off, as she claimed, by a jolt of the car. Assuming such jolt to have occurred there was nothing to show that it was not one of the ordinary incidents of operating the car and no negligence on the part of the company was disclosed. Held, that plaintiff was not entitled to recover damages for injuries sustained and that the verdict rendered by the jury in plaintiff's favour, contrary to instructions of the Trial Judge, must be set aside.

COLLISION WITH VEHICLE—ULTIMATE NEGLIGENCE.

In a personal injury action arising from a street car colliding with a rig, where both the plaintiff and the defendants' motorman were guilty of negligence, each in not seeing the danger and avoiding the injury of a collision, if it appears that when the motorman first saw the impending danger it was too late to prevent the injury, the plaintiff's action fails.

COLLISION AT CROSSING—FAILURE TO LOOK—INJURY AVOIDABLE NOTWITHSTANDING CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

An inoperative brake on a car which is incapable of arresting its movement when running at an excessive speed will render the railway company liable for personal injuries resulting from a collision of the car with a vehicle at a level crossing, notwithstanding the contributory negligence of the injured in not looking out to see whether the road was clear.

COLLISION—ULTIMATE NEGLIGENCE.

The failure of a motorman to avoid a collision, when he could have done so, after seeing that the plaintiff was about to cross, is the ultimate negligence and the proximate cause of the accident, despite the plaintiff's contributory negligence in failing to look. Driving an automobile contrary to the rule of the road as required by a municipal traffic by-law, particularly the reckless proceeding out from behind a street car in a diagonal course thereby hiding from view a street car approaching from an opposite direction, constitutes contributory negligence which will preclude recovery for injuries sustained in consequence of a collision with the street car.

(§ III C—47)—PERSON CROSSING TRACK.

Where a street car approaches a stopping place at an excessive speed, and there are persons waiting to board the car, and the car slackens speed as though to stop, but does not stop, and the highway is in such a condition as to demand the close attention of any one making use of it, an attempt to cross in front of the car does not necessarily constitute contributory negligence, but the question must be left to the jury.

INJURY TO PERSON CROSSING TRACK—FAILURE TO LOOK FOR CARS.

Failure to look for approaching cars before crossing a street car track will defeat an action for the death of a pedestrian who, had he used ordinary care, would have seen the car that struck him, which could not have been stopped by the motorman after discovering the peril of the deceased in time to avoid striking him. [London Street R. Co. v. Brown, 31 Can. S.C.R. 642, applied.]

PERSON CROSSING TRACK TO BOARD CAR—QUESTION FOR JURY.

A judgment against a street railway company for injuries sustained by the plaintiff by being struck by a street car while crossing a track to board another car, will not be disturbed on appeal on the ground that the plaintiff's negligence contributed to his injury, where, under all the circumstances of the case, the question of the defendant's negligence as well as the plaintiff's contributory negligence, were proper questions for the jury. [Finegan v. London & N.W.R. Co., 5 T.L.R. 598; Ruddy v. London, & S.W.R. Co., 8 T.L.R. 658, and Toronto R. Co. v. King, [1908] A.C. 260, followed.]

AT CROSSINGS—LOOKING BOTH WAYS.

A person about to cross a railway track is under a duty not to be guilty of negligence, but what is the exercise of reasonable care is a question of fact to be decided by the jury, according to the facts of the case, and failure to look just before crossing a street railway track is not, as a matter of law, negligence per se.

PERSON CROSSING TRACK—SCOPE OF "STOP, LOOK AND LISTEN" DOCTRINE.

Where a person on foot is about to cross a street-railway track, having taken the precaution to look once and having reasonably formed the opinion that it is safe to cross the track because an approaching car is at such a distance that, if operated in a usual and proper manner, the pedestrian can safely cross: the Trial Judge is in error, if he states the law as imposing a duty to look again, or continue looking and keeping the car in sight, as a condition precedent to any right of recovery.

(§ III C—48)—COLLISION WITH VEHICLE—LOOKOUT—LIGHTS.

In an action for damages because of a collision between an oil tank and a tram car:—Held, while the drivers of both vehicles were probably negligent in not keeping a sufficient lookout up to the time when they found themselves in danger of collision, and, moreover, the plaintiff's wagon was not carrying the light required by by-law, there were no factors of excessive speed or defective appliance, there was no subsequent negligence on the part of the motorman.

ACCIDENT AT STREET CROSSING—EXCESSIVE SPEED OF CAR—FAILURE TO SOUND GONG—COLLISION WITH AUTOMOBILE.

That the driver of an automobile, when about to cross a street railway track at a street intersection where his view was obstructed by a fence at the edge of the sidewalk, erected about a building in course of construction, could have seen an approaching car had he looked a second sooner, does not establish contributory negligence sufficient to defeat a recovery for a collision with the car, which was running, in violation of a municipal regulation, at a high rate of speed without its gong being sounded. [Toronto R. Co. v. King, [1908] A.C. 260, applied.]

ACCIDENT AT STREET CROSSING—EXCESSIVE SPEED OF CAR—COLLISION WITH AUTOMOBILE.

Contributory negligence sufficient to prevent a recovery against a street railway company for a collision with the plaintiff's automobile, is not shown from the facts that, on approaching an intersecting street, the plaintiff reduced the speed of his automobile so as to avoid a slowly moving westbound car without discovering an eastbound car approaching at an unlawful rate of speed until his automobile was near or on the track, and in the emergency, he increased speed and attempted to pass in front of both cars, when his automobile was struck by the eastbound car, the speed of which was not slackened after the motorman discovered the plaintiff's danger.

DRIVERS OF VEHICLES AND PERSONS THEREIN.

It is contributory negligence for the driver of a horse-drawn vehicle not to look, immediately before attempting to cross a street railway crossing to see that he has plenty of time to cross in safety and before any properly operated car can approach dangerously close to him.

Carleton v. Regina, 1 D.L.R. 778, 5 S.L.R. 90, 20 W.L.R. 305, 1 W.W.R. 953.

DRIVER OF MOTOR CAR—NEGLECT OF—NEGLECT OF STREET CAR CONDUCTOR PROXIMATE CAUSE OF INJURY—DAMAGES.

The negligence of the plaintiff in misjudging the speed of an oncoming street car will not prevent him from recovering damages for injuries caused by his car being hit by such street car, where the real proximate and decisive cause of the injury was that the motorman was running the car at such an excessive rate of speed that he could not stop the car within a reasonable distance and avoid the result of the plaintiff's negligence which might have been anticipated.

RESPONSIBILITY—TRAMWAY—COLLISION—AUTOMOBILE—IMPRUDENCE OF MOTORMAN—C.C. ART. 1053.

There is negligence which gives a right to damages against the defendants when its motorman sees, or is able to see, in front of his car an automobile which was forced to cross his track in order to avoid striking a rig standing near the sidewalk, but the motorman does not stop or moderate his car, and a collision occurs between the car and the automobile.

Massé v. Montreal Tramways Co., 25 Rev. Leg. 246.

RESPONSIBILITY—TRAMWAYS—ORDINARY VEHICLE—PRIVILEGE—C.C. ART. 1053.

The Montreal Tramways Company has no greater right for its trams in the streets of Montreal than the drivers of ordinary vehicles. Under the city by-laws, carriages going north and south have the right-of-way over those going east and west.

Rondeau v. Montreal Tramways Co., 25 Rev. Leg. 403.

LIABILITY—COLLISION—MAINTENANCE OF RAILS—MUNICIPAL BY-LAW—COMMON FAULT—C.C. QUE. ART. 1053, R.S.Q. 1909, ART. 6605.

Under art. 6605, R.S.Q. 1909, a tramway company is bound to maintain, at its own expense, unencumbered and in good state of repair, the part of the streets between the rails and 18 inches on each side, unless otherwise directed by the municipal council. When a municipal by-law limits this liability to 6 inches, and such by-law is replaced by another which does not make any mention of such maintenance, the common-law obligation continues; and the tramway company which is sued for damages for an accident caused on account of default in maintaining the street at this place, cannot call the city in warranty as having charge of maintaining the rest of the street. There is a common fault in a collision accident, resulting from the neglect of a tramway company to keep its way in good repair and from that of an automobile driver who, seeing this bad condition of the street becomes stuck in the rails on the approach of a tramcar.

 INCITING TO GO ON STRIKE—INDUSTRIAL DIS-PUTES—STRIKE REARRANGED WITHOUT DEMAND FOR BETTER TERMS.

To constitute the criminal offence of inciting to strike under the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, 1907, Can., c. 20, ss. 56, 60, there must have been a "dispute" under s. 2 (e) on account of which the strike was incited; the offence may consist of inciting miners to go on strike after the strike has started although there had been no previous demand by the miners upon their employers for different conditions or wages, but it is not made a crime under that Act to incite the commencement of a strike before any demand for better terms of employment.

(§ I-1)—VENDEE'S DEFAULT—RIGHT OF PURCHASER FROM VENDEE.

Where the defendant, a vendee, in a contract for the sale of land, without the assent of his vendor as the contract required, sold the benefit of his contract to the plaintiff, but the original vendor purported to cancel the original contract for the defendant's default, the plaintiff will be subrogated to the defendant's rights in so far as concerns money paid by the plaintiff to the defendant and by the latter paid to the original vendor, and in so far as concerns any relief against the forfeiture of the money so paid.

SATISFACTION OF LIEN BY ONE OF SEVERAL DEVISEES—RIGHTS AGAINST OTHERS.

Where one of the devisees, under a devise to several persons separately of certain properties to each, has paid more than his equitable share of a lien or charge in favour of a third person which by the terms of the will is imposed jointly upon all the properties in priority to the devisees, such devisee is entitled to be subrogated as against the others to the claim of the lienor in respect of the excess paid over and above his rightful share.

Gass v. Dickie, 22 D.L.R. 521, 48 N.S.R. 482.

II. As to loan.

CONVENTIONAL SUBROGATION—DEBT—SECURITIES, ART. 1155 C. C. (QUE.).

Under art. 1155, C. C. (Que.) subrogation by a person who pays the debt of another to his creditor doubtless carries with it the security which that debtor has deposited with his creditor for the payment of his debt. However, this principle does not apply where the debt paid is not an indebtedness of the debtor, who borrows the money, but that of his vendor who transferred, previously to the sale, a balance of price to the creditor as collateral security. René v. Berman, 56 Que. S. C. 460.

III. On payment of debt or note.

(§ III-10)—DEPRECIATION OF SHARES—PAYMENT OF LOSS BY—RIGHT TO SHARES.

Trustees who make good a loss in respect of shares of stock held by them in breach of trust, until they became valueless, are entitled to the benefit of the securities.

Re Nicholls v. Wildman, 14 D.L.R. 244, 29 O.L.R. 206.

Where certain directors of a company personally paid off a claim against the company secured by collaterals (the property of the company), but, instead of taking over such collaterals to themselves, had them transferred by the creditor then being paid off to certain other creditors of the company, who were pressing for payment, as collateral security for their claims, in the bona fide belief that such arrangement was in the best interests both of the general creditors and of the company, such directors are properly allowed a preferential claim, in subsequent winding-up proceedings taken on the company's insolvency, upon the proceeds of such collateral securities so far as realized by the liquidator in excess of the amount collected in payment of their claims by the creditors who held such collaterals, but are not entitled to any preferential lien upon the general assets of the company in respect of such advances.

Re Okotoks Milling Co., 8 D.L.R. 76.

UPON PAYMENT OF NOTE—PRINCIPAL AND AGENT.

An agent who, having endorsed an instrument as surety to his principal (the vendor), pays the amount thereof upon default of the maker, is subrogated by law in the rights of the vendor, and is entitled to the ownership of the moveable sold under such agreement.

Dorval v. Carrier, 51 Que. S.C. 343.

ON PAYMENT OF DAMAGES—LANDLORD AND TENANT.

An amount paid for damages by an owner, whose house was burned, to a neighbour, to indemnify him for injury caused by water, cannot be claimed by such owner from his lessee, charged with being in fault, without subrogation of the rights of the neighbour.

Séminaire de Saint Sulpice v. Frothingham, 51 Que. S.C. 214.

V. As to mortgages.

(§ V—20)—RELOAN OF BORROWED MONEY—EQUITIES.

Where the father mortgages his property to lend the proceeds to his son and takes from the latter a mortgage on the son's land for the amount of the loan and a prior indebtedness, and the two mortgages are upon different terms of payment, the transaction negatives the theory that there was an agreement by the son to indemnify the father from the mortgage made by the latter nor is such an agreement to be presumed because of the son having consented to apply his payments by paying them directly to the father's mortgagee; and on the father's death his devise of the incumbered lands or a transferee from such devise has no right to subrogation in respect of the security held by the father against the son.

Bancroft v. Milligan, 16 D.L.R. 648, 30 O.L.R. 113.

ASSIGNMENT—NOTICE.

Subrogation to the position of a mortgagee will not be ordered where the party seeking the order has been guilty of negligence in not giving notice of the assignment of an agreement of sale of the lands covered by the mortgage.

SUBSTITUTION.

(Que. Law). See Wills.

REVOCABILITY—GIFT INTER VIVOS—REGISTRATION—RENEWING.

Under the authority of legislation prior to the Civil Code, a substitution, created by donation inter vivos in favour of children of the institute, is revocable by the mutual consent of the donor and donee, notwithstanding the prior acceptance of the latter. The contrary provision, contained in the fourth paragraph of art. 930 C. C. (Que.) is new law, even though not placed within brackets. Registration of a substitution need not be renewed after the bringing into force of the cadastral survey in order to preserve the rights of the substitutes.

Proulx v. Le Blanc, 27 Que. K.B. 103.

HYPOTHEC — LOAN — INTEREST — WILL — LEGISLATIVE AUTHORIZATION—SUBSTITUTE—MUNICIPAL TAXES.

Although an Act adopted by the Quebec legislature, and a will creating a substitution, authorize the institute to borrow on the real estate substituted, without mentioning that the loan shall be made with interest, it must be construed that the institute is authorized to borrow by affecting the real estate for the payment of the interest. The capital and interest thus borrowed are chargeable to the substitute after the institute's death, both personally and hypothecarily. But they are liable for a sum borrowed by the institute without the assistance of the curator to the substitution. That debt is due by the institute's estate. If the money has been spent on the substituted assets, the recourse of the institute or his heirs against the substitute is governed by arts. 581, 582, 958 C.C. (Que.); that is, the substitutes have the right to have the improvements or greater repairs made by the institute removed; and if it cannot be done without deteriorating the property, they remain the property of the substitutes without indemnity. The debt created by the imposition of a municipal tax, subsequent to the creating of a substitution, cannot in any way be considered as a previous debt, or privileged over the substitutes' right.

(§ I-10)—PROVINCIAL CRIMES—REASONABLE DOUBT.

The principle that an accused person ought not to be convicted unless, upon the whole case, it is shown that he is guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, is applicable to summary conviction proceedings for an offence created by provincial law and punishable thereunder by fine or imprisonment.

R. v. Covert, 34 D.L.R. 662, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 25, 10 A.L.R. 349, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 919.

EVIDENCE.

When the evidence is as consistent with innocence as with guilt, there should not be a conviction.

The King v. Luttrell, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 295.

II. Jurisdiction and duty of magistrate.

Jurisdiction of magistrate to try for offences quashed on certiorari, see Criminal Law, II G-79.

As to petit theft, see Appeal, I-1.

(§ II-20)—PRESENCE OF ACCUSED.

A magistrate has jurisdiction to proceed with the hearing of a charge punishable on summary conviction if the accused is in fact present, although he may have been brought there by irregular means, if the magistrate has jurisdiction over the person and offence. [The Queen v. Hughes, 25 Q.B.D. 249, and Ex parte Giberson, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 537, 34 N.B.R. 538, applied; Re Paul, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 161, 7 D.L.R. 25, disapproved.]

R. v. McDougall; Ex parte Goguen, 35 D.L.R. 269, 44 N.B.R. 369, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 423.

POWERS OF MAGISTRATE—LAW AND FACTS.

The entering of a conviction by a magistrate when he has no legal power to do so and without the hearing of evidence is to be distinguished from the entering of a conviction after a hearing and because of a misinterpretation of the general law applicable to the case.

R. v. Richmond, 39 D.L.R. 117, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 89, 12 A.L.R. 133, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 1200.

WAR REVENUE ACT — ESSENTIALS OF OFFENCE.

A summary conviction, even upon a plea of guilty, must be set aside if the complaint does not set out the essential ingredient of the offence, e. g., under the Special War Revenue Act, 1915, that the accused sold the unstamped goods to a consumer, and not merely that the accused neglected to affix the stamps to certain goods as required by the Act.

Ex parte Richard, 30 D.L.R. 364, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 166.

TRIAL—CERTIFICATE OF DISMISSAL.

Where on the trial of summary conviction proceedings the evidence produced is insufficient to prove the charge, the duty of the magistrate is to dismiss it and grant a certificate of the dismissal as provided by Cr. Code.

R. v. Chew Deb., 9 D.L.R. 266, 18 B.C.R. 23, 23 W.L.R. 308, 3 W.W.R. 854.

TERRITORIAL JURISDICTION OF MAGISTRATE—PROVING LOCALITY OF OFFENCE.

A summary conviction will be quashed where there was no evidence before the magistrate that the locality at which the offence was committed was within his territorial jurisdiction, the only reference to the place of the offence being in such general terms as "the landing" and "the coal company's offices."

R. v. Picard, 11 D.L.R. 423, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 250, 3 W.W.R. 1007.

SUMMARY TRIAL—JURISDICTION WITHOUT CONSENT.

The absolute jurisdiction of a police magistrate in Saskatchewan, of a city having a population of over 2,500, is retained under Cr. Code, ss. 776, 777 as to the offences specified in s. 773 (including that of unlawful wounding), and the consent of the accused to summary trial is required by ss. 777, 778, only in those cases in which there is additional jurisdiction under s. 777. [R. v. Hayward, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 399, 5 O.L.R. 65, applied.]

Re Worrell, 21 D.J.R. 522, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 92, 8 S.L.R. 140, 8 W.W.R. 478, 30 W.L.R. 915, affirming 21 D.L.R. 519, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 88.

TERRITORIAL JURISDICTION OF MAGISTRATE—INCONVENIENT PLACE OF TRIAL.

Where, as in Alberta, justices of the peace are appointed with territorial jurisdiction extending over the entire province, an objection that the charge was not laid before the nearest justice will not be a ground for quashing the summary conviction unless there has been a gross abuse of authority, in compelling the attendance of the accused at a far-distant and inconvenient place of trial, notwithstanding the availability of a justice at a convenient place of trial, under circumstances amounting to a denial of the right of the accused to make his "full answer and defence" (Cr. Code, s. 715).

R. v. Tally, 21 D.L.R. 651, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 449, 8 A.L.R. 453, 7 W.W.R. 1178, 20 W.L.R. 396.

LOCALITY OF OFFENCE—TERRITORIAL JURISDICTION.

Where the depositions already taken before the justice do not supply the defect which makes a summary conviction bad on its face, the justice cannot without the parties being before him and having an opportunity of being heard make up a substituted conviction or amend a defective conviction. [Chatey v. Payne, 1 Q.B. 712, applied.]

R. v. Aikens, 21 D.L.R. 633, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 467, 48 N.S.R. 509.

DEFECTIVE INFORMATION—NONAPPEARANCE OF ACCUSED.

A fatal objection to an information in a summary proceeding cannot be cured by the testimony adduced where the defendant does not appear. [R. v. Hughes, 4 Q.B.D. 614; Turner v. Postmaster-General, 5 B. & S. 756, distinguished.]

Ex parte Monahan; R. v. Hubbard, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 127, 42 N.B.R. 524.

INFORMANT OFFICER IN CHARGE OF ACCUSED.

Where the defendant has had an opportunity of entering upon the full defence of the charge brought against him of selling intoxicating liquor in contravention of law, the fact that the officer who laid the information and the officer to whose custody the accused was committed pending the determination of the charge was one and the same person does not go to the jurisdiction of the magistrate so as to invalidate the conviction under a statute under which certiorari is expressly taken away, ex. gr., the Canada Temperance Act.

Ex parte Richard; R. v. Steeves, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 183, 42 N.B.R. 596.

OBSTRUCTING PEACE OFFICER—MODE OF TRIAL—RIGHT OF ACCUSED TO ELECT.

The offence of obstructing a peace officer in the execution of his duty may be prosecuted and punished before two justices or before any magistrate having the jurisdiction of two justices, under the procedure provided by Part XV. Cr. Code, without the consent of the accused to a summary trial, and such procedure is not controlled by the provisions of Part XVI. requiring such consent. That the procedure for the summary trial of the offence is controlled by Part XVI, and the accused cannot be so tried without having been first put to his election as provided by s. 778, notwithstanding s. 169.

The King v. Folkins; Ex parte McAdam, 27 D.L.R. 32, 43 N.B.R. 538, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 365.

OBSTRUCTING OFFICIAL DUTY—ASSAULT ON CROWN LAND SURVEYOR.

On an information charging that the accused unlawfully and maliciously assaulted and threatened to beat one T., a Crown land surveyor, and prevented him from performing his official duty, the magistrate found the accused guilty as charged and adjudged that he pay the sum of $20 over and above the amount of the damage done, being $13 and the costs, and, in default of the payment of the said several sums and costs of conveying to gaol, he be imprisoned for two months. That, as the obstructing of T. in the discharge of his official duty was not an offence over which the magistrate had jurisdiction on summary conviction, the conviction must be quashed, and could not be amended under s. 1124, Cr. Code.

The King v. Dugas, 43 N.B.R. 443.

COMMITMENT FOR ASSAULT.

Justices of the peace have no jurisdiction under part XVI. to hear a charge of committing an assault occasioning actual bodily harm, contrary to s. 295, Cr. Code, inasmuch as the jurisdiction given to magistrates under s. 773 is a statutory one, and cannot be extended by implication.

R. v. Law, 9 W.W.R. 1075, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 251.

APPEARANCE—REGULARITY OF SUMMONS.

In order to give a magistrate jurisdiction to proceed in default of appearance in a summary conviction matter, there must have been service of a "summons" in conformity with Part XV. Cr. Code; service at different times of a copy of the complaint and of a written notice of the time and place of hearing it is not sufficient although the notice was signed by both the magistrate and the complainant.

Lacasse v. Fortier, 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 87.

PRESENCE OF ACCUSED—IRREGULAR ARREST.

Summary conviction proceedings before a justice are not invalidated by the circumstance that the accused was arrested to be brought before the justice without a warrant in a case where there was no right of arrest without a warrant. [R. v. Hughes, 4 Q.B.D. 614, applied.]

R. v. Hanley, 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 63, 41 O.L.R. 177.

OPPORTUNITY FOR DEFENCE.

An accused person is not deprived of the opportunity of defence by the magistrate inadvertently assuming that the case was closed when the evidence for the prosecution was concluded and thereupon announcing the sentence, if before recording the conviction an opportunity to proceed with the defence was offered to counsel for the accused and he declined.

R. v. Cyr, 38 D.L.R. 601, 12 A.L.R. 320 at p. 325, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 77, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 849, affirming 12 A.L.R. 320, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 1185.

EFFECT OF PENDING CHARGE.

A summary conviction will be quashed for want of jurisdiction if the magistrate, at the time he made the same, had pending before him another information against the accused for a similar offence arising out of the same circumstances and partly tried, and did not dispose of the same before entering upon the hearing.

R. v. McManus, 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 122, [1918] 3 W.W.R. 3.

OPIMUM AND DRUG ACT—CERTIORARI—PLEA OF GUILTY.

Although the Opium and Drug Act, 1-2 Geo. V. (Can.), c. 17, takes away the right to certiorari, proceedings by way of certiorari may be allowed to quash a summary conviction purporting to be made on a plea of guilty of "having opium in his possession without lawful or reasonable excuse" if the accused forthwith, after pleading guilty, and before a conviction was recorded, said to the magistrate that he did not know the contents of the package which he had just received at the time of his arrest. Such statement of the accused was, in effect, a statement of "sufficient cause why he should not be convicted" (Cr. Code, s. 721) and qualified his previous answer of "guilty," and thereafter the magistrate had no jurisdiction to proceed to conviction without taking evidence.

R. v. Richmond, 39 D.L.R. 117, 12 A.L.R. 133, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 89, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 1200.

An appearance in a summary conviction matter waives all irregularities in the summons and even the want of a summons.

The King v. Mitchell, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 113, 24 O.L.R. 324, 19 O.W.R. 588.

A summary conviction under a by-law which prohibits the use of "abusive, insulting and provoking language" upon a public street sufficiency designates the offence under the Summary Convictions Act, R.S.N.S. 1900, c. 161, if the conviction sets out the words used and declares their use to be contrary to such by-law, although the conviction does not in terms state that the words were "abusive, insulting and provoking."

The King v. Elderman, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 445.

JURISDICTION OF JUVENILE COURT.

A Juvenile Court has jurisdiction to make a summary conviction for the offence of corrupting a child under Cr. Code, s. 220 A. (1918, Can. c. 16, s. 1.)

R. v. Ducker, 31 Can. Cr. Cas. 357, 45 O.L.R. 466.

POST OFFICE ACT—LIMITATIONS.

Cr. Code, s. 1142 applies to limit the period within which summary proceedings can be taken for the offence of using cancelled postage stamps in contravention of the Post Office Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 66.

R. v. Gourlay, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 23, 9 O.W.N. 372.

APPEARANCE—SUMMONS—SIGNATURE.

A summary conviction made on default of defendant's appearance to an alleged copy of summons served upon him may be set aside if it be shown that the summons was not signed by the magistrate and that in consequence the defendant had not been legally cited to appear.

Lamontagne v. Lanetot, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 449.

NO EVIDENCE OF OFFENCE—NO JURISDICTION TO CONVICT—PROHIBITION.

When there is no evidence of the commission of the offence charged appearing on the record of proceedings at the trial of a summary conviction matter under Part XV. Cr. Code, the magistrate exceeds his jurisdiction in pronouncing a conviction and a writ of prohibition may issue from a superior court to restrain the execution of the same.

McBrien v. Recorder's Court, 31 Can. Cr. Cas. 352.

(§ II—21)—MALICIOUS DAMAGE—CLAIM OF RIGHT.

The magistrate's jurisdiction to try a charge under s. 539 Cr. Code (for malicious damage generally) is ousted under s. 540 only if the accused proves that he did the act complained of under a fair and reasonable supposition of right, which is a question for the magistrate to determine even if it involves some investigation of title to lands. Ex parte Murphy; R. v. Mullins, 38 D.L.R. 625, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 1.

WITHDRAWAL OF IRREGULAR CHARGE.

If a statute provides that summary prosecutions for a certain offence shall be brought only in the name of certain officials, the trial upon a prosecution in contravention of that restriction would be a nullity; the accused in such case has not been placed in jeopardy so as to bar a second prosecution instituted by the proper official after the first prosecutor had consented to the charge being withdrawn. [Davis v. Morton, [1913] 2 K.B. 479, applied.]

SUBSTITUTIONAL SERVICE.

The court will quash a summary conviction as made without jurisdiction on being satisfied by affidavit that the defendant was out of the province from a date prior to the laying of the information until after the hearing and had not authorized the appearance of counsel who had applied on his behalf for an adjournment, although the summons had been served substitutionally on defendant's wife at his last place of abode (Cr. Code, s. 658). [Ex parte Donovan, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 286, applied.]

UNDER SPECIAL STATUTE—TRIBUNALS SPECIFIED—EXCLUSION OF OTHER TRIBUNALS—MOTOR VEHICLES ACT (QUE.)—RECORDED EX OFFICIO A JUSTICE.

Prosecutions under the Motor Vehicles Act, Que., are competent only before the tribunals specified in R.S.Q. art. 1410, i.e., a judge of the circuit court, a police magistrate or a justice of the peace. Neither a recorder nor the recorder's court has jurisdiction in that respect, and although a recorder in the Province of Quebec is ex officio a justice of the peace, the proceedings under the special authority of the Motor Vehicles Act cannot be entertained by him in the capacity of recorder but only as a justice of the peace. While the Motor Vehicles Act makes applicable to prosecutions thereunder the procedure of Part XV, Cr. Code (summary convictions), that procedure applies only when the proceedings are before a tribunal specified in the Act. Jurisdiction does not thereby attach to other tribunals which under the Code have the powers of a justice as to offences under federal law.

Latendresse v. Piette, 31 Can. Cr. Cas. 248.

(§ II—22)—STATING PLACE OF OFFENCE IN INFORMATION.

An information under the Canada Temperance Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 152, is bad as not disclosing an offence within the magistrate's territorial jurisdiction if it does not specify where the offence took place, although the place of the offence was stated in the summons served upon the defendant; a conviction made on such information in default of the appearance of the defendant thereto must be quashed.

Ex parte Monahan; R. v. Hubbard, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 127, 42 N.B.R. 524.

(§ II—25)—SUMMONS — IRREGULARITY—WAIVER—APPEARANCE.

The defendant's appearance by counsel in answer to a summons in a summary proceeding under Part XV, Cr. Code is equivalent to his personal appearance, and the plea of not guilty entered by counsel for defendant in the latter's absence without objection to an alleged irregularity in the information and proceedings upon which the summons was founded, is a waiver of the irregularity and a submission to the jurisdiction of the justice. III. Procedure.

(§ III—30)—EXAMINATION OF INFORMANT—WAIVER.

The King v. Shaw; Ex parte Kane, 27 D.L.R. 494, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 156.

LEAVE TO WITHDRAW CASE.

On a summary trial, where all the evidence, offered by the prosecution has been heard and the case closed, the prosecutor cannot, upon objection taken that material proof is lacking, withdraw the charge and lay a new information charging the identical offence. The King v. Sweeney, 1 D.L.R. 476; 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 222; 45 N.S.R. 494.

A conviction for selling liquor without a license will be quashed where the magistrate before whom three informations were lodged charging sales to different persons, heard evidence at one time tending to prove sales in the three cases, some of which were not relevant to the case in which the accused was convicted.

R. v. Lapointe, 4 D.L.R. 210, 3 O.W.N. 1469, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 98, 22 O.W.R. 601.

Where a statutory offence is made punishable upon summary conviction and a statutory method of compelling the attendance of the accused is provided, an omission of such statutory method and the illegal arrest of the accused as a means of bringing the accused before the magistrate will constitute a valid objection to a summary conviction obtained as a result of the illegal proceedings, where the irregular procedure was objected to by the accused. [Pears v. Richardson, [1902] 1 K.B. 91, 71 L.J.K.B. 18, applied; and see contra, Re Paul, 7 D.L.R. 24.] Unless the accused who has been brought before a magistrate to answer a charge punishable on summary conviction objects before the magistrate to the illegal method whereby his attendance has been compelled, e. g. by an arrest without warrant where a warrant is essential, the objection is considered as waived.

under it, such an arrest is illegal, and the magistrate before whom the accused is brought in custody without a warrant or summons after such illegal arrest has no jurisdiction to proceed with the trial in the face of defendant's objection then taken that he was not properly before the magistrate. [Re Paul, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 161, 7 D.L.R. 25, and R. v. Davis, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 293, 7 D.L.R. 608, followed.]

TRIAL ON MERITS AFTER CONVICTION QUASHED—NEW SUMMONS.

When judgment is rendered by a justice of the peace imposing a fine upon a chauffeur for driving his automobile while he is intoxicated, and this judgment is quashed by the Superior Court on technical grounds, the complainant cannot continue the prosecution before a magistrate of the district on giving a mere notice to the accused or to his counsel, since the magistrate has no jurisdiction without the consent or acquiescence of the accused:—(a) if there has been no adjournment of the case for several months; (b) if there has been no new summons to the accused, a mere notice not being sufficient; (c) if there has been no proceedings to put him in default and authorizing a trial and the conviction thereon in his absence.

Rhcaume v. Cliche, 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 112, 24 Rev. Leg. 61.

IRREGULAR FLEA—STATEMENT OF ACCUSED IN ANSWER TO CHARGE.

The answer of the accused on a charge of frequenting a disorderly house contrary to s. 238 Cr. Code, para. (k) that he "was there if that made him guilty," is not equivalent to a plea of guilty. [See also the new s. 229 Cr. Code as amended 1913, making it an offence to be found in a disorderly house without lawful excuse.]

R. v. Swett, 19 D.L.R. 694, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 272, 29 W.L.R. 887, 7 W.W.R. 608.

LIMITATION OF CHARGE AND EVIDENCE TO ONE SPECIFIC OFFENCE.

The necessities of justice as well as the provision contained in s. 710 Cr. Code require that a summary conviction must be for a single and certain charge; and where there is no need for giving evidence of other offences to prove intent, the charge and the evidence at any one trial should be confined to a single offence.

R. v. Roach, 19 D.L.R. 362, 6 O.W.N. 630, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 28.

SUMMARY TRIAL—ELECTION TO TAKE—RIGHT TO RE-ELECT—CROWN CASE RESERVED.

It is no ground for quashing a conviction under the provisions of the Cr. Code for speedy trials that the accused was committed for trial without being given the option by the justice of the peace, who was also a stipendiary magistrate, of a summary trial, who in his capacity as a justice of the peace, took the information, issued his warrant for the arrest of the accused, held an examination and committed him for trial on a charge that as a stipendiary magistrate he might have heard and determined in a summary way. A person who has been brought up for election as to the mode of his trial under the speedy trials sections of the Cr. Code, and has elected to take a speedy trial, cannot afterwards re-elect to be tried before a jury in the ordinary way. Questions of law only, are properly the subject of a Crown case reserved. Questions depending on the weight or sufficiency of the evidence should not be reserved.

The King v. Howe, 42 N.B.R. 378.

HEARING—OPPORTUNITY FOR DEFENCE.

Where the accused has appeared in person to defend the charge an opportunity must be given him to put in his own evidence and that of other witnesses, and he should be distinctly asked by the magistrate whether he desires to give evidence.

Re. v. Curry, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 340, 8 O.W.N. 512.

WITHDRAWAL OF COMPLAINT.

The person who has laid the complaint in a summary proceeding for keeping a disorderly house and who thereafter declares under oath before the magistrate that she laid the charge without understanding it and under duress of detectives may be permitted to withdraw it and so terminate the proceedings.

R. v. Rousseau, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 390.

TRIAL—APPEARANCE BY COUNSEL.

In a summary conviction matter, the accused may appear by counsel instead of personally, and the magistrate has jurisdiction to proceed without requiring the accused to be personally present. [R. v. Thompson, 109 L.T. 970; R. v. Montgomery, 102 L.T. 325, applied.]

R. v. Romer; R. v. Johnson; R. v. Farrell, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 235.

SERVICE OF SUMMONS—BY DE FACTO OFFICER.

An affidavit of the service of a summons in a summary conviction matter must be taken before a justice of the peace (Cr. Code s. 658) in order to give the magistrate jurisdiction to proceed ex parte, and a conviction made in the absence of the defendant where the affidavit of the service of the summons was taken before a commissioner of the Supreme Court is bad and will be set aside on certiorari.

Service of a summons is good if made by a de facto constable, such as one continuing to act after the expiration of his term and before a new appointment had been made.

R. v. Pelley, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 405.

MOTION TO QUASH — REMEDY BY APPEAL CERTIORARI—APPEAL—DEFAULT OF SECURITY—AFFIDAVITS.

A motion to quash a conviction of the defendants by a magistrate for trespass to land, in contravention of the Petty Trespass Act, was dismissed upon the ground that the defendant had an adequate remedy by appeal under s. 10 (1) of the Summary Convictions Act, R.S.O. 1914, c. 90; and, therefore, by virtue of subs. (3) of that section, and of s. 1122 Cr. Code, the right to certiorari was taken away. The defendants had in fact appealed from the conviction, but their appeal was quashed because security was not given; and, as it was their own fault that they did not, by perfecting their security, avail themselves of the right of appeal, they were not in a position to move to quash. Semble, that affidavits intended to cover and answer the objections to the conviction set out in the notice of motion to quash, were inadmissible.

R. v. Chappus, 38 O.L.R. 576, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 157. [Affirmed in 39 O.L.R. 329, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 411.]

Upon an application by the informant for process in a summary conviction matter calling upon the accused to answer the charge, the magistrate need not first hear other evidence than that of the informant in swearing to the information if that satisfies him that the process should issue without hearing other witnesses for the complainant under Cr. Code s. 655, as amended by 8 & 9 Edw. VII. c. 9. [Ex p. Archambault, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 433, approved; R. v. Smith, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 425, disapproved.]

PROVINCIAL AND FEDERAL LAWS COVERING SAME OFFENCE.

The plea of autrefois convict is not a bar to a second prosecution when the parties are not the same and when the law in virtue of which the proceedings were taken was in the first case a provincial law and in the second case a federal law.

Forgues v. Gauvin, 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 302.

PROCEDURE AT TRIAL—REFUSAL TO ADJOURN DENIAL OF RIGHT TO MAKE FULL ANSWER AND DEFENCE.

The refusal of an adjournment to the accused even after the taking of evidence for the prosecution will be a ground for quashing a summary conviction if it was a manifest denial of justice and prevented the accused from making his full answer and defence to the charge.

R. v. Dominion Drug Stores, 31 Can. Cr. Cas. 86, [1919] 2 W.W.R. 413, 14 A.L.R. 384, affirming, on an equal division, 44 D. L. R. 382, 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 318.

ILLEGALITY OF ARREST—DEFECTIVE WARRANT.

Prosecutions under the Prohibition Act, (B.C.), are within the rule applicable generally to summary conviction proceedings that the justice has jurisdiction notwithstanding any irregularity in the arrest or summons if the accused is present at the hearing and this although he objects so soon as the defect comes to his knowledge, and before the hearing is concluded. Neither the Prohibition Act, (B.C.), nor the Summary Convictions Act, (B.C.), establish any condition precedent that the accused should have been regularly brought before the justice. [Reg. v. Hughes, 4 Q.B.D. 614, applied; Dixon v. Wells, 25 Q.B.D. 249, distinguished; R. v. Pollard, 39 D.L.R. 111, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 35, 13 A.L.R. 157, not followed.]

R. v. Marks, 31 Can. Cr. Cas. 257, 26 B.C.R. 73.

QUASHING—EVIDENCE — BY-LAW—SERVICE OF NOTICE.

On an application to quash a conviction by a police magistrate the judge may look at the depositions taken before the magistrate in order to see what evidence was before him. A conviction for infringing a municipal by-law will be quashed if it be shown that neither the by-law nor a copy thereof was put in evidence at the hearing before the convicting magistrate. [Reg. v. Banks, 2 Terr. L.R. 81, followed.] Notice of motion to quash a conviction for infringing a by-law held to have been served in compliance with r. 2 of the Crown Practice Rules.

R. v. Steckley, 7 O.W.N. 137.

(§ III—31)—SECOND OFFENCE—MENTION OF FIRST CONVICTION.

Infringement of a statutory direction that, on a trial for a second offence subjecting to an increased penalty, no mention shall be made of the prior conviction until after an adjudication of guilt for the alleged second offence, will invalidate the summary conviction; but the affidavits filed must satisfy the court that there was something more than the commencement by counsel of his address preliminary to tendering the evidence, which address was stopped by the magistrate until the latter had completed the writing of the adjudication.

Re Ellis, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 345.

SUMMONS—UNSOWN INFORMATION.

The duty of the justice on being applied to for a summons in a summary proceeding is to satisfy himself that there is sufficient cause for his interference by summons; he may be satisfied with the information or complaint alone although not sworn, but, if not, he may take the evidence under oath of any witness in support of the information.

INLAND REVENUE ACT—STAMP ON CANADIAN LEAF TOBACCO TO BE AFFIXED BY THE RETAILER—S. 9 GEO. V. C. 28, s. 328 (A).

In a prosecution based upon the regulations of the Inland Revenue of August 1, 1918, against a "retailer" of Canadian leaf tobacco it is essential to allege in the summons that the defendant is a retailer, cultivator or packer of tobacco, as the case may be.

Hardy v. Lechance, 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 288.

WRITTEN COMPLAINT.

Where a person is accused of an offence punishable on summary conviction by imprisonment, a complaint in writing should be made against him before he is called upon for his defence; a trial held on the defendant's arrest without warrant and without any information or complaint in writing, and without stating to the accused the nature and substance of the charge, is irregular, and the conviction thereon will be quashed on certiorari.

Nagazon v. Niquet, 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 77, 24 Rev. de Jur. 339.

(§ III—33)—INDEFINITE ADJOURNMENT.

The indefinite suspension of proceedings in the trial under the summary convictions clauses (Part XV. Cr. Code), is prohibited as prejudicial to the accused in his defence; however, if the suspension is by agreement between the Crown and the accused to the effect that the trial should be delayed so long as the accused remains away from a particular place, such suspension constitutes rather an adjournment of which the accused cannot complain, since he himself determines its duration. POSTPONEMENT OF DECISION PENDING HEARING OF ANOTHER CHARGE.

In summary conviction matters the justices are not to mix up two or more criminal charges and convict or acquit in any one of them with any reference to the facts appearing in the others; but the justices may for reasons of justice arising out of the circumstances of the case and for its better determination, postpone their decision in one or more cases and before deciding them proceed with the trial of other similar charges against the same accused so long as their discretion in so postponing is honestly exercised and is not used directly or indirectly with a view of bringing in facts or evidence which have no legitimate bearing upon their decision. (§ III—34)—DEPOSITIONS IN SHORTHAND—OATH OF COURT STENOGRAPHER.

The fact that the stenographer acting at the magistrate's direction, in taking the evidence in a summary conviction matter, makes affidavit that he was sworn to "transcribe" the evidence, while the statute requires that he be sworn to "report" the evidence is not conclusive in support of an objection that the trial was irregular in that respect; and the court on habeas corpus may affirm the conviction where the magistrate could not remember whether the stenographer was sworn or not, and it was not clear that the oath taken by the stenographer was not in substance to "report" the evidence, the stenographer disclaiming that he was sworn other than in the usual form and probably using the word "transcribe" as the equivalent of "report."

(§ V—50) — ARBITRARY AND EXCESSIVE AMOUNT—STRIKING OUT.

A summary conviction under a liquor license law cannot be supported in so far as it awards as an arbitrary sum, $50, to the complainant for costs where no witnesses were brought from a distance, but the court, on a motion to quash, may amend the conviction by striking out the award of such costs.

IMPRISONMENT IN DEFAULT OF PAYING FINE—SPECIAL ACT.

The magistrate making a summary conviction for an infraction of the Dental Profession Act, R.S.S., c. 108, has power to order imprisonment forthwith in default of payment of the fine and costs, although s. 51 of that Act provides a special mode of levying a fine by distress. Where a defendant fined on summary conviction under the Liquor License Act (Ont.) and ordered to be imprisoned in default delivers himself up at the place of imprisonment before the warrant is made out, and the magistrate is made aware of that fact, no expenses of conveying the defendant to gaol should be ordered as a condition of release nor included in the warrant, but the warrant, being subject to the Ontario Summary Convictions Act, may be amended by striking out such costs.

ILLEGAL COSTS.

Where Cr. Code s. 1124 is made applicable by provincial statute to summary convictions under provincial laws, the court having certiorari jurisdiction will not quash the entire conviction because of the inclusion of illegal costs, but will amend an otherwise valid conviction by striking out the part which relates to costs.

SENTENCE AND IMPRISONMENT—CONVICTION AND COMMITMENT—POWER TO ALTER—CHANGING TO "HARD LABOUR."

Where a prisoner was convicted of being a vagrant and sentenced to six months' imprisonment, and no provision was made for "hard labour" and thereafter the words "hard labour" were added in the absence of the accused, and as so changed the commitment was made out to conform to it, such change is invalid and the commitment will be set aside on habeas corpus proceedings.

The King v. Kirwin, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 181.

The costs which may be awarded by a justice in summary conviction cases do not include attorney's fees. Neither are attorney's fees included in an award of costs made in general terms by the judgment upon an appeal to the Court of King's Bench (Crown side), in such cases, but the court sitting in appeal may, under ss. 751, 752 Cr. Code, exercise its discretion to include an attorney's fee in an award of costs.

Garneau v. Gauthier, 18 Rev. de Jur. 172.

(§ V-51)—ENFORCEMENT OF FINE—COSTS OF COMMITMENT—INDIAN ACT (CAN.).

A summary conviction for illegally selling intoxicants to an Indian in contravention of the Indian Act (Can.) may, under Cr. Code, s. 739, properly adjudge costs of commitment and conveying to gaol in default of payment of the fine.

R. v. Verdi, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 47.

(§ V-52)—DEFAULT IN PAYING FINE.

Where imprisonment is imposed in the first instance for a first offence against the Canada Temperance Act, it is limited to one month under s. 127 of that Act; but where a fine is imposed in the first instance, the imprisonment which may be directed in default of payment of the fine may be for any term not exceeding three months under Cr. Code s. 739. [R. v. Stafford, 1 Can. Cr. Cas. 239; R. v. Horton, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 84, 34 N.S.R. 217; R. v. Blank, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 358, 38 N.S.R. 337, followed.]

Ex parte Richard; R. v. Steeves, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 183, 42 N.B.R. 596.

(§ V-53)—INCREASING COSTS VERBALLY AWARDED—ERROR IN CALCULATION.

A justice making a summary conviction and imposing a fine and costs to an amount then stated may, at least before making his minute of adjudication or the formal conviction, correct in the presence of defendant an error in the calculation of the costs, although the sum first mentioned is increased.

R. v. Dickey, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 55, 9 W.W.R. 142, 32 W.L.R. 404.

BEING DRUNK AND DISORDERLY—CONVICTION—EXCESSIVE PENALTY.

R. v. Lawson, 18 O.W.R. 162.

HARD LABOUR—MEMORANDUM OF FINE AND IMPRISONMENT ENDORSED ON INFORMATION NOT STATING HARD LABOUR—ONUS OF PROOF.

The King v. Gratton, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 324.

VI. Record of conviction and proceedings.

(§ VI-60)—STATING NATURE OF OFFENCE.

A summary conviction under a municipal by-law must state the nature of the offence and not merely recite that defendant violated a specified section of the by-law.

R. v. Hubbley, 28 D.L.R. 376, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 102, 49 N.S.R. 231.

STATING THE OFFENCE—SUFFICIENCY.

Though a woman cannot be convicted as a vagrant under s. 238 (i), Cr. Code, unless she has failed to give a proper account of herself on being asked to do so, when found wandering at night in the public streets, the absence from the conviction of the allegation that she was asked to do so is not fatal to its validity, where the offence is charged in the language of s. 723 (3). [Reg. v. Leveque, 30 U.C.Q.B. 509; Reg. v. Arscott, 9 O.R. 541; R. v. Harris, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 393; R. v. Pepper, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 314, dissented from; Cotterill v. Lempiere, 24 Q.B.D. 634; Smith v. Moody, [1903] 1 K.B. 56, applied.]

SERVICE OF MINUTE OF ORDER—CONVICTION NOT AN "ORDER."

The "minute of conviction" made by a justice of the peace for an offence under the Vagrancy Clauses, Cr. Code, ss. 238, 239, upon directing imprisonment for the offence is not a minute of an "order" of a justice so as to require service of a copy thereof under s. 731 before issuing a warrant of commitment. [Section 731 applies only to "orders" as distinguished from "summary convictions" made by justices although the procedure as to both is regulated by Part XV. of the Code.]

FORM—DATE OF OFFENCE—DEFECT IN INFORMATION—WAIVER.

An objection that a summary conviction for common assault assigns no date to the offence is cured under Cr. Code, s. 1124, if the date appears on the depositions. An irregularity in not re-swearing an information in a summary conviction matter when materially amended at the hearing is waived by proceeding with the trial without taking the objection. [R. v. Lewis, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 499, approved.] If the depositions in a summary conviction matter establish such facts as warranted the justice in convicting of the offence indicated by the information, although not stated in the latter in correct form, Cr. Code, s. 724, applies to validate the conviction regardless of the defect in the information.

R. v. Tally, 21 D.L.R. 651, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 449, 8 A.L.R. 453, 7 W.W.R. 1178, 30 W.L.R. 396.

FINE PAYABLE TO MAGISTRATE—FORMAL CONVICTION.

Where the statute under the summary conviction is made directs that the fine shall be payable to the convicting magistrate, there is no necessity for a direction in the formal conviction that the fine should be paid to him.

R. v. Schilling, 21 D.L.R. 60, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 380, 8 S.L.R. 70, 7 W.W.R. 1112, 30 W.L.R. 463.

PROSECUTION OF A PARTNERSHIP UNDER A LICENSING LAW—MEDICAL PROFESSION ACT (ALTA.)

A summary conviction for illegal practice of medicine without a license is not to be made against a partnership firm in the firm name, at least without shewing who the individuals are who compose the firm. An adjudication of imprisonment in default of paying a fine must state who the parties are who are liable to such imprisonment.

Re "Roske & Messenger," 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 393, [1919] 1 W.W.R. 341.

A mistake by misdescription of the official capacity of the magistrate in the proceedings before the final adjudication whereby a "commissioner of police" having the authority of two justices of the peace was wrongly described in the preliminary proceedings as a "justice of the peace" will not invalidate a summary conviction made by him as a commissioner of police if he was correctly designated as such both in the memorandum of adjudication and in the formal conviction.

The King v. Fitzgerald, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 39, 19 W.L.R. 462, 1 W.W.R. 109.

IRREGULARITY IN CONVICTION.

Failure to state the offence in a conviction for contravening the provisions of the Liquor License Act (Que.) is not a mere irregularity which is cured by application of art. 1166 of the Act, but goes to the very essence of the conviction and nullifies it.

Déguire v. Laeroix, 14 Que. P.R. 316.

(§ VI—61)—WAIVING WRITTEN DEPOSITIONS.

The accused, represented by counsel at a justice's trial under Part XV., Cr. Code, tacitly waives the taking of the deposition in writing, if he takes part in the hearing by proceeding with the cross-examinations without objecting to the omission. [Denaunt v. Robida, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 501, distinguished.]

Redard v. The King, 30 D.L.R. 326, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 99, 22 Rev. Leg. 302.

MAGISTRATE'S CLERK TAKING DOWN THE DEPOSITIONS.

The magistrate's clerk taking down the depositions of a witness in longhand need not be sworn under Cr. Code, s. 683, and if it be a trial of a summary matter under Part XV., the depositions need not be signed by the witness and are properly authenticated by the signature of the magistrate.

R. v. McKinley, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 294, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 1069.

SUSPENDED SENTENCE—IRREGULARITY.

The fact that the evidence for the prosecution was sufficient to warrant a summary conviction and that no evidence was given for the defence will not support a commitment where no formal conviction was ever drawn up and the minute of adjudication in which the accused was found guilty contained a suspension of sentence which had not been regularly superseded.

R. v. Knight, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 113, 11 O.W.N. 190.

EVIDENCE—DEPOSITIONS—UNSWORN STENOGRAPHER.

The fact that the stenographer who took down the evidence at the trial before a magistrate under the Ontario Liquor License Act was not sworn in conformity with R.S. O. 1914, c. 215, s. 87 (2) will not affect the validity of the conviction, if the magistrate himself made full notes of the depositions and there was no evidence to prove that either these or the stenographer's extended notes were incorrect.

R. v. Bosak, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 374, 10 O.W.N. 301.

AUTHENTICATION OF DEPOSITIONS.

The provision of Cr. Code, s. 682 (4), that the justice shall sign the depositions is directory only and not mandatory. [Ex parte Doherty, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 310, 32 N.B.R. 479, followed.]

R. v. Dickey, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 55, 32 W.L.R. 404, 9 W.W.R. 142.

(§ VI—65)—COMMON ASSAULT—PROTECTION FROM CIVIL PROCEEDINGS.

Section 734, Cr. Code, applies only to summary convictions, therefore it is only one who has been tried by a justice upon a charge of common assault—which is the only kind of assault punishable on summary conviction—who can claim protection from subsequent civil proceedings. One who has been tried summarily for one of the indictable offences specified in s. 773 (c) is entitled to immunity under s. 792 "from all further or other criminal proceedings for the same cause," but not from civil proceedings. [Nevills v. Ballard, 28 O.R. 588, followed.]

Green v. Henneghan, 43 D.L.R. 272, 14 A.L.R. 106, 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 256, [1918] 3 W.W.R. 658.

VII. Amendment.

(§ VII—70)—TIME.

A magistrate has the right to make out and return an amended conviction at any time up to the moment before the conviction is quashed, provided such amendment is according to the truth and supported by the facts of the case.

R. v. Bisette, 41 D.L.R. 52, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 97, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 501.

A conviction will not be quashed because the information has been amended in substantial respects, if the amendment has been made before the taking of evidence and the defendant has not been prejudiced by surprise.

R. v. Van Fleet, 38 D.L.R. 502, 13 A.L.R. 320, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 218, [1918] 1 W.W.R. 332.

Where there is no court of general or quarter sessions of the peace, or officer thereof, in a province, with whom a warrant and conviction may be filed by a stipendiary magistrate, under s. 793, Cr. Code, if filed with a city clerk, they are still under the control of the magistrate who issued them, and he may amend them at any time before the conviction is quashed. A reasonable time may intervene between the date of a conviction and the filing by a stipendiary magistrate of a warrant and conviction with the clerk of the peace, as required by s. 793, Cr. Code, and where but a few days elapse, it will be presumed, unless the contrary is shewn, that during such time the warrant and conviction remain in the custody of the magistrate, and so long as they are in his possession he may make amendments thereto.

The King v. Sarah Smith, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 253, 45 N.S.R. 517.

AMENDING COMMITMENT—CR. CODE, s. 1121.

A defective warrant of commitment following a summary conviction cannot be amended under Cr. Code, s. 1121, on a habeas corpus application if the conviction itself is also bad in law.

R. v. Peart, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 259.

"STORING EXPLOSIVES" — "INFLAMMABLE GOODS."

A conviction "for storing inflammable goods" purporting to be made under s. 42 of the by-laws of the Harbour Commissioners of Vancouver which makes it an offence to store "explosive material" cannot be amended, the defect being fundamental and irremediable.

R. v. Little, 10 W.W.R. 893.

(§ VII—75)—ON APPEAL.

A stipendiary magistrate cannot amend a warrant or conviction after it is filed with the clerk of the peace, or other proper officer, under the provisions of s. 793, Cr. Code, to be kept among the records of the general or quarter sessions of the peace or of any court discharging the functions thereof. [Reg. v. Learmont, 23 N.S.R. 24; Ex parte Austin, 44 L.T. 102, distinguished.]

The King v. Sarah Smith, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 253, 45 N.S.R. 517.

Where a summary conviction was made by a magistrate of several persons upon a charge of unlawfully playing or looking on in a common gaming-house, and the evidence returned on certiorari was sufficient for the conviction of all the defendants for unlawfully playing, the court will not quash the conviction for duplicity and uncertainty, but will amend the conviction under Cr. Code, s. 1124, by striking out the charge of looking on.

The King v. Toy Moon, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 33, 19 W.L.R. 480, 1 W.W.R. 50.

(§ VII—80)—DEFECTS IN FORM.

The intention of s. 1124, Cr. Code, in giving the power to amend a summary conviction on a motion to quash is, that, when guilt appears upon the evidence which has been believed by the magistrate, the accused should not escape by defects in form occasioned either by the error or by the stupidity of the magistrate.

The King v. Demetrio, 1 D.L.R. 515, 3 O.W.N. 692, 20 O.W.R.*999.

An amendment may be made to a conviction under the Liquor License Act (Ont.) to state that the township was one in which there was, at the time, a by-law in force passed under s. 141 of such Act prohibiting the sale of liquors by retail therein, and so cure the failure to mention that fact in the conviction as originally made, where the record returned to the court by the convicting magistrates shewed that counsel for the accused at the trial admitted that such by-law was in force in that township.

R. v. O'Connor, 3 D.L.R. 23, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 75, 3 O.W.N. 840, 21 O.W.R. 691.

TEMPERANCE ACT—PROCLAMATION—PLEA OF GUILTY.

It is not open to a defendant, against whom a summary conviction awarding imprisonment has been made on his plea of guilty, to set up on habeas corpus that the conviction which expressly charged a violation of the Canada Temperance Act was invalid for lack of allegation or proof that the proclamation necessary to bring the Act into force in the district had in fact been issued; proof of the proclamation was dispensed with by the plea of guilty. [As to mode of proof of proclamations generally, see Canada Evidence Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 145, s. 21.]

O'Neil v. Carbonneau, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 340, 54 Que. S.C. 417.

A magistrate, who still has control of a warrant and conviction may amend them after notice has been given of an application for a writ of certiorari and for the release of a person convicted under habeas corpus. [Ex p. Austin, 44 L.T. 102, and Reg. v. Learmont, 23 N.S.R. 24, distinguished.]

The King v. Sarah Smith, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 253, 45 N.S.R. 517.

It is the duty of the court on certiorari to receive an amended conviction in substitution for the one first made if the amended conviction is supported by the evidence and other proceedings at the trial.

The King v. Fitzgerald, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 39, 19 W.L.R. 462, 1 W.W.R. 109.

FORM—LOCALITY OF OFFENCE.

A place certain should be specified so as to identify the house in question upon a conviction for keeping a disorderly house; but a summary conviction which specifies merely that such keeping was within a named municipality may be amended in that respect in certiorari proceedings to conform to the evidence by virtue of Cr. Code, s. 1124.

The King v. Demetrio, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 316.

ON MOTION TO QUASH—HABEAS CORPUS—CERTIORARI.

Section 1124, Cr. Code, permits the court itself to amend a summary conviction removed by certiorari proceedings as to certain defects, but the right of the magistrate to tender another conviction in substitution for the one attacked is one independent of s. 1124.

The King v. Fitzgerald, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 39, 19 W.L.R. 462, 1 W.W.R. 109.

CRIMINAL LAW—POLICE MAGISTRATE—CONVICTION FOR "THREATENING"—EVIDENCE OF ASSAULT—IMPRISONMENT FOR EXCESSIVE TERM — HABEAS CORPUS — DISCHARGE—CONDITION—CRIMINAL CODE, s. 1120 (7 & 8 EDW. VII, c. 18, s. 14) —AMENDMENT—SECTION 1121 OF CODE — CERTIORARI — ATTORNEY-GENERAL — PROTECTION OF MAGISTRATE—COSTS.
R. v. Peart, 7 O.W.N. 126.

VIII. Duplicity and uncertainty.

(§ VIII—85)—DUPPLICITY.

Two or more offences against the Alberta Liquor Act, 1916, can be included in one information only in the event of the time and place of each offence being stated (s. 42); an information for unlawfully selling on a date mentioned "and for some time previous thereto" does not state the time of both offences and a conviction in the terms of the information is bad for duplicity, although the evidence related wholly to an offence of the specific date. [R. v. Code, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 372, 1 S.L.R. 299, followed.]

R. v. Aitken, 37 D.L.R. 530, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 227, 11 A.L.R. 573, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 781.

Section 725, Cr. Code, 1906 (former s. 907, Cr. Code, 1892), applies to validate a summary conviction stating the offence to have been committed in one or other of the different modes specified in the statute whereby a single offence is declared, e.g., under the Inspection and Sale Act (Can.) the offering for sale, the exposing for sale or the having in possession for sale. [R. v. McDonald, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 1, followed.] An information for an infraction of the Inspection and Sale Act, R.S.C. c. 85, charging that the accused did unlawfully "offer, expose or have in his possession for sale" ten barrels of apples packed in contravention of that statute, discloses an offence; and an objection by reason of setting forth the alternative methods by which the offence may have been committed must be taken before entering a plea of guilty, and cannot effectively be raised for the first time in certiorari proceedings in respect of a summary conviction similarly worded made upon such plea.

R. v. Brouse, 9 D.L.R. 458, 4 O.W.N. 640, 23 O.W.R. 790.

TAMPERING WITH WITNESS—ALLEGATIONS—PREJUDICE.

A summary conviction for attempting to tamper with a witness upon a prosecution for illegally keeping liquors for sale is not invalid because it does not recite what allegations the witness was asked to swear to falsely; if the conviction follows the words of the statute, and there was no prejudice to the accused as to what was the issue being tried.

R. v. Armstrong, 31 D.L.R. 82, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 151, 36 O.L.R. 2.

UNCERTAINTY — CHARGE NOT DISCLOSING LEGAL OFFENCE—PLEA OF GUILTY.

A plea of guilty to a charge intended to be framed under s. 242, Cr. Code (amendment of 1913), but not specifically referring to that section, will not support a summary conviction thereunder where the information upon which the plea was taken did not sufficiently disclose an offence, the form of same being that the defendant did "neglect his wife."

R. v. Chitnaita, 16 D.L.R. 241, 27 W.L.R. 268, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 344.
Cr. Code, ss. 710, 725.

A summary conviction for that the accused did "take, transport or deliver" intoxicating liquor into a prohibited area is not invalid because of the offence being stated to have been committed in different modes or being stated in the alternative. The effect of Cr. Code, s. 725, is to declare that the conviction is for one offence only (s. 710).

R. v. McManus, 31 Can. Cr. Cas. 180, [1919] 3 W.W.R. 190.

COMMITMENT—COST OF CONVEYANCE TO JAIL.

It is not in the summary conviction, but in the warrant of commitment thereunder that the law requires the amount of the expenses of conveying the convicted person to the common jail to be mentioned and fixed.

White v. Leet, 18 Can. Cr. Cas. 337, 12 Que. P.R. 339.

SUMMARY JUDGMENT.

See Judgment.

SUMMARY PROCEEDINGS.

(§ I—6)—ENFORCEMENT OF UNDERTAKING.

A motion to enforce an undertaking given by a defendant through his solicitor to submit to judgment upon a certain event or contingency is not properly enforceable upon a Chambers application, although it was given in respect of a Chambers motion; a summary application for its enforcement may be made to the court or an independent action may be brought for its enforcement.

(§ II-5) — THEATRICAL PERFORMANCE — LORD'S DAY ACT—ACCEPTING CONTRIBUTIONS BUT NOT CHARGING ADMISSION.

Where tickets of admission were not sold on Sunday to a moving picture show, nor an admission fee charged, nor any person requested to pay one, but a plate, near which an employee of the theatre was stationed, was placed near the entrance, and on which any person who desired to do so might place contributions, the performance was not one "at which any fee is charged directly or indirectly" in violation of s. 7 of the Lord's Day Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 153.

R. v. Thompson; R. v. Hammond; R. v. Churchill; R. v. Aherns, 14 D.L.R. 175, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 78, 7 A.L.R. 40, 25 W.L.R. 576, 5 W.W.R. 157.

SKATING RINK—FRANCHISE TO CLUB UNDER QUEBEC STATUTE.

As s. 16 of the Lord's Day Act (Can.), R.S.C. 1906, c. 153, preserves in any province the provisions of any Act or law already in force there, an athletic institution which has acquired the rights and franchises granted by statute of the Province of Quebec to an athletic club prior to the "Lord's Day Act" (Can.), including by implication the right to keep its skating rink open on Sunday, has the right to maintain and operate a public skating rink on Sunday if permitted to do so under municipal by-laws and ordinances.

BASEBALL MATCH.

A baseball match held publicly on Sunday, and for which an entrance fee is charged, is not prohibited by R.S.Q. 1909 arts. 4466-7, nor does it come within the Dominion Sunday Observance Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 153, s. 7.

GAMBLING—PLAYING CARDS.

The unrevoked Lord's Day Act, C.S.U.C., c. 104, s. 3, in force in Ontario, makes it a criminal offence to be engaged in playing cards for money in a private place on a Sunday.

The King v. Quick, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 61.

III. Labor and business.

A. IN GENERAL.

(§ III A-10)—SALE OF FRUITS AND TOBACCO—CUSTOM—PAROL EVIDENCE.

Section 4466, R.S.Q. 1909, preserves, subject to the restrictions therein mentioned, all such liberties as are recognized by the customs of the Province of Quebec as to Sunday trading, and on a prosecution in that province under the Lord's Day Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 153, for selling by retail, fruits and tobacco on a Sunday at a place where there is no municipal by-law prohibiting such sales, it may be shewn by parol evidence in defence of the charge that such sales, of which there is no express prohibition in either federal or provincial Acts, are customary in the Province of Quebec and therefore lawful under the exception contained in the Federal Act of matters provided "in any provincial Act or law;" (R.S.C. 1906, c. 153, s. 5).

TRADESMEN SELLING WARES.

Whether by the operation of s. 5 of the Lord's Day Act, R.S.C., 1906, c. 153, or of the British Columbia Sunday Observance Act, R.S.B.C. 1911, c. 219, or of the Imperial Acts introduced prior to Confederation, it is unlawful in British Columbia for a tradesman to publicly sell his wares on Sunday.

R. v. Laity, 13 D.L.R. 532, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 417, 18 B.C.R. 443, 25 W.L.R. 363, 5 W.W.R. 75.

CARRYING ON BUSINESS—HOTEL CIGAR STAND—LORD'S DAY ACT.

The sale of cigars in a hotel on Sunday otherwise than in connection with and as an incident to a meal is contrary to the provisions of the Lord's Day Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 153; but an hotel steward taking no part in the running of the cigar stand is improperly convicted, under s. 5, of carrying on his "ordinary calling" in respect of Sunday sales there made, although he might be liable under s. 14 if he were the employer of the cigar stand attendant, and had authorized and directed that the stand should be open on Sunday.

R. v. Walsh and Crane, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 144, 26 W.L.R. 394.

RESTAURANT—SALES OF ICE CREAM.

A restaurant-keeper duly licensed may legally sell ice cream on Sunday to be consumed in the restaurant and not sold to be taken away.

R. v. Brooker, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 146.

FARMING OPERATIONS—WHETHER OFFENCE UNDER BOTH FEDERAL AND PROVINCIAL LAWS.

In a prosecution under the Lord's Day Act, R.S.C., 1906, c. 153, it is not essential for the prosecution to prove that the alleged Sunday labour is also an offence under some provincial Act or law. Semble, where there is no provincial law legalizing farm work on Sunday, a farmer is liable to conviction under the Federal Lord's Day Act for carrying on his ordinary avocation on Sunday in so far as his work is not shewn to be one of necessity or mercy within the exceptions of that Act. [The Queen v. Silvester, 33 L.J.M.C. 79, distinguished; R. v. Dimond, 23 B.C.R. 325, approved.]

R. v. Sam Bow, 31 Can. Cr. Cas. 269, [1919] 3 W.W.R. 315.

(§ III A-12)—SELLING REAL ESTATE.

An agreement for the sale of land made on Sunday in British Columbia is illegal, as contravening s. 5 of the Lord's Day

Act (Can.). [Lord's Day Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 153, s. 5, applied.]

Where the substituted holiday provided for by the Lord's Day Act is being claimed, it is the duty of the employee to do the work and then demand the substituted holiday during the next six days. As to "cases of emergency in connection with transportation," as applied to an able-bodied seaman at cargo work on a ship, the word "emergency" must be given an elastic and varying meaning according to the circumstances, especially in the case of vessels engaged in the coasting trade in dangerous waters where conditions of wind, tide, and weather must be carefully considered beforehand and duly provided for by the master, so as to insure, as far as possible, the safety of the vessels and those on board.

A complaint for the infraction of the Sunday Observance Law, declaring that the accused has illegally carried on business on Sunday in the ordinary course of his work, and that, for gain, he has employed and caused certain persons to work on Sunday, is sufficiently particularized, and the plaintiff is not bound to deny in his complaint the exceptions which could constitute the defence of the accused. If such omission constituted an irregularity it would furnish ground for a writ of error or appeal, but it cannot take away the jurisdiction of the magistrate. The remedy by way of prohibition is only open to restrain the excess of jurisdiction when no other means of appeal exist.

(§ I D—40) — RURAL MUNICIPALITY ACT (R.S.S., c. 87)—DIRECT TAXATION FOR RAISING REVENUE FOR MUNICIPAL PURPOSES—POWERS OF PROVINCIAL LEGISLATURE.

Section 323 (b) of the Rural Municipality Act (R.S.S., c. 87; see Amendments, 1912-13, c. 31, s. 4), imposes a direct tax for the purpose of raising a revenue for municipal purposes, and is therefore legislation within the powers of the provincial legislature. A tax imposed on the appellant company under s. 323 (b) of the Act is not an "exceptional tax" within the meaning of clause 11 of the deed of surrender between the appellant company and the Crown under the Kupert's Land Act, 1868.

Land the property of a nonresident owner, but looked after for him by a resident, to whom the full charge and control has been entrusted cannot be considered "unoccupied" land within the meaning of the Noxious Weeds Act. Land producing wild hay of sufficient value to be sold cannot be considered "not under crop" within the meaning of s. 8 of the Noxious Weeds Act. [Fraser v. Pere Marquette, 18 O.L.R. 389, applied.] A notification of the destruction of woods under s. 8 of the Noxious Weeds Act must be given to the owner personally or shown to have been received by him. Compliance with the requirements of s. 13 of the Municipalities Seed Grain Act as to the prior passing of an authorizing by-law is necessary to create a charge upon the lands sown or intended to be sown.

INFORMATION AND BELIEF—AFFIDAVIT OF SOURCE OF INFORMATION—RIGHT TO CUT STANDING LUMBER—INTEREST IN LAND—ASSESSMENT.

The court will not refuse to consider an affidavit produced in answer to affidavits upon which a rule absolute for a certiorari to remove an assessment and a rule nisi to quash the same were granted, on the objection that it is based only on information and belief, if it states the source of the information. The standing lumber on a block of land on which a lumber company has reserved the right to cut for a period of five years is an interest in land and liable to be assessed as such.

TELEPHONE LINES.

The poles and wires of a telephone company, placed upon public streets, are not immovable property by nature or destination, and are not subject to taxation under the Towns Corporation Act, R.S.Q. 1888, or for school assessments.

Cookshire v. Canadian Telephone Co., 44 Que. S.C. 126.

(§ I E-47)—"LAND"—MINERALS—"ESTATE OR INTEREST"—"UNSUBDIVIDED."

Minerals are not "land" within the meaning of the Town Act (Alta.). A right to minerals is not an "estate or interest" in lands. In that expression the word "interest" should be construed as an interest in the whole land, not as applying to something which belongs to or is a part of the land. Farm lands in s. 294 of the Act means lands not in the town. The use of the word "unsubdivided" in s. 294 is an indication not merely that the maximum rate of taxation therein set out is applicable only to surface lands, but also indicates a consideration by the statute only of lands in their general sense and not of a part of the lands such as minerals.

OCCUPANTS OF DOMINION PROPERTY FOR COMMERCIAL OR INDUSTRIAL PURPOSES.

The law of a provincial legislature authorizing a municipality to impose a tax upon persons "who occupy, for commercial or industrial purposes," immovable property belonging to the Dominion Government is constitutional. This tax is personal and does not affect the immovable property. One who rents an immovable property in order to sub-let it for commercial or industrial purposes performs an act of commerce and occupies it himself, within the meaning of the law quoted above "for commercial or industrial purposes." A municipality having power to impose a tax as above described is not bound to pass a special by-law for the purpose; it can enter the tax in question in its general tax collectors' roll.

(§ I E-70) — STREET RAILWAY TAXES.

A city by-law relating to the taxation of an electric street railway company, which provided that the company should keep and maintain within the city limits all of its engines, machinery, power houses and shops, will not prevent the company importing, for the operation of its plant, electricity generated at a point beyond the city limits.

F. EXEMPTIONS.

(§ I F-75) — LOCAL IMPROVEMENTS.

Lands benefited by local improvements are not exempt from taxation for the benefit conferred because the debentures issued under the by-law authorizing the work were purchased by the municipality instead of by a stranger.

"BUILDINGS ON MINERAL LAND."

NONRESIDENT GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEE — SHERIFF.

For the purposes of taxation, a sheriff is not within the exemption of nonresident members of the executive government when employed within the city of Fredericton, in a government or county office, whose duties are necessarily performed therein, as provided by s. 3 (11) of the Assessment Act of the City of Fredericton (N.B.), 7 Edw. VII, c. 84, notwithstanding he retained a home with his family in a different town, where he spent a considerable portion of his time.

CHURCH PROPERTY — SITES — ADJOINING LANDS.

The effect of subs. 1 of s. 228 of the Municipal Act, R.S.B.C. 1911, c. 170, is that not only the land upon which the church buildings are actually situated, but also such adjoining property, within reasonable limits, as may be said to constitute a "site," is intended to be exempt from taxation. [See B.C. Stat. 1913, c. 47, s. 16, amending above subs. by striking out the words, "and the site thereof."]

CHURCH BUILDINGS.

Buildings used exclusively as places of worship with grounds surrounding the same upon which no other buildings are erected, are within the meaning of subs. 12 of s. 3, N.B.S. 3 Geo. V. c. 21, and are not to be included in the tax valuation.

JUDGES.

A County Court Judge in Ontario is not exempt from municipal taxation under provincial legislation in respect of his salary or income as such judge.

MUNICIPAL EXEMPTION — CONTRACT — RENEWAL.

Article 943 Mun. Code, authorizing a local municipality to exempt from the payment of municipal taxes, for a period not exceeding 25 years, certain enterprise within its territory, applies only to trade, commerce, manufacture enterprises, and not to electric railways. A contract between a municipality and an individual, exempting an enterprise from taxation for the period of 20 years, with the stipulation that at the expiration of the 20 years the said exemption should be renewed for 10 additional years, must be construed in the sense that the municipality would be willing to renew that exemption for 10 years more, but that the exemption must be renewed after 20 years and a new contract signed.

Montreal v. Montreal Tramways Co., 54 Que. S.C. 87.

RURAL SECTION TAKEN INTO CITY.

When the Legislature permits a municipality to take in large areas capable of containing a population of many times its present population, and including portions which cannot be required for any ordinary city purpose for years to come, it is not unreasonable to suppose that it did not intend that such portions, since they do not receive any of the city benefits, should bear the ordinary city burdens.

Strathcona v. Edmonton & Strathcona Land Syndicate, 3 A.L.R. 259.

"MINING OPERATIONS"—EXEMPTION FROM TAXES.

In a law giving to a mining town the right to impose a special tax on owners of lots operated or not, the amount to vary, according to the extent of the operation, but with the benefit of exemption of any other special tax as to their "mining operations," this latter expression applies exclusively to lots operated as mines, the shops and machinery used for the operation being included. Therefore, the owners of lots not operated, or which are used for other purposes, may not (although they have paid the special tax for their operations) claim the exemption.

Amalgamated Asbestos Corp. v. Thetford Mines, 23 Que. K.B. 195.

MUNICIPAL TAXES—SCHOOL TAXES.

School taxes are included in the term municipal taxes in any event where the burden of providing school revenue is upon the municipality. [C.P.R. v. Winnipeg, 30 Can. S.C.R. 558, applied.]

G.T.P.R. Co. v. Edmonton, [1918] 1 W.W.R. 943.

UNEARNED INCREMENT TAX ACT—PERIOD OF EXEMPTION.

The exemption given by subs. 3 of s. 3 of the Unearned Increment Tax Act, c. 10, 1913 (2nd sess.), is absolute, i.e., it is not limited to the first or any other transfer of the land, but entirely frees from the operation of the Act land of the character described in the sub-section during the continuance of the conditions giving rise to the exemption.

Re Witt, [1918] 1 W.W.R. 612.

LAND—"EXPLOITATION"—"SPECULATION."

The word "exploitation" in art. 943, Mun. Code (old), respecting exemptions from municipal taxes, is not synonymous with "speculation," and should be interpreted in connection with the words "industry and business" which precede it, according to the rule nonsecur a sociis—that is, in the sense of the transformation by labour of raw material into a new and marketable article. The acquisition of land to be divided into building lots, and sold as such piecemeal, is a "speculation" and not an "exploitation," and a municipal by-law exempting from taxes land held for speculation is absolutely void and the municipality may impose the usual taxes upon such immovables.

Cartierville v. Boulevards de L'île Co., 51 Que. S.C. 170. [Appeal to Supreme Court of Canada quashed.]

(§ I F—80)—CORPORATIONS AND THEIR PROPERTY.

Under the Assessment Act, 4 Edw. VII. (Ont.), 1904, c. 23, s. 226, providing that the Act shall not affect the terms of any agreement made with a municipality, a railway company is exempt from the ordinary business tax under an agreement with the city exempting its property from all taxes other than school rates.

Re Sandwich, Windsor & Amherstburg R. Co. and Windsor, 3 D.L.R. 43, 3 O.W.N. 575, 21 O.W.R. 44.

"SPECIAL FRANCHISE"—ASSIGNEE.

A municipal tax exemption, except for school taxes, of the real and personal property of a company includes also its "special franchise," and inures to the benefit of an assignee, although the words "successors and assigns" were not used in the by-law creating the exemption, but were used in the agreement incorporated with the by-law, the municipality assenting to the assignment; it also extends to taxes imposed for liabilities subsequently incurred by the municipality. As to school taxes, the special franchise is assessable, under s. 123 of the Municipal Ordinance (Alta. 1913, 2nd sess., c. 36, s. 12), with reference to its value as a right apart from the visible assets.

RAILWAY PROPERTIES—WHAT ARE—LAND.

Lands acquired by a railway company for railway purposes, contingent upon the approval of the plans by the Minister of Railways, are not, until definitely appropriated as part of the railway and taken from other uses, "properties and assets which form part or are used in connection with its railway," so as to be exempt from taxation under clause 13 (e), c. 3, B.C. statutes 1910.

Canadian Northern Pacific Ry. Co. v. New Westminster, 36 D.L.R. 505, [1917] A.C. 602, affirming 25 D.L.R. 28, 22 B.C.R. 247.

RAILWAYS—LOCAL ASSESSMENTS.

The exemption of railway property from all assessments and taxation of every nature and kind, as provided by s. 18 of the Railway Taxation Act, 1900, c. 57, is subject to the limitation of the amending Act, 1900, c. 58 (R.S.M. 1913, c. 193, s. 18), empowering municipal corporations to assess the real property of railway companies for local improvements, the exemption, however, extending to special survey charges made under the Special Survey Act (R.S.M. 1913, c. 182).

EXEMPTION—RAILWAY PROPERTIES—WHAT ARE RAILWAY LANDS.

Lands acquired by the plaintiff railway company cannot be said to form part of the railway, nor can they be classed as lands used in connection with the operation of the railway, so as to be exempt from taxation under clause 13 (e) B.C. statutes 1910, until plans of these lands have been filed, or submitted for approval, by the Minister of Railways, [Canadian Northern Pacific R. Co. v. New Westminster, 36 D.L.R. 505, [1917] A.C. 602, followed. See also Canadian Northern Pacific R. Co. v. Vernon, following].

RAILWAY PROPERTY—EXEMPTION FROM TAXATION—EVIDENCE AS TO USE AND OCCUPATION.

By an agreement between the Government of British Columbia and the Canadian Northern R. Co. exemption was granted to the railway company in the following terms: "The Pacific Company and its capital, stock, franchise, income, tolls and all properties and assets which form part of or are used in connection with the operation of its railway shall be exempt from all taxation," etc. Their Lordships held that the approval by the Minister of Railways of a plan of proposed line designated as company's "right-of-way" deposited under the provisions of the B.C. Railway Act, did not bring such right-of-way within the meaning of the exemption clause where there was nothing in the uses to which the lands were devoted or in the circumstances of their occupation to mark them in a physical sense as part of a railway constructed or in process of construction.

The reason for the remission of taxation was the benefit to the public from the railway, and did not arise when the public were neither getting the actual railway nor having it in process of construction for their benefit. [Canadian Northern Pacific R. Co. v. New Westminster, 36 D.L.R. 505, [1917] A.C. 602, applied.]

"TAXATION" DEFINED—SPECIAL SEWER RATES—SANCTION BY LEGISLATURE.

upon which its land fronts; the essence of taxation is that it is in a limited sense imposed by superior authority without the taxpayer's consent and the presumption that the sewer construction charges so imposed constitute "taxation" is not rebutted by the circumstance that the rate is a capital and not a recurring charge and is fixed by reference to the linear frontage independently of the tax assessors, nor by a statutory direction that they may be enforced in like manner to a rate or tax. MANUFACTURING COMPANIES—ILLEGAL BY-LAW VALIDATED BY STATUTE—SCHOOL RATES.

A statute passed for the purpose of validating an illegal municipal by-law enacted contrary to the provisions of s. 366 of the Municipal Act (Ont.) 1887, exempting a manufacturing company from any kind of assessments beyond a fixed rate, merely confirms the by-law subject to the interpretation provided by s. 4 of the Public Schools Act (Ont.) 1892, existent at the time of the passage of the by-law, that "no municipal by-law exempting ratable property from taxation shall be construed to exempt such property from school rates of any kind whatsoever." An exception from "taxation and all other municipal rates" operates to exempt from school taxes. [Winnipeg v. C.P.R. Co., 30 Can. S.C.R. 558; Halifax v. Nova Scotia Car Works, 84 L.J.P.C. 17, followed.] Held, also, upon a consideration of the agreement, by-laws and statutes, that the plaintiff's property was exempt from assessment for high school purposes. IMPERATIVE STATUTE.

The requirements of a taxing statute are imperative in the absence of a contrary intent, and the construction of its taxing provisions will be the same whether the method adopted for the recovery of the taxes is by distress, by sale of the land or in an action for debt. An agreement between a city and a railway company which also conducted an electric lighting plant exempting from certain taxes "the tracks, right-of-way, wires, rolling stock, and all superstructures and substructures and all the properties of the" railway company does not entitle the company to an exemption from taxes on its buildings, machinery, poles and wires used in connection with its lighting plant.

BUILDING OWNED BUT NOT YET OCCUPIED BY IT—LAND ON WHICH BUILDING IS BEING ERECTED.

While in course of preparation for use as its headquarters, a building owned by a Young Men's Christian Association is sufficiently "occupied" by it, although not actually its headquarters, so as to bring it within s. 11 of the Act of its incorporation, 63 Vict. (Ont.) c. 140, exempting from taxation the building and land of the association while occupied for the purposes for which it was created. Land on which a building is being erected by a Young Men's Christian Association for its own use is "occupied by the association" within the meaning of s. 11 of c. 140 of 63 Vict., exempting from taxation the buildings and land of the association as long as occupied by it.

(§ I F—84) — RAILWAY PROPERTY—LIMITATION AS TO AREA.

The exemption privilege given to railways under s. 14, c. 40, R.S.S. 1909, providing that the railway and the land comprised in the right-of-way, station grounds, yards and terminals, and all buildings, structures and personal property used for the purposes of the operation of a railway shall be free and exempt from taxation, does not apply to arrears of taxes which were a charge on the land in question before it was purchased by the railway company, nor to assessments for local improvements made on the land. The exemption privilege given by s. 14, c. 40, R.S.S. 1909, to railway companies may be claimed by a railway company on land having a maximum area of one mile in length by 500 feet in width, which amount of land they are allowed to expropriate under s. 177 of the Railway Act, 1906 (Can.) for stations, depots, yards and other structures for the accommodation of traffic, even though the land in question is not actually used or immediately needed for railway purposes, and whether the land had been obtained by expropriation proceedings or by voluntary sale or otherwise; and to exempt a further area the railway must shew that the additional land is necessary for the purposes set out in said s. 177. A railway company is not entitled under the statute R.S.S. 1909, c. 40, to an exemption from taxation on land in excess of the area they are allowed to expropriate under subs. (a) of s. 177 of the Railway Act 1906 (Can.), giving them the right to take for right-of-way land 100 feet in width and under subs. (b) giving them the right to take for stations, yards and other structures for accommodation of traffic an area one mile in length by 500 feet in breadth, including the width of the right-of-way, unless they shew that the additional area is necessary for the purposes set out in subs. (b); such necessity will be presumed if the additional area was obtained by permission of the Railway Board as provided in s. 178 of the Act, but not otherwise.

(§ I F—85) — COMMUTING AT FIXED GROSS SUM, HOW CONSTRUCTED—SCHOOLS.

The effect of a fixed assessment by a municipality commuting at a fixed gross sum covering a stated period of years "taxation of any nature or kind whatever" against the company's ratable property used for the corporate purposes of the company is to that extent to exempt from taxation the property to which it applies.

YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

Section 11 of c. 140 of 63 Vict. (Ont.), incorporating the Y. M. C. A. of Ottawa, exempting from taxation its buildings and land so long as occupied and used for the purposes of the association, is not limited to property owned by the previously unincorporated association, but includes as well a building subsequently erected by the corporate body for its own occupancy.

COLLEGE—LOCAL IMPROVEMENTS.

Upper Canada College not being a school maintained in whole or in part by a legislative grant or school tax, and being a college or seminary of learning, would by the Local Improvement Act, R.S.O. 1914, c. 193, s. 47, be liable to assessment for local improvements, but s. 10 of the Upper Canada College Act, R.S.O. 1914, c. 280, exempts it from all assessments, including local improvements, and the latter Act being a local Act is not repealed by the public general Act, and so being exempt from taxation the college is not a necessary party to a petition for local improvements.

Upper Canada College v. Toronto, 32 D.L.R. 246, 37 O.L.R. 665. [Affirmed, 38 D.L.R. 523, 55 Can. S.C.R. 433. See also 13 O.W.N. 92, 119.]

PROPERTY OF EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTION—PERIOD.

When it is a question of determining whether or not a property belonging to a scholastic order is exempt from taxes as being intended for purposes of education it is not necessary to consider its position but what it is intended for. Thus it is immaterial to the question that the educational establishment is situated in one municipality and the recreation grounds of the pupils in another; the latter must be considered to be necessary for the education of the pupils in the development of their physical faculties. A town charter which allows a municipality to make an agreement with the owners of immovables for "fixing the amount at which they will be taxed for a definite period," may make such arrangement for thirty years; art. 4559 R.S.Q., 1888, the Towns and Corporations Act, limiting the exemption from taxes that the town corporations can grant to 20 years does not deprive them of this power.

of worship, such as glebe houses and lands, rectories, parsonages, etc., occupied and used by the pastors in actual charge of the churches, and not rented to third persons or used otherwise than as a means of aiding in the support of such pastors.

Where a statute provides for exemption from taxation of buildings used as a seminary of learning maintained for religious or educational purposes only when the whole profits are applied to such purposes and when the buildings are actually used and occupied by such seminary, the letting of rooms to persons other than students of the seminary in one of the buildings belonging to and used by that seminary for its ordinary purposes does not render either the whole of the buildings and property of such seminary, or the whole of the building in which the rooms are let, liable to taxation if the whole income derived from the room rents is used for seminary purposes.

VII. c. 88, R.S.O. 1914, c. 195, where the profits therefrom are devoted to philanthropic, religious and educational purposes. The fact that a small portion of the property of a religious order, whose dominant purpose is charitable, is used as a boarding place for pupils attending a school conducted by the order, does not prevent the property being exempt from taxation as that of a charitable institution, under s. 5 (9) of the Ontario Assess-

INDIAN LANDS.

Indian lands become taxable from the time they are sold by the Government, though it is only by mere location ticket or permission to occupy. An Indian, the same as any other person, can become owner of a lot of land which has formed part of a reserve when this reserve has been regularly surrendered to the Crown; but he does not benefit as to this immovable by any privilege of exemption from taxes or of unseizability. By arts. 21, 101 of the Indian Act, a located Indian—having the benefit of the privilege of exemption from taxes and unseizability—is an Indian to whom land has been allotted by the tribe while the reserve existed (that is, before it was surrendered to the Crown), and who has continued to occupy it.

(§ II—95)—RESIDENT — SHERIFF WITH HOME IN TOWN OTHER THAN COUNTY SEAT.

For the purposes of taxation, a sheriff became a resident of the county town, where the law required him to reside, and where he kept an office and spent a portion of his time, having a room in the gaol building and boarding with the gaoler during the time he was in the town, and also paying taxes there for two years without objection, notwithstanding the sheriff's family remained in a different town, on property owned by him, and where he spent a considerable portion of his time.

WHERE TAXABLE—GOVERNMENT OFFICIAL.

The appellant, Att'y Gen'l. for Nova Scotia, was at the time of his appointment resident and carrying on a law practice in Bridgetown. In October, 1911, he went to Halifax to reside and where the duties of his office required him to live. About the same time he disposed of his law business in B. and thereafter had no further interest in it. At the time of appeal brought he owned a dwelling-house in B. which his family contemplated visiting and occupying from time to time. Being assessed for income in B. for the year 1912. Held, that he was not liable to be so assessed for income under s. 15 of the Assessment Act, R.S.N.S. 1900, c. 73, as he did not "reside" in B. within the meaning of the Act. Where the owner of certain land has leased and sublet other land, under a crop payment lease, and his share of the crop has been seized and the proceeds applied in payment of the taxes due on the leased property, the council of the municipality has power, under the Rural Municipality Act, R.S.S. 1900, c. 87, by agreement, to apply the proceeds of such seizure in payment of the lessee's taxes due on other land. Such power may be exercised by resolution.

BUILDING LOTS—FARM LAND.

Alberta Pacific Grain Co. v. Strome, 6 W.W.R. 1560.

ON "PERSON" OR "LOT"—AUTHORITY OF BOARD.

In assessing a general rate for a rural municipality the proper principle to adopt as to a minimum tax is that such tax is applicable to the "person" and not to the "lot," but where a minimum tax is levied under the provisions of the Supplementary Revenue Act each lot is to be assessed. The authority of the local Government Board to deal with matters of assessment dates from Sept. 24, 1914, and accordingly where an assessment for that year has been completed and closed prior to that date, the Board has no authority to open up the assessment for that year although a portion of it has been made on an improper basis.

MINIMUM TAX—"PERSON"—"LOT"—REVISION BY BOARD.

Notwithstanding anything in the Rural Municipality Act, the local Government Board may, where it appears desirable, revise and adjust assessments upon giving the proper notices. Wilson v. Sherwood, 9 W.W.R. 853.

(§ III B—112)—ASSESSMENT AND APPOINTMENT OF RAILWAY PROPERTY.

The assessment of the real property of a steam railway company does not become fixed for the next following four years, under s. 45 of the Ontario Assessment Act, 1904, upon the mere formal receipt by the clerk of the municipality of the company's annual statement of such property, and the transmission to the company of a notice of the amount of the assessment thereof, such amount being the same as the amount of the previous year; the only assessment which remains so fixed is an actual assessment after inspection and valuation.

RAILWAYS—"SUPERSTRUCTURE."

The "superstructure" of a railway, within the meaning of an assessment statute (Con. Ord. N.W.T. 1898, c. 71, s. 3), includes that which constitutes the line of railway, such as the ties, rails, bridges, culverts, platforms, etc., but not the buildings thereon. which is liable to assessment and taxation under s. 47 of the Taxation Act, R.S.B.C. 1911, c. 22.

ASSESSMENT OF RAILWAY PROPERTY—RAILWAY ASSESSMENT ORDINANCE, s. 3—SCHOOL ASSESSMENT ORDINANCE, s. 41, SUBS. 3—ILLEGAL ASSESSMENT.

The right-of-way, station grounds, and buildings of the plaintiffs, a railway company, within the school district of the defendants, were assessed by the defendants for the years 1912 and 1913 at $49,500 and $50,000 respectively. The buildings were worth, according to the evidence, $5,775, and the lands comprised 50.73 acres. Section 3 of the Ordinance respecting the assessment of railways, Rev. Ord. N. W. T. c. 71, provides that the roadway and superstructure shall not be assessed at a greater value than $1,000 per mile:—Held, that the curative effect of subs. 3 of s. 41 of the School Assessment Ordinance, Rev. Ord. N. W. T., c. 105, is not such as to extend the powers of a school board, but is limited to matters over which the board has statutory jurisdiction; and the defendants having in their assessment exceeded the limit prescribed by s. 3 of c. 71, the assessment was ultra vires and illegal. Held, also, that as the foundation of the jurisdiction to assess was nonexistent, the plaintiffs were not bound to appeal, but were entitled to question the assessment in an action. [Brantford v. Section 1 of c. 71, Con. Ord., N.W.T. 1898, provides that the roadway and superstructure of the roadway of a railway company shall not be assessed at a greater value than $1,000 per mile. "Roadway" here means the right-of-way as indicated in the Railway Act, namely, a strip of land 100 ft. wide upon which is constructed the roadway of the company, and does not include all its yards, buildings, tracks and sidings.

DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY.

The failure to note on an assessment roll, as imperatively required by s. 31 of the Municipal Assessment Act (Man.), the fact that land assessed was unpatented, will render the assessment invalid. [Haisley v. Somers, 13 O.R. 600, applied.] Provincial lands held by one under an agreement for purchase thereof from the Crown are "unpatented" lands within the meaning of s. 31, which requires the fact that where lands assessed for taxes are unpatented, the fact is to be noted on the assessment rolls.

Under the Assessment Act, 4 Edw. VII (Ont.), c. 23, s. 22, whereby land "subdivisions" are to be assessed separately two or more lots or parcels on a plan should not be included in one assessment. Upon the separate assessment of a part of a lot in a land subdivision such part should be designated in the assessment roll by its boundaries or other definite description, so as to indicate what part is intended.

DESCRIPTION—REMEDY.

An assessment roll when finally passed by a Court of Revision binds all parties concerned, notwithstanding any defects or errors therein, and such defects or errors are therefore not proper subjects for an action at law.

DESCRIPTION OF LAND—EFFECT ON TAX SALE PURCHASER.

It is only for the purpose of a tax sale and the conveyance to the tax purchaser that a description of the land in the assessment thereof is required to be sufficient to identify the land and permit of the registration of a transfer; if the ratepayer is personally liable for the taxes on the land and he pays them under protest, it is not open to him to recover them on the ground that the identity of the land was not made clear in the description contained in the assessment roll.

WATER POWER AND LANDS—DESCRIPTION—ASSESSMENT AT LUMP SUM.

When immovables are situated on both sides of a river and are acquired with the right to use the water of the river for a water power, but as a matter of fact no works were there to develop it, the following description contained in the valuation roll of the municipality for the purpose of taxation, to wit, "basin water power," is not indicative that the water power which does not exist is taxed, but is a mere description of the lands which are taxed; and this tax is not illegal on the ground that the lands and the water power being taxed for a lump sum, the tax was for a thing that did not exist.

(§ III B-119)—C. & E. TOWNSITE TRUSTEES—VALID ASSESSMENT AGAINST—TOWNSITES LIMITED ACQUIRING LANDS—NOTICES—VALIDITY OF ASSESSMENT—ASSESSMENT COMMITTEE—TAX ROLL—PREPARATION OF.

Trustees named by the company constructing the Calgary & Edmonton Ry. for the purpose of handling its townsites along the railway line, and who were commonly known as the "C. & E. Townsite" Trustees or "Townsite Trustees" were assessed for the land under the name of "Townsite Trustees" which was a valid assessment. In 1913 the defendants were incorporated and in 1915 became owners of the assessed land, there being nothing to shew that they did not hold it under the same trusts as their predecessors in title. An assessment for taxes for 1916 and 1917, in the name of "Townsite Trustees," the notice being sent to the firm which was manager of the lands both before and after the defendants became incorporated, held to be a valid assessment against the defendants. The Municipal Ordinance (Alta.) s. 123, providing for the appointment of an assessment committee by the council consisting of "the mayor or reeve, secretary-treasurer and assessor, or any two others with the assessor" does not mean that the mayor and secretary-treasurer must both be either included or excluded, but that the assessor is to be a member and some two other persons are to be associated with him. A bound book, the left-hand page containing the information required for the assessment roll, and the right, the additional information for the tax roll in accordance with the Town Act, is a sensible method of preparing the roll under the Municipal Ordinance, and free from substantial objection, the two pages constituting a tax roll.

NOTICE.

The omission of the word "limited" from the name of a company to whom a tax notice is mailed will not invalidate the notice where the notice conformed to the rolls in that respect and the officers of the company knew that the company was meant to be designated and they acted on that assumption.

Where there were three co-owners of a property called the "Queen's Hotel," its assessment under that name (with the names of the three co-owners beside it on the roll) and the sending of the assessment and tax notices to the one of the co-owners, who lived at and managed the hotel, the others not living in town, which had been done for some years, was held not to invalidate proceedings for assessment and taxation and for distress and sale by the town for realizing taxes, which proceedings were attacked by one claiming under a chattel mortgage the property so distrained. In any case the defect or error in the transmission of the notice or receipt thereof is cured by s. 317 of the Town Act.

The curative provisions of the Town Act, c. 2, 1911-12, are not intended to condone a total neglect of the ordinary duties of a municipality in relation to assessments and the collection of taxes; s. 317 (which provides that "no defect, error or omission in the form or substance of the notice or statement required by ss. 301, 302 hereof, or in the service, transmission or receipt thereof, shall invalidate any subsequent proceedings of the recovery of taxes") involves or assumes the existence in some form or other of at least a notice and statement issued and directed to the taxable person.

Where prospects of future sales or future profitable exploitations of land are considered in estimating the value of such land for taxation purposes under s. 321 of the charter of the city of Edmonton (Alta.), it is the present value of such prospects only that are to be taken into account. The value at which lands in the immediate vicinity have been assessed is an important factor in determining the assessment value in question, but this does not apply where such lands have been grossly overvalued by the assessors. [Fraser v. Fraserville, 34 D.L.R. 211, [1917] A.C. 187, followed.]

VALUATION—GRAIN ELEVATOR.

By s. 302 of the Town Act, R.S.S. 1909, as amended in 1915, a grain elevator is assessable at the actual value of the building, and unless it is used for commodities other than grain the business carried on therein is exempt from taxation; nor, by virtue of s. 292, is it subject to taxation when not in existence at the time of the completion of the assessment roll.

"ACTUAL VALUE" OF LAND—SPECIAL ADAPTABILITY—WATER POWER.

In assessing land at its "actual value" within the meaning of s. 40 (1) of the Assessment Act, R.S.O. 1914, c. 195, it is proper to take into consideration its special adaptability, such as its use in developing a valuable water power, and whether its value as a town lot or as agricultural land was enhanced owing to its being so situated that it was capable of being used in developing the water power. VALUATION.

Although s. 3 of title 31 of the Strathcona charter, c. 34, 1907, provides that "land shall be assessed at its fair actual value," the fact that the word "value" is not to be given its ordinary meaning, but rather a special meaning for the purpose of assessment, is shown by the provision therein that "in estimating the value, regard shall be had to its situation and the purpose for which it is used, or, if sold by the present owner, it could and would probably be used in the next succeeding twelve months."

Strathcona v. Edmonton & Strathcona Land Syndicate, 3 A.L.R. 259.

INCREMENT TAX—VALUE OF LAND.

The increased value of land under the Unearned Increment Tax Act (Alta. 1913, 2nd sess., c. 10) is to be computed as of the time of registering the transfer.

Bredin v. Canadian Northern Town Properties, 39 D.L.R. 20, 13 A.L.R. 225, [1918] 1 W.W.R. 542.

ACTUAL VALUE.

The Manitoba Assessment Act, R.S.M. (1913), c. 34, s. 29, does not authorize the assessment of property at more than its actual value.

"ACTUAL VALUE"—HOTEL PROPERTY—PROHIBITION ACT.

In assessing property the assessor should determine the "actual value thereof within the meaning of the Municipal Act, R.S.B.C. 1911, c. 170, as amended by s. 30, c. 46, 1915, by taking the viewpoint of a solvent owner not anxious to sell, but yet not holding for a fictitious or merely speculative rise in price, and by considering how such value is affected by existing conditions. [Re Charleson Assessment, 22 D.L.R. 249, 21 B.C.R. 281, at pp. 285 and 296, applied; Re Municipal Clauses Act and Dunsuir, 8 B.C.R. 361, distinguished.] In assessing a hotel property the effect of the British Columbia Prohibition Act upon the former value thereof should, therefore, be taken into consideration.

Re Municipal Act; Gates' Case, [1918] 2 W.W.R. 930.

LAND — VALUATION OF BLOCKS — FRONTAGE — FAIR ACTUAL VALUE.

A block of land forming one parcel and held under one title may be assessed as one parcel although it is of a varying character which makes one portion much more valuable than other portions; the assessor will be assumed to have taken the varying values of the different frontages into consideration in fixing a lump sum or average rate for the entire block of land.

Pearce v. Calgary, 23 D.L.R. 296, 9 W.W.R. 195, 31 W.L.R. 298. [See 31 D.L.R. 548.]

DECLINED VALUES.

If the condition of land values in a city is abnormal in that there is practically no market because of the collapse of a real estate boom, the assessor must endeavour to fix the value for assessment purposes on a normal footing under a statute which directs that property shall be estimated at its actual cash value as it would be appraised in payment of a just debt from a solvent debtor.

VALUATION BELOW ACTUAL VALUE—VALIDITY.

A municipal valuation roll in which all properties as a whole are valued below their actual value is illegal and will be annulled by the court.

La Cie. d'Approvisionnement d'Eau v. Montmagny, 25 D.L.R. 292, 24 Que. K.B. 416.

ASSESSMENT BELOW ACTUAL VALUE — GOOD FAITH — UNIFORMITY.

A valuation roll is not a nullity for the reason merely that the valuers have assessed in it the taxable properties for a third of their actual value only if this low and insufficient valuation has been made impartially, in good faith, in a uniform manner and in proportion to the respective values of each of the properties situated in the municipality.

Rivard v. Wickham West, 47 Que. S.C. 441.

REVISION OF VALUATION ROLL—HOMOLOGATION.

Under our municipal laws, the preparation of the valuation roll by the valuator and its deposit with the secretary-treasurer is not a completion of the roll. It is completed and ready for homologation only when it has been revised by the council, or it is decided that no revision is necessary. The word "completion" of art. 4511, R.S.Q. 1909, must be construed in that sense. Therefore, the council may, at any time, after the expiry of the delays prescribed for the examination of the roll, on complaint or not, revise and homologate the valuation roll.

Whelan v. Aylmer, 48 Que. S.C. 204.

COMMON STANDARD.

In order to secure under the Rates and Taxes Act (N.B.), 3 Geo. V., c. 21, a common standard of valuation for general county purposes, the value of property as fixed by special Acts for assessment purposes is the value to be taken, and not its full value as provided by s. 4 of the Act.

St. John v. Board of Valuers, 43 N.B.R. 369.

VALUATION.

The want of the buyer, the site of the property, and the price paid for identical land in the neighbourhood are the best guides in valuing real estate.

Herbert v. Saint Michel, 18 Rev. de Jur. 228.

EDMONTON CHARTER—APPEAL FROM ASSESSMENT — WHETHER 1919 AMENDMENT APPLICABLE — "FAIR ACTUAL VALUE" — ASSESSOR'S VALUATION — INTERFERENCE BY COURT.

In an assessment appeal from the decision of the council to a judge under the Edmonton Charter where under the requirements of s. 344 the roll for the year 1919 was adopted by the council on June 23, 1919, it was held that amendments to the charter as to estimating value and as to variation on appeal assented to April 17, 1919, applied for the purposes of the appeals. The term "fair actual value" in s. 321 considered. Where the assessor has honestly applied all the factors entering into his problem on the footing of the law as set out in s. 321 and reaches an unbiased and reasoned conclusion which is relatively fair and equitable, the court should be slow to interfere unless he has flown in the face of an imperative requirement of the charter or has proceeded on a wrong principle of law.

Condell v. Edmonton, [1919] 3 W.W.R. 214.

MUNICIPAL LAW — VALUATION ROLL — NULLITY — AGREEMENT — MUN. CODE, 725, 742, 734, 743, 746a, 939, 940, 941, 1061.

When a valuation roll cannot fulfil the purpose for which it was made, namely to serve as a basis for the imposition of taxes, it is absolutely null, and no agreement can cover its nullity, but if it is only imperfectly made up, as, for example, if it contains a valuation uniformly either too high or too low, but sufficient for the assessment of taxes, the taxpayers can agree to it. Thus, when a valuation roll does not take into account the value of the buildings, and estimates a lot worth $3,000 at $300, and the interested party does not take advantage of his right to lodge a complaint before the local council, or of his power of appeal to the county council, and has not given any proof of injustice or wrong resulting to him from such valuation, in his action in nullity commenced 18 months after the homologation of the roll, such silence is an acquiescence in, and a ratification of, the list as homologated.

The words, "on railway lands," in R.S.O. 1914, c. 195, s. 47 (3) (the Assessment Act), exempting certain structures and other property "on railway lands" from municipal assessment, include all lands in the lawful use and occupation of a railway company, exclusively for railway purposes, or incidental thereto, without reference to the title under which they may be held.

The meaning and intention of the agreement between the Province of Manitoba (c. 39, 1 Edw. VII. 1901) and the C.N.R. It is not necessary that the entire board of assessors unite in an inspection of property for the purpose of assessing it for taxation; it is sufficient if each member ascertains the values as he thinks them to be and reports the facts and his views to the other members of the board for final determina-

FIXED ASSESSMENTS — ACTUAL VALUE.

Lands of industrial corporations, under "fixed assessments" granted by by-law of the municipality in which they are situate, are not assessable for equalization purposes for county rates, beyond the amount of the fixed assessments; except for school rates, the fixed assessment must be regarded, both for county and municipal taxation, as the actual value of the properties.

"ACTUAL VALUE" — REVIEW ON APPEAL.

The "actual value" at which the assessors of the city of Montreal are bound to assess real properties must be the selling value, that is, the price which the owner might obtain for his property from a purchaser who, without being bound to pay, might want to acquire it. The assessors should only take count of the value of property at the moment of making the roll; they cannot take into consideration the expectation of public works, such as the opening of projected streets, the construction of sewers and other works of the same nature. The principle that a court of appeal should only intervene with much circumspection in the exercise of the functions of municipal assessors has application only in a case where the law gives to these officials a purely discretionary power, and not when they violate a principle or positive rule of law.

Lacroix v. Montreal, 54 Que. S.C. 139.

BUSINESS ASSESSMENT — COURT OF REVISION REDUCING ASSESSMENT — TAKING INTO CONSIDERATION MATTERS BEYOND ITS SCOPE — CONCESSION IN NATURE OF BONUS — DISCRIMINATION AGAINST OTHER BUSINESS.

The provisions of the City Act with regard to assessment of business should be construed and carried out as far as possible with uniformity and equality. Concessions should not be granted to one ratepayer to the prejudice of another, nor should one class of business be favoured at the expense of other businesses of a similar class. Appeal from a Court of Revision reducing assessment of a certain department store business allowed because in granting reduction the Court of Revision in effect was granting a concession in the nature of a bonus which was a discrimination against other business.

ANNULLMENT OF VALUATION ROLL — PARTIES — OFFICERS.

A municipal valuation roll in which the ratable properties are, as a whole, valued below their actual value is illegal and null. In such a case the proper remedy is by an action to set aside the roll and not by an appeal to the Circuit Court. Every ratepayer, by separate title, has sufficient interest to institute the action. The municipal corporation is responsible for the acts of its municipal valuers, who are its officers, and there is no necessity for impleading the latter as parties in the cause.

Rivard v. Wickham-West, 25 Que. K.B. 32.

MUNICIPAL VALUATION.

A court should intervene with great discretion in the valuation of immovables made by a municipal valuator: it should only set aside his valuation where it has been made on a principle so erroneous that a competent and honest man could not have made it.

St. Denis v. Montreal, 49 Que. S.C. 55.

SECURITY—AMENDMENT.

An appeal to the Circuit Court from decisions of a municipal council, upon the examination or revision of the valuation roll as provided by pars. 4 & 5 of art. 1061 Mun. Code is intended to secure a review of this decision and not to cause the roll to be annulled. A petition accompanying the appeal which alleges grounds of nullity of the valuation roll and concludes by demanding that the roll "be quashed and set aside" constitutes a real petition for quashing which should be preceded by the security required by art. 352 Mun. Code. The security should be furnished at least ten days before the presentation of the petition to the court, failing which the petition will not be received. The court cannot go beyond this imperative provision of the law and permit the security to be filed after the expiration of the delay. Art. 1072 Mun. Code is intended to allow the amendment of municipality proceedings carried to the court by way of appeal but not the amendment of proceedings in the court sitting as a court of Appeal or of cassation.

Bédard v. Sillery, 49 Que. S.C. 29.

APPEAL—WHAT REVIEWABLE.

An objection as to the rate of taxation cannot be dealt with in an appeal from the assessment, and, therefore, the right of such appeal can in no way affect the right to raise such an objection at the hearing of an action for the recovery of taxes. The right of appeal given by the Town Act to the Court of Revision does not preclude an objecting party from raising in another court the point that he is not the owner of anything that is assessable.

(§ III D—136)—ASSESSMENT.

An assessment of taxes by a city corporation is not invalid though the provisions of s. 281 of the City Act, R.S.S., 1909, c. 84, providing that before the notices are sent out the assessment roll must be checked over by a committee consisting of the assessor and two members of the council, were not complied with if the roll was finally passed by the council as provided in s. 298 of that Act, to the effect that the roll as finally passed by the council shall be valid and bind all parties concerned, notwithstanding any defect or error committed in or with regard to such roll. The substitution, for the purpose of qualifying him as a voter, of the name of a landowner for that of a former owner of the same property upon the assessment roll upon his shewing to the officer charged with the custody of the roll his certificate of title, is not invalid merely on the ground that it was done prior to the decision of the Court of Revision upon the owner's application to that court to have his name placed upon the voters' list under the Mun. Ordinance, Con. Ord. 1898, c. 70, in force in Alberta, if, in fact, the court afterwards granted his application. Under a statute which permits any person otherwise duly qualified to vote whose name is not on the voter's list, to apply to have such list amended by the addition of his name, and which also declares qualified those persons who are named on the last revised assessment roll as occupants or owners of real estate of a stated amount held in their own right, the amendment of the voters' list on such application casts upon the officer in charge of the assessment roll the duty of amending the latter in the same way.

On an appeal to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of Ontario from the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board, in respect of the assessment of the property of a public utility company, the question determined is one of law that the Board should, on the facts as found, fix the value of the property at a particular figure; the Appellate Division does not decide as a matter of fact that such is the value of the property, but to save any question as to the effect of the opinion of the Appellate Division, its certificate may contain a statement that in the opinion of the court it would have no effect as res judicata in any future assessment.

CONCLUSIVENESS OF ASSESSMENT — "RE-HEARING."

Where an assessor has acted honestly and has arrived at a valuation of property without any mistake in principle or law the valuation will be given great weight by a Court of Appeal. Clause 12 of s. 138 of the Municipal Ordinance, which provides that "the decision and judgment of the judge shall be final and conclusive in every case adjudicated upon, and can only be appealed from by a unanimous vote of the council," gives a right of appeal from a judgment reducing an assessment, if the council by a unanimous vote authorizes the appeal; and, in the absence of any provision in the statute as to the Court of Appeal or the machinery of appeal, it must be presumed that the appeal is to the same court and in the same manner as any other appeal from a District Judge.

Where a notice of appeal from assessment is given pursuant to the provisions of s. 279 of the Town Act, R.S.S. 1909, c. 85, on the ground that it is "too high," the Court of Revision has not power to raise the assessment appealed from in the absence of a notice that it was "too low." RURAL MUNICIPALITY—TAXES ASSESSED BY LOCAL IMPROVEMENT DISTRICT.

A rural municipality that succeeds a local improvement district, may, in the name of its council, recover unpaid land taxes assessed before the organization of the rural municipality by the local improvement district under the provisions of c. 36 (Sask.) 1906, and c. 88 R.S.S. 1909, as well as the Supplementary Revenue Act, c. 37, R.S.S. 1909.

ARREARS FOR MORE THAN SIX YEARS—RECOVERY—STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.

The Statute of Limitations is no defence to an action to recover arrears of taxes which have been in arrears more than six years, the action being in respect of a liability created by statute the period of limitation is that applicable to an action upon a specialty. LOCAL ASSESSMENTS—AS DEBT—VALIDITY—"INSTALLMENTS."

Rates levied on land under the Municipalities Local Improvement Act (B.C. 1913, c. 49) are recoverable as a debt, and may be counterclaimed in an action on an award for land taken under the Act; any defects in the by-law or assessments are cured by ss. 38, 44 (2), and cannot therefore be set up. The expressions "number of instalments" in s. 30 (c) and "annual instalments" in s. 42 (2) mean one or more instalments.

SEIZURE AND DISTRESS — AMOUNT DUE — VALUE OF GOODS.

Seizure for more than the amount of taxes really due does not render a distress void. Where the value of the goods seized greatly exceeded the amount due, and at the sale the amount received was much below the assumed value of the goods, distress was held valid upon sufficient goods at the price realized to pay the amount due, and the defendant was held liable to pay the difference between the value of all the goods seized and the value which might properly have been seized. TERMINATION OF LIABILITY—FORFEITURE—SATISFACTION.

Lands forfeited under tax enforcement proceedings, under the Town Act (Alta.), are deemed to be taken in satisfaction of the taxes, and the personal liability of the taxpayer is thereby terminated.

FORFEITURE — SATISFACTION — REGISTRATION.

An adjudication of a forfeiture of land for nonpayment of taxes which was not registered nor advertised as required by the Towns Act, so that no title thereto has vested in the municipality, does not operate as a satisfaction of the taxes. [Castor v. Fenton, 33 D.L.R. 719, distinguished.]

CONFIRMATION OF RETURN—EFFECT.

The confirmation of a tax enforcement return by the District Court Judge under the Town Act (Sask.), vests the taxed land in the municipality subject to redemption, the municipality receiving the land for all taxes then overdue thereon, and assuming responsibility for all taxes against it subsequently to the taxes that have been confirmed; the municipality cannot afterwards seize other property for taxes included in the confirmation or overdue at that time.

ACTION UNDER MUNICIPAL ACT—APPEAL—REVISION.

If an assessment of land is illegal the person assessed is not compelled to resort to the remedy of an appeal to the Courts of Revision, but may resist an action under the Municipal Act (B.C. 1914, c. 52, s. 275) to recover the taxes. A municipality has no power to assess lands situate in another municipality.

SEIZURE FOR TAXES—"OCCUPANT"—NOTICE—"AT LEAST TEN DAYS"—DAMAGES.

Under s. 308 (1) of R.S.S. 1909, c. 87, authorizing seizure for arrears of taxes, the seizure of "the property or in possession of any other occupant of the premises" can be made only when the property is found upon the land in respect of which the taxes are due, and such property is liable only for the taxes due upon that particular parcel of land. In an action for damages for a wrongful seizure of property for arrears of taxes the onus is on the defendant to show the legality of the seizure. [McCutcheon v. Minitonas, 2 D.L.R. 117, followed.] The plaintiff held not to have been an "occupant" within the meaning of s. 2 (10) of the Rural Municipality Act, R.S.S. 1909, c. 87, of a certain quarter-section of land, although his cattle were found thereon. The "at least ten days" public notice prescribed by s. 308 (2) of the Rural Municipality Act, of an intended sale of property for taxes means ten clear days. [Canadian Canning Co. v. Fagan, 12 B.C.R. 23, 3 W.L.R. 38, followed.] C. 5, 2 William & Mary (an Act for enabling the sale of goods distrained for rent in case the rent be not paid in a reasonable time) does not apply to the seizure of goods for arrears of taxes.

Purdy v. Langenburg [1918] 3 W.W.R. 161.

PRIMA FACIE EVIDENCE OF DEBT—DESCRIPTION—CERTIFICATE—SUFFICIENCY.

An entry on the assessment roll describing the property as "Tenant on Canadian Pacific Railway property" does not sufficiently set forth all the particulars required by ss. 12, 24 of the Municipal Assessment Act, R.S.M. 1913, c. 134, and a certified copy thereof cannot therefore constitute prima facie evidence of debt under s. 144. In the absence of evidence that the officers of "clerk" and "treasurer" were held by the same person, a certificate signed by the treasurer and not by the clerk, as required by s. 144, is likewise defective. [Jacker v. International Cable Co., 5 T.L.R. 13; Toronto v. Russell, [1908] A.C. 493; McCutcheon Lumber Co. v. Minitonas, 22 Man. L.R. 681; Blakey v. Smith, 20 O.L.R. 279; *Wildman v. (§ III E—142)—FREE GRANT LAND—LIABILITY OF LOCATEE FOR TAX AGAINST PRIOR LOCATEE WHOSE RIGHTS HAD BEEN CANCELLED.

The goods of a locatee on land relocated by the Crown after the forfeiture or cancellation of a prior location under the Free Grants and Homesteads Act, R.S.O. 1897, c. 29, are not subject to seizure or distress for unpaid taxes assessed against the prior locattee's interest, no attempt to collect having been made while he was in possession. Pattison v. Emo, 12 D.L.R. 309, 28 O.L.R. 228.

A tax valuation statute may apply to a pending action calling in question the validity of the tax assessment; and where it declares that the assessment was valid and binding notwithstanding any defect or irregularity in the proceedings taken, and that the validity thereof shall not be questioned in any action on account of any defect or irregularity in said proceedings, or on account of noncompliance with any statutory provisions, the statute must be construed as retroactive and as including cases as to which litigation was pending at the time it was passed. The word "taxes" in s. 129 of the Municipal Assessment Act, R.S.M. 1902, c. 117, giving a municipality the right to a distress of the goods and chattels of one neglecting "to pay taxes," includes taxes on personal property as well as those on real estate. The necessity for any demand for arrears of taxes is met by following the requirement of s. 129, which provides that if a person neglects to pay his taxes for thirty days after the mailing to such person or his agent of the notice required by s. 123 of such Act, the municipality shall have a right to a distress and sale of his goods. A loan made under by-laws passed for the purpose of enabling a municipality to borrow money and providing that it may "hypothecate" all arrears of taxes, does not pass all proprietary interest of the municipality to the lender so as to deprive it of its right to distrain for taxes in arrears.

DISTRESS OF GOODS FOR—CONDITIONAL SALE—VENDEE'S INTEREST UNDER—VENDOR'S RIGHTS, HOW LIMITED—ONUS.

Under the Town Act, R.S.S. 1909, c. 85, the municipality has the right to distrain for tax arrears upon the interest of the person taxed in any goods to the possession of which he is entitled under a conditional sale contract, as well as upon goods which are his absolute property; so where goods seized for taxes against the person rightfully in possession are claimed by the conditional vendor, who fails on demand to produce to the municipality proofs of his title, he will be deprived of his costs of an action in which his title was established.

VALIDITY OF SEIZURE—WARRANT—SCHOOL RATES.

A warrant for the collection of school rates was issued without compliance with the provisions of the Assessment Act, R.S.N.S. 1900, c. 73, s. 82, subs. 1 and 2 (made applicable to the collection of school rates by the Education Act, R.S.N.S., c. 52, s. 97), the collector having failed to make the return and oath in writing required by the Act. Held, that the warrant was issued without jurisdiction and that therefore no justification for the seizure and sale of plaintiff's goods could be made under it; that the defendant trustees having received and retained the proceeds of the seizure and sale their objection that they did not convert the goods could not prevail.

(§ III F—145)—PERSON ASSESSED MAY BUY—TITLE ACQUIRED.

The person assessed may himself buy in the property at a tax sale under the Assessment Act, R.S.O. 1914, c. 195, to perfect his prior defective title, and his tax deed will create a new commencement of title free from prior adverse possession. [Stewart v. Taggart, 22 U.C.C.P. 284, and Tomlinson v. Hill, 5 Gr. (Ont.) 231, applied.] Soper v. Windsor, 22 D.L.R. 478, 32 O.L.R. 352.

SALE.

In order that a sale of land for arrears of taxes may be openly and fairly conducted, within the meaning of s. 172 of the Assessment Act, 4 Edw. VII. (Ont.) c. 23, something more is required than easy-going, unenquiring honesty on the part of the official who sells. The sale must be conducted as an ordinary business transaction is, where property is sold by auction with a view to obtain its fair market value, and fairness is required on the part of the vendee, as well as of the vendor. [Donovan v. Hogan, 15 A.R. (Ont.) 432, followed.] Sutherland v. Sutherland, 4 D.L.R. 591, 3 O.W.N. 1368, 22 O.W.R. 296.

A forced sale by municipal bodies of a property on which there are arrears of municipal taxes is subject to the rules generally applicable to the contract of sale, and hence a sale super non domino and non possidente is absolutely null.

Hull v. McConnell, 3 D.L.R. 37.

SALE—ENCUMBERED PROPERTY—RIGHT OF PURCHASE.

Notwithstanding a dedication of land for a highway may be ineffectual as against mortgagees, the latter's rights are divested and the dedication becomes effectual upon the land covered by the highway subsequently becoming vested in the municipality by title under a tax sale.

INDIAN LANDS—LIMITATION OF TIME FOR ATTACKING.

The limitation as to time, in the Indian Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 81, s. 59, during which the original purchaser of Indian lands may claim assistance of the courts in having a tax sale of his lands declared invalid, is applicable only to a case where the Superintendent-General has actively intervened between the tax purchaser and the original purchaser, by taking under consideration the tax deed, and approving it as a valid transfer by endorsement thereon; but there is no such limit of time in attacking an illegal tax sale and deed, if no action in respect of the tax deed by way of approval has been taken by the Superintendent-General.

The statutory protection afforded by s. 209, Assessment Act (Ont.), to the effect that where lands are sold for arrears of taxes, and the treasurer has given a deed for the same, that deed shall be to all intents and purposes valid and binding, if the same has not been questioned before some court of competent jurisdiction by some person interested, within two years from the time of sale, does not apply if there has been no legal impost of taxes, nor does it apply where the tax has not been in arrear for three years next preceding the furnishing of the list of lands liable to be sold under s. 152 of the Act or where no such list was furnished.

BURDEN AS TO REGULARITY.

In an action to recover property alleged to have been sold under an invalid tax sale, though the person in possession of the land has a certificate of title, if it appears that the defendant's certificate of title under the Land Registry Act (B.C.) was obtained by him as purchaser at a tax sale, the burden is on him to establish the regularity of the tax sale. BY MUNICIPALITY—IMMOVABLES—INTERPRETATION OF TOWN CHARTER.

A provision in the charter of a town that when a ratepayer in arrears for taxes appears, by a return of insolvency, to have no chattels, the mayor can, with authority from the council, issue an order to the sheriff of the district to seize the immovables for which the taxes had been imposed, must be strictly interpreted and the formalities required observed on pain of nullity. A resolution of the council passed more than a year prior to the process-verbal of insolvency is not sufficient to authorize the mayor to issue such order, and an opposition by the ratepayer to have it set aside will be maintained.

Saint-Jean v. Bouin, 44 Que. S.C. 469.

A sale of land for unpaid taxes under arts. 998 et seq., Mun. Code, can only be made for municipal and school rates. There is not included therein, under the definition thereof by art. 19, par. 22, Mun. Code, the cost of work done on a drain or bridge by a highway inspector. Therefore, a sale announced and made to realize an amount formed in part of such rate is void, and a sale to realize such amount is equally void when the statement required by art. 371 was not transmitted, in the preceding month of November, by the local secretary-treasurer to the secretary-treasurer of the county.

TAX SALE — IRREGULARITY — SALE HELD OUTSIDE MUNICIPALITY — "ARREARS" — INVALIDITY OF CERTIFICATE.

All irregularities and defects in proceedings anterior to and at a bona fide de facto land tax sale, found to have been fairly and openly conducted by the officer named for that purpose (whether such irregularities are trivial or grave, and whether or not they are of a character which, but for the section referred to might have been held by the courts on a contest to be fatal to the validity of the sale), are cured by s. 3, c. 31 (B.C.) 1901. See R.S.B.C. 1911, c. 127, s. 36. Noncompliance with conditions precedent, such as the issue of proper certificate, the fact that taxes validly imposed have been in arrear for two years prior to the passing of the municipal by-law directing the sale, the existence of a proper assessment roll (as distinguished from an anticipatory roll, not formally adopted by the council), the election of a council or the appointment of an assessor prevents the curing of an irregularity by the section referred to. The period of two years from the time of sale, on expiration of which a sale of land for arrears of taxes is validated by s. 173 of the Assessment Act, 4 Edw. VII. (Ont.), c. 23, runs from the time of making the tax deed, and not from the time of the auction sale of the land. [Donovan v. Hogan, 15 A.R. ORDER CONFIRMING RETURN — REGISTRATION — EFFECT.

A town is not obliged to obtain a judge's order confirming the return of unpaid taxes required by s. 349 of the Town Ordinance (R.S.S. 1909, c. 35, as amended, by c. 28 of 1912-13), but may exercise a discretion; when the order has been obtained the town is bound to send it to the Registrar of Land Titles, and his duty is to register it against the lands therein mentioned; subject to the owner's right of redemption, the land thereupon becomes vested in the town in lieu of the right to collect the taxes; if not redeemed within the time limited, the land is held by the town free from all liens except those of the Crown or the town not merged; the lien of the town becomes merged after the town has procured a certificate of title to the land.

CONFIRMATION OF SALE — LAND TITLES — ORDER — INVALIDITY.

Section 2 of c. 49, R.S.S. 1909 provides that no application for an order for confirmation shall be heard until all persons appearing by the records of the proper Land Titles Office to have any interest in the said land have received notice of such application; an order made in the face of this statutory prohibition is made without jurisdiction and is void. The questions involved, not having been determined in a regular procedure, the doctrine of res judicata has no application.

MUNICIPAL ACT—RIGHTS OF PURCHASER—LAND—FIXTURES—EQUITABLE WASTE.

Where land is sold under s. 250 of the Municipal Act, c. 52, 1914 (B.C.), for arrears of taxes, improvements thereon become the property of the purchaser, although improvements are not assessed. A purchaser at a tax sale under the Municipal Act obtains an inchoate right in, or title to, the property which may ripen into a complete title upon failure of the owner to redeem, and while the purchaser cannot now enter into possession during the redemption year, equity will apply to the person in possession the principles of equitable waste, so as to prevent him from acting in respect of the property to the injury of the tax sale purchaser, and therefore the purchaser may obtain an order restraining the owner from removing from, or disposing of, fixtures in a building on the land sold and for the return of those removed. MUNICIPAL TAX SALES — ACTION TO SET ASIDE—PARTIES—PURCHASER.

Although s. 1019, old Mun. Code (Que.) reproduced in s. 751, new Code, declares that the action to set aside the sale of immovables sold for municipal taxes can only be taken against a municipal corporation whose officers are in default, the real owner of an immovable property sold "super non domino" has, nevertheless, the right to summon the purchaser, and to add petitory conclusions to his action to set the sale aside.

TAXATION — TAX SALE — ARREARS OF TAXES ACT, ss. 37 AND 47 — APPLICATION FOR TITLE BY ASSIGNEE OF TAX PURCHASER — APPLICATION TOO LATE—FORFEITURE OF CLAIM.

The advertised date of sale of land for taxes was Oct. 18, 1915. The actual date of sale was Oct. 25, 1915. The application of the assignee of the tax purchaser for title was dated Oct. 15, 1918, and was received by the registrar on Oct. 22, 1918. Held that under ss. 37 and 47 of the Arrears of Taxes Act (c. 21, 1915), the application was received too late and the applicant forfeited all claim to the land and to the amount paid by her in connection with the purchase at tax sale and for subsequent taxes.

(§ III F—147)—SALE EXTINGUISHING RESTRICTIVE BUILDING COVENANT.

A restrictive building covenant contained in a deed to the land is extinguished upon a tax sale of the property, and will convey it to the tax purchaser free from any claim under the covenant. [Tomlinson v. Hill, 5

APPLICATION TO BE REGISTERED — EASEMENT — DUTY OF REGISTRAR — PURCHASER'S RIGHT CONTESTED — AUTHORITY OF REGISTRAR — ACTION AGAINST MUNICIPALITY — WHEN NECESSARY — EXTINGUISHMENT OF EASEMENT.

When a tax sale purchaser makes application to be registered as owner of the land set out in his tax sale certificate, the duty of the registrar is to cause to be served upon all persons who appear by the records of the land titles office to be interested in the lands sold, a notice requiring them within a specified time to contest the claim of the tax purchaser, or redeem the land. If the purchaser's right is contested on the ground that the sale was not openly and fairly conducted, the matter may be disposed of by the registrar. If, however, the ground is that the land is subject to an easement because such easement has not been properly assessed, it must be by action against the municipality. If no action is brought against the municipality the treasurer's return (see Arrears of Taxes Act, 1915, ch. 21, Sask.) is conclusive evidence to the registrar of the validity of the assessment and the sale of the land for taxes, and the easement is extinguished. Where land is sold for arrears of taxes, and there is no local advertisement, except a bill posted at the court house, and a single insertion in two papers of the abbreviated advertisement authorized by subs. 3 of s. 143 of the Assessment Act, 4 Edw. VII. (Ont.) c. 23, and only three or four persons attend the sale, and only one bid was made which was of the exact amount of the arrears offered by the brother of the owner, who had been anxious, though not to the knowledge of the municipal officers, to get the land, the sale is not openly and fairly conducted within the meaning of s. 172 of the Act.

SETTING ASIDE — IRREGULARITIES — CURATIVE ACT.

A tax deed for land purchased by the City of Toronto for unpaid taxes of said city, is not open to attack on the grounds that the land was improperly assessed; that it was not sufficiently described as required by law; that proper notice of the assessment was not given or served; that no proper return was made by the collector; that no proper by-law was passed by the city council expressing a desire that the city should purchase the land for arrears of taxes, and authorizing the purchase, or that no notice of the city's intention to do so was given to the landowner; since all such irregularities were cured by s. 8, of 3 Edw. VII. (Ont.) c. 86, validating all sales of Toronto land for taxes prior to and including the time when the land in question was sold to the city, irrespective of all prior errors and irregularities. OWNER'S RIGHT TO STATUTORY NOTICE.

Under statute 4 Edw. VII. c. 23, s. 165 (2), requiring a written notice, as prescribed by subs. 6, s. 46, to be sent to a nonresident owner of land, which has been sold for arrears of taxes, giving him thirty days' time in which to redeem his property, the notice must be sent to the last address lodged by the owner in the city treasurer's department; and the fact that the city treasurer had obtained outside information that letters addressed to the owner at the address on file in his office did not reach their destination, does not excuse sending the notice to the address given, in the absence of a direct revocation of the address filed by the owner himself, and it is immaterial whether he had in fact a different address in New York so long as the prescribed notice under subs. 6, s. 46, stood unrevoked.

It is only by way of exception, and with-

By arts. 227, 230, 231 of its charter, the city of Quebec can only exact the annual personal tax of $2 from male persons domiciled for six months in the city and from those who, living outside the city limits, are already obliged to pay another tax, by reason of carrying on in the city their trade profession or calling. Walker, 1 Russ. & M. 752. [The will in Allan v. Gott, L.R. 7 Ch. 439, distinguished.] The mere fact that executors are given wide discretionary powers in dealing with the whole estate to dispose of the real estate of the testator and in reinvesting the proceeds thereof does not ipso facto put the case on all fours with Allan v. Gott, supra. The contention of the Provincial Treasurer of Manitoba that, for the purpose of arriving at the amount of succession duties payable by the estate of Lord Strathcona, legacies to all beneficiaries should be deemed to be payable pro rata out of the whole estate, and the real estate in Manitoba should bear its pro rata share, not upheld, the court holding that the will did not create out of the real and personal estate a mixed fund for the payment of legacies.

CONSTITUTIONALITY — PROPERTY OUTSIDE THE PROVINCE — DIRECT TAX—B.N.A. ACT, R.S.Q. 1909, s. 1374.

The "Quebec Succession Duties Act," R. S.Q. 1909, s. 1374, is constitutional, being in accordance with the powers conferred on the Province of Quebec by the B.N.A. Act. This tax is imposed upon the transmission of property by succession, and not upon the property itself; and its payment is a condition precedent imposed on the seizing of the heir. Movable property being governed by the law of domicile of the owner, this Act authorizes the Province of Quebec to impose a direct tax upon movable property abroad. A direct tax is one which, in distinction to an indirect tax, is imposed upon a person, without the intervention of any agent or intermediary whatsoever. Without the assistance of the interpretative and declaratory statute of the Quebec legislature, which declares that this tax upon estates is direct, it could be held, under the previous law, that the tax is direct.

Burland v. The King, 46 Que. S.C. 430.

CONSTITUTIONALITY — PERSONS LIABLE — HEIRS—ASSIGNMENT.

When, as required by the statute relating to succession duties, one of the persons mentioned in art. 1380, R.S.Q. 1909, has deposited with the collector of revenue the declaration required by that article, and the collector has notified him of the amount that he should pay, such person does not become the debtor of the Government except in regard to such duties as may affect his share in the succession, but not for those duties which may affect the shares of other beneficiaries. Each of the beneficiaries in the succession is debtor for the duties charged upon his share therein without recourse against any person whomsoever. The old law relating to succession duties had not the effect of creating indirect taxes, and is not unconstitutional as ultra vires of the legislative powers of the provinces. Section 3 of the statute of 1914, 4 Geo. V, c. 11, which declares the statute not to apply to pending cases, does not exempt from its application any but those cases in which the unconstitutionality of the statute to which the interpretation is given has been specially pleaded. The assignment by an heir of his share in the succession, for consideration, constitutes an actual acceptance of the succession. The heir making the assignment cannot take exception to it in order to avoid the obligation on his part to make payment of the duties upon his share therein.

DECIDING VALUATION — THE SUCCESSION DUTY ORDINANCE, c. 5 OF 1903 (2ND SESS.) — EXECUTOR'S AFFIDAVIT OF VALUE—REVALUATION BY PROVINCIAL TREASURER—NO OBJECTION BY EXECUTOR—BOND SECURING PAYMENT OF DUTY—ACTION ON BOND—DEFENCE OF EXCESSIVE VALUATION — REVALUATION BY COURT.

The executor of an estate filed an affidavit of value with inventory pursuant to s. 6 of the Succession Duty Ordinance, c. 5 of 1903 (2nd Sess.), then in force. The provincial treasurer sent him a revised valuation of increased amount and fixing the succession duty. No objection was made and a bond (conditioned for payment of "any and all duty to which the estate may be found liable under the ordinance") was furnished as required. The executor subsequently requested extensions of time for payment. In an action by the provincial treasurer upon the bond the defence was that by mistake the assets were valued greatly in excess of their actual value and the liabilities were subsequently found to be much greater than as set out in the affidavit of valuation. Held, nothing that had taken place had finally decided the valuation; in cases other than under ss. 7, 8, 9, 10, providing for valuation by an appraiser and appeal to a judge from his decision, finality, other than by agreement, could only be arrived at by an action under ss. 11, 12; the question of values was open under s. 12; and the court fixed values independently of those stated by the executor in his affidavit under s. 6 or by the provincial treasurer.

MOVABLE GOODS SITUATED IN A FOREIGN COUNTRY—ACT OF 1914—ITS CONSTITUTIONALITY—4 GEO. V., 1914, c. 10—C.C. QUE. ART. 6.

The Act called the Succession Duty Act relating to the imposition of direct taxes on the transmission of certain property passing to a successor situated in a foreign country is intra vires of the powers of the legislative, and constitutional. This right to place direct taxes on goods which have only their legal situation in the province is exercised as much by virtue of the maxim mobilia sequuntur personam as by the provisions of art. 6, C.C. (Que.), directing that movable goods are governed by the law of the domicile of the owner. The actual transmission, of the property of a deceased person to his legatees in the province, of certificates of stock or shares in foreign companies, constitutes personal property situate in the Province of Quebec and upon which the legislature has the right to impose a direct tax. In the absence of a special provision to the contrary, the imposition of succession duty on personal property situated in a foreign country does not apply to heirs domiciled outside the province. The succession duty tax, as imposed by 4 Geo. V., [1914] c. 10, is a direct tax.

Barthe v. Sharples, 55 Que. S.C. 301.

(§ V A—183)—RATE OF TAXATION—AGGREGATE VALUE OF ESTATE.

The aggregate value of all the estate owned by the deceased at the time of his death is the basis on which the rate of taxation is to be computed and fixed under clause (a), s. 5, of the Succession Duty Act, and not the aggregate value of the property liable to succession duty.

Receiver-Gen'l of New Brunswick v. Rosborough, 24 D.L.R. 354, 48 N.B.R. 258.

(§ V A—184)—CONTINGENT TAX—ANNUITIES.

A gift for life of the income from the residue of an estate does not create an annuity within the meaning of the Succession Duty Act (Ont.).

(§ V B—185)—CHARITABLE BEQUEST—SUCCESSION DUTY—CHARITABLE PURPOSES WITHIN THE PROVINCE — SUCCESSION DUTY ACT, N.B., 5 GEO. V. 1915, c. 27, s. 6.

In New Brunswick charitable bequests are liable to succession duty unless specifically bequeathed for charitable purposes within the Province. The rate of duty is 10 per cent and accrued interest at 5 per cent if not paid within 6 months after the testator's death.

Provincial Secretary-Treasurer of N.B. v. Robinson, 49 D.L.R. 361.

A legacy is exonerated from the payment of the succession duty established by the Ontario Succession Duty Act, 9 Edw. VII, c. 12, when it is expressly declared by the will to be "free of legacy duty" and the payment of the duty required falls upon the residuary estate.

PHILANTHROPIC INSTITUTION — CHURCH — "PERSON."

A legacy to a church or philanthropic institution is one to a "person" (by virtue of the Interpretation Act), and where less than $2,000 is, by virtue of s. 5 (2) (b), c. 45, 1905 (Man.), exempt from payment of succession duty.

C. PERSONS, PROPERTY, TRANSFERS AND INTERESTS SUBJECT TO TAX.

(§ V C—190)—PERSONS, PROPERTY, TRANSFERS AND INTERESTS SUBJECT TO TAX.

A succession duty established by the Ontario Succession Duty Act, 9 Edw. VII, c. 12, is a tax which is to be borne by the legatee unless the will contains some provision casting the burden upon the residuary estate. Under subs. 2 of s. 6 of the Ontario Succession Duty Act, 9 Edw. VII, c. 12, providing that no duty shall be leviable on property devised or bequeathed for religious, charitable or educational purposes to be carried out in Ontario by a corporation or a person resident in Ontario, it is essential in order that a legacy to a corporation organized in England may be free from any duty that the charitable purpose of the legacy should be carried out in Ontario and it is not sufficient for this purpose that the money might without breach of trust be expended within Ontario.

SITUS OF SHARES.

Shares of stock of a bank have their situs for the purpose of succession duties in the place where the bank has located their share registry office, and not where the bank has its head office; the share register is the document which determines the locality of the shares.

The maxim mobilia sequuntur personam being clearly excluded in the Manitoba Succession Duties Act, R.S.M. 1913, c. 187, the movable property of a deceased domiciled Manitoba citizen locally situate out of the province at the time of his death is subject to taxation under the Act. A covenant in an agreement under seal for the sale of land, to pay the purchase money, creates a specialty debt and the document being in the Province of Manitoba and the money payable there, though the land is situate in another province is deemed to be property subject to taxation under the Succession Duties Act, R.S.M. 1913, c. 187.

SITUS OF PROPERTY—BONDS AND SHARES IN FOREIGN COUNTRY—DOMICILE.

Notwithstanding the change in the Quebec succession duty law, made by the Succession Duty Act of 1906, by adding a statutory definition of the word "property" (art. 1191c), stocks, bonds, and debentures having their situs outside of the province were not subject to succession duty, although the decedent was domiciled in the province, the operative clause being expressly limited to property "in the province," and this limitation not being removed by the statutory definition of the term "property" by which it was to include "movables wherever situate of persons having their domicile in the Province of Quebec."

VALUE OF CORPORATE SHARES.

In fixing the value of shares of stock of a company forming part of the estate of a deceased person so as to fix the amount to be paid under the Succession Duties

(§ V D-207)—COLLECTION OF—"SURTAX" PROVISIONS—DEFENCES—REGULARITY OF PROCEDURE NOT IN QUESTION.

The fact that a municipality is using the taxes collected under the "surtax" provisions of the Rural Municipality Act (R.S. S., c. 87) and amendments (see stats. 1912-13, c. 31, s. 4), for municipal purposes is no defence to an action for recovery of such taxes if the regularity of the procedure for the levy and assessment is not called in question. The ultimate use or destination of such taxes is a matter to be settled between the province and the municipality after the collection has been made by the municipality. The provisions of the Act respecting the assessment and levy of municipal taxes are applied to the surtax in the same manner and to the same extent as if the surtax were part of the general municipal levy, and for this purpose the surtax roll is to be deemed to be and to be taken as a part of the assessment and tax roll of the municipality.

Under s. 247 (g) of the Railway Act 1906, the Board only has jurisdiction to direct that wires be placed underground and to abrogate the right of a public utility company to carry its wires along highways on poles. The Board cannot order that poles and wires be moved from one street to another or that wires be placed in cables or upon a designated line of poles. Such a company, however, has at all times the right to remove its pole line from a street and an order from the Board to place its wires underground does not prevent it from exercising such right.

The Board refused to order telegraph companies to provide special tolls for press service similar to tolls provided by another telegraph company under special agreement when it appeared that the objecting companies had not sought the press business or provided the necessary facilities for it and that it would be unremunerative. The Board held that an increase from 25 to 50 cents per 100 words in telegraph tolls for "press specials" in the Maritime provinces, while the former rate of 25 cents was continued in Ontario and Quebec was prima facie an unjust discrimination against the Maritime provinces and in the absence of evidence of special circumstances justifying the difference in rate ordered the former rate to be restored.

In determining what are reasonable tolls for telegraph messages in Canada, the tolls charged for similar services in the United States may be taken into consideration, but these comparisons are merely informative, not conclusive. [Canadian Oil Cos. v. G.T.R., C.P.R. and C.N.R. Cos., 12 Can. Ry. Cas. 355; Manitoba Dairymen's Assn. v. Dominion and Can. Northern Express Cos., 14 Can. Ry. Cas. 142, followed.] The value of a telegraph service, as evidenced by the extent to which it receives public patronage, is not a safe criterion of the reasonableness of the tolls charged for it, though the public may be willing to pay these tolls rather than be deprived of it.

Re Telegraph Tolls, 20 Can. Ry. Cas. 1.

DISCRIMINATION.

The continuance, under statutory obligation, of a twenty-five cent telegraph toll within Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, while higher tolls are charged in other zones, is no evidence of undue discrimination or undue preference; nor does the anomaly created, by these uniform low tolls within a very large zone, justify the Railway Board in establishing the same tolls, or equally large zones, elsewhere.

The ultimate test of discrimination is to be found, not in a difference of tolls, but in the question whether as a result of this difference injury is caused to an individual or a locality. [Michigan Sugar Co. v. C.W. & L.E.R. Co., 11 Can. Ry. Cas. 253, Wegenast v. G.T.R. Co. (Brampton Commutation Rates Case), 8 Can. Ry. Cas. 42, affirmed; Toronto and Brampton v. G.T.R. and C.P.R. Cos. (Brampton Commutation Rates Case, No. 2), 11 Can. Ry. Cas. 370, followed.]

Re Telegraph Tolls 20 Can. Ry. Cas. 1. TARIFFS.

In a general enquiry into the tariff of tolls of telegraph companies the Board took into consideration, the value of the plant employed, the cost of construction and equipment of the telegraph lines, the facilities afforded them by railway companies, the proportion of railway to commercial business over lines owned or operated by railway companies, the relations generally between telegraph companies and railway companies, the distances covered, the volume of business done in the past, the prospect of future business, the probability of increased competition, the cost of operation and the gross and net returns and promulgated an amended table of reasonable maximum tolls upon the zone system based on a transcontinental toll $1. Though distance is not so directly nor so largely a factor in the cost of telegraph service as of railway transportation, it is by no means entirely negligible; it should be considered in fixing zone areas and tolls should be based on distance to a greater extent than they have been in the past.

Re Telegraph Tolls 20 Can. Ry. Cas. 1. The division of a through toll as between companies is primarily an inter-company matter and does not directly concern the public; provided the total toll is reasonable.

Re Telegraph Tolls, 20 Can. Ry. Cas. 1. TELEGRAPH TOLLS—DEVELOPMENT STAGE OF BUSINESS.

The Board has recognized that while in general telegraph tolls must be looked at from the standpoint of a general scheme, yet where business is in a development stage the isolation of the telegraph line and the particular facts of the particular section should be considered. [Telegraph Tolls, 20 Can. Ry. Cas. 1, followed.]

The Pas v. G.N.W. Telegraph Co., 22 Can. Ry. Cas. 402.

II. Liability as to transmission of messages generally.

(§ II-50)—LIMITATION OF LIABILITY.

A telegraph company may validly stipulate in a contract for transmission of a message that it will not be liable in case of failure to transmit by fault of its employees for more than the price paid for its transmission unless the message is repeated at the expense of the sender. Such an agreement contains nothing unlawful nor contrary to public order.

Tanguay v. G.N.W. Telegraph Co., 51 Que. S.C. 261.

(§ II-51)—MISDELIVERY OF MESSAGE—LIMITATION OF LIABILITY—PUBLIC POLICY.

A telegraph company which receives a message from England addressed to a person in Quebec is bound to deliver it as soon as received, and if by error it delivers it to another person it is liable in damages for the loss suffered by the person to whom it was addressed. Such company cannot by a clause for immunity relieve itself from liability, the obligation of the company to deliver telegraph messages being based upon a public law for the interest of the public.

TELEPHONES.

(§ I-2)—COMPULSORY SERVICE.

Notwithstanding the Ontario Telephone Act, 1910, there is no jurisdiction in the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board to make an order directing "connection, intercommunication, joint operation, reciprocal use and transmission of business," involving the expenditure of money upon capital account, by the subscribers to a telephone system, constructed and installed under the provisions of the Ontario Local Municipal Telephone Act, 1908.

ASSOCIATION — ELECTRIC LINE — SALE — ACCESSORIES — UNDIVIDED OWNERS — ACTION — ALLEGATION — C.C. QUE. ARTS. 1499, 1830 — C.C.P. ARTS. 113, 123.

The following writing, "the undersigned desiring telephone service with another, and with Lachute, agree to contribute equally toward the necessary expense, which is estimated not to exceed $675 in total. This is void, unless at least 13 subscribers are obtained, in which case the expense is estimated to be $50 each," does not create a Society between the subscribers, but makes them undivided owners of an electric line. One of those who signed the above writing, after having connected his house with an electric wire, in the network built by the association, sold his property and all its accessories. Held, that this transaction, and the right of the seller in the public electric line, being real rights and not personal, had been transferred with the property and belonged to the purchaser. An undivided joint proprietor has no right on the undivided part of his joint proprietor and can do nothing which will injuriously affect such undivided part, so that if, in the above case, certain members of the association had the electric wires of the purchaser cut, they are liable for damages. Although the plaintiff had called his action a negatory action, when it is not a question of servitude, he has a right to damages, if these allegations, his conclusions, and his proof justifies them.

(§ I-3)—DOMINION AND PROVINCIAL COMPANIES — JURISDICTION—DISCRETION — UNJUST DISCRIMINATION—COMPETITIVE AND NONCOMPETITIVE—DUPLICATION—7 AND 8 EDW. VII. C. 61, PART 1, s. 1 (b).

Under para. b. of the interpretation clause, s. 1 of 7 & 8 Edw. VII. c. 61, part 1, a provincial company cannot invoke the jurisdiction of the Board to prohibit, on the ground of unjust discrimination, a Dominion company from, in the exercise of its discretion, making an agreement with one noncompetitive provincial company, and refusing it to another, which is alleged to be similarly situated, in order to prevent competition, or more correctly speaking duplication in telephone service.

TOLLS—EQUALIZATION—BASE AREA—LOCAL SERVICES RENDERED — PUBLIC TELEPHONES—COIN-BOX OR ATTENDED—UNJUST DISCRIMINATION.

It is unjust discrimination for a public utility company, whose tolls should be equalized according to the services rendered, to charge double the toll at the attended station for local calls compared with the toll at the coin-box booth, both being public telephones. The Board ordered the respondent to equalize its tolls for local calls by fixing a toll for local messages on a "two-number basis" from public telephones inside the base toll area at five cents, and outside thereof at ten cents.

Lemieux v. Bell Telephone Co., 23 Can. Ry. Cas. 141.

UNJUST DISCRIMINATION — FREE MILEAGE ZONES—EXCESS MILEAGE.

There is no necessary connection between free exchange limits and civic limits; when untrammelled by arrangements already made by the company, it is a question of distance and of particular facts; and where the company had extended its flat toll applicable within the city, to certain territory outside, it was in the absence of circumstances to justify the discrimination ordered to extend the same toll to all territory within an equal distance from its main exchange. The existence of excess mileage does not in itself constitute unjust discrimination, but where the conditions of telephone transmission up to the limit of the free area of an exchange are the same, it is unjust discrimination to treat the man living beyond this area and within the exchange territory in a different manner from the man living inside this area; that is to say, he should have the same free mileage allowed, and excess mileage should be charged only on the portion of the subscriber's line located beyond the boundary of the free mileage zone. PRIVATE BRANCH EXCHANGE—RESIDENTIAL LINES—CONTRACT — TOLL—LISTING—SEPARATE.

Where the telephone service in connection with which publication by listing in the telephone directory is asked is not of the private branch exchange line, but of the separate residential ones, and entirely distinct from the contract covering the private branch exchange service, the service asked for is a distinct one, and is subject to the separate listing toll.

TOLLS—MAXIMUM — FIXING—RESIDENCE—BUSINESS — SEMI-PUBLIC—INSTALLATION—SERVICE—AGREEMENT.

An agreement between a municipality and a telephone company fixing the maximum tolls to be charged for a residence or business telephone does not prevent the telephone company, subject to the provisions of the Railway Act, from filing its tariff of tolls with the Board covering the tolls to be charged for other forms of telephone service, such as semi public, and giving such service to the public.

LONG DISTANCE TOLLS—AGREEMENT.

Under an agreement between telephone systems imposing "another line" charge in addition to the long distance tolls of the Bell Co., "each party to receive its own charge and the party whose line the call originated shall collect and be responsible for such charge, provided, however, that the Bell Co. shall not be obliged to collect and be responsible for the Proprietor's charge if the Proprietor fails to collect a like charge on messages originating on the Proprietor's system." The obligation in respect of the "other line" charge is mutual, that is to say, if the Bell Co. is asked to collect the charge of the applicant company in respect of the message originating on the Bell Co.'s line, the applicant company must similarly collect in respect of a message originating on its own line, and this obligation attaches to all calls.

TOLLS—BASE — INCREASE—PRIMARY TOLL AREA—PARTY LINE SERVICE — EXCESS MILEAGE—JUSTIFICATION—FREE MILEAGE ZONE—BUSINESS AND RESIDENTIAL.

Where it has been the custom to allow party line subscribers, so situated that they must pay excess mileage tolls, a reduction of one-fifth on the base toll, a discontinuance of this reduction is not justified on the ground that a change of tolls in the primary toll area ordered by the Board rendered obsolete party line service within that area. An order of the Board extending the primary toll area is not sufficient justification for an increase in mileage tolls to subscribers situated beyond that area. [Montreal v. Bell Telephone Co. (Montreal Telephone Tolls Case), 15 Can. Ry. Cas. 118, followed.]

A telephone in the residence of a market gardener and fruit raiser, who has no office telephone, is properly charged the business toll irrespective of the amount of user. [Bayly v. Bell Telephone Co., 11 Can. Ry. Cas. 190, followed.]

TOLLS—BUSINESS — SPECIAL—JUSTIFICATION—CONTRACTS—EXISTING.

A telephone company is justified in charging a business toll for a telephone used by a doctor at his residence. The Board approved the discontinuance of a special toll intermediate between the residence and business toll subject to the completion of existing contracts. [Bayly v. Bell Telephone Co., 11 Can. Ry. Cas. 190 followed.]

Medico-Chirurgical Society v. Bell Telephone Co., 16 Can. Ry. Cas. 267.

JURISDICTION OF BOARD—SERVICE—DIFFERENT EXCHANGES.

Under 7 & 8 Edw. VII. c. 61 s. 5, the board has no jurisdiction to deal with the rearrangement of the respondent's telephone service between different exchanges, the matter being one of internal management of its own business.

Tinkess v. Bell Telephone Co., 20 Can. Ry. Cas. 249.

SWITCHING—SUBSCRIBERS.

The Board is not given any power under 7 & 8 Edw. VII. c. 61, to direct that local telephone service shall be given to an applicant who is not a subscriber of a company subject to its jurisdiction and therefore has no jurisdiction over the switching connected therewith.

Bell Telephone Co. v. Falkirk Telephone Co., 20 Can. Ry. Cas. 256.

PROPER BASIS FOR FIXING TOLLS — IDLE PLANT—CONTRIBUTION OF TERRITORY AFFECTED TO COMPANY'S REVENUE.

Preparation for future needs and readiness to serve are requisites of proper management of a public utility corporation, and it is proper to consider these elements in fixing tolls, when determining whether the value of idle plant shall be included in the amount on which fair return should be allowed.

A company being in an admittedly satisfactory position financially must in order to justify an increase of tolls in specified territory, show that the exchanges operating in the territory affected had not contributed their proper proportion to the general revenues and reserves of the company, and failing such proof application for leave to increase was refused.

Montreal v. Bell Telephone Co., 15 Can. Ry. Cas. 118.

TOLLS—REASONABLENESS—ONUS ON PARTY ATTACKING.

The burden being on the party attacking the existing toll to make out an affirmative case, an attack upon the reasonableness of existing tolls failed where it appeared that the return earned under them was apparently about 8.28 % on the book value of the plant.

Montreal v. Bell Telephone Co., 15 Can. Ry. Cas. 118.

PROPER BASIS—DEPRECIATION—LONG DISTANCE REVENUE.

With regard to depreciation, the percentage or composite life basis as compared with the setting aside of an arbitrary annual amount per instrument has both the sanction of business experience and the approval of regulative tribunals, and either the straight line or the sinking fund method may be used.

It is unfair in fixing tolls to attribute to the city territory as revenue the total long distance business of the company originated and terminated in the city regardless of such additional costs.

Montreal v. Bell Telephone 15 Can. Ry. Cas. 118.

(§ I—5)—INSTALLATION BY REASON OF ORDER OF RAILWAY COMMISSIONERS.

Where a grade separation has been ordered and a city street is lowered in the public interest, so as to go under the railway line by subway, a telephone company having overhead wires on the street is not entitled to compensation from the railway for the expense of moving and relocating the telephone line.

Bell Telephone Co. v. C.P.R. Co. and G. T.R. Co., 5 D.L.R. 297, 14 Can. Ry. Cas. 14.

(§ I—7)—GOVERNMENT REGULATIONS.

The construction and installation of a telephone system under the provisions of the Ontario "Local Municipal Telephone Act, 1908" by an association of individual subscribers, even when operated under a certain name, does not constitute them a corporate body or legal entity, and their telephone system and equipment used in connection therewith become vested in the municipality in trust for the benefit of the subscribers. While the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board may "review, rescind, change, alter or vary any rule, regulation, order or decision" made by it, it should not make an order having the effect of interfering with an agreement entered into between two telephone systems or companies to which the approval of the board had already been given, except on a properly framed application for the purpose, and upon due notice to the parties interested to appear and state their objections; the board has no power or jurisdiction to alter or vary such approved agreement except upon an application of which due notice has been given to the interested parties.

TOLLS—LONG DISTANCE CONNECTION—COMPENSATION—RAILWAY ACT, 7 & 8 EDW. VII. c. 61, s. 4 (5).

The Board, under 7 & 8 Edw. VII. c. 61, s. 4 (5), fixed the terms of compensation upon which an independent local telephone company should have leave to establish a connection with the respondent for long distance service as follows: An annual charge for (1) companies having not exceeding 250 subscribers, $100; (2) companies having exceeding 250 subscribers and not exceeding 600 subscribers, $200; (3) companies having exceeding 600 subscribers, $300; and a special charge of 10 cents each way in addition to the long distance charge of the respondent, of which charge the latter shall receive 7 cents and the applicant 3 cents.

Independent Telephone Co. v. Bell Telephone Co., 17 Can. Ry. Cas. 266.

SERVICE — EVIDENCE — CIRCUMSTANCES AND CONDITIONS — NEW EXCHANGE — VOLUME OF BUSINESS — JUSTIFICATION.

Where it appeared that certain changes with regard to the territory in question had taken place since the previous hearing, including an increase in population from 6,300 to 7,500, an increase in the number of telephones from 273 to 439, the establishment of special deliveries by the post-office and an increase in the number of places of business, the Board found that the evidence was not sufficient to warrant it in coming to any other conclusion than that previously reached that to be entitled to the city toll, the circumstances and conditions of the telephone business in the territory in question should be such as to warrant the establishment of a new exchange, and that the telephone business in the territory in question was not yet sufficiently large to warrant the Board in ordering this to be done. JURISDICTION — LINES ON HIGHWAYS — CONDITIONS — COMPENSATION — RAILWAY ACT, ss. 247, 248.

The Board has no jurisdiction under ss. 247, 248 of the Railway Act, 1906, to make the payment of rent as compensation, a term of an order approving the location and construction of telephone lines upon, along, across or under a public highway, or to impose any condition, for which a municipality may contend in bargaining with a telephone company, a term or condition of such order. JURISDICTION — STATIONS — RAILWAY ACT.

The Board has no jurisdiction under s. 245 of the Railway Act, 1906, to compel a railway company to continue the maintenance of telephonic connection and communication between its stations and the telephone system already installed, of the applicants. The Board has no jurisdiction under ss. 284, 317 to prevent the removal (at the instance of the municipalities within whose limits railway stations are situate) of telephones installed at such stations. The "facilities clause," s. 284, refers to physical transportation and physical accommodation on the railway. Telephonic communication with a railway station to be acquainted with the movement of the passenger or freight trains is not a facility which railway companies are required to furnish to the public under s. 284.

TOLLS — CONNECTIONS — LONG DISTANCE — LOCAL.

The Board has jurisdiction to order connection and fix tolls for long distance business but it has none in the case of connection for local business. [Bell Telephone Co. v. Falkirk Telephone Co., 20 Can. Ry. Cas. 256, followed.] In the case connecting telephone companies it is the duty of both companies to collect the full amount for long distance tolls, and the company should not absorb its share of the through long distance toll. Joliette Telephone Co. v. Bell Telephone Co., 21 Can. Ry. Cas. 443.

CONDITIONS — COMPENSATION — RAILWAY ACT.

The Board is given no jurisdiction under sec. 47 of the Railway Act, 1906, to make the payment of compensation a term of an order approving the location and construction of a telephone line upon a public highway or to impose any condition for which a municipality may contend in bargaining with a telephone company as a term or condition of such order. [G.T.P. Ry. Co. v. Fort William Landowners and Fort William Land Investment Co., et al., [1912] A.C. 224, at p. 229, 13 Can. Ry. Under its charter, 43 Viet., c. 47, s. 3, and the interpretation clause of the Railway Act, s. 2 (11), the Bell Telephone Co. has power to carry its lines along a bridge on which there is a public right of travelling. JURISDICTION.

In approving the route on a highway of the Bell Telephone Co. the jurisdiction of the Board is confined to fixing such terms, condition or limitations as refer to the lines, wires or poles within the municipality. The Board has no jurisdiction to require, as a condition, the payment of any money or the granting of free telephones to the municipality.

Sufficiency of plea of tender, see Pleading, III D-328.

Annotation.

Requisites and sufficiency of tender: 1 D.L.R. 666.

(§ 1—1)—TO WHOM MADE.

When a tender has to be deposited into court it is immaterial that such deposit be made at the time of the issue of the writ or at the time of the return thereof into court, as no prejudice results therefrom to the defendant.

Malo v. Roy, 3 D.L.R. 431, 18 Rev. de Jur. 462.

(§ 1—2)—SUFFICIENCY OF, GENERALLY.

Where the buyer, by letter, advises the seller of his refusal to accept merchandise bought, informing him, at the same time, that, unless the vendor sends shipping instructions, the car will be forwarded to him, and the vendor replies "we positively will refuse delivery if you should decide to return them," the buyer is not obliged to cart the goods to the railway station to make a formal tender; it is sufficient if, in his plea, he renews his declaration that the goods are at the vendor's disposal.

Lachute Shuttle Co. v. Frothingham, 8 D.L.R. 417, 22 Que. K.B. 1.

Where a lease, not under seal, contains a clause giving to the lessee an option to purchase the premises for a certain sum of which part is to be paid in cash, and the remainder secured by mortgage, and a letter is written within the time prescribed, notifying the lessor of the exercise of the option by the lessee, but no tender is made of the cash payment, an action for specific performance will fail, because of the absence of any tender, and the plaintiff cannot rely upon a tender made on the day following the issue of the writ.

Miller v. Allen, 7 D.L.R. 438, 4 O.W.N. 346.

Payment into court by a mutual life insurance association of the amount claimed to be due on a certificate of membership, is insufficient as a tender if the costs of the action already begun for recovery of the amount were not offered therewith.

Cousins v. Moore, 6 D.L.R. 35, 42 Que. S.C. 156.

Where a purchaser under an agreement of sale of lands refused to comply with an express provision for payment of a substantial down payment on the purchase price of lands of speculative value of which he does not receive possession, and after a long interval without taking any action until the property had greatly increased in value offers such down payment to the vendor, the latter will not be compelled to accept the same for the reason that it would, in effect, be constituting a fresh contract.

Cushing v. Knight, 6 D.L.R. 820, 46 Can. S.C.R. 555, 2 W.W.R. 704.

SUFFICIENCY — CONDITIONS — PLEADING — REPLEVIN.

A tender is not necessarily conditional because the lien note of which the amount is due is asked in return, if its return is not made a condition precedent to the receiving of the sum; an offer of a sum exceeding the amount actually due on a lien note, which is refused because other items in the nature of expenses are also claimed, constitutes a sufficient tender, and may be successfully set up in an action for the replevy of animals seized under the lien note. [Richardson v. Jackson, 8 M. & W. 297; Norway v. Ashburner, 3 Moore (N.S.) 245, followed.]

Hart v. Brown, 27 D.L.R. 450, 9 S.L.R. 201, 34 W.L.R. 225, 10 W.W.R. 244.

COUPLING WITH CONDITION, EFFECT OF.

A tender of an overdue instalment on the purchase-price of land under the "crop payment" plan is vitiated if coupled with an unreasonable condition.

SUFFICIENCY—TIME OF MAKING.

Payment on the day after the expiration of a tenancy is a sufficient compliance with an option contained in a lease giving the tenant the privilege of purchasing demised premises by making payment at the end of his term.

Ontario Asphalt Block Co. v. Montreuil, 12 D.L.R. 223, 24 O.W.R. 838, 29 O.L.R. 534. [Varied in 15 D.L.R. 793, 5 O.W.N. 289.]

PAYMENT INTO COURT.

A defendant sued in a civil matter in a magistrate's court in Nova Scotia cannot effectually pay a lesser sum to the magistrate as a payment into court under R.S.N.S. 1900, c. 160, to answer the plaintiff's demand, and thereby avoid payment of further costs of suit if his contention as to the amount is sustained, unless he has first made a tender of the amount to the plaintiff and proves the tender at the trial.

White v. McDougall, 14 D.L.R. 718, 13 E.L.R. 465, 47 N.S.R. 423.

INSURANCE—TENDER OF PREMIUM—NOTICE—REGISTERED LETTER.

Notice of cancellation of a policy of insurance may be given by registered letter addressed to the insured as required by condition 15 of the Ontario Insurance Act (R.S.O. 1914, c. 183, s. 4) and a sufficient tender to comply with condition 11 is made if the money for the unearned premium is enclosed with the notice so properly addressed and registered. The notice, however, is effective only from the time it is actually received by the insured.

London & Lancashire Fire Ins. Co. v. Veltre, 42 D.L.R. 79, 56 Can. S.C.R. 588, affirming 39 D.L.R. 221, 40 O.L.R. 619.

PLAINTIFF BY CONDUCT DISPENSING WITH NECESSITY OF FORMAL TENDER.

To constitute a legal tender, actual production of the money is necessary unless the tenderer expressly or by implication dispenses with it. If defendant goes to plaintiff with money sufficient for, and with the purpose of, making to plaintiff, and so informs plaintiff, who tells defendant he will not take it, this relieves defendant of the necessity of a formal tender.

Choma v. Chmelik, [1919] 1 W.W.R. 948.

(§ I—4)—NECESSITY OF KEEPING GOOD.

Where the plaintiff sued for unliquidated damages, and defendants pleaded tender before action, and paid into court a sum of money which the plaintiff accepted and obtained payment out upon an ex parte order it was held, that the tender was of no value inasmuch as it was accompanied by a statement that it was to be accepted in full satisfaction, and that the defence of tender was improper, and, further, that the plaintiff's conduct having been oppressive throughout the transaction, and having made an unfounded charge of fraud, he should be deprived of his costs.

Wainwright v. Farmer, 16 B.C.R. 468, 17 W.L.R. 676.

(§ I—6)—EFFECT.

Where a vendor of land gives notice of cancellation of the agreement of sale on the ground of default in payment of an instalment of the purchase price, and the purchaser subsequently tenders the arrears, the vendor does not, by offering to reinstate the agreement upon an addition being made to the purchase price, treat the agreement as being still on foot, so as to entitle the purchaser to specific performance upon payment of the arrears.

The tender, at an election of company directors, of a cheque of arrears in payment of a call, does not remove the disqualification imposed by s. 12, c. 53, 52 Vict. (Man.) on a shareholder, so as to permit him to vote at such election.

Colonial Ass'ce Co. v. Smith, 4 D.L.R. 814, 21 W.L.R. 815, 22 Man. L.R. 441, 2 W.W.R. 699.

(§ I—7)—RELIEF FROM MAKING.

The payment or tender of the amount agreed to be paid down on a lease is dispensed with where the lessor informed the lessee that he did not intend to carry out the contract.

Dulmage v. Lepard, 3 D.L.R. 542, 3 O.W.N. 986.

A declaration of the vendor upon inquiry by the vendee in a contract for the sale of land, as to the amount remaining unpaid thereon, that the agreement had been cancelled and terminated for nonpayment, relieves the vendee of the necessity of making a valid tender of the amount due before commencing suit for specific performance of the contract, or a return of the money paid thereon.

Brown v. Roberts, 2 D.L.R. 523, 17 B.C.R. 16, 1 W.W.R. 987.

(§ I—12)—CHEQUE ON BANK.

To constitute a valid tender of money there must, in the absence of some act or condition which amounts to a waiver, be something more than a mere readiness and willingness to pay even though expressed; there must be an actual production of the money and not merely of a cheque therefor.

A tender by means of an accepted cheque is not illegal and cannot be attacked subsequently as illegal when no objection to the form of such tender was made at the time, the tender having been declined on totally different grounds (e.g., the expiry of delays).

Malo v. Roy, 3 D.L.R. 431, 18 Rev. de Jur. 462.

BY CHEQUE—PAYMENT INTO COURT.

A cheque, though not legal tender, is a sufficient tender of payment for goods sold if not objected to on that account; upon a claim for the delivery of the goods, the amount tendered need not be paid into court or be so pleaded.

LIABILITY—TRAINED WILD ANIMAL KEPT FOR EXHIBITION.

The managers of a theatre are not liable for injuries resulting from the bite of a trained monkey owned by one of the performers, over whom the management had no control except while he was in the theatre, where the injuries were sustained while the animal was insecurely chained in a yard of adjoining premises of another person, although the yard was occasionally used by people engaged at the theatre without any direct sanction of the theatre managers or objection by the person who owned the yard, and even though the theatre managers had knowledge that the animal had been tied in the yard on the day preceding the accident.

Connor v. Princess Theatre, 10 D.L.R. 143, 27 O.L.R. 466.

THEATRE ACT—CLEAR AISLES AND PASSAGEWAYS—CONVICTION.

Clause 39 of the regulations made under the Theatres Act (Alta.) requiring free and unobstructed passageways and forbidding that the public be allowed to stand in any aisle or approach thereto or at any place where it would hinder the entrance or egress of the public from the theatre, is not intended to prevent persons who have bought tickets at a moving picture theatre holding a continuous performance from standing in the lobby between the box-office and the auditorium entrance while waiting for seating space in the theatre, if there is a separated space kept clear for exit from the theatre. Clause 39 is ineffective to support a conviction thereunder because it fails to state who shall be responsible that its terms shall be observed and whether the owner, the occupant, or other person connected with a moving picture theatre, shall be responsible for seeing that the halls and passageways are kept unobstructed.

R. v. Hazza, 28 D.L.R. 373, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 306, 34 W.L.R. 97, 10 W.W.R. 117.

PROSECUTION FOR OPERATING WITHOUT MOVING PICTURE LICENSE.

The intention of 3 Geo. V. (Que.) c. 36 (R.S.Q. 1301d), is to impose a provincial license fee on moving picture halls but not on theatres proper, and where the place in question has the appointments of a theatre and holds a municipal license as such, and at each public performance a number of performers or actors appear, it is not subject to the provincial tax merely by reason of the display of moving pictures to make up nearly half of each performance.

UNLAWFUL EXHIBITION—MENS REA.

An accused person may be convicted of having allowed an object to be exhibited, although in fact he did not know that it was being exhibited, if he might have suspected, on account of exhibitions there in the past, that something indecent might be exhibited and if acting as a mandatory of the managers of the exhibition, and having such reason for suspicion, he did not take any advance precaution against what might happen.

Summary conviction for petit theft, see Appeal, I A-1.

A railway conductor who does not account to the railway company for a cash fare he received from a passenger, and who denies the receipt thereof, may, under such facts, be convicted of theft under s. 355 Cr. Code where he omitted to issue a duplex ticket or to account for the money in the usual course.

ESSENTIAL OF OWNERSHIP—DESCRIPTION OF PERSON.

Upon a charge of larceny it is essential to prove ownership in some person other than the accused, and that person if unknown by name must be individualized by circumstantial description.

R. v. Jennings, 29 D.L.R. 604, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 270, 11 A.L.R. 296, 34 W.L.R. 1058, 10 W.W.R. 1049.

Where an indictment for theft charges the defendant with stealing a cow the property of a person definitely named therein, a ruling by the Trial Judge that the question of ownership of the cow is immaterial to the crime, is erroneous, and a conviction based upon such ruling will be quashed.

R. v. Carswell, 29 D.L.R. 589, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 288, 10 A.L.R. 76, 34 W.L.R. 1042, 10 W.W.R. 1027.

MORTGAGE—DEATH OF MORTGAGOR—SALE OF CROPS BY WIDOW.

A widow who continues to live on land owned and mortgaged by her husband before his death, where letters of administration have not been applied for or granted, is a trespasser; her position is not affected by the Devolution of Estates Act, and crops grown by her on the said land do not belong to the estate of the deceased and are not distrainable under either the attornment or the license clause of the mortgage.

The King v. Tachetter, 39 D.L.R. 688, 11 S.L.R. 116, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 179, [1918] 1 W.W.R. 934.

WHAT SUBJECT OF.

One who induced a servant to steal for him a barrel of whisky owned by his master is guilty of an attempt to steal, where the servant, who informed his master of the plan, delivered a barrel of water instead of whisky to the defendant, as the master directed him to do. Where the defendant, with intent to steal a barrel of whisky, induced the servant of the owner to consent to bring it to him, there cannot be a conviction for the theft of a barrel of liquid, where the master, upon being informed by his servant of such plan, directed the latter to deliver to the defendant a barrel of water instead, which was done, as the owner of the whisky deliberately substituted a different article for that which the defendant intended to steal.

R. v. Montgomery, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 233.

WHAT SUBJECT OF—WATER FROM WATER WORKS—FRAUDULENT TAKING.

Water conveyed in pipes may be the subject of larceny at common law, and where it was deliberately taken from the pipes through which an adjoining property owner got his water supply from the city municipality at a flat rate, after the refusal of permission from such owner and without any permission from the city, the person wrongfully appropriating the water is properly convicted on a charge alleging the theft thereof from the city. [Feren v. O'Brien, 11 Q.B.D. 21, 52 L.J.M.C. 70, and R. v. White, 1 Deans. C.C. 203, 22 L.J.M.C. 123, applied.]

R. v. Hutton, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 212, 19 W.L.R. 907.

OF GROWING TREES OR SHRUBS—PROCEDURE—PROOF OF DAMAGE.

Where it is sought to make a summary conviction under Cr. Code, s. 374, for stealing growing trees or shrubs of less value than $25, the value should appear in the information, it being essential to the jurisdiction of the justice that the amount of the damage be at least 25 cents; the inclusion, as part of the penalty, of the sum of one dollar for the damage or injury done does not establish the justice's jurisdiction to make a conviction where no value was proved before him; nor could the conviction be supported as for the indictable offence of theft under $10 triable under Cr. Code, s. 773, by a magistrate having summary trials jurisdiction under s. 771, as there was no proof that the value of the property stolen did not exceed $10 nor did the record shew that the accused, who had pleaded "not guilty," was put to his election of mode of trial under s. 778, as would be necessary for the indictable offence of theft of the wood after cutting the trees into firewood.

GOODS UNDER SEIZURE BY SHERIFF—BOND TAKEN FROM DEBTOR.

A sheriff who has seized under a writ of execution for debt a number of hogs in possession of the execution debtor, and who at the latter's request takes a bond from the debtor and his surety for the purpose of continuing the seizure without the expense of leaving a man in possession, has a special property or interest in the hogs sufficient to make the selling of the same by the accused while under such bond a theft thereof under Cr. Code ss. 347, 386; the seizure was valid as against those who had notice of it, and the accused could not justify by setting up the alleged title of another and the latter's authorization to sell on his behalf. [Dodd v. Vail, 9 D.L.R. 534, 6 S.L.R. 22, affirmed in 10 D.L.R. 694, 23 W.L.R. 903, applied.]

(§ 1—3)—MORTGAGE—BAILEE—SALE OF GOODS.

A mortgagor who gives an undertaking to hold goods seized under a mortgagee's warrant of distress, as agent and bailee, but who subsequently sells the goods and gives no account of the proceeds, cannot be convicted of theft under s. 355, Cr. Code.

R. v. Kimbrough, 41 D.L.R. 40, 13 A.L.R. 412, 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 56, [1918] 2 W.W.R. 892.

CRIMINAL LAW—THEFT OF MONEYS AND SECURITIES—CR. CODE, s. 355—ACCOUNTING—ABSENCE OF FRAUDULENT INTENT.

To support a conviction for theft under s. 355, Cr. Code, it is necessary to make out: (a) a failure to account or pay; or (b) fraudulent conversion; or (c) fraudulent omission to account; where an account has been given, it must be found that prior defaults in giving an account were the result of fraudulent intent. Where the accused had accounted, and there was no evidence to support a finding of fraudulent intent, it was held, that there was no evidence upon which the defendant could be properly convicted.

R. v. Loftus, 46 O.L.R. 45.

(§ 1—5)—EMBEZZLEMENT—PROCEEDS HELD "UNDER DIRECTION."

Cr. Code s. 357 declaring the offence of theft by misappropriating proceeds held "under direction" has reference to cases other than those for theft or embezzlement by a clerk or servant.

R. v. McDonald, 28 D.L.R. 377, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 106, 49 N.S.R. 245.

UNDER POST OFFICE ACT.

Cr. Code, s. 400 originated with the Post Office Act, while the preceding s. 399, originated in the Larceny Act, and in reconciling the language of these two sections which in their ordinary meaning might seem to apply different punishments for the same offence, the words "hereby declared to be an indictable offence" contained in s. 400, must be limited at least to stolen property as to which the offence has been declared to be theft by some specific reference in the Code apart from the general declaration of s. 399, if indeed it may not be further limited to such chattels, parcels or other things, the stealing whereof was specially punishable under the Post Office Act. [Note the language of Code s. 6 as to the meaning of expressions where the subject-matter is dealt with in another statute, and compare ss. 364, 365, 366 taken from the Post Office Act.]

R. v. Nimchouk, 26 D.L.R. 38, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 6, 25 Man. L.R. 766.

RECEIVING STOLEN GOODS—ALLEGING THE THEFT.

A magistrate's conviction under Cr. Code s. 399 should show not only that the accused received the goods knowing them to have been stolen, but should contain an allegation as to the goods having theretofore been stolen, it being possible that prior to the goods reaching the accused they may have lost the character of stolen goods and yet be known to him to have been stolen.

R. v. Watchman, 20 D.L.R. 201, 7 W.W.R. 880, 30 W.L.R. 534, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 362, 7 S.L.R. 201.

[§ I—7]—BY BANK OFFICER.

It is no objection to a warrant for the extradition to a foreign state of a bank officer on a charge of embezzlement of money from the bank, who caused a note endorsed by him to be marked "paid" and to be surrendered upon a part payment of the amount due thereon charging the balance to the bank's interest and discount account, which act was undoubtedly embezzlement under the law of the state of which extradition was demanded, that by subs. (b) of s. 359 Cr. Code, such method of getting a note from a bank was theft and not embezzlement. [R. v. Stone, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 377, applied.]

OBTAINING MONEY FROM IMBECILE—KNOWLEDGE OF IMBECILITY.

If a person gets another to give him money to which he has no right or claim, knowing the giver to be an imbecile and that consequently the latter could have no will to give the money to him, he is properly convicted of theft.

R. v. Wallace, 24 D.L.R. 825, 8 A.L.R. 472, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 95.

[§ I—8]—SALE OF CROP BY TENANT IN FRAUD OF LANDLORD.

Where the terms of an agricultural tenancy are such that the landlord is to receive an aliquot part of the crop as his rent, e.g., a one-third share to be taken to a grain elevator by the tenant and stored on account of the landlord and in the landlord's name as owner thereof, the landlord does not become the owner of any specific portion of the crop until it is divided, notwithstanding the provision in Manitoba statutes 1915, c. 13, s. 2, giving the landlord in such case certain preferential civil rights in regard thereto. The tenant who sells the entire crop in fraud of his landlord is not subject to indictment on a charge of stealing the number of bushels of wheat which would have constituted the landlord's share had a division actually been made; but, quere, whether Cr. Code, s. 352 would not apply to the statutory right declared by the Manitoba statute upon an indictment for theft of the undivided one-third share.

R. v. Hassall, 34 D.L.R. 370, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 322, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 48.

REPOSSESSING GOODS UNDER HIRE-PURCHASE CONTRACT—DEMAND—MISDIRECTION.

It is a question to be passed upon by the jury upon a charge of theft in repossessing a sewing machine under a hire purchase contract in default of payment, whether the accused, acting under the instructions of the conditional vendor, took possession under colour of right and in the honest belief that the contract so authorized, where he repossessed the machine in the absence of the conditional vendee, and without a demand for its return in terms of the contract, although the contract stipulated for entry and repossession without resort to legal process in case of default of payment, and of failure to deliver back the machine upon demand; and it is a substantial wrong entitling the accused to a reversal of the conviction or a new trial (Cr. Code, s. 1019), if the Trial Judge in such case practically withdrew that question from the jury by an instruction that if no demand had been made for the machine itself, as distinguished from the arrears of the hire-purchase price, the prisoner ought to be found guilty.

R. v. Comeau, 27 D.L.R. 692; 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 165, 43 N.B.R. 177.

[§ I—9]—FROM RAILWAY PARLOR CAR—CRIMINAL CODE S. 460.

A compartment of a railway parlor car used for storing supplies is not a "warehouse" within Cr. Code s. 460. Theft from a railway car is punishable under s. 384, but not under s. 460.

R. v. Levy & Gray, 31 Can. Cr. Cas. 19.

(§ 1-10)—CRIMINAL BREACH OF TRUST—INTENT.

On a charge of criminal breach of trust (Cr. Code s. 360), an intent to defraud must be shown and if there is no evidence of that intent before the magistrate holding the preliminary enquiry he exceeds his jurisdiction in ordering a committal for trial.

R. v. Morency, 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 395.

(§ 1-11)—WITH BREAKING AND ENTERING.

The offence of breaking into a counting-house and stealing money therefrom as declared by the English statute 7-8 Geo. IV, c. 29, s. 15, was a part of the criminal law of British Columbia prior to its admission into Confederation, and remains in force under Cr. Code s. 11, subject to the change made by the Code as to the nature of the punishment. [See Cr. Code, s. 460.]

Re Dean, 9 D.L.R. 364, 48 Can. S.C.R. 235, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 374, 49 C.L.J. 234, 3 W.W.R. 1037.

(§ 1-12)—RECENT POSSESSION—EVIDENCE.

On a charge of theft the presumption arising from recent possession of the stolen goods may be applied against the accused in conjunction with direct evidence.

R. v. McClain, 23 D.L.R. 312, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 488, 8 A.L.R. 73, 7 W.W.R. 1134, 30 W.L.R. 388.

(§ 1-15)—EMBEZZLEMENT—VARIOUS DEVALUATIONS AS ONE CONTINUOUS ACT.

A conviction for theft of an entire sum, although it may have been taken in numerous small amounts at different times during the deficiency period, may be supported without proving the taking of each or any of such several amounts and the case treated as one continuous act of theft although there were a number of distinct takings, if a deficiency had occurred equal to the amount by which the accused had falsified an entry in his employer's books at or about the date at which he is charged with having embezzled the sum, if the evidence adduced also warrants the inference that the money stolen had reached his hands and had been misappropriated by him.

Minchin v. The King, 18 D.L.R. 340, affirming R. v. Minchin, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 254, 15 D.L.R. 792, 7 A.L.R. 148, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 414, 6 W.W.R. 860.

ILLEGAL POSSESSION OF GOLD OR SILVER ORES—PRESUMPTIONS.

A person found in possession of silver ore under reasonable suspicion of such possession being illegal, within the meaning of Cr. Code ss. 424, 424A, has thrown upon him the onus of satisfactorily accounting at the trial for such possession when charged under s. 424A, and it is not necessary that before arrest or before the prosecution was begun he should have been asked by a police officer to explain his possession of the ore. R. v. Karp, 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 115, 41 O.L.R. 540.

RECEIVING—AIDING AND ABETTING.

It is only the receiving done in the commission of the principal offence of theft that cannot be treated as a separate offence of unlawfully receiving and a count charging the latter is not bad for duplicity because of its settling out matter which, if true, would constitute the accused an aider and abettor in the principal offence. [Reg. v. Hodge, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 350, 12 Man. L.R. 319, followed.]

R. v. Kelly, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 94, 10 W.W.R. 1345. [Affirmed in [1917] 1 W.W.R. 46; 34 D.L.R. 311, 54 Can. S.C.R. 226, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 463.]

(§ 1-20)—ABSTRACTING ELECTRICITY—DIRECTING COMPENSATION TO OWNER.

Where no claim for compensation under Cr. Code s. 1048 was made by the electric company from which the accused is found guilty of theft in fraudulently abstracting electricity (s. 351), the conviction is irregular in directing that part of the fine be paid to the electric company.

R. v. Sperdakes, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 210, 40 N.B.R. 428.

PRIVATE POSSESSION OF LETTERS BY POST OFFICE EMPLOYEE—CR. CODE, SS. 347, 359, 364.

The mere fact of finding in the coat pocket of a post office employee letters containing money, addressed to another person, may or may not be evidence of theft, according to circumstances.

Richard v. The King, 31 Can. Cr. Cas. 64.

(§ 1-25)—VALUE OF GOODS—PENALTY.

An information or charge for stealing goods in process of manufacture should specify the value of the goods, so that the accused may know whether the prosecution seek to apply the added penalty provided by Cr. Code, s. 387, in case the value is over $200.

R. v. Leclere, 31 D.L.R. 615, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 242.

(§ 1-26)—UNLAWFUL USE OF ANOTHER'S MOTOR CAR.

The marginal note "theft of motor car" appended to s. 285B Cr. Code (amendment of 9-10 Edw. VII, c. 11), cannot enlarge the effect of the provision which it creates, of taking a motor car with intent to operate it without the consent of the owner is not theft but a minor offence.

Hirshman v. Beal, 32 D.L.R. 680, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 319, 38 O.L.R. 40.

(§ 1-40)—ON HIGH SEAS—PROCEDURE.

Proceedings for the trial of a foreign subject charged with theft on a British ship, committed on the high seas, should not be taken under s. 591, Cr. Code but under s. 686 of the Merchants Shipping Act, 1894 (Imp.); the consent of the Governor-General is not required before in-

THIRD PARTY PROCEDURE.

See Parties.

EXCEPTION TO FORM—DESCRIPTION OF PARTIES—INSOLVENCY—AFFIDAVIT.

In a tierce-opposition, where both plaintiff and defendant have already been described and designated in the action, it is not necessary to designate them anew. The plaintiff cannot, in contesting a tierce-opposition, set up irregularities in the service, made on the defendant; the latter alone can take advantage of the irregularities. A creditor of an insolvent has a right to attack by tierce-opposition or otherwise the declaration of the curator that he has illegally recognized the insolvent as debtor of a third party whose claim the third party opposing contests. After the tierce-opposition has been received by a judge, the sufficiency of the affidavit supporting it cannot be attacked by exception to the form. The nullity of the judgment delivered in the main action and of the judgment rendered on the seizure under execution can be demanded even by a tierce-opposition. The want of interest in a tiers-oppoant, based on the fact that should he succeed he could recover nothing, as a privileged creditor would absorb all the assets of the defendant, cannot be the subject of an exception to the form. Touzin v. Peladeau, 18 Que. P.R. 279.

THREATS.

THREATENING LETTER—INTENT TO EXTORT AMBIGUOUS LANGUAGE—EXPLANATORY EVIDENCE IN DEFENCE.

On a charge of sending a threatening letter with intent to extort money, the accused may be heard in explanation of what he understood to be the meaning of the words he had used in the letter, where the expression is ambiguous in view of the surrounding circumstances disclosed by the testimony. The accused charged with having sent a letter demanding money with menaces by threatening the addressee with prosecution for an alleged infraction of the law (Cr. Code, ss. 451-453), is not entitled to shew, upon the preliminary inquiry, that the addressee was in fact guilty as charged in the letter, such not being material to the existence of the offence; but the complainant may be cross-examined as to its truth to shake his credit as a witness. [R. v. Johnson, 14 U.C.Q.B. 569, distinguished; R. v. Cracknell, 10 Cox C.C. 408, applied.] R. v. Odell, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 39.

(§ I-1)—DEED OF, AS LICENSE.

One who makes application for a license to cut timber from a timber limit before it has been surveyed, is not required, in his application, to describe with mathematical accuracy the land he proposes to take up.

LICENSES TO CUT—RENEWAL—COMPLIANCE WITH REGULATIONS.

The departmental regulation declaring that holders of licenses to cut timber on Indian lands shall be entitled to renewal if they have complied with existing regulations does not confer a right of perpetual renewal, as such would be inconsistent with the limitation of licenses to twelve months under the Indian Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 81.

Booth v. The King, 21 D.L.R. 558, 51 Can. S.C.R. 20, affirming 10 D.L.R. 371, 14 Can. Ex. 115.

AGREEMENT TO SELL "CULLINGS"—SALE OF GOODS—SUBSEQUENT SALE OF LAND—TERMINATION OF FIRST AGREEMENT.

An oral agreement to sell the "cullings" of his land is a sale of goods within the meaning of the Sale of Goods Act (N.S. 1910, c. 1); it does not give the purchaser an interest in the land although the trees do not become "goods" until severed from the soil. The purchaser has a legal right as against the vendor to enter upon the land for the purpose of cutting and carrying away the timber, but on a sale of the land to another the uncut timber passes under the deed; the prior contract cannot be enforced to the detriment of the purchaser of the land, and becomes impossible of performance.

CONTRACT—PURCHASE AND SALE OF TIMBER LIMITS—EXECUTED CONTRACT—MISREPRESENTATIONS NOT AMOUNTING TO FRAUD BREACH OF WARRANTY—JUDGMENT IN FORMER ACTION BETWEEN THE SAME PARTIES—RES JUDICATA—ESTOPPEL—EVIDENCE—CREDIBILITY OF WITNESSES—ACCEPTANCE OF TESTIMONY OF THOSE WHO REMEMBER AGAINST THOSE WHO DO NOT—FINDINGS OF TRIAL JUDGE—APPEAL.

Vaughan-Rhys v. Clarry, 5 O.W.N. 929.

The existence of a commercial partnership cannot be proved by oral testimony. Rights acquired by grantees or purchasers of timber limits publicly sold at auction pursuant to the provisions of arts. 1623 et seq. R.S.Q. 1909, are immovable rights and cannot, therefore, be the object of a commercial contract. Oral evidence is not admissible to prove that a typewritten document, unsigned, emanates from a party against whom it is set up as a commencement of proof in writing.

Guerin v. Davis, 42 Que. S.C. 81.

(§ 1-3)—RIGHTS OF PURCHASER—LIABILITY OF RAILWAY COMPANY FOR DESTRUCTION.

On a license under a timber license from the Department of the Interior making a sale of the logs to another who did the lumbering, the logs when cut became the personal property of the buyer, and he has the right to maintain an action against a railway company through whose negligence the same were destroyed while still on the limits, although such buyer had no assignment of the Government license. [Booth v. McIntyre, 31 U.C.C.P. 183, distinguished.]

(§ 1-4)—CONDITIONS PRECEDENT TO RIGHT TO CUT.

Servitude is the right to the surface of the real estate which still subsists as to trees planted and existing at the time of execution of the deed. By the terms of this reservation the defendant, being in place and stead of the vendor, his father, may exercise the right to cut timber whenever he thinks fit, in conformity with the reservation, and consequently, the plaintiff, as representing his father, the vendee of the property, is ill founded in his demand to have a limit prescribed for exercising the right of the defendant. By the terms of the reservation, the defendant has only the right to the timber planted and existing on the date of the deed of sale, consequently, after the proof by which it was established that the defendant took and carried away new timber, which grew after that date, he will be adjudged to pay its value to the plaintiff.

Cournoyer v. Cournoyer, 18 Rev. de Jur. 196.

(§ 1-6)—WHEN TITLE TO PASSES.

A vendor who, under the provisions of a contract of sale of timber rights, was vested with the title to all property of the vendee found upon the land upon the vendor's re-entry for the vendee's default, cannot recover the value of property sold by the vendee before such re-entry from the person to whom the vendee turned over the proceeds of such sales, where the sales were made without fraud to bona fide purchasers.

Klock v. Molsons Bank, 3 D.L.R. 521, 44 Que. S.C. 193.

(§ 1-7)—FORFEITURE BY NONREMOVAL.

Where a sublicensee of rights to cut standing timber is notified by the first holder that the latter claims the timber as having reverted to him and that the license from himself has expired, when in fact a reasonable time has not elapsed for cutting the timber, and no time limit is specified in the license agreement, the sublicensee is not entitled to treat such notification as an interference preventing him from performing his own contract with the intermediate licensee. Where a license agreement for cutting standing timber contains no time limit, it will be presumed that the cutting must be completed within a reasonable time.

Dempster v. Russell, 2 D.L.R. 14, 3 O.W.N. 719, 21 O.W.R. 449.

(§ 1-9)—CONTRACT FOR SALE OF SHARES IN LUMBER COMPANY WITH WARRANTY OF QUANTITY OF TIMBER ON LANDS OF COMPANY—MEANING OF "TIMBER."

Swift v. David, 8 D.L.R. 739, 2 W.W.R. 709, affirming 16 B.C.R. 275, 18 W.L.R. 360.

SALE OF TIMBER—MODE OF ESTIMATING—RIGHTS OF OWNERS OF DAMS.

A sale of timber to be manufactured by a contractor according to a contract (to which reference is made, a copy having been annexed) for the felling of 50,000 trees, but described in the words "the logs which the contractor shall cut," means those that will be in fact cut, and not the whole quantity of the contract. The owner of a dam in a river cannot claim from those using it anything more than the tolls fixed by an order-in-council, according to 7,300, R.S.Q. 1909. Gilmour v. Hugbison, 23 Que. K.B. 122.

(§ 1-10)—EXPROPRIATION—PUBLIC LANDS—PROVINCIAL GRANTS—RIGHT-OF-WAY—TIMBER LICENSE—COMPENSATION.

Malone v. The King, 49 D.L.R. 685, affirming 42 D.L.R. 520, 18 Can. Ex. 1.

CROWN TIMBER LICENSEE—RIGHT OF LICENSEE TO SUE FOR DAMAGES—FIRES.

An action for damage by fire to timber growing on lands held under license from the Crown can be maintained by the plaintiff as licensee.

West v. Corbett, 15 Can. Ry. Cas. 195, 41 N.B.R. 420.

LICENSE TO CUT TIMBER—PROPERTY—CUTTING OF TIMBER—TENDER—ADMISSION R.S.Q. s. 1270.

In an action by the holder of a license to cut timber, for $839 as the value of timber cut, an offer of $664 is an admission of the plaintiff's right to sue for the claim. A license to cut timber is a conditional sale allowing the holder to use the land as if he were the real owner.

FRAUDULENT PROCUREMENT OF TIMBER LICENSES—ACTION.

(§ 1—12)—CROWN TIMBER ACT.—ASSIGNABILITY NOTWITHSTANDING WRIT OF EXECUTION.

An execution against a debtor levied under the execution Act of Ontario, 9 Edw. VII, c. 47, does not interfere with the power of the debtor to assign or transfer his rights under a timber license obtained under the Crown Timber Act, R.S.O. 1897, c. 32, subject to the security of the execution creditor not being impaired.

McPherson v. Temiskaming Lumber Co., 9 D.L.R. 726, [1913] A.C. 145, 23 O.W.R. 458, reversing 3 O.W.N. 36, 20 O.W.R. 13.

RESERVATION IN CROWN GRANT—TRESPASS AND CONVERSION — ACCEPTANCE OF AMENDS BY CROWN.

A grantee of a mining location under a Crown patent made subject to the reservation to the Crown of standing pine trees, but with certain privileges of cutting for use in mining and other operations on the land under the Mines Act (Ont.), cannot recover in trover or detinue for pine timber cut by a trespasser if the Crown holding the right of property in the timber has accepted payment from the trespasser, or from the persons under contract with whom the cutting was done by him, of timber dues in respect thereof and has consented to the appropriation of the timber by him or them to their own purposes as owners of same.

Eastern Construction Co. v. National Trust Co.; National Trust Co. v. Miller, 15 D.L.R. 755, [1914] A.C. 197, 110 L.T. 321, 25 O.W.R. 756, reversing National Trust Co. v. Miller, 3 D.L.R. 69, 46 Can. S.C.R. 45, 22 O.W.R. 485.

LICENSE—RESERVATION—SURFACE RIGHT—POSSESSORY ACTION.

A perpetual right to cut timber growing upon land constitutes a surface right, or a real right, which may be the basis of a possessory action. The reservation by a vendor of "the property forever of all the pine and fir which may at any time in the future be found upon the said lot of land . . . fit for the market," passes the ownership thereto even to that portion which may be lying on the ground or rooted up by the wind, provided that it is marketable.

(§ 1—3)—MEANING OF "DAYS"—EXPIRATION OF OPTION.

An option to exercise a right within ten days will expire, in the absence of some custom, usage or express agreement to the contrary, at midnight of the last day, and not at the end of ten consecutive periods of 24 hours each from the hour at which the option was given. [Dictum of the court disagreeing in this respect with the court below, Bee v. Lea, 7 D.L.R. 434; Startup v. Macdonald, 6 Man. & G. 593, 134 Eng. R. 1029, followed; Cornfoot v. (§ 1—6)—MONTH—"THIRTY DAYS."

A cancellation notice purporting to give the vendee of land but thirty days in which to pay an instalment of the purchase price, is inoperative and of no effect with respect to the cancellation of the agreement of sale, where the default and cancellation clause of the agreement requires that one month's notice be given; and this defect is not cured by the fact that the default and cancellation clause as incorporated in the agreement is set out in full in the recitals which were at the beginning of the notice.

COMPUTATION.

In an action in ejectment accompanied by an attachment for rent, the service of the declaration within three days of the service of the writ has for effect the summoning of the defendant to answer the demand as if such service had been made at the time of the service of the writ.

Smith v. Shapiro, 14 Que. P.R. 160.

"FROM THIS DATE" IN NOTICE SERVED.

A written demand for payment within 30 days "from this date" is to be construed as a demand for payment without that period computed from the date which the notice itself bears where the same is formally dated and not from the day of service of the demand.

(§ I-10)—EXTENSION OF — STATUTORY POWER—SUBSEQUENT EXTENSIONS.

EXTENSION OF—TO REVIEW TAXATION OF SHERIFF'S COSTS.

As the granting of an extension of time under Sask. r. 704 for reviewing the taxation of a sheriff's bill of costs rests in the discretion of the court, special circumstances justifying the extension need not be shown; although every case is not to be treated in a spirit of plenary indulgence, but to be dealt with on its merits when reasonable ground for indulgence is shown. Toll roads are public roads where anybody has the right to pass, provided tolls authorized by law are paid, but a toll road company can demand a toll only on vehicles and animals mentioned in the Acts governing it, and the enumeration of those carriages and animals in art. 6386, R.S.Q. 1909, not including automobile trucks and automobiles, and a by-law of a toll company imposing a toll on vehicles exempted by the Acts is ultra vires and void.

(§ I-15)—FOR USE OF IMPROVEMENTS IN STREAM.

(§ I-16)—DEFECTS IN—LIABILITY FOR.

Trustees of toll roads are liable for damages from accidents caused by the bad condition of the roads of which they have the maintenance. They cannot relieve themselves from such liability on the ground of difficulties caused by exceptional climatic conditions at the time of the accident, or of abuse committed by many of the persons using the road which they have done nothing to prevent. These matters are not of the nature of force majeure or fortuitous event, and afford no defence to the remedy exercised by the person suffering the damage.

(§ 1—1)—NEGLIGENCE—DEATH CAUSED BY FUMIGATING A BUILDING—RULE OF CONTRIBUTION BY BLAMABLE PARTIES.

The liability attaching for the death of a person in the basement of a block caused by fumes of dangerous gas during the fumigation of other parts of the building by the fumigating contractor, under contract with the owner, attaches to the contractor for having generated the dangerous gas and for having failed to confine it to the rooms he was fumigating; against the defendant owner for having, through the order for the work given by his son on his behalf, brought a dangerous substance upon a portion of the premises, and for having failed to confine it; and against the owner's son for having directly ordered the work to be done; the rule applies that in actions of tort all parties concerned are treated as principals. [Fletcher v. Rylands, L.R. 3 H.L. 330; Wing v. London General, [1909] 2 K.B. 652; Dalton v. Angus, 6 App. Cas. 740; and Dominion Natural Gas v. Collins, [1909] A.C. 640, applied.]

Duty of a tug to its tow: 49 D.L.R. 172. Duties and liabilities of tug owner: 4 D.L.R. 13.

(§ 1—1)—DUTY AND LIABILITY OF TUG AS TO TOW.

The owner of a tug not engaged in the towage business, who, by a friendly arrangement with a person from whom he had requested the loan of certain implement for use in his business undertakes to move a boom for the latter, does not thereby enter into an ordinary contract of towage by which he is bound to use a tug of sufficient strength and equipment safely to do the work and to face unfavourable weather conditions, and he is not liable for the loss of the boom through the breaking of the tow line in a gale, when using to the best advantage the equipment he had.

LIEN FOR—MORTGAGE—PRIORITIES—LEX LOCI—PLACE OF CONTRACT—ACCEPTANCE BY TELEPHONE.

Under British and Canadian law a claim for ordinary towage does not give a maritime lien upon the ship towed nor one superior or prior to a mortgage existing upon it at the time the claim arose. Where a contract is proposed and accepted over the telephone, the place where the acceptance take place constitutes the place where the contract is made. Acceptance over the telephone is of the same effect as if the person accepting had done so by posting a letter, or by sending off a telegram from that place. The contract having been accepted in Canada was governed by Canadian law.

LOSS OF TOW—RESPONSIBILITY—PRIVITY OF OWNER—LIMITATION OF LIABILITY—SECTIONS 921, 922, CANADA SHIPPING ACT, R.S.C. c. 113.

In an action seeking a declaration of limitation of liability for negligence in the performance of a towing contract, the owner of the tugs in question established that his vessels had been inspected according to law and their machinery and equipment were in good condition at the time of the towage. It was, however, proved by defendants that a key-pin had fallen from the steering gear of one of the tugs and that there was some want of reasonable promptitude, foresight and seamanship on the part of the master and crew. Held, that the dropping out of the key-pin from the steering gear was quite unforeseen and was not due to any neglect or want of supervision on the part of the plaintiff or their superintendent, and the accident having been due to the fault and negligence of the crews on board the tugs constituting the tow and having been caused without plaintiff's actual fault or privity, the plaintiff was entitled to an order limiting its liability.

Sincennes-McNaughton Line v. McCormick, 47 D.L.R. 483, 19 Can. Ex. 35.

NEGLIGENCE—DEFECTIVE STEERING GEAR—INEVITABLE ACCIDENT.

A steering wheel in a tug, rendered inoperative by a defect in the steering gear, will not relieve the owners of the tug from liability for damage to a tow, resulting from the grounding of the tow, when released by the master of the tug, on the ground of inevitable accident; the accident could have been avoided by passing the tow to another tug which was there to assist.

McCormick v. Sincennes-McNaughton Line; Union Lumber Co. v. Sincennes-Mc-

Naughton Line, 45 D.L.R. 292, 18 Can. Ex. 357.

RESPONSIBILITY OF TUG—NEGLIGENCE—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

The tug "Senator Jansen," with a scow in tow, lashed diagonally to her port bow, was floating down Fraser River with the tide and while going through a drawbridge (85 feet in width) the scow struck a projecting boom stick, tearing off a stern plank. Scow and cargo were lost. The "Senator Jansen" was properly navigated. Held—that the master of the "Senator Jansen," being thoroughly familiar with the situation, and the set of the tides and currents, and knowing that these would inevitably bring his port side against the bridge, creating a dangerous, if not a necessarily fatal situation, was guilty of negligence in not lashing the tow to the starboard side and thus avoiding the possibility of accident. Where, even if the scow in such a case had been wholly sound, the direct consequences of the accident could not have been avoided, the fact of the scow being unseaworthy will not constitute contributory negligence on her part, and will not relieve the tug of any responsibility—for damage due to her own negligence.

Patterson v. The "Senator Jansen," 49 D.L.R. 166, 19 Can. Ex. 105, [1919] 3 W.W.R. 458.

(§ 1—5)—SUFFICIENCY OF PERFORMANCE—DIVISIBILITY OF CONTRACT—MARITIME LIEN.

A towage agreement providing for payment per diem is a divisible contract as to each day's services performed; but there can be no recovery under the contract in the event of a prolongation of the voyage through the plaintiff's unjustifiable delay. A bond taken as security is not evidence that the towage was performed on the credit of the master and not of the ship. There is no maritime lien for the towage, only a statutory lien, in the form of a right to seize the tow in satisfaction of the claim.

Neville Canneries v. The "Santa Maria," 26 D.L.R. 619, 16 Can. Ex. 481.

NEGLIGENCE—STORMY WEATHER.

In all contracts of towage there is an implied obligation that competent skill and best endeavours shall be used in doing the work, and the act of the master of a tug in venturing out in stormy and dangerous weather is negligence which will render the owners of the towing craft liable for the consequence of the wrongful act. INCORPORATION OF—ERUCTION OF VILLAGE—NOMINATION OF SPECIAL SUPERINTENDENT.

The nomination of a special superintendent, upon a petition of the ratepayers, for the erection of the territory into a village is the only way given to a county council to render justice and avoid arbitrary action, and the rejection of the petition by the council, without naming a superintendent, is illegal and an arbitrary act. The law does not require that the petition be accompanied by a certificate of the secretary-treasurer to the effect that it has been signed by two-thirds of the municipal electors. This fact can be proved otherwise, and after hearing both parties before the council. The expression "the council names," in art. 52, Mun. Code, comprehends an absolute and not an optional obligation and is equivalent to the expression "the council will name" or "the council must name."

Roberge v. Levis, 46 Que. S.C. 272.

FORMATION OF VILLAGE—PETITION—MODE OF ATTACKING PROCEEDINGS.

In placing their signatures to a petition asking for the erection of a territory into a village the electors owning land and dwelling in this territory thereby agree to the cognizance of the petition taken by the County Council. It is not allowable for them to withdraw their signatures when they have been voluntarily given. Any interested party who wishes to attack the proceedings of the Council upon such petition should not bring his action to quash these proceedings until the special superintendent appointed by the Council has made his report and the Council has acted upon it.

APPLICATION FOR—DESCRIPTION AND DRAWING.

In applying for a trade-mark under the Trade-Mark Act (Can.) the applicant must describe in writing what he claims as his mark. A drawing must also be filed. But the claim in the written application cannot be extended by reason of something appearing in the drawing which has not been claimed.

Mickelson Shapiro Co. v. Mickelson Drug & Chemical, 15 Can. Ex. 276.

(§ 1-2)—GENERAL OR PARTICULAR—CLASS OF GOODS.

There is no general right to a trade-mark or trade-name apart from its particular application, and other persons may legally use the identical name or mark in connection with a different class of goods or of business. [Eno v. Dunn (1890), 15 App. Cas. 252; Australian Wine Importers' Case, 41 Ch. D. 278; Eastman v. Griffiths, 15 R.P.C. 105; Collins v. Ames, 18 Fed. Rep. 561, distinguished.] The right to a trade-mark or trade-name is merely a prior right to use such mark or name in connection with the particular goods or business to which it is applied and which it has come to indicate; but the right extends to other goods or business of the same general class as that in which it has been applied.

Lambert Pharmacal Co. v. Palmer, 2 D.L.R. 358, 21 Que. K.B. 451.

(§ 1-3)—GENERAL OR SPECIFIC MARK.

A "general" trade-mark, under the Trade Mark and Design Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 71, is one used in connection with the various articles in which the proprietor deals in his trade, and would cover all of the classes of merchandise in which the applicant deals, while a "specific" trade-mark is limited to one class of merchandise. The registration of the word "Albaldoid" as a general trade-mark is properly refused by the Minister of Agriculture where there is already on the register a general trade-mark of a word so similar thereto as "Albolene."

Re Noelle, 14 D.L.R. 385, 49 C.L.J. 753, 13 E.L.R. 366.

(§ 1-5)—USE OF TRADE LABEL.

The equitable relief granted to prevent unfair competition may reach far enough to afford redress to an unincorporated body from the unfair use and imitation of its union trade label by another union.

Rickart v. Britton Mfg. Co., 4 D.L.R. 366, 3 O.W.N. 1272, 22 O.W.R. 81.

AS TO BAGGAGE DELIVERY—INFRINGEMENT—INJUNCTION.

A railway company is entitled to the exclusive use of the trade name they adopt in carrying on a baggage transfer business, and any infringement thereupon by a third party subsequently attempting to carry on a similar business under a similar trade-name will be restrained by injunction.

II. What may be.

(§ II-8)—SURNAME.

A person who selects the name of a celebrated personage and fastens it upon his trade products must be held to take it with its disadvantages as well as its attractions; the word "Lister," however, has not so far become a mere word of description not susceptible of being appropriated as a trade-mark by long use. The putting on the market of an article known as "listerated tooth powder" is not an infringement of a trade-mark duly registered covering a medicinal substance sold to physicians and chemists under the name of "Listerine" as the two articles are not similar and are not sold to the same class of people or clientele, more especially when the people who buy or use "Listerine" but it because of its good repute and not because the plaintiff is the manufacturer or compounder of it.

Lambert Pharmacal Co. v. Palmer, 2 D.L.R. 358, 21 Que. K.B. 451.

GEOGRAPHICAL NAME—SECONDARY MEANING.

Where a geographical name has become identified with manufactured goods of a certain class manufactured by a particular manufacturer and has in that respect acquired a secondary meaning, it may be registered as a specific trade-name to such goods under the Trade Marks Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 71.

Canada Foundry Co. v. Bucyrus Co., 10 D.L.R. 513, 47 Can. S.C.R. 484, 49 C.L.J. 195, affirming 8 D.L.R. 920, 14 Can. Ex. 35.

SURNAME.

A surname, when uncommon and distinctive from long user, is registrable as a trademark under the Canada Trade Mark and Design Act (R.S.C. 1906, c. 71).

Re Horlick's Malted Milk Co., 35 D.L.R. 516.

SURNAME—SECONDARY MEANING.

A surname which has acquired a secondary meaning as a trademark cannot be used as a trademark by another person without the latter clearly distinguishing his goods. Palmer v. Palmer-McLellan Shoe-Pack Co., 37 D.L.R. 201, 45 N.B.R. 8 at 34.

(§ II—9)—DESCRIPTIVE WORD.

The word "Fruitatives," considered as the essential feature of a specific trademark applied to the sale of a laxative medicine and used on two sides of a four part label with the words "or Fruit Liver Tablets" printed thereunder, is not a mere descriptive word, and a carton four part label is not invalid as a trade-mark under the Trade Marks Act, R.S.C. 1906, because of the combination of that word with other features of colour and design in the registered trade-mark.

Fruitatives v. La Compagnie Pharmaceutique de la Croix Rouge, 8 D.L.R. 917, 14 Can. Ex. 30.

No merely descriptive name should be interdicted as descriptive unless in circumstances involving fraud on the part of the user. [Cellular Clothing Co. v. Maxton, [1899] A.C. 326, applied.] The claim of any person who seeks to adopt and use exclusively as his own a merely descriptive term will not be favoured by the court, for if a person employing a word or term of well-known meaning and in ordinary use to describe his goods were entitled to appropriate it and prevent others from using it he would acquire a right of more value than either a patent or a registered trademark.

DESCRIPTIVE WORD—VARIATION.

Where a particular name (e. g.) Bucyrus has been applied to a specific line of goods manufactured by a company for so long a time that the designation so given by the company, although originally a mere geographical name, had acquired a secondary meaning as identifying such goods, although not registered as a trade-mark, a registration in opposition thereto of such name with the prefix of the word "Canadian" (e. g. Canadian Bucyrus) is not permissible under the Trade Marks Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 71, and will be cancelled upon petition.

Canada Foundry Co. v. Bucyrus Co., 10 D.L.R. 513, 47 Can. S.C.R. 484, 49 C.L.J. 195, affirming 8 D.L.R. 920, 14 Can. Ex. 35.

DESCRIPTIVE WORDS—SECONDARY MEANING—EXPUNGING.

"Sure-Crop" or "Slur-Crop," as applied to fertilizers, are ordinary words descriptive of the quality of the article, incapable of acquiring a secondary meaning and not registrable as a valid trade-mark, and should be expunged from the register.

Bowler Fertilizer Co. v. Gunns, 27 D.L.R. 469, 16 Can. Ex. 520.

TRADE-MARK — IMITATION — DESCRIPTION — VIGNETTE—C.C. QUE ART. 1053, R.S.C. 1906, c. 71, ss 19, 20, 35.

In trade-marks, a generic name and the words which show the meaning of the thing cannot be the subject of a trade-mark; these are the vignettes which constitute it. The object of a trade-mark is to protect merchandise from imitation, in order to give use to an action for damages, the imitation should be such that, regarding it in a general manner, without inspecting it particularly, one would take it for the original which he wishes to obtain. The words and formulas printed on a trade-mark and giving directions for using the thing cannot be monopolized or lawfully included in the trade-mark, no more than the signs used to form the words, nor the whole general effect of their disposition, except they have a character so extraordinary, exceptional, and bizarre that they strike a person with their originality.

Fyon v. Bilodeau, 56 Que. S.C. 151.

WORD "SELF-REDUCING" AS APPLIED TO CORSETS—DESCRIPTIVE NAME.

The word "self-reducing" as applied to the manufacture and sale of women's corsets is descriptive and does not constitute a good trade-mark.

Kops v. Dominion Corset Co., 15 Can. Ex. 18.

III. Transfer of.

(§ III—10)—ASSIGNABILITY.

A trade-mark cannot be assigned in gross. [Gegg v. Bassett, 3 O.L.R. 263, approved.]

The Vulcan Trade-mark, 22 D.L.R. 214, 15 Can. Ex. 265. [Affirmed in 24 D.L.R. 621, 51 Can. S.C.R. 411.]

Where there was no specific assignment of the trade-mark to the company which could be used for registry under the Trade-Mark Act. Where the words used in a general assignment are amply comprehensive to pass the trade mark, the defendant is bound to execute a specific assignment.

Tilley v. de Forest, 4 N.B. Eq. 343.

IV. Infringement.

(§ IV—15)—In ascertaining whether there has been a violation of a person's right in such mark the court will be guided by all the circumstances of the trade and market and of the uses of the mark as well as any meaning or idea which may have been publicly attached to the word mark itself before its adoption as a mark.

Lambert Pharmaceutical Co. v. Palmer, 2 D.L.R. 358, 21 Que. K.B. 451.

JURISDICTION OF EXCHEQUER COURT TO RESTRAIN.

The Exchequer Court of Canada has jurisdiction to restrain any infringement of a trade-mark, but has no jurisdiction to entertain an action seeking damages for passing off goods of the defendant as those manufactured and sold by the plaintiff. Trademark for gopher poison, registered in Canadian Trade-mark Register No. 79, folio 19,498, ordered to be expunged.

Mickelson Shapiro Co. v. Michelson Drug & Chemical, 15 Can. Ex. 276.

(§ IV-16)—DISCONTINUANCE OF USE.

An intention to abandon as to Canada a trade-mark used by a foreign firm in a world-wide business is not to be inferred from a lapse of ten years between shipments made to Canada prior to an application in Canada to register the mark.

(§ IV-17)—NAME OF PHRASE—"PASSING OFF."

Upon a claim to prevent the passing off of the goods of one manufacturer for those of another based upon the use by both of the same unregistered mark or brand, e. g. "Gold Medal," an alleged secondary meaning said to have been acquired in respect of the words of the brand for a particular class of goods, e. g. flour, must be supported by evidence that no other manufacturer in the country was making similar goods with the same mark or brand and the claim will not be supported even as to a single city or district by shewing that a customer at that place asking for that brand of goods would have been supplied with goods of the plaintiff's manufacture before the alleged interference and passing off complained of, if in fact the same mark was being used in other parts of the country by the defendants without any intention of passing off and with equal claim with the plaintiff to an independent right of user.

Dominion Flour Mills Co. v. Morris, 2 D.L.R. 830, 21 O.W.R. 540, 25 O.L.R. 561.

PASSING OFF—SIMILAR NAME AND DESIGNS—POWER OF RECEIVER TO TRANSFER USE OF SIGNATURE TO PURCHASERS OF DEFUNCT COMPANY.

The inventor of a preparation for destroying gophers and similar pests which has been successful with the result that the use of his name on the packages of the preparation sold has become a valuable asset to him is entitled to an injunction restraining the purchasers—from the receiver—of the assets of a company with which the inventor was associated from using his facsimile signature on the packages sold by the new company, the name being used as an artifice by which intending purchasers were induced to buy the goods on the strength of the well-known signature, the preparation being, in fact, different. The receiver had no power to transfer the right to use the signature, and the purchasers of the assets of the defunct company had no right to use such inventor's signature for any purpose without his consent. [See Mickelson Shapiro Co. v. Mickelson Drug & Chemical Co., 15 Can. Ex. 276; Mickelson Shapiro Co. v. Mickelson Drug Co., 23 D.L.R. 451; Mickelson v. Mickelson, 28 D. L.R. 307, for history of litigation in this case.]

Mickelson v. Kill-Em-Quick Co., 46 D. Can. Dig.—136.

INFRINGEMENT—NAME REGISTERED AS GENERAL TRADE-MARK.

Where a particular word has been registered as a general trade-mark, as distinguished from a specific trade-mark, under the Trade Mark and Design Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 71, it cannot afterwards be registered as a general trade-mark by another, although carrying on a different line of trade; the second applicant for the same word or for another word so similar as would likely deceive the public, is limited to an application for a specific trade-mark, the Department not being called on to distinguish between the lines of trade of applicants for general trade-marks.

TRADE-NAME—"PASSING OFF"—EVIDENCE—INFERENCE.

The purchaser of the good will of a business has in general the right to continue to use the trade name, and the subsequent incorporation of a company by the assignor, under a similar name, which is clearly calculated to "pass off" his goods as the goods of the plaintiff, by the use of similar packages and designs is an infringement which will be restrained by injunction. A trade-mark is only one badge of identification; it may be equally wrong to imitate a trade-name or the get-up of goods, so as to "pass off" the goods as another's. [Reddaway v. Banham, [1896] A. C. 204; Cellular Clothing Co. v. Maxton, [1899] A.C. 326; Valentine v. Valentine, 17 R.P.C. 673; Kingston v. Kingston, [1912] 1 Ch. 575; Spalding v. Gamage, 32 R.P.C. 273, applied.] The question whether the use of particular words or badges as a trade-mark is calculated to "pass off" goods or is merely honestly descriptive, is, in substance, one of fact; and it is not necessary to prove intent to deceive, but "passing off" may be inferred from conduct. [For other litigation of case see 23 D.L.R. 451, and 15 Can. Ex. 275.]

(§ IV-18)—NAME OF EXPANSION BOLTS—FIRM INITIALS—DISTINCTIVENESS.

The word "Cebcol" used as a trade-mark on expansion bolts representing the initials of the name of its company, while phonetically alike, is unconfusingly distinctive from the trade-mark "Sebeco," packed in dissimilar cartons, and constitutes no infringement as ground for injunction.

(§ IV-20)—CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS.

Section 655, Cr. Code, does not make it obligatory upon the magistrate to hear witnesses before issuing a warrant or summons for an infraction of s. 490, as to the unlawful use of beverage trade marks and trade names, if, after having issued a search warrant, the return of the constable bearing that a large quantity of bottles, showing the trade-mark of an opposition company, had been seized in defendant's possession with his own label added. Some offences requires a criminal intent mens rea, but that rule does not apply to all criminal offences and in particular does not apply to the offence under s. 490 of unlawfully using a beverage trade-mark on bottles.

The King v. Coulombe, 6 D.L.R. 99, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 31.

FALSELY APPLYING—ADVERTISEMENT.

Offering for sale at his store by means of a newspaper advertisement under a description embodying a registered trade-mark covering goods of a particular class may constitute the offence of falsely applying the trade-mark where the accused had no goods which could properly be described in the manner advertised, and fraudulently used the advertisement to attract buyers for other goods of the same kind.

R. v. Gross and Miller, 31 Can. Cr. Cas. 35, 28 Que. K.B. 54.

CRIME OF TRADING IN BOTTLES CARRYING NAME OF OWNER.

Section 490, Cr. Code, which prohibits trading, without the consent of the owner, in bottles which have upon them the trade-mark or name of another person, is wide enough to cover such trading in bottles to which the name of the owner is affixed by means of a paper label.

R. v. Wittman. [1917] 3 W.W.R. 438, 25 B.C.R. 108.

(§ IV—21)—INFRINGEMENT—IMITATION OF LABEL OR DESIGN.

To establish an infringement of a trade-mark, as basis for injunction, it is not essential to show that the defendant has used a mark in all respects corresponding with that which another person has acquired an exclusive right to use, provided the resemblance is such as to be likely to make ordinary purchasers suppose that they are buying the article sold by the party to whom the right to use the trade-mark belongs and that they have been thereby misled and deceived. [Barsalou v. Darling, 9 Can. S. C.R. 681, and Witherspoon v. Currie, L.R. 5 H.L. 508, applied.]

Canadian Rubber Co. v. Columbus Rubber Co., 14 D.L.R. 455, 14 Can. Ex. 286.

PASSING OFF—INJUNCTION.

A trade-mark may exist independently of registration, and where there has been no abandonment of it by laches or acquiescence, and it has not become publici juris, its infringement by way of "passing off" will be enjoined.

United States Playing Card Co. v. Hurst, 31 D.L.R. 596, 37 O.L.R. 85.

INFRINGEMENT—DESIGN—INTENT TO DECEIVE—PASSING OFF—DAMAGES.

The word "Bicycle" may be made a valid trade-mark for a certain class of playing cards, and the sale by another manufacturer of a class of playing cards known as the "Bicycle series," the word "Bicycle" being in large letters in one line and the word "Series" being in smaller letters on the next lines is an infringement of such trade-mark. Where in the opinion of the Trial Judge intention to pass off was abundantly proved, and all means necessary to facilitate passing off were provided, and enough was shown to establish a reasonable probability of deception, his judgment enjoining infringement by passing off will be upheld although there is no proof of actual passing off.

INFRINGEMENT—USING CONTAINERS—LABELS—OBLITERATION.

There is no infringement of the Trade Mark and Design Act (R.S.C., c. 71, s. 19) if a tank, not itself protected by patent but used to store a patented product, is refilled by another manufacturer who obliterates the trade-mark on the tank by pasting a label over it showing that the tank has been refilled.

Prest-o-Lite v. People's Gas Supply Co., 38 D.L.R. 379, 55 Can. S.C.R. 440, affirming 16 Can. Ex. 386.

FORMULA—FACSIMILE—INJUNCTION—DAMAGES.

The fact that the formula of a substance which has been sold under the facsimile signature of the maker is transferred to another manufacturer who acquires the right to sell it does not entitle the latter to use the signature where the right to use it has not been expressly transferred to him; and the person entitled to the use of the name may obtain an injunction restraining its use by the other, and also restraining the use by such other of a false statement that the substance sold by the latter is made from the original formula, even though the first maker no longer sells the substance directly to the public but manufactures it for a selling company of which he is a member. [Warwick Tyre Co. v. New Motor & General Rubber Co., [1910] 1 Ch. 248, followed.] Under such circumstances, however, he is entitled to nominal damages only.

Mickelson v. Kill-Em-Quick Co., [1918] 1 W.W.R. 781.

IMITATION OF LABEL.

A party who has acquired the right to make use of a certain name in connection with the sale of an article manufactured by him is entitled to recover against another who uses the same name upon his goods in a way calculated to deceive the public and represent his goods as the goods of the other, but where no actual damages are claimed or proved the recovery must be confined to nominal damages and costs.

Canadian Heating & Ventilating Co. v. Eaton and Guelph Stove Co., 10 O.W.N. 439, 11 O.W.N. 176.

(§ IV—24)—USE CALCULATED TO DECEIVE.

A trade-mark should distinguish the trader's goods and the essential of an infringement (where the essential particulars are not bodily appropriated) is that the use of the mark upon the defendant's goods is calculated to lead purchasers to buy them when asking for the plaintiff's goods; failing such proof an action for infringement should be dismissed.

Lambert Pharmaceutical Co. v. Palmer, 2 D. L.R. 358, 21 Que. K.B. 451.

VI. Registration.

See Ante, II.

(§ VI—30)—REGISTRATION.

For a registered specific trade-mark the Trade Mark and Design Act gives the right of exclusive use of it only to designate a "class of merchandise of a particular description," and the scope of such title cannot be extended by construction, for all doubts are to be resolved in the direction of freedom and not of the exclusive right. WHEN TITLE ACCRUES—RECTIFICATION.

Registration of a trade-mark under the Trade Mark and Design Act (Can.), confers no title to the mark, but is a prerequisite to the right to bring an action under the Act; and rectification of a registered general trade-mark may be ordered by the Exchequer Court so as to exclude a conflicting specific mark in prior use by another firm and sought to be registered by the latter firm where the general mark was not applied by its owners to the line of goods covered by the specific mark until the dispute arose as to its use on such goods.

SPECIFIC TRADE-MARK—REGISTRATION—RESEMBLANCE TO EXISTING MARK—MANUFACTURED ARTICLES DISSIMILAR.

In an application for the registration of a specific trade-mark, where the resemblance to an existing registered trade-mark is not sufficient to cause deception, registration should be granted.

burgh Perfect Fence Co., 44 D.L.R. 731, 18 Can. Ex. 254.

(§ VI—31)—CONFLICTING CLAIM ON REGISTER—PRIOR GENERAL TRADE-MARK OF SIMILAR WORD.

There is no power under the Trade Mark and Design Act (Can.) enabling the Minister of Agriculture, or his Deputy, to take evidence and adjudicate on the facts and thereupon to determine whether a trade-mark should be registered notwithstanding the prior registration of a similar mark; but such may be done by the Exchequer Court on the hearing of a petition for an order to register.

(§ I—2)—"THE CLEANERS" — CLOTHES CLEANING ESTABLISHMENT.

An exclusive right to the use of the words "The Cleaners," which are merely descriptive of a well-known business, cannot be acquired by one engaged in the business of clothes cleaning, unless it appears that the words have ceased to have their primary meaning as descriptive of a business, and have acquired a secondary meaning specially descriptive of the claimant.

"VALET"—DESCRIPTIVE TERM.

One who carries on the business of cleaning, pressing and repairing clothing cannot acquire any proprietary right to the exclusive use of the word "valet" in connection therewith, since the word is merely descriptive of the kind of business that is carried on; but where the plaintiff carried on that class of business under the trade name of "My Valet" he is entitled to require that a person afterwards starting business in competition with him and also using the word "valet" in his trade name (e. g. "My New Valet") will do so in such a way and with such other distinctive words as will shew that he is not leading the public to believe that in dealing with him they are dealing with the prior established business.

"RUBBERSET"—DESCRIPTIVE WORD—MONOPOLY—EXPIRY OF PATENT—ACQUISITION OF SECONDARY MEANING.

The word "Rubberset" being clearly a descriptive word, invented to express the exact article produced by a patented process, a monopoly in its use cannot be asserted after the patents covering it have run out. In view of the short time since the expiry of the patents the word could lose its primary and descriptive character and acquire a dominating secondary meaning as describing the product of the appellant's factory.

(§ I-9)—PROTECTION OF—UNFAIR COMPETITION—USE OF DESCRIPTIVE NAME.

Where the term "The Cleaners" was adopted as a trade name by a cleaner of clothing, with the first word in small letters and the last more prominently displayed in the form of an inverted crescent, the subsequent use of the words "Fort Rouge Cleaners" by a business rival will be restrained, where the first two words were used in smaller type and the last so arranged as to appear more prominently in a form similar to that adopted by the plaintiff, if the similarity has created confusion between the two establishments, so as to mislead a number of the plaintiff's customers.

PROTECTION—UNFAIR COMPETITION.

Where a trade name has not by long use acquired a secondary meaning so as to be merely descriptive of a general class of goods, the company using a name for its product may be granted an injunction against another company which attempts to use for goods of the same class a hyphenated trade name, of which the first component part is the name theretofore used by the plaintiff company, where such user works an injury to the plaintiff by confusing the two businesses with the public, and would tend to give the defendant company the benefit of plaintiff company's prior advertising of the distinctive name applied to their goods. [Kingston Miller & Co. v. Kingston, [1912] 1 Ch. 575, 29 R.P.C. 289; Lloyd's v. Lloyd's (Southampton), 29 R.P.C. 433, 28 T.L.R. 338, applied; and see Lloyd's Bank v. Gramm Motor Truck Co. v. Fisher Motor Co., 17 D.L.R. 745, 30 O.L.R. 1.

INFRINGEMENT—UNFAIR COMPETITION.

Where the defendant company had selected a corporate name resembling the plaintiff's corporate name, embarked in a trade the same as that of the plaintiff company previously established in the same city, and in so doing conspicuously advertised in connection therewith a trade word (e. g. "progress"), which, although it may not, constitute a valid trade-mark, was publicly known to have been used by the plaintiff company as descriptive of its goods, and where the defendant's action is found to be injurious to the plaintiff company by leading the public erroneously to suppose that the goods sold by defendant company are of the plaintiff's make, an injunction will lie to restrain the further use of such trade word, although the defendants had added thereto the word "proclaimed" in substitution for the word "brand" which followed it in the plaintiff's advertising.

CUT RATE SHOE STORE—INFRINGEMENT—COMMON TERM.

A firm name of "Cut Rate Store," as applied to a retail shoe business, is a mere descriptive term of common use, which will not be enjoined by the court against a person subsequently using that term to a similar business adjacently located.

INDICTMENT—NAME OF ENEMY.

An indictment for treason under s. 74, subs. (i), Cr. Code must be so framed as to afford notice to the accused in terms which he cannot mistake of the acts with which he is charged and which the Crown intends to establish by evidence. An indictment under that section should be quashed where it fails to state the name of the public enemy the accused is charged with assisting, and does not in sufficient terms state any definite overt act of treason.

The King v. Gabor Fehr, 29 D.L.R. 111, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 245.

ASSISTING ENEMY DURING WAR—TRAP EVIDENCE.

Assisting an enemy alien to leave Canada to join the enemy's forces is treason under Cr. Code, s. 74, subs. (i); a mere attempt so to assist is not treason, but is indictable under ss. 72 and 570, where an intention to assist the enemy is manifested by any overt act. [By the Code Amendment, 1915, assisting alien enemies "to leave Canada" is made an offence if the circumstances do not exclude the possibility that assistance to the enemy is an intended object and if the assisting does not amount to treason. This is new, s. 75A of the Code.]

A conviction for an attempt to assist a public enemy with which His Majesty is at war by agreeing to ferry four enemy aliens over the Niagara River to the United States, whence they might proceed to join the enemy's forces, is not sustainable where there was no incitement by the accused and the enemy aliens had no intention of leaving Canada and no knowledge that the purpose of their being brought to the accused was that they should be ferried across the river, the fact being that they were being used in the make-up of a police trap to get evidence against the accused because of a suspicion that he had committed similar offences; the aliens could not be said to have been "assisted" without a desire or willingness on their part to be assisted, and the sham plot having been terminated by the arrest of the accused after he took the consideration money paid in advance by another person who had solicited the accused in furtherance of the plot arranged by the authorities and the transportation not having begun, there was no evidence of an attempt. [R. v. Linneker, [1906] 2 K.B. 99, applied]

R. v. Snyder, 25 D.L.R. 1, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 101, 34 O.L.R. 318.

ASSISTING PUBLIC ENEMY—OVERT ACT.

The overt act of assisting another to aid a public enemy is in itself a treasonable act; the Cr. Code does not contemplate such an offence as an attempt to commit treason.

R. v. Bleiler, 35 D.L.R. 274, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 9, 10 A.L.R. 520, 11 A.L.R. 150, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 1459.

STATING THE OVERT ACT IN THE INDICTMENT—SUFFICIENCY—CR. CODE, SS. 74, 75, 75A, 847.

It is not essential that the overt acts charged in an indictment of treason should in themselves amount to treason apart from the criminal intent with which they are alleged to have been committed.

Re Schaefer, 31 Can. Cr. Cas. 22. [See 45 D.L.R. 492, 58 Can. S.C.R. 43.]

INDICTMENT—INGREDIENTS—OVERT ACTS—INTENT—CR. CODE, ARTS. 74, 847, 852, 5 GEO. V. 1915, c. 12.

A motion in arrest of judgment is not a demurrer which should be presented before plea filed: It can be made at any time before judgment, if the indictment contains no offence. An indictment for treason which avers that the accused did commit treason by assisting subjects of the Austro-Hungarian Monarchy to leave the Dominion of Canada and proceed to Austria-Hungary, between which monarchy and sovereign thereof and our said Lord, the King, was then, and is yet, prosecuted and carried on, as he, the said Israel Schaeffer, then and there well knew, for purpose in such way of aiding, comforting and assisting the said public enemy so at war with His Majesty, and "maliciously, unlawfully and traitorously providing and assisting each and all of them with money of the said Austro-Hungarian Monarchy to be used in furtherance of their said purpose," and also set forth the details of the offence, contains all the elements and overt acts of treason and is sufficiently libelled. The statute 5 Geo. V. 1915, c. 12 (amendment to Cr. Code, s. 75a) did not create a special offence, it only imposed a new penalty. In an indictment for treason, the overt acts set out must not necessarily be acts of commission which by themselves would constitute treason. Although, in general, the criminal law takes no account of pure intent, it is not so in the case of treason. In the contemplation of law, the intent is the treason, as there are no accessories nor attempt recognized, all is principle.

The buyer of a quantity of logs which were the proceeds of timber cut and removed by the seller in acts of trespass and encroachment upon the property of an adjoining owner, is not liable in damages for the acts of trespass, in addition to and apart from his liability for the value of the logs in conversion, unless he knew of the trespass.

Phillips v. Conger Lumber Co., 5 D.L.R. 188, 3 O.W.N. 1436, 22 O.W.R. 436.

A railway company cannot, in an action for a trespass in laying sidetracks on the plaintiff's land, justify on the ground that its predecessor in title, without right, took a strip of land 12 feet wide from that owned by the plaintiff, for part of its right-of-way, which was not, at such place, of the width allowed by statute, and that therefore it became entitled to claim the full 99 feet allowed by statute for a right-of-way, which would include the land on which the side-tracks were laid, since the court cannot presume that the company, by taking possession of the 12 foot strip, also took possession of the entire 99 feet which it was entitled to expropriate for a right-of-way.

Where a purchaser has entered into possession of lands under a contract of sale and such contract is terminated by a final order of the court cancelling the same and forfeiting the purchase money paid on account thereof pursuant to its terms, the estate at will of the purchaser is determined by the rescission of the contract, and he and his assigns will be liable in trespass for the subsequent occupation, and for removing the crop after the final order.

The fact that part of patented land is covered with navigable water gives no right to third persons to hunt and fish thereon. A claim of title, to oust the jurisdiction of the magistrate in a case of trespass, must be a claim of title in the party charged, and not a mere allegation of a jus tertii or of a defect in the complainant's title. WHAT CONSTITUTES—ENCROACHMENT ON HIGHWAY.

An agreement between a municipal corporation and a resident ratepayer that the question whether a hedge belonging to the latter and bordering on a highway, encroaches thereon and is a danger to the public, shall be submitted to a committee empowered to decide what shall be done, with a clause that the ratepayer shall pay a penalty of $100 if he refuses to carry out the decision of the committee, being lawful and binding, gives the corporation power to perform the work decided on by the committee on the ratepayer's refusal, and the corporation is not answerable to the ratepayer for a trespass committed in cutting the hedge in carrying out the recommendations of the committee.

Brown v. Motherlode, 2 D.L.R. 277, 17 B.C.R. 248, 20 W.L.R. 778, 2 W.W.R. 157.

A lessee of land from the Crown under a mining lease, who was, under R.S.O. 1897, c. 36, s. 40, entitled to such trees, other than pine, as are required for building, fencing, or for any other purposes necessary for the working of the mine, or the clearing of the land, may maintain an action of trespass against one who cut and removed timber therefrom.

Phillips v. Conger Lumber Co., 5 D.L.R. 188, 3 O.W.N. 1436, 22 O.W.R. 436.

A title by possession to woodland may be based upon occupation under colour of title and acts of constructive possession such as the building of a lumberman's sluice and operating as a lumberman over the lands, although not enclosed by fences, to support an action against a trespasser.

The acceptance by the Crown of a survey of land made by an applicant for a timber limit license and the noting on the official map that such land belongs to the applicant, and the issuance to him of such license, creates a right in the land which he may defend against trespassers.

Laursen v. McKinnon, 4 D.L.R. 718, 18 B.C.R. 682, 20 W.L.R. 384.

The patentee of mining lands in Ontario under the Mines Act (R.S.O. 1897, c. 36; see now 8 Edw. VII, c. 21, s. 112), has such an interest in the pine timber, as well as in the other timber thereon, as entitles him to maintain an action of trespass against anyone wrongfully cutting and removing such timber. A lessee in possession is the proper person to maintain an action for trespass, and the landlord has no right to maintain such action where the injury is of a temporary character, and there is no permanent injury to the property.

Crawford v. Clowes, 24 D.L.R. 214, 48 N.B.R. 199.

TAKING GRAVEL FROM BEACH—ACTION BY POSSESSORY HOLDER—PARTITIONED CO-TENANCY.

A cotenancy which had been divided by the cotenants into their respective severalties, and held exclusively by one of them for a period sufficient to give him a possessory title under the Statute of Limitations (R.S.N.S., c. 167, ss. 10, 14 and 15), will entitle the latter, or his successor in title, to maintain an action of trespass for the taking of gravel from the unfenced beach adjoining his lands.

McDougall v. McDougall, 23 D.L.R. 28, 49 N.S.R. 101.

ACTION BY PURCHASER IN NAME OF VENDOR—DESCRIPTION—ADVERSE POSSESSION.

Plaintiff purchased land from the defendant H.C., paying a small portion of the purchase money down and agreeing to pay the balance on or before a later date specified. The deed in the meantime was handed to a third party to be delivered to plaintiff on payment of the balance due. Plaintiff failed to pay on the date fixed but paid on a later date and was given her deed. In the meantime, between the date fixed for payment of the balance of the purchase money and the date of delivery of the deed, the defendant, W. C., entered upon the land and cut and removed trees.—Held, that an action would be maintainable in the name of the vendor, who had remained in actual possession, and that as he refused to be made a plaintiff he was properly joined as a party defendant; that the entry upon the land before action and after delivery of the deed was in this case sufficient to enable plaintiff to maintain trespass; that the parties to such an action as this must either be bound by the descriptions in their title deeds or show an occupation under the statute of limitations varying the description.

Gibson v. Clinkworth, 51 N.S.R. 341.

In trespass the burden of locating the land is clearly upon plaintiff, and not having done so he must fail. While the report and plans of a Crown land surveyor leading to a grant cannot be used to contradict the terms of the grant they can be used for the purpose of ascertaining where the surveyor started and where he established his marks. Where a course is described as running from a fixed monument "north along the rear line of its 16, 17 and 18, 180 rods" the dimensions 180 rods conclusively determines the distance to be run and not the reference to "lot 18."

Millet v. Bezanson, 45 N.S.R. 152, 9 E.L.R. 16.

The occasional use of a strip of beach and land adjacent thereto (the property of the Crown) for the purpose of drying nets, etc., will be regarded as having occurred in the exercise of public right and will not confer any special right or interest in the locus. Such acts are not sufficient to enable the persons exercising them to maintain trespass against a person in possession claiming under colour of title.

Carr v. Ferguson, 45 N.S.R. 132, 9 E.L.R. 218.

WHO MAY MAINTAIN THE ACTION.

The possession of land animo domini which entitles the possessor, in case of interference, to an action for damages or for possession must result from acts which can leave no doubt as to the claim that he makes to the land. Therefore, acts permitted by a riparian owner, such as the cutting of grass and making of fences on the shore of the River St. Lawrence, between high and low tide, and the pasturing of his animals, do not establish a useful possession.

It is not a defence to an action for trespass upon land held by the plaintiff under a mining lease from the Crown, to shew that not enough mining work had been done thereon by the plaintiff to comply with the requirements of the Mining Act, since that was a matter exclusively between the lessee and the Crown.

Phillips v. Conger Lumber Co., 5 D.L.R. 188, 3 O.W.N. 1436, 22 O.W.R. 436.

A city cannot, as a defence to an action of trespass for laying a sidewalk that encroached upon lots owned by the plaintiff, shew that, as the result of a mistake in surveying the block in which the lots were located, the plan thereof, as filed in the land titles office, and to which the plaintiff's certificate of title referred, was incorrect, and that, therefore, he did not own the locus in quo. DEFENCES—WARRANT OF POSSESSION.

In an action against a railway company for a trespass, a warrant of possession for the locus in quo, issued under s. 217 of the Railway Act, 1906, will be a good defence, although some of the statutory requirements pertaining to the issue of the warrant were not complied with, as the regularity of the warrant can be inquired into only in the proceeding in which it was issued.

DEFENCE—DISPUTING AUTHORITY OF LANDLORD'S AGENT TO EXECUTE PLAINTIFF'S LEASE—LESSEE'S RIGHT—TRESPASSER.

One whose lease from a company was subject to cancellation by a subsequent sale or lease of the demised premises, cannot, in an action of trespass against him by a subsequent lessee in possession, question the authority of the lessor's agent to execute the last lease. The right of one in peaceable possession to crop land, although his lease is for grazing purposes only, cannot be questioned by a trespasser.

(§ I C—18)—CUTTING TIMBER—MEASURE OF DAMAGES.

In any cause or matter in which there has been no proceeding for one year from the last proceeding had, the party who desires to proceed shall give a month's notice to the other party of his intentions to proceed. A summons on which no order has been made shall not, but notice of trial although countermanded shall be deemed a proceeding within this rule (English Rules, Ord. 64, r. 13).

Parties to a judicial proceeding are strictly entitled to benefit by the delays fixed by law, but it is not the same in regard to those which result from encumbering the roll. The court can change the order of the causes inscribed, and direct, at its discretion, that one of them be heard before it reaches its place on the roll.

Picard v. Robillard, 49 Que. S.C. 235.

ADJOURNMENT—NOTICE OF TRIAL—SITTINGS JUDGMENT—IRREGULARITY.

Where an action comes on for trial at a sittings, and the trial is at that sittings peremptorily adjourned till a later sittings, a new notice of trial for the later sittings is necessary: r. 252. A countermand of a notice of trial is not regular. [Friendly v. Carter, 9 P.R. (Ont.) 41, approved.] Where the trial had been adjourned to the June sittings, and the plaintiffs (by mistake) gave notice of trial for the October sittings, and the action was entered for trial at the October sittings, but the plaintiffs, without formally countermanding their notice for the later sittings—and without any motion being made by either party—gave notice of trial for the June sittings, and caused the entry for trial to be correspondingly changed:—Held, that the defendant had accepted the plaintiff's notice of trial for the October sittings, and, without an order setting it aside, the plaintiffs were bound by it; and a judgment for the plaintiffs pronounced at the June sittings, the defendant not appearing, was set aside.

(§ I A—2)—SUMMARY CONVICTIONS—TRYING SEVERAL CHARGES AT ONE TIME.

Where the assaults charged separately against two persons took place as part of one and the same occurrence, and the evidence would have been identical in each case, it is not a ground for quashing the summary conviction in either case that the two cases were tried together, particularly where no exception was taken at the trial. [R. v. Lapointe, 4 D.L.R. 210, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 98, and R. v. Fry, 19 Cox C.C. 135, 62 J.P. 457, applied.]

SEPARATION OF JURORS—SUCCESSFUL PARTY DISCUSSING CASE BEFORE TWO JURORS—EFFECT ON VERDICT.

A verdict should not be allowed to stand where the course of justice has been or may possibly have been interfered with by any improper conduct on the part of the successful party (e.g., discussing the case with one of the opposing witnesses in the presence of two of the jurors during an adjournment of the hearing), and this irrespective of his motives and although he was not guilty of intentional wrong-doing.

The King v. Bond, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 96, 19 W.L.R. 348.

B. ELECTION BETWEEN COUNTS.

(§ I B—5)—FIAT OF ATTORNEY-GENERAL—REFUSAL OF—COMMENCEMENT OF ACTION—RIGHT TO PROCEED.

The Hydro Electric Power Commission (the second defendant in the action) was established by 6 & 7 Edw. VII. c. 19 (Ont.), now embodied in R.S.O. 1914. This commission is a government department, and s. 23 of the original Act (now s. 16) provides as follows: "Without the consent of the Attorney-General no action shall be brought against the Commission or against any member thereof for anything done or omitted in the exercise of his office." The sole question in issue on the appeal so far as the Hydro Electric Power Commission was concerned was whether this provision is intra vires the Ontario legislature. Their Lordships thought it undesirable to express any final opinion upon the construction of the section and its effect upon the action until the precise nature of the plaintiff's claim had been formulated. In their Lordships' opinion the appellants' contentions as to the section raised points of importance which ought not to be dealt with in a summary way, and which demanded serious consideration in the ordinary course of law. Their Lordships, therefore, held that the action must proceed as against the Hydro Electric Commission, but without prejudice to the commission to raise this point as a defence when the pleadings have disclosed the exact nature of the plaintiffs' claim and the facts so far as necessary have been ascertained. As to the motion to set aside the writ as against the Attorney-General of Ontario, and that any claim against the Crown should be brought forward by petition of right, the argument advanced on behalf of the Attorney-General for Ontario failed to satisfy their Lordships that it was so clear that no declaration could be made against the Attorney-General under the circumstances as to make it right that the action should be summarily stopped as against him. All that their Lordships decided was that the plaintiffs' claim ought not to be disposed of in a summary application.

Electrical Development Co. v. Att'y-Gen'l of Ontario, 47 D.L.R. 10, [1919] A.C. 687, reversing 34 D.L.R. 92.

(§ I B-6)—ADJOURNMENT OF TRIAL—DISCHARGE OF JURY—DISCRETION OF TRIAL JUDGE.

The discharge of the jury and the adjournment of the trial are matters solely within the jurisdiction of the Trial Judge and his discretion is not open to review on appeal.

The King v. Bordenink, 45 D.L.R. 470, 12 S.L.R. 126, [1919] 1 W.W.R. 968.

(§ I B-7)—SEPARATE TRIAL OF COUNTS—INDICTMENT.

Where evidence is tendered in support of one count of an indictment which while admissible thereon is not admissible in proof of another count of the same indictment, the defendant's remedy is to apply under Cr. Code, s. 857 to have each count tried separately if he fears that, notwithstanding the direction which would properly be given by the judge to the jury to disregard such evidence in considering the second count, the jury would unconsciously be influenced thereby to the prejudice of the accused.

R. v. Strong, 26 D.L.R. 122, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 430, 43 N.B.R. 190.

C. RECEPTION OF EVIDENCE.

(§ I C-10)—RECEPTION OF EVIDENCE.

Where, in an action for calls on company shares, the question is not raised by defendants' pleading that a statutory meeting was not held and that consequently the statutory limitation under the Ontario Companies Act for avoiding the allotment of shares had not begun, evidence upon such an issue, which would open up an entirely new case as to which no question had been raised previous to the trial, is properly rejected, particularly where no application was made to amend the pleadings.

Leave granted to the plaintiff by the Trial Judge to produce a written contract for sale of goods not set up in the pleadings and, therefore, inadmissible without an amendment of the pleading, is irregular, notwithstanding that such leave is given subject to the defendant's right to amend his plea.

Lemay v. Lefebvre, 4 D.L.R. 833, 41 Que. S.C. 541.

Where a witness is cross-examined by reference to his disposition taken on discovery, it is not permissible to conduct the proceedings in such a way as to give to the jury a false impression of the evidence given by the witness on discovery, and where that is attempted, the Trial Judge, in his discretion, may allow the whole of the discovery evidence to be read, or permit such other steps to be taken as may be necessary to remove the false impression.

King Lumber Co. v. C.P.R. Co., 7 D.L.R. 733, 14 Can. Ry. Cas. 313, 17 B.C.R. 502, 22 W.L.R. 553, 3 W.W.R. 442.

CROWN WITNESSES AT PRELIMINARY INQUIRY.

If the Crown does not intend to call at the trial a witness whom it called on the preliminary inquiry, such witness should be made available to the defence unless his evidence is unquestionably immaterial.

R. v. McClain, 23 D.L.R. 312, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 488, 8 A.L.R. 73, 7 W.W.R. 1134, 30 W.L.R. 388.

DISCRETION—RECALLING WITNESS ON COLLATERAL ISSUE AS TO CREDIT.

The judge trying a criminal case without a jury has a discretion to refuse to recall one of the accused who had given evidence on his own behalf for the purpose of giving further evidence tendered merely to confirm the credibility of one of his own witnesses as to a circumstance brought out on the latter's cross-examination which was not relevant to any fact in issue.

R. v. Prentice, 20 D.L.R. 791, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 436, 7 A.L.R. 479, 29 W.L.R. 665, 7 W.W.R. 271.

RECEPTION OF EVIDENCE—INADMISSIBILITY—SURVEYOR'S NOTES—MISTRIAL.

Where the Trial Judge bases his finding upon inadmissible evidence, this constitutes a mistrial, and on a boundary line dispute where the hearsay of witnesses as to the survey made to establish the line is received in support of the finding of the court instead of the primary and best evidence thereof being required, such is ground for a new trial.

(§ I C-12)—RECEPTION OF EVIDENCE ON COUNTERCLAIM—ORDER OF PROOF.

On the trial of an action in replevin for possession of an automobile and a counterclaim for the cost of repairs, the circumstances that the plaintiff in giving testimony on the claim incidentally gave some evidence as to the counterclaim does not disentitle the plaintiff, after the evidence on the part of the defendant in proof of the counterclaim is put in, to give testimony in answer thereto; and the Trial Judge's refusal to permit such further evidence is error constituting ground for a new trial on the counterclaim.

REOPENING—SURPRISE.

An application by the plaintiff in an action, after trial and before judgment, to reopen the case and introduce further evidence, will be refused where no surprise is shown, it appearing that his attention was sufficiently drawn to the point involved by the pleadings, evidence and argument before the case was closed.

Brown v. "Alliance No. 2," 16 D.L.R. 413, 19 B.C.R. 529, 27 W.L.R. 704.

D. STATEMENTS AND ARGUMENTS OF COUNSEL.

(§ I D—15) — ASSESSMENT OF DAMAGES ONLY—RIGHT TO APPEAL BY COUNSEL—JUDGMENT PRO CONFESSO.

Atlas Elevator Co. v. Manitoba Commission Co., 11 D.L.R. 860, 4 W.W.R. 255.

MURDER TRIAL—REFERENCE TO POSSIBLE COMMUTATION OF SENTENCE.

It is not error entitling the accused to a new trial that the Crown counsel in addressing the jury in a murder case stated, as was the law, that the Crown through the Department of Justice might reduce a sentence of death, if the accused were convicted, by substituting a term of imprisonment, where such statement was elicited by a reference made by counsel for the accused in his address to the jury to the disgrace which would fall on the family of the accused were he convicted, and where the Trial Judge afterwards instructed the jury that they should pay no attention to what the punishment should be.

R. v. Anderson, 16 D.L.R. 203, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 455, 7 A.L.R. 102, 50 C.L.J. 438, 5 W.W.R. 1052.

LIMITING SCOPE OF ENQUIRY—FAILURE TO OBJECT.

That the personal bank account of a person accused of embezzlement is put in evidence against him and counsel for the accused limits his examination of witnesses to an explanation of a single item of that account, does not preclude the Trial Judge from considering in his directions to the jury any inferences apart from such single item which may properly be drawn from what appears in the bank account, although counsel for the Crown had not during the examination by prisoner's counsel demanded an explanation of other items. [Browne v. Dunn, 6 R. 67, distinguished.]

R. v. Minchin, 15 D.L.R. 792, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 254, 7 A.L.R. 148, 26 W.L.R. 633, 5 W.W.R. 1028. [Affirmed, 18 D.L.R. 340, 6 W.W.R. 800.]

ADVERSE COMMENT TO JURY ON JUDGE'S RULING ON ADMISSIBILITY OF EVIDENCE.

It is error for which a new trial will be granted that the Crown counsel in his address to the jury told them that certain material evidence for the defence which the Trial Judge had ruled to be admissible should not have been allowed, as the effect of counsel's statement may have been to induce the jurors to disregard such testimony.

R. v. Webb, 16 D.L.R. 317, 24 Man. L.R. 437, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 424, 27 W.L.R. 313, 6 W.W.R. 358.

INFLAMMATORY LANGUAGE.

The mischievous practice of employing inflammatory language in addressing juries is an abuse of privilege of counsel, and if persisted in, a contempt of court.

Dale v. Toronto R. Co., 24 D.L.R. 413, 34 O.L.R. 104.

IMPROPER LANGUAGE ADDRESSED BY COUNSEL TO JURY—INFLAMMATORY TENDENCY—POSSIBLE PREJUDICE—OBJECTION MADE AT TRIAL—COURSE OPEN TO TRIAL JUDGE—VERDICT OF JURY SET ASIDE AND NEW TRIAL ORDERED.

Pender v. Hamilton Street R. Co., 12 O.W.N. 262.

(§ I D—16) — RIGHT TO OPEN AND CLOSE.

The party who obtains a preliminary hearing of a point of law has the right to begin, and, for the purposes of the argument, he is taken to admit all the facts in the opposition pleading, and the court will take the whole record into consideration and give judgment to the party who, on the whole, appears entitled to it.

(§ I D—17) — CRIMINAL CASE — COUNSEL FOR DEFENCE—STATING OR READING THE LAW TO THE JURY.

The right of the prisoner's counsel at the close of the testimony on a criminal trial is to "sum up the evidence" (Cr. Code, s. 944), and it is in the judge's discretion whether counsel will be permitted in his address to the jury to read to them extracts from legal text-books or law reports, even though the extract sought to be used may be of an English judicial opinion of accepted authority.

R. v. Cook, 18 D.L.R. 706, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 50, 48 N.S.R. 150.

(§ I D—20) — CRIMINAL PROSECUTION — ALLEGED CONFESSION—OPENING CASE.

Counsel for the Crown in a criminal prosecution may not, in opening the case to the jury, disclose the facts relied upon as constituting a confession by the accused until the court has decided that the evidence is admissible.

R. v. Willis, 9 D.L.R. 646, 23 Man. L.R. 77, 23 W.L.R. 702, 4 W.W.R. 761.

DUTY OF CROWN PROSECUTOR ON OPENING CASE.

It is the duty of the Crown Prosecutor, on a trial for murder, in his opening, to state generally to the jury everything pertaining to which he intends to offer evidence, and if he does not do so, the prisoner may, when evidence is offered that has not been referred to in such opening statement, complain of being taken by surprise. In his opening statement to the jury, the Crown Prosecutor, on a trial for murder, may state that he intends to offer evidence of a confession by the prisoner of the crime charged against him.

Trepanier v. The King, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 290, 18 Rev. de Jur. 177.

(§ I D-21)—CONDUCT OF CRIMINAL TRIAL—MATTERS NOT IN EVIDENCE—CROSS-EXAMINATION OF ACCUSED.

Where questions are put to the accused by the Crown counsel in cross-examination when the accused becomes a witness on his own behalf and such questions overstep the bounds allowable in cross-examination as making suggestions not warranted by the evidence and from which the jury might draw inferences prejudicial to the accused, the validity of the conviction will not be affected thereby if the Trial Judge has instructed the jury to disregard those questions and any inferences suggested by them.

R. v. Hurd, 10 D.L.R. 475, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 98, 6 A.L.R. 112, 29 W.L.R. 812, 4 W.W.R. 185.

COUNSEL—ADDRESS TO JURY—INTRODUCTION OF MATTER NOT IN EVIDENCE—DUTY OF JUDGE IN INSTRUCTING JURY.

If counsel in addressing the jury introduces matter which is not in evidence, the Trial Judge is under an obligation where his attention is called to these statements to instruct the jury that they are not to be influenced by these statements. Where the instruction of the judge is not sufficient under the circumstances, and the court is satisfied that the jury were influenced by such statements a new trial will be granted.

Ryan v. C.P.R. Co., 46 D.L.R. 397, [1919] 2 W.W.R. 368.

COMMENTING ON DEFENDANT'S FAILURE TO TESTIFY.

Where there is a clear contravention of s. 4 of the Canada Evidence Act by a comment by the prosecuting counsel in his address to the jury on defendant's failure to take the witness stand in his own behalf, the jury may be discharged and the sheriff directed to summon a new jury for the retrial of the indictment.

R. v. Beaulieu, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 65.

(§ I D-22)—ON FAILURE OF PRISONER'S WIFE TO TESTIFY.

A new trial will be ordered in a prosecution for incest if the Crown counsel in his address to the jury commented on the failure of the prisoner's wife to testify, and such comment may have affected the verdict.

R. v. Lindsay, 30 D.L.R. 417, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 163, 36 O.L.R. 171.

CRIMINAL CASE—SAME CROWN PROSECUTOR BEFORE GRAND JURY AND AT TRIAL OF INDICTMENT FOUND.

It is not an objection to the trial of an indictment that the Crown Prosecutor was present in the grand jury room during the deliberations of the grand jury upon the bill and also conducted the trial of the indictment found.

Gagnon v. The King, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 51.

(§ I D-23)—REFERENCE TO PAYMENT INTO COURT.

Rule 22, order 22, of the Supreme Court

Rules of British Columbia applies to actions for libel, and, therefore, in such an action no reference can be made before the jury to the fact that money has been paid into court.

Dickinson v. "The World," 5 D.L.R. 148, 17 B.C.R. 401, 21 W.L.R. 529, 2 W.W.R. 553.

F. OBJECTIONS AND EXCEPTIONS.

(§ I F-30)—OBJECTIONS AND EXCEPTIONS.

Where counsel for the prisoner objects, at the time, to evidence of a confession or admission by the accused being received on the ground that no proper foundation had been laid for such evidence, whereupon the Crown adduces evidence to disprove any threat or inducement and the prisoner's counsel cross-examines thereon but does not renew the objection when the examination is thereafter proceeded with, there is a waiver of further objection on that ground.

The King v. Hoo Sam, 1 D.L.R. 569, 5 S.L.R. 180, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 259, 20 W.L.R. 571, 1 W.W.R. 1049.

PRELIMINARY EXCEPTIONS—DELAY IN FILING—JUDGE'S DISCRETION—QUE. C.P. 164.

The filing of preliminary exceptions are absolutely restricted by C.C.P. to the three days fixed by art. 164. The court cannot extend the time.

Lavallee v. Goold, 16 Que. P.R. 196.

G. ANSWERING INQUIRY BY JURY; READING TESTIMONY TO.

(§ I G-35)—CRIMINAL CASE—MESSAGE TO JUDGE FROM JURY ROOM.

Where the jury are deliberating in a criminal case and the Trial Judge has taken up the trial of another case, the fact that the foreman of the jury sent a note to the judge asking for a certain letter which had been mentioned in the evidence, but which had not been filed as an exhibit, and that the judge directed the clerk of assize to inform the foreman that the letter itself was not in possession of the court, is not a ground of objection against the verdict. (Wilmont's Case, 10 Cr. App. R. 173, distinguished.)

R. v. Batterman, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 351, 31 O.L.R. 225, 8 O.W.N. 554.

H. REMARKS OF COURT.

(§ I H-39)—COMMENT ON FAILURE OF ACCUSED TO REBUT TESTIMONY.

A direction to the jury on a criminal trial that the accused had failed to account for a particular occurrence, as to which, by reason of the testimony adduced against him, the onus was cast upon him to answer, is not a comment upon the failure of the accused to testify, and does not contravene s. 4 of the Canada Evidence Act. R.S.C. 1906, c. 145. [R. v. Aho, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 453, 11 B.C.R. 114, applied.]

R. v. May, 21 D.L.R. 728, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 469, 21 B.C.R. 23, 7 W.W.R. 1261, 30 W.L.R. 488.

JURY—IRRELEVANT EVIDENCE—MISLEADING OBSERVATIONS — GENERAL VERDICT — PREJUDICE—NEW TRIAL.

Laird v. Taxicabs, 17 D.L.R. 847, 6 O.W.N. 505.

JUDGE EXPRESSING OWN OPINION.

The Trial Judge, in summoning up in a criminal case, may express his own opinion upon the facts, and this will not be a ground for a new trial if he made it clear to the jury that they were the judges of the facts and were to exercise their own judgment without being bound to accept his view.

R. v. Moke, 38 D.L.R. 441, 12 A.L.R. 18, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 296, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 575.

A. IN GENERAL.

(§ II A—40)—CRIMINAL CASE—INSTRUCTIONS TO JURY—SLIGHTING OF PRISONER'S DEFENCE IN SUMMING UP.

It is a serious flaw in a criminal case if the directions to the jury are not as carefully put in regard to the prisoner's case as is the case of the prosecution. [R. v. Walton, 1 Cr. App. R. 227, approved.]

R. v. Graves, 9 D.L.R. 30, 46 N.S.R. 305, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 384, 12 E.L.R. 1.

REFUSING TRIAL BY JURY—DISCRETION—APPEAL.

A Court of Appeal will not interfere with an order of a judge, refusing a trial with a jury, where he has exercised his discretion after proper consideration of the case and has not proceeded upon any wrong principle.

CONTRACT — BREACH — DAMAGES — FUNCTIONS OF COURT AND JURY.

It is the duty of the court not the jury to determine the meaning of a contract. And when failure on the part of one party to fulfil its obligations has been established, the only question for the jury to deal with is the assessment of damages.

Gerrity v. Bragg, 50 D.L.R. 284.

QUESTIONS OF LAW OR FACT.

Where, at a trial of a civil action with a jury, the Trial Judge, under s. 112 of the Judicature Act, R.S.O. 1897, c. 51, submits questions to the jury to be answered, he may, if he sees fit, also submit a question inviting a general verdict (e.g., "do you find for the plaintiff or defendant") in addition to the answers to the questions submitted, and where the answers to the specific questions harmonize with the answer to the general question, a judgment entered in accordance with such findings is regular, provided the charge to the jury has been made sufficiently comprehensive to enable the jury to render a general verdict. [Furlong v. Carroll, 7 A.R. (Ont.) 145, applied, and Reid v. Barnes, 25 O.R. 223, distinguished, by court below.]

B. SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE TO GO TO JURY.

(§ II B—45)—NEGLIGENCE.

Under the Quebec practice it is sufficient to put to the jury the question whether there was negligence and in what it consisted, and it is not necessary to detail specific faults.

Temple v. Montreal Tramways, 23 D.L.R. 587, 47 Que. S.C. 121.

NEGLIGENCE.

Absence of evidence from which a jury can reasonably find that there was negligence on the part of the defendant which caused the accident justifies the Trial Judge in withdrawing the case from the jury and dismissing the action.

Steele v. Cape Breton Electric Co., 39 D.L.R. 609, 52 N.S.R. 61.

Evidence making a prima facie case for the Crown in a criminal prosecution, if unanswered, and believed by the jury, is sufficient to support a conviction of the person accused.

Girvin v. The King, 20 W.L.R. 130, affirming 18 W.L.R. 482.

(§ II B—46)—NEGLIGENCE—VERDICT—NO ERROR IN LAW — APPEAL — FAMILIES COMPENSATIONS ACT (B.C.).

If in an action under the Families Compensation Act, R.S.B.C. 1911, c. 82, the finding of the jury is that there was negligence, and if upon the facts there was sufficient evidence to admit of the question being passed upon by it, the verdict will not be disturbed unless some error in law has taken place.

Richmond v. Evans, 48 D.L.R. 209, [1919] 3 W.W.R. 339, affirming 43 D.L.R. 214.

NEGLIGENCE—PERSONAL INJURIES.

Where the court or jury look at the locus of an accident, or the machine which is said to have caused one, it is simply to enable the trial tribunal the better to follow the evidence, and the verdict is still to be given upon the evidence.

Corea v. McClary Mfg. Co., 3 D.L.R. 323, 3 O.W.N. 1071, 21 O.W.R. 909.

INJURIES CAUSING DEATH—DAMAGES—NEGLIGENCE OF EMPLOYER—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE TO GO TO JURY.

In an action claiming damages for the death of an employee caused by the negligence of the employer, if there is evidence on which negligence can be inferred, such evidence should be submitted to the jury. It is for the jury to say whether in fact negligence should or should not be inferred. Held, that the evidence was properly submitted to the jury, and that there was sufficient evidence to warrant the jury in finding negligence on the part of the defendants which caused the accident.

E.D. & B.C.R. Co. v. McPherson, 49 D.L.R. 254, [1919] 3 W.W.R. 471.

C. QUESTIONS OF LAW AND FACT.

(§ II C—50)—Where at the trial a question which is in truth a question of law is, as a precautionary measure, submitted by the judge as one of the questions of fact to the jury and the jury makes its finding thereon, the Trial Judge may, upon a motion for judgment upon the verdict, ignore that portion of the jury's findings and assume control of the question as one of law alone.

Johnston v. Clark, 7 D.L.R. 361, 4 O.W.N. 202, 23 O.W.R. 196.

QUESTIONS OF FACT—ADMISSIONS—NOTICE OF.

Where notice to admit facts is given under Order 32, r. 4, it is the duty of the party receiving the notice to admit the facts, or give reasons why it is not necessary to admit them.

Murchie v. Mail Publishing Co., 42 N.B.R. 26.

(§ II C—55)—MIXED QUESTIONS OF LAW AND FACT.

In a jury trial mixed question of law and of facts is for the jury under the direction of the presiding judge on the law part.

Security Life Ins. Co. v. Power, 24 Que. K.B. 181.

POWER OF COURT AND JURY—EVIDENCE SUPPORTING FINDING OF JURY.

It is not possible for the Supreme Court to reject a sworn statement of a plaintiff, not wholly incredible and accepted by a jury and to infer from surrounding facts and circumstances that he must have known that of which he specifically denied knowledge.

Ogle v. B.C. Electric R. Co., 6 W.W.R. 683.

(§ II C—85) — QUESTIONS OF FACT — WHETHER MEDICAL PRACTITIONER A MUNICIPAL EMPLOYEE.

The question as to whether a medical practitioner is an employee of a municipality is a question of fact and may properly be submitted to a jury for answer.

Boillard v. Montreal, 9 D.L.R. 152, 43 Que. S.C. 171.

QUESTION FOR JURY—EMPLOYEE'S KNOWLEDGE OF RISK.

The extent of the knowledge of an employee of the risk he runs in his employment is a proper subject for the consideration of the jury.

CREDIBILITY OF WITNESSES.

The question involved in an action to set aside a voluntary conveyance is one of fact, and, therefore, much depends in such an action upon the impression made upon the mind of the Trial Judge by the parties when in the witness box. [Fleming v. Edwards, 23 A.R. (Ont.) 718, distinguished.]

Ottawa Wine Vaults Co. v. McGuire, 8 D.L.R. 229, 4 O.W.N. 318. [Affirmed in 13 D.L.R. 81, 43 Can. S.C.R. 44.]

(§ II C—91)—MALICIOUS PROSECUTION — PROBABLE CAUSE.

The question of reasonable and probable cause is one of law for the court, but in order to decide that question the court may properly ask the jury to decide the fact whether the defendant made reasonably careful inquiry. [Abraht v. North East R. Co., 11 App. Cas. 247, followed.]

FUNCTIONS OF JUDGE AND JURY—ACTION FOR MALICIOUS PROSECUTION—QUESTIONS OF REASONABLE AND PROBABLE CAUSE.

Connors v. Reid, 20 O.W.R. 291.

(§ II C—103)—QUESTION OF ACCORD AND SATISFACTION—SUBMISSION TO JURY.

In an action for damages for injuries sustained through the alleged negligence of defendants where the defence sets up an agreement releasing them from liability, it is a question of fact whether such agreement does or does not amount to an accord and satisfaction, and it can be tried by the jury at the same time as the other issues.

Trawford v. B.C. Elec. R. Co., 9 D.L.R. 817, 18 B.C.R. 132, 15 Can. Ry. Cas. 39, 23 W.L.R. 175, 4 W.W.R. 150.

(§ II C—105)—LIBEL AND SLANDER.

Special questions relevant and necessary to the complete determination of a matter can be submitted to the jury at the instance of the parties thereto, under the provisions of ss. 22, 23 of the Judicature Act, 9 Edw. VII. (N.B.), 1909, c. 5, only where the Trial Judge shall, in his discretion, instead of having a general verdict returned, have himself submitted similar questions to the jury, for the purpose of entering a verdict on their answers thereto.

It is a question of fact for the court whether, in an action for libel, a certain communication is privileged. Whether an alleged libellous article is to such an extent excessive that it might be held by the jury to be in excess of the privilege is a question for the Trial Court.

Winnipeg Steel Granary & Culvert Co. v. Canada Ingot Iron Culvert Co., 7 D.L.R. 707, 22 Man. L.R. 576, 22 W.L.R. 387, 3 W.W.R. 356.

A count in a claim for slander which charges a person with misfeasance in office should not be submitted to the jury where the truth of the allegation is shewn.

Holland v. Hall, 3 D.L.R. 722, 22 O.W.R. 299.

LIBEL—SUFFICIENCY OF RETRACTION—QUESTION FOR JURY.

The question whether a subsequent publication was a full and fair retraction of a libellous publication involving a criminal charge within the meaning of s. 8 of the Libel and Slander Act, 9 Edw. VII. c. 4, R.S.O. 1914, c. 71, is for the jury.

Lumsden v. Spectator Printing Co., 14 D.L.R. 470, 29 O.L.R. 293.

(§ II C—110)—NEGLIGENCE—ASSUMPTION OF RISK.

In an action for negligence, where the evidence for the plaintiff is equally consistent with the existence or nonexistence of negligence, it is not competent for the judge to leave the case to the jury.

Negligence is a mixed question of law and fact, and is therefore a proper subject to be determined by a jury under the court's instructions; their findings, if in accordance with the pleadings and evidence, are final, and cannot be disturbed.

Villani v. Montreal, 29 D.L.R. 321, 49 Que. S.C. 469.

CARE AND PRUDENCE.

Honest belief that no danger exists does not negative negligence the real question is, would a reasonably careful and prudent man, under the circumstances, arrive at that conclusion; that is for the jury to decide.

Huck v. C.P.R. Co., 29 D.L.R. 571, 9 S.L.R. 288, 34 W.L.R. 1177, 10 W.W.R. 1342.

The question of negligence is a mixed question of law and fact; it is for the judge to explain the law to the jury, from which they may draw their conclusion as to the question of liability, which will be binding upon the court. [Montreal Light v. Regan, 40 Can. S.C.R. 580, 590; Tobin v. Murison, 5 Moore P.C. 110, followed.]

Montreal v. Gamache, 25 D.L.R. 303, 24 Que. K.B. 312.

(§ II C—111)—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE—QUESTION FOR JURY WHEN — WITHDRAWN UNDER WHAT TEST.

Contributory negligence is prima facie a question for the jury, and only where it is very clear that no jury could reasonably find otherwise should a case be withdrawn from the jury on the ground that contributory negligence has been established.

(§ II C—130)—NEGLIGENCE DRIVING—SPEED.

In an action for damages for an injury to the plaintiff caused by the defendant's servant in the course of his employment negligently and through want of proper care and skill in driving a horse and carriage running into and injuring the plaintiff, a witness for the plaintiff having stated that just before the accident happened the horse was trotting, was asked, "Could you say how many miles an hour?" answered (subject to objection), "The horse was going so fast that I don't think he could have been pulled up immediately";—Held, that the answer was properly received. It is the duty of the Trial Judge to determine whether any facts have been established from which negligence may be reasonably inferred, and for the jury to find whether from the facts so established negligence ought to be inferred.

Porter v. O'Connell, 43 N.B.R. 458.

(§ II C—137)—LACK OF CARE IN RUNNING CAR — CAR STATIONARY DISCHARGING PASSENGERS.

The negligence of the defendant company was sufficiently shewn so as to prevent the withdrawal of such question from the jury, where the evidence disclosed that sufficient caution was not observed in running a street car towards a car standing on a parallel track discharging passengers at a street crossing where they were regularly discharged and received, and where, to the knowledge of the company, it was the habit or custom of passengers to cross a parallel track in order to reach another street, and that the car struck and injured the plaintiff, who had just alighted from the stationary car, and without noticing the car approaching from the opposite direction passed around the rear of the standing car and stepped upon the parallel track.

Cooper v. London Street R. Co., 9 D.L.R. 368, 4 O.W.N. 623, 15 Can. Ry. Cas. 24, 23 O.W.R. 767, affirming 5 D.L.R. 198, 14 Can. Ry. Cas. 91, 22 O.W.R. 87.

QUESTIONS OF LAW—WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT—WHO HAS CHARGE OR CONTROL OF MACHINERY—WHAT IS A "MACHINE."

The interpretation of the words "in charge or control" of a machine, as used in the Ontario Workmen's Compensation Act, R.S.O. 1897, c. 160, is for the Trial Judge, although what the workmen alleged to have been in control did and how he did it are questions of fact for the jury where there are conflicting facts of circumstances. It is for the Trial Judge, upon the evidence, to define what is meant by the word "machine" as used in the Ontario Workmen's Compensation Act, R.S.O. 1897, c. 160, R.S.O. 1914, c. 146.

Dunlop v. Canada Foundry Co., 12 D.L.R. 791, 28 O.L.R. 140, affirming 2 D.L.R. 887, 4 O.W.N. 791.

(§ II C-146)—NEGLIGENCE OF RAILWAY—QUESTIONS FOR JURY.

Stone v. C.P.R. Co., 13 D.L.R. 93, 15 Can. Ry. Cas. 408, reversing 4 D.L.R. 789, 14 Can. Ry. Cas. 61, 26 O.L.R. 121, 21 O.W.R. 785.

In an action for negligence against a railway company the Trial Judge should confine all questions of ultimate negligence to the time from which the defendants or their servants could have anticipated the danger.

McEachen v. G.T.R. Co., 2 D.L.R. 588, 3 O.W.N. 628, 21 O.W.R. 187.

In an action for personal injuries to the conductor of a construction train resulting from a wing of a gravel spreading machine operated by air pressure, coming down upon him, caused by the engineer in charge of the machine unintentionally starting it by striking his knee against the handle of a valve used to set it in motion while attempting to get closer to the air gauge, a statement by a witness that the engineer must have been climbing up the machine, together with the evidence that the valve was from two and a half to three feet above the spot where the engineer was standing, would justify a suggestion in the Trial Judge's charge that the engineer might have touched the valve with his knee while climbing up the machine to get a nearer view of the gauge.

Tobin v. C.P.R. Co., 2 D.L.R. 173, 5 S.L.R. 381, 20 W.L.R. 676, 1 W.W.R. 1252.

(§ II C-148) — VOLENS — CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

The question as to whether an engineer employed by a railway company received his injuries through his own negligence or whether he voluntarily assumed the risk is one of fact for the jury. [McPhee v. Esquimalt, etc., R. Co., 16 D.L.R. 756, 49 Can. S.C.R. 43; Canada Foundry Co. v. Mitchell, 35 Can. S.C.R. 452, followed.]

QUESTIONS OF LAW AND FACT—EMPLOYER'S LIABILITY—ASSUMPTION OF RISK.

In a servant's action against his master for damages for negligence where a defence of voluntary assumption of risk was duly presented at the trial and evidence submitted to support it, the plaintiff is not entitled to judgment on findings of the jury in which no answer was given to a question submitted on that issue, although there was a finding of negligence in failing to provide a guard and a further finding that there was no contributory negligence by the plaintiff.

(§ II C-157)—INJURY TO EMPLOYEE—NEGLIGENCE—ELEVATOR ACCIDENT.

That a workman employed in building construction and conveying building material upon an uncaged elevator was crowded so close to the edge of an overloaded and uncaged elevator that his heel projected and was caught and injured in contact with the end of a bolt sunk in the wall of the elevator shaft, presents a prima facie case to go to the jury, and cannot properly be withdrawn from their consideration, where the jury might properly find upon the evidence that the proximate cause of the accident was the employer's failure to have the elevator caged for such work, or his negligence in leaving the bolts projecting in a dangerous way in the shaft, and where the jury would not necessarily have to attribute the injury to the negligence of the fellow servant in charge of the elevator in permitting the overloading.

Charles v. Norton Griffiths Co., 15 D.L.R. 177, 18 B.C.R. 179.

(§ II C-164)—PHYSICIANS.

An action for malpractice against a surgeon or physician should be tried without a jury.

Gerbracht v. Bingham, 7 D.L.R. 259, 4 O.W.N. 117, 23 O.W.R. 82.

(§ II C-168)—INSURANCE MATTERS.

A motion to strike out a jury notice should be granted by a Judge in Chambers, under Con. rr. 1322, in an action on a policy of life insurance where the issues to be tried are, whether the action is barred, the insufficiency of the proof of death of the insured, the nonpayment of premiums, and the violation by the insured of the rules of the company.

Bissett v. Knights of the Macabees, 3 D.L.R. 714, 3 O.W.N. 1280, 22 O.W.R. 89.

D. TAKING CASE FROM JURY.

(§ II D-170)—TWO EQUALLY POSSIBLE VIEWS ON THE FACTS.

If the facts which are admitted are capable of two equally possible views, which reasonable people may take, and one of them is more consistent with the case for one party than for the other, it is the duty of the judge to let the jury decide between such conflicting views. [Davey v. London & S.W.R. Co., 12 Q.B.D. 70, applied.]

An action for injuries received by a collision with an automobile cannot be taken from the jury where the circumstances create a statutory presumption under s. 7 of 8 Edw. VII. VOLENS.

In the case of volens a very slight amount of evidence will prevent the court from withdrawing the question from the jury.

McPhee v. Esquimalt & Nanaimo R. Co., 23 D.L.R. 561, 22 B.C.R. 67, 8 W.V.R. 1319, 32 W.L.R. 125.

TRIAL BY JURY—CHARGE OF THE JUDGE — NEGLIGENCE C.C. (QUE.), ARTS. 1053, 1054.

In a trial before a jury for damages resulting from an accident, the presiding judge is not justified in withdrawing the case from the jury when there is some evidence of negligence against the defendant, even if such evidence is only presumptive. When a jury renders a verdict of specific liability against the defendant, the latter cannot, in the Court of Review, object to a part of the judge's charge, to the effect that the accident having taken place by the bursting of an engine, the property and the keeping in good order of which appertained to the defendants, the jury could come to a conclusion against him without finding liability against him if the defendant did not show that it was impossible for him to avoid the accident as the verdict was not given under art. 1054, C.C. (Que.), but under art. 1053, C.C. (Que.). It is for the jury, and not the judge, to draw conclusions from the fact that exhibits which could have helped the jury were not produced before them.

Irwin v. G.T.R. Co., 47 Que. S.C. 32.

(§ II D—175)—NONSUIT—WHEN TO BE REFUSED.

The Trial Judge should not nonsuit the plaintiff or withdraw the case from the jury where there is material evidence as to the actual facts, but such evidence is conflicting, even although the evidence may be very strong on one side and weak on the other; or where the material primary facts are undisputed, but two different inferences may be reasonably drawn by different minds from those facts; or whenever some ground exists on which a jury may reasonably find a verdict either way.

(§ II D—180)—WHETHER CAUSE OF ACCIDENT MIGHT HAVE BEEN FOUND—REVERSIBLE ERROR.

Where, from all the evidence submitted, the jury might reasonably have found the existence of the contract for the breach of which damages were claimed, it is error for the judge to take the case from the jury and to direct judgment for the defendant.

(§ II D—186)—NEGLIGENCE — PERSONAL INJURIES.

Where there is no reasonable evidence upon the whole case whether adduced by the plaintiff or the defendant upon which the jury could find in the plaintiff's favour in an action of negligence, the case should be withdrawn from them and the action dismissed; it is not necessary to go through the form of directing the jury to find a verdict for the defendant and of having such verdict recorded.

Cooper v. London Street R. Co., 9 D.L.R. 368, 4 O.W.N. 623, 15 Can. Ry. Cas. 24, 23 O.W.R. 767.

E. SPECIAL INTERROGATORIES.

(§ II E—195)—GENERAL VERDICT—EFFECT.

Under s. 112 of the Ontario Judicature Act a general verdict will be disregarded where special questions are submitted to and answered by the jury.

Caldwell v. Cockshutt Plow Co., 18 D.L.R. 722, 30 O.L.R. 244.

(§ II E—196)—PRELIMINARY QUESTIONS TO JURY—BASIS FOR DETERMINING POINT OF LAW—MALICIOUS PROSECUTION.

Morrison v. Wilson, 16 D.L.R. 852, 28 W.L.R. 202, reversing 14 D.L.R. 815, 26 W.L.R. 317.

ABANDONMENT OF PLEA AT TRIAL—CHARGE TO JURY.

Slater v. Watts, 16 B.C.R. 36.

FAILURE TO SUBMIT QUESTIONS—GENERAL VERDICT.

Held, that there was no misdirection or nondirection, under the circumstances disclosed, in not submitting questions to the jury and in taking a general verdict.

Guthrie v. Hunting Lumber Co., 15 E.C.R. 471.

III. Instructions.

A. IN GENERAL; FORM; TIME.

(§ III A—200)—TAKING DOWN IN SHORTHAND.

It is not obligatory in other than capital offences that the judge's charge to the jury should be taken down in shorthand.

Rivet v. The King, 27 D.L.R. 695, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 235, 24 Que. K.B. 559.

DIRECTION OF JUDGE—ERROR OF LAW.

In a trial by jury, the direction of the judge can only be attacked for error of law, and not for error of fact, when the judge leaves to the jury every liberty to estimate the facts.

Perron v. Drouin, 46 Que. S.C. 336.

C. ON WHAT MATTERS NECESSARY OR PROPER.

(§ III C—213)—JURY TRIAL—INDEMNITY — INCOME—CAPITALIZATION — JUDGE'S DIRECTION—C.C.P. 502.

The sum of $7,000 awarded by a jury is not excessive in a case of loss caused by a diminution of working power by 50 per cent upon an annual salary of $1,100, with an expectation of life of 33 years. It is not an error on the part of the judge in directing the jury to tell it that in estimating the damages for an accident it ought not to take account of the payment of a sick benefit from a co-operative benefit society.

C.P.R. Co. v. Maxwell, 23 Que. K.B. 414.

(§ III C—216)—AS TO NEGLIGENCE—PERSONAL INJURIES.

Where the answers of a jury to questions put to them are indefinite and inconclusive, it is a wise practice for the Trial Judge to send the jury back, for the purpose of making their meaning plain.

Dart v. Toronto R. Co., 8 D.L.R. 121, 4 O.W.N. 315, 23 O.W.R. 380.

(§ III C—217)—CRIMINAL LAW—MURDER—HOMICIDE—DIRECTION OF JUDGE—MIXED JURY—USING ONE LANGUAGE ONLY—AFFIDAVIT—CUSTOM—EVIDENCE OF ACCUSED.

It is not error on the part of the judge presiding over a Criminal Court, in a case of murder, where the jury is composed half of jurors respectively speaking French and English, to sum up the case in the English language alone, if all the jurors understand the latter language, if all the pleadings are in English and no objection has been taken by the defendant at the time of the trial, and when the accused has not suffered any prejudice. The judge presiding at a trial by jury is only bound to sum up the facts in the case where it is necessary under the circumstances. In a criminal appeal, the court should not take any account of an affidavit, obtained and sworn to after the trial by a jurymen. When in a trial for murder, there is nothing in the evidence which could justify a verdict of homicide, it is not a mistake of law on the part of the presiding judge to say in summoning up the facts, that the case is not one in which the jury can bring in a verdict of homicide; that the verdict must be that of murder or not guilty. A custom established in this country authorizes the presiding judge in a criminal case to draw the attention of the jury to the frequency of crimes in the district, resulting from the general belief that criminals often obtain a verdict in their favour. There is no false direction on the part of the judge, unless his words have made the jury believe, or have the nature of convincing them, that certain questions submitted to them were excluded by the law from their competence, or that they could lead them to make a mistake in the law. When the accused freely offers his evidence, the judge has a right to remark to the jury that in no part of his evidence has he denied the important facts proved against him, and that he has not declared that he was not guilty.

R. v. Veullette, 28 Que. K.B. 364.

D. ON EVIDENCE AND FACTS.

(§ III D—220)—JURY—JUDGE'S CHARGE TO—DISCUSSION OF FACTS—OPINION OF JUDGE—DISCRETION OF JURY.

The Trial Judge may properly discuss the facts in his charge to the jury in order to assist them, and, in doing so, it is not error for him to express a definite opinion upon the evidence so long as the jury are left quite aware of their own discretion and authority to make an independent finding.

Tario v. West Canadian Collieries, 20 D.L.R. 761, 29 W.L.R. 167.

JUDGE'S OPINION UPON.

A judge, in his charge to a jury, may express his opinion on questions of fact, providing he does not lead the jury to believe that they are being given a direction which it is their duty to follow.

Montreal Tramways Co. v. Séguin, 28 D.L.R. 494, 52 Can. S.C.R. 644.

(§ III D—228)—COMMENT ON FAILURE OF PRISONER'S WIFE TO TESTIFY FOR DEFENCE—NEW TRIAL.

It is a ground for granting a new trial on a conviction for murder that the Trial Judge commented on the failure of the prisoner's wife to testify for the defence, although the judge before verdict withdrew the comment. [R. v. Corby, 1 Can. Cr. Cas. 457; R. v. Coleman, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 523; R. v. Hill, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 38, 33 N.S. R. 253, followed.]

The King v. Romano, 21 D.L.R. 195, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 30, 24 Que. K.B. 40.

(§ III D—229)—READING CHARGE TO JURY—MINOR INACCURACIES.

In determining whether the instruction to the jury was a proper one or not, the Appellate Court is to look at the charge as a whole; a new trial will not be granted, even in a capital case, because of minor inaccuracies in the charge if the inaccuracies cannot have misled the jury and the defence was fairly put before them.

R. v. Hogue, 39 D.L.R. 99, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 419, 39 O.L.R. 427.

MURDER—REASONABLE DOUBT.

The evidence to convict on a charge of murder must be such as to convince the jury beyond all reasonable doubt that the accused is guilty; but a juror is not to create materials of doubt by resorting to trivial suppositions and remote conjecture as to possible states of fact different from that established by the evidence.

R. v. Kraichenko, 17 D.L.R. 244, 24 Man. L.R. 652, 28 W.L.R. 76, 6 W.W.R. 836, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 277. [Applied in R. v. Schurman, 19 D.L.R. 800, 7 S.L.R. 269, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 365, 30 W.L.R. 56, 7 W.W.R. 680.]

E. CORRECTNESS OF INSTRUCTION.

(§ III E—235)—PRESIDING JUDGE SUMMING UP—COMMENT.

In his charge to the jury, the presiding judge at the trial has the right to sum up the evidence and comment upon the facts and connect them with the proper principles of law.

Temple v. Montreal Tramways Co., 23 D.L.R. 587, 47 Que. S.C. 121.

(§ III E—236)—CORRECTNESS OF — DAMAGES — PERSONAL INJURIES.

In a negligence case against a railway company by a fireman in its employment, for permanent personal injury impairing his earning capacity, the judge should charge the jury to consider, on the quantum of damages, the general opportunities in life still open to the plaintiff, and there is misdirection where the charge limits those opportunities to the plaintiff's particular calling or even the class of callings within his general industrial field, for instance, railroading.

(§ III E—237)—NEGLIGENCE — DEATH— DAMAGES — EVIDENCE — DEATH OF JUDGE.

It is error in law for a judge, in an action by a husband and his children for the accidental death of his wife and their mother, to advise the jury that they could not take into consideration the funeral expenses incurred by them. The loss of a wife and mother is to the husband and children a pecuniary loss, which a jury is bound to admit according to evidence adduced before them. Where the judge comments upon a fact as proved, when it is not, thereby influencing improperly the mind of the jury, it is ground for a new trial. If the judge died before signing his charge to the jury, the Court of Review may, under art. 1208 C.C.P., order the charge to form part of the record.

Montreal Tramways v. Rothschild, 27 Que. K.B. 350.

(§ III E—240)—RESPONSIBILITY—DEMAND FOR JUDICIAL TRANSFER — DAMAGES — TRIAL BY JURY—DIRECTION OF JUDGE—C.C. ART. 1053—C.C.P. ARTS. 498, 499, 502, 591, 900.

A demand for judicial transfer of goods is in its nature injurious. In an action for damages founded on an illegal demand for judicial transfer, and which is submitted to a jury, it is not a fatal omission on the part of the presiding judge not to inform the jury that a demand for judicial transfer can be lawfully contested. The direction of the judge is not erroneous if he addresses the jury in an action such as that above described, in the following words: "To cease payment on the part of a merchant is as much as to say that he is not paying generally, that he has many obligations in suspense, that he is not meeting his obligations in proportion as they become due," and later on: "An unpaid note does not say that the debtor is insolvent, nor that he has ceased to make his payments."

Bélanger v. Jacobs, 56 Que. S.C. 149.

(§ III E—246)—MALICIOUS PROSECUTION.

Whether there was reasonable and probable cause for the arrest of the plaintiff must be decided, in an action for malicious prosecution, by the Trial Judge, while the question of malice is to be determined by the jury.

Wood v. Newby, 5 D.L.R. 486, 4 A.L.R. 333, 21 W.L.R. 438, 2 W.W.R. 409.

(§ III E—248)—AS TO LIBELLOUS WORDS.

In an action for libel the Trial Judge may tell the jury that in his opinion the words or article complained of are libellous, provided he makes it clear to them that they are free to determine for themselves the issue of libel or no libel upon the evidence, entirely apart from his interpretation.

Knott v. Telegram Printing Co., 30 D.L.R. 762, 55 Can. S.C.R. 631, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 335, affirming 32 D.L.R. 409, 27 Man. L.R. 336, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 974.

LIBEL OR SLANDER.

The fact that the Trial Judge in an action claiming damages for maliciously writing and publishing a libellous letter did not define malice to the jury and then proceed in the light of such definition to submit the facts to them, did not make the charge misleading or afford ground for a new trial, it appearing from the summoning up as a whole that the judge fairly covered the definition and submitted the evidence for the consideration of the jury and that nothing was said in or omitted from the charge that would or ought to be considered as misleading.

Bligh v. Warren, 46 N.S.R. 440.

(§ III E—250)—AS TO NEGLIGENCE.

Wherever a plaintiff seeking damages from a jury for injuries alleged to have been caused by negligence relies on more than one negligent act or omission, the Trial Judge should impress upon the jury that any alleged negligence not found will be taken to be negative and that any negligence found, in order to avail the plaintiff, must also be found to have been a cause of the injury sustained.

Pruett v. G.T.R. Co., [1917] 2 W.W.R. 662.

In an action for damages for negligence, s. 55 of the Supreme Court Act, R.S.B.C., 1911, c. 58, is not complied with a charge to the jury which states merely abstract principles of law; the jury must be told how that law should be applied to the facts as the jury finds them. [Alaska Packers Assn. v. Spencer, 35 Can. S.C.R. 562, followed.]

Jackson v. B.C. Electric R. Co., 38 D.L.R. 145, 24 B.C.R. 484, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 1046.

AS TO WHAT CONSTITUTES NEGLIGENCE.

In an action for damages for an injury caused by alleged negligence, the verdict will not be set aside on the ground that the Trial Judge failed to instruct the jury as to what would, and what would not, constitute negligence, if counsel on the trial neglected to ask the judge to so instruct them.

Robinson v. Haley, 42 N.B.R. 657.

CAUSE OF ACCIDENTS—EXHIBITS.

When a jury renders a verdict of specific liability against the defendant, the latter cannot, before the Court of Review, object to a part of the judge's charge, to the effect that the accident having taken place by the bursting of an engine, the property and the keeping in good order of which appertained to the defendants, the jury could come to a conclusion against him without finding liability against him if the defendant did not shew that it was impossible for him to avoid the accident; as the verdict was not given under art. 1054, C.C. (Que.), but under art. 1053. It is for the jury, and not the judge, to draw conclusions from the fact that exhibits which could have helped the jury were not produced before them.

Irwin v. G.T.R., 47 Que. S.C. 32.

§ III E—253)—STREET RAILWAYS GENERALLY.

Where, in a jury trial of an action for negligence against a street railway company and a municipal corporation, the plaintiff desists from his action as against one of two defendants jointly sued in damages and the Trial Judge thereupon modifies the assignment of facts to be submitted to the jury no prejudice is suffered by the remaining defendant if the assignment of facts as modified allows the jury to find the accident was due either to the negligence of the plaintiff, or to that of the defendant or to that of neither of them.

Montreal Street R. Co. v. Conant, 7 D. L.R. 261, 14 Can. Ry. Cas. 305, 22 Que. K.B. 212, 19 Rev. Leg. 71.

COLLISION—PRESUMPTION OF NEGLIGENCE.

It is sound law for a judge to instruct a jury that allowing two cars owned by the same company to collide is a presumption of negligence or fault equivalent to proof, and they could so find if the company does not shew that it is in no way responsible.

Kazaransky v. Montreal Tramways Co., 48 Que. S.C. 76.

§ III E—260)—IN CRIMINAL CASES.

It is not misdirection for the Trial Judge charging the jury to speak of an admission against his interest, made by the accused as a "confession" and to use the word "confession" synonymously for a statement against interest.

The King v. Hoo Sam, 1 D.L.R. 569, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 259, 5 S.L.R. 180, 20 W.L.R. 571, 1 W.W.R. 1049.

INSTRUCTION AS TO CORROBORATION OF ACCOMPLICE.

It is the duty of the Trial Judge to inform the jury in a criminal case, in which the evidence of an accomplice is given on behalf of the prosecution, that it is inadvisable to convict on such evidence unless corroborated.

R. v. Bechtel, 9 D.L.R. 552, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 40, 24 W.L.R. 470.

INSTRUCTION AS TO EXCULPATORY ADMISSIONS.

In instructing the jury on a criminal trial the judge may properly direct the jury that it is for them to credit or not the exculpatory part of the story given by the accused in an implicating admission made to a fellow prisoner in the gaol, if the jury consider it not to be plausible and that it is open to them at the same time to credit other portions of the admissions if they see fit.

R. v. Farduto, 10 D.L.R. 669, 19 Rev. Leg. 165.

HOMICIDE—INSTRUCTION TO JURY—PRISONER'S LETTER REQUESTING FALSE ANSWER TO INQUIRY—EXPLAINING POSSESSION OF MONEY.

On the trial of a murder charge, the construction of a letter written by the accused and placed in evidence is for the judge, and not for the jury, and where the letter itself is a request to make false statements in aid of his defence, the Trial Judge may tell the jury that they should take into consideration the prisoner's action in endeavouring to manufacture evidence to mislead the court by concocting the scheme as disclosed in his letter, to account for the money found on him.

R. v. Haynes, 22 D.L.R. 227, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 101, 48 N.S.R. 133.

INSTRUCTION IN CRIMINAL CASE.

The jury are entitled to have the assistance of the presiding judge in directing them in a criminal case and to have the case put to them in such a way as to ensure their due appreciation of the value of the evidence, but this does not necessarily require that he should emphasize and elaborate the various discrepancies set up by the defence in regard to the evidence of the Crown's principal witness; the judge is to call attention with due care to the salient or essential details of the case and their bearing on the guilt or innocence of the accused in such a way as to let the jury understand what the defence really is. [R. v. Finch, 12 Cr. App. R. 77, applied.]

R. v. Baugh, 33 D.L.R. 191, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 146, 38 O.L.R. 559.

Where two persons are being jointly tried, and particularly where an order for a separate trial has been refused, and proof is offered of statements made by one of the accused not in the presence of the other and not admissible as against the latter, but likely to be considered by the jury as evidence against both unless a proper direction is given to them, it is error in law for the Trial Judge to omit to give an instruction to the jury that the statements so sworn to have been made by the one accused is evidence only against him and not against his codefendant.

R. v. Murray and Mahoney, 38 D.L.R. 395, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 247, 11 A.L.R. 502, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 805. [See also 33 D.L.R. 702, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 247, 10 A.L.R.

INSTRUCTION TO JURY—COMMENT ON FAILURE OF ACCUSED TO TESTIFY.

Upon an appeal to the Court of Appeal or an application for a new trial following a conviction, it is not permissible for the accused to read affidavits for the purpose of shewing that the judge who presided at the trial had, in his charge to the jury, made comments upon the failure of the accused to testify and so contravened the provision of s. 4 of the Canada Evidence Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 145, where the Trial Judge has transmitted to the Court of Appeal a report containing his charge to the jury; the Court of Appeal is in such case bound to accept such report as complete, and has no power to order the taking of evidence or to receive evidence for the purpose of shewing the inaccuracy or incompleteness of such report. [See R. v. Angelo, 16 D.L.R. 126, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 304, 19 B.C.R. 261.]

Di Lena v. The King, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 201, 24 Que. K.B. 262.

(§ III E—201)—INQUEST EVIDENCE—NEW TRIAL.

Where the judge's charge leaves it, in effect, to the jury to treat as evidence, in proof of the indictment for murder, the depositions of a hostile Crown witness, previously taken before the coroner and the magistrate respectively, which are in contradiction to such witness's testimony at the trial, instead of instructing the jury that the previous statement, although under oath, could be used only to impeach the witness's testimony given at the trial, a new trial will be ordered although no objection to the charge was made by the accused at the trial.

R. v. Duckworth, 31 D.L.R. 570, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 314, 37 O.L.R. 197.

MANSLAUGHTER.

On a trial for murder, if the circumstances are such that the jury might reasonably infer a case of manslaughter and not murder in the event of their negating the defence raised, then a direction must be given to the jury as to manslaughter and its omission is a substantial wrong, under Cr. Code, s. 1019, constituting ground for a new trial.

R. v. Jagat Singh, 28 D.L.R. 125, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 281, 21 B.C.R. 545, 32 W.L.R. 637, 9 W.W.R. 514.

INSTRUCTIONS—EVIDENCE OF ACCOMPLICE—CORROBORATION.

A new trial will be granted for the failure of a Trial Judge to caution the jury, on a trial for murder, against acting on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice, who had already been tried and convicted, where there was no corroborating evidence.

R. v. Ratz, 12 D.L.R. 678, 21 Can. Cr.

Cas. 343, 6 S.L.R. 237, 24 W.L.R. 908, 4 W.W.R. 1231.

Upon a trial of a murder charge the Trial Judge is justified in not submitting the question of manslaughter to the jury where there is no more than mere surmise or conjecture on which to rest such a finding.

R. v. Eberts, 7 D.L.R. 538, 47 Can. S.C.R. 1, 3 W.W.R. 37, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 273, affirming 7 D.L.R. 530, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 262, 4 A.L.R. 310, 2 W.W.R. 542.

INACCURACY IN JUDGE'S CHARGE—PREJUDICE.

A slight inaccuracy in the judge's charge to the jury in referring to certain evidence as having been given at the preliminary inquiry whereas it was in fact given at the trial itself, and the depositions at the preliminary inquiry, were not then put in as evidence, but the preliminary inquiry was referred to in the testimony, will not constitute a ground for setting aside a conviction, where the inaccuracy could not have prejudicially affected the prisoner.

R. v. Haynes, 22 D.L.R. 227, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 101.

REASONABLE DOUBT.

In a criminal case it is for the jury to decide whether there is reasonable doubt, and when instructed that they should convict only if guilt be shewn beyond a reasonable doubt, their verdict of guilty is not to be disturbed on the ground that they ought to have had a reasonable doubt if there was evidence from which a reasonable inference of guilt could be made.

R. v. Green; R. v. Bosomworth, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 425.

(§ III E—263)—INSTRUCTION AS TO REASONABLE DOUBT.

In order to enable a jury to return a verdict against the prisoner, they must be satisfied beyond any reasonable doubt of his guilt; this is a conviction created in their minds not merely as a matter of probability and if it was only an impression of probability their duty was to acquit. [R. v. White, 4 F. & F. 384, and R. v. Kravchenko, 17 D.L.R. 244, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 277, applied.]

R. v. Schurman, 19 D.L.R. 800, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 365, 7 S.L.R. 269, 30 W.L.R. 56, 7 W.W.R. 680.

SHOOTING WITH INTENT TO MURDER.

On the trial of an indictment for shooting with intent to murder, it is proper that the jury be directed that if the evidence warrants, a verdict may be rendered of shooting with intent to maim or to do grievous bodily harm.

R. v. Kerr, 3 D.L.R. 720, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 70, 22 Man. L.R. 353, 21 W.L.R. 652.

IV. Findings by the court.

Conclusiveness of verdict or of court's findings, see Appeal, VII L—485; VII M—535.

(§ IV—265) — EQUITABLE ISSUE AS TO FRAUD IN OBTAINING PLAINTIFF'S RELEASE.

Where an equitable issue is raised as to whether a release under seal pleaded by a defendant railway company in answer to plaintiff's damage claim for personal injuries had been obtained by fraud or undue influence, such issue may, unless the judge otherwise directs, be tried by the judge without a jury and the action dismissed on his finding the release binding.

Arkles v. G.T.R. Co., 14 D.L.R. 789, 5 O.W.N. 462, 25 O.W.R. 456.

CORRECTNESS.

An accused person has a right where the trial takes place without a jury to have the judge's decision based upon a correct apprehension of the facts proved.

R. v. O'Neil, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 323, 9 A.L.R. 365.

Motion to set aside judgment as against weight of evidence refused.

McIntyre v. White, 40 N.B.R. 591.

The court will not reverse the findings of fact made by a Trial Judge unless it clearly appears he was wrong. Appeal on the ground that judgment was against evidence dismissed.

Shaw v. Robinson, 40 N.B.R. 473.

V. Verdict or findings of jury.A. IN GENERAL.

(§ V A—270) — EXPLANATIONS BY FOREMAN.

The oral statements of the foreman of a jury, explaining to the court the cause of an accident as found by the jury, cannot override the deliberate written verdict of the whole jury, so as to warrant the action of the Trial Judge in entering judgment against their verdict.

FORM—EFFECT GIVEN TO FINDINGS.

There is no sacramental form in which the jury may make known its decision on any question, and some intelligent effect must be given by the court to the findings of jurors who are not skilled in legal phraseology.

Temple v. Montreal Tramways Co., 23 D.L.R. 587, 47 Que. S.C. 121.

DISCRETION AS TO CREDIBILITY OF TESTIMONY.

The right of a jury to interpret the evidence is the same as that of the judge, and it may consider that the want of credibility in a part of the testimony of a witness throws doubt upon the whole remainder of his testimony.

G.T.R. Co. v. Brassard, 47 Que. S.C. 369.

QUESTIONS OF LAW—SUFFICIENCY—REVIEW.

The parties may, with the judge's permission and consent, submit a question of law to the jury. A verdict is in conformity with the evidence provided there is in the evidence elements justifying it. An error of fact made by the judge in his charge is not sufficient to have the verdict set aside, an important error of law is necessary. The jury being the master of the facts, a Court of Appeal cannot substitute its appreciation for that of the jury.

Perron v. Drouin, 16 Que. P.R. 121.

(§ V A—270) — AS TO CAUSE OF DEATH—MEDICAL OPINIONS—PRESUMPTION.

In a jury trial, where damages are claimed for the death of a person, a verdict cannot be found only on medical controverted opinions, but the case is different where the medical evidence is supported by a proof of noncontested facts. The jurors may then render their verdict by appreciating the facts and opinion of medical men, which they have before them. [Boillard v. Montreal, 18 D.L.R. 366, 21 Rev. Leg. 58, distinguished.] An affirmative verdict can be rendered upon facts and probabilities only if they establish presumptions; and if these presumptions are strong enough to bring about a reasonable conviction in the mind of a jury, the court should not interfere.

Montreal Tramways Co. v. Mulhern, 26 Que. K.B. 456. [Affirmed, 55 Can. S.C.R. 621, 39 D.L.R. 758.]

GENERAL VERDICT—SPECIFIC QUESTIONS.

The law of British Columbia is that a jury may find a general verdict and ignore specific questions put to them, but if questions are put to them which they answer, a general verdict inconsistent with the answers to such questions will be set aside.

DAMAGES — MENTAL SUFFERINGS — RAILWAY—SPEED AT CROSSINGS.

It has been the general practice of courts for many years to leave in the hands of the jury to determine of the total amount of the damages suffered by the victim of an accident as a single amount, without requiring them to specify the amount of damages caused by the several sources of damages. A judge does not go beyond his functions in instructing the jury that they had no right to grant damages for mental sufferings, and in requiring them to consider this verdict so as to leave out mental sufferings. It is most imprudent for a car on a railway track, where it crosses tracks running at right angles, to cross at high speed immediately behind another car. The jury in their verdict may take into consideration facts which, although not specifically alleged in the declaration, are the natural consequence of the cause of the accident mentioned by plaintiff.

Merry v. Montreal Tramways Co., 53 Que. S.C. 226.

DERAILMENT OF CAR—SPEED.

It is a judge's duty to examine carefully the jury's verdict and to see that it is rendered in a legal way. So, when a jury is of the opinion that the derailment of a tramcar was caused by the speed at which the car was going, and included in its verdict the words "the too great speed," a ground which was not pleaded in the action, the jury, under the direction of the judge, may strike these words out of its verdict.

Fortin v. Montreal Tramways Co., 54 Que. S.C. 428.

(§ V A—272)—JUDGE DIRECTING JURY TO ANSWER QUESTIONS.

Under s. 61 of the Ontario Judicature Act, the judge, instead of directing the jury to give either a general or a special verdict, may direct the jury to answer any questions of fact stated to them by him. The jury's answers to the questions so stated are not a verdict within the meaning of s. 35 (4) of the Act (R.S.O. 1914, c. 56).

B. RETIREMENT; CONDUCT OF JURY; COERCION; POLL.(§ V B—275)—CRIMINAL—RETIREMENT OF JURY—IMPROPER CONDUCT OF CONSTABLE IN CHARGE—DISCRETION OF JUDGE AS TO DISCHARGE OF JURY—SECTION 959 (3) CR. CODE.

Where a judge is trying a criminal case with a jury and it is brought to his attention, before the jury have returned their verdict, that the constable in charge of the jury has been present in the room with them for a considerable time while they were considering the verdict, the judge, if of the opinion that the disobedience of the constable might lead to a miscarriage of justice, may, under s. 959 (3), Cr. Code, discharge the jury, or if he be of opinion that the accused cannot be prejudiced thereby he may allow the jury to bring in their verdict as though the directions of the section had been followed.

The King v. Corrigan, 46 D.L.R. 491, 31 Can. Cr. Cas. 291, 12 S.L.R. 189, [1919] 2 W.W.R. 81.

JURY FINDINGS — RECONSIDERATION — RETIREMENT TO JURY-ROOM.

When a jury, after mature deliberation in a jury-room, renders a verdict for one party, giving reasons therefor, and is then instructed by the Trial Judge, on a crucial point, to reconsider its verdict, such reconsideration should take place in the privacy of the jury-room and not in open court.

Lowry v. Thompson, 15 D.L.R. 463, 29 O.L.R. 478.

C. SUFFICIENCY AND CORRECTNESS.

Conclusiveness of verdict, as to injury in course of employment, see Master and Servant, V—340.

(§ V C—280)—EXPLOSIVE ON ROAD—INJURY TO CHILD—QUESTIONS TO JURY—FINDING—FINALITY.

In an action to recover damages for injury to an infant caused by an explosive stick which he said he found in a tool box left unlocked on the roadside by the defendants, the jury in answer to questions submitted to them, found: (1) that the infant plaintiff obtained the explosive which injured him from the defendants' box; (2a) that the defendants "may not have known" it was there; (2b) that the defendants ought, by the exercise of reasonable care, to have known that it was there; (3) that the explosive was in the possession of the defendants when the infant plaintiff obtained possession of it; (4) that the defendants were guilty of negligence in their care of the explosive; (5) that the negligence consisted in not locking their tool-box; (6) that the defendants' negligence caused or contributed to the accident; (7) that the infant plaintiff was not guilty of any negligence which caused or contributed to the accident.—The court held that the main question, whether the boy had obtained the explosive from the defendants' tool-box, was a question for the jury, their finding could not be disturbed, and that judgment was properly entered for the plaintiff on the findings.

Le Groulx v. Kerr, 14 O.W.N. 140.

SUFFICIENCY AND CORRECTNESS—DAMAGES.

In a personal injury case where the jury award of general damages at $15,000 is attacked as excessive and the evidence shews that the injuries sustained were unusually severe, the award will not be disturbed where it stands the test that twelve reasonable men might reasonably find the damages at that amount. A jury cannot award as special damages an amount greater than the amount claimed, unless the pleadings are amended so as to cover the larger amount. [Chattell v. Daily Mail Publishing Co., 18 T.L.R. 165, applied.]

EVIDENCE TO SUPPORT.

When the meaning to be given to the finding of the jury is that the leaving of one of the gates at a railway crossing open was an invitation to the driver of a truck that he might safely cross the tracks, and where there is evidence to support this finding and also a finding against contributory negligence, the findings will not be disturbed.

Armstrong Cartlage & Warehouse Co. v. G.T.R. Co., 43 D.L.R. 122, 42 O.L.R. 660, 23 Can. Ry. Cas. 264.

RECONSIDERATION—SUBSTITUTED ANSWER.

When it appears to the Trial Judge from the answers brought in by the jury that a point has not been made clear to them, the judge may further instruct the jury and send them back to reconsider their answer to one of the questions, and upon the return of the jury with a substituted answer to such question may properly receive and act on the substituted answer.

Dowson v. Toronto & York Radial R. Co., 43 D.L.R. 377, 43 O.L.R. 158.

FINDING OF JURY—SUFFICIENCY—INCONSISTENCY.

Inconsistencies in the finding of a jury are not fatal unless so self-destructive that none of the effective findings can stand.

Dunlop v. Canada Foundry Co., 12 D.L.R. 791, 28 O.L.R. 140, affirming 2 D.L.R. 887, 4 O.W.N. 791.

ANSWERS OF JURY—SUFFICIENCY TO SUSTAIN VERDICT.

An electric railway company is not entitled to the verdict on an answer of a jury, under proper instruction as to the duty of the company, in an action against it for injuries caused by the heaping up of snow by defendant company when removing same from its tracks, where the answer was to the effect that such accumulation of snow caused or contributed to the plaintiff's injury, although there was no express finding that the snow was negligently left in the highway, since the answer was sufficient to shew that the conduct of the defendant was inconsistent with due care, and that the snow was not levelled to a uniform depth as required by R.S.N.S. 1906, c. 71, s. 194.

Wright v. Pietou County Elec. Co., 11 D.L.R. 443, 15 Can. Ry. Cas. 394, 47 N.S.R. 166, 13 E.L.R. 47.

Where questions are left to the jury in a negligence action and some of the questions are answered, but the jury disagree as to the answers to other material questions, and therefore omit to answer them, there must be a new trial as to the whole case in like manner as if the jury had not agreed upon any of the questions.

Emerson v. Cook, 5 D.L.R. 232, 3 O.W.N. 968.

The verdict of a jury will not be disturbed if it was one that reasonable men might have found, even though the Trial Judge was of a different opinion. [Metropolitan R. Co. v. Wright, 11 A.C. 152; Cox v. English S. & A. Bank, [1905] A.C. 168, applied.]

In an action by the administratrix of a railway section man for damages for his death through being struck by a train which was running on the left-hand track contrary to custom because of an accident on the right-hand track, the negligence found by the jury against the railway in not providing a headlight while running in a dense fog will, if supported by evidence, be sufficient to sustain the verdict, although joined in the finding with one not supported by the evidence that the railway company was negligent in not having switched the train to the right-hand track.

Graham v. G.T.R. Co., 1 D.L.R. 564, 25 O.L.R. 429, 19 Can. Ry. Cas. 232, 20 O.W.R. 965.

(§ V C—281)—SPECIFIC FINDING ON ONE GROUND OF NEGLIGENCE ONLY.

Where several grounds of negligence are alleged, and the jury make a finding on one only, the allegations in the other grounds are negated by implication.

McEachen v. G.T.R. Co., 2 D.L.R. 588, 3 O.W.N. 628, 21 O.W.R. 187.

(§ V C—285)—IN CIVIL CASES.

Where an action has been twice tried with a jury, and upon the second trial the jury have found in favour of the same party, but have reduced the damages, a third trial will not be ordered merely because the findings of the jury at the second trial are contrary to what the Appellate Court regards as the weight of evidence, if there is some evidence upon which the verdict can be sustained.

Zufelt v. C.P.R. Co., 7 D.L.R. 81, 4 O.W.N. 39.

DEATH — GENERAL FINDING — NEGATING NEGLIGENCE.

A general finding by a jury in an action for negligence causing the death of a workman by the fall of lumber which he was engaged in removing, that the death was not caused by the negligence of the defendant, thereby sufficiently covers any allegation of negligence in the action, rendering it unnecessary for them to make more specific findings as to whether the accident was caused by the negligence of defendant's employees or the defective condition of the plant.

Urulan v. Foley, 27 D.L.R. 240, 50 N.S.R. 21.

CONCLUSIVENESS OF VERDICT—NEGLECT.

The court should not interfere with the verdict of a jury in an action for damages for injuries resulting from negligence where there is some evidence to support their findings, even though their findings and answers upon questions submitted to them as to negligence and contributory negligence may not appear altogether complete and satisfactory.

MISDIRECTION—MISCARRIAGE.

When the finding of a jury is not reasonable upon the facts, and it is apparent that a miscarriage of justice has taken place owing to the jury not thoroughly understanding the points put to it, because it has not been sufficiently instructed by the Trial Judge, the verdict will be set aside.

Jackson v. B.C. Electric R. Co., 38 D.L.R. 145, 24 B.C.R. 484, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 1046.

VERDICT AGAINST EVIDENCE—CLAIM AND COUNTERCLAIM — JUDGMENT — PLEADING—ESTOPPEL.

In an action to recover certain live stock, which the defendant had removed from a farm, which the plaintiff had leased, together with the farm, to the defendant, the defendant admitted the removal of the stock, but claimed to have substituted other stock of equal value. On the trial the judge directed the jury that the defendant had no right to remove the stock and substitute other stock instead, even though such substituted stock was of equal or greater value than that removed. Notwithstanding this direction, the jury found the stock removed belonged to the defendant. Held, (1) that the finding should be set aside as against evidence, and perverse (2) that as estoppel had not been pleaded or raised on the trial it was not open to the defendant to contend, on the motion to set aside the verdict or for a new trial, that the plaintiff by his conduct allowed the defendant to assume that he could substitute stock for that removed, and was estopped from claiming title to the stock removed.

Rush v. Clark, 45 N.B.R. 393.

CONDITION OF MACHINERY—REVIEW ON APPEAL.

An expression in a jury's verdict that "machines were defective," or "machines were not in first class condition," have the same meaning. When the evidence upon the defectiveness of a machine is contradictory, jurymen may reasonably reach the conclusion that the machine was in bad condition, and one cannot say that any other verdict should have been given. Besides, a Court of Appeal ought not, in such circumstances, to change a verdict.

Montreal Ammunition Co. v. Parent, 27 Que. K.B. 558.

NEGLIGENCE—CAUSE OF DEATH.

Where there is no proper evidence of direct causal negligence, the verdict of a jury that the accident was caused by "a frog not properly packed," without indicating how the want of packing was the cause of death, cannot be sustained.

Ryan v. C.P.R. Co., 32 D.L.R. 372, 37 O.L.R. 543.

COMPROMISE VERDICT—ACTION BY HUSBAND AND WIFE—NEGLIGENCE—APPEAL—NEW TRIAL.

The plaintiffs, husband and wife, sued the defendant for damages arising from a collision upon a highway of the husband's buggy with the defendant's automobile, the buggy having been smashed and the wife personally injured. The jury found "slight" negligence on the part of the defendant, awarded the husband $125 (the amount of his actual outlay occasioned by the defendant's negligence), and the wife nothing.

Held, on appeal from a judgment in accordance with the jury's findings, that the finding against the wife could not, upon the evidence, be allowed to stand; that it was not a case in which the Appellate Court should itself assess the damages under s. 27 (2) of the Judicature Act, R.S.O. 1914, c. 56; that the finding of negligence should not be reopened; that there should be a new trial, confined to the ascertainment of the quantum of damages to both plaintiffs; and that the defendant should pay the costs of the appeal in any event. The verdict appeared to have been the result of a compromise of the jurors—some being in favour of a verdict for the defendant, but agreeing to a verdict for the one plaintiff, if the damages were assessed at his actual money loss. The plaintiffs should have objected to the verdict when it was announced; if they had done so, the appeal might have been unnecessary.

Doan v. Neff, 38 O.L.R. 216.

JURY—PREJUDICE—IMPROPER COURSE TAKEN BY COUNSEL AT SECOND TRIAL OF ACTION—VERDICT FOR SMALL SUM—PERVERSE VERDICT—APPLICATION FOR NEW TRIAL—REFUSAL OF COURT TO ORDER THIRD TRIAL—COSTS.

Gage v. Reid, 13 O.W.N. 229.

CONCLUSIVENESS OF VERDICT.

The court will not interfere with the verdict of a jury unless it be one which could not reasonably be returned.

Montreal v. Turgeon, 26 Que. K.B. 496.

POLL—NOTICE OF ACTION—FORCE MAJEURE—NEW TRIAL.

In a trial by jury where there is an assignment of facts the verdict should be returned by at least nine of the jurors and should be special, explicit and articulated upon each fact submitted, and should bear upon all the points in issue. When the reply to a question whether or not the plaintiff had been prevented by force majeure from giving the notice of action required by statute is answered in the affirmative by seven jurors and in the negative by five, it constitutes ground for ordering a new trial.

Desautels v. Montreal Light, Heat & Power Co., 51 Que. S.C. 458.

COMMON FAULT — NONAPPROPRIATION OF DAMAGES—NEW TRIAL.

The verdict of a jury in an action for damages brought by a widow and her children under art. 1056 C.C. (Que.) which awards a lump sum of $3,000, without fixing the portion which should go to the wife and which to each of the children, is illegal, and a new trial will be ordered. The same is the case when a verdict admits common fault and does not establish the proportion of fault for each of the parties.

Monette v. Wright, 48 Que. S.C. 294.

(§ V C—286)—SPECIAL FINDINGS—VERDICT—NEGLIGENCE.

The finding of a jury in a railway personal injury case that the defendant railway company was guilty of negligence in "nonobservance of rules in going through a closed switch," does not necessarily refer to the company's printed book of rules, put in as evidence by the plaintiff, but may be supported as referring to a rule of operation to that effect proved by oral testimony as governing the conduct of employees, although not embodied in the printed rule-book.

VERDICT—SPECIAL FINDING—VAGUENESS.

A verdict finding the defendant street railway company negligent in the words "carelessness in handling the car" is too vague upon which to give a judgment in an action by a passenger for injuries sustained by the door of the car closing upon the passenger's hand; a more specific finding is necessary to establish liability on the basis of the car having been run at too high a speed and so jolted as to cause the door to close suddenly.

McGovern v. Montreal Street R. Co., 12 D.L.R. 628, 19 Rev. Leg. 356.

NUMBER OF JURORS—SPECIFIC FINDINGS.

Under the provisions that on trial of issues of fact in civil actions the verdict of 9 or more out of 12 jurors shall be the verdict of the jury (R.S.M. 1913, c. 108), it is essential that when specific questions are answered the same 9 or more jurors shall agree in the answers. There is no statutory provision (in Manitoba) for asking specific questions, though it has been practised, and its legality is doubtful.

Risk v. C.P.R. Co., 31 D.L.R. 780, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 652.

JUROR UNDER AGE.

At the trial of a civil action, a verdict rendered by 11 jurors, the twelfth being a minor, is null. The fact that neither of the parties made objection to the presence of the minor juror does not render the jury competent, because there can be no acquiescence in a matter which is against public policy.

Myers v. Montreal, 50 Que. S.C. 120.

NEGLIGENCE—FINDINGS.

In a trial by jury, where there has been an assignment of facts, the verdict must be special, explicit and distinct as to each fact submitted. The jury must specify wherein consists the fault of the party whom it finds responsible for an accident; it is not sufficient for them to answer that this party ought to have taken greater precautions. A fault does not determine the responsibility of the party against whom it is found except in so far as it has been the cause of the accident or has contributed to it.

Davis v. Julien, 25 Que. K.B. 35.

(§ V C—288)—NEGLIGENCE — INCONSISTENCY OF FINDINGS.

Where the actions of a jury plainly imports that they have treated the defendants in a negligence case as "insurers" of the safety of pedestrians, and award damages to the plaintiff after having failed to agree that the defendants were guilty of negligence, the defendants are entitled to judgment.

Mackenzie v. B.C. Electric Co., 21 B.C.R. 375, 8 W.W.R. 956.

(§ V C—290)—VERDICT NOT JUDGMENT—COSTS.

A verdict itself is not a "judgment for the defendant" in terms of Cr. Code, a. 1945; but the order of the court directing the defendant's discharge and made in the enforcement of the jury's verdict of not guilty is a "judgment" for the defendant upon which an order may be made against the private prosecutor for payment of costs in a criminal prosecution for defamatory libel. [R. v. Blackley, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 405, approved.]

R. v. Fournier; Martin v. Fournier, 28 D.L.R. 379, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 430, 25 Que. K.B. 556.

IN CRIMINAL CASES.

Upon a trial for murder, upon a request for a charge of manslaughter upon the alleged ground that the accused shot the deceased while "in the heat of passion caused by sudden provocation," the charge was properly refused where nothing was said in the evidence as to the accused having been aroused to a heat of passion and the circumstances were, in the view most favourable to the defendant: (1) That he was on the scene with the criminal intent to steal; (2) that he believed the deceased to be a secret police officer; (3) that the only provocation suggested by the defence was that such officer came up to the accused at a place where he was lurking under circumstances justifying suspicion and thereupon pointed a pistol toward him and told him "to go to hell."

R. v. Eberts, 7 D.L.R. 538, 47 Can. S.C.R. 1, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 273, 3 W.W.R. 37, affirming 7 D.L.R. 530, 4 A.L.R. 310, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 262, 2 W.W.R. 542.

CONVICTION — QUASHING BY APPELLATE COURT.

A conviction under s. 355 Cr. Code will be quashed where the evidence does not show that the person who receives the money is a person who stands in the relation of an agent to the person to whom he is to pay or account, but shows that he is a person who, by virtue of some contract under which there are mutual obligations, is under an obligation arising out of the contract to pay or account.

R. v. Mackay, 40 D.L.R. 37, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 194, 14 A.L.R. 182, [1918] 1 W.W.R. 945.

"GUILTY WITHOUT HIS KNOWLEDGE."

Knowledge is not an ingredient of the offence created by s. 490 (b) Cr. Code; a verdict by the jury of "guilty without his knowledge" is in effect a verdict of guilty.

The King v. Newcombe, 40 D.L.R. 85, 52 N.S.R. 85, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 249.

D. AMENDMENT OR CORRECTION.

(§ V D—295)—JURY—FORM OF VERDICT—FURTHER DELIBERATIONS—CHANGE OF VERDICT—MISDIRECTION BY JUDGE—NEW TRIAL.

While the Trial Judge may guide the jury in the matter or form of their verdict, he should not send them out further for deliberations once their decision is in form with the law, with the view of having them change the substance of their return; such may constitute a mistrial and ground for quashing the verdict.

Fleurquin v. Pilon, 20 D.L.R. 679, 45 Que. S.C. 263.

"ACTUAL MALICE" DISTINCT FROM "IMPROPER MOTIVE."

Where, in an action for malicious prosecution, preliminary questions were first submitted to the jury, on whose answers the Trial Judge found want of reasonable and probable cause, and then submitted the general question, whereupon the jury brought in a verdict for plaintiff, but added that there was "no attempt at malice on the part of the defendant," the jury should be asked to reconsider the verdict so as to clear up the inconsistency, and for this purpose a further question may be submitted as to whether the defendant was actuated by any "improper motive" in laying the charge; and upon answering the latter question in the affirmative the plaintiff is entitled to judgment for the amount of the verdict.

Morrison v. Wilson, 16 D.L.R. 852, 28 W.L.R. 202, reversing 14 D.L.R. 815.

WEIGHT OF EVIDENCE.

All possible weight should be given to the verdict of a jury, but, when viewing the case from every standpoint, it appears that the verdict is against the weight of evidence, and the verdict as rendered is such as could not reasonably have been found, such verdict may be set aside and judgment entered in accordance with the weight of evidence.

Hallett v. Bank of Toronto, 43 D.L.R. 115, 46 N.B.R. 62.

E. REMITTITUR—SETTING ASIDE.

(§ V E—300)—REASONABLENESS.

An Appellate Court will not set aside a verdict which reasonable men could have given on the evidence adduced.

Lancaster v. Halifax Electric Tramway Co., 33 D.L.R. 306, 50 N.S.R. 386.

After a judgment of the Court of Appeal has been perfected allowing an appeal and reversing a judgment of the Trial Court in favour of the plaintiff, in an action for negligently causing the death of his son, based both upon Lord Campbell's Act and the Employers' Liability Act (B.C.), on the ground that no negligence on the part of the defendant had been shewn, the court cannot remit it to the Trial Court for assessment of compensation under the provisions of the Workmen's Compensation Act, notwithstanding it might have done so had leave been asked before the perfection of such judgment.

McCormick v. Kelliher, 4 D.L.R. 657, 21 W.L.R. 542, 2 W.W.R. 655.

Upon a motion by the common defendants in four actions, each brought by a different plaintiff, for an order consolidating the four actions, or for staying three of them until after the trial and the final disposition of one, where the actions involved distinct issues, though each was based upon the same cause, it was properly directed that the actions should all be set down together for hearing in order that the Trial Judge could take steps to prevent the repetition of any evidence common to all four actions, if there were such.

WHEN REFUSED—ISSUES SUPPORTED BY EVIDENCE.

Where the Trial Judge during the trial of an action, in his directions to the jury, presents the issues fully to them, and where the evidence supports it, the verdict of the jury should not be disturbed.

DEFECTIVE NOTICE NO GROUND FOR SETTING ASIDE.

Where a defective notice has been given under a law compelling a notice of injury (with a full detailed statement of such damages) to be given within a certain period before commencement of action, a defendant may, by preliminary exceptions, delay the trial until proper notice has been given, but, after the action has been tried on its merits, such defective notice will not be a ground for setting aside the verdict where no prejudice has been proven.

Temple v. Montreal Tramways Co., 23 D.L.R. 587, 47 Que. S. C. 121.

ADMISSION OF CUMULATIVE EVIDENCE.

If evidence is admitted by way of rebuttal which is cumulative and not properly rebuttal testimony, despite the objection of the opposing counsel, he having an opportunity to produce further evidence to meet the evidence so admitted, such evidence should be accepted as part of the case upon which to decide a motion to set aside the verdict.

Robinson v. Haley, 42 N.B.R. 657.

EXCESSIVE DAMAGES.

Application to set aside a verdict on the grounds of excessive damages, dismissed as the damages were not manifestly so unreasonable that no body of twelve men could have honestly given such a sum, and it had not been shewn that, in arriving at the amount, the jury took into consideration something which they ought not to have taken or failed to take into consideration something which they ought to have taken, and this even though the amount of the damages awarded indicated that the jury did not properly appreciate the considerations on which they had to assess these damages.

REOPENING CASE—NEW EVIDENCE.

Subsequent to the trial, but before judgment therein, the defendants applied to reopen the trial in part and for leave to introduce in evidence a certain agreement in writing that at the trial the defendants had failed to produce and in respect of which the Trial Judge declined to allow secondary evidence. Held, on this motion, that in a proper case the Trial Judge may in his discretion, until judgment has been delivered, reopen the trial, but that such discretion should be exercised only with the greatest care, and that it would be opening too wide a door to permit a party after practically learning that the finding of the court was adverse to him on the facts (as in the present case) to seek to supplement his proof by the production of documents which he should and well knew he should, have had at the trial.

CRIMINAL TRIAL—EVIDENCE—VERDICT.

Where the plaintiff obtains an order of the Trial Judge for a postponement until the next term, he is bound, under the Nova Scotia practice, to go to trial at that term, and his failure so to do may constitute ground for dismissal.

Buckley v. Fillmore, 15 D.L.R. 307, 47 N.S.R. 493.

NOTICE OF TRIAL — TIME FOR GIVING — AMENDMENT OF STATEMENT OF CLAIM.

TIME FOR SERVING.

Rule 706 provides that service of any notice effected after one p. m. on a Saturday shall be deemed to have been effected on the following Monday:—Held, that a notice of trial served by the plaintiffs on Saturday March 7 at two p. m., for a sittings beginning on March 17 was not sufficient, although the plaintiff attempted to effect service before one on the same day, but found the defendant's solicitor's office locked up; and the Master had no jurisdiction to order that the service should be validated as of Saturday, nor to require the defendant to take short notice of trial; but an order should be made allowing the plaintiffs to serve notice of trial for the sittings of the court commencing on March 17, with the proviso that the action should not be tried until after the expiration of ten days from the service of the notice; and that the plaintiffs should pay the defendant's costs of the plaintiffs application for relief. [Baxter v. Holdsworth [1899] 1 Q.B. 266, followed.]

INSCRIPTION EX PARTE—INTERVENTION NOT CONTESTED—GARNISHMENT AFTER JUDGMENT—C.C.P. 222, 534.

The plaintiff in an ex parte case need give only one day's notice to the defendant, because the latter has no evidence to prepare; but the defendant cannot do the same, seeing that the plaintiff would not have time to summon his witnesses and prepare his case. The defendant not being able to inscribe a case ex parte, neither can the plaintiff inscribe ex parte upon an intervention which he did not contest, seeing that he becomes defendant with respect to this action. But, if he has caused a garnishment to issue after judgment, he can continue the proceedings on the garnishment.

VIII. Trial of several actions, different plaintiffs, common defendant.

(§ VIII—340)—DIFFERENT PLAINTIFFS, DEFENDANT.

Where a settlement between the parties is pleaded in bar to the action and the remaining issues would involve the taking of depositions under commission in a distant country at very large expense, the court will exercise its discretionary power to order a preliminary trial of the issue as to the agreement of settlement alleged.

SUSPENSION AND JOINDER OF PROCEEDINGS—WHEN THEY CAN BE MADE—C.C.P. 291, 292.

A joinder of cases can only be ordered when both are ready for trial; the adjudication of neither action can be delayed by the other. The court has no power to order the suspension of proceedings in a case ready for trial when another case is not even returned into court, although there is connexity in the causes of said actions.

IX. Preliminary questions of law.

(§ IX—350) — PRELIMINARY LAW QUESTIONS.

An application to dispose of a preliminary question of law in an action should not be entertained as to one of several defendants unless the question to be so heard would dispose of the action as regards the applicant or would decide some important principle involved in the action. [Gardiner v. Bickley, 15 Man. L.R. 354, applied.] Arenowsky v. Veitch, 14 D.L.R. 304, 23 Man. L.R. 755, 25 W.L.R. 658, 5 W.W.R. 260.

Leave to set a case down for a preliminary hearing upon points of law raised by the pleadings will not be granted where the decision on such points of law would in effect only settle the question of the onus of proof, in view of the avowal by the party who would be affected by an adverse decision that, in such event, he would apply to amend his pleading and take issue upon the facts which upon such preliminary hearing would have been taken as admitted. (§ X—360)—SUSPENSION OF PROCEEDINGS—CONDITIONS NECESSARY—CASE PENDING IN REVIEW—C.C.P. 291, 292.

In order that the suspension of a case in the Superior Court may be granted for the reason that there is an identical case in the Court of Review, the two cases must be between the same parties and of the same nature. When one asks for cancellation of rent, with damages, and the other for cancellation only, the cases will not be suspended.

I. Right of action.

A. IN GENERAL.

(§ I A—1)—BY ADMINISTRATOR—SEIZURE OF CHATTEL DURING INTESTATE'S LIFE-TIME.

Where a wrongful seizure under execution had been made under defendant's direction of an automobile in the possession of the decedent who would not have made use of same nor derived any benefit from its possession, and the automobile is afterwards returned undamaged to the administrator of the deceased owner on the seizure being held to be illegal, no cause of action survives to the administrator for the mere detention during the period prior to the decedent's death, nor does a cause of action arise in favour of the administrator for such detention for the period between the decedent's death intestate and the date of the grant of letters of administration.

Day v. Horton, 14 D.L.R. 763, 23 Man. L.R. 623, 26 W.L.R. 72, 5 W.W.R. 751.

RECOVERY FOR CONVERSION NOT ALLEGED.

Where, without alleging a conversion, damages are claimed for a wrongful detention of chattels, and a conversion is clearly shown, the defendant, when not taken by surprise, may be held liable for the conversion where his liability in that form would not exceed that for which he could be held in detinue.

(§ I A—4)—POSSESSORY RIGHTS—ACTION BY DISSEISEE.

A person possessed of goods as his property has a good title as against every stranger and that one who takes them from him having no title in himself, is a wrongdoer and cannot defend himself by shewing that there was title in some third person, for as against a wrongdoer possession is title.

(§ I A—5)—SALE OF GOODS—ACCOUNTING FOR GOODS RECEIVED—CONVERSION—DAMAGES—COUNTERCLAIM—COSTS—INDEMNITY.

Prozeller v. Wilton, 17 O.W.N. 125.

B. CONVERSION; WHAT CONSTITUTES.

(§ I B—10)—SALE BY WRONGDOER—ASSUMPSIT—WAIVER OF CONVERSION.

Where one wrongfully takes possession of another's property and sells and collects the price of it, the rightful owner may waive the wrongful conversion and treat the wrongdoer as his agent and sue in assumpsit for money had and received.

The placing of a lock upon the door of a granary with the intent to exercise control over grain contained therein, inconsistent with the real owner's right of possession, amounts to a conversion of the grain sufficient to permit the latter to maintain an action of trover against the wrongdoer.

One who took possession of the logs after notice of the claim of the true owner of the timber from which they were cut is liable to the latter for conversion although he had in good faith bought the logs from the trespasser who had cut down the timber.

Phillips v. Conger Lumber Co., 5 D.L.R. 188, 3 O.W.N. 1456, 22 O.W.R. 436.

TRIVIAL TRESPASS—CONTRACTOR'S EQUIPMENT.

Where a contracting painter leaves on the property owner's premises the blocks and tackle he intends to use in the work, but without any undertaking by the property owner to take care of them, the equipment remains at the painter's risk, and the mere use of them by the property owner does not constitute a conversion, but amounts at the most to a trivial trespass, which the law would not regard.

McDonald v. Stockley, 16 D.L.R. 743, 48 N.S.R. 196, 14 E.L.R. 328.

TRADE FIXTURES—CONVERSION BY LANDLORD.

The refusal of a landlord or of his assignee to permit a tenant to remove trade fixtures from demised premises according to the term of the lease, amounts to an actionable conversion.

Simons v. Mulhall, 11 D.L.R. 781, 4 O.W.N. 1424, 24 O.W.R. 736.

WHAT CONSTITUTES—DEALING AS OWNER WITH GOODS OF ANOTHER.

Actually dealing with another's goods as owner, for however short a time and however limited a purpose, is a conversion, although done under a mistake but reasonable supposition of being lawfully entitled thereto.

MacKenzie v. Scotia Lumber Co., 11 D.L.R. 729, 47 N.S.R. 115, 12 E.L.R. 464, affirming in part, 7 D.L.R. 409, 12 E.L.R. 120.

SALE OF GRAIN—BILLS OF LADING SIGNED AS DIRECTED BY AGENT—OWNER OF GRAIN ILLITERATE—FRAUD OF AGENT—NOTICE TO PURCHASERS OF OWNERS' INTEREST—DAMAGES FOR VALUE.

The owner of grain, being illiterate except that he could sign his name, instructed an agent to sell the grain to all the purchasers, and signed the bills of lading in blank as instructed by the agent. The agent fraudulently crossed out the owner's name and signed his own name as shipper, and sold the grain to the purchasers as his own. In an action against the purchasers for the price of the grain, or for damages for wrongful conversion, the court held that the purchasers could not obtain title through the forged bills; that the conduct of the plaintiff was not such as to estop him from recovering; that the alterations on the bills of lading should have put the purchasers on inquiry, and that the purchasers had express notice of the plaintiff's interest in time to stop payment of the cheques, that they had converted the goods to their own use and were liable for their value.

Where shares of stock, purchased by a broker for the plaintiff, were, with the assent of the latter, retained by the former in order to be readily transferred and delivered on sale, the broker, on subsequently selling such shares, is not answerable for a conversion thereof, where, at all times, he had on hand a sufficient quantity of that particular stock, fully paid up, to meet a demand for its delivery; notwithstanding his books shewed a sale to the plaintiff of the particular shares afterwards sold by the broker.
Can. Dig.—138.

Long v. Smiley, 12 D.L.R. 61, 4 O.W.N. 1452, affirming 6 D.L.R. 904, 4 O.W.N. 229, 23 O.W.R. 229.

REFUSAL TO DELIVER.

Where a son turned his father out of his house and refused to let him remove personal property belonging to him, it was held that the father might maintain an action of conversion without having made any demand therefor.

SALE OF GOODS—BEES AND HONEY—ILLEGAL DETENTION—DAMAGES.

Parks v. Simpson, 23 O.W.R. 837.

AGENT REFUSING TO DELIVER GOODS—LIABILITY.

A principal living in Ontario purchased from the plaintiff at Toronto, an engine under agreement providing that the purchaser should have the possession and right to the use thereof until default in payment when the vendor might without process of law take possession. The engine was shipped by the principal to his agent in Saskatchewan for use upon the principal's farm. Default having been made the plaintiff demanded possession from the agent who refused to deliver it up. Held, that as the agent's refusal was absolute he was properly sued for conversion.

C. DEMAND; TENDER.

(§ I C—21)—NECESSITY OF.

Where the defendant after ousting the plaintiff from work which the latter had contracted to do for the former, took possession of the plaintiff's tools and used them on the work, such use was sufficient evidence of the conversion of the tools though no demand for their return was shewn.

SAISIE REVENDICATION (QUE).

A motion by the plaintiff for an order giving him possession of goods in possession of the defendant seized in revendication, which would also decide the merits of the cause will be dismissed. The goods will be left in defendant's possession, he having the apparent title to them and being presumed to be the owner.

Aubin v. Yeates, 14 Que. P.R. 374.

(§ II—26)—BAILEE'S ACTION—BAILOR GIVING TITLE TO THE WRONGDOER.

If before action brought by a bailee of goods against the party who has wrongfully taken them out of his possession, the bailor to whom such bailee would have to account has clothed the wrongdoer with the ownership of the goods, the bailee cannot recover from the wrongdoer, thus converted into the true owner, the full value of the goods no more than he could recover their full value from the bailor himself.

WHO LIABLE GENERALLY — CARTAGE COMPANY HOLDING ITSELF OUT AS AUTHORIZED TO TAKE DELIVERY FOR ALLEGED BUYER—GOOD FAITH NO DEFENCE WHEN.

Where a carter held himself out to a merchant as authorized to take delivery of goods for a firm in whose name a fraudulent order had been sent to the merchant and the carter while on his way with the goods to the alleged buyer's address was intercepted by the perpetrator of the fraud and delivered the goods elsewhere on the false representation of the party giving the directions that he represented the purchaser, the carter is liable in conversion to the merchant for the value of the goods which were stolen by means of the fraud, where there was in fact no order by the party whose name was given as the buyer and possession was parted with only on the faith of the carter's representation of authority to take delivery; such result follows notwithstanding the circumstance that the carter acted in good faith and was himself imposed upon by the fraud of the thief. LIABILITY — OF PLEDGEE — WRONGFUL PLEDGE BY BROKER OF STOCK ENTRUSTED TO HIM FOR SALE.

Where a certificate for 46 shares of a company was delivered by the owner to a broker for the purpose of selling 25 of the shares, the certificate bearing a restrictive endorsement to the effect that, "for value received . . . hereby sell, assign and transfer unto . . . twenty-five shares," etc., and, instead of selling the shares, the broker pledged the certificate with a bank for its full value for an indebtedness of his own, and the certificate, on the amalgamation of such bank with the defendant bank, came into the possession of the latter, by whom the words "twenty-five" were stricken from such endorsement, and the entire 46 shares sold in satisfaction of the broker's indebtedness, the defendant bank is answerable as for a conversion to the owner of the shares for their full value in the absence of a proved custom or usage of banks, brokers or of the Stock Exchange justifying the deletion of the words "twenty-five," since the nature of such endorsement was notice that the broker's authority was limited to a sale of the 25 shares.

BUYING LOGS CUT IN TRESPASS.

A timber manufacturer who, under a contract with a jobber, accepts from him and appropriates logs cut in trespass, is liable for their value to the owner of the land. He is also liable for damage caused by the jobber to a third party in the execution of the contract, under a clause therein that gives him the option of requiring one of two modes of execution to be adopted.

CODEBORS—DIRECTION BY PRINCIPAL TO AGENT TO PAY—RESPONSIBILITY OF AGENT—TRUSTEE AND CESTUI QUE TRUST.

An agent directed by his principal to pay to a third person money sent to him for that purpose (the direction or authority not amounting to an assignment of or charge upon the fund) is not in general responsible to such third person should he fail to execute his mandate. He may become so by assenting to the direction and communicating his assent to the intended payee or by undertaking with him to pay the money to him or to hold it for him, but even then the agent does not become a trustee for the intended payee, nor the latter a cestui que trust, nor is the fund impressed with a trust so that it becomes in equity the property of the intended payee as it would be if the relation of trustee and cestui que trust were established.

Thompson v. Merchants Bank, 45 D.L.R. 616, 58 Can. S.C.R. 287, [1919] 1 W.W.R. 855, reversing 39 D.L.R. 664, 14 A.L.R. 159, [1918] 1 W.W.R. 972.

REQUISITES—ABSENCE OF FIDUCIARY OR CONTRACTUAL RELATIONSHIP.

Where a prospective purchaser of real estate procures an agent to endeavour to effect the purchase of certain land for him, and the agent without disclosing the name of his principal, negotiates with the defendants who are real estate agents with whom the land had been listed for sale by the owner, but subsequently the defendants without informing the proposed purchaser become the purchasers themselves and obtain an agreement of sale from the owner and refuse to make the sale to the proposed purchaser's agent, returning to him his cheque which had been given by way of deposit with plaintiff's verbal offer, the conduct of the defendants, though reprehensible, does not entitle the prospective purchaser, on discovering the facts, to a declaration that the defendants are trustees of the land for him, or that they should convey to him, since there was no fiduciary or contractual relationship between him and the defendants. Where additional shares in a company in which plaintiff and defendant were both interested were allotted to the members, and defendant was unable to take up or pay for the shares allotted to her, plaintiff took up the shares and executed a declaration in writing that he held them in trust for defendant. This declaration was communicated to defendant, who acquiesced in the arrangement, and recognized the payment made by plaintiff as having been made on her account. It was held, that while defendant was not obliged to accept plaintiff's offer, having done so, she was obliged to accept it in the terms in which it was made, and that plaintiff was entitled to treat the advance made by him as a loan upon interest.

EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS—PAROL

EVIDENCE OF—CORROBORATION—DEEDS—PLEADINGS—AMENDMENT TO SET UP TRUST.

The widow of an intestate claimed to be the sole beneficial owner of certain real estate, the certificate of title to which stood in the name of the intestate. At trial she testified that she bought the land in question with her own separate money and conveyed it to her husband without consideration. The deed of conveyance, however, acknowledged a consideration of $100. Her evidence was corroborated on some material points but not on all but the Trial Judge was impressed with her truthfulness and believed her testimony. (1) Held, that parol evidence was admissible to prove the want of consideration notwithstanding the acknowledgment in the deed, and also to prove that the conveyance was a trust, and that effect ought to be given to the testimony of the widow notwithstanding the want of corroboration on all points. (2) That inasmuch as under the evidence it would have been fraud for the intestate to deny the trust and claim the land as his own, it was equally a fraud for his administrator so to do, and although the certificate of title to the intestate was under s. 169 of the Land Titles Act, R.S.S., 1909, c. 41, in the absence of fraud conclusive evidence in his favour, and although fraud had not been pleaded nevertheless as no one could be prejudiced an amendment to set up fraud should be allowed notwithstanding that it is unusual to allow an amendment for such purpose.

On a share subscription agreement with a firm of stockbrokers described as trustees but without further disclosure of the trust whereby certain others called the subscribers severally purchased the number of shares to which each had subscribed in a company subject to the N.S. Companies Act, it is not to be presumed that the stockbrokers are acting in trust for the company itself if the agreement is consistent with its being made in trust for themselves and associate underwriters, where the subscription below par would be subject to attack if the same were an original allotment.

(§ I D—22)—“PERSON ACTING IN A FIDUCIARY CAPACITY”—DUTY—PARTNERS.

A “person acting in fiduciary capacity” means a person who stands in a fiduciary relation toward any other person who may be entitled to call upon him to pay. Where two partners of a firm assume to sell certain partnership lands, without the required consent of all the partners, in a transaction obviously designed and resorted to in order to enable one or both of the designing partners to realize, and (as against the remaining partners) to keep for themselves all the profits which could be gained in a rapidly rising land market; such designing partners are both in a fiduciary relationship toward their remaining co-partners, and may be treated as “persons acting in a fiduciary capacity,” and a full accounting may be decreed. AGENT TO PURCHASE LAND—DEED TAKEN IN

NAME OF AGENT—ACTION TO HAVE AGENT DECLARED TRUSTEE—QUESTION AS TO INTENTION OF PARTIES—APPEAL FROM JUDGMENT FOR PLAINTIFF DISMISSED ON EQUAL DIVISION.

Plaintiff supplied money for the purchase of land of which defendant took the deed in his own name. In an action to have defendant declared a trustee and for the recovery of mesne profits the defence chiefly relied on was that the purchase price was furnished by plaintiff with the intention that the land should be defendant's and that plaintiff should have a home with defendant during her lifetime. The findings of the jury as to the circumstances under which the purchase was made were in plaintiff's favour and judgment was given accordingly, disallowing defendant's claim for expenditure made in permanent improvements after the date of the purchase. Defendant's application for a new trial was refused, but without costs, on equal division of the court.

MORTGAGE—ASSIGNMENTS AND PREFERENCES ACT—LIMITATIONS.

A mortgagee of land which formed part of an estate which had been assigned for the benefit of creditors is not by virtue of the Assignments and Preferences Act, R.S.O. 1897, c. 147, nor of the terms of the resolution of the creditors appointing him one of the inspectors of the estate—with power in conjunction with the assignee, to realize upon the estate to the best advantage—constituted an express trustee, nor is he under the same liability as an express trustee in respect of the equity of redemption conveyed to him by the assignee; at most he is a constructive trustee: the Statute of Limitations applies to a constructive trust and may be invoked by a constructive trustee in answer to a claim for recovery of the property upon which the trust is in equity impressed, if there has been no concealed fraud which could not have been discovered by the exercise of reasonable diligence. (§ 1 D—23)—SECRET TRUST.

Where persons purchased land in partnership and had the conveyance made to one of their number who was afterwards judicially declared a trustee thereof for the partnership, a sale made by him of the land ostensibly to a stranger, who was an innocent purchaser, but in reality to the stranger, and to one of the other partners jointly, a nonasserting partner would still be entitled to claim out of the interest of the partner who so acquired title, the same share as such nonasserting partner would otherwise have held under the partnership agreement.

(§ 1 D—24)—TRUSTEE'S APPLICATION OF SECURITIES AS.

Testamentary trustees, who were directed by will to invest the proceeds of an estate in such manner as they should deem most advisable, cannot be said to have set apart and appropriated shares of stock belonging to the estate so as to create a specific trust in respect of the income thereof as distinguished from the general trust created under the will, in favour of a legatee to whom the interest on a certain sum was payable for life, where it does not appear that there was any definite allocation of the shares, and the evidence tends to show that the trustees always treated them as an asset of the estate.

Re Nicholls, Hall v. Wildman, 14 D.L.R. 244, 29 O.L.R. 206.

Where the owner of several parcels of land conveys certain of them to a city corporation under a stipulation that the grantee shall "maintain" on the site so granted, its city hall, and where the deed of conveyance makes no provision that the city hall shall be maintained there "for all time" or to any such effect, and where it may reasonably be inferred that the grantor in executing the deed contemplated that a city hall so located near his remaining lots for a limited time would meet his purposes by enhancing the value of his adjacent property, there is no resulting trust in favour of the grantor, in the event of the grantee (owing to rapid city expansion) building a new city hall on a different site, approved by the rate-payers of the city. INTEREST IN LAND—CREATION BY PAROL.

A parol acceptance by a purchaser after acquiring title to land of a third person's offer to take a half interest in it with him does not raise a resulting trust in favour of the latter to entitle him to a half interest on assuming payment of half of the purchase price on the terms of the purchase, where there was no part performance nor had the third person paid anything in respect of the half interest. A resulting trust is one in which the person in whose favour the trust arises is the person who provided the property or equitable interest vested in the person bound by the trust.

Baird v. Columbia Trust Co.; Columbia Trust Co. v. Baird, 22 D.L.R. 150.

FAILURE OF CONSIDERATION—REMEDIES—PROMISE TO SETTLE LAND—RIGHT TO SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

If property be conveyed in consideration of a covenant to pay money, the breach of the covenant to pay does not bring about a failure of consideration; the consideration is the covenant, and a failure to observe it results in a right of action at law on the covenant for its breach, and not in any equitable right based on failure of consideration.

An absolute conveyance of land for a nominal consideration and principally founded on the grantee's promise to pay half the income thereof less disbursement during the grantor's life and thereafter to settle the property itself to the latter's heirs, merely gives right to have the promise specifically performed, but does not create a trust in present, as respecting the land, in the grantor's favour, nor a resulting trust in the event of a failure to carry out the promise. PURCHASING STOCK ON OWN ACCOUNT—WHEN GROUND FOR REMOVAL.

A trustee is prevented not only from doing things which bring an actual loss upon the estate but from doing anything which has a tendency to interfere with his duty and to injure the trust; the fact that the trustee purchased a block of stock on his own account, and with his own money from a company controlled by the estate, in which the trustee was also a beneficiary, does not entitle the cestui que trust to a declaration by the court that he is a trustee for them of the shares so bought subject to a lien in his favour for the price paid; but if it be shown that his interest and his duty conflict because of such purchase, that would be a ground for removing him from his office as trustee.

APPOINTMENT OF TRUSTEES BY WILL—MISCONDUCT IN DISPOSAL OF TRUST PROPERTY—REMOVAL OF TRUSTEES.

Defendants, as executors and trustees, were charged with and undertook the duty of carrying on the business of testator for a period of five years, but were authorized at any time during such period, if they deemed it advisable, to sell and dispose of any part of the real estate or personal property on the best possible terms. The business proved to be profitable, and defendants undertook to obtain it for themselves by disposing of it for a price far below its value to S., who was to transfer it to a limited liability company to be organized by defendants. Held, that, in thus attempting to secure the property for themselves, defendants were guilty of gross misconduct, adverse to the interests of the estate of which they were trustees. Held, that, notwithstanding notice by defendants, before action, that they would comply with all demands made upon them, the action was necessary for the protection of the estate, for the removal of the defendants and the appointment of new trustees, for investigation of the accounts by means of a reference, and for an injunction and decree declaring void the transfer to S.

Defendant was appointed by the third parties trustee to hold certain land in its name pending the carrying out of an agreement of sale thereof from certain of the third parties as vendors to the other third party as purchaser. Under the agreement of sale the purchaser was to pay the taxes. The agreement between the vendors, purchaser and defendant contained a provision that the defendant in accepting the trust incurred no financial liability or responsibility except with respect to payment and disbursement of moneys actually received under the terms of the agreement. Held, that said provision must be construed as a covenant by the vendors and purchaser to indemnify defendant against any liability imposed upon it such as a judgment against it for taxes on the land. A trustee is entitled to be indemnified by the cestui que trust against any liability which may be thrust upon him by reason of the trust. The defendant would be the "owner" of the land notwithstanding it is a trustee for the benefit of others, and therefore it could not escape the liability to be assessed for the land.

SALE, MORTGAGE OR PARTITION OF TRUST PROPERTY.

Where a mortgage to secure bonds provides that a fund for the redemption of the bonds shall be constituted, and that from the bonds from time to time offered for redemption, the trustee shall purchase those bonds which are offered at the lowest price, the trustee is not guilty of a breach of trust in purchasing a quantity of the bonds offered en bloc, merely because other bonds in small lots are offered at a lower price, if the acceptance of all the lower priced offers taken collectively would leave a large number of bonds to be redeemed at a higher rate which would make the average cost higher than the price of the single block of bonds purchased by the trustee for the money available for redemption purposes and which could not have been obtained otherwise than en bloc, at the price: the duty of the trustee in such case is to select such offer to sell bonds as will enable him to redeem the largest number of bonds with the money at his disposal. POWER OF TRUSTEES UNDER WILL TO SELL LANDS.

Where by his will the testator directs that his undivided interest in property of which he was a tenant in common with others should not be sold as such, but that the property should be partitioned and thereupon the share apportioned to him or to his estate, should be held on the same trusts as he provided with respect to property of which he was the sole owner, the share apportioned in a partition action brought by the testator in his lifetime and continued by his executors and trustees after his decease will be subject to the like powers of sale and conditions as to the widow's consent as the will provides in the trust as to the land held in severalty.

(§ II B—49)—INVESTMENTS—DISCRETION OF TRUSTEES.

A provision in a will that the trustees appointed thereby should invest the proceeds of the real and personal estate "in such manner as they shall deem most advisable" is not restricted to investments authorized by law to be taken by trustees generally but will authorize the retention as investments of stocks of the same class held by the testator. [Re Smith, [1896] 1 Ch. 71 applied.]

Property bought by a director on his personal account with money belonging to his corporation is presumed to have been bought on account of the corporation; and the method of accounting therefor is to return (in excess of the principal moneys so withdrawn) either all profits made in the use of such withdrawals, or legal interest thereon.

TRUSTEES—NEGLIGENCE IN HOLDING BANK SHARES—SHAREHOLDER'S DOUBLE LIABILITY.

Trustees who detain bank shares long after knowledge of their rapid decline in value, are answerable to the estate for the amount of a claim proven against it on the insolvency of the bank by the liquidator in respect of shareholders' double liability, notwithstanding a discretionary power conferred by the will appointing them to invest in such manner as they deem advisable. Trustees who retain shares of stock until they become worthless, after becoming aware of their rapid depreciation in value under a discretionary power of retention without making an effort to dispose of them, are answerable for the resulting loss although they acted in good faith; nor are they entitled to protection under s. 36 of the Trustee Act, 1 Geo. V. (Ont.) c. 26 R. S.O. 1914, c. 121.

WIFE'S LIABILITY FOR PROCURING HUSBAND'S BREACH OF TRUST—ACCOUNTING—INTEREST.

Misapplication of trust funds by a husband in payment of his wife's debts, to which she agreed, renders the wife liable to make good the breach of trust; she is also liable for such trust moneys as were made a gift to her, even without knowledge of their trust character, since she merely holds them as a volunteer, and not as a transferee for value; in accounting for it she is also chargeable with the interest which, but for the misapplication the fund would have produced from investment.

SHORTAGES—RELEASE—MISTAKE—FRAUD.

The defendant, as executor and trustee under the will of T., who died in 1882, held one-half of T.'s estate in trust to pay the income to Mary L. during her life, and to divide the corpus among the children of Mary L. who should attain the age of 26 years. The plaintiff was the only child of Mary L. In 1890, the plaintiff and his mother accepted a statement made by the defendant as to the amount of their share, took over the amount, and released the defendant. Mary L. died in 1913; and, in 1915, the plaintiff commenced this action for an account, alleging that the defendant had not fully accounted, and that the plaintiff and his mother had executed the release improvidently. In the action it was found that the defendant had, by an innocent error, paid to other beneficiaries under the will moneys that formed part of the share of the plaintiff and his mother.—Held, that innocent error was sufficient to invalidate the release. COMPENSATION—MAKING MORTGAGE INVESTMENTS.

Where the will limits the executor's investments to be made from sales of land to real estate mortgages, an allowance for procuring and passing the loans may be made to the executor on passing his accounts, in addition to the agent's commission where the loan is brought in through an agent; and where the agent's commission was one per cent on five year loans, an additional one per cent may properly be allowed the executor-trustee in addition to all proper disbursements, for examining and passing each loan, excluding, however, mortgages taken back for balance of purchase-money of properties bought from the estate. Compensation to an executor-trustee for collecting and paying over the income on mortgage investments in Manitoba to the life beneficiary and for looking after the investment may properly be allowed at 7½ per cent of such income on farm loans and 5 per cent on city loans.

Appeal from report of the Master fixing the compensation to trustees under a marriage settlement for settling the affairs of the trust in so far as they related to the portion of the trust represented in a mortgage made to the trustees to secure a part of the purchase-money of land included in the trust which was sold by the trustees, including the transfer of the mortgage to the Accountant of the Court, for which the trustees had not been compensated: Held, that the Master rightly treated the order of reference as requiring him to ascertain what compensation ought to be allowed to the trustees for their services in connection with this portion of the estate from the time of their appointment down to and including the transfer of the mortgage to the Accountant. (2) That the Master was not bound by what had been decided by the Surrogate Judges as to the scale upon which compensation should be fixed with regard to the rest of the estate. (3) That, the compensation ought to be upon the footing of what an ordinarily careful and competent trustee is entitled to receive. (4) That the trustees from time to time consulted their cestui que trust as to questions presenting themselves for determination, and made applications for the advice of the court, thus abstaining from taking unnecessary risks, did not afford ground for cutting down the amount of compensation. (5) Semble, that what the trustees had done was sufficient to justify the allowance of a percentage on taking over and distributing the estate—the word “distribute” as used in Re Farmers' Loan and Savings Co., 3 O.W.R. 837, ad Re McIntyre v. London and Western Trusts Co., 7 O.L.R. 548, is intended to convey the same idea as the expressions used in Re Berkeley's Trust (1879), 8 P.R. 193. (6) The calculation of percentages upon the various parts of the estate and upon the receipts and disbursement of income is one of the means adopted of fixing a trustee's compensation: but neither the trustee nor the cestui que trust has the right to insist upon its adoption: the tribunal before which the matter comes has to ascertain as best it may what is a fair and reasonable allowance for the trustee's care, pains, and trouble, and his time expended in and about the estate (s. 67 of the Trustee Act, R.S.O. 1914, c. 121); the tribunal cannot be expected to ascertain, weigh, and set a value upon the actual work properly done, and allow such value and no more; regard must be had to the size of the estate. The court should not, in every case, limit the remuneration of a trustee (not being official administrator appointed under the Surrogate Courts Act, R.S.M., 1913, c. 47) to percentages and commissions. While such a basis may be favoured because it is desirable to hold out to trustees an inducement to realize as much as possible on the assets of the estate, there are instances where such a basis would be wholly inadequate. [Re Saskatchewan Coal Mining Co., 6 Man. L.R. 593, followed.] An allowance was fixed for the time spent by the estates officer of a trustee company who personally investigated the different items of assets of the estate. Disbursements were allowed to a trustee for the employment of a solicitor to examine the titles to real estate and a competent valuator to ascertain the values of the different properties.

- (§ I-7) — MONEY LENDERS ACT — MONEY LENDER, WHO IS — SUCCESSIVE LOANS TO SAME PERSON.

One who, at intervals extending over a year makes various loans of money at usurious rates is a "money lender" within the meaning of the Money Lenders Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 122, notwithstanding all the loans were made to the same person.

R. v. Morgan, 11 D.L.R. 794, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 225, 19 Rev. Leg. 344.

A person is shown to be a "money-lender" within the Money Lenders Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 122, if it be proved that he discounted promissory notes at a prohibited rate at various times each of less than $500 and so within the statute, although all for the same customer.

R. v. Eaves, 9 D.L.R. 419, 23 Que. S.C. 406.

CRIMINAL OFFENCE—LIMIT OF RATE FOR SMALL LOANS—AGGREGATE DISCOUNTS FOR LARGER AMOUNT.

A person who is a money-lender within the terms of the Money Lenders Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 122, is guilty of a criminal offence under s. 11 of that Act if he discounts for the customer at one time several notes made by various other persons maturing at various dates for less than $500 each, although the notes aggregate more than $500 and the net amount of the advance after deducting the discount was also more than $500, where the discount charge was separately computed and retained on each note at a rate of more than 12 per cent per annum, if there was no contract of open credit and the discount was made directly upon such notes without the customer giving his own note for the gross amount exceeding $500 as the subject of discount with the smaller notes as collateral only to the advance, so as thereby to make the transaction a single one for more than $500, to which the statute would not apply. The offence of "lending" money at a greater interest than is authorized by the Money Lenders Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 122, for which a money-lender may be indicted under s. 11 of that statute, includes discounts made contrary to s. 6 thereof which in terms prohibits a money-lender from stipulating for, allowing on any negotiable instrument, contract or agreement, concerning a loan of money the principal of which is under $500, "a rate of interest or discount greater than 12 per cent per annum."

USURY—MONEY LENDER—DISCOUNT AND GUARANTEE—EVIDENCE OF COLLUSION BETWEEN ENDORSER AND DISCOUNTER.
 The King v. Kehr, 18 Can. Cr. Cas. 292, affirming 18 Can. Cr. Cas. 57.

II. Effect; remedies.

- (§ II—20)—EFFECT—REMEDIES—PENALTY MONEY LENDERS ACT—SCOPE OF.

If a money lender lent money to an amount less than $500 at 11 per cent and thereafter threatened to sue the borrower, who, to avoid action, gives him a promissory note bearing a higher rate than 12 per cent, the note would be in contravention of s. 6 of the Money Lenders Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 122, but would not render the money lender liable to the penalty provided for "lending" money at a greater rate than 12 per cent.

Bellamy v. Timbers, 19 D.L.R. 488, 31 O.L.R. 613.

- (§ II—22)—BONA FIDE HOLDERS.

The Money Lenders Act does not in any way forbid the negotiation of notes discounted at a forbidden rate, but on the contrary provides for the right of action to the bona fide holder for the face value of said notes, reserving only the privilege to the party discharging said notes to reclaim from the money lender any amount paid for interest illegally charged. A petition for an injunction to restrain the transfer of said promissory notes will be dismissed.

Friedenberg v. Eaves, 13 Que. P.R. 329.

- (§ II—24)—RELIEF AGAINST—COUNTERCLAIM—MONEY LENDERS ACT.

A Court of Equity will grant relief against an excessive charge of interest or where the transaction is harsh and unconscionable, and if the transaction is one arising under the Money Lenders Act additional relief will be granted by way of counterclaim under the Act.

Stuart v. Boswell, 26 D.L.R. 711, 50 N.S.R. 16.

REMEDIES.

A party who signed promissory notes discounted at a rate of interest exceeding that allowed by the Money Lenders Act has no right to ask by a conservatory attachment that these notes be put under judicial custody for the purpose of reducing their amounts, especially if it is not alleged that the defendant is insolvent.

Friedenberg v. Railey, 13 Que. P.R. 312.

- (§ II—25)—RECOVERY OF EXCESS.

Any remedy provided for the relief of borrowers against usury by the Money Lenders Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 122, is cumulative of and not in substitution for the common law right to recover the excess. A borrower who has paid interest in excess of the maximum rate for which a contract may legally be made under the Act has a right of action at common law to recover such excess. [Browning v. Morris, 2 Cowp.

790, 98 Eng. Rep. 1364; Smith v. Bromley, 2 Doug. 696, 99 Eng. Rep. 441, applied.] Watts v. Tolman, 6 D.L.R. 5, 22 W.L.R. 55, 2 W.W.R. 1019. [Affirmed, 7 D.L.R. 811, 22 Man. L.R. 471, 3 W.W.R. 607.]

There may be an infraction of s. 6 of the Money Lenders Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 122, which is not an offence within s. 11, which makes it a criminal offence to "lend" money where the amount is under $500 at a higher interest rate than 12 per cent, and where the transaction does not involve the criminal offence, but there has been merely an exaction of more than 12 per cent in respect of a loan made prior to the Act, s. 11 does not apply, but under s. 6 the rate is compulsorily reduced to 12 per cent from the date when the statute became effective; and if the lender illegally stipulates for or exacts more, it is invalid only as to the excess and a renewal note which included the excess charge is not wholly invalidated. [Bellamy v. Porter, 13 D.L.R. 278, 23 O.L.R. 572, distinguished, and dictum of Clute, J., disapproved.]

Bellamy v. Timbers, 19 D.L.R. 488, 31 O.L.R. 613.

REMEDIES UNDER MONEY LENDERS ACT—RECOVERING EXCESS.

Under the Money Lenders Act (R.S.C. 1906, c. 122, s. 7), the court can modify the terms and conditions of a loan of money at usurious interest under form of bonus only, in the case where it is alleged in the defence that the amount of interest paid or claimed exceeds the rate of 12 per cent per annum, though the demand for reduction of usurious interest made for the first time at the hearing be favoured, the court cannot exceed its powers when this allegation is not present. The borrower can always recover this excess of interest under the provisions of the above mentioned Act.

Annotation.

Living on the avails of crime or prostitution, 30 D.L.R. 339.

(§ 1—1)—DEFINITION OF—SECTION 238, CR. CODE.

A summary conviction for being the keeper of a disorderly house under ss. 238, 239, Cr. Code, is sufficient, although it does not in terms contain a finding that the accused is a "vagrant" or a "loose, idle or disorderly person" in the words of said sections which declare such offence to be vagrancy. [R. v. Leconte, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. Can. Dig.—139.

41, 11 O.L.R. 408, followed; R. v. Keeping, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 494, not followed.] The King v. Demetrio, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 316.

(§ 1—2)—ESSENTIALS OF OFFENCE—WANDERER WITHOUT MEANS OF SUBSISTENCE.

A commitment under Cr. Code, s. 238, for vagrancy does not disclose an offence where it recites that the prisoner was a "loose, idle person found wandering abroad and not giving a good account of himself, thereby being a vagrant," unless it is also recited that he had no visible means of subsistence, and a discharge will be ordered on habeas corpus where the conviction on which the commitment was based was similarly defective.

R. v. Kolenczuk; R. v. Chupak, 20 D.L.R. 341, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 265, 7 S.L.R. 321, 7 W.W.R. 382.

PROSTITUTION IN PRIVATE BOARDING HOUSE—EVIDENCE—VENEREAL DISEASE—PREJUDICE—QUASHING CONVICTION.

There is nothing in any of the clauses of s. 238, Cr. Code, since the repeal of paras. (j) and (k) by 5 Geo. V. c. 12, s. 7, which can be relied upon to make immorality committed in a private house evidence of vagrancy. The defendant (a woman) was convicted by a magistrate "of being a vagrant." Upon a motion to quash the conviction, the only evidence returned by the magistrate was, that on several occasions the defendant had received money "for immoral purposes;" that one man had been infected with venereal disease; and that, upon examination, the defendant was found to be diseased. It was admitted that the oral evidence before the magistrate shewed that the defendant was employed as a servant in a boarding house, and that the acts of immorality had been with boarders. Held, that there was no evidence to support the conviction. Clause (1) of s. 238 did not apply, because that clause is not aimed at the prostitute, and because there was no evidence that the defendant had no peaceable profession or calling by which to maintain herself—and the receipt of $2 on each of two occasions did not shew that she for the most part supported herself by the avails of prostitution. Held, also, that evidence of the diseased condition of the defendant was improperly admitted, to her possible prejudice; and on that ground, as well as on the other, the conviction should be quashed.

R. v. Weller, 40 O.L.R. 296.

COMMON PROSTITUTE WANDERING IN PUBLIC PLACE.

The "satisfactory account of herself" which a common prostitute or night walker found wandering in public places must give to avoid being classed as a vagrant under Cr. Code, s. 238 (1), is an account of her presence on the street or other public place and not of her character or calling.

R. v. Levine, 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 305, [1919] 1 W.W.R. 637.

(§ I—5)—BEING WITHOUT VISIBLE MEANS OF MAINTENANCE.

A conviction for vagrancy in being without visible means of maintaining himself is justified in respect of a person who solicits alms for himself on the streets without the official certificate mentioned in Cr. Code, s. 238 (d), on a claim that he is unable to work and who had no way of maintaining himself without becoming a public burden or a nuisance on the public streets. The possession of a sum of money sufficient for the maintenance of the accused for several days will not bar his conviction as a vagrant if it appears that the money had been obtained for the most part by the defendant's begging in the public streets. [The King v. Sheehan, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 119, not followed.]

The King v. Munroe, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 86, 25 O.L.R. 223.

(§ I—7)—LIVING ON AVAILS OF PROSTITUTION.

A woman who continues to have unlawful sexual relations with one man only is not a prostitute within the terms of the Cr. Code; but if she successively becomes the mistress of several men within the limitation period of six months covered by a charge of vagrancy brought under s. 238 (1) without having other means of subsistence and in such a manner as to create a public scandal in the locality where she happens to reside, she may be convicted of vagrancy by reason of her supporting herself by the avails of prostitution.

Bedard v. The King, 30 D.L.R. 326, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 99, 22 Rev. Leg. 302.

Where it appears on a charge of vagrancy under Cr. Code, s. 238 (1), that the accused had six months previously left off working at his trade and that his only means of livelihood since were the running a gambling resort and obtaining the rake-off on poker games, he may properly be convicted under the statutory definition of vagrancy, although he had not failed to support his family or himself.

The King v. Kolotylna, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 25, 21 Man. L.R. 197, 17 W.L.R. 640. PROSTITUTION.

On a charge of vagrancy brought under Cr. Code, s. 238 (1), for being a common prostitute wandering in the streets, the arrest by a police officer and the subsequent prosecution and conviction of the accused will be justified if the woman was caught in the act of soliciting, although the police officer did not before arresting her ask her to give "a satisfactory account of herself."

R. v. Jackson, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 352, 40 O.L.R. 173, affirming 12 O.W.N. 191. [See 12 O.W.N. 77, 161.]

Where a woman's only visible means of maintaining herself is by prostitution, she is liable to summary conviction for vagrancy under Cr. Code, s. 238 (a), making it an offence for a person not having any visible means of maintenance to live without employment.

(§ I A—1)—REMEDIES OF VENDOR—ACTION ON COVENANT AND FORECLOSURE—CONCURRENT REMEDIES—ELECTION BETWEEN.

EQUITABLE DOCTRINE WHERE FRAUD VITIATES VERBAL CONTRACT.

The only ground upon which courts of equity compel the specific performance of a verbal contract to which the Statute of Frauds applies is where the refusal to perform the contract amounts to a fraud. The alleged purchaser cannot support an action for damages for breach of an oral contract for the sale of land to which the Statute of Frauds applies, by setting up part performance, since that doctrine is an equitable one and is applicable only where specific performance of the agreement is sought.

PURCHASER'S RIGHT TO DAMAGES—DELAY.

Damages can be recovered by a purchaser from his vendor, unless the contract provides to the contrary, for delay in completing the purchase where the delay has been occasioned by default of the vendor, not in consequence of want of or defect in title or in consequence of conveyancing difficulties but by reason of the vendor not having used reasonable diligence to perform his contract. ACTION BY VENDOR FOR SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE—PERSONAL JUDGMENT AND ORDER FOR SALE — SALE ABORTIVE — APPLICATION FOR SALE AT CERTAIN PRICE TO CERTAIN PURCHASER WITH RIGHT TO ISSUE EXECUTION FOR BALANCE—ORDER ALLOWING SAME REFERRED BACK TO MASTER TO ASCERTAIN IF PLAINTIFFS INTERESTED IN PURCHASER—PROPRIETY OF VENDOR BECOMING PURCHASER AT A PRICE LESS THAN AMOUNT DUE AND RETAINING JUDGMENT FOR BALANCE.

In an action by a vendor under an agreement for sale, the plaintiffs had obtained personal judgment and an order for sale, and, a sale under the order proving abortive, had subsequently obtained an order or the sale of the property to a certain proposed purchaser at a certain price with the right to issue execution against defendant for the balance then remaining unpaid. On appeal from this order it was referred back to the master to ascertain whether there was any arrangement or intention that the plaintiffs should acquire an interest in the property. A purchase by a vendor in the name of another or under an agreement with the named purchaser by which the vendor is to be entitled to an interest in the property is a grave impropriety as it is a concealment of a material fact, and if an offer by a third person to purchase is open to that objection it should be refused. Doubt expressed as to propriety of a vendor being permitted to purchase the property agreed to be sold by him at a price less than the amount due by the purchaser and to retain his judgment against the purchaser for the remainder. If, where a sale by auction has proved abortive, such a practice is followed, the court should be clearly satisfied that the price at which the vendor is permitted to purchase is the full value of the property, and if necessary for that purpose would retain the services of an independent valuator.

Lebel v. Dobbie, [1919] 2 W.W.R. 483.

OPTION ON LAND—RESERVING RIGHT TO SELL UPON PAYMENT OF EXCESS OVER PURCHASE PRICE—CLAIM AGAINST ESTATE OF DECEASED PERSON—CORROBORATION.

A. obtained a written option from F., since deceased, to purchase certain property for $30,000 within three months. A. at the trial alleged a contemporaneous oral agreement that F. during the currency of the option might sell the land, A. to receive the purchase price therefor in excess of $30,000. After the expiry of the three months F. sold the land. A. in his statement of claim alleged that the agreement referred to was made at that time.—Held that there was no proof of any such oral agreement and that there was no consideration for it, in default of proof of any extension of the option, Duff, J., dissenting on the ground that A. and F. acted on the assumption that the time had been extended for three months and that the option was unilateral, being merely an offer irrevocable for three months and that the oral agreement dealt with a different subject-matter, the distribution of the proceeds. The uncorroborated evidence of a claimant against the estate of a deceased person will be regarded with jealous suspicion. [Re Garnet, 31 Ch. D. 1.] And the court will in general require corroboration. [Re Hodgson, 31 Ch. D. 183.]

Adamson v. Vachon, 6 W.W.R. 114.

PURCHASER'S DUTY TO INDEMNIFY VENDOR.

The rule of equity, that a purchaser is bound to indemnify his vendor against the payment of encumbrances upon the estate which, by the terms of the purchase the purchaser assumes and the amount of which is deducted from the consideration, does not apply against a purchaser in favour of a person who, although he actually made the conveyance, was not the vendor.

WARRANTY—APPARENT DEFECTS.

A clause in a deed of sale "with warranty of all troubles and evictions" is only verbiage, and does not add anything to the legal warranty by which the vendor is bound. Defects in the foundation, pillars and beams of a house, are apparent defects for which the vendor owes no warranty, and by ordinary examination the purchaser may notice such defects.

Laberge v. Gervais, 53 Que. S.C. 370.

CONCURRENT AGREEMENT—OPTION TO RESCIND.

If a person buys land upon the faith of a circular announcing that the vendor undertakes to take back the property, with interest at 6 per cent upon the money paid, if the purchaser is not satisfied with his investment, it is a concurrent agreement of sale, but is not one of the conditions of the sale.

Lachance v. Petit, 53 Que. S.C. 368.

MISTAKE—WILL—NULLITY OF SALE—COMMUNITY.

When no will is found, and one of the heirs intestate purchases the share of another heir for $325, the purchaser may claim back the sum if it is discovered later that there is a will making him sole heir, to the exclusion of the vendor. His consent to the deed of sale is voided by error. If the vendor is a married woman, common as to property, and her husband is sued with her, and if it is proved that the husband had knowledge of his wife receiving $325, he will be condemned with her to return it to the purchaser. Although left by him in his wife's hands, the sum had no less fallen into the community.

ENCUMBRANCE — ENJOYMENT — DELIVERY — WARRANTY—ACQUIRED KNOWLEDGE—RETENTION OF SALE PRICE—PERSONAL OBLIGATION — C.C. QUE. ARTS. 1493, 1508, 1535.

A vendor who furnishes his purchaser with all title deeds as well as the registrar's certificate of search, has carried out the obligation to deliver imposed on him by law. If the sale of an immovable is made subject to a life tenancy of a third person, the purchaser, by accepting it, renounces his warranty against eviction which might result from such enjoyment. Even if an encumbrance is not mentioned at the time of sale, the vendor is not in the position of a guarantor, if it is otherwise established that the purchaser had a personal knowledge of the facts. The purchaser cannot in such case plead the danger of eviction in order to demand security and refuse, under art. 1535, C.C. (Que.), to pay the sale price. In a deed of sale of land where the right of enjoyment of a third party is impeached, the agreement made by the vendor to obtain for the purchaser the right to occupy the house jointly with a third person is only a personal obligation, rendering the vendor liable for damages in case of default, but it does not authorize the purchaser to retain the sale price by virtue of said art. 1535.

Lamarre v. Bibeau, 56 Que. S.C. 296.

OPTION TO PURCHASE REAL ESTATE—CONSIDERATION.

An option given by the owner of real estate to purchase it at a stated price, with in a given time, when accepted, is binding and cannot be withdrawn. The party to whom it is given has an action against the owner for specific performance of the sale. The improved chance of selling afforded by giving the option, is sufficient legal consideration under art. 989 C.C. (Que.).

Cleddinng v. Cox, 45 Que. S.C. 157.

AGREEMENT FOR SALE—NUMBERS OF SUBDIVISION—PRIVATE AND REGISTERED PLAN—CANCELLATION OF SALE—REGISTRATION—C.C. QUE. ARTS. 2098, 2167, 2175.

For the validity of agreements for sale, which do not require registration, it is not necessary that they contain the plan numbers of the lots which it is agreed to sell. The mention of these official numbers is only required in the deed itself. A person who has received an agreement for sale of certain lots shown on a plan of subdivision made by the surveyor of the vendor, on the representation that these subdivision numbers are official, while they are not, and have not been registered until after the date of the agreement for sale, cannot, for this reason, demand the cancellation of the contract, if the official subdivision numbers, although bearing the numbers and the names of different streets, have the same dimensions and the same situation as the number on the private plan, and can easily be located.

Daniel Mc Nulty Realty Co. v. Morin, 55 Que. S.C. 275.

REVENICATION—RIGHT OF REDEMPTION—RIGHT OF VENDOR TO REVENICATE.

A holder, by a precarious title, of real property cannot oppose to the party revindicating it the transfer that the latter had made of it before the action, with the right of redemption, when he has not set up such fact in his statement of defence, and only proves it at the trial by filing the deed without having previously obtained leave to amend his defence. When such sale, although apparently a sale with right of redemption, is, in fact, a pledge, the vendor keeps the ius in re which gives him the right to revendicate it. A holder, with a precarious title, of real property who erects buildings thereon has only the right to remove them when he is sued in revendication and condemned to vacate the premises.

Asselin v. Levesque, 23 Que. K.B. 86, [See 44 Que. S.C. 481.]

CONTRE-LETTRE—RETROCESSION—INTEREST.

A contre-lettre has, between the parties, the same effect as if it was included in the authentic deed to which it refers. A deed of sale accompanied by a contre-lettre "We the undersigned undertake to give back lot No. 38 of Robertson Canton in Second Range provided that he reimburse us the sum of $73 and interest at 8 per cent to run from to-day payable annually for 3 years" the vendor in order to have the right to retrocession of his property is not obliged to pay interest each year; he can pay it at any time, even immediately before the expiration of the 3 years by offering to the purchaser the capital and interest due.

Thibault v. Latour, 49 Que. S.C. 237.

AS TO TAXES.

A stipulation in a deed of sale, whereby the purchaser obliges himself to pay "taxes and local and land assessment for the future," has effect only between the contracting parties themselves, and does not constitute the purchaser the personal debtor for such taxes to the municipal or school corporations.

Gamanche v. Blais, 50 Que. S.C. 209.

A vendor who, after Nov. 1, sells property situated in the city of Montreal, free from all taxes or assessments, is obliged to pay the full amount assessed for the current year. A clause in a deed of sale, by which the vendor guarantees to the purchaser that the land sold is exempt from taxation as a factory site, purports a meaning that the land should be actually used and occupied as such.

Belgo-Canadian Pulp & Paper Co. v. Brown, 49 Que. S.C. 57.

An act, by which, in consideration of a fixed price, one of the coinheritors sells and transfers unto her other coinheritors all her rights in the real and personal property of an inheritance, will not be considered as partial division, but, on the contrary, will constitute, a perfect and final sale of the part thus acquired by the others.

Chaput v. Chaput, 18 Rev. de Jur. 62.

WARRANTY—LEASE.

Where an immovable injured by fire has been sold "with the existing leases" but upon representation to the purchaser that the damages caused to a portion of the building are so considerable as to put an end to the leases, the vendor has no recourse in warranty against the purchaser for the purpose of recovering from him the damages which he is obliged to pay in consequence of a lease and of his own neglect to repair the premises within a reasonable time.

(§ I A—2)—SALE OF LAND—VERBAL AGREEMENT AS TO MONEY PAYABLE BY RELIEF COMMISSION—EVIDENCE—STATUTE 8-9, GEO. V., 1918, N.S., c. 61.

Under the statute regarding the Commission for the Relief of Halifax, moneys awarded by the Reconstruction Committee and allotted to certain property, must be spent on that property, and in the absence of an express agreement, will enure to the benefit of a purchaser obtaining the property since the explosion of 1917.

Hill v. Smith, 50 D.L.R. 272.

SALE OF REAL ESTATE—PURCHASER'S UNDERTAKING TO INSURE AGAINST FIRE — HYPOTHEC—PRIORITY.

A stipulation in favour of the vendor in a sale of real estate, that the purchaser shall insure the buildings against fire, does not carry an implied consent that the legal hypothec, arising from mutual insurance, has priority over one who guarantees the sale price. The vendor is presumed to have intended, in the said stipulation, a fixed premium insurance, and not mutual insurance.

TERM FOR PAYMENT—AGREEMENT TO INSURE.

Bourgeau v. Turnbull, 40 Que. S.C. 313.

(§ I A—3)—ILLEGAL SALE OF SUBDIVISION LOTS — NONREGISTRATION OF PLAN — VENDEE'S LIEN.

A sale of lots according to a plan purporting to be a subdivision plan, which is not registered at the time of the sale, is illegal under a statute forbidding the sale of lots before the registration of the plan, although the agreement covers the whole block and is not a sale of any particular lot, and the purchaser may recover the purchase price paid thereon and is entitled to a lien on the land until same is paid. [Veilleux v. Boulevard Heights, 20 D.L.R. 858, affirmed in 24 D.L.R. 881; 52 Can. S.C.R. 185, 26 D.L.R. 333; Abbott v. Ridgeway, 8 A.L.R. 315, followed.]

AGREEMENT FOR SALE OF LAND TO RAILWAY COMPANY—UNDIVIDED SHARES IN PORTION OF LAND OWNED BY CHILDREN OF VENDOR—REFUSAL OF CHILDREN TO CONVEY—PAYMENT OF PURCHASE-MONEY TO SOLICITORS FOR VENDOR—LIEN OF PURCHASERS FOR AMOUNT NECESSARY TO GET IN TITLE—EXPROPRIATION—COSTS.
G.T.R. Co. v. Donnelly, 8 O.W.N. 231.

AGREEMENT — DELAY — TITLE — TENDER — MISE EN DEMEURE.

When the conditions of a contract of sale are accepted by both parties within the stipulated time, one of them may, even after the expiration thereof, put the other party en demeure to embody in a notarial deed the agreement on which the two are in accord. But if the consideration is payable in shares, the purchaser cannot bring action for title without having within the specified time tendered the certificates of the shares and put the vendor en demeure to sign the deed of sale agreed upon. It is not sufficient in such case that the purchaser demand that the vendor should sign a deed of sale to him; it is necessary that the deed of sale should be on record, already signed by the purchaser, and that conclusions be taken to the effect that it be signed by the vendor. The acceptance of a written agreement of sale must be in writing.

Désy v. Larivière, 26 Que. K.B. 11.

FORFEITURE CLAUSE—JUS IN REM OR PERSONAM.

A promise of a sale of a lot of ground stipulating that in default of payment it shall be null ipso facto, and all sums of money, already paid, and all buildings and improvements made on the lot, shall remain the vendor's property, does not transfer any jus in re on behalf of the purchaser, but only a personal obligation enabling him to acquire the ownership of the lot upon the fulfilment of the conditions stated in the promise of sale.

Gadbois v. Denovan, 52 Que. S.C. 81.

DEED—INTERPRETATION—WARRANTY.

Although by a deed of sale the vendor sells his rights and interest in an immovable, nevertheless it may, from the whole deed, appear that it is the immovable itself which is sold: as (1) when he specifies what his rights are and that these rights are those of an owner; (2) when the deed provides that the purchaser may "enjoy, use and dispose of the immovable in full ownership and right of possession from this day." A clause in the deed of sale "Without other warranty than that resulting from his acts, deeds and promises alone" is one of nonwarranty.

Drouin v. Gaudet, 51 Que. S.C. 45.

SALE OF BUSINESS—USE OF NAME.

The vendor of a going business, who leases his establishment to the purchaser and gives him the privilege of making use of his name for an indefinite period, cannot, shortly after and of his own initiative, put an end to this privilege. In such case it is for the court to fix the term, which should be sufficiently long to permit the purchaser to attain the object the parties had in view at the time of the contract.
Picard v. Proteau, 51 Que. S.C. 115.

CONDITIONS—REMEDY—ACQUESCENCE.

The remedy of a purchaser against a vendor, who has inserted in the deed of sale conditions to which he has not consented, is not limited to an action to set aside the deed; he may also properly demand that these provisions shall be struck out. There is acquiescence in the condition (a) if the purchaser who has received a copy remains, for a year, in possession of the immovables sold without complaining; (b) if he pays the instalments due during this year and satisfies the charges against the property.

Montreal Trust Co. v. Le Comptoir Mobilier Franco-Canadian, 52 Que. S.C. 39.

SUSPENSIVE CONDITIONS — POSSESSION — TAXES.

The holder of an agreement of sale on condition that the title should be retained by the vendor, undertakes to pay the municipal taxes and agrees to a clause that if the agreement is rescinded the work done by him shall remain the property of the vendor, thereby agrees to a sale with suspensive conditions. In order that there may be possession within the meaning of art. 1478 C.C. (Que.) it is not necessary that the purchaser should have physical possession of the immovable, that is to have performed some acts of possession; it is sufficient that he has been in a position to do so.

Maisonneuve v. Michaud, 52 Que. S.C. 161.

(§ I A—4)—TENDER OF CONVEYANCE—REJECTING TENDER OF PURCHASE MONEY—CLAIM OF FORFEITURE.

The rejection of a tender of purchase money on the ground that the purchaser's rights had been forfeited for his default in payment, is a waiver of the tender of a conveyance for execution.

Bark Fong v. Cooper, 16 D.L.R. 299, 49 Can. S.C.R. 14, 5 W.W.R. 633, 701, reversing 11 D.L.R. 223, 18 B.C.R. 271, 24 W.L.R. 294.

SELECTION OF NOTARY—TENDER OF DEED TO VENDOR.

Under Quebec law it is for the purchaser of land to select a notary and to see that a deed is prepared and tendered to the seller.

Poirier v. Archambault, 23 Que. K.B. 495, [Affirmed in sub nom. Lareau v. Poirier, 25 D.L.R. 266, 51 Can. S.C.R. 637.]

Where an agreement for the sale of land includes a right-of-way over other lands of the grantor, and contains a provision that he shall give a deed of the right-of-way "when and as soon as the same is surveyed," and it appears that the survey is necessary before a proper conveyance could be made, the grantee is relieved by the very nature of such a contract from tendering a conveyance for execution until the survey shall have been made by the grantor. A tender for execution of a deed of conveyance will be deemed to have been waived where it is clear from the circumstances existing at the date of the writ that the tender must have been refused if it had been made and for that reason would have been a mere useless formality, ex. gr., where the grantor had already sold to another person.

(§ I B—5)—RELIEF AGAINST FORFEITURE—TERMS.

A purchaser who does not offer to perform his part of the contract is not entitled to be relieved against a forfeiture of the payments; the court in granting the relief may do so on terms that the purchaser pay for the use and occupation of the land, together with the expenses and costs incurred in connection therewith.

TIME FOR—RESCISSION.

The failure of a purchaser of lands to make the cash payment within a reasonable time after the hour fixed therefor under the agreement of sale, is sufficient ground for rescission by the vendor. [Bristol, Cardiff, etc., A. B. Co. v. Maggs, 44 Ch. D. 613, applied.]

Bennett v. Newcombe, 11 D.L.R. 87, 24 W.L.R. 59.

REAL PARTY ACTING OSTENSIBLY AS AGENT—INABILITY TO MAKE TITLE.

Purchase money paid to and which is retained by one who, although acting ostensibly as agent in reality, acted for himself in agreeing to sell land and received the money entirely for his own benefit, may be recovered by the payer where the payee was unable to give a title to the land.

ACCELERATION CLAUSE — ELECTION TO INVOKE—NOTICE.

Notice of a vendor's election to invoke an acceleration clause in a contract for the sale of land and to declare the whole of the purchase money to be due and payable, may, on the vendee's default in making stipulated payments, be given by the vendor in the pleadings in his action for the specific performance of the agreement, where the contract provides that notice of such election may be given the vendee by personal service, registered letter or such other means as might appear likely to bring it to his attention.

Price v. Parsons, 14 D.L.R. 59, 6 A.L.R. 365, 25 W.L.R. 598, 5 W.W.R. 199.

UNPAID PURCHASE MONEY — STIPULATION FOR DISTRESS BY VENDOR FOR ARREARS.

The relation of landlord and tenant is not created so as to permit the vendor to distrain, where the parties did not contemplate the creation of a real tenancy or the payment of rent, by a stipulation of a contract for the sale of land to the effect that the vendee attorned to and became the vendor's tenant, and that the former might distrain for all arrears of principal or interest. An unpaid vendor in a contract for the sale of land does not acquire the right to distrain for arrearages of principal and interest from s. 5 of c. 34 of Alta. Ordinances 1911, which permits a "mortgagee" of land to do so.

RECOVERY OF—FAILURE OF TITLE.

Where one of two vendees, both of whom claim the same land under unregistered contracts of sale from the same common source, is entitled to priority by reason of first filing a caveat in the land titles office, the other may recover from his vendee all payments made by him under the contract, with interest, together with the costs of investigating the title, or incident thereto.

Stephens v. Bannan, 14 D.L.R. 333, 6 A.L.R. 418, 25 W.L.R. 557, 5 W.W.R. 201.

EXHIBITING TITLE.

Where a contract for the resale of a title held under an agreement of sale from the registered owner stipulates that the sale is subject to approval of title by the vendee's solicitor and that the contracts are to be sent through a specified bank, there is a contractual obligation to exhibit a good title to the purchaser before he can be called upon to pay the balance of the cash payment.

Quail v. Beatty, 9 D.L.R. 784, 5 A.L.R. 482, 24 W.L.R. 242, 4 W.W.R. 55.

Where a vendor, under a contract for the sale of land in which time is of the essence, and in which the purchase price was to be paid for in four instalments, two of which amounted to one-half of the entire purchase price, rescinds the agreement on default of the vendee to pay the last two instalments, though the rescission is justifiable, the vendor will not be allowed to retain the money paid on account of the property; such money will be treated as payment on account and not as deposit money, though it is called "deposit money" in the agreement.

McGreevy v. Hodder, 8 D.L.R. 755, 4 O.W.N. 536, 23 O.W.R. 699.

The vendee in a contract for the sale of lands cannot, as a condition precedent to paying the stipulate instalments of the purchase money, require the vendor, who had only an equity in the lands, to shew that he had paid all instalments of the purchase money actually due from him to his vendor.

Where an agreement for the sale of land expressly requires a certain down payment contemporaneously with the execution of the agreement, the purchaser is not entitled (as against an outstanding mortgage of which he had prior notice amounting to less than the remaining purchase instalments) to require the vendor to shew title to the land before making the down payment. Where an agreement for the sale of lands expressly requires the payment of a fixed large instalment on the purchase price in "cash on the signing of this agreement," the consideration for this payment is the execution of the agreement itself, that is to say, the constitution of the relationship of vendor and purchaser between the parties and the promise or undertaking of the vendor to sell and convey.

Cushing v. Knight, 6 D.L.R. 820, 46 Can. S.C.R. 555, 2 W.W.R. 704.

Where, by the terms of an agreement to purchase a mine, part of the purchase price was to be in stock of a company to be formed by the purchaser to acquire and work a certain creek or such parts as he may consider advisable, a tender of stock in a company which is formed for another object, is not sufficient, and the vendor will not be compelled to accept such shares, unless he had knowledge of the formation of such company and had by his conduct so acquiesced that he would be precluded from objecting to it. Where a tender of the said amount of stock computed at par does not necessarily fulfil the agreement, since the value of the stock depends on the state of the market at that time, and the vendor is entitled to so much of the stock as that part of the purchase price would then buy.

A stipulation in an agreement for the sale of land made by written offer and acceptance and negotiated through a real estate agent, that the agent's commission against the vendor be paid "out of and form part of the purchase money" permits the purchaser to pay such commission on closing the purchase and to deduct the amount so paid from the purchase money then payable to the vendor.

Robinson v. Reynolds, 4 D.L.R. 63, 3 O.W.N. 1262.

If a purchaser knows of an encumbrance, either before or after the execution of his conveyance, but before the payment of the whole purchase money, he will be liable to the extent of any purchase money which he subsequently, without the consent of the encumbrancer, pays to the vendor. [Rayne v. Baker, 65 Eng. Rep. 905, followed.]

Gillespie v. Wells, 2 D.L.R. 519, 22 Man. L.R. 355, 21 W.L.R. 231, 2 W.W.R. 272.

Where an agreement for the sale of land provides that, upon a resale of the land, the resale agreement may be assigned to the original vendor as security for the purchase price remaining due to him and, without any intention to mislead the original vendor, the resale agreement is so drawn that a larger sum appears thereby to be owing thereunder than is in fact so owing, the original vendor cannot, as assignee of the resale agreement, exact payment of such larger sum, but must take the resale agreement subject to the true state of the accounts between the parties thereto.

Great West Land Co. v. Stewart, 3 D.L.R. 805, 3 O.W.N. 1141.

AGREEMENT PROVIDING FOR POSSESSION BY PURCHASER ON PAYMENT OF INSTALLMENTS—FAILURE TO PAY—ORDER GIVING VENDOR POSSESSION — VENDOR ACCOUNTING UNDER CONTRACT.

An agreement for sale of land specifically provided that the right of the purchaser to occupy and enjoy the lands was upon the express condition that he would not make default in payment of the purchase price; default was made upon an intermediate instalment, long before the time provided for the completion of the agreement. The court held that an order, giving possession to the vendor was a proper one under the circumstances. The order was very much in the interest of the purchaser, as all his rights, other than possession under the contract were preserved, and the land made to fulfil its earning capacities, the vendor supplying labour and capital, but under an obligation to account under the contract which was still subsisting.

DEFERRED PAYMENTS — VENDOR'S RE-ENTRY ON DEFAULT—ACCELERATION.

An entry into possession made by a vendor on default of the vendee to meet instalments in arrear under his contract by virtue of a power reserved therein, will not operate as a demand for unmaturing instalments nor accelerate their payment for the benefit of the purchaser so as to force the vendor to accept prepayment of unmaturing interest-bearing instalments, where the vendor's proceedings were wholly referable to the arrears. PURCHASER PREVENTING TITLE — CROWN GRANT.

The purchaser of mill-site property under an agreement for sale whereby the final payment was to be made when the vendor obtained title from the Crown, having taken possession, and subsequently by his own conduct made it impossible for the vendor to obtain the Crown grant, is liable for the balance due notwithstanding the vendor's failure.

ASSIGNMENT BY VENDOR—NOTICE—CAVEAT.

If notice of an assignment by the vendor of his rights under an agreement of sale of land has not been given to the purchaser, payment to the vendor of the balance due under the agreement will entitle the purchaser to a transfer of the land: a caveat, filed in the Land Titles Office after the assignment, is not notice, as such, to the purchaser, who is not bound to search the register before making payment. JUDGMENT DIRECTING PAYMENT—VENDOR TO ESTABLISH TITLE.

A vendor under an agreement of sale of land is not entitled to judgment directing the purchaser to pay the purchase-money or any instalment thereof until he establishes to the satisfaction of the court that he has a good title to the premises sold. [Cameron v. Carter, 9 O.R. 426, applied.]

Pedlar v. Ryder, 24 D.L.R. 427, 8 W.W.R. 559.

DEFENCES TO ACTION FOR PURCHASE MONEY —MISREPRESENTATIONS—WAIVER.

An election to affirm the contract to buy a block of land notwithstanding alleged misrepresentations as to its suitability for building lots may be predicated from the fact that the purchaser himself subdivided the property and undertook to offer it to the public as suitable for buildings lots and did not advance his objection until sued for purchase money after the lapse of a year from the making of the contract.

Stewart v. Cunningham, 22 D.L.R. 845, 21 B.C.R. 255, 8 W.W.R. 579.

NONREGISTRATION OF AGREEMENT—LIABILITY ON COVENANT FOR PAYMENT.

Failure on the part of a vendor to register an agreement of sale does not debar him from recovering upon the covenants contained in such agreement. [Thompson v. McDonald, 20 B.C.R. 223, applied.]

McDonald v. McClymont, 8 W.W.R. 990.

DEFERRED PAYMENTS—NONASCERTAINMENT OF DATE.

Under Quebec law the nonascertainment of the date for payment of the deferred part of the purchase money upon a contract of sale of lands does not necessarily make the contract nugatory, for, in default of agreement of the parties, the court may fix the time for payment of a debt as to which no date of payment has been fixed by the parties; failure to agree upon such a date may, in certain cases, warrant the inference that the parties have not come to a completed agreement, it being a question of construction in the particular case. [Compare Fenske v. Farbacher, 2 D.L.R. 634, as to the English law.]

BY ORIGINAL VENDOR—NOTICE BY PUR-CHASER TO SUBPURCHASERS "TO PROTECT

OBLIGE SUBPURCHASERS TO WITHHOLD PAYMENTS.

A purchaser under an agreement for the sale of land agreed to sell to third parties, and an agreement was thereafter made between the original vendor, the purchaser and subpurchasers whereby the latter agreed that the amounts due from them should be paid direct to the original vendor until the full amount owing on the original agreement was satisfied. Subsequently the original purchaser heard that his vendor had mortgaged the land and told one of the subpurchasers to "protect the mortgage." Such "warning" was held not sufficient to impose any obligation on the subpurchasers to withhold from the original vendor payments subsequently falling due.

ASSIGNMENT—CAVEAT—INTEREST IN LAND —LAND TITLES ACT.

T. sold, under agreement of sale, real estate to S. and B.T., assigning in writing to the plaintiffs a portion of the unpaid purchase-money, and "for the more effectually carrying out said assignment" T. also assigned to the plaintiffs the agreement for sale and the land covered thereby, but T. did not transfer the certificate of title to the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs lodged a caveat, and thereafter T. transferred the land to S. subject to the caveat. S. with knowledge of the caveat, and of the assignment to the plaintiffs, transferred the land to the defendants, strangers. The moneys assigned to the plaintiffs were not paid either to the plaintiffs or to T. Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to maintain their caveat. [Grace v. Kuebler, 56 Can. S.C.R. 1, distinguished.]

Drewry v. Cowie, 12 S.L.R. 255.

In construing the meaning of a document, the function of the courts is to ascertain what the parties meant by the words they have used, to declare the meaning of what was written in the instrument, not what was intended to have been written, to give effect to the intention as expressed, the expressed meaning being for the purpose of interpretation equivalent to the intention. Unless forced to do so, by the language used, the court will not place a meaning on one clause which makes that clause inconsistent with a previous one. In determining whether the parties intended to create a tenancy, the whole question is, did they have an honest intention of creating the relationship of landlord and tenant, or was it their intention to effect some other purpose. The amount of the rent reserved is one element in determining the bona fide intention of the parties, and, if it is grossly in excess of the real value of the land, the courts will take that circumstance as conclusive that it was not really intended to be paid as rent, but any excess, however slight, is not conclusive; it is only one element in determining the bona fides of the parties.

Sherrin v. Wiggins, 27 Man. L.R. 572, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 895.

CONDITION—MORTGAGE—INTEREST.

An agreement for the sale and purchase of land provided that part of the purchase price was to be paid as to $3,000 by assuming a certain mortgage. Held, in view of the extraneous evidence, that the purchaser was not obliged by such provision to pay the interest in arrear upon the mortgage at the time of the making of the agreement.

Wychwood Corp. v. Howell, 13 O.W.N. 92.

DEFAULT IN PAYMENT—FORFEITURE.

Every conventional clause permitting one of the contracting parties at his option to deprive the other party of his rights and to confiscate the money already received should be strictly interpreted. A stipulation that default in payment of an instalment of the purchase price will ipso facto annul the agreement, will not have that effect for a default in payment of only a part of an instalment.

Guillemette v. Park Realty Co., 52 Que. S.C. 146.

FORFEITURE — WAIVER — DEMAND OF PAYMENT.

Where in a promise of sale of lots of ground, the price is payable by monthly instalments, and the promisor demands and constantly receives payment outside of the stipulated delays, he thereby tacitly waives the penal provisions in the deed to the effect that if the debtor does not make his monthly payments within stipulated delay, the promisor will have the right to annul the deed and to retain all payments previously made by the debtor. But notwithstanding this waiver, the promisor may yet take advantage of this penal clause, by putting his debtor in default to pay the arrears due in a reasonable delay, and by notifying him that if he does not comply with the demand, he will exercise his right of resolution. A simple demand of payment will not be sufficient. Where the payments are made payable at the office of the promisor, the right of cancelling the promise of sale can be exercised by giving to the debtor a mere notice without any mise en demeure of payment.

Caplan v. Montreal, 52 Que. S.C. 435.

RETENTION OF PRICE—POSSESSION.

A purchaser hindered in his possession, or who properly believes himself to be so, may retain the purchase price if he has not paid it, but if he has paid it he cannot demand that it should be returned to him so long as he is not dispossessed.

Massé v. Bertrand, 26 Que. K.B. 335.

A stipulation in a deed of sale of an immovable charged with a substitution, that a part of the price bearing interest will only be payable when the vendor has procured the discharge of the substitution, and the undertaking by the vendor to have it discharged as soon as the appellé becomes of age, does not make the deed of sale a contract under suspensive condition. Although the purchaser is not bound to pay the price of sale before the fulfilment of the condition, he has no right to refuse to pay the vendor the interest on the purchase money as long as he remains in possession of the immovable.

Lebel v. Morin, 26 Que. K.B. 231.

A vendor cannot demand the price of sale without at the same time making delivery of the thing sold. The delivery of an immovable is consummated by the abandonment made of it by the vendor and the handing over of the title deeds necessary to complete the conveyance.

SALE OF MINING CLAIM—FORFEITURE—RECOVERING BACK MONEYS PAID—AMENDMENT.

An agreement to purchase a mining claim contained the following provision: "Time is the essence of this agreement, and any failure on the part of the first party to make any of the said payments as herein provided or within thirty days thereafter shall work a forfeiture of all his rights under the agreement and the said agreement shall become null and void at the option of the second party, and the second party shall give written notice to the first party of his intention to claim said forfeiture, and thereupon this agreement shall be null and void and of no further force and effect, and all payments made by the first party or his assigns in pursuance of the terms hereof shall be retained by the second party." Held, that a notice by the vendor, given before the expiration of thirty days, of his intention to claim forfeiture, was ineffectual, and a further notice, given after default, claiming that the purchaser had forfeited

RIGHT TO INTEREST—COVENANT TO PAY TAXES—RIGHT OF VENDOR—ACTION.

Where an agreement for the sale of lands provides that the seller is not to be liable to a personal action for the purchase money but that the vendor is "to look to the lands and all other rights and remedies to realize the purchase money and all of his rights," and also provides that all overdue interest shall be treated as purchase money, overdue interest cannot be recovered by personal action against the purchaser; but where the agreement also contains a covenant by the purchaser to pay taxes from a certain date, such taxes, if paid by the vendor, may be recovered by personal action.

Parker v. Trustee Co., of Winnipeg, [1918] 2 W.W.R. 264.

PERFORMANCE — TENDER — JUDGMENT — CROSS DEMAND—REPUDIATION OF CONTRACT.

In a reciprocal contract, performance thereof on both sides should be made simultaneously, and neither of the contracting parties can be compelled to execute his obligation before the other party performs his. In a sale the vendor has a right to the price only when he has offered the thing sold, or at least offers it in his action; it is not sufficient that he should declare himself ready to make delivery. A court cannot render a conditional and hypothetical judgment, such as condemning the defendant to pay the price of a thing sold upon the delivery thereof. A vendor who retains the property and possession of the thing sold, cannot sue for the sale price without making legal tender of the thing, and if the purchaser unjustly repudiates the contract the vendor has a remedy in damages against him, but he cannot at the same time, keep the thing sold and claim the price. Any cancellation of a contract having, as a rule, to be made by the courts, the purchaser, after having put his vendor in default to deliver him the thing sold, cannot, on the latter's refusal, consider the contract as cancelled and sue to claim back the instalments paid on account; and should he do so by a cross demand, without asking the court to declare the sale void, his demand will be dismissed.

Robert v. Sarault, 53 Que. S.C. 484.

TITLE IN WIFE'S NAME—POWER TO CONVEY.

Where the vendor of property, the title to which stood in his wife's name, but a conveyance of which he had the right to call for at any time, notified the purchaser of that fact, but declined to send the agreement between his wife and himself to the purchaser's solicitors, and the purchaser did nothing further, he was not allowed to resist payment of the balance of the purchase money.

Beech v. Mullins, 33 W.L.R. 721, 9 W.W.R. 1168.

DEPOSIT IN ESCROW—MISAPPROPRIATION—RATIFICATION.

The onus is upon the party relying on a plea of ratification to show that the ratification of the unauthorized conduct was done with a full knowledge of the facts. Where an agreement called for unconditional payments against title, deposit of a payment with a trust company in escrow until title was passed and conveyance executed is not a payment within the meaning of the agreement, and if the escrow holder misappropriates the money while the escrow is still running the loss must fall upon the purchaser.

Hayes v. Pacific Great Eastern, 34 W.L.R. 819, 10 W.W.R. 831.

TERMS OF PAYMENT—CONSTRUCTIVE NOTICE—NOTICE OF MORTGAGE.

Where an agreement for sale contains a provision that payment is to be made in part by the assumption of a loan made to the vendor by a third party, notice of unusual provisions in the mortgage securing that loan ought not to be imputed to the purchaser.

MacDonald v. McLean, 7 W.W.R. 997.

CROP PAYMENT—REFUSAL OF VENDOR TO ACCEPT—RIGHTS OF PURCHASER—SALE OF REJECTED CROPS—APPLICATION TO PURCHASE PRICE.

Where a vendor under a crop payment agreement refuses to accept delivery of his share at the proper place or to give any directions as to its disposal, the purchaser is entitled to sell the crop and pay the proceeds into a bank with notification to the vendor and cannot be regarded as in default under the agreement. Strict compliance with the terms of a cancellation clause is a condition precedent to effective exercise of the right of cancellation. [Banton v. March, 16 W.L.R. 337, followed.]

Todd v. Lundell, 6 W.W.R. 1197.

SALE OF LAND—CONTRACT—OFFER OF VENDOR ON RECEIVING CERTAIN PAYMENT AND QUIT CLAIM TO RELEASE PURCHASER FROM PAYMENT—TIME LIMIT—ACCEPTANCE OF OFFER BY LETTER—PAYMENT NOT MADE WITHIN TIME LIMIT—PURCHASER NOT ENTITLED TO RELEASE—OPTION—STRICT CONSTRUCTION OF CONDITIONS—TIME OF ESSENCE.

As the purchaser desired to be released from payment under an agreement of sale of land, the vendor on May 14, wrote S., the purchaser's managing director, offering to accept $1,900, together with a quit claim and for that consideration to release the purchaser from all liability "this offer to hold good until June 15, without further notice." On May 29, S. wrote the vendor accepting the offer. Held that the payment of $1,900 and giving of a quit-claim deed before June 15, was a condition precedent to right of the purchaser to release. The vendor's proposal was an option and therefore the conditions imposed should be strictly construed and time was of the essence.

Freehold Investment Co. v. Westland, [1919] 2 W.W.R. 235, affirming [1918] 3 W.W.R. 312.

REFUSAL TO CONTINUE PAYMENTS—MISAPPLICATION BY VENDOR AS TO PAYMENT OF TAXES—ACCELERATION CLAUSE.

By an agreement in writing the plaintiff agreed to sell and the defendant agreed to buy certain land which the plaintiff had previously agreed to sell to another person. Some payments had been made by the first purchaser, and the new agreement was made with his assent, the expressed consideration being the balance unpaid of the original purchase price. The defendant agreed to pay taxes from the date of the agreement. The purchase money was payable in small instalments, and after several instalments had been paid the plaintiff demanded from the defendant a sum for taxes, which the defendant paid. Subsequently he ascertained that the taxes were due in respect of a period prior to the date of his purchase, and he demanded payment or credit, and on the plaintiff refusing either the defendant declined to pay any further instalments of purchase money, and this action was brought for the whole unpaid balance, the agreement containing the usual acceleration clause. Held, that both parties were in the wrong, the defendant clearly not being liable for the taxes in question, but that the wrongful casting of liability upon him in this respect did not justify him in refusing to make the payments in accordance with his agreement. [Mersey Steel & Iron Co. v. Naylor, 9 A.C. 434, applied.] Judgment was therefore given for the plaintiff for payment of the purchase money and for sale in default of payment, and for the defendant for repayment of the taxes; no order being made as to costs.

A stipulation in a deed of sale of an immovable subject to substitution, that a part of the price bearing interest will only be payable when the vendor has caused the substitution to disappear and the undertaking by the vendor to cause it to disappear as soon as the appellé becomes of age, does not make the sale a contract under suspensive conditions. The purchaser cannot take advantage of the above agreement in order to refuse to pay to the vendor the interest upon the price of sale.

DEDUCTIONS.

When an action is taken for the recovery of an annual instalment of $100, due on the sale of an immovable, which was payable $50 in money and $50 in work, the plaintiff must allege and prove that he offered some work to the defendant or that the latter was put in default with respect to the same, otherwise the prothonotary cannot give judgment for that amount.

Burns v. Cousineau, 14 Que. P.R. 389.

TIME—TENDER OF AMOUNT.

One who agrees to purchase property on condition that the contract shall be executed before a notary within a fixed time is not obliged to sign the deed of sale after such a date. When the price, or part of it, is payable cash down, the purchaser should make a legal tender of the sum due before he can compel the vendor to sign the deed of sale; he should also deposit the amount in court with his action. A party to a contract cannot claim performance of the other party's obligations, unless he himself has first fulfilled his own.

Charlebois v. Emond, 49 Que. S.C. 256.

TENDER—DELAY—CONDITIONAL JUDGMENT.

In a bilateral contract, the carrying out of the obligations by each of the parties should be concurrent. So a purchaser of real property, before bringing an action for delivery and execution of deed, should, within the time agreed upon, make a legal tender of the price or of the part of the price of sale which could be demanded, and deposit the money in court with his action. Courts cannot supply such want of tender and deposit by decreeing, as a condition of the judgment and delivery of the property, that the purchaser should pay what is due on the price of sale within a delay fixed.

Desjardins v. Belanger, 54 Que. S.C. 77.

FORFEITURE CLAUSE.

A clause in a deed of sale providing that "if the purchaser or his representatives make default in the first or any payment of the day for payment or within 60 days after and likewise the payments of interest each year, the sale shall be cancelled of right in favour of the vendor, who shall have the right to re-enter into the possession and the ownership of the property above sold, without any formal demand, demand of payment or other formality of law, and without being bound to reimburse the purchaser any sum for money received on account and for improvements made upon the said property," only admits that the agreement shall be automatically cancelled by the single omission of the purchaser to make one of the payments agreed on: the vendor must signify to the purchaser his wish to take advantage of the provision for cancellation.

Perreault v. Foncière Victoriaville, 54 Que. S.C. 249.

PACTE COMMISSOIRE—DEFAULT OF PAYMENT.

A clause in a deed of sale, which stipulates "that on default of the purchaser making any payment within 60 days of the date when it becomes due, the sale shall become void and of no effect, without the vendor being required to make restitution of any money previously paid," only constitutes an ordinary pacte commissoire stipulated in favour of the vendor; and the purchaser who is behind in his payments cannot take advantage of it. A clause in an act of sale containing a pacte commissoire, cannot be explained by witnesses.

Mountain Sights v. Dagenais, 53 Que. S. C. 372.

CUSTOM—CHEQUE—ERROR.

Where the custom followed between vendor and purchaser, as to the monthly payments due by the latter, was that about the beginning of each month, an unaccepted cheque was mailed to the vendor and accepted by him as payment, the vendor cannot, after some trouble has arisen between them, receive cheques, keep them in his possession, and, afterwards, deny having received them as payment. A small error in the amount of a cheque given in payment of a debt, resulting from the common error of the creditor and the debtor, does not annul the payment and does not constitute the debtor in default to pay.

Paxton v. Walker, 53 Que. S.C. 281.

NOTICE OF SALE—RETENTION OF PRICE—SECURITY—DEFECTIVE TITLE.

Art. 1352 C.C.P. which provides that the notice in the papers should be inserted "15 days at the latest before the sale," does not mean that not more than 15 days should elapse between the publication of the notice and the sale, but it should be understood to mean that the notice itself ought not to be given later than 15 days before the sale, namely, that there should be at least 15 days between the notice and the sale. The purchaser of an immovable, who might be disturbed by a third person because of defects in the title to the property, cannot keep back payment of the price or require the vendor to furnish him with security.

Hudon v. Connolly, 24 Rev. Leg. 23.

ASSIGNMENT OF AGREEMENT—EFFECT.

An agreement of sale and an assignment thereof should be interpreted together, and constitute but one contract, namely, a sale; and where the vendor was not able to give a title to the purchaser, because he had only an option, he cannot sue the purchaser for the price stipulated in the assignment.

Dansereau v. Dubois, 24 Rev. Leg. 66.

TITLE—FRANC ET QUITTE.

In the case of a promise of sale of immovables for $31,000, payable $3,000 cash, $3,000 3 months later, and the balance at various times, the purchaser being entitled to a deed of sale at the time of the second payment, with the clause "franc et quitte," the vendor having to furnish all his title deeds and a certificate of search, the purchaser cannot be compelled to pay the last mentioned $3,000 before the vendor has furnished him with his title deeds and a certificate of the registrar.

Hunter v. Kerr, 7 D.L.R. 829, 21 W.L.R. 823.

COMPUTATION.

On an election by a purchaser to accept what a vendor, who has the fee to a portion only and a limited interest in the remainder of land he has contracted to sell, can actually convey, the amount to be abated from the purchase price is the difference in value based on the proportionate part of the purchase money attributable to what the vendor is able to convey.

Ontario Asphalt Block Co. v. Montreuil, 15 D.L.R. 703, 29 O.L.R. 534, varying 12 D.L.R. 223.

QUANTITY—FALSE REPRESENTATION.

A purchaser of land who is induced to enter into the contract by the false representation of the vendor that the lot in question has a certain depth, is not bound to exercise diligence to detect a discrepancy in the depth between the contract of purchase and the deed, but on discovering the fraud he is entitled to demand the depth called for in the contract or damages for the breach of the party in question has passed to an innocent third party.

Wishart v. Bond, 10 D.L.R. 776, 4 O.W.N. 931, 24 O.W.R. 199.

QUANTITY—SURVEY.

A printed stipulation in a contract for the sale of land for a lump sum, that the vendor shall not be obliged to produce any abstract of title or any title deeds or evidence of title or survey except such as he may have in his own possession, does not raise a presumption that the parties intended a survey to be made before closing, and, in the event of deficiency in acreage, to abate the purchase price. Where an intending purchaser of land under an agreement containing an innocent misrepresentation as to the area of the land, assigns his interest in the agreement without knowledge of the misrepresentation, merely turning over what he had acquired the right to purchase, and using ipissima verba of his own contract, he is not liable to make an abatement of purchase money for the deficiency.

Re Paterson and Canadian Explosives, 11 D.L.R. 122, 4 O.W.N. 1175, 24 O.W.R. 486.

Where a right of redemption in house property was sold under a deed of sale describing the property by its boundaries and as having a frontage of 45 feet and further describing the property as being the same as is actually enclosed and possessed by the vendor, a deficiency of 7 feet in the frontage will not give rise to a claim for diminution of price or annulment of the contract if the purchaser was not deceived or misled either as to the value or as to the extent of the property to which the right of redemption applied, in view of the fact that the property had been sold en bloc and that the entire frontage was taken up by the buildings thereon.

ERROR IN DESCRIPTION AS TO ACREAGE — REDUCTION OF PRICE — ART. 1501, QUE. C.C.

A vendee in a contract for the sale of lands who does not promptly repudiate the agreement because of the vendor's failure to deliver an abstract of title, or of the delivery of one that is unsatisfactory, will be deemed to have accepted such title as his vendor actually had.

DOUBTFUL TITLE — CONSTRUCTION OF WILL — SUMMARY APPLICATION.

Where the vendee of land, under a contract for the sale thereof, raises a question of the doubtfulness of the vendor's title by reason of testamentary language in a will in the vendor's chain of title, the proper practice is for the matter of construction to be brought up on originating summons with all parties before the court, and this may be done pending a summary application under the Vendors and Purchasers Act (Ont.) for an opinion on some point arising out of or connected with the contract.

Cameron v. Hull, 9 D.L.R. 843, 4 O.W.N. 581, 23 O.W.R. 736.

REGISTRY OF AUTHORITY TO AGENT TO SELL — CLOUD ON TITLE.

Where an instrument executed by the owner of a parcel of land giving an agent authority to sell the same is on record (whether properly or not) at the time an executory contract for the sale of land is made, it constitutes for a year at least (s. 75 of the Ontario Registry Act, 10 Edw. VII. c. 60) a cloud upon the vendor's title and a release or discharge thereof must be procured and registered by and at the expense of the vendor before he can compel the purchaser to take title. RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF PARTIES — MISTAKE.

Nelson v. Charlesson, 15 D.L.R. 660, 19 B.C.R. 100, 26 W.L.R. 865, 5 W.W.R. 995.

MAKING TITLE — TRANSFER OF TITLE TO UNREGISTERED LANDS.

Title to land in British Columbia which has never been registered under the Land Registry Act (B.C.) may be transferred by conveyance, registration under that Act not being obligatory; and a purchaser of such unregistered land cannot insist upon the vendor placing it under the Land Registry Act if the agreement does not so stipulate.

Thompson v. McDonald, 17 D.L.R. 487, 20 B.C.R. 223, 28 W.L.R. 205.

Can. Dig.—140.

TORRENS SYSTEM — VENDOR'S IMPLIED OBLIGATION — WHAT HE MUST PRODUCE.

On an open contract for sale and purchase of land in Alberta it is an implied term that the vendor is bound, when the time for shewing title has come, to produce on request of the purchaser a registrar's abstract and general certificate, and, in case the registrar's abstract does not shew a sufficient title, he must produce also a written statement shewing how the apparent defects are met. A good title is shewn if, although the vendor is not in fact the registered owner, he is entitled to compel a transfer to him; it is good although subject to encumbrances, even though exceeding the purchase price, provided the encumbrancer is compellable to take his money by the time a good title is to be proved.

RESCISSION OF CONTRACT — DAMAGES — COSTS OF INVESTIGATING TITLE.

An order made under the Vendors and Purchasers Act (Ont.), declaring that the title to the land in question was doubtful and not such as the purchaser was bound to accept is not subject to recall or modification until passed and entered, if it has been acted upon or if the parties have changed their position on account of it, and such order in such contingency will be res judicata between the parties, although the formal order was not issued, in support of the purchaser's action to rescind the agreement; but, except as to the giving of any damages to which the purchaser may have been entitled in addition to the costs of investigating the title, it was competent for the purchaser to have sought in the "vendor and purchaser" proceeding under the Act, a return of the money paid and interest thereon and the costs of investigating the title.

TITLE — OBJECTIONS TO — TAKING POSSESSION — WAIVER — SUBMITTING QUESTIONS OF TITLE TO COURT.

Taking possession is no waiver of the right to object to a defective title where the contract provided for giving possession prior to the time within which the vendor was to furnish a good title. A vendor's claim that the purchaser had accepted the title is waived by the vendor submitting the question whether the vendor had made out a good title to the decision of the court under the Vendors and Purchasers' Act (Ont.).

ADVERSE CLAIMS FOR TAXES—ABSENCE OF FRAUD — EXECUTED CONTRACT—REMEDIES, HOW LIMITED.

Where everything has been done that was necessary to vest the title in the purchaser of an outstanding interest in land already registered in his name and the contract has become an executed one, the purchaser cannot, on the ground of adverse claims for taxes or otherwise, recover money which has been paid, but must rely on the covenants for title; in the absence of covenants or agreements of that nature he is without remedy except in case of fraud.

TRANSFER THROUGH ASSIGNEE FOR CREDITORS.

A purchaser of land, under an executory contract for the sale thereof is not entitled to reject the title on the ground that the creditors of one of the mesne grantors, who had made an assignment to a trustee for the benefit of his creditors, did not join with the grantor in the deed in which the trustee himself was the grantee, where it is not made to appear that the trustee in question, who also executed the deed of assignment, was a creditor or that any knowledge of the deed was communicated to the creditors or that they assented to it, and thereby made it irrevocable as regards the trust for creditors.

Under an agreement for sale of Saskatchewan lands, providing for a transfer under the Real Property Act (Sask.) or for a deed without covenants other than as against encumbrances and further providing that the purchaser "accepts the title of the vendor," the purchaser is not entitled to compel the vendor to free the property from a caveat, for which the vendor was not responsible, filed against the lands by third parties, claiming to set aside the prior transfer to the party from whom the vendor had purchased.

Cole v. Cross, 1 D.L.R. 127, 22 Man. L.R. 1, 19 W.L.R. 780, 1 W.W.R. 458.

Where land is devised to the testator's widow for life, and then to the testator's sons living at the date of the death of the widow, but if during her life any sons shall die leaving children, the children are to take the share their parent would have taken if he had lived, the interest of such of the sons as may be alive at the death of their mother does not vest until such death, and the executors, widow and sons of the testator cannot make title to a purchaser during the lifetime of the widow.

Re Lane and Beacham, 7 D.L.R. 311, 4 O.W.N. 243, 23 O.W.R. 250.

WARRANTY OF TITLE—COVENANT—BREACH.

The limited statutory covenant of a right to convey (Real Property Conveyance Act, R.S.B.C. 1911, c. 47), does not constitute a warranty of title; only that the vendor has done no act to derogate from his title. REPUTATION BY PURCHASER—ESSENCE OF TIME.

If the vendor in a contract for the sale of land has no title in himself to the land sold and is not in a position to compel a conveyance of it from the registered owner, the purchaser may (as soon as he becomes aware of that fact) repudiate the contract, and he does not need to give the vendor time to secure title. [Bannerman v. Green, 1 S.L.R. 394; Bellamy v. Debenham, [1891] 1 Ch. 412; Krom v. Kaiser, 21 D.L.R. 700, applied.] If the vendor is in a position to compel a conveyance to himself and time is not of the essence of the contract the purchaser, on paying his last instalment of purchase-money, must give him a reasonable time to obtain the necessary conveyance.

EFFECT OF POSSESSION.

By taking possession and exercising ownership over property the purchaser waives any objection he may have to the title thereto; a mere imperfection of title, capable of being perfected, as distinguished from a total want of title, does not give the purchaser the right to repudiate the contract.

Rogerson v. Cosh, 37 D.L.R. 694, 24 B.C.R. 367, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 911.

POSSESSION—RESERVATION OF EASEMENT—"MODERN DESCRIPTION."

A break in the chain of title is no defect, if there is a sufficient possessory title, and no adverse rights are asserted; the reservation of an easement or right of way ceases to be a cloud on the title by a merger or union of the dominant and servient tenement; a vague description, as that used in previous deeds, is merely a defect in the form of conveyance, and the purchaser has merely the right to demand a "modern description."

Blackadar v. Hart, 35 D.L.R. 489, 51 N.S.R. 449.

EXPROPRIATION PROCEEDING NO GROUND FOR RESCISSION.

An expropriation of a portion of land which is subject to a contract of sale is not an act of the vendor as affecting his covenant for title, and will not entitle the purchaser to a rescission of the contract on that account. In an action by vendor on a contract for sale of land it is only where the purchaser has accepted the title or in his contract has expressly agreed to pay irrespective of the plaintiff having title, that the court will decree payment without the plaintiff having first shown a good title and thus satisfied the court that he is able to deliver the property if the defendant pays the purchase money; but the vendor is entitled to a decree fixing a time within which defendant must pay under a penalty of his rights under the contract being foreclosed and judicially declared to have ceased. TENDER OF DEED—TITLE PAPERS—CERTIFICATE OF SEARCH.

The seller of land may, under Quebec law, take action against the purchaser to recover the price without tendering any deed, but he must shew his title and stand ready to sign a deed when the buyer presents it in proper form. Though the seller of land may appropriately be held to exhibit his deeds and in case of a sale evidenced by deed to hand over such title papers as he actually holds and which relate solely to the land sold, he is under no obligation to have a certificate of search made by the registrar for the satisfaction of the buyer; the latter must himself have the requisite searches made at his own expense. EQUITABLE INTEREST UNDER UNREGISTERED TITLE—POSSESSION.

The plaintiff being the owner of all the shares of stock of an incorporated company agreed to sell all the assets of the company to the defendant and the cash payment was made and the shares transferred. The company's title to the lands occupied by it was an unregistered one derived through two unregistered transfers in the hands of the company's solicitor at the time of the sale. The transfers could not be registered as the description referred to and depended on the location of a highway not recognized by the land titles office. In an action for the balance of the purchase price, it was held that the defendant could not resist payment on the ground of breach of a warranty that the company owned the land it occupied, as the company was equitable owner of the lands and in possession with evidence thereof sufficient under the Statute of Frauds.

One H. purchased land under agreement of sale from the C.P.R. Co., who were registered owners. Subsequently H. assigned his agreement to S. who died. The executors of S. agreed to sell the land to the plaintiff. At the time of the execution of this agreement the executors were in default in payment of purchase-moneys to the C.P.R. Co., but nevertheless the estate of S. had a substantial interest in the land. The defendant obtained a judgment against the executors of S. under which they issued execution and lodged a caveat against the land covered by the agreement. In course of time the agreements for sale were completed by payment and the title to the land transferred to the plaintiff subject to the defendant's caveat, the certificate of title however having endorsed thereon a memorandum of the defendant's caveat and execution. Held, that the land was bound by the defendant's execution, and that the execution was therefore properly registered against it. [Foss v. Sterling Loan, 8 S.L.R. 289; *Weidman v. The exercise of a power of appointment of land, where the instrument creating the power does not provide for the manner in which it is to be executed, is not invalid because not made in the manner provided for in s. 24 of the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, R.S.O. 1914, c. 109. Where a mortgage is made to all of the executors and trustees under a will, there is no power in any less than all of them, who are living, to give a valid discharge of the mortgage, unless some special power has been conferred upon them to do so: where the will confers upon a majority of the executors power to discharge mortgages which under the will they are empowered to take, there is no reason in law why such a mortgage should not be so discharged. Quere, whether one of several living executors could alone give a valid discharge of a mortgage made to their testator. Objections made to the title to land, upon an agreement for sale and purchase, declared invalid.

INABILITY OF PURCHASER TO MAKE TITLE TO SMALL PORTION—MATERIALITY—SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE WITH COMPENSATION—APPLICATION OF RULE—COMPENSATION, HOW TO BE FIXED—RESALE BY VENDOR—ATTEMPT TO FORFEIT SALE-DEPOSIT—ACTION BY PURCHASER TO RECOVER—PROVISION IN AGREEMENT FOR RETURN OF DEPOSIT.

The plaintiff agreed to buy from the defendant and the defendant to sell to the plaintiff a dwelling-house with grounds and outbuildings, for $32,000. The plaintiff, upon the execution of the agreement, paid the defendant $3,000 as a sale-deposit. It turned out that the defendant could not make title to one part of the premises sold—a small but material part, as was found. The agreement provided that, on any objection to title being taken which the vendor should be unable or unwilling to remove, the agreement should be null and void and the cash-payment should be returned without interest. There was not on the part of either party, after the defect in title had been discovered, an offer of specific performance with compensation and a submission to an authoritative ascertainment of the proper compensation—and the plaintiff and defendant were wide apart in their conceptions of what a proper sum for compensation would be. Almost immediately after the day fixed for closing the defendant resold the land to a stranger, for $30,000, the contract providing that the vendor should not be called upon to make title to the small part. The plaintiff thereupon sued to recover his $3,000, which the defendant sought to retain—Held, that the defendant could not rescind the contract and forfeit the sale-deposit when he had not title to the property to be conveyed. Discussion of the equitable doctrine of specific performance with compensation, and review of the authorities. And held, that the defendant could not invoke the equitable doctrine at all, because, by the resale of the land, he had put it out of his power to resort to equity—he could not now give specific performance even with compensation. If the equitable doctrine were applicable, the defendant was not the one to fix compensation; and he never expressed his readiness to submit to specific performance subject to such compensation as might be deemed just. Held, also, that, when the agreement itself provides for what is to happen upon certain events, it alone is to be resorted to; there cannot be any recourse either to law or equity for any other remedy. [Ashton v. Wood, (1857), 3 Jur. N.S. 1164, followed.] And

In such a case the purchaser is entitled to counterclaim for specific performance by the removal of the caveat or, if that cannot be secured, damages in lieu of specific performance. RIGHT TO REPUDIATE—ESTOPPEL.

The defendant agreed to sell land to the plaintiff on instalments. Before payment of the last instalment the plaintiff discovered a caveat recorded by one who claimed an interest under a prior agreement from the defendant. In August, 1913, it was agreed that defendant should have 90 days in which to remove the caveat. After a final notice given to the defendant, action was commenced on February 13, 1914, for the rescission of the contract and return of the instalments paid. The caveat was removed on April 27, 1914.—Held, that though the plaintiff had given time for removal of the caveat, he did not lose his right to rescission of the contract and return of sums paid and interest if defendant failed to remove same within a reasonable time or time limited by a notice. Held, also, that such purchase money was a lien on the land.

A stipulation in a deed of sale by which the vendor gives notice to the purchaser of a mortgage covering the land sold, but promises to discharge it, constitutes a tacit authority from the purchaser to the vendor authorizing him to take, in his name, all necessary steps to that end. A judgment obtained by the purchaser of an unfinished house against his vendor to have determined the cost of the necessary work to complete the building on default of the vendor who agreed to do so, and who had given a mortgage on another lot to guarantee the completion of the work, is res judicata as to the value of the work against a third person in possession of the latter

RESTRICTIVE COVENANT—RIGHT OF PURCHASER—MEASURE OF DAMAGES.

In an action to recover the balance of the purchase price due upon an agreement for the sale of land, the defence that the plaintiff has no title or had none when the action was begun, is met by evidence that, before action, the owner had agreed to give the plaintiff a transfer, on payment to him of the amount due from the defendant to the plaintiff, and by filing in court a transfer to the defendant to be delivered to the defendant on the fulfilment of the above condition. Where an agreement for the sale of lots in a city block provides that the vendors, when selling the adjoining block, will provide with the purchaser thereof that the lots therein will be made to front in a specified direction, and subsequently to the making of such agreement the plan which includes the adjoining block is cancelled by the owner with the consent of the vendor, but without the consent of knowledge of the purchaser, the latter is entitled to damages, and in assessing such damages it will be assumed that such covenant is incapable of performance and never will be performed. A documentary title dating from a quit claim deed made in 1842, the land having been granted in 1784, without any documentary title connecting the original owner with the grantor in the deed of 1872, does not establish a possessory title within the meaning of a contract providing "a title by possession shall not be deemed a satisfactory title unless the purchaser so elects."

An agreement to convey land by a transfer under the Torrens system (Real Property Act, R.S.M. 1913, c. 171), free from all encumbrances, obligates the vendor to make good for taxes outstanding against the land under the Land Drainage Act, though not discovered until after the transfer has been completed. MORTGAGE—PROMISE TO DISCHARGE.

The fact that the vendor of property encumbered by an undischarged mortgage has not the legal power to compel the mortgagee to discharge the mortgage before the time fixed for closing the sale does not affect his ability to convey the fee if it can be shown that he had obtained a promise from the mortgagee to discharge the mortgage at the time of closing, and that promise has not in the meantime been revoked.

ENCUMBRANCE — RESTRICTIVE COVENANT—EXERCUTION.

The vendor's inability to convey land free from restrictive covenants, having been unsuccessfully set up and a decree of specific performance having been made, cannot be again raised, but the purchaser cannot be compelled to take the land until the effect of a fi. fa. placed in the sheriff's hands after the agreement of sale was made has been removed.

SALE OF LAND FREE FROM ENCUMBRANCE — UNPAID TAXES — DISPUTE AS TO LIABILITY — INDEMNITY.

Where the purchaser of land on learning that claim was made by the municipality for a tax returned by the tax collector as paid but subsequently alleged to have been so returned in error notwithstanding the issue of a tax certificate, stopped payment of a cheque given for the purchase price, and it appeared that the seller had assured him that the land was free from taxes, the latter's action to recover the amount of the cheque should be allowed only upon his indemnifying purchaser from liability for the disputed tax or on deducting a sufficient amount from the purchase money to be retained in court for such purpose until the determination of the validity of the tax claim.

Phillips v. Monteith, 11 D.L.R. 779, 4 O.W.N. 1420, 24 O.W.R. 743.

ENCUMBRANCES.

Where a contract of sale of real estate provided as terms of payment a specified sum "cash," and balance on deferred payments with privilege of paying the whole amount off at any time, the last of the deferred payments being intended to correspond with the maturity of an existing mortgage on the property, the fact that the mortgage was not subject to a like stipulation or privilege of advance payment and that in consequence the vendor could not fulfil his contract in respect of such privilege, constitutes a defect in title justifying the purchaser in withholding the payment not only of the intermediate deferred payments under the contract but of the portion stipulated as "cash," until the vendor shall provide an indemnity or equitable adjustment to protect the purchaser from having to pay more than his contract calls for because of the mortgagee's refusal to accept prepayment. [Gamble v. Gummerson, 9 Gr. 199; Cameron v. Carter, 9 O.R. 431; Armstrong v. Anger, 21 O.R. 100, followed.]

Knight v. Cushing, 1 D.L.R. 331, 4 A.L.R. 123, 20 W.L.R. 28.

Under an agreement for the sale of land wherein the vendor covenants to transfer the fee simple upon payment of the purchase price, the purchaser is justified in refusing to pay the balance until the vendor can give satisfactory assurance as to title and as to arrears of taxes. Where the parties are dealing at a distance from the registrar's office, the mere tender on the part of the vendor of an abstract from the land titles office, shewing him to be the registered owner, free from incumbrances, of the lots in question, is not sufficient. The purchaser is entitled to be protected against the risk of having to deal with incumbrances of any nature that might be recorded against the title between the time of delivery of the transfer to him and its recording at the registry office. He has the right to notify the vendor that he will appear at the registry office on the date of payment and will there tender the vendor the price on the vendor depositing with the registrar a proper transfer and the vendor's duplicate certificate of title under the Land Titles Act and on ascertaining from the records that the title is free of all incumbrances.

RESTRICTIVE COVENANT OR EASEMENT — REFERENCE TO PLAN.

A building restriction contained in a registered plan does not operate as a negative covenant or easement enforceable against and amongst all subsequent purchasers of lots described by reference to the plan; to constitute it such there must be a direct provision to that effect in the agreement or conveyance, and the easement must be created in accordance with provisions of the Land Titles Act.

COAL RESERVATION.

An agreement of sale of land, subject only to conditions and reservations in the grant from the Crown, is not enforceable if the coal therein is at the mine without the purchaser's knowledge, the property of a third party, even though the vendor procures and tenders to title to the coal with a transfer of the land.

COVENANT AGAINST ENCUMBRANCES.

A clause in a contract of sale, by which a vendor declares that the lots sold are free and clear from all patent and latent servitudes, is only a formal clause which adds nothing to the legal obligations binding on the vendor.

Langlois v. Charpentier, 47 Que. S.C. 97.

ENCUMBRANCE — AGREEMENT OF SALE — RIGHTS OF SUBPURCHASER.

An agreement for the sale of land cannot be enforced by a vendor who himself has merely an equitable interest in the land under a contract of sale from the registered owner; nor can such interest be properly considered an encumbrance so as to entitle him to require the subpurchaser to pay the money into court for the purpose of discharging it; such vendor must be in a position, as a condition precedent to his right for the purchase price, to deliver of himself a valid certificate of title. SEWERAGE TAX AS ENCUMBRANCE — RIGHT TO DEDUCTION.

A covenant in a deed warranting the property to be free from all encumbrances and that the vendor will pay taxes, local improvements and other assessments due on the property, entitles the purchaser to an allowance of the full amount of a sewerage rate charged against the land, notwithstanding that the sewerage tax is payable in annual instalments and that all instalments were paid to date.

Munroe v. McDonald, 23 D.L.R. 105, 49 N.S.E. 110.

SERVITUDE — RIGHT OF WAY — DUTY OF VENDOR TO DISCLOSE.

It is the duty of a vendor to make known to the purchaser the burdens and servitudes on the immovable sold and his reticence on this matter puts him in bad faith. When a vendor does not make known to his purchaser the existence of a servitude that he has himself created, he is bound by warranty against his personal act whatever may be the nature of this servitude. When a way communicating with the public road over all the length of a lot is apparent, the purchaser is justified in presuming that it was established for the benefit of the lot and not for use of the adjoining lots, even in the case where there is a fence at the end of the way on the side of the adjoining land.

AGREEMENT FOR SALE — INSTALMENT DUE UNDER — MORTGAGE AGAINST LAND — RIGHTS OF PARTIES.

SALE OF LAND — TITLE — INABILITY OF VENDOR TO GIVE TITLE TO COAL — RIGHT OF PURCHASER TO COMPENSATION — WAIVER — EVIDENCE OF.

Where an agreement for the sale of land does not provide for any reservation of the coal thereunder, the purchaser, in the absence of any waiver of his right thereto, is entitled to the coal or its value. [Innis v. Costello, 33 D.L.R. 602, 11 A.L.R. 109; Universal Land Security Co. v. Jackson, 33 D.L.R. 764, 11 A.L.R. 483; Pugh v. Knott, 36 D.L.R. 52, 12 A.L.R. 399, followed.] In order to establish waiver a clear and unequivocal intention of waiver must be shown in the evidence. The defendants, who were purchasers under an agreement for the sale of land, held not to have waived their rights to the coal thereunder and, their vendor being unable to give title to the coal and restituito in integrum not being possible, were held entitled to compensation, except as to the coal under certain lots already transferred direct to sub-purchasers it being held that the purchasers had accepted title thereto.

Crump v. McNeill, 14 A.L.R. 206, [1919] 1 W.W.R. 52.

SALE OF LAND — AGREEMENT FOR — EXISTENCE OF MORTGAGE — WHETHER DEFECT OF TITLE — RIGHT OF VENDOR TO SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

The existence of a mortgage against land agreed to be sold is a matter of conveying and not of title, and so long as the vendor is in a position to give title when the time for performance arrives, the mortgage does not deprive him of the right to a decree for specific performance.

Crump v. McNeill, 14 A.L.R. 206, [1919] 1 W.W.R. 52.

MORTGAGE — LIS PENDENS.

The existence of a mortgage on land contracted to be sold does not constitute a defect of title such as to give the purchaser the right to repudiate the contract; nor does it prevent the vendor from recovering instalments of the purchase price which have accrued due prior to the discharge of the mortgage, although the vendor may be required to give security for the ultimate conveyance of the lands contracted to be sold free from encumbrances. The filing of a lis pendens in the land registry office does not per se afford a cause of action to a purchaser of the land affected by the lis pendens, who has registered his agreement to purchase before the filing of the lis pendens.

Bostwick v. Coy, 21 B.C.R. 478.

VERBAL CONDITION, ON TRANSFERRING LAND, FOR USE OF LAND BY TRANSFER — LICENSE MERELY — REVOKED BY CONVEYANCE — "FRAUD" UNDER THE LAND TITLES ACT, 1917, SS. 59, 174, 194.

"Fraud" under ss. 59, 174, 194 of the Land Titles Act, 1917, means actual fraud, i. e., dishonesty of some sort, not what is called constructive or equitable fraud. Semble, knowledge by directors of one-company does not necessarily imply knowledge to another company of which they are also directors. A verbal condition by defendant on his transferring land that he was to have the use of the land for farming purposes until the land was required for residential purposes was considered by the court as merely a license which was revoked by a conveyance of the land without reserving the privilege to the licensee and knowledge of such agreement by one subsequently taking a transfer of the land could not be construed as fraud.

Dominion Fire-Brick & Clay Products v. Pollock, [1919] 2 W.W.R. 245.

VENDOR TENDERING TRANSFER TO PURCHASER — EXISTING EASEMENT — EASEMENT NOT NOTED AGAINST TITLE — RIGHT OF PURCHASER TO OBJECT TO TITLE — PURCHASER'S RIGHT TO SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE WITH ABATEMENT.

In pursuance of an agreement plaintiff tendered to defendant a transfer of land demanding payment of the moneys payable on delivery of transfer. Defendant refused payment on account of a certain easement against the land granted by plaintiff to the city of Edmonton for the purpose of a sewer which had been constructed under the land. The city had filed a caveat to protect said easement which however by some inadvertence was not noted on the title to the land in question. Plaintiff brought action against defendant for payment and subsequently obtained registration of transfer of said land to defendant who at the trial was the registered owner free from encumbrance upon the registered title. Held, plaintiff could not compel defendant to accept such title but defendant was entitled to specific performance with an abatement of the purchase-price. The city was joined as defendant (under r. 28) for the purpose of determining the amount of such abatement.

Rowland v. Ransford, [1919] 2 W.W.R. 486, reversing [1919] 1 W.W.R. 773.

INCUMBRANCES — WORKMAN'S LIEN — NOTICE.

An agreement of sale of real estate accompanied by delivery and actual possession, being equivalent to a sale, the notices mentioned in arts. 2013c and 2103, C.C. (Que.) for the keeping in force of a workman's lien are validly given to the party agreeing to purchase. These notices, not being required under pain of nullity, the party thereto entitled may renounce thereto, and the acknowledgment thereof made by him, in a petition to the court, is equivalent thereto. The denunciation of a charge upon real estate sold, made by the vendor coupled with his statement that the same is illegal and under reserve of his right to contest the same, does not relieve him from his obligation to guarantee his purchase.

Lavoie v. Desrosiers, 46 Que. S.C. 89.

ENCUMBRANCES — SERVITUDE NOT APPARENT — PROOF — EXTINCTION OF SERVITUDE — KNOWLEDGE BY PURCHASER AT THE TIME OF SALE — WARRANTY.

A purchaser of real estate who sets up against his vendor, in an action to recover the purchase price, the existence of a servitude not apparent, and fears disturbance in consequence, must establish the existence of the servitude by the production of the title creating the right—a copy certified by the registrar is not authentic, and is not proof. If it appears that the servient land has changed its intended purpose so much since the constitution of the servitude that it can no longer exercise it, it is thereby extinct. The knowledge of the existence of the servitude which the purchaser had at the time of the sale takes away his right to take action against the vendor under arts. 1519, 1535, C.C. (Que.). The registration of the deed creating the right, and mention of it in a certificate of search by the registrar given to the purchaser's notary, are equivalent to a declaration of the servitude which the vendor would have made to him. The vendor, against whom the purchaser sets up the existence of the servitude, has a right of action in warranty against his own vendor. He can, upon production of the purchaser's pleadings exercise the right of formal warranty, and compel his warrantor to intervene and take his part, and suit, or he can exercise the right of simple warranty and move that his warrantor be ordered to indemnify him for the loss which might be caused to him by the judgment to intervene, and, in this case, the rejection of the pleadings and the maintaining of the principal action, thereby puts an end to the action in warranty. But the vendor must not assume that his guarantor (especially after he has entered into litigation with his purchaser, and suit has been instituted) is bound to take his part and suit, and to indemnify him as well. A vendor sued as warrantor is in no way bound by the personal acts of his purchaser.

Legault v. Marcell, 45 Que. S.C. 481.

In a sale of land "with legal warranty" and "free and clear from encumbrances," the vendor is bound to deliver the land free from all debts and mortgages. If at the time of the sale the land is burdened with a hypothec, even prescribed, the vendor is obliged to discharge it at his own expense. If after being put en demeure the vendor does not discharge the hypothec, the purchaser has the right to have it discharged at the expense of the vendor; he may also demand the rescission of the contract of sale.

(§ I C—13a)—BUILDING RESTRICTIONS.

One who agrees to purchase land is not obliged to accept a conveyance containing building restrictions, where none were mentioned by the vendor prior to the making of the agreement of sale, and no restrictions were contained in the documents evidencing the agreement.

BUILDING RESTRICTIONS — SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

Failure of the vendor to specifically disclose building restrictions under the registered conveyance to him will not constitute an answer to an action for specific performance where the offer to purchase was prepared by the purchaser's agent on his own printed form containing a stipulation that the purchaser "takes the property subject to any covenants that run with the land."

(§ I C—17)—OBJECTIONS TO TITLE.

An outstanding incumbrance is a mere question of conveyance as distinguished from a question of title, and it is not ordinarily necessary for the purchaser to serve a formal objection to title in regard thereto. [Townsend v. Champernowne, 1 Y. & J. 538, approved.]

LAPSED AGREEMENT ESTABLISHING HIGHWAY OVER LAND.

An agreement stipulating the establishment of a highway across a piece of land which had been spent by lapse of time, or an action to remove such agreement as forming a cloud upon the title, does not affect the title to the land as to entitle the purchaser to a rescission of the contract of sale where the vendor is otherwise willing and able to make a good title.

SOLICITOR'S ABSTRACT.

Where there is no stipulation, either express or implied, to the contrary, in an agreement for the sale of land held under Torrens title system of registration in British Columbia, upon a certificate of title which is for less than the absolute and indefeasible title, the English rule of law requiring the vendor to furnish a solicitor's abstract of title to the purchaser if demanded, will apply. D. DEFICIENCY IN QUANTITY.

Description of land, minor encroachment, see Deeds, II C-30; Specific Performance, I E-30; correction of description; see Judgment, I G-55.

(§ I D—20)—COMPENSATION FOR DEFICIENCY.

After a conveyance has been made under a contract of sale of land, damages may be claimed for breach of covenant of title in respect of any portion of the land bargained for but not conveyed, and the grantee is also entitled to rectification; the value of the land not conveyed would be the measure of damages, in addition to any special damage within the contemplation of the parties when the contract was made; loss of profits through delay in registration of title caused by the vendor's negligence is too remote to be recovered as damages on a covenant for good title.

Bagley v. B.C. Southern R. Co., 37 D.L.R. 733, 24 B.C.R. 400.

DISCREPANCY.

Where a specific lot of land is pointed out by the vendor's agent to the vendee at the time of making the sale and the depth of the lot is measured by the parties and its limit pointed out to the purchaser as fixed by a certain disclosed boundary, the purchaser is entitled to a depth up to that boundary, although the agreement of sale recited that the depth was "about 90 feet more or less" and the actual depth was, as a matter of fact, 91 feet 7 inches; and such right is not waived by the purchaser's relying on the vendor's good faith; and inadvertently accepting a deed conveying only a 75 foot depth.

Wishart v. Bond, 10 D.L.R. 776, 24 O.W.R. 199, 4 O.W.N. 931.

ABATEMENT OF PRICE.

Where a person contracts to sell more land than that to which he is able to make a good title, the vendee is entitled to what the vendor actually has, with an abatement of the price in respect of that which cannot be conveyed.

Ontario Asphalt Block Co. v. Montreuil, 12 D.L.R. 223, 29 O.L.R. 534, 24 O.W.R. 838.

DESCRIPTION—VARIANCE BETWEEN SIGNED CONTRACT AND CONVEYANCE'S ENDORSEMENT—EFFECT.

Where in a contract the land sold is described in a certain way and the parties thereto have affixed their signatures to that contract, a subsequent purchaser is justified in relying on the description contained in the contract certified by the signatures of the parties as against a summarized description varying therefrom and unsigned, which had been endorsed by the conveyancer upon the contract.

stral numbers, buys the cadastral lots as they appear on the official plan and book of reference, and, should the area indicated in the title deed not correspond with that on the official plan, it is the latter which must prevail; C.C. (Que.) 2168.

Hamel v. Ross, 3 D.L.R. 860.

MISTAKE AS TO QUANTITY—IMPLIED WARRANTY—RESCISSIION.

The word "containing 271 acres" following the description of land as a definite part of a defined section, both parties being innocently mistaken as to the acreage which is in fact much less, do not amount to an implied warranty as to the quantity of land sold; after completion of the purchase, rescission will not be granted for deficiency.

DESCRIPTION—"MORE OR LESS"—QUANTITY—SALE EN BLOC—PAROL EVIDENCE.

When in a sale of real property the latter is described by its official number, with an indication that it contains 70 arpents "more or less," to be charged the profit or loss of the purchaser, the deed mentioning no definite price, the sale is of a thing certain and determined, en bloc and not by quantity, and if the purchaser has no claim against the vendor if the property contains only 55 arpents. An agreement after the sale, whereby the vendor consented to reduce the price if the property contained less than 70 arpents, cannot be proved by witnesses, and his consent to measure the land does not constitute a commencement of proof in writing.

DEDUCTION FROM PURCHASE PRICE.

In the absence of fraud in respect of a misrepresentation as to the width of a building lot, the purchaser sued for the balance of purchase money and not claiming rescission is entitled to an abatement for deficiency in area where the frontage was in fact only 30 feet while the contract called for a frontage of 33 feet, but the purchaser who has taken possession and made improvements covering the additional 3 feet to which title cannot be made is not entitled to damages by reason thereof in addition to such abatement where the sale was of an entire lot bearing a descriptive number under a registered plan of subdivision and the true boundary was shown by the registered plan and by the stakes on the ground.

Allen v. Crowe, 8 O.W.N. 454.

REPRESENTATION BY VENDOR OF "SUBSTANTIAL CORRECTNESS" OF DESCRIPTION—FAILURE TO SHOW "SUBSTANTIAL CORRECTNESS"—SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE REFUSED.

On an exchange whereby plaintiff sold to defendant land which defendant had not seen, plaintiff represented the "substantial correctness" of certain statements and diagram did not represent an area nearly so great as 25 acres, and also that the statement of there being "some rocks" on the land did not correctly describe the fact that there were a number of large boulders called "haystack rocks" and certain rocky ridges, and held that these were very material variations from the statements made and, plaintiff having failed to show that his representations were substantially correct, his claim for specific performance should be dismissed.

Hollister v. Gehrman, [1919] 1 W.W.R. 369.

AGREEMENT DESCRIBING BOUNDARIES WITH-OUT REFERENCE TO LENGTH—OVER-ESTIMATE OF LENGTH BY VENDOR—VENDOR FURNISHING PLAN OF, AND STAKING, THE LAND—PURCHASER BUILDING IMPROVEMENTS BEYOND AREA ACTUALLY DESCRIBED IN AGREEMENT—FAULT OF VENDOR—PURCHASER GRANTED RECTIFICATION WITH SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

Defendant agreed to sell plaintiff certain land included in a triangular area formed by the production of two street lines and another street intersected thereby. Defendant gave to plaintiff a calculation of measurement which as subsequently ascertained were much more than the actual boundaries of the area so described. In a receipt given to plaintiff, defendant agreed to "furnish rough plan and set the stakes on the property." For this purpose defendant employed V. V.'s plan also showed measurements which he claimed were within the property as staked by V. and as shown on V.'s plan, but which were actually outside the area as described. A transfer was registered which inadvertently omitted some of the land and a transfer of further land was given but plaintiff protested that he was not getting all that he had bought and refused to accept said transfer. At the trial Scott, J. gave judgment for rectification of the agreement with specific performance. Appeal therefrom was dismissed on even division of the court. The intention of the parties was to buy and sell a defined area as shown by lines to be drawn on the map, and there was no mistake in that respect which was the only question raised. There was a mistake by both parties as to the size of the area as indicated by its boundary measurements which however were only given as approximate and not as binding, there was no clear evidence of staking not being in accordance with described boundaries or of the improvements not being within said boundaries, in any case plaintiff's only remedy would be in an action for damages for breach of the agreement to have proper plan and staking, the representation of measurement would not support an action for deceit and a claim for rescission did not arise. The judgment at trial was right. Plaintiff had seen and was relying on V.'s staking (for which defendant was responsible) and signed the formal agreement supposing the description conformed to that. Franz v. Hansen [1918] 2 W.W.R. 40, is not applicable as the transaction was not completed by conveyance. If plaintiff's remedy were not properly a conveyance of the additional land but compensation or damages the amount ought to be ascertained by a reference. The case is distinguishable from Franz v. Hansen, supra, the contract is still executory, and compensation can be awarded, this right being based upon the equitable doctrine of mistake. Also the covenant to stake the property carried with it obligation to do the same in such a way as to not damage the purchaser. The writing represents the parcel intended to be sold. Plaintiff's claim for rectification fails but upon payment of costs he should be entitled to amend and to a new trial limited to the claim for compensation.

The buyer of a corner lot who, previous to the sale, has examined the plans of the property upon which appeared an homologated city line marking off a strip of land of 20 feet along a street facing the immovable to be expropriated by the city of Montreal, which strip was not sold with the lot, has no recourse in warranty against the vendor, if the city abolishes the homologated line or for error of substance of the thing bought; or if on that account the projected corner disappears, even if the sale was made with a guarantee of fournir et faire valoir. Conjectures and motives do not form part of the contract of sale and remain at the risk of the buyer, except in certain cases where the buyer was induced in error by fraud.

Knowles v. Rabinovitch, 56 Que. S.C. 306.

DESCRIPTION—"MORE OR LESS."

A lot of land sold under the description of an official number, with metes and bounds, as containing 26 feet frontage by a depth of 100 feet more or less, is a sale of a thing certain and determined, without regard to the contents thereof, and there can be no ground for an action in warranty should it be found that the lot has only 24 feet and one inch frontage and 24 feet and six inches on the rear line.

Gingras v. Gariépy; Gariépy v. Hébert; Hébert v. Déguise, 50 Que. S.C. 88.

The buyer of an immovable described by its number on the official plan and in the book of reference thereto, for the registration of real rights, with an erroneous statement that it is 40 feet in width by 135 feet in depth, whereas the latter is only 90 feet, is the buyer of a certain determinate thing, and has no action quanto minoris against the vendor, more particularly in the case of urban property consisting entirely of buildings whose extent and boundaries are plainly visible.

(§ I D—21)—RESCISSON FOR DEFICIENCY.
In cases of sales of immovables the purchaser may, in case he is evicted, repudiate the sale tainted with a cause of eviction, but, until judgment is rendered declaring the sale set aside, the vendor may prevent the setting aside by furnishing the purchaser with a good title or causing the eviction to cease, and the purchaser is presumed at law to consent to remain proprietor until the sale is annulled; so where, in an action in vacation of a sheriff's sale based upon defects in title, the vendor before judgment is granted obtains a good title to the property sold, the buyer must accept the same and the sale will not be set aside.

Swan v. Eastern Townships Bank, 8 D. L.R. 312, 22 Que. K.B. 142.

Where a vendor properly rescinds an agreement for the sale of land, and thereafter the purchaser registers the agreement, and the vendor, without knowledge of such registration, agrees to sell the land to another, the first purchaser will be compelled to execute a release of the registered agreement.

Jewer v. Thompson, 3 D.L.R. 628, 22 O. W.R. 610, 3 O.W.N. 1122.

Article 1502, C.C. (Que.), which provides for the abandonment of a sale of land by the purchaser and recovery from the vendor of the price, if paid, where there is a deficiency of quantity so great as to raise the presumption that the purchaser would not have bought if he had known of it, is applicable only for the protection of an actual purchaser of an immovable property and not for the protection of the transferee of a right of redemption conferred by a "contre-lettre" given by the transferee back to the transferor concurrently with the making by the latter of an absolute conveyance by the terms of which "contre-lettre" the transferor was given the privilege of redeeming the property within a fixed period at a certain price but was under no obligation to do so. The remedy of the purchaser of a mere right of redemption which he has the option to exercise but without any obligation to redeem in respect of a deficiency in quantity in the land, is dependent upon art. 902 and upon proof being made of error, fraud, violence or fear under said statute.

E. RESCISSON OF CONTRACT.

Rescission for innocent misrepresentation, see Sale, III C—72.

Rescission for fraud, agent, see Principal and Agent, III—30.

(§ I E—25)—NOTICE—BONA FIDE DELAY.

Where an agreement for the sale of land stipulates that, in case of default by the vendee, rescission by the vendor is to be effected by a prescribed written notice, such notice is a condition precedent to cancellation by the vendor, and a short delay in making the down payment (pending negotiations for a sale between the same parties of contiguous land to obviate a restrictive building clause in the original agreement) is not ground for rescission, although time was expressly of the essence of the agreement, it appearing that the vendee was always ready and willing to carry out his contract. [Cushing v. Knight, 6 D.L.R. 820, 46 Can. S.C.R. 555, distinguished.]

Where time is expressly made of the essence of the contract in an agreement for the sale of land to be paid for in four instalments, and two of the instalments have been paid, and default is made in the payment of the other two, though one-half of the purchase price has been paid by the purchaser, the vendor is justified in rescinding the agreement where the default continues for about three years from the time the last instalment was due.

McGreedy v. Hodder, 8 D.L.R. 755, 4 O.W.N. 536, 23 O.W.R. 699.

Where the purchaser in a contract for the sale of a block of land, before completing his payments and acquiring title, contracted to sell a lot from the same to a subpurchaser and then defaulted in his payments, after which he directed the subpurchaser to pay instalments of purchase money to the owner, who refused to take payment from or to give title to the subpurchaser unless the latter paid a bonus in addition to what he had contracted with the original purchaser, an agreement to pay such bonus will not be set aside on the ground that such circumstances constitute duress nor will a mortgage given thereby for the subpurchaser to the owner be declared invalid.

Where time was not expressly or impliedly the essence of a contract for the sale of real estate and the vendor failed afterwards to give the purchaser such reasonable notice to complete the contract within a definite and specified period as would make time the essence thereof, and the delay in completing the contract on the part of the purchaser was due to his waiting to hear as to an application he had made with the knowledge of the vendor for a loan on the property for the purpose of completing payment therefor, a determination of the contract by the vendor was unjustifiable, and the purchaser would be entitled to recover any special damage he had suffered by reason of having entered into possession and made extensive and costly improvements with the knowledge and approval of the vendor. A cash payment $200 was too large an amount in comparison with the total price $1,350 to be paid to be deemed a mere deposit, but was payment on the contract which the purchaser was entitled to recover from the vendor's unjustifiable determination of the contract by entering into possession of the property and reselling the same. [March v. Wells, 45 Can. S.C.R. 338, applied.]

One who agrees to take a transfer of a half section of land free and clear of all encumbrances, is not obliged to accept one subject to a highway across the land, which was not shown on the Government survey.

Where, under an agreement for the sale of land a purchaser by his refusal to comply with an express provision of the document requiring a certain down payment on the purchase price repudiates the agreement thereby entitling the vendor to rescind, and where the vendor thereupon gives reasonable notice of rescission, and at the expiry of the time given the purchaser still refuses to comply, the contract is at an end and the purchaser cannot later insist upon specific performance. Under an agreement for the sale of land where the property is of a speculative character and time therefore of the essence of the agreement, where the purchaser has refused to comply with an express requirement of the contract for a large down payment on the purchase price, a four-day notice by the vendor for payment, or, in the alternative, for cancellation, is reasonable, and, on the purchaser continuing in default beyond the period so fixed by the notice, the vendor is entitled to treat the agreement as cancelled.

CONTRACT TO PURCHASE—RESCISSION FOR DEFECT IN TITLE.

A contract purchaser of land is entitled to rescind his agreement for a defect in the vendor's title, consisting in the fact that a mortgagee who exercised a power of sale under which the vendor derives title was administrator of the mortgagor's estate; it being his duty, as administrator, to satisfy the mortgage out of personal assets of the estate and otherwise look after the interests of the estate.

RESCISSION FOR NONPAYMENT OF PURCHASE MONEY—VENDOR'S DEFAULT IN TENDERING DEED.

A contract for the sale of land cannot be terminated by the vendor for default in payment of the purchase money when due although time was declared to be the essence of the agreement, where the vendor, who by the terms of the contract, was to furnish a deed at his own expense, tendered one executed by a third person who held title to the land, without having submitted a draft deed to the vendee's solicitor as had been demanded; the purchaser was entitled to a conveyance containing the vendor's own covenants, and not merely the covenants of such third parties.

AGREEMENT TO CONVEY—BREACH BY PURCHASER—NOTICE OF CANCELLATION.

Massey v. Walker, 11 D.L.R. 278, 23 Man. L.R. 563, 24 W.L.R. 168, 4 W.W.R. 557.

RESCISSIION—NOTICE OF—BRINGING ACTION TO RECOVER PAYMENT AS.

The commencement of an action to recover money paid on an agreement to purchase land, on the ground that the vendor was without title, is a sufficient notice of rescission by the vendee to cast on the vendor the obligation of shewing in defence that he has a good title.

DEFICIENCY IN QUANTITY.

Where a vendor, believing that he is the owner, agrees to sell a house and lot, and partial payments have been made by the purchaser, rescission of the agreement, and repayment of the money, will not be ordered because the house encroaches on adjoining land if the vendor has obtained title to the land encroached upon, and tendered it to the purchaser. Greer v. Clark, 27 D.L.R. 699, 9 A.L.R. 535, 34 W.L.R. 543, 10 W.W.R. 659.

USE OF PROPERTY PREVENTED BY MUNICIPAL BY-LAW.

Rescission of a sale and the recovery of purchase money paid on account thereof cannot be had merely because the prospective use of the property is rendered impossible by a municipal by-law.

Milk Farm Products & Supply Co. v. Buist, 26 D.L.R. 459, 35 O.L.R. 325.

LACHES—SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE—RETURN OF DEPOSIT—RIGHTS OF PARTIES.

A purchaser of land under an agreement of sale who has never in fact abandoned or receded from his contract, but who has by reason of laches or otherwise neglected himself of the right to specific performance is, in case the vendor refuse to accede to specific performance, prima facie entitled to a return of the deposit or part payment. But where the vendor is ready and willing to complete but the purchaser is unwilling to remedy his default, such purchaser is not entitled to a return of the purchase-money where the agreement has not actually been rescinded. [March v. Banton, 45 Can. S.C.R. 338, applied.]

Lawton v. Lindsay, 46 D.L.R. 53, 12 S.L.R. 203, [1919] 2 W.W.R. 71.

A representation by an agent of a vendor of land, which is merely an expression of opinion, and not a misrepresentation of a material ascertainable fact, does not, in the absence of fraud, constitute ground for the cancellation of the agreement of sale.

A statement by the agent of a vendor that land adjoining that sold to the purchaser had been reserved by a railway for trackage and other purposes, when honestly made, is not, in the absence of fraud, such a material inducement to the formation of the contract as would justify cancellation of the agreement of sale, where it later appears that such was not the case. [Dunn v. Alexander, 2 D.L.R. 353, distinguished.] Jackson v. People's Trust Co., 7 D.L.R. 384, 22 W.L.R. 325, 3 W.W.R. 99.

AGREEMENT THAT VENDOR MAY CANCEL ON DEFAULT—CONSEQUENCES—COURT OF EQUITY—RELIEF—PROMPT TENDER OF AMOUNT IN DEFAULT—COSTS.

Where a purchaser of land upon deferred payments has contracted that his vendor may cancel the contract and retain moneys paid on account of the purchase price he can avoid this consequence only by satisfying a court of equity that he should be relieved from the forfeiture caused by his default; this he may do by promptly tendering the amount in default on receiving notice of the cancellation and if this be not accepted, by promptly coming to the court for relief.

Where a vendor cancels an agreement for sale of land pursuant to a clause permitting him on default to do so and to retain the moneys paid on account of the purchase price, he cannot afterwards sue for the purchase money nor is he entitled to ask the court to determine the contract which he has determined himself; but he may ask the court to decree that he had validly determined the contract and that it therefore no longer affected his title which declaratory judgment if uncontested must be obtained at his own expense; sensible, an alternative claim for rescission may well be pleaded in case it should appear that the cancellation notice was defective. [Wilson v. Abbott, 18 D.L.R. 34, followed.]

Moore v. Stewart, 20 D.L.R. 700, 7 S.L.R. 434, 7 W.W.R. 991.

NOTICE OF RESCISSIION—TWO VENDORS—NOTICE BY ONE.

A notice to rescind a contract of sale of land for default must be executed by both vendors where the agreement stipulates for execution of any such notice "by the vendors." [Hedican v. Crow's Nest Pass Lumber Co., 17 D.L.R. 161, applied.]

EFFECT AS TO OBLIGATION TO PAY PURCHASE MONEY.

Where a vendor by his own act rescinds a contract for the sale of land, the purchaser's obligation to pay the purchase price thereby ceases.

Wilson v. Abbott, 18 D.L.R. 34, 7 S.L.R. 107, 28 W.L.R. 437, 6 W.W.R. 1097.

CONTRAVENING STATUTE — SUBDIVISION LANDS—REGISTRATION—PARI DELICTO.

The provisions of subs. 7 of s. 124 of the Land Titles Act (Alta.) 1911-12, c. 4, s. 15 (25), amending s. 124, c. 24, 1906, as amended by s. 12 of c. 2, of 1910, sess. 2), prohibiting the sale of land according to any townsite or subdivision plan until after the same has been duly registered, are directed against the vendor for protection of the purchaser, and though the effect of the statute is to render void any sale made in contravention of it, the purchaser cannot be deemed in pari delicto with the vendor, and is therefore not deprived of the remedy of rescission to recover back moneys paid in virtue of the agreement of sale. [Lapointe v. Messier, 17 D.L.R. 347, 49 Can. S.C.R. 271, applied.]

SALE OF LAND—DEFAULT—FORFEITURE OF SUMS PAID—JUDGMENT—COSTS.

Young v. Polymeki, 5 D.L.R. 887, 4 O.W.N. 94, 23 O.W.R. 56.

MISTAKE IN QUANTITY—RIGHTS OF PARTIES.

Where the vendor of property has made an error in the description in good faith and upon discovering it offers to rescind the contract, the purchaser is not entitled to refuse this offer and ask for a reduction in the price.

Friedman v. Mageau, 24 D.L.R. 224, 24 Que. K.B. 21.

MISREPRESENTATION.

To justify rescission of a contract for sale of land on the ground of misrepresentation there must have been a definite assertion of alleged fact as distinguished from a vague affirmation of the excellence of the property:

Stewart v. Cunningham, 22 D.L.R. 845, 21 B.C.R. 255, 8 W.W.R. 579.

NECESSITY OF MAKING RESTITUTION.

In order to claim rescission of his agreement to purchase lands the purchaser must have a present ability to make restitution; it is not enough that he alleges he can get in the interest in them that he has sold and then make restitution in case the decree gives him that relief.

Boydell v. Haines, 21 D.L.R. 371, 21 B.C.R. 171, 8 W.W.R. 17, 30 W.L.R. 842.

RIGHT TO CHATTELS UPON CANCELLATION OF AGREEMENT.

By an agreement in writing the plaintiff sold to the defendants certain lands and chattels. The defendants took possession of both, but having made default in payments provided by the agreement, the plaintiff brought an action and obtained a decree for the foreclosure of the agreement for sale, which was afterwards made absolute, and the agreement for sale cancelled. No mention was made of the chattels in this action. The plaintiff seized one horse, and then brought this action for detinue. The defendants defended and then counter-claimed for the one horse taken. Held, that the agreement for sale was an absolute sale so far as the chattels were concerned, and that the property in the same had passed to the defendants. The agreement being cancelled, the plaintiff could not recover the price of the chattels or damages for their detention. That the defendants were entitled to recover the value of the horse seized by the plaintiff. Churchill v. McRae, 7 S.L.R. 190.

INTERESTS OF SUBPURCHASERS — RESTITUTION — HOW AFFECTED BY OCCUPATION.

The rule as to "restitutio in integrum" is, that a person seeking relief by way of rescission cannot succeed if restitution is prevented by his own act or default; but mere occupation of the land sold, or a portion thereof, is not a bar, so long as the land has not been so wasted that the depreciation in value cannot be met by compensation, nor because of interests acquired by subpurchasers in the absence of notice of such subsales to the vendor.

Plainview Farming Co. v. Transcontinental Townsite Co., 25 D.L.R. 594, 25 Man. L.R. 677, 9 W.W.R. 247, 32 W.L.R. 499.

DELAY—KNOWLEDGE OF DEFECT.

A vendor must be in a position to make a good conveyance at the date fixed for completion; if he fails to do so, the purchaser may, on discovering the vendor's lack of title, repudiate the contract, but he must do so forthwith or with reasonable promptness, but where the purchaser knew of the defect, and thereafter himself tried to sell the land made payments and tendered his mortgage upon it, and in all things acted as though the contract was valid, it is not open to him to repudiate on that ground alone. [Murrell v. Good-year, 1 D.F. & J. 432; Re Bryant, 44 Ch. D. 218; Re Head's Trustees, 45 Ch. D. 310; Re Thompson, 44 Ch. D. 492, applied.]

Robinson v. Moffatt, 25 D.L.R. 462, 3 O.L.R. 9.

TOWNSITE SUBDIVISION LOTS — VENDOR'S NONCOMPLIANCE AS TO FILING PLAN.

By subs. 7 of s. 124 of the Land Titles Act it is provided that: "No lots shall be sold under agreement for sale or otherwise according to any townsite or subdivision plan until after the same has been duly registered in the Land Titles office for the registration district in which the land shown on said plan is situate, providing that this section shall not apply to any plan now in existence and approved by the minister." Held, that where this section is not complied with, the purchaser has a right to repudiate the contract. [Veilleux v. Boulevard Heights, 20 D.L.R. 858, 24 D.L.R. 881, 8 A.L.R. 16, followed.] Held, also, that the section covers the case of an agreement for a sale as distinguished from a completed sale, and therefore the prohibition of the statute is not avoided by registration of the plan before the transfer is made. Definition of "sold" in Corwallis v. C.P.R. Co., 19 Can. S.C.R. 702, and R. v. C.P.R. Co., [1911] A.C. 328, 80 L.J.P.C. 125, held not applicable.

Abbott v. Ridgeway Park, 8 A.L.R. 314, 30 W.L.R. 667, 7 W.W.R. 1280.

REFUSAL TO CONVEY.

A refusal to convey land as agreed, because of a dispute as to the liability for taxes, does not amount to a repudiation of the contract.

Tarrabain v. Ally, 36 D.L.R. 546.

DELAY—JUS TERTII.

Delay in repudiating a contract for the sale of land after discovery of misrepresentation will not prejudice a party seeking rescission, if he has done nothing to affirm the contract after the discovery, and the rights of innocent third parties are not affected by the delay. [Clough v. London & North Western R. Co., L.R. 7 Ex. 26, followed.]

Consolidated Investments v. Acres, 32 D.L.R. 579, 12 A.L.R. 210, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 1426.

CANCELLATION BY VENDOR — RIGHTS OF SUBPURCHASERS — DAMAGES — ENTICING AWAY SERVANT—COUNTERCLAIM—MONEY LENT—COSTS.

Diamond v. Western Realty Co., 12 O.W.N. 226.

RESOLUTORY CLAUSE.

The effect of annulment ipso facto of a promise of sale, in virtue of a resolutive clause, is to make void and without effect all the privileges and mortgages registered against the immovable by the creditors of the holder of the promise of sale.

Gadbois v. Denovan, 52 Que. S.C. 81.

NO TITLE—REPUTATION BY PURCHASER.

If the vendor in a contract for sale of land has no title in himself, or is not in a position to compel the registered owner to supply him with title, the purchaser may, as soon as he becomes aware of the fact, repudiate the contract and need not give the vendor time to secure title. [Forrer v. Nash, 35 Beav. 167, 55 E.R. 858; Bellamy v. Debenham, [1891] 1 Ch. 412, followed.]

PURCHASER'S DEFAULT—NOTICE OF CANCELLATION—RETURN OF PART PAYMENT.

Where the real cause of the rescission of a contract to purchase land is the purchaser's default, and such purchaser does not seek specific performance nor submit his willingness to carry out the contract, he is not entitled to a return of the part payments made, when the vendor has given formal notice of cancellation. [Brickles v. Snell, [1916] 2 A.C. 599, 30 D.L.R. 31; Steedman v. Drinkle, [1916] 1 A.C. 275, 25 D.L.R. 420, distinguished.]

EXCHANGE OF LANDS—TIME FOR COMPLETION — EXTENSION — WAIVER — PROVISION IN CONTRACT FOR RESCISSION—OBJECTION TO TITLE—QUESTION OF CONVEYANCE—NEGOTIATIONS AS TO OBJECTION—LAPSE OF TIME BEFORE ATTEMPTED EXERCISE OF POWER TO RESCIND.

Markle v. Mackay, 14 O.W.N. 280.

NOTICE OF.

A stipulation in an agreement for the sale of land providing for notice "by the vendors" in writing if they elect to rescind for default in payment, is to be construed strictly.

Pitt River Lumber Co. v. Shaake, 17 D.L.R. 768, 28 W.L.R. 299, 6 W.W.R. 994.

RETURN OF DEPOSIT—DEFECTIVE TITLE—DEFECT REMEDIED — COUNTERCLAIM — SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

The purchaser's action to rescind and for a return of his deposit on the ground that the vendor was unable to make title at the time fixed by the contract for closing when time was of the essence of the contract, is not defeated by shewing that the defect had been cured since the issue of the writ; but if the defendant not only defends but counterclaims for specific performance the title may ordinarily be made good pendente lite subject to any defence available to the counterclaim.

LANDS REPRESENTED AS "HIGH AND DRY"—RELIANCE UPON—IMMATERIAL REPRESENTATION, WHEN.

To justify the rescission of an agreement of sale of subdivision lands for alleged misrepresentation that they were "high and dry," it must appear both that the representation was untrue and that the other party acted on it and was thereby induced to some extent to make the purchase.

Gagnon v. Nelson, 19 D.L.R. 32.

PURCHASER'S ABANDONMENT—PART PAYMENTS—FORFEITURE.

Where under an agreement for the sale of lands the purchaser after paying part of the price abandons the contract, the vendor may subsequently cancel the contract on the ground of such abandonment without refunding the part payment already received from the purchaser; the right of retention by the vendor upon the purchaser's abandonment of the contract is not limited to the deposit, but extends to subsequent payments on account of purchase money.

Vancouver Land & Improvement Co. v. Pillsbury Milling Co., 15 D.L.R. 775, 26 W.L.R. 880, 5 W.W.R. 1324, 19 B.C.R. 40.

SALE OF LOT BY PROPOSED PLAN—CONVEYANCE BY METES AND BOUNDS—EFFECT.

The fact that the agreement of sale refers to the land as a lot of a particular number according to a subdivision plan "to be registered" and that a deed with that description cannot be recorded until after the recording of the plan will not entitle the vendee to rescind on vendor's failure to record the plan, if the vendor offers a deed which can be recorded containing a description of the same land by metes and bounds.

Fraser v. Columbia Valley Lands, 19 D.L.R. 1, 20 B.C.R. 508, 30 W.L.R. 327, 7 W.W.R. 780.

PROMISE OF SALE—CANCELLATION—SERVITUDE — DAMAGES — C.C. QUE. 1013, 1018, 1065, 1073, 1075, 1472, 1478, 1536.

An instrument in which a vendor states that he sells his land for a fixed price, of which a part is payable on the signing of the contract, without actual possession, is only an agreement for sale, notwithstanding that the word "sale" is used, the instrument only declaring a conditional and suspensive agreement. C.C. Que. art. 1536, respecting the dissolution of a sale, does not apply to an agreement of sale, which is governed in this respect by art. 1065, under which an agreement for sale can be cancelled when the purchaser refuses to fulfil the obligations thereby imposed on him. A purchaser of land who, at the time of sale, has knowledge of a right-of-way which a railway company possesses over the land, cannot take advantage of this servitude to refuse to execute his contract. When a purchaser refuses to sign a deed of sale of real property which he has bought, and thus forces his vendor to have the agreement for sale which he had given him cancelled by the courts, the purchaser is liable for the damages caused to the vendor for loss of time, travelling, costs of deed of sale, and steps and proceedings.

MENTAL INCAPACITY OF VENDOR—INTERDICTION—INSCRIPTION EN DROIT.

In an action to set aside a sale on account of the mental alienation of the vendor, subsequently interdicted, the defendant cannot attack the validity of the interdiction without bringing into the cause the person on whose petition it was granted; and an inscription en droit may properly be filed against the allegations of the declaration relating to such demand.

Charland v. Bissonnette, 47 Que. S.C. 202.

HYPOTHEC—RADIATION—RESILIATION OF SALE.

If in certain cases a purchaser can demand that his vendor shall radiate the hypothecs which affect the property purchased he should ask for a condemnation for damages, or for resiliation of the sale, in case the vendor should fail to do what is ordered; if he does not take conclusions for that purpose, his application for radiation cannot be granted as the judgment that he would obtain could not be executed Nemo potest cogi ad factum.

Dorion v. Jodoin, 47 Que. S.C. 414.

HYPOTHEC—RADIATION—OFFER OF PAYMENT.

One who makes an offer of money to obtain the reconveyance of an immovable, should, if he is sued, deposit into court the amount of his offer, even when the holder of the property has placed a hypothec upon it, in order to demand the radiation of the latter.

Giguère v. Colas, 48 Que. S.C. 198.

DELAY OF VENDOR IN REMOVAL OF CAVEAT—RESCISSION.

Ballantyne v. Hettinger, 7 W.W.R. 526, 29 W.L.R. 937. [Affirmed in 8 W.W.R. 440.]

Where an agreement for the purchase of land contained three different modes of cancellation, one of which was that on default the vendor might, with or without notice to the purchaser, cancel the contract. Held, that, upon plaintiff making default, the defendant had a right to select any one of the three modes, and that a notice pursuant to that above mentioned, personally served upon the defendant, was valid and effectual as a cancellation of the agreement, subject to the power of the court to give equitable relief if the circumstances should warrant it. The defendant having, in his statement of defence, submitted to redemption by the plaintiff upon payment of the arrears and certain expenses, judgment was given accordingly, allowing the plaintiff two months after the Master's report to pay the amount found due by him and costs, and in default that the agreement should be cancelled.

Perks v. Scott, 21 Man. L.R. 570.

MISREPRESENTATION—AFFIRMATION BY PURCHASER AFTER KNOWLEDGE—ELECTION—DAMAGES—SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE ORDERED WHEN NOT PLEASED.

In an action for rescission of 4 agreements for sale of lands on the ground of fraudulent misrepresentation, and for damages, the Trial Judge found fraud on the part of the defendant, but also found that the plaintiff had, before launching the action, elected to abide by the contracts after full knowledge of the fraud. He refused rescission, and assessed damages at the amount of the difference between the purchase price and the actual value of the lands when purchased. There was no plea for specific performance of the agreements for sale, but a reference was ordered to inquire into the title to the lands and to take accounts on the basis of deducting from the amount of damages found the balance due on the purchase price under the agreements for sale, that there be judgment for the plaintiff for the balance, and that the defendant execute a conveyance of the land in question in the plaintiff's favour. Held, on appeal, that the judgment below be affirmed with the variation that there should be no order as to specific performance of the agreements for sale, as there was no such plea in the statement of claim, nor was it raised on the trial. An action for specific performance lies only where there has been a refusal to perform; there has been no refusal to perform, and no such issue has been raised.

Williams v. Shields, 25 B.C.R. 198.

ELECTION OF REMEDIES—CROP AGREEMENT.

During the pendency of an action for specific performance under an agreement for sale of lands on half crop payments in which the plaintiff (vendor) asked for foreclosure, the plaintiff obtained from the Local Master an order declaring that one-half of the grain grown on the land for the current year was the property of the plaintiff, and directing the defendant to deliver the same up to the plaintiff, or to deposit in court the storage receipts therefor. Held, that the share of the crop was a means provided for securing payment of the purchase money; that the plaintiff could not in the same action obtain the purchase price or a portion of the purchase price and also rescission, but must elect which remedy he will pursue, and the order of the Local Master was therefore set aside with costs.

Bateman v. Romphf, 9 S.L.R. 122, 34 W.L.R. 62.

CONDITION OF AGREEMENT—SALE OF LAND—PAYMENT ON ACCOUNT OF PRICE—CANCELLATION—NOTICE—RETURN OF MONEY PAID—RESCISSION—FORM OF ACTION—PRACTICE.

March v. Banton, 45 Can. S.C.R. 338, 20 W.L.R. 322.

Where the consideration stated in a transfer of land is merely nominal, the onus is cast upon the transferee to prove that valuable consideration was given. If the Court of Appeal is satisfied that the Trial Judge erred in any of his conclusions on the facts, such court may overrule such finding, and give judgment according to the facts as found by the Court of Appeal. Where, at the time of the inception of the fraud no certificate of title had issued for the land in question, the provisions of s. 173 of the Land Titles Act did not apply to prevent the court exercising its jurisdiction, the provisions thereof only applying where certificate of title has issued.

Coventry v. Annable, 4 S.L.R. 426.

TITLE—MORTGAGE—CERTIFICATE OF REGISTRAR—MISTAKE—COSTS—C.C. QUE. ACTS. 2177, 2178—C.C.P. ART. 549.

The holder of an agreement for a sale of land, with the right to obtain a title of sale when all his payments are made, and who after having fulfilled his obligations, discovers on the evidence of a certificate of the registrar, that this property is burdened with a mortgage, cannot for this reason obtain the cancellation of the agreement for sale and the repayment of the money paid, if in fact this certificate is erroneous and there is no mortgage on the land. But in these circumstances the purchaser being justified in having commenced his action, and the vendor, not having set out the true fact, having made in his defence some allegation of bad faith and having offered a title which the purchaser had the right to refuse, he will be condemned to pay all the costs.

Grenier v. Gendreau, 55 Que. S.C. 370.

The hidden defects, in the sense of the law, in the matter of the sale of a house are not those which the vendee did not know, but those which he could not know either by his own or by an expert examination. The vendor will not be held responsible for defects the existence of which the vendee had the power to ascertain. By terms of the art. 1522 C.C. (Que.) in order that the thing sold would give a cause of action, the effect of which is determined by art. 1526, it must have hidden defects which will render it improper for the use for which it was designated, or which will so diminish its usefulness that the vendee would not have bought it or would not have given so high a price, if he had known of such defects, and this disposition must be understood in the sense that the hidden defects are so inherent to the thing and so irremediable by their nature, that the thing sold would be for ever improper, in whole or in part, for the use for which it was intended.

Senegal v. Meunier, 18 Rev. de Jur. 264.

RESOLUTORY CLAUSE—LAPSING.

Where an agreement of sale contains a resolatory clause, the performance of the contract causes it to lapse.

Greavea v. Cadioux, 50 Que. S.C. 361.

In a sale of a moving picture theatre, the vendor is not liable to the purchaser if the latter, who was acquainted with the premises and satisfied therewith, is forbidden by the municipal authorities from carrying on the exhibitions because the establishment had not been built in conformity with legal requirements, and refuses to make the necessary alterations.

Lacouture v. Desmarteau, 49 Que. S.C. 276.

RETURN OF MONEY PAID—MISREPRESENTATION.

At the suit of the purchaser against the vendor, an agreement for the sale and purchase of land was set aside, and the vendor was ordered to repay the sums paid by the purchaser on account of the purchase-price, on the ground of misrepresentation by the vendor, in that—whether innocently or not—the vendor, professing to shew the purchaser the land, had shewn him entirely different land. As the land shewn to the purchaser was not the land of the vendor, the parties were not ad idem.

DELAY IN REGISTERING TRANSFER—FILING OF PLAN OF RAILWAY RIGHT-OF-WAY — INABILITY TO REGISTER TRANSFER — RIGHT OF PURCHASER TO RESCISSION OF CONTRACT.

A purchaser who kept a transfer for 20 months without any effective attempt to register it and then was unable to obtain registration, because of the filing of a plan of a railway right of way, but who had not formally demanded a transfer with a registerable description, held not entitled to rescission of the contract for sale. [Ballantyne v. Hettinger, 8 A.L.R. 412, 7 W.W.R. 52 distinguished.]

Prosser v. Hudson's Bay Co., [1919] 1 W.W.R. 10.

The plaintiff who agreed to purchase certain lands, entered into possession, put up buildings, and planted a crop that failed, and then repented of his bargain, was nevertheless held entitled under the provisions of the Land Registry Act (B.C.) c. 36, s. 46, as amended in 1913, to avoid the transaction on the ground that no plan had been registered at the time of a sale to him, according to such plan, and to recover damages. The measure of such damages discussed.

Chauncey v. Palmer, 34 W.L.R. 978.

SALE OF LAND—CONTRACTS—AGREEMENT OF PURCHASE DELIVERED BY PURCHASER CONDITIONALLY IN ESCROW — CERTAIN DOCUMENTS TO BE COMPLETED BY VENDORS—UNREASONABLE DELAY IN COMPLETION—PURCHASER ENTITLED TO RESCISSION.

Purchaser held justified in treating agreement of sale of land as abandoned and to be entitled to rescission through vendor's unreasonable delay in delivering certain documents.

(§ I E—26)—MISTAKE—ACQUESCENCE BY MAKING PAYMENTS—EFFECT ON RESCISSION—RIGHTS OF JOINT PURCHASERS—PRESCRIPTION.

There is a substantial error sufficient to set aside an agreement for sale of lots when the vendor indicates to the purchaser that the lots are situated upon a street with a view of the St. Lawrence river and when other lots less advantageous situated upon another street and having no view of the river are described in the agreement for sale. The purchaser does not lose his right by acquiescence on making a payment on account without reserve, if by not making this payment he would run the risk of losing all that he had paid before, or by endeavouring to avoid a lawsuit by selling his rights under the agreement for sale. The action of the purchaser for rescission is not the redhibitory action provided for by art. 1530 C.C. (Que.), but the action to annul which, under art. 2258, is only prescribed by ten years. An agreement for sale of lots of land executed by several purchasers but not jointly, can be set aside on demand by one of them, as to him. If all the parties are not in the cause the defendant may apply to stay the action by dilatory exception until they have been summoned, but if he does not succeed he cannot prevent the judgment being pronounced upon the merits.

Montreal Investment, etc., Co. v. Sarault, 24 Que. K.B. 249.

SALE OF LAND AND BUSINESS—MISTAKE—RESCISSION—INABILITY OF PURCHASER TO MAKE RESTITUTION — EXECUTED OR EXECUTORY CONTRACT — ABSENCE OF FRAUD—FAILURE OF CONSIDERATION.

Milk Farm Products & Supply Co. v. Buist, 8 O.W.N. 491.

MISTAKE—FRAUD—EFFECT.

It is a mistake, which renders a contract of sale nonexistent, when a person wishing to purchase a lot of land at V. buys one situated at B. even when actual fraudulent design on the part of the vendor has not been proved, if there are indications which shew that the purchaser has been designedly left in ignorance and in error as to the situation of the lot sold. Mistake by one of the parties to a contract is sufficient to render it absolutely void.

Forté v. Security Trust, 46 Que. S.C. 201.

MISTAKE—DESCRIPTION.

A description of real property in a deed of sale is equivalent to a warranty of the area of the piece of land, but, in order that the contract may be avoided under this head, it is necessary, under art. 1517, C.C. (Que.), that the part from which he finds himself evicted be of such importance in relation to the whole that the purchaser would not have acquired the property without this part. When a purchaser has a right of action for the avoidance of a deed of sale of lands, and he offers to keep them on condition of a reduction in price, such offer must be considered as made with the intention of avoiding a lawsuit, and it has no effect if it is not accepted. It is an error sufficient to void a deed of sale, when a person buys two lots of land with a house and stable, and that these two buildings are located part on one of the lots bought and part on an adjoining lot, the purchaser not being able to perceive this fact, because the lots sold and the two adjoining lots were enclosed together, and appeared to make but one single estate.

Denis v. Deschamps, 54 Que. S.C. 74.

FALSE DESCRIPTION—SITUS—VALUE.

It is substantial error which will void sale when the lots sold are situated in a place other than that where the agent stated they were, and if, for that reason, they are of less value.

Boisjoly v. Land of Montreal, 24 Rev. Leg. 234.

ERROR AND FRAUD—AGENT—FALSE DESCRIPTION—FORFEITURE.

When agents of a vendor point out to the purchaser, as the situs of the land, a place other and less advantageous than that where the land actually is situated and the promise of sale describes the property as situated in the place falsely designated by the agents, the sale will be cancelled on the ground of error and fraud. If the promise of sale contains a clause that on default by the purchaser to make his payments when they become due, money paid up to that time shall be forfeited; and that to avoid this loss, he made the payments, his so doing cannot be considered as an acquiescence or a ratification of the promise of sale which would take away his right to ask for cancellation on the ground of error and fraud, even if the latter knew the reasons for cancellation at the moment of payment. It is the same if the purchaser, in order to avoid a lawsuit, tried to sell the property. The purchaser is not divested of his rights to have the sale cancelled if he only brings his action 11 months later, because a similar suit was pending in the court, and he was awaiting the result. Besides, an action for cancellation of a sale of land on the ground of error and fraud is not a redhibitory action and the delay named in art. 1530 C.C. (Que.) in which to bring it does not apply.

Denis v. Montreal Investment & Realty Co., 54 Que. S.C. 116.

MISTAKE — RIGHT-OF-WAY — NULLITY — PARTIES—NEGATORY ACTION.

One who owns several adjoining properties, and who sells one of them with "a right in common with others in the lane known under the number 1," namely, the neighbouring lot, cannot, in a negatory action to do away with this servitude, claim that he granted, by mistake, this right-of-way; such error is not contemplated by art. 992 C.C. (Que.). The purchaser of a lot of land upon which a servitude has been created, being the representative of his vendor, cannot plead the error.

(§ I E—27)—SALE TO PARTNERSHIP — FRAUD—SECRET PROFIT MADE BY ONE PARTNER.

Where one member of a partnership, formed expressly to purchase certain property for which his associates furnished the money, received a secret profit from the seller, who knew of the existence of the partnership, the defrauded partners may, on discovering the fraud, rescind the contract of sale, and recover from the vendor all payments made to him. MISREPRESENTATION—RETURN OF DEPOSIT.

Were a vendor demanded the return of a deposit he had made on signing a contract to purchase land, claiming as cancellation of the agreement for the misrepresentations of the vendor, which were denied by the latter, who informed the vendee that he should hold him to his agreement, and after action was begun for the cancellation of the contract, the vendor sold the land to a third person, the vendee is not entitled to recover the deposit where, on the trial no misrepresentation was found, and, at the time of such resale, the original purchaser was in default. RIGHT TO RESCIND—MISDESCRIPTION.

A contract purchaser at auction of leasehold property described in an advertisement of sale as located at "No. 171 Chesley street," was entitled to rescind his agreement on discovering that the property fronted on an alley and was located 100 feet away from the named street; it appearing that the premises were not known by that description, except so far as a tenant's address was improperly given at that address.

WRONG LOT POINTED OUT—KNOWLEDGE ON PART OF VENDOR — INTENTIONALLY DECEIVING.

Mid-West Agency v. Munro, 19 O.W.R. 810, 2 O.W.N. 1449.

MISREPRESENTATION AS TO QUALITY.

A representation by a vendor that a farm was as good as any in the district means, as compared with any in the immediate vicinity, especially where the purchaser inspected the land before buying, and was aware of the nature of the surrounding land. A representation by a vendor that a "good road" led to farming land sold, is satisfied if the road is such as is usually traveled in the vicinity, and over which, under ordinary circumstances, but not necessarily at all times, farm implements may be transported.

Houghton Land Corp. v. Ingham, 14 D.L.R. 773, 24 Man. L.R. 497, 25 W.L.R. 962, 5 W.W.R. 544, reversed 18 D.L.R. 660.

CONCEALMENT AS TO REAL PURCHASER—BAR TO SPECIFIC ENFORCEMENT, WHEN.

Where negotiations for the purchase of land are carried on with the knowledge by the party on whose behalf the purchase is really being made, that the vendor would not sell to him at the price, the concealment or misrepresentation of the identity of the real purchaser acting in the name of another is ground for refusing specific performance asked jointly by the nominal purchaser and the real purchaser to whom the former had assigned his interest. Stone, 78 L.T.R. 34; Smith v. Wheatcroft, 9 Ch. 222, applied.]

SALE BY VENDOR KNOWING HE CANNOT MAKE TITLE.

Where a vendor fraudulently makes an agreement of sale knowing that he has no valid title to the land nor any right to sell it and is unable to give title, he is liable for damages for breach of his contract to sell and convey.

FRAUD INDUCING CONTRACT.

A contract for the sale of vacant land will be set aside at the instance of the purchaser, where he was induced to enter into the agreement by the material false representations of the vendor, upon which the purchaser relied, as to the character of its banks on an adjoining stream as affecting the desirability of the land for residential building purposes.

Cram v. Tinck, 17 D.L.R. 14, 28 W.L.R. 239.

DAMAGES—FRAUD.

In an action by the purchaser to rescind an agreement for the sale of land brought against both the owner and his agent on the ground of misrepresentation and for damages, proof of even an honest material misrepresentation inducing the agreement may suffice for rescission, but to support damages fraud must appear. [Derry v. Peek, 14 A.C. 337, at 359, applied.]

Melvin v. McNamara, 16 D.L.R. 65, 26 W.L.R. 825. [Varied in 17 D.L.R. 18, 7 A.L.R. 368, 28 W.L.R. 223.]

MISREPRESENTATIONS—TIMBER—QUANTITY.

A representation as to the estimated amount of timber on areas does not entitle a purchaser to a rescission of an agreement of sale if the estimate prove to be excessive where no fraudulent misrepresentation is shown.

Alberta N. W. Lumber Co. v. Lewis, 38 D.L.R. 228, 24 B.C.R. 564, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 1007, reversing 27 D.L.R. 722, 33 W.L.R. 128.

FRAUD—ELECTION OF REMEDIES.

A purchaser of land under an agreement for sale who, upon discovering that statements by the land agent, which led him to make the purchase are untrue, writes, through his solicitor, a letter to the brokers, enclosing money on the purchase and stating that he was completing it rather than lose the money already paid on the purchase price before he learned of the false and fraudulent representations made to induce him to purchase, and stating also that he does not waive his right to insist on reparation for the deceit practised upon him, and that he proposes to bring an action on account thereof; and who subsequently makes additional payments and offers to exchange the lots for others, elects not to rescind the contract. Discovery later of other false representations does not entitle him to rescission, but entitles him to damages for deceit.

Barron v. Kelly, 41 D.L.R. 590, 56 Can. S.C.R. 455, [1918] 2 W.W.R. 131, reversing 37 D.L.R. 8, 24 B.C.R. 283, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 65. [See [1918] 3 W.W.R. 466.]

FRAUD OF AGENT—MISREPRESENTATION.

An agent for the sale of land who, without knowledge or justification, makes false statements in regard to the land and thereby induces a sale to purchasers who rely on such representations, is liable in damages for such representations to the amounts paid on the contracts of purchase, and as against the vendor company the purchasers are entitled to have the contracts rescinded. An executed conveyance of land will not, in the absence of evidence of positive fraud, be set aside on the ground that it was taken in the name of a person other than the real purchaser, where it does not appear that the vendor would have refused to sell had he been aware that the vendee named in the conveyance was not the real purchaser.

Kelly v. Erderton, 5 D.L.R. 613, 22 Man. L.R. 277, 21 W.L.R. 337, 2 W.W.R. 453. [Affirmed in 9 D.L.R. 472, [1913] A.C. 191, 3 W.W.R. 1063, 23 W.L.R. 310.]

A formal transfer of lands will be set aside where the transferee relied upon false representations of value of the transferor's property, made by the latter and his agents, and where the deceptive maps and plans were shewn to the transferee, misrepresenting that the transferor's land was on a certain avenue, the transferee never having seen the land in question.

MISREPRESENTATIONS — LACHES — CONCLUSIVENESS OF FINDINGS.

Rescission of an agreement of sale may be decreed notwithstanding a considerable delay in bringing action therefor, where there is evidence of the vendor's misrepresentations as to the drainage of the land and its fitness for agricultural purposes; the findings of the Trial Court, based on such evidence, cannot be disturbed on appeal.

Higgins v. Creech, 31 D.L.R. 110.

MISREPRESENTATION BY AGENT—LEASE.

Where lands purchased by an agent for his principals upon authority, under a written agreement executed by the agent under power of attorney, subsequently proved to be subject to a lease to third persons for one hundred years, to mine and take minerals from the lands, the existence of such lease being known to the agent, but not known to his principals nor communicated by him to them, the rescission of the agreement, and the payment back to the purchasers of the instalments of purchase money paid by them under the terms of the agreement was ordered.

QUANTITY—"MORE OR LESS."

Where the purchaser of property under an agreement of sale, which described the property as containing "86 acres more or less" was given a deed of conveyance of the property, which he accepted without requiring or receiving in the deed any covenant or warranty as to the acreage and gave back a mortgage as part payment under the agreement, he cannot set up as a defence, in an action for foreclosure of the mortgage, the fact that he afterwards discovered the property to contain only 66 acres. Neither, having accepted the conveyance without question, can he successfully counterclaim for rescission of the contract, on the ground of fraud and misrepresentation. [Jolliffe v. TIMBER LICENSES—MISREPRESENTATION.

Where a purchaser enters into an agreement to purchase timber licenses on the footing that the licensed property is a "logging proposition," when in fact it is not, and this fact is known by the vendor, but not communicated to the purchaser, the agreement will be set aside. A vendor of timber licenses is bound to acquaint the purchaser of the existence of other licenses, if any, over the same area, if he knew or ought to have known thereof; failure to do so amounts to a misrepresentation.

REPRESENTATION AND WARRANTY — "IRRIGABLE LANDS"—ONUS.

The term "irrigable lands" means lands which by reason of their level, relative to the irrigation works, are capable of having water carried over them from the works by gravity, and which, having regard to the character of the soil and of the climate, will be rendered more productive by means of irrigation properly applied in the growing of crops adapted to the locality, and a sale of lands under such description amounts to an express representation and implied warranty that the lands will answer that description: but the burden of proof is upon the purchaser to shew either misrepresentation or breach of warranty to entitle him to a rescission of the contract on that account.

MISREPRESENTATION — ACTION FOR RESCISSION — DELAY IN BRINGING ACTION — PAYMENT OF TAXES BY PURCHASER — RIGHT TO RESCIND.

A purchaser induced by misrepresentation to purchase a piece of land will succeed in an action to rescind the contract. The contract is not affirmed merely by delay in bringing the action on the part of the purchaser nor by payment of the taxes on the property for which he was personally liable.

SYNDICATE TO PURCHASE LAND—FRAUD ON ONE OF PURCHASERS — WITHDRAWAL FROM TRANSACTION—RETURN OF MONEY —RIGHTS OF THIRD PARTIES.

Where a syndicate is formed for the purchase of land the purchasers become partners as to the particular transaction and the utmost good faith is due from every member of the syndicate towards every other member. The concealment from one of the members of special advantages offered to another of the associates whose entry into the syndicate is influential in causing such member to join in the purchase, justifies such member from withdrawing from the transaction except in so far as the rights of third parties are affected. RESCISSION OF AGREEMENT OF SALE OF LAND —FRAUD.

Creighton v. Dunkley, 28 D.L.R. 745, 34 W.L.R. 937.

FRAUD.

Where the owner's agent conspiring with the owner induces the defendant to enter into an agreement to purchase a suburban tract of land of a speculative value, by falsely pretending under sham negotiations that he is a copurchaser taking equal chances with the defendant, the contract as against the defendant is vitiated for fraud and cannot be enforced by the owner.

Emerson v. Quinn, 18 D.L.R. 241, 28 W.L.R. 405.

MISREPRESENTATION.

Where statements are in fact untrue and are made with the object of inducing a person to purchase property by creating in the mind of such person a belief that they are the real opinion of the person making them, based upon his knowledge of local conditions, and if such belief operated as a material inducement to the person to whom they were made to make such purchase, and the maker either did not believe such statements or had no opinion at all or real belief on the subject, then the purchaser is entitled to rescission of his contract of purchase and a refund of all moneys paid in connection therewith. The law is the same as to the statements made by vendors to another with knowledge and intention that such statements would be by him passed on to an intending purchaser for the purpose of inducing him to buy.

MacLellan v. Henderson, 6 W.W.R. 992.

FRAUD AND DECEIT.

In an action to set aside a sale and conveyance on the ground that the sale was induced by fraud and misrepresentation, the fraud alleged must be distinctly and clearly proven and the false representation must be of something material which had induced the grantor to act on the faith of it and execute the deed sought to be annulled.

Alexander v. Enderton, 15 D.L.R. 588, 26 W.L.R. 535, 5 W.W.R. 1022, 50 C.L.J. 277. [Affirmed in 19 D.L.R. 897, 25 Man. L.R. 82.]

REMEDIES—ACTION FOR DECEIT.

Separate representations by the vendor to members of the purchasing syndicate leading to a purchase agreement by a trustee for the syndicate will not, even if false sustain an action to rescind a later agreement between such vendor and an incorporated company to which no representations were made by the vendor on his entering into a new agreement direct with the company and accepting a surrender from the syndicate trustee, particularly where some of the syndicate members elect to stand by the purchase; the plaintiffs' remedy under such circumstances is not an action for rescission but one for damages for deceit.

Stanley v. Struthers, 22 D.L.R. 60, 7 W.W.R. 1060.

WHEN RIGHT TO REMEDY—FAILURE OF CONSIDERATION—FRAUD.

Where an agreement of sale has been completed by conveyance, it is no longer open to the purchaser, in the absence of fraud, to complain of misrepresentation by the vendor, except in cases in which the consideration for the conveyance has totally failed.

Hamilton v. Margolius; Morrison v. Mar-

FALSE REPRESENTATIONS.

False representations made by a party to a contract are a cause of nullity, if they have led the other party into error as to the qualities of the subject-matter which was principally in view in making the contract, and if without them it would not have been entered into.

Le Syndicats de Rosemont v. Gagnon, 24 Que. K.B. 484.

An innocent misrepresentation as to the value of land on a sale thereof is not upon the same footing as a misrepresentation as to facts which cannot be matters of opinion, as a ground for repudiating the contract in the absence of fraud.

Brauchle v. Lloyd, 21 D.L.R. 321, 8 A.L.R. 247, 7 W.W.R. 1343, 30 W.L.R. 659.

MATERIALITY.

In order to operate as a ground for rescission of a contract for the sale of land misrepresentation made by the vendor as to the quality of the land such as that the lots were "high and dry," must have been the inducing or effective cause of the buyer entering into the agreement of purchase.

Nelson v. Gagnon, 22 D.L.R. 179, 21 B.C.R. 356, 8 W.W.R. 907, 31 W.L.R. 346.

MISREPRESENTATION AS TO EXTENSIONS BY MORTGAGEE.

A purchaser of land who seeks damages from his vendor because the latter concealed from him the fact that the right to call upon the mortgagee to postpone his mortgage in favour of a new mortgage had already expired, is bound to prove that injury resulted to him from the deliberate concealment of that fact.

MISREPRESENTATION AS TO ERECTION OF HOTEL IN VICINITY — RESCISSION AGAINST VENDOR'S ASSIGNEE.

A purchaser, who is induced to purchase land by the fraudulent representations of the vendor's agent that the vendor would erect a costly hotel in the vicinity of the lot, is entitled to a rescission of the contract which remedy he may exercise against the vendor's assignee suing for the balance due on the contract, although he is not entitled to counterclaim for damage against the assignee in consequence of the fraud.

Rolt v. Griese & Wood, 25 D.L.R. 740, 8 S.L.R. 336, 9 W.W.R. 462, 32 W.L.R. 874.

FRAUDULENT OPTION.

Owners who had given an option for sale of their land at a certain price are guilty of fraud where they had replaced the option with another at a higher price for the same period of time at the optionee's request for the latter's use in obtaining others to join him in taking up the option but with a secret agreement to give the original optionee the benefit of the difference.

Schrader v. Manville, 21 D.L.R. 189, 8 S.L.R. 83, 7 W.W.R. 1376, 30 W.L.R. 528.

AGENT'S MISREPRESENTATIONS—AGENT ACTING FOR BOTH PARTIES.

Misrepresentations as to the character of land made by the agent of the vendor who also acted as agent for the purchaser for the purpose of subdividing and reselling it, does not impute to the purchaser knowledge of the true character of the land as affecting his right of rescission of the agreement of sale.

Stewart v. Canadian Financiers, 23 D.L.R. 707, 22 B.C.R. 133, 9 W.W.R. 82, 32 W.L.R. 121.

FRAUD OF AGENT—AGENT BECOMING PURCHASER.

Where the vendor's agent for sale of the property himself becomes the purchaser, with the assent of his principal, of an undivided share in the property on a joint purchase thereof and makes material misrepresentations in respect to the property to the other purchasers of shares therein which induced them to buy, rescission may be granted on the application of all the other purchasers in an action in which the vendor and his agent are parties, although the agent does not concur so far as his share is concerned; the court has, under such circumstances, jurisdiction to restore the status quo ante fraudem. [Braun v. Hughes, 3 Man. L.R. 177, and Morrison v. Earls, 5 O.R. 434, distinguished.]

Kildonan Investment v. Thompson, 21 D.L.R. 181, 25 Man. L.R. 446, 7 W.W.R. 1299, 30 W.L.R. 626.

AGENT COPURCHASER—FAILURE OF VENDOR TO DISCLOSE.

Where the vendor's agent for the sale of property on a commission basis had induced a third party to become his copurchaser of the property without disclosing to him the agency and commission agreement with the vendors, it is the duty of the vendors, upon learning of the fiduciary relationship existing between their paid agent and his copurchaser, to inform the copurchaser of such agency agreement, and failure to do so will entitle him to rescission of the purchase agreement, and return of any purchase moneys paid thereunder.

Hitchcock v. Sykos, 23 D.L.R. 518, 49 Can. S.C.R. 403, affirming 13 D.L.R. 548, 29 O.L.R. 6.

FRAUD—AGENT ACTING FOR BOTH PARTIES.

An agreement for the sale of land should be declared void when the sale was consummated without knowledge on the part of the purchasers of the fact that their agents were also the agents of the vendors and interested in the sale of the extent of their commission.

FRAUD OF SUBAGENT.

The fraud of a subagent may be ground for rescission of a contract for sale of the lands of the ultimate principal if the proved circumstances of the case are such that the ultimate principal and the intermediate agent must be deemed to have intended and agreed that the latter should or might appoint a substitute for the purpose of discharging, in his stead and on behalf of the ultimate principal, duties including or involving the making of representations of the character of that sued upon though no authority had been given to make any false representation. FRAUD—WAIVER.

If after discovery of the whole of the material facts giving him the right to avoid the contract, the representee has by word or act definitely elected to adhere to it, the representor has a complete defence to any proceedings for rescission. The making of payments on a purchase agreement after notice of a fraud which might be set up as a ground for repudiation is evidence of an election to affirm. [Lawrence's Case, L.R. 2 Ch. App. 421, applied.]

FORM OF JUDGMENT.

In an action by a vendor for purchase-money, the defendant alleged that he had been induced to buy by the fraudulent misrepresentations of the vendor and his agents, and he counterclaimed for repayment of the cash deposit, rescission of the contract, and damages. Held, upon the evidence that there had not been any misrepresentations, and that in dealing with this question, evidence of representations alleged to have been made by the vendor on the sale to other persons of adjacent similar lots, was not admissible. The agreement contained a provision in the usual form for forfeiture of payments in the event of default and for termination of the agreement. The plaintiff's title was registered and unencumbered, and the amount due was definitely ascertained, and the defendant was in possession. Held, that the judgment should be for (a) payment to the plaintiff of the amount claimed with interest and costs; (b) foreclosure in default of payment within six months; (c) vacation of registration of the agreement; (d) forfeiture to the plaintiff of moneys paid and (e) delivery of possession to the plaintiff.

AGENT TO PROCURE PURCHASER—AGENT JOINING IN PURCHASE—NONDISCLOSURE TO COPURCHASER—FRAUD—RESCISSON OF CONTRACT.

H. was owner of mining land and offered S. a commission of 10 per cent for finding a purchaser thereof. H. afterwards wrote to S. stating that the mine was very rich and urging him to induce some of his friends to join in a syndicate or company to purchase and work it. S., without disclosing his agency, induced W. to take up the matter and they agreed to join in the purchase and divide the profits. A contract was entered into with H. and W. paid $20,000 on account of the purchase price on which S. was paid his commission. Default having been made in the further payments H. brought action claiming possession of the property and the right to retain the amount paid. W. counterclaimed for rescission of the contract and return of the money paid with interest and on the trial swore that he knew nothing of S.'s agency for several months after the contract was signed. Held, that it was the duty of H., on becoming aware that S. was a copurchaser with W. to satisfy himself that the latter was aware of the agency of S.; and that W. was entitled to the relief asked by his counterclaim.

The defendant gave M. $1,000 to invest as he (M.) pleased: the defendant said he would put in no more money. M. then said he had bought a parcel of land for $16,000 and had put the $1,000 into it; he proposed that the defendant should pay $2,200 more, in instalments, and take a one-fifth interest in the parcel; he sent the defendant for his signature a written agreement to pay the $2,200. The defendant, after investigation, signed the agreement:—Held, that the defendant could not be heard to say that he did not promise to pay as he covenanted—that the $1000 was paid as a condition precedent to an understanding that he was not to comply with his covenant. M. said that the parcel cost $16,000, so that the defendant was obtaining his one-fifth at cost. The price was in fact $15,000, as M. knew. Held, that the misrepresentation made was material, and gave the defendant an equity to rescind the contract; the plaintiffs, to whom H. had conveyed the land and assigned the defendant's agreement, took subject to this equity; and their action for the $2,200 failed. There was nothing to prevent the assignor, M., from disclosing his fraud or to preclude the defendant from relying upon it. [Stoddart v. Union Trust, [1912] 1 K.B. 181, and *Roxburgh v. (§ I E—23)—INSTALLMENT CONTRACTS—RE-

CISSION FOR PURCHASER'S FAILURE TO PAY.

Upon an agreement to purchase lands, imposing on the purchaser, in the event of default on any instalment, a forfeiture of all partial payments, there may be a default, through negligence or temporizing on the purchaser's part, of such a character as to disentitle him to specific performance without at the same time enforcing the forfeiture against him of the payments made, especially where the amount claimed to have been forfeited bears no just relation to the breach, the governing principle being relief against the penal clause rather than sympathy with the party penalized.

PENALTY—EQUITABLE RELIEF.

Where the purchaser, under an agreement for sale of lands on deferred payments was let into possession on paying the first instalment but defaulted upon the second instalment, the vendor's claim in an action to annul the contract and to forfeit the money paid is properly dismissed if the arrears are paid into court when the statement of defence and counterclaim for specific performance of the agreement is filed, if the stipulation for forfeiture is, in fact, one for a penalty.

Kilmer v. B.C. Orchard Lands Co., 10 D. L.R. 172, [1913] A. C. 319, 82 L.J.P.C. 77, 23 W.L.R. 566, 3 W.W.R. 1119.

EQUITABLE RIGHT TO REDEEM.

In an action brought by an assignee of an agreement of sale against the purchaser for a declaration that the agreement of sale shall be declared to have been cancelled and that the assignee be entitled to retain any moneys paid under it and to possession of the lands, because of the purchaser's failure to pay pursuant to the terms of the agreement, the defendant is entitled to the usual three months within which to redeem, although liability is admitted and the only relief asked for by the defendant on the trial is the usual order granting time for redemption. Pentland v. MacKissock, 9 D.L.R. 572, 23 Man. L.R. 1, 22 W.L.R. 947.

VENDOR'S RIGHT.

A stipulation in a deed of sale or promise of sale of land that if the buyer fails to make any payment in capital or interest at the specified dates such deed shall become null and void ipso facto without mise en demeure, is exclusively in the interest of the vendor, who has the right on default to choose between rescission or performance of the contract.

Gagnon v. Lemay, 42 D.L.R. 161, 56 Can. S.C.R. 365, affirming 27 Que. K.B. 59. [Appeal to Privy Council refused.]

TENDER OF PAYMENT—BROKER—INTENTION TO RESCIND.

Where the vendor of land is out of the country and there is no place mentioned in the agreement of sale at which the deferred payments are to be made, the purchaser is justified in tendering the purchase money to the agent who listed the property and who has been held out as the vendor's agent. An assent by the purchaser to the request of such agent to wait for some time before making payment in order that the transfer may be received from the vendor is not an agreement to extend the time nor evidence of an intention not to rescind, although time is stated to be of the essence of the agreement.

FAILURE TO PAY PURCHASE MONEY—NOTICE, WHAT CONSTITUTES.

An agreement for the sale of land on periodical payments is not cancelled by a conditional notice that unless the payments (then overdue) are paid within a certain time, the agreement will be forfeited, where the agreement itself calls for an absolute notice.

The usual practice in an action to annul the contract of sale for the purchaser's default in payment is for the court exercising its equitable jurisdiction to fix a time within which the defaulting purchaser may redeem and to decree cancellation only in case the default continues for that time.

Draper v. Bielby, 10 D.L.R. 746, 6 S.L.R. 301, 23 W.L.R. 902, 4 W.W.R. 489.

In an action in dissolution of sale by reason of nonpayment of price the buyer may pay the instalments due, with interest and costs, not only before judgment is rendered by the Superior Court, but, if the case be inscribed in review, at any time before judgment is pronounced by the Court of Review and thus avoid the cancellation of the sale. (C.C. (Que.) 1538, C.C.P. 1203.)

Starke Cooperage Co. v. Migneault and Vallee, 2 D.L.R. 173.

(§ I E—28) — AGREEMENT TO CONVEY — BREACH BY PURCHASER — NOTICE OF CANCELLATION — SUFFICIENCY — TIME THE ESSENCE.

Notice by the contract vendor, of intention to cancel the agreement for the purchasers' default in making payment, addressed to the purchasers by name, was not insufficient as not being addressed to the purchasers, nor because one of the purchasers was served two days later than the other, since that would not affect the right of the one first served to redeem up to the expiration of the redemption period, dating from the service upon the purchaser last served. Time being of the essence of a contract to convey, the contract is at law determined by the vendor giving the notice of intention to cancel provided for in the agreement in case of default by the purchaser in making payments, and by the purchaser's failure to remedy the default within the time allowed under the notice and agreement, though, in equity, the court would relieve against or enforce specific performance, notwithstanding default, if it could do justice between the parties and if there is nothing in the express stipulations between the parties, the nature of the property or the circumstances which would make it inequitable to interfere with or modify the legal right. Written notice by the contract vendor to the purchaser, of intention to terminate the agreement and to exercise power of cancellation and re-entry, provided in such agreement, sufficiently shewed an immediate intention to cancel, within provision in the agreement that in default of payment by the purchaser, the vendor may put an end to the agreement, by mailing notice intimating an intention to determine the agreement.

Where the purchaser of land under a crop payment plan himself makes default in carrying out his agreement and such default is found to have been the cause of the vendor's default to a mortgagee of the property by reason whereof the property was sold under the mortgage, the original purchaser first mentioned has no right of action in damages against his vendor for allowing the property to be sold.

Cushing v. Knight, 6 D.L.R. 820, 46 Can. S.C.R. 555, 2 W.W.R. 704.

Where an option stipulates for payment of part of the purchase price in cash, acceptance of the option by letter is not sufficient, and no contractual relationship can exist until the cash payment has been made. [Cushing v. Knight, 6 D.L.R. 820, 46 Can. S.C.R. 555, followed.]

Miller v. Allen, 7 D.L.R. 438, 4 O.W.N. 346.

Where, under a written agreement, lands are sold, the purchase price being payable one-fourth in cash and the balance in three equal consecutive annual instalments, with a stipulation that upon default in the payment of principal, interest, taxes or premiums of insurance, or any part thereof, the whole purchase money shall become due and payable; and where the purchaser punctually made the cash payment upon the execution of the agreement, but upon the maturity of the first annual instalment makes default in its payment; and an action is brought by the vendor, under such acceleration clause the vendor is entitled to have a time fixed within which the purchaser must pay the full amount of the purchase money and interest, and, in default of payment within the time limited to a declaration that the agreement has been forfeited, and is null and void, and at an end, and that all payments made thereunder and the improvements on the land are the property of the vendor in terms of a forfeiture clause contained in the contract. Where lands are sold under an agreement for payment by annual instalments with an acceleration clause making the entire purchase money due and payable upon default in the payment of any of the instalments, such clause is to be construed literally and cannot be relieved against.

STIPULATION FOR NOTICE—PENALTY CLAUSE.

Where a contract for the sale of land on deferred payments is made to several purchasers individually named, it is not to be inferred that they are partners in the transaction so as to validate a notice to one as a notice to all; notice of intention to forfeit the contract for their default must be given to each of the purchasers under a stipulation therein for a thirty-days' notice in writing demanding payment of the arrears to be delivered to "the purchasers, their heirs, executors, administrators or assigns," and authorizing the vendor to repossess on the default being continued under such notice.

Bark Fong v. Cooper, 16 D.L.R. 299, 49 Can. S.C.R. 14, 27 W.L.R. 174, 5 W.W.R. 633, 701.

ACCEPTANCE OF PART OF PURCHASE MONEY FOR NEW TERM — NOTICE — INSUFFICIENCY OF.

A land purchase agreement contained provisions that if the purchaser did not sell 50 lots every six months from December 1st—half of every payment by the sub-purchaser being remitted to the vendor—the vendor could cancel the agreement, and the purchaser would be liable for the balance on any of his sales for which a deed was demanded. The purchaser during the first year and a half resold over 150 lots, but fell a few short of the required 50 in the last six months of that period which expired May 31st, although he had sold an average of 50 lots per each six months. After having entered on and made a few sales in the fourth six-monthly period, the purchaser on account of illness fell behind and in July the vendors served him with notice under the clause to terminate the agreement. Held, that the notice served was too late to be effective and in any event

SPECIAL CLAUSE—FAILURE TO PAY INSTALLMENTS—RIGHTS OF PARTIES.

An agreement for sale of land contained the following clause: "The first party will have the right to cancel this agreement and the same shall ipso facto be cancelled without its being necessary to put the second party in default, should the latter fail to pay any instalment of price or interest within ninety days after maturity and in such event the vendors shall retain all payments made to them on account of the price or interest as liquidated damages for such default." Ordinarily, on abandonment of a contract to purchase land for a defect in title, the purchaser in possession is not liable for its use and occupation for a reasonable time, but he must not remain in possession after the contract is clearly abandoned.

A purchaser who, on the date fixed for completion, learns that the vendor's title is defective and that the latter is unable to give a good title, has the right to repudiate the contract and to demand the return of any part of the purchase price already paid in, although the matter of the defect appears on record in the land titles office. [Smith v. Butler, [1900] 1 Q.B. 694, applied.]

Christie v. Taylor, 15 D.L.R. 614, 26 W.L.R., 673, 5 W.W.R. 1034.

REPUDIATION—EQUITABLE RIGHT PLEADABLE AGAINST SPECIFIC ENFORCEMENT, HOW.

A purchaser's right to repudiate the contract on the ground of want of title is an equitable right arising from want of mutuality and may be a defence to an action for specific performance. Where the vendor has obtained a decree for specific performance, the purchaser cannot, without leave of the court, repudiate the contract on the ground that the vendor cannot make a good title, but he may move the court to be discharged from the contract. [Halkett v. Dudley, [1907] 1 Ch. 590, followed.]

PURCHASER'S RIGHTS.

A purchaser under an agreement for the sale of lands who has paid or tendered the purchase price pursuant to the contract is entitled to have the contract rescinded and to be restored to his original position, if the vendor is neither ready nor able to make title to the property. [Farrer v. Nash, 11 Jur. (N.S.) 789, 53 E.R. 854, applied.]

INABILITY TO CONVEY—KNOWLEDGE OF PURCHASER AS DEFENCE.

A delay of more than thirteen months to furnish title to lands sold cannot be considered reasonable, and the fact that the purchaser was aware of the vendor's inability to convey until the vendor received a transfer for the land does not disclose a defence to an action for a rescission of the sale and return of the money paid thereon.

Shier v. Hackett, 23 D.L.R. 84, 31 W.L.R. 757.

A subsequent purchaser is justified in demanding the annulment of a sale where the immovable is subject to a real servitude of "non-aedificandi," of which he has not been informed.

Marcel v. Legault, 23 D.L.R. 756, 24 Que. K.B. 1.

DELAY IN MAKING TITLE—ESSENCE OF TIME.

In the absence of a stipulation making time of the essence of the contract, a delay of four months in perfecting title to land is unreasonable and will entitle the other party to repudiate the contract.

Williams v. Black, 23 D.L.R. 287, 8 W. R. 1139, 31 W.L.R. 844.

RESTITUTION TO STATUS QUO.

Where a rescission of a contract for the sale of lands is sought by a purchaser upon no ground of fraud but upon the inability of the vendor to make a satisfactory title to the land conveyed, it is the duty of the purchaser to make restitution of what he had received under the contract; and where in pursuance of such contract the purchaser removes building upon the land and is unable to make complete restitution, damages equivalent to the value thereof may be allowed in restitution of the vendor to his status quo.

PURCHASER OF REALTY—TENDER OF LAST INSTALMENT DUE UNDER CONTRACT—FAILURE OF VENDOR TO FURNISH TITLE—RIGHT OF PURCHASER TO HAVE CONTRACT RESCINDED AND PURCHASE MONEY RETURNED.

A purchaser of realty is entitled to have the contract of purchase rescinded and the purchase money returned, if upon tender of the last instalment due, the vendor is not able to furnish title, and takes no pains to procure same until action is commenced, although shortly after action is commenced he becomes in a position to furnish title. [Baskin v. Linden, 1 D.L.R. 789, followed.] Grossenback v. Goodyear, 48 D.L.R. 58, [1919] 3 W.W.R. 12, affirming 45 D.L.R. 629, [1919] 1 W.W.R. 730.

ABSENCE OF WRITTEN CONSENT OF WIFE—FULL KNOWLEDGE OF TRANSACTION—DOWER ACT.

OBJECTIONS TO TITLE—RIGHT OF WAY—ADMISSION BY VENDOR OF VALIDITY OF OBJECTIONS—TERMINATION OF CONTRACT—REGISTRATION—DISCHARGE.

Jewer v. Thompson, 3 D.L.R. 886, 3 O. W. N. 1450, 22 O.W.R. 610.

SALE OF REAL ESTATE—PUBLIC WORK—EXAGGERATION—NULLITY—QUE. C.C. 993, 1012.

When, at a sale of real estate, the vendor informs the purchaser of the proposed construction in the neighborhood of important buildings likely to improve the property, the purchaser should verify these facts, and if the buildings are in the nature of public works which the purchaser is supposed to know and could easily look into, he has only himself to blame if he has not made these inquiries before buying the property or accepting an agreement of sale. A little exaggeration on the part of the vendor during the negotiations does not constitute fraud and false representations sufficient to annul the contract, but an injury which is not a cause for nullity among persons of the age of majority.

ACTION AGAINST NONRESIDENT—BLANK PROVISION—SALE OF LAND NOT IN JURISDICTION.

Burley v. Knappen, 20 Man. L.R. 154, 13 W.L.R. 715.

II. Vendor's lien; foreclosure.

See Execution, I—8.

(§ II—30)—INCONSISTENT REMEDIES—SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE—PERSONAL JUDGMENT—SCRETT.

The remedies of the vendor for a judgment for the purchase price capable of immediate execution and the equitable relief of specific performance and foreclosure of the vendor's lien are inconsistent and cannot stand together; an order which provides for a personal judgment, on which execution can issue before the expiration of the period fixed for redemption, is objectionable, and likewise if it fails to provide for a reconveyance to the purchaser if he pays the purchase price; but these objections are untenable by a surety for the purchaser's defaults.

Regina Brokerage & Invest. Co. v. Waddell, 27 D.L.R. 633, 9 S.L.R. 154, 34 W.L.R. 229, 10 W.W.R. 364.

REMEDIES—SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE—PERSONAL JUDGMENT—EXECUTION.

A personal judgment for the unpaid amount under an agreement of sale, obtained in an action for the specific performance of the agreement and the enforcement of the vendor's lien, is subject to immediate execution; the remedies of personal judgment and specific performance are not inconsistent, and the exercise of one does not necessarily imply the negation of the other. [Standard Trust Co. v. Little, 24 D.L.R. 713, 8 S.L.R. 205, distinguished.]

Morgan v. De Geer, 36 D.L.R. 161, 10 S. L. R. 312, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 177.

FORFEITURE—WAIVER—SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE—PRÊTE-NOM.

A condition in an agreement of sale whereby the vendor is to become entitled to the property and payments thereon in case of the purchaser's default, and the agreement is thereupon to become null, is one for the benefit of the vendor, who may waive the condition, and sue upon the contract for the balance of the purchase price; the purchaser, having entered into the agreement in his own name, cannot, to escape personal liability, set up that he was merely a prête-nom or acting for another.

Pépin v. Savignac, 35 D.L.R. 715, 51 Que. S.C. 207.

VENTE À RÉMÈRE—REDEMPTION—TIME.

It is sufficient under art. 1550 C.C. (Que.), that the vendor in a vente à rémère signifies, within the time limited for redemption, his intention to redeem. It is unnecessary to take judicial proceedings for redemption within that time. Where property has been sold subject to a right of redemption within a certain time, it is sufficient to satisfy art. 1550 C.C. (Que.) that the vendor, before the expiration of the period of delay, acquaint the purchaser of his intention to redeem, and no payment or tender of the amount due is necessary; an action to compel the return of the property need not be commenced until after the period of delay has expired. [Trudel v. Bouchard, 27 L.C.J. 218; Walker v. Sheppard, 19 L.C.J. 103, distinguished; art. 1662 French Code, considered.] A vendor who stipulates for a right of redemption preserves only a "jus ad rem" to the property sold, and upon obtaining a discharge or retrocession from his buyer must by virtue of art 2098, C.C. (Que.)

have these deeds registered, as they transfer the ownership. [Sirois v. Carrier, 13 Que. K.B. 242, followed.]

Johnson v. Laflamme, 32 D.L.R. 401, 25 Que. K.B. 464. [Affirmed in 36 D.L.R. 572, 54 Can. S.C.R. 495.]

FORECLOSURE—FAILURE TO APPEAL AGAINST ORDER NISI.

Where in an action for specific performance of an agreement for the sale of land an order nisi is not appealed against within the manner and period prescribed by the rules, and having been refused leave to appeal after the time has expired, the order of sale founded upon it must likewise stand.

Johnson v. Madson, 27 D.L.R. 238, 9 A.L.R. 332, 10 W.W.R. 331.

CONVEYANCE À DROIT DE RÉMÉRÉ—DELAY IN REDEMPTION—EXTENSION.

Upon a failure to exercise within the stipulated period, or extension thereof, the right to redeem lands conveyed droit de réméré, as security for a loan, the purchaser becomes absolute owner after the time limited for redemption, and the courts of Quebec have no power to grant relief by extending the time for redemption; the purchaser's letter, after the expiration of the redemption period, demanding payment of the loan before a certain date, does not operate as an extension of the right. [Arts. 1549-50, 2248, C.C. (Que.) applied.]

Gagnon v. Belanger, 30 D.L.R. 40, 53 Can. S.C.R. 204.

WHO ENTITLED TO—SELLER WITH EQUITABLE TITLE.

The fact that the defendant, who before acquiring the legal title, sold land he had agreed to purchase (his vendor conveying directly to the purchaser) will not prevent the defendant claiming a vendor's lien for the unpaid purchase money, since his equitable title was sufficient to support the lien. [Warren v. Fenn, 28 Barb. (N.Y.) 333, followed.]

Kaulbach v. Jodrey, 13 D.L.R. 782, 13 E.L.R. 409.

ACTUAL VENDOR DEALING THROUGH A NOMINAL OWNER.

The actual vendor of land may be entitled to a vendor's lien for unpaid purchase money, although the land was nominally held in the name of another by whom the conveyance was made, where the introduction of a nominal holder was not fraudulent.

Kirk v. Harvey, 15 D.L.R. 488, 18 B.C.R. 645, 26 W.L.R. 747, 5 W.W.R. 980.

SECURITY FOR DEBT—NEGOTIATION—EFFECT ON LIEN.

An unpaid vendor of real estate has a lien for the purchase money, which is wholly independent of any possession on his part, and it attaches to the estate as a trust, equally whether it be conveyed or only be contracted to be conveyed. Such vendor's lien is not lost by the taking of security for the purchase money, in the form of a draft, promissory note, or bill of exchange, even though negotiated by the vendor.

Denny v. Nozick, 48 D.L.R. 310, [1919] 5 W.W.R. 366, reversing [1919] 2 W.W.R. 792.

REMEDIES OF VENDOR.

An unpaid vendor cannot have the land and the instalments of the purchase money; he must elect either remedy.

Gale v. Powley, 24 D.L.R. 450, 22 B.C.R. 18, 8 W.W.R. 1312, 32 W.L.R. 65.

ACTION FOR PURCHASE MONEY—SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE—NECESSITY OF CONVEYANCE.

An open contract or any contract under which a purchaser is entitled to a conveyance upon payment of the purchase money, the vendor cannot maintain an action at law for the purchase price unless he has actually conveyed the land, or unless the action is for an intermediate instalment. [Landes v. Kusch, 24 D.L.R. 136; Clergue v. Vivian, 41 Can. S.C.R. 607; East London Union v. Metropolitan R., L.R. 4 Ex. 309; Laird v. Pim, 7 M. & W. 474, applied.] The remedies of specific performance and an action for the purchase price are inconsistent, since one operates as an affirmation while the other as a rescission of the contract; and where a vendor elects to proceed with the remedy of specific performance or foreclosure of the purchaser's interest under an agreement for the sale of land, a judgment for an unpaid instalment is thereafter no longer enforceable except as to the costs. [Lee v. Sheer, 19 D.L.R. 36, distinguished; Hargreaves v. Security Inv. Co., 19 D.L.R. 677, followed; Jackson v. Scott, 1 O.L.R. 488, applied.]

Standard Trust Co. v. Little, 24 D.L.R. 713, 8 S.L.R. 203, 8 W.W.R. 1112, 31 W.L.R. 769.

SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE—ACTION FOR PURCHASE PRICE—PLEADING.

The remedies of specific performance of an agreement for the sale of land or an action for the purchase price thereof are both the same; but the latter carries, both as to pleadings and orders, the incidence of an action for specific performance. [Groves v. Mason, 2 A.L.R. 181; Ellis v. Rogers, 50 L.T. 660, applied.]

NECESSARY ALLEGATIONS—TITLE—POSSESSION.

In an action for the foreclosure of a contract for the purchase of land, the court will not order the recovery of the possession of the land and the cancellation of the agreement of sale in the absence of any allegations that possession of the land was given to the purchaser, or that the agreement of sale, or the vendor's title, had been registered.

ASSIGNMENT TO SEVERAL—CONTRIBUTION—SALE IN LIEU OF PARTITION.

M having purchased certain lands under an agreement for sale from C, assigned the agreement to himself, his two coplaintiffs, and the defendant, the latter three agreeing to indemnify him, each to the extent of one quarter of the purchase price, and the four also agreed to pay one G, $15,000 for an interest claimed by him in the said lands. The defendant made default in his contribution of part of his share and the plaintiffs had to pay his share as well as their own to C and G. In an action for a declaration of a lien upon the defendant's interest in the lands for the moneys so advanced and for foreclosure. Held, that no such lien existed in favour of the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs asked leave to amend to ask for sale (in lieu of partition) with leave to all parties to bid at such sale, and for directions as to distribution of the proceeds. Held, such amendment should be granted and judgment was given for the plaintiffs for the amount advanced with an order for sale as asked on the terms set out in the judgment.

SALE OF LAND—ACTION BY VENDOR—APPLICATION FOR ORDER NISI—PLAINTIFF TO ELECT BETWEEN FORECLOSURE AND PERSONAL JUDGMENT.

Prince Rupert Development Syndicate v. Lustig, [1919] 1 W.W.R. 496.

CROP-PAYMENTS—VENDOR'S PORTION OF CROP TO BE DELIVERED AT ELEVATOR—THE CROP PAYMENTS ACT, C. 34 OF 1915—RIGHT OF VENDOR TO SEIZE THRESHED CROP ON LAND.

Where under an agreement of sale of land the purchase price is payable by delivering to a certain elevator in the name of the vendor the crop or a specified portion of it grown on the land, the agreement providing that the crop shall be the personal property of the vendor, the vendor (in view of s. 3 of the Crop Payments Act, c. 34 of 1915, (Sask.), and said provision in the agreement) has a legal interest in the crop before its delivery at the elevator and may enter on the land and seize his proper quantity of the grain threshed and stored thereon. The right to seize extends only to the portion belonging to the vendor for that year under the agreement. An agreement between the parties in view of the purchaser going overseas, which however he eventually did not do, by which he agreed to make certain payments, was held under the circumstances not to have changed the crop-payment provision to one of cash payment, the purchaser's agreement for these payments not having been accepted in lieu of the original agreement.

Rose v. Edmonds, [1919] 3 W.W.R. 47.

OCCUPATION BY PURCHASER—DEFAULT—ORDER FOR POSSESSION.

The defendant had purchased from the plaintiff, under agreement for sale, certain land and occupied the house upon the land under the usual clause in agreements for sale to the effect that the purchaser can occupy until default. Default in payment having been made, the plaintiff served a 30 day demand for possession upon the defendant and then upon application to a Judge in Chambers obtained an order for possession on the strength of Doe d. Hiatt v. Miller, 5 Car. & P. 395; Ball v. Cullimore, 2 C.M. & R. 120, 4 L.J. Ex. 137, and Doe v. Jackson, 1 B. & C. 449, which are to the effect that permission to a purchaser to take possession under an agreement for sale, as above creates a tenancy which upon default being made in the agreement becomes a tenancy at will, so that after notice to determine the tenancy an order for possession may be made.

Green v. Longhi, 7 W.W.R. 924.

EXCHANGE OF LANDS—LIEN FOR CHARGES IN EXCESS THAN STIPULATED.

Where an owner of lands gives the same in exchange for an hotel and is obliged by the terms of his agreement to assume an encumbrance then existent upon the hotel, which subsequently turns out to be of a larger amount than mentioned in the agreement, and is compelled to pay the taxes on the hotel, which under the terms of the agreement were to be paid by the other party to the exchange, then the above-mentioned first party to the exchange is entitled to a lien upon the lands exchanged for the amount paid in excess of that stipulated for in the agreement, but not to a lien for the costs of an action brought against the hotel owner.

O'Connor v. Charleson, 10 O.W.N. 35.

The acceptance by the purchaser, after the expiry of the delay for redemption, of interest on the selling price that became due during the delay, implies no consent on his part to prolong the stipulated term.

Johnson v. Turgeon, 25 Que. K.B. 476.

(§ II—31)—PROMISSORY NOTE FOR UNPAID PURCHASE PRICE.

Where a promissory note for the unpaid purchase price of lands sold is given, not to the vendor, but to the wife of the vendor, assuming that the note is the property of the wife, the vendor's lien passes with the note to the wife.

Graham v. Crouchman, 39 D.L.R. 284, 41 O.L.R. 22.

WAIVER OF—TAKING NOTE FOR UNPAID PURCHASE MONEY.

A seller of land does not waive his right to a vendor's lien for unpaid purchase money by taking the purchaser's promissory note for the amount thereof. [Mackreth v. Symmons, 15 Ves. 329, followed.]

Kaulbach v. Jodrey, 13 D.L.R. 782, 13 E.L.R. 409.

The taking of the notes by the vendor cannot be construed as conclusive evidence of his intention to abandon his lien for the unpaid purchase money; the presumption is that the lien exists, and the taking of notes, whether of the purchaser or of a third person, will not displace that presumption, so long as the reasonable inference from all the circumstances is that the notes were only taken on condition that they would be paid.

WAIVER—INSURANCE PREMIUMS.

The vendor of an immovable who receives an undertaking from the purchaser that the latter will insure the building on the land so to secure the unpaid portion of the purchase money and who accepts a policy issued in his favour on application by the purchaser who gives his note for the premium, impliedly agrees that the legal hypothec on the immovable for the amount of the note shall take precedence over his hypothec for the price of sale.

Mutual Ass'ce Co. v. Morency, 44 Que. S.C. 434.

(§ II—32)—PURCHASER OF VENDEE—ASSUMPTION OF LIEN.

Where the purchaser of land under contract resells the land, and a subpurchaser assumes the indebtedness to the original vendor, and agrees to indemnify the original purchaser therefrom, the latter's lien as against the subpurchaser's interest in the land extends not only to the cash portion of the unpaid purchase money due him, but to the balance so assumed by the subpurchaser in respect of which the original purchaser remained under obligation to the original vendor.

Ronald v. Lillard, 23 D.L.R. 392, 25 Man. L.R. 393, 7 W.W.R. 1128, 30 W.L.R. 382.

PURCHASER ASSUMING HYPOTHEC—LIEN DE DROIT—QUEBEC JURISPRUDENCE.

Under Quebec law, where a purchaser assumes an obligation to pay the hypothecary creditor any sum of money which may be due him on the property purchased, the creditor can at any time accept that obligation and establish a direct lien de droit against such purchaser as a personal debtor to pay the money.

Archaibeault v. Lapierre, 43 D.L.R. 42, 54 Que. S.C. 266.

(§ II—35)—"MORTGAGE"—DEFINITION OF, UNDER MORTGAGES ACT — INSURANCE MONEY—APPLICATION.

The definition of "mortgage" in the Mortgages Act, R.S.O. c. 112, is wide enough to cover the charge known as a vendor's lien and the holders of such vendor's lien are entitled as mortgagees to have insurance money on the property applied in accordance with the provisions of s. 6 of that Act. Although they are entitled to the security of the insurance money, they are not entitled to apply the insurance money in payment of purchase instalments not yet due, but such money should be held in trust or invested or paid into court if the parties cannot agree as to its disposal. [Corham v. Kingston, 17 O. R. 432; Edmonds v. Hamilton Provident, 18 A.R. (Ont.) 347, followed.]

Scott v. Crinnian, 44 D.L.R. 20, 43 O. L.R. 430.

ENFORCEMENT—DEFICIENCY JUDGMENT.

The better practice on settling the form of judgment in favour of vendor for a judicial sale to realize the balance of purchase money on the purchaser's default, is not to include an order for payment by the purchaser of the deficiency, if any, which may arise on the judicial sale yet to take place, but to reserve leave to plaintiff to make a future application in the event of there being a deficiency.

Robinson v. Starr, 14 D.L.R. 767, 23 Man. L.R. 84, 26 W.L.R. 261.

ENFORCEMENT OF VENDOR'S LIEN.

A vendor's lien upon real estate is enforceable by sale but not until it has been established by a judgment of the court binding the persons affected by the lien; the vendor has the alternative right to rescind the contract and recover possession of the land.

Ronald v. Lillard, 23 D.L.R. 392, 25 Man. L.R. 393, 7 W.W.R. 1128, 30 W.L.R. 382.

CONCURRENT REMEDIES—FORECLOSURE—PERSONAL JUDGMENT.

A vendor suing to enforce an agreement for sale of land on the purchaser's default is not entitled to pursue concurrently the remedies of personal judgment against the purchaser and of foreclosure and sale of the lands. [Hargreaves v. Security Investment, 19 D.L.R. 677, followed.]

Boydell v. Haines, 21 D.L.R. 371, 21 B.C. R. 171, 8 W.W.R. 17, 30 W.L.R. 842.

DEFICIENCY JUDGMENT—PRAYERS FOR.

Where, in an action for specific performance of an agreement for the sale of land there is no express prayer for a declaration of a lien, the prayer for an order of sale in effect entitles the vendor to a decree for a lien and sale thereunder, and to a judgment for any deficiency under the sale.

Anglo-American Trust Co. v. Longworth, 24 D.L.R. 222, 8 W.W.R. 1193, 31 W.L.R. 950.

SALE OF PROPERTY BY VENDOR—DEFAULTS BY NEW PURCHASER.

The liability for the purchase price under an agreement for the sale of mining lands, even though expressly reserved in an agreement whereby the property is subsequently sold to a new purchaser, does not continue against the original purchaser after a foreclosure by the vendor for defaults by the new purchaser.

Vivian v. Clergue, 24 D.L.R. 856, 51 Can. S.C.R. 527, affirming 20 D.L.R. 660, 32 O. L.R. 200.

FORECLOSURE—LAND SITUATE OUTSIDE OF PROVINCE.

The proceedings required to be taken under the Foreclosure and Sale Act, (Alta.), 1914, c. 6, for the enforcement of agreements for the sale of land do not apply where the land is situated outside of the province.

EFFECT OF TAX-SALE—LIEN AGAINST PROCEEDS.

Where land which has been transferred, but not paid for, is sold for taxes, the unpaid vendor has a lien upon the proceeds in excess of the amount required for taxes. An unpaid vendor's lien is an interest in the property, and it is not so much a question of the lien attaching to the proceeds of a sale thereof as of the unpaid vendor being directly entitled to them as being the real owner of the property.

Hetu v. Morinville Oil City Land Co., 13 A.L.R. 115, [1918] 1 W.W.R. 666.

DEFAULTS — CONDITIONAL RESOLUTORY CLAUSE—DEMEURE.

When in a contract a resolutive clause is conditionally stipulated for, the party who wishes to take advantage of it should prove that he has fulfilled the conditions necessary to give effect to it. The creditor of an obligation payable by periodical instalments and subject to the following conditional agreement: "Should the debtor make default in the said payments, during a period of eight weeks, the company shall be at liberty to ask for the balance then due on purchase price," cannot demand the application of this penal clause without a prior mise en demeure. The fact that the debt will be payable at his domicile does not relieve him of the necessity of this mise en demeure.

III. Rights of parties as to third persons; bona fide purchasers.

(§ III—35)—WHO IS BONA FIDE PURCHASER—SALE OF LAND CONVEYED AS SECURITY.

One claiming land under an unregistered contract of sale on which the balance of the purchase money had not been paid, is not a bona fide purchaser for value so as to be entitled to a conveyance of the land in priority to a right of redemption in one who had conveyed the land to the vendor by a deed absolute in form but intended as security for a debt. [Molony v. Kernan, 2 Dr. & War. 31, followed.]

EXECUTION CREDITOR—PRIORITIES.

An execution creditor is not a purchaser for value without notice as to rank in priority over a purchaser of the land, even though the purchaser registered no caveat. A purchaser under an instalment agreement entered into before the filing of a writ of execution against the lands of the registered vendor has a prior right to the lands as against the execution creditor.

ASSIGNMENT BY VENDOR—CONDITIONS AS TO PAYMENT.

Where the payment for an assignment of an agreement for the sale of lands is made dependent upon the condition of the payment of the contract instalments, the fact that the assignee foreclosed and acquired the purchaser's interest cannot be substituted in lieu of the condition where the instalments were not in fact paid.

ASSIGNMENT—PURCHASER'S EQUITIES—RESCISSION—LIEN.

The assignee of an agreement for the sale of land takes it subject to the purchaser's equities, including his right to rescind the contract for fraud; he is bound to make restitution of the money received by him under such contract, and the purchaser is entitled to a lien therefor.

Quebec Bank v. Greenlees, 33 D.L.R. 696, 10 A.L.R. 419, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 144, affirming 32 D.L.R. 282, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 746.

ASSIGNMENT OF AGREEMENT—RIGHT TO PAYMENTS—QUIT CLAIM DEED—ASSIGNOR'S RIGHT TO SUE.

Wilson v. Zeller, 34 D.L.R. 199, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 424.

FAILURE TO REGISTER AGREEMENT—DEFINITENESS—REMEDIES—PARTIES.

A purchaser, who fails to register the agreement of sale, may be debarred from the equitable relief of specific performance, after a subsequent purchaser has bona fide acquired the property; but he still has a remedy against the vendor in an action for damages for breach of contract. He cannot however, join as a party defendant, the subsequent purchaser who was not instrumental in inducing the breach. An agreement for a mortgage is not unenforceable by reason of indefiniteness because it provides for "one-half cash, balance on suitable mortgage."

Bennett v. Stodgell, 28 D.L.R. 639, 36 O.L.R. 45.

Where a purchaser under an agreement to purchase lands with prior notice of an outstanding mortgage has paid certain instalments and the amount of the unpaid instalments is approximately the amount of the outstanding mortgage, and where he is electing, pursuant to the agreement to pay up the entire balance of purchase money he is thereby entitled to force the vendor to redeem the mortgage so outstanding, no matter how unexpectedly onerous that may prove to the vendor.

Cushing v. Knight, 6 D.L.R. 820, 46 Can. S.C.R. 555, 2 W.W.R. 704.

It is not necessary, under s. 91 of the Real Property Act (Man.), for one who contracts with the registered owner of land for its purchase, to make inquiry as to the latter's title, and the former will be protected as an innocent purchaser, notwithstanding he acquired notice of another's equity in the property, before the completion of the contract of purchase. A contract for the purchase of land is within s. 91 notwithstanding such Act deals specifically with actual transfers, mortgages, encumbrances and leases, since the words "contracting or dealing with, or proposing to take an instrument from a registered owner," which are used in such section, clearly comprehended contracts of purchase.

REALTY SALE—OPTION IN LEASE—ACCEPTANCE.

Bennett v. Stodgell, 17 D.L.R. 835, 6 O.W.N. 333.

ASSIGNMENT OF AGREEMENT WITH VENDOR'S APPROVAL—CAVEAT BY SUBSEQUENT PURCHASER—EFFECT ON COVENANT FOR TITLE.

In February 1906, plaintiff sold certain land to defendant P. By assignment dated February 1907, P. assigned his interest in said contract to defendant G. which was approved by the plaintiff. In June 1907, defendant B. registered a caveat against the lands, claiming under an agreement for sale from defendant P. to her. Plaintiff sued for specific performance, asking for the purchase money, and in default, cancellation of the agreement as against P. and G. No relief was asked against defendant B. Defendant G. defended setting up that the plaintiff could not give clear title. The action being dismissed, the plaintiff appealed. On appeal:—Held, that the defendant G. was in no better position to call for clear title than the defendant P. and as P. could not compel the plaintiff to remove the caveat in question, G. could not compel its removal. That the approval of the assignment of P.'s contract to the defendant G. had not the effect of a fresh covenant on the part of the plaintiff to the defendant G. to convey the land free of all encumbrances to him.

AGREEMENT OF SALE—POSSESSION—MORTGAGE TAKEN BY CREDITOR.

A holder of an agreement of sale of real property who, in conformity with the obligations he has assumed, pays the interest on the sale price and the municipal taxes, who visits the lot purchased, to know it and to identify it, and who, when there is a cancellation clause, fulfills all the conditions of his agreement of sale, by that very fact takes possession of the property and becomes the owner. A sale by the original owner, even with the consent of the holder of the agreement of sale, cannot, in these circumstances, prejudice the rights of a creditor of the latter who has taken a judicial mortgage on the real property.

Archambault v. Perrault, 46 Que. S.C. 401.

LAND OUTSIDE OF PROVINCE—ASSIGNMENT OF INTEREST BY A VENDOR AFTER AGREEMENT—NOTICE—OBLIGATION OF ASSIGNEE TO CONVEY TO PURCHASER—SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE — PAYMENTS MADE BY PURCHASER BEFORE AND AFTER ASSIGNMENT — AGREEMENT BETWEEN VENDOR AND ASSIGNEE, NATURE OF—COSTS FORM OF JUDGMENT.

Campbell v. Barrett, 32 O.L.R. 157.

REGISTRATION OF JUDGMENT PRIOR TO DEED—EFFECT.

An agreement of sale of real estate subject to the condition that the "purchasers shall have their deed of sale as soon as they have paid one-half of the purchase price or build a $3,000 house on each lot" with the stipulation that, in default of their fulfilling these and other conditions enumerated in the deed, the party agreeing to sell "may require the cancellation of these presents, but without putting in default" is made under a condition cancelling the contract. If, therefore, it is accompanied with delivery to the purchasers and actual possession it is equivalent to a sale, and their creditor, who has recovered judgment and had it registered on the real estate after the agreement of sale, acquires a valid mortgage for the payment of his claim.

Archambault v. Perrault, 46 Que. S.C. 59.

A purchaser of land which is not fully paid for by the owner and subject to a clause providing that no assignment of the owner's interest therein should be valid or effectual unless or until approved by the party from whom he claims title fails to obtain such approval, acquires in point of time, a prior equity thereto as against a third party to whom such lands were subsequently assigned, and the approval to such assignment was procured by fraud. Where by the terms of a land contract it is provided that the land cannot be conveyed without the approval of the owner unless it is fully paid for, an assignee of such land who procures such approval by fraud stands in equity in no better position than as if no consent had been obtained, and cannot defeat the equity of a prior purchaser for value who purchased the land in fee and to whom approval for transfer had been refused.

Allan v. Petrimoult, 6 O.W.N. 593.

ASSIGNMENT OF VENDOR'S INTEREST—RIGHT OF ASSIGNEE TO SUE FOR PAYMENTS.

If a vendor of land by agreement for sale assigns his interest to a third party, and in the assignment covenants that his purchaser will make his payments, he is bound to pay these moneys to the assignee upon default of his purchaser even though the assignee has obtained an order for foreclosure. Lee v. Gundy & Gundy, 15 O.W.N. 292.

TITLE TO LAND—NAME OF TRANSFEREE LEFT BLANK IN TRANSFER—TRANSFER AND DUPLICATE CERTIFICATE OF TITLE ENTRUSTED TO AGENT FOR REGISTRATION—FRAUDULENT USE BY AGENT—INNOCENT PURCHASER ACQUIRING DOCUMENTS AND GETTING TITLE — ESTOPPEL AGAINST ORIGINAL PURCHASER.

If a purchaser of land takes a transfer thereof with the name of the transferee left blank and delivers the transfer together with the duplicate certificate of title, to an agent with instructions to effect registration of the transfer to said purchaser, and the agent fraudulently uses the documents for his own purposes so that they come into the hands of an innocent purchaser for value without notice of any fraud, whose name is filled in as transferee and who becomes the registered owner and who receives no notice of the original purchaser's claim for years, the original purchaser is estopped from denying the last purchaser's title.

Mauch v. National Securities, [1919] 2 W.W.R. 740.

ASSIGNMENT OF AGREEMENT—FORECLOSURE —PARTIES—PLEADING.

The plaintiff, having sold certain lands to the defendant under agreement of sale by which the purchase price was payable in certain instalments, assigned the said agreement to M. as security for a loan. Subsequently she assigned the agreement to S. as security for a second loan. Notice of such assignments was duly given to the defendant. The defendant having made default the plaintiff commenced an action against M., S. and the defendant for foreclosure. Held, that M. and S. should not be joined as defendants without an offer to redeem them. The plaintiff had at the best merely an equity of redemption in the agreement for sale, that the titles of both M. and S. were prima facie absolute as against the plaintiff and he has no locus standi to ask for foreclosure of the defendant. It is not necessary in pleading an assignment to allege that the assignment contains "apt words" in that behalf if in fact it does contain words sufficient in law to vest the chose in action in the assignee.

Holloway v. Miner, 34 W.L.R. 837, 10 W.W.R. 995.

ASSIGNMENT—SIGNERS—REPUDIATION FOR FRAUD.

The mere fact that a purchaser of lands, under agreement named as a party to an assignment of the agreement, has not signed it, has not the result of making it ineffective as between the assignor and assignee named in it. A purchaser of lands who wishes to repudiate his agreement upon the ground of misrepresentation must do so promptly when knowledge of misrepresentation comes to him.

Fanco-Belgian Invest. Co. v. Small, 34 W.L.R. 857, 10 W.W.R. 924.

(§ III—36)—BALANCE OF SALE PRICE—NEW PURCHASER—INTEREST—EXTENSION OF TIME—DELEGATION—ACCEPTANCE—QUE. C.C. 1173, 1174.

The fact that a vendor has accepted from a subsequent purchaser payments on the capital and interest of the sale price, the said subsequent purchaser having assumed towards the first purchaser the payment thereof, does not correspond to an acceptance of the delegation of payment, and does not release the first purchaser. Such would be the case even if the vendor had granted time to the subsequent purchaser for the payment of what might be due him; but, in the latter case, although the vendor would not be released, yet he would be right in complaining if, as a result, he suffered damages.

Reeves v. Piché, 46 Que. S.C. 315.

(§ III—38)—RIGHTS OF PARTIES—TITLE—NOTICE OF DEFECTS.

A purchaser of real estate with notice that his grantor though holding a registered conveyance absolute in form holds it in fact only as security, takes by the conveyance only the rights of a mortgagee in possession and is subject, on the death of the grantor, to be redeemed within the statutory period by the latter's heirs who have not concurred in the sale.

Nelson v. Charleson, 15 D.L.R. 660, 19 B.C.R. 190, 26 W.L.R. 865, 5 W.W.R. 995.

NOTICE OR FACTS PUTTING ON INQUIRY.

Where the plaintiff purchases the equitable interest of his vendor in a tract of land, with notice that such vendor had previously agreed to sell an undivided fractional interest in such tract of land to the defendant, the plaintiff thereby becomes bound prima facie to carry out his vendor's bargain so made with the defendant.

SUBSEQUENT MORTGAGEE WITH NOTICE.

A mortgage given back for part of the purchase price but not registered until after the registration of a subsequent mortgage on the same property, may be decreed to have priority over the subsequent mortgage where the latter was taken with notice of the unregistered mortgage for purchase money.

Kirk v. Harvey, 15 D.L.R. 488, 18 B.C.R. 645, 26 W.L.R. 747, 5 W.W.R. 980.

PURCHASE OF LANDS FROM AGENT—TRUSTS—KNOWLEDGE.

Where title to land is taken in the name of an agent, although purchased with the funds of the principal and held by the latter for a period sufficient to give him a title by possession independent of the agent's fiduciary relationship, a purchaser of the agent with knowledge of such circumstances does not stand in the position of a bona fide purchaser as to acquire a title to the land superior to the principal.

Miller v. Halifax Power Co., 24 D.L.R. 29, 48 N.S.R. 370.

Where a purchaser enters into and signs an agreement for the purchase of land with prior notice of an outstanding mortgage, he ordinarily will be presumed to know that the mortgage may be in terms which do not permit of prepayment of the mortgage money before maturity.

Cushing v. Knight, 6 D.L.R. 820, 46 Can. S.C.R. 555, 2 W.W.R. 704.

A purchaser of land is bound by notice of an adverse claim at any time before he has completed his purchase by actual payment, and, if part payment only has been made, his right to hold as a bona fide purchaser without notice will be limited to payments made before notice of the adverse claim. [Rose v. Peterkin, 13 Can. S.C.R. 677, applied.]

Agreement—Assignment—Default—Notice of cancellation.

Prudhomme v. Labelle, 4 O.W.N. 388, 23 O.W.R. 388.

(§ III—39)—ASSIGNEE OF PURCHASER.

The assignee of a purchaser under a contract for the sale of land is not personally liable for the unpaid instalments of the purchase price provided for in the contract, either to his assignor or to the original vendor, in the absence of a promise on his part to pay the same, though he took the assignment with knowledge that the purchase price had not been paid.

Côté v. Olson, 2 D.L.R. 392, 20 W.L.R. 690, 2 W.W.R. 54.

RIGHTS OF VENDOR—TIME AS ESSENCE—ASSIGNMENT BY PURCHASER.

Where time is made the essence of an agreement for the sale of land, and the purchaser has made a default, the vendor exercising his right of repossession of the land under the terms of the contract is entitled to the rents and profits as against an assignee of the purchaser. [Brickles v. Snell, 30 D.L.R. 31, [1916] 2 A.C. 599, applied.]

Where an agreement for the sale of land provides for the payment of the purchase price by instalments, with interest on the unpaid portion thereof at a specified rate, which is also the rate payable by the vendor under a mortgage of the land made by him, and the land is resold by the purchaser under a similar agreement calling for the same rate of interest, which is then assigned by him to the original vendor as security for the purchase price remaining unpaid upon the original agreement of sale, the fact that the original vendor is subsequently compelled to pay a higher rate of interest to his mortgagee does not enable him to exact such higher rate from the ultimate purchaser whose agreement has been assigned to him.

Great West Land Co. v. Stewart, 3 D.L.R. 805, 3 O.W.N. 1141.

If, upon the failure of the vendee to pay the amount due on a contract for the sale of land, within the time limited by the court therefor, payment is made by one to whom the vendee assigned his interest in the contract, and who paid to the vendee or his agent all payments under the contract as they came due, the assignee will be given judgment against the vendee therefor, together with interest thereon, and the costs he is compelled to pay.

Southwell v. Williams, 4 D.L.R. 1, 17 B.C.R. 209, 21 W.L.R. 771, 2 W.W.R. 697.

Where the defendant, who owned 200 city lots, sold 119 of them, together with others, subject to the payment of the remainder of the purchase money due on all the 200 lots, it being understood that those retained by the defendant should be deemed fully paid for, and the purchaser sold a number of his lots to persons who made payments to him thereon, and afterwards, upon the defendant's default, under the agreement by which he acquired title, his vendor foreclosed, and, after his claim had been satisfied from the proceeds of the sale of nearly all of the lots, the surplus was paid into court, the defendant is entitled to priority in payment therefrom, if the amount due him from the purchaser should exceed such surplus, and, in that event, neither the purchaser nor those who made payments on the lots purchased by them, are entitled to any part of the surplus.

Those who purchased lots from the vendor are entitled, in priority to all other claims, to reimbursement from such fund for the amount of their several payments to him.

Where the assignee of a lessee's interest in a lease with option to purchase, exercises such option at a price per foot frontage agreed upon in lieu of being arbitrated, it will be presumed that, in fixing the price, regard was had to the circumstance that a "private lane" forming a part of the demised premises was subject to easements of right-of-way in favour of leaseholders of adjoining property in pursuance of a scheme of subdivision made by the original lessee and referred to in the lease; and such assignee is not entitled to call for a release of such easements nor to an abatement of price as compensation in lieu of a release.

Re Boulton and Garfunkel, 6 D.L.R. 373, 4 O.W.N. 25, 23 O.W.R. 1.

ASSIGNMENT OF AGREEMENT—POSSESSION—CANCELLATION OF ORIGINAL AGREEMENT—LIABILITY TO ORIGINAL OWNER FOR RENT.

Where a party goes into possession of land under an assignment of an agreement for sale, the original agreement through which he claims being subsequently cancelled the property reverting to the original owner, he is liable to the original owner for rent from the time of the termination of the agreement through which he claims. The fact that he was not made a party to the proceedings is immaterial if he had in fact notice of the proceedings and could have intervened if he had seen fit.

Waters v. Currie, 49 D.L.R. 213, [1919] 3 W.W.R. 525.

ASSIGNEE OR PURCHASER—WHAT CONSTITUTES.

Where an agreement for the sale of land on periodical payments stipulates that any assignment of the agreement by the purchaser must be approved by the vendor, the fact that the vendor has written to an assignee of the agreement that he will accept payments from him though he cannot transfer to him without the authority of the original purchaser, is sufficient to satisfy the terms of the agreement and such assignee is entitled to the notice of forfeiture called for by the agreement in case the vendor desires to declare a forfeiture on default of payment.

ASSIGNEE OF BONA FIDE PURCHASER—FRAUD VITIATING SHELTER.

The rule which protects a purchaser with notice taking from a purchaser without notice, and thereby sheltering himself under the latter's title, is never applied (a) to enable a trustee to buy back trust property which he has sold, (b) to enable a man who has acquired property by fraud to plead that he sold it to a bona fide purchaser without notice and has got it back again; and where a partner, holding the legal estate in trust for all the partners, so acts with another partner in a scheme as coadventurers in a transaction amounting to a clear breach of such trust on the trustee-partner's part and to a fraud against the remaining partners on the part of both participants in such scheme, the general rule of protection of bona fide purchaser cannot be invoked by either of the wrongdoers. [Lowther v. Carlton, 2 Atk. 242, reconciled; Re Stapleford Colliery Co., Barrow's Case, 14 Ch.D. 432, 445; Lewin on Trusts, 12th ed., pp. 1102, 1103; West London Commercial Bank v. ASSIGNEE OF PURCHASER—ASSENT OF VENDOR—CANCELLATION OF CONTRACT FOR VENDEE'S DEFAULT.

Where, without obtaining the consent of his vendor as the contract of sale, required, a vendee sold land to the plaintiff, and subsequently the vendee's contract was cancelled for default in payment, the plaintiff acquired no enforceable rights in the land.

PURCHASER'S DIRECTION TO CONVEY TO THIRD PARTY.

A company has no right to sue on an agreement for the purchase of land where the offer was made to and accepted by someone else, though the offerer, previous to the acceptance of the offer, had requested that the deed be made out in the company's name.

In an action by a vendor to recover the balance of the purchase price due under an agreement for the sale of land, held that the evidence established a novation by the acceptance of one M. as the plaintiff's debtor in place of the defendant.

SUBSEQUENT PURCHASER—RELEASE OF ORIGINAL PURCHASER—NOTICE—ENTRIES IN BOOKS—COMMENCEMENT OF PROOF IN WRITING—PROOF BY WITNESSES.

A vendor, owning a number of lots of land and who admits that, when one who purchased from him transferred his property, his custom was to hold the new purchaser liable for the price of the sale, and that, if the latter did not make his payments regularly, the sale was cancelled and the money paid confiscated as liquidated damages, he thereby released the original purchaser.

When it appears from the vendor's books that the purchaser's account is closed by a balance which is carried to the debit of the subsequent purchaser, there is a commencement of proof in writing which allows verbal evidence.

ACCEPTING PAYMENTS OF ASSIGNEE OF PURCHASER—EFFECT.

A vendor of real estate who accepts the payment of interest on the purchase money from a person to whom his purchaser has resold with instructions that payments are to be made, to this person, and who grants him an extension of time to pay one of the instalments does not accept the delegate and does not discharge or liberate the delegator in such a way as to effect novation.

(§ II-15)—MOTION TO CHANGE—SPEEDING THE TRIAL.

Where a plaintiff has named a venue of his own selection in his statement of claim, a change of venue will not be directed merely to speed the trial on his application; the onus is upon the applicant to shew a preponderance of conveyance.

Chwayka v. Canadian Bridge Co., 10 D.L.R. 800, 4 O.W.N. 1001, 24 O.W.R. 370.

IN CIVIL CASES.

An order changing the venue will not be set aside on appeal on the ground that the affidavit on which it was made was upon information and belief only without disclosing the grounds for the belief, if the court considers that the circumstances of the case justify the order, as notwithstanding the Judicature rules (N.S.), order 36, it is not essential upon such application to disclose the source of information which the practice prior to the Judicature Act (N.S.) did not require.

Buckley v. Fillmore, 8 D.L.R. 526, 46 N.S.R. 510.

The venue of an action will be changed to the locality where the cause of action arose, if the defendant shews that the number of witnesses there far exceed in number those who would be inconvenienced by the venue stated in the plaintiff's process. [Macdonald v. Park, 2 O.W.R. 972, followed.]

Lafex v. Lafex, 1-D.L.R. 83.

Where it appears from the affidavits read that a strong feeling exists in the county in which the venue is laid which will make it difficult to obtain a jury with no interest in the matters involved, the court will order the venue to be changed to a county in respect to which no such difficulty exists.

Starratt v. Dominion Atlantic R. Co., 5 D.L.R. 641, 46 N.S.R. 272.

While there may be jurisdiction to change the place of trial, after notice of trial has been given, although irregularly, a plaintiff may not correct his own mistake in failing to give notice of trial in due time by a motion to change the venue to another trial sittings for which the time for service had not yet expired.

ACTION FOR DOWER—LOCAL VENUE.

Stauffer v. London & Western Trust Co., 10 D.L.R. 853, 4 O.W.N. 1336, 24 O.W.R. 627.

On an application for an order changing venue by a defendant as against a non-resident plaintiff, under s. 48 of the County Court Act, C.S.N.B. 1903, c. 116, it is necessary to satisfy the judge that the cause can be more conveniently or fairly tried in another county and also to prove by affidavit that the defendant has a good ground of defence, under s. 47. The court refused to interfere with the discretion of the County Court Judge in ordering a change of venue upon such an application, though the affidavit before the judge contained no direct statement that the defendant had a good defence and the grounds of the defence were not set out. Semble, that no appeal lies from the order of a County Court Judge changing venue.

Canadian Fairbanks Co. v. Edgett, 40 N.B.R. 411.

FAIR TRIAL—ALIEN ENEMY.

The object of the proposed appeal was to have the place of trial changed from B. to W. The action—which was for false imprisonment—had been tried at B., but a new trial was ordered, because prejudice had been caused to the plaintiff by evidence having been improperly admitted and counsel for the defendant having improperly referred to the plaintiff's nationality—he being an Austrian: [Gage v. Reid, 34 D.L.R. 46, 38 O.L.R. 514.] It was said, in regard to the second trial, that the plaintiff could not have a fair trial at B., because the counsel referred to had extraordinary influence in the locality, and the remarks made by him would attain great notoriety and so tend to prejudice the community from which the jurors would be drawn. Held, that the affidavit of the plaintiff's solicitor was admissible to shew the grounds for a change of venue, and might be effective. [Cossham v. Leach, 32 L.T.R. 665; Davis v. Murray, 9 P.R. 222; Roche v. Patrick, 5 P.R. 216, followed. Hood v. Cronkite, 4 P.R. 279; Leach v. Brown, 9 O.L.R. 380, distinguished.] But held, that the solicitor's belief that a fair trial could not be had at B., coupled with what was stated by him as to prejudice, did not amount to such strong and clear evidence as would induce the court to hold that there could not be a fair trial by a jury taken from the county of H., of which B. was the county town.

The Court of Sessions at Montreal has jurisdiction to try a charge for which the accused was arrested in Montreal and committed for trial there, although upon an information laid in another judicial district of the same province it is not essential that the accused shall, on his arrest, be sent for trial to the local venue at which the information was laid.

The general rule of the common law requiring the venue of trials of indictable offences to be laid in the county where the crime was committed, is to be applied also to trials of purely statutory offences otherwise than on indictment (e.g., offences under a provincial liquor law), unless there is some statutory provision to the contrary.

(§ II—22)—IN CRIMINAL CASE—DISCRETION.

A second order changing the place of trial at the instance of the Crown, after an abortive trial at the venue fixed by the first order on the prisoner's application, is within the discretion of the presiding judge (Cr. Code, s. 884); and where there was not a sufficient panel of jurors for a new jury at the same assize and where the Trial Judge was seized of facts from which it could properly be inferred that it was expedient to the ends of justice to make the second order, his decision becomes one of fact and not one of law, and cannot be interfered with on appeal, although the usual practice of putting the facts forward on affidavit was not adopted.

The King v. Lynn, 4 S.L.R. 324.

The place of trial of an accused will not be changed upon unsupported assertions to the effect that the Crown cannot, on account of the favourable sentiment prevailing in favour of the accused, obtain a fair and impartial jury, where all of the facts tend to shew that an impartial jury can be obtained with no more difficulty than is experienced in any criminal trial. An application of the Crown to have the place of trial changed, on the ground that it would be difficult, on account of the favourable sentiment prevailing in favour of the accused, to obtain an impartial jury, will be denied, where, on empanelling a jury which disagreed in a criminal case, the Crown did not make any challenges for cause, nor exhaust the jury panel, and made no attempt to obtain further jurors than those on the panel returned.

Where it was a part of the contractual obligation between the consignee of a carload of cement and the railway, in respect of its warehousing duties, that the railway should keep the car on the bonded spur line, as in fact it was bound under customs regulations to do until the customs duties were paid, but the railway, without authority, removed the car to another track, from which its contents were stolen, the railway company is liable for the loss. Defendant refused to deliver until his warehouse charges were paid. Held, that the defendant was not entitled to retain the goods until his charges were paid.

STORAGE OF WHEAT.

The contract between the parties, for the storage and delivery of four carloads of wheat, was contained in a storage ticket, and was made under the Manitoba Grain Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 83.—Held, that the provisions of the Canada Grain Act, 1912, did not apply to the contract; and the right or option of the defendants to deliver storage grain at a terminal elevator was beyond question, having regard to the terms of the contract and s. 58 of the Manitoba Grain Act. The provisions in that Act (ss. 54, 56) for delivery at the country elevator is not effective as against the option of the elevator company or warehouseman. Although the defendants did not give the plaintiffs notice in writing of the shipment of their grain to a terminal elevator, as required by subs. 2 of s. 58, no damage resulted to the plaintiffs by reason of the omission. The result of the proceedings before the Board of Grain Commissioners was, that the board refused to entertain or consider the complaint of the plaintiffs. The successful defendants in this action were deprived of costs, because they did not give the notice required, and because the question was one of the application and interpretation of statutes.

Molson's Bank v. De Courval, 12 Que. P.R. 439 (Sup. Ct.).

AGREEMENT TO ASSUME ACTION—JUDGMENT IN MAIN ACTION—OPPOSITION TO ANNUL.

There is simple warranty when a defendant calls in warranty the party who, by a private agreement, has assumed the action for salary which has been taken against him. When the judgment says: "orders the defendant in warranty to intervene in the main action to stop it, and orders the defendant in warranty to indemnify the plaintiff in warranty against the judgment rendered against the latter in the main action, capital, interests and costs, both of the demand and of the plea accrued and to accrue, and also to pay the costs of the present action," the principal plaintiff cannot have his judgment in the main action executed against the opposant, the defendant in warranty; his only recourse is against his debtor, the principal defendant.

Lavoie v. Laroche, 46 Que. S.C. 417.

INTERVENTION BY SURETY — DEFENCE AGAINST PRINCIPAL ACTION.

The guarantor made a party to a cause by the secured creditor may intervene and take the latter's fait et cause and in such case he may set up against the principal action not only the ground of defence which he may have, but also those which the creditor himself may rely on.

O'Hara v. Jasmin, 39 Que. S.C. 182.

ACTION IN WARRANTY—DIRECTORS.

The defendant in warranty, sued jointly and severally with his codirectors by a creditor of the company, cannot by exception to the form claim the dismissal of the action as to him on the ground that in the action the condemnation against his codirectors is equally asked for under a written guarantee to which he was not a party.

Barque D'Hochelega v. Bissonette, 18 Que. P.R. 332.

WARRANTY PLEADING.

A warrantor who takes up the cause of the warrantee represents the latter. This is an exception to the doctrine that one cannot plead through an agent.

Hoy v. Malette, 52 Que. S.C. 258.

WARRANTY—EXCEPTION TO FORM.

An exception to the form will not lie against an action in warranty on the ground that the reasons given by the plaintiff would not be the same for all defendants.

Barque D'Hochelega v. Bissonette, 18 Que. P.R. 336.

WARRANTY—DÉLIT — APPEAL — RES JUDICATA.

The author of a délit or quasi délit summoned in warranty cannot, without offering to repair the wrong which he admits that he had caused, be discharged from liability for his acts and obtain a dismissal of the main action by pleading that the principal plaintiff should have brought action directly against him and had no right of action against the principal defendant when the warrantor has been summoned, the main action and the action in warranty consolidated and both actions maintained, he cannot, upon an appeal only from the judgment which condemns him to indemnify the principal defendant cause it to be set aside on the ground that the judgment in the main action was wrong. He should also have appealed against this judgment failing which there was chose jugé as well against the warrantor as against the warrantee since the warrantor was a party to the cause and the judgment bound all the parties. The warrantor to get rid of the warranty by virtue of art. 1520 C.C. (Que.) must prove that there were sufficient grounds to have the main action dismissed. But when the grounds alleged have already been invoked by the principal defendant, and the witnesses are the same, he is liable on his warranty since that of which he complains would then be a mere error in judgment.

Meilleur v. Montreal Light, Heat and Power Company, 52 Que. S.C. 366.

WARRANTY—DISMISSAL OF MAIN ACTION—COSTS.

When in a case of warranty formulated before any defence is offered the defendant contests only the action in warranty and the main action is dismissed for failure to furnish security for costs, the action in warranty properly brought can also be dismissed but with the costs of contestation against the defendant in warranty.

Duteuil v. Bailiffs of Montreal, 52 Que. S.C. 398.

PERSONAL ACTION — REAL WARRANTY — NULLITY OF DEED.

When the principal plaintiff takes a personal action for a sum of money, balance of the price of a sale of an immovable, and the defendant calls in his warrantors in warranty, the latter cannot sue their remote warrantors in warranty, as by art. 187, C.C.P., this is only permitted in case of real warranty. In a suit of titles creating a successive warranty, if one of the deeds is annulled by the court, no recourse in warranty can be had against any of the subsequent warrantors.

Strachan v. Taylor, 54 Que. S.C. 93.

COMPANY DIRECTORS — SURETIES — DIVIDENDS — INSOLVENCY — JOINDER — CONCLUSIONS.

There may be an incidental demand in warranty, when a principal action is taken against the surety of a joint stock company, and the action in warranty is taken by that surety against one of its directors who has become liable for the company's debts under the Companies Act (Can.), for having declared a dividend when the company was insolvent. In an action in warranty, several cosureties and the principal debtor may be joined provided the conclusions are separated and distinct.

MOTION TO EXTEND—DEPOSIT.

A motion to extend the delay for calling in warranty, after the delays fixed by art. 164, C.C.P., without being accompanied by the deposit required, is not a dilatory exception and has not the effect of suspending the delays for pleading.

Universal Wardrobe Repair v. Berman Dye Works, 19 Que. P.R. 391.

HYPOTHECARY ACTION—PARTIES.

A defendant, sued jointly and severally with other subsequent owners of a property mortgaged by the hypothecary creditor who, after having had the property sold in an hypothecary action, has not been paid in full of his claim, may, by way of dilatory exception, ask to call in warranty the previous owner, as codefendant in the suit, if the latter has, in his deed of purchase, bound himself to pay the amount of the obligation.

Mousley v. Trudel, 19 Que. P.R. 145.

DECLINATORY EXCEPTION — DOMICILE — PLACE OF CONTRACT.

A defendant in an action in warranty taken against him in the district of Beauce, and based on a contract which he had made in Montreal with the principal defendant, cannot plead declinatory exception, claiming (1) that he is domiciled in the Province of Ontario where the action in warranty was served on him; (2) that the cause of action in warranty arose in the district of Montreal. Under art. 98, C.C.P., a defendant in an action in warranty, whosoever his domicile may be, should be summoned before the court of the place where the principal action was brought.

(§ I A—5)—FLOATABLE AND NAVIGABLE—BED—CROWN DOMAIN.

A river navigable from its mouth upwards until obstructions are reached which make the remainder only capable of floating loose timber is subject in its navigable

RIGHTS OF NAVIGATION—ACCESS TO SHORE —INTERFERENCE WITH—COMPENSATION —FALSE CREEK TERMINALS ACT—
NAVIGABLE WATERS PROTECTION ACT.

Any interference with a public right of navigation is a nuisance which the court can order abated, notwithstanding any approval thereof by the governor-in-council under s. 7 of the Navigable Waters Protection Act. The powers given the city of Vancouver by the False Creek Terminals Act, c. 76, 1913 (B.C.), of erecting a seawall, etc., in False Creek, cannot be carried out to the prejudice of rights of access from the creek to private property on the shore thereof, because the Dominion Parliament, which has exclusive legislative authority over navigation, has not authorized the construction of such works.

TEST OF NAVIGABILITY.

A river is navigable and floatable at trains et radeaux, when, with the assistance of the tide, small craft or rafts of logs can be navigated for transportation purposes in a practical and profitable manner; it, therefore, forms part of the Crown domain.

The object of the Ashburton Treaty of 1842 Art. II, which provides that "all the water communications and all the usual portages along the line of Lake Superior to the Pigeon river . . . shall be free and open to the citizens and subjects of both countries;" was for the advantage of those desiring to pass along the waters or the portage; there was no intention to take care of the rights of landowners or others near the route.

PUBLIC HARBOUR — NAVIGABLE WATERS — WATER LOTS.

The King v. Bradburn, 49 C.L.J. 695.

(§ I C—18) — MUNICIPAL DRAINAGE DITCHES.

Where a public body is intrusted with the construction of dyking works to prevent damage from the overflow of a river when in flood, it is its duty to avoid causing unnecessary inconvenience to individuals affected by the works; and where local adjustments and variations of the general plan can be made without affecting its suitability for its intended purpose or its compliance de facto with the description of works authorized, the public body is entitled to make such adjustments and variations if they diminish the interference with private rights or property and so lessen the amount of compensation to be paid in respect thereof.

Wilson v. Delta, 8 D.L.R. 881, 22 W.L.R. 931, [1913] A.C. 181, affirming on different grounds, 17 W.L.R. 680.

Where water courses have lost their natural condition and have become part of an artificial drainage system created under the drainage laws, the part of the system which was once a natural watercourse is entitled to no particular immunity under the law, over the parts which are purely artificial, but the whole must operate so as to discharge the waters which it gathers at a proper and sufficient outlet. A municipality that constructs a drainage ditch and carries the water therefrom into a ravine on the land of the plaintiff, which was not a natural watercourse, is answerable in damages therefor.

(§ I C—22) — FLOATAGE RIGHTS — NEGLIGENCE — INJURY TO RIPARIAN PROPRIETOR.

Permitting logs to form a jam in a stream above a mill, which the defendant knew was likely to occur, without taking precautions to prevent it, renders him liable for an injury to a mill as the result of efforts to break the jam. The absolute right to float timber on any stream conferred by R.S.Q. 1909, art. 7298, is limited by art. 7349 so as to make the owner thereof liable for all damages inflicted on riparian owners in the exercise of such right. [Ward v. Grenville, 32 Can. S.C.R. 519; Veziua v. Drummond Lumber Co., 26 Que. S.C. 492, followed; Fraser v. Dumont, 21 Que. K.B. 365, not followed.]

Pepin v. Villeneuve, 12 D.L.R. 327, 22 Que. K.B. 520.

NON-NAVIGABLE STREAM—RIPARIAN RIGHTS — LOGGING—NEGLIGENCE.

Persons using a non-navigable watercourse for floating logs are bound to protect the riparian properties, and must, therefore, place booms for this purpose, where necessary; the omission to do this is such negligence as will entitle the owners of such properties to compensation for damages. [See arts. 7295, 7298 R.S.Q. 1909.]

Allie v. Gilmour; Allie v. Edwards Co., 28 D.L.R. 525, 49 Que. S.C. 425. [See also 24 Rev. Leg. 187.]

RIGHTS OF RIPARIAN OWNERS — DRIVING LOGS—RESERVE ALONG BANK OF STREAM.

A lumber company operating a timber berth under a provincial license cannot conduct its drive in bringing the logs down a stream, so as to deprive a riparian owner of his reasonable and proper means of access to and use of the river, notwithstanding the reserve of one chain in width along the shore of the river, in the original grant from the Crown.

STATUTORY RIGHTS—DRIVING LOGS—NEGLIGENCE—"UNNECESSARY DAMAGE."

The reckless exercise of a statutory right (River and Streams Act, Ont.) in driving logs on a navigable river renders the operators liable for "unnecessary damage" to a cofferdam erected under Dominion authority; the rights of lumbermen under pre-Confederation legislation, and of servants of the Dominion Government in matters respecting navigation are equal.

Booth v. Lowery, 35 D.L.R. 303, 54 Can. S.C.R. 421, affirming 31 D.L.R. 451, 37 O.L.R. 17.

TIMBER DRIVING.

The privilege of transmitting timber down watercourses in the Province of Quebec given by art. 7298, R.S.Q., 1909, is not granted in derogation of the obligation imposed upon those making use of watercourses for such purposes to make reparation for damages resulting therefrom by art. 7349 (2). The effect of the articles is that persons who avail themselves of the privilege thereby conferred are obliged to compensate riparian owners for all damages which result from the exercise of that right except in regard to such as cannot be avoided by the exercise of reasonable care and skill and those in respect of which the riparian proprietor himself may have contributed, or which have been occasioned by his own fault.

Dumont v. Fraser, 48 Can. S.C.R. 137.

(§ I C—30)—NAVIGABLE RIVER—SHORE—LICENSE TO CROSS—OBSTRUCTIONS.

The bed of a navigable river not tributary to the sea, whose waters rise or fall according to the season, extends to the line of ordinary high water, without taking count of floods, belongs to the Crown. Accordingly, where a person has obtained from the Dominion Government a license giving him the right to cross a navigable river, the owner of real property abutting on the shore of such river has not the right to prevent such person from exercising his rights, under the pretext that the shore consists only in a certain fall of the river between mean water and the low water of summer.

Cousineau v. Séguin, 54 Que. S.C. 447.

OWNERSHIP—BANKS AND BEACHES—ST. LAWRENCE RIVER — RIGHT TO CUT GRASS—SEAWEED—PRIVILEGE OF THE CROWN—C.C. QUE. ARTS. 400, 591—R.S.Q. 1909, ART. 7308.

The privilege given by art. 7308, R.S.Q. 1909, to riparian owners on the south bank of the St. Lawrence River below Quebec, to use the grass which grows on the bank in front of their land, does not extend to seaweed commonly called barnêche weed, which can only be used for industrial purposes and not for agriculture. The right to use this seaweed has been reserved by the Crown, which can dispose of it by lease or otherwise. A third party cannot question the validity of a lease granted by the Crown to an individual, by contending that the lease has been attained under false pretences.

Patton v. Pioneer Navigation & Sand Co., 21 Man. L.R. 405.

(§ I C—32)—NAVIGABLE RIVERS—BED OF RIVER—CROWN PROPERTY.

The bed of a navigable river, under the laws of Quebec belongs to the Crown and no riparian owner can construct works in the bed of the river without the consent of the Crown.

Cedars Rapids Mfg. & Power Co. v. La-coste, 16 D.L.R. 168, 110 L.T. 873, 6 W.W.R. 62, 30 T.L.R. 293, [1914] A.C. 569.

(§ I C—35)—HIGH-WATER MARK—RIPARIAN RIGHTS—ACCESS—DAMAGES FOR OBSTRUCTION.

High-water mark in British Columbia, at a place in respect to which there is no record of tides extending over at least a year, should be determined by the "visible high-water mark," i.e., the point fixed by the signs on the ground, such as the state of vegetation and the accumulation of debris. The owners of land adjoining the sea are entitled to free access to, and ingress from, the sea; this right is a private one, distinct from the public right of fishery or navigation, and there is no distinction between the rights of riparian owners on a tidal river and the sea. The occupant of such land is entitled to damages, even as against the Crown, where such private right of access to the sea has been invaded by an obstruction. [Att'y-Gen'] of Straits Settlement v. Wemyss, 13 App. Cas. 192; North Shore R. Co. v. Pion, 14 App. Cas. 612, followed.]

DESCRIPTION OF LAND—RIGHTS-OF-WAY—BEACH—HIGH-WATER MARK—FRESHET MARK.

Defendants by deed conveyed to the plaintiff all the beach around or on a lot of land measuring back from high-water mark, etc. The land in question was situated on an arm of the St. John River, with a slight rise and fall in tide. In an action for a declaration as to ownership and boundaries. Held, that the waters in question were a tidal arm of the sea, but in view of the slight rise and fall in tide and the fact of the existence of a distinct freshet mark, that the beach described in the deed consisted of the foreshore on the waters of the arm aforesaid from ordinary water mark to freshet mark. The word beach ordinarily means the land lying between the lines of high and low water over which the tide ebbs and flows.

Lee v. Arthurs, 46 N.B.R. 184.

(§ I C—40)—WHARF—NAVIGABLE RIVER—TRESPASS—NUISANCE.

A person who constructs a wharf upon the foreshore between high and low water mark in navigable waters, without the authority of the Crown, is a trespasser, and the wharf is a public nuisance.

Arsenault v. The King, 32 D.L.R. 622, 16 Can. Ex. 271.

EASEMENTS—SHORES OF NAVIGABLE RIVER—GRAVEL.

The servitude of steps leading to, or a towing path along, the shores of navigable rivers is only open to the public for the purposes of navigation. No one is authorized by this servitude to take away the sand and gravel from a shore granted by the Crown and which has become private property.

Duchaine v. Mercier, 26 Que. K.B. 570.

(§ I C—41)—RIGHT TO SHORE—UNAUTHORIZED CRIB WORK IN STREAM AS WRONG TO ADJOINING RIPARIAN PROPRIETOR.

The owner of land adjoining a navigable stream has a right of action for interference with his riparian rights against a person who without his license, and without any permission from the Crown owning the bed of the stream, places and maintains immediately in front of and abutting plaintiff's land crib work and "made land," which interferes with plaintiff's right of access to the stream. [Lyon v. Fishmongers Co., 1 A.C. 662, applied.]

Haggerty v. Latreille, 14 D.L.R. 532, 29 O.L.R. 300.

(§ I C—45)—RIGHT TO RIVER BED—RIPARIAN PROPRIETOR—CROWN GRANT.

Where a township was created by letters patent describing it as bounded on one side by a named river, being a river which was neither navigable for ships nor floatable for rafts or cribs of logs, and a subsequent Crown grant of a lot at the river front in such township described such lot as bounded on one side by such river, the township is riparian as is also the lot mentioned in the Crown grant, and the rule of interpretation that the riparian owner is entitled to the bed of the stream ad medium filum applies under Quebec law, in like manner as it would under English law, subject to any rights of public user of the stream.

Maclaren v. Attorney-General for Quebec, 15 D.L.R. 855, [1914] A.C. 258, 6 W.W.R. 62, 20 Rev. Leg. 248, reversing 8 D.L.R. 800, 46 Can. S.C.R. 656.

CANAL—GRANT OF SURPLUS WATER—PRIORITY — NAVIGATION — LIABILITY OF CROWN.

Under an order-in-council and grant from the Crown, the supplant's predecessors in title were given subject to the requirements of the public service, the right to draw off, take and use so much of the surplus water of the Bobcaygeon canal as may be sufficient to drive their grist mill, subject, however, to the Crown being relieved and discharged, under a provision of the grant, from any liability in damages resulting from any loss or damage to the grantees in respect of the erection, construction, maintenance and performance of any works by the Crown:—Held, the surplus water mentioned in the grant is what is not required for navigation, the interest of navigation having a prior claim to any right to surplus water. The paramount right to all waters flowing in the canal is in the Crown for the purposes of navigation. The Crown is not under the circumstances of the case bound to keep the canal in repair. To so hold would amount to a charge of personal negligence that cannot be imputed to the King, and for which, if it occurred, the law affords no remedy, for the doctrine of the Crown's immunity for personal negligence is in no way altered by the Exchequer Court Act.

Moore v. The King, 16 Can. Ex. 264.

(§ I C-47)—EXTENT OF CROWN GRANT—RAILWAY BRIDGE ACROSS RIVER.

The ownership of the bed of a river and of the freehold of the bed of a river and of the islands therein extends usque ad celum, and a grant by the Crown of the right to construct and maintain a railway bridge across such river carries with it the ownership of so much of the soil as is occupied by the superstructure as well as by the piers.

CROWN GRANT—BED OF RIVER.

The Act, 1 Geo. V., c. 6, applies only to presumptions, and not to a case where the bed of the river is granted in express terms. Bartlett v. Delaney, 11 D.L.R. 584, 27 O.L.R. 594.

(§ I C-51)—B.N.A. ACT, s. 91 (10)—JURISDICTION OF DOMINION OVER NAVIGATION—WORK FOR IMPROVEMENT OF NAVIGATION—ORDER-IN-COUNCIL—VALIDITY.

The Dominion under the B.N.A. Act, s. 91 (10) has jurisdiction over navigation and has jurisdiction to cause or allow any act or work within the Dominion for the advantage of navigation, the dam in question being such a work, the Dominion has jurisdiction in the premises. The statute of Canada in force at the time gave the Governor-in-Council authority to approve of the work in question and the order-in-council of Sept. 19, 1905, was perfectly valid.

Smith v. Ontario & Minnesota Power Co., 45 D.L.R. 266, 44 O.L.R. 43, reversing in part 42 O.L.R. 167.

(§ I C-52)—NAVIGATION—OBSTRUCTIONS—DIMINUTION OF FLOW OF RIVER—LIABILITY.

Where a dam obstructs the natural flow of the waters of a navigable stream to such an extent as to interfere with the usual operation below the dam of the plaintiff's line of boats the owner of the dam is answerable therefor.

OBSTRUCTION TO NAVIGATION—BOOMS AND LOGS—DELAYING PASSAGE OF BOATS—LIABILITY.

The right to float or drive logs down a navigable river where conducted without negligence or wilful obstruction is equal to the right of navigation; and a boat owner whose boat is detained in its course by a boom of logs is not entitled to demand more than that an opening be made within a reasonable time for the boat to proceed.

NAVIGATION—WHARF—TRESPASSER—NUISANCE.

A trespasser taking possession of the foreshore of a navigable river and building a wharf thereon cannot maintain an action for damages against the Crown for erecting a retaining wall in the interests of navigation and to protect the shore from erosion.

Noel v. The King, 38 D.L.R. 664, 16 Can. Ex. 259.

BRIDGE—ACTIONABILITY.

The construction of a low level bridge across a navigable river, without providing necessary facilities for navigation, does not give rise to an action for wrongful obstruction to navigation, if, in fact, the bridge is not the real cause of nonuser of the river for navigation.

The Fraser River in its upper waters, although nontidal, is a common and public highway, which the public has the right to freely use the watercourses thereof for the purpose of navigation, an obstruction of which by the erection of a bridge by a railway company will render the latter liable in damages.

OBSTRUCTION.

Where a railway company, in the professed exercise of its powers as a railway company and without the approval of the route by the Minister and of the location plans and works by the Railway Board, has constructed a solid filling across navigable waters, the Board, under ss. 230,

233, coupled with subs. (b) and (i) of s. 30 of the Railway Act, 1906, has jurisdiction to order the demolition of the works so constructed.

G.T.P.R. Co. v. Rochester, 48 Can. S.C. R. 238.

OBSTRUCTION.

Apart from any statutory regulations as to lights, those who place obstructions across navigable waters, even though lawfully authorized to do so, cannot complain if damage is done to their works by collision, brought about by the fact that a prudent navigator, proceeding with due care, was unable at a crucial moment, because of the absence of lights, to define his exact position in relation to such obstruction. [Bank v. "City of Seattle," 10 B.C. R. 513, distinguished.] Quære, whether a bridge, not originally built for railway purposes, but over which rails were laid (it was not shewn by whom) and used by a street railway company occasionally for construction purposes, is to be regarded as a "railway bridge" under the order-in-council of June 20, 1910 (Can. 1911, p. 112).

(§ I C—53)—WRECK—REMOVAL—LIABILITY OF OWNER—SALE—STATUTORY REQUIREMENTS.

Where a wreck obstructs navigation, the Minister of Marine may proceed to remove the obstruction according to the provisions of the Navigable Waters Protection Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 115, ss. 16-18: and on complying with the statutory requirements, may recover the costs of such removal from the owner of the wrecked vessel at the time the wreck was occasioned notwithstanding the subsequent sale to a third party.

(§ I C—55)—POSSESSION OF LANDS INUNDATED.

In a possessory action a court should only examine the facts from the point of view of the possession claimed by the plaintiff, and of the material difficulty of such possession of which he complains. The periodical inundations which result from the use of the waters of a stream, and of navigable or floatable rivers, has not the effect of making fall into the public domain the parts of the inundated lands which belong to owners of the river banks. When such lands again become exposed by the subsidence of the water, even when their surface has suffered changes, if they have not become a new bed for the overflowed river, they continue to belong to the original owner of the river bank, who is deemed to have always retained the possession and ownership.

Prescriptive right to use of highway for carrying stream, see Easements, II A—7. Diversion of water for municipal aqueduct, riparian rights, see Municipal Corporations, II F—175.

(§ II A—60)—NATURAL FLOW—DIVERSION—INJURY.

Every property owner is entitled to the natural flow of water through his property, but no one is entitled by artificial means to send water forward to his neighbour to the detriment of his neighbour.

Colchester North v. Anderdon; Gosfield North v. Anderdon, 21 D.L.R. 277. [Reversed in 24 D.L.R. 143, 34 O.L.R. 437.]

ERECTION OF PIER NOT INTERFERING WITH ACCESS TO LAND.

No right of action accrues to one riparian proprietor against another for the latter's erection and maintenance of a pier in the navigable waters of a lake where the plaintiff's right of access to his lands is not interfered with and he suffers no damages of a special character in addition to the interference with the public right of navigation, notwithstanding that the pier was not erected in compliance with the lawful requirements and is maintained contrary to law.

Baldwin v. Chaplin, 21 D.L.R. 846, 34 O. L.R. 1.

STATUTORY CURTAILMENT OF COMMON-LAW RIGHTS.

While riparian water rights may be curtailed or suspended by the statutory laws of British Columbia, authorizing the diversion of streams for agricultural and other purposes, such statutes were not intended to wholly abrogate such rights.

(§ II—65)—RIPARIAN RIGHTS.

The water right of a riparian owner is not a mere privilege, but a right incident to his ownership of the land, parcel of the inheritance.

WATERCOURSES — MARSH LANDS — ASHBRIDGE'S BAY.

No right analogous to a riparian right is acquired by the owner of land abutting upon a bog which could be travelled only as land, and which intervened between the parcel granted to him and his predecessors in title and the navigable waters of Ashbridge's Bay, Toronto, although an outlet had been made by dredging, if the use of the waters for boats by the owners of the land in question was over property granted by the Crown to the city and was permissive only.

Rickey v. Toronto; Schofield-Holden Machine Co. v. Toronto, 19 D.L.R. 146, 30 O. L.R. 523.

LAND BOUNDED BY "SIDE OF CHANNEL" OF STREAM.

Land bounded on and described as following the windings of the "side of the channel" of a navigable river, ordinarily extends only to the bank or shore line of the stream past which the body of water flows, and not to the margin of the deeper channel used for navigation. [Alabama v. Georgia, 23 How. (U.S.) 535, followed.]

MUNICIPAL LAW—USES OF A STREAM—HIGH AND LOW GROUND—MUN. CODE, ART. 501.

The Mun. Code (Que.) contains nothing obliging holders of high ground to contribute to the taxes of water users imposed on tenants of lower ground by the single fact of the situation of their lands.

April v. St. Eloi, 25 Rev. de Jur. 201.

RIGHT OF RIVERSIDE OWNERS TO THE PROPERTY OF RIVERS NOT EVEN NAVIGABLE FOR RAFTS—RIGHT OF SERVITUDE IN FAVOUR OF THE PUBLIC FOR THE PURPOSE OF FLOATING LOGS, AND OTHER MEANS OF TRANSPORTATION.

The right of riverside owners to the property of rivers and courses of water which are not even navigable for rafts which skirt or cross their lands has never been in doubt since the decisions of the Seigniorial Courts. They have been controlled by it absolutely and exclusively subject to the servitudes of right . . . such as for the floating logs and other means of transportation but the barriers or booms placed there cannot be raised without the consent of riverside owners or without paying damages to them.

RIPARIAN RIGHTS—USING WATER FOR MANUFACTURING PURPOSES—INJUNCTION.

Bras d'Or Lime Co. v. Dominion Iron & Steel Co., 9 E.L.R. 348.

(§ II A—66) — ACCESS TO NAVIGABLE WATER—MARSHY GROUND INTERVENING.

One whose land is separated from navigable water by marshy ground is not a riparian proprietor in respect of the navigable water.

LITTORAL RIGHTS—TIDAL STREAM — NAVIGABILITY.

A riparian owner on that part of a tidal stream which is not navigable has no right of uninterrupted access over the unnavigable part or mud flats to a point where the water is navigable; in the absence of any past or present user by him or his predecessors of such water for navigable purposes, and no other littoral rights being interfered with, he is without recourse for an interference with the flow by the construction of an embankment, or for the possible decrease in the potential value of his land.

McFeeley v. B.C. Electric R. Co., 37 D. L.R. 686, 24 B.C.R. 385, [1918] 1 W.W.R. 339.

TITLE EXTENDING TO RIVER BANK ONLY.

The owner of land fronting on a navigable river, where the river itself forms the boundary of the land as described in the conveyances and in the Crown grant, has a right of access to the river as a riparian proprietor even where the presumption of ownership ad medium flum is rebutted or does not apply.

(§ II A—69) — OPPOSITE PROPRIETORS — CATTLE GUARDS.

Under the Mun. Code it is the duty of owners, whose lands are divided by a non-navigable and nonfloatable watercourse, to maintain, at their respective costs, a fenced enclosure at the centre of the stream sufficient to prevent cattle from straying across the lands, and if any of them fail to construct their part, it may be done at their expense by the others.

Letarte v. Turgeon, 26 D.L.R. 25, 24 Que. K.B. 514.

OPPOSITE PROPRIETORS.

The owner of farm lands, adjoining a river, is within his legal rights in protecting his lands against the inroads of the river, by the construction of wingdams, or bank-lining, so far as necessary for that purpose, but is not justified in erecting or maintaining such structures, so as to injure the lands of proprietors on the opposite bank of the river, nor so as to alter the channel of the river to the detriment of the lands of his opposite neighbours.

Lorraine v. Norrie, 6 D.L.R. 122, 46 N. S.R. 177, 9 E.L.R. 278.

(§ II A—70)—EMINENT DOMAIN PROCEEDINGS—RIGHTS OF RIPARIAN OWNERS.

A riparian owner, ex jure natura, entitled not only to the use of the water for domestic purposes, but to the right of access to and from the river from his property or wharves erected thereon, and if piers are erected on or about his property and his riparian rights are abridged or taken away, he is entitled to compensation for the injury.

Pickels v. The King, 7 D.L.R. 698, 14 Can. Ex. 379.

B. ACCRETIONS; ALLUVION; ISLANDS; FLATS.

(§ II B—75)—The proprietor of land carried away by reason of a landslide through natural causes if it be considerable and distinguishable, may reclaim it within a year. If it be inconsiderable and indistinguishable, or if it is not reclaimed within a year, it becomes, by right of accession, the property of the owner of the land to which it is united.

Hells' Asbestos Mines v. The Kings' Asbestos Mines, 21 Que. K.B. 234.

(§ II B—76)—MINING RIGHTS—TRESPASS.

Title under a dredging lease of the bed of a river extends only to low water mark. A lessee's rights to a river claim do not change in case of a sudden erosion. There is nothing in the Yukon Placer Mining Act (R.S.C., 1906, c. 64, as amended by 6-7 Edw. VII. c. 54), to show that sudden erosions from land under lease, caused by the overflow of a river, revert to and become the property of the Crown as against the person whose lands have been eroded or submerged. The lessee may maintain an action for trespass on such eroded or submerged land.

C. USE OF WATER; INTERFERENCE WITH FLOW.

As to highways across frozen waters, breaks, municipal liability, see Highways, IV A—154.

(§ II C—80)—RACEWAY — EASEMENT — SERVIENT AND DOMINANT TENEMENTS.

Where the owner of land, over which a raceway carries water for the use of a mill, grants to one person that portion which includes the mill and the inlet and outlet of the raceway, and to another the portion which includes the middle of the raceway, the former portion is the dominant and the latter the servient tenement; the latter has no easement to the use of the water, and the owner of the former may close up the raceway at its inlet and outlet.

St. Mary's Milling Co. v. St. Mary's, 32 D.L.R. 105, 37 O.L.R. 546.

DRAINAGE—DOMINANT AND SERVIENT TENEMENT.

The owner of the dominant tenement may, for agricultural requirements, make alterations in the natural state of the premises by drains or ditches to drain the soil, provided such works do not cause appreciable injury to the servient tenant. But the owners of the dominant tenement cannot, by means of drains and ditches, divert to other ground the water which without such works would not flow over them.

Thiboutot v. St. Pierre, 52 Que. S.C. 247.

Plaintiff alleged damage by wrongful diversion and obstruction of water claimed by her under several water records granted under provincial statutes on lands within the railway belt. The records themselves did not shew under what statutes they were obtained, nor that they were granted in connection with plaintiff's lands, which had been acquired by pre-emption and purchase from the Crown in 1876. Held, that the presumption was that the water records were obtained under the provisions of the laws in force at the time they were granted, viz.: 1875 and 1884.

George v. Mitchell; George v. Humphrey, 16 B.C.R. 510, 17 W.L.R. 305.

DRAINING—RIGHTS OF LOWER PROPRIETOR—DAMAGES.

In an action for damages for flooding the plaintiff's land by water from a ditch alleged to have been dug by the defendant, the Trial Judge found that an agreement was made between the defendant company and B., the owner of land from which the water flowed on to plaintiff's land, that B. constructed the ditch for the price agreed upon, which was paid by the company, and that the result of the construction of the ditch was to increase the natural flow of water. The Trial Judge awarded the plaintiff damages, but on appeal his judgment was reversed on the ground that the plaintiff had failed to establish responsibility in the defendant for the construction of the ditch in such a way as to cause damage. The plaintiff appealed. Held, that the appeals should be allowed and the Trial Judge's judgment restored.

(§ II C—83)—DIVERSION GENERALLY—NOTICE OF DIVERSION, REQUIREMENTS—RIPARIAN RIGHTS.

Where the defendant, not a riparian owner, proposes to divert the waters of a stream from flowing past the lands of the plaintiff, a riparian owner, the notice of the point of diversion need merely contain an approximate description sufficient for practical purposes of identification the notice having been actually posted at the point of diversion and knowledge brought home to the plaintiff.

Cook v. Vancouver, 18 D.L.R. 305, 6 W.W.R. 1492, 28 W.L.R. 801, [1914] A.C. 1077, affirming 10 D.L.R. 529, 17 B.C.R. 477, 22 W.L.R. 557, 23 W.L.R. 186, 3 W.W.R. 318.

IRRIGATION ACT—DIVERSION OF—WHAT IS—LIABILITY.

The words of s. 60 of the Irrigation Act (R.S.C. 1906, c. 61), "every person who wilfully without authority takes or diverts any water . . . from any works authorized under this Act . . . is guilty of an offence etc.," are applicable to a person who wrongfully diverts water from works which are constructed for the purpose of carrying the water from the main canal to the boundary of the lands of individuals, who desire the water for the irrigation of their lands, such works being works authorized by the Act.

(§ II C—84)—DRAINAGE—DEFECTIVE CULVERT—LIABILITY FOR FLOODING.

The construction of a culvert by a power company in a negligent manner, whereby it interferes with the flow of a natural water-course, giving rise to the flooding of the abutting lands, will render the company liable for damages occasioned thereby. [L'Esperance v. G.W.R. Co., 14 U.C.Q.B. 173, distinguished.]

LOWERING LEVEL OF RIVER.

Where two companies were formed, one in Canada and the other in the United States, under the same management and control, to build a dam across an international stream, both are answerable when sued in the courts of Canada, for a diminution of the natural flow of the river so as to interfere with navigation below the dam.

Rainy River Navigation Co. v. Ontario & Minnesota Power Co. etc., 12 D.L.R. 611, 4 O.W.N. 1591, 24 O.W.R. 897. [Varied 17 D.L.R. 850, 6 O.W.N. 533.]

(§ II C—86)—TAKING FOR PUBLIC WATER SUPPLY—STATUTORY AUTHORITY.

The British Columbia Water Privileges Act, 1892, as summed up in the recital of the Water Clauses Consolidation Act, 1897, relating to the control of water and water rights, operates in limitation of the common law right to user of waters of a stream by the riparian owner, and their riparian right at common law to the continuance of the flow undiminished is taken away by this legislation.

Cook v. Vancouver, 18 D.L.R. 305, 111 L.T. 684, 6 W.W.R. 1492, 28 W.L.R. 801, [1914] A.C. 1077, affirming 10 D.L.R. 529, 17 B.C.R. 477, 22 W.L.R. 557, 23 W.L.R. 186, 3 W.W.R. 318.

(§ II C—87)—NAVIGABLE RIVERS—RIPARIAN RIGHTS—MILLOWNERS—LUMBERMEN.

The rights of lumbermen are concurrent with those of riparian owners to the use of the waters of navigable and floatable streams, for the purpose of carrying on their business, and where a dam has been constructed and used by a millowner for a number of years, and no one has ever complained of it as an obstacle to the floating of logs; the lumberman who has built other dams and increased the volume of water and the force of the current so as to enable him to carry on more extensive operations and float down larger logs, will be liable to the millowner for damages caused by these new operations.

Richardson v. Paradis, 23 D.L.R. 720, 24 Que. K.B. 16.

A municipal corporation may not place a dam at the outlet of a lake for the purpose of raising the level thereof when such action diminishes the enjoyment of the mill owners having rights to the waters flowing from such lake by depriving them of their usual quantity of water at certain seasons.

Marbleton v. Ruel, 1 D.L.R. 624, 21 Que. K.B. 434.

NATURAL STREAM.

The owner of a tenement adjoining a natural stream has no right to divert the water to a place outside the tenement and there consume it for purposes unconnected with the tenement. [McCartney v. Londonderry, etc., Co., [1904] A.C. 301, followed.]

Watson v. Jackson, 19 D.L.R. 733, 31 O.L.R. 481, varying 30 O.L.R. 517.

DAM—INTERFERENCE WITH LOGGING—ONES.
In an action for deprivation of fresh-water, by placing stop-logs in a dam, the burden is upon the plaintiff to prove the water was lessened to an extent sufficient to interfere with the floating of his logs down stream.

Hunt v. Beck, 29 D.L.R. 309, 36 O.L.R. 533, affirming 27 D.L.R. 777, 34 O.L.R. 609.

Where the proprietors of land on opposite banks of a river enter into an arrangement with respect to the ownership of a dam erected for the purpose of obtaining power, touching both banks and extending across the stream, it is competent for them to do so, and owners further down the stream have nothing to say as to the terms of the arrangement where the quantity of water passing down is not diminished. Were the owners below by means of a dam erected by them cause the water to flow back and to obstruct the operation of a mill above them they will be liable in damages for the obstruction so caused. In the action claiming damages for such obstruction and an injunction to restrain the continuance of the injury, both the owner of the fee and the tenant operating the mill are properly joined although the former will only be entitled to recover nominal damages. And where the amount of damages awarded by the Trial Judge is found to be excessive in view of the evidence and a reduction is ordered and the judgment varied in other respects no order will be made as to costs.

Crosby v. Yarmouth Street R. Co., 45 N.S.R. 330.

BUILDING DAM—NOTICE—INJUNCTION.

The right to have a stream of water flow in its natural state without diminution or alteration, is an incident to the property in the land through which it passes; but this is not an absolute and exclusive right to the flow of all the water, but only subject to the right of other riparian proprietors to the reasonable enjoyment of it; and consequently it is only for an unreasonable and unauthorized use of this common benefit that an action will lie. [Embrey v. Owen, 6 Ex. 353, and Miner v. Gilmour, 12 Moo. P.C. 131, applied.]

Watson v. Jackson, 30 O.L.R. 517. [Varied in 19 D.L.R. 733, 31 O.L.R. 481.]

RAISING DAM AS TO RIGHTS BELOW.

In the absence of consent of the owner, or in the absence of compliance with the requirements of arts. 7295, 7298, 7299 R.S.Q. a person has no right in driving piles in the bed of a navigable river owned by another, for the erection of a boom.

D. OBSTRUCTIONS; OVERFLOW; RAISING DAMS.

(§ II D—95)—UNEXPECTED OVERFLOW OF MILL-POND—LIABILITY FOR—VIS MAJOR.

The overflowing of a mill-pond to the injury of a lower proprietor, as the result of a heavy rainfall during the night-time under circumstances not sufficient to suggest the need of exceptional precautions to prevent an overflow, does not render the owner of the pond liable for the injury; the injury under such circumstances is attributable to vis major. The owner of a mill-pond upon a stream is not bound at all hazards to prevent injury to others by the escape of the water collected. [Rylands v. Fletcher, L.R. 3 H.L. 330, distinguished; Nichols v. Marsland, 2 Ex. D. 1; Richards v. Lothian, [1913] A.C. 263, applied.]

McDougall v. Snider, 15 D.L.R. 111, 29 O.L.R. 449.

A water power company's rights in a lease to it by the Crown of a water power location on a certain river made pursuant to 61 Vict. c. 8, which lease also conferred the right to flood any Crown lands along the river and its expansions, do not relate back to the time of making its original application so as to make its rights superior to those of the owner of certain mining claims located after the making of the application but before the granting of the lease, and therefore the water power company has no right to flood such mining claims by the raising of the waters of a river by a dam constructed by it under the alleged authority of the lease.

Bucknall v. British Canadian Power Co., 5 D.L.R. 574, 3 O.W.N. 1138. [Reversed on different points, 7 D.L.R. 62, 4 O.W.N. 155.]

The owner of lands damaged by the overflow of water caused by the construction of a dam on a river can claim damages against the owner of the dam, notwithstanding art. 2261 C.C. (Que.) nor does the authority given by Parliament to the Quebec Streams Commission in relation to the damming of the river or the acquisition of workers thereon, interfere with the rights of the owner whose lands are damaged, or his right to claim further damages in the future.

DAM—TIGHTENING—INCREASED FLOODING OF LAND.

Where, for many years, a seven-foot level of water was maintained by a dam only during the spring freshets and late in the fall and winter so as to raise a prescriptive right. The dam cannot be tightened, under such prescriptive right, so as to retain water at such level during all of the year.

Cardwell v. Breckenridge, 11 D.L.R. 461, 24 O.W.R. 569, 4 O.W.N. 1295.

OPENING FLOOD-GATES TO PREVENT BREAKING OF DAM—INJURIA ABSQUE DAMNO.

The opening of the flood-gates of a mill pond during a period of high water in order to prevent the breaking of a dam, will not render a mill-owner liable for injuries caused a lower proprietor, where, had the gates remained closed, his damage would have been much greater as the probable result of the giving away of the dam; the injury in such a case is injuria absque damno. McDougall v. Snider, 15 D.L.R. 111, 29 O.L.R. 449.

HIGHWAY IMPROVEMENT—DEFECTIVE PLAN—EMPLOYMENT OF COMPETENT ENGINEER.

The fact that a municipal corporation in making a highway improvement followed plans made by an engineer of competent standing will not relieve it from liability for the flooding of adjacent lands as the result of the defective plan of the work, the engineer being merely an agent of the corporation, where the improvement was not of the class requiring a by-law and the preparation of plans by an engineer as a preliminary thereto. [Williams v. Raleigh, [1893] A.C. 540, distinguished.] It is actionable negligence for a municipal corporation to make a road improvement in such a manner as the result of a defective plan, as to cause the flooding of adjacent lands.

FLOODING LANDS—OVERFLOW FROM AN INSUFFICIENT DRAINAGE DITCH.

Damages should be awarded for the flooding of agricultural lands by the construction of a municipal drainage ditch of too small capacity, on the basis of the diminished value of the property affected, and should be assessed in one lump sum for all time; the judgment should not be limited to damages for the deprivation of the use of the soil for a limited period with a reservation to the landowner of his remedy for further damages in the event of the municipality not remedying the defect in the meantime.

Where a power company builds a dam across a river and thereby causes a rise in the level of the river, resulting in the rapid erosion or eating away of the banks of the river, such company should protect such banks, along which highways run, by means of revetment walls and guard-rails, so as to ensure the safety of pedestrians and vehicles using the highway.

Sermon v. Sauble Falls Light & Power Co., 6 D.L.R. 857, 23 O.W.R. 201.

When the work incidental to the building of a bridge over a creek where it is crossed by the highway narrowed its banks so as to cause the plaintiff's lands to be periodically flooded, the cause of action is not the building of the bridge but the damage caused by the floods, and after he has parted with the land he has no right to restrain the municipality from maintaining the bridge, nor can he recover damages from the municipality on the basis of any depreciation in the selling price of the land because of its liability to be flooded. LUMBERMEN — RIPARIAN RIGHTS — OBSTRUCTIONS.

Lumbermen and riparian proprietors have concurrent rights in a floatable river. The lumbermen have an undoubted right for passage of their logs down the river, but this right must be exercised subject to the rights of the riparian proprietors, and reasonable means must be used and care and all skill taken to avoid injury to the riparian owners.

Nashwaak Pulp & Paper Co. v. Wade, 43 D.L.R. 141, 46 N.B.R. 11.

The individual defendants, who were contractors with the school board for the excavation of the basement of a new school building, placed some of the earth from this excavation up the street to the north-east of the plaintiff's house in a depression, which, the plaintiff alleged, was a natural watercourse, whereby water, coming from the plaintiff's and surrounding land, which would otherwise have escaped, was gathered and turned back upon the plaintiff's land so as to fill and damage the cellar in his house. The plaintiff sued for damages and the action was dismissed. On appeal:—

Held that, although it must be assumed that the Trial Judge had concluded that no such natural watercourse existed, and that finding should not be disturbed, the defendants were, nevertheless, liable under the decision in Hurdman v. North Eastern R. Co., 3 C.P.D. 168, 47 L.J.C.P. 368, 38 L.T. 339. [Ostrom v. Sills, 24 A.R. (Ont.) 526, affirmed 28 Can. S.C.R. 485, distinguished.]

FILLING IN OF FORESHORE—OBSTRUCTION TO NAVIGATION.

Neither the Navigable Waters Protection Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 115, as a whole, nor s. 20 thereof in particular appears to be aimed at preventing the filling in front of a riparian owner of the foreshore in front of his property. The filling of False Creek did not create a nuisance or an illegal obstruction to navigation within the meaning of s.

7, the Navigable Waters Protection Act, R. S.C., 1906, c. 115 [interpretation of Duff, J., in Cunard v. The King, 43 Can. S.C.R. 88, followed]. A tenant of a lessee of the C.P.R. is not entitled to question the right of possession claimed by the company and under which the tenant received his lease, unless he can invoke successfully the illegality of the lease to the C.P.R. In this case the burden was held to be upon the tenant of shewing that the land, the subject-matter of the lease, was so tainted with illegality as to preclude the court from directing compliance with any of the terms of the instrument [Gas Light & Coke Co. v. Turner, 6 Bing. N.C. 234, distinguished], and this burden he was held not to have discharged.

DIVERSION—MUNICIPAL POWERS.

When, by a depression of ground, a piece of soil spreads, in a natural way, its surface waters over neighbouring soil, the latter is, for this purpose, inferior soil to the other, and must receive the surface water which runs over it without the need of considering if the ditch which follows the bed of the said depression of ground has been dug or not, or if it runs continuously or only intermittently. The owner of the inferior soil cannot obstruct the course of the water so as to inundate the other soil. Municipal authorities have not the right to change by their by-laws natural servitudes established by law.

(§ II E—100)—SAWMILL REFUSE — LIABILITY FOR.

In the absence of a grant or prescriptive right the owner of a sawmill is answerable for injuries resulting from the fouling of the waters of a stream by saw-dust and mill refuse cast into it. As against one claiming title from a common grantor, the defendant did not acquire a right to pollute the water of a stream with saw-mill refuse, by virtue of a condition of his purchase of a mill site that he should erect a saw-mill thereon, where he subsequently received a grant of the land free from such condition.

(§ II E—101)—BY SEWAGE.

If a riparian owner or other person, not having acquired a prescriptive right to do so against other riparian owners, prejudicially affects the condition of the water so as sensibly to injure the riparian owner lower down, he becomes liable to the latter in an action for damages and an injunction to restrain further pollution of the stream.

G. SURFACE AND SEEPAGE WATER.

(§ II G—125)—SLOUGH — OBSTRUCTION — BEAVER DAM.

An obstruction to the natural flow of a slough or surface water, by a beaver dam, may be rightfully removed by anyone interested, in order to restore the land to its original and natural conformation, unless another party, relying on the continuance of the obstruction, had dealt with his land in such way that he would be injured by the removal of the obstruction. NATURAL DRAINAGE — RIGHTS OF UPPER AND LOWER PROPRIETORS.

Surface water flowing intermittently through a depression in land, pursuing a course of natural drainage, does not confer riparian rights on the owners of land through which it flows, and any owner may retain the water or divert it, and owners of lower levels have no right of action for such retention or diversion, but no owner may change the course of the water so as to throw it upon land over which it was not wont to flow, without consent of the owner of such land, or so as to increase the flow upon a lower owner.

NEGLIGENCE — WATER RUNNING ON COULEE — DAMMING OF WATER BY DEFENDANT — FLOODING OF PLAINTIFF'S MINE BELOW BY SUDDEN RISE IN WATER — WHETHER DAM CAUSE OF DAMAGE — RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF PARTIES.

Plaintiff's mine was flooded by water coming down a coulee on the side of which the entrance to the mine was situated. Defendant had a dam across the coulee a distance above the mine, constructed for the purpose of conserving the surface water for use on defendant's farm and plaintiff claimed that it was by the accumulation of the water by the dam and its sudden release that the damage was caused. Judgment of Ives, J., dismissing the action was sustained. Negligence in such case is the gist of the action. The defendant had a right to utilize the surface waters. In view of the conditions of the locality and the extraordinary freshet which occurred the plaintiff had failed to show negligence on the part of defendant, or, even if there were negligence, that, on the evidence, it occasioned the plaintiff's loss. The conclusion of the Trial Judge that the same volume of water would have gone down the coulee if the dam had not been there is justified upon the evidence. The case is indistinguishable from McCord v. Alberta and Great Waterways R. Co., 41 D.L.R. 722. In such a case the storing of the water created no liability in defendant. [Rylands v. Fletcher, L.R. 3 H.L. 330, distinguished.]

(§ II G—128) — DEFLECTING AND DIVERTING — INJURY TO ADJOINING LANDS.

A defendant railway company is liable for damage caused to the plaintiff, an adjoining owner, by deflecting and diverting the course of the surface water so as to make it flow over the plaintiff's land, and for bringing water on the defendant's own lands and then discharging it on to the plaintiff's land, to his injury; and the statutory powers, in furtherance of the objects for which the defendant company was incorporated, do not, by implication or otherwise, empower it so to carry on its operations as to cause damage to adjoining owners by deflecting or diverting such surface waters to the injury of adjoining lands. (§ II G—132) — "WATERCOURSE" DEFINED — DEFLECTING AND DIVERTING — MUNICIPAL OFFENCE, HOW LIMITED.

Where a municipality in constructing highways, digs ditches and thereby diverts the surface waters from their natural channel so as to overflow and damage the lands of adjacent owners, the municipality must respond in damages although the road building itself may have been necessary.

I. IRRIGATION; DITCHES; WATER RIGHTS.

(§ II I—156)—EXTENT OF USE — PRESCRIPTIVE RIGHTS — PRE-EMPTION.

The prescriptive right which, under the Water Act Amendment Act, 1913, (B.C.) c. 82, s. 13, may accrue from the actual enjoyment without interruption for the full period of 20 years for "some other purpose" than that for which a water record existed but for which water might have been recorded, cannot be set up so as to support a claim for use of the water on other premises than that in respect of which it was recorded by the pre-emptor of lands; the "other purpose" in that statute has reference to the various purposes for which a water record might be granted, e. g., for irrigation or for mining in respect of the same lands.

of union," within the powers of the province until the lands relinquished to the Dominion were defined and accepted by the Act of the Dominion Parliament.

(§ III—190)—QUANTITY AND QUALITY.

A company or other person obtaining a franchise from a municipality to supply it with electric lighting and all the water "necessary for the needs of the town," undertakes a supply of what is necessary for the ordinary needs of the ratepayers, and not the water required to put out any fire breaking out in the municipality; and hence is not liable in damages for fire losses occurring as the result of an insufficient water supply.

Quesnel v. Emard; Cote v. Emard, 8 D. L.R. 537.

(§ III—197) — MUNICIPAL FRANCHISE — NEGLIGENCE — LIABILITY OF COMPANY TO RATEPAYER.

A municipal corporation, with assent of the ratepayers, entered into a contract by which it gave the defendant company the exclusive privilege for 25 years of maintaining a system of water supply to the municipality. The company was authorized to fix rates for water supplied for domestic purposes and was obliged, for protection against fire, to have hydrants at certain places and at all times, in case of fire, except when the plant was undergoing necessary repairs, to maintain a specified capacity and pressure of water. The property of B., a ratepayer, was destroyed by a fire which attained serious dimensions owing to the pressure being at the outset much less than that required by the contract.—Held, affirming the judgment of the King's Bench 22 Que. K.B. 487, which affirmed the Court of Review (41 Que. S.C. 348), that there was no contractual relation between B. and the company; that the contract did not evidence any intention by the parties to it to give a right of action against the company to each ratepayer in case of violation of the provisions for fire protection; and that B., therefore, could not maintain an action for the value of his property so destroyed.—Held also, B. could not maintain an action for damages on the ground that the failure to maintain the pressure stipulated for in the contract constituted a délit or quasi-délit under the law of Quebec.

To constitute a second offence, it is not sufficient that two infractions have been successively committed; it is necessary that the first be followed by a prosecution, and that after the prosecution a new infraction has taken place, and that such prosecution be pleaded in the action.

LIBERTY TO MAKE ONE'S WILL — AGREEMENT NOT TO CHANGE—C.C. QUE. ARTS. 898, 1061.

The following agreement is not immoral nor contrary to the liberty to make one's will. It only constitutes the fixing of wages which the testator will pay to his son for his services, if he does not bequeath to him the goods which he has promised. "Whereas the said W.T. and his family have decided to go to live and work with the parties of the first part, and that they, in order to assist and encourage their son have made their will by which they have appointed the said W.T. their sole legatee, dated this day; it is now agreed that if one or the other of the said A.T. or his wife changes his or her said will and appoints one or more other legatees, or if the said A.T. or his wife, no longer wishing to keep with them their said son and his family, order him to leave their residence, then the said W.T. shall have the right to claim by way of wages, a sum of $100 for each year that he lives and works with and for his father and mother, and after such payment the parties will be discharged from all reciprocal obligations.

(§ I A—6)—WILLS—RESTRAINT OF MARRIAGE.

A testator devised and bequeathed his real and personal property to his wife and children in equal shares, "provided however, that if my wife shall remarry the share hereby bequeathed to her shall revert to my estate and be divided among my said children." The widow remarried. Held, that as the proviso was in restraint of a second marriage it was valid as it did not fall within the general rule respecting a conditional gift in general restraint of marriage. (§ I A—7)—EFFECT OF PARTIAL INVALIDITY.

TESTAMENTARY CHARACTER.

Where a document purporting to be an appointment of a beneficiary by the assured under a life insurance policy declares that the policy shall continue payable to the assured, his executors, administrators and assigns, and shall continue to be subject to his disposal as he may see fit in his lifetime and further declares that if the insurance is subsisting at his death, and has not been sold, surrendered, assigned or otherwise disposed of, then upon his death it shall be for the benefit of his wife if she survives him the effect is to make it a testamentary document and not a statutory appointment under the Manitoba Life Insurance Act, R.S.M. 1902, c. 83, s. 7 (similar to R.S.O. 1897, c. 203, s. 159). (§ I A—15)—EXECUTION — REFERENCE IN CODICIL TO PRIOR WILL — INCORPORATING EXTRINSIC DOCUMENT.

Where there is a distinct reference in a duly proved codicil to a prior testamentary paper therein referred to as the "last will" of the testator and only one document of the kind is known, probate may be granted of both, although the due execution of the prior will is not shown, if the parol evidence satisfactorily proves that there is no doubt that it is the instrument referred to. [Allen v. Maddock, 11 Moore P.C. 427, 14 Eng. R. 757, followed.] Lafond v. Lafond, 16 D.L.R. 457, 19 B.C.R. 287, 6 W.W.R. 318, 27 W.L.R. 687.

EVIDENCE — CODICIL.

The rule that a will must be in writing does not so require merely for the purpose of proof but makes the writing essential to its validity, and no evidence is admissible to supplement or explain what is written. Therefore, though a marginal note on a holograph will, dated and signed by the testator and incorporated with the rest, may operate as a codicil it is not so with respect to a writing on a distinct and separate sheet, though folded up with the will and having a sign or mark apparently referring to a like sign on the will; no evidence of such relation is admissible to establish that the sheet forms part of the will or is a codicil modifying its tenor.

Dion v. Dion, 44 Que. S.C. 462.

TWO TESTAMENTARY DOCUMENTS EXECUTED BY TESTATRIX IN EXISTENCE AT DEATH

—ALTERATIONS MADE IN EARLIER DOCUMENT AFTER EXECUTION WITHOUT RE-EXECUTION — REFERENCE IN LATER DOCUMENT TO EARLIER ONE—"IF THE STROKED ONE STANDS TAKE IT"—LATER DOCUMENT ALONE ADMITTED TO PROBATE.

In 1910 the testatrix made a will disposing of all her property. Afterwards, she made many alterations in the document by striking out words and interlining others; but did not re-execute as a will the document as altered. In 1916, she duly executed a new will, written by her own hand, beginning: "This is the last will of E. G. if the one stroked over will not stand. If the stroked one stands take it." This will also disposed of all her property, but it differed materially from the will of 1910, both as first written and as subsequently altered:—Held, that the two documents could not stand together. Re Hay, Kerr v. Stinpear, [1904] 1 Ch. 317, distinguished, there not being in this case, as there was in that, an express confirmation of the earlier writing. In its natural signification the expression "the stroked one" in the sentence "If the stroked one stands take it," described the original will as "stroked," and not the original will without the alterations; and the testatrix must be taken to have used the expression in this natural sense. Thus the will of 1916 must be admitted to probate; for the earlier will was not valid as altered, and the condition upon which the second will was to come into operation was fulfilled—"the one stroked over will not stand." An instrument which is to take effect as a will only on the happening of a contingency named in it may be valid as a will.

(§ I B-20)—AUTHENTIC FORM—READING OF WILL—NOTARY.

A will in authentic form, in which it is not declared that the will was read "by the notary," is void. Proof by testimony is illegal for proving that it was read to him by the notary.

Beauchamp v. Patenaude, 53 Que. S.C. 276, 24 Rev. de Jur. 143.

A will in authentic form before two notaries under Quebec law is not invalid because, by inadvertence, it was certified on its face to have been executed in the afternoon of a certain day, while in fact it was executed in the forenoon of that day.

ILLNESS PREVENTING.

A writing read to the testator, who declares before witnesses that he accepts it as the expression of his last wishes but is unable to sign it owing to injuries received, cannot be treated as a will made according to the form derived from the law of England nor be proved as such.

Ex parte Samson, 18 Que. P.R. 368.

(§ I B-23)—SIGNATURE OF WITNESSES—STATEMENTS OF TESTATOR.

Statements made by a testator some time before the making of his will cannot prevail against the express terms of the document containing his last will. Witnesses to a will, made in English form, may witness and sign the will in a room adjoining that where the testator is, provided the latter can see them through the open door.

(§ I B-24)—VOID—AUTHENTIC FORM—SECOND NOTARY — ENGLISH FORM — EVIDENCE — EXECUTOR — INTEREST IN WILL—C.C. (QUE.) ARTS. 846, 851, 855.

A will is void and contrary to law when an executor acts at the same time as second notary to the deed. A will made under the form derived from the law of England, is invalid by reason of art. 851, 855 C.C. (Que.) since an executor can no more be a witness to a will under this form than he could be a second notary under the authentic form. Art. 845, which says "Legacies made to notaries or to witnesses are void but do not annul the other provisions of the will" cannot be invoked in case in discussion seeing that the benefit conferred upon the executor is found to affect practically the whole will.

Where a will was drawn according to the suggestions of a testator, who was mentally competent and not unduly influenced in making it, and was signed by him in the presence of two witnesses, and by them signed in the presence of the testator, and in the presence of each other, it was legally executed under Ontario law.

C. REVOCATION; REVIVING.

(§ I C-30)—LOST WILL—PRESUMPTION OF REVOCATION—HOW REBUTTED.

A will was admittedly made in proper form by the plaintiff's deceased husband, whereby he gave all his property to her. The will had been placed in her custody, and, when her husband died, she supposed it was still where she had left it, but diligent search for the will did not produce it, nor her own will, which had been placed in the same envelope. The contents of the will were well proved, in an action brought to establish it, and oral evidence was given which was held sufficient to rebut the presumption that the husband had destroyed the document animo revocandi; and the will, as established by the evidence was admitted to probate. Held, that, in arriving at a conclusion, the court was entitled to consider the relationship existing between the husband and wife, also his words and action subsequent to the execution of the will, and any circumstances which may tend to support or rebut the presumption of revocation. The strength of the presumption is weakened if the testator did not have the custody of the document.

Unwin v. Unwin, 29 W.L.R. 279, 20 B.C.R. 77, 6 W.W.R. 1186.

WILL OF SOLDIER IN MILITARY FORM.

A subsequent testamentary paper does not necessarily revoke one prior in date, even though the second instrument contains a general revocatory clause. The intention of the testator is the sole guide in the matter, and the intention to be discovered is that relating to the disposition of the testator's property, and not to the form of the will. Moreover, a will is not necessarily confined to one document, but may be contained in several documents. [Lemage v. Goodban (1865). L.R. 1 P. 57, at p. 62; Gladstone v. Tempest (1840), 2 Curteis, 650; Dempsey v. Lawson (1877), 2 P.D. 98 at p. 107, followed.] A will executed by a soldier after it had been prepared by his solicitor held not to have been revoked by a will made three days later, on a form supplied by the military authorities, which contained a clause revoking generally all former wills. The disposition of the property was the same in both wills and both documents were admitted to probate.

Re Erskine Estate, [1918] 1 W.W.R. 249.

Application for probate of a will refused, and letters of administration with will annexed granted of a will, made on a form prescribed by the military authorities and while the testator was on active service, which purported to revoke all former wills and to be the testator's last will, but made no mention of an executor, there being no blank therefor. CODICIL.

If a will be simply revoked in order to make a gift in favour of another person, and it is clear that there is no intention to revoke unless for such purpose, then the doctrine of Union v. Tyrer, 1 P.Wms. 343, applies. The revocation by a codicil of an appointment by a will held, not to be operative in any event, but to have been made only for the purpose of providing what the appointor considered a better provision for the benefit of the appointee and his family, and since, because of the appointor's inability under the will to vest an interest in her grandchildren, the appointment under the codicil failed to that extent, the original appointment stood. TESTAMENTARY CAPACITY—UNDUE INFLUENCE—ONUS PROBANDI—WILL PREPARED BY ONE BENEFITTING THEREUNDER.

In an action to set aside a will on the ground that the testator was not of sound and disposing mind and memory, the appellate division directed a new trial as it did not appear that due regard was had to the rule that the onus probandi lies upon the party propounding the will and to the rule that generally the court's suspicion should be aroused when the will was prepared by one taking a benefit thereunder and such suspicion should be satisfactorily removed before allowing the will to be effective.

BURDEN OF PROVING GENUINENESS.

If it be shewn that a party taking a benefit under a will, himself wrote that will, or participated in the preparation of it, or in the procuring of its execution, the law casts upon such beneficiary, in proving the will, the additional burden of proving that the testator knew and approved of the contents of the will; the rule of law being that, under such circumstances, a suspicion is cast on the will which must be removed by testimony which leaves no reasonable doubt of the genuineness of the will as the last free act of the testator. Each case must be decided upon its own peculiar circumstances, and it is for the jury to consider all the surrounding facts and circumstances, and decide whether or not they are such as to justify the conclusion that the testator had been influenced to such an extent as to have lost the power of free agency.

The rule followed that where the donee is in a position of confidence or in a position to exercise influence over the donor, it is not necessary to the setting aside of the gift, on the ground of undue influence, that there should be proof of its exercise; undue influence is presumed, and it is for the donee to rebut the presumption. [De long v. Mumford, 25 Gr. 586; Vanzant v. Coates, 37 D.L.R. 471, 39 D.L.R. 485, followed.] As to the will, that, although (1) mental capacity and (2) due execution were shewn, it was not shewn (3) that the document propounded was understood and appreciated by the testatrix, and was in truth and fact the expression of her desire; and these three things must be shewn before the rule laid down in Baudains v. Richardson, [1906] A.C. 169, 185, that those attacking the will must shew coercion or fraud, can be applied. Where the defendants were in the position of influence; and the will was prepared on their instructions, in their presence, and for their benefit; and the solicitor who prepared the will—the only independent witness called to support it—did not satisfy himself thoroughly as to the volition and capacity of the testatrix; the circumstances in which the will was prepared and signed were such as to cause grave suspicion, and the evidence of undue influence being overwhelming, the defendants failed to establish the will.

ACTION TO SET ASIDE LETTERS PROBATE—EVIDENCE—ONUS—TESTAMENTARY CAPACITY—FINDING OF TRIAL JUDGE—REVERSAL ON APPEAL.

The testator, by a will made 5 days before his death, and when he was very ill, drawn from his instructions by his medical attendant, left $1,000 to his (the testator's) only relative, a sister, who lived a long distance from him, and the remainder of his estate, the whole value of which was about $4,000, to the defendant, a neighbour and close friend, who had been his adviser and assistant in business matters, and had, with others, taken care of him in his last illness. The defendant was present when the instructions were given and while the document was being prepared, and his son was one of the attesting witnesses. The will was admitted to probate; and the plaintiff sought in this action to set it aside and revoke the letters probate, on the grounds that the defendant occupied a position of confidence towards the testator and had procured the making of the will by undue influence, when the testator was dying and was without independent advice, and that the document admitted to probate was not the will of the deceased. The Trial Judge found that the will was really not the will of the deceased.—Held, reversing that finding, that, the testamentary capacity of the testator not being disputed, if the onus was upon the defendant to adduce evidence to remove the suspicion raised by the circumstances in which the will was prepared and executed, the defendant had satisfied the onus, and had established that the will was that of a free and capable testator—in reality, there was no evidence that the defendant procured the will to be made, or that it was other than the voluntary act of the testator.

Importunity upon a testatrix by those to whom she has bequeathed the largest part of her estate, any more than threats to have her interdicted, are not sufficient to establish capion when it is proved that, at the time of the will, she enjoyed all her faculties and especially a great will power. Incapacity to make a will on account of insanity cannot be inferred from the temporary loss, by the testatrix, of her mental lucidity during a disease, or from her habit of complaining, without reason, of being poor, or of her indifference towards one of her daughters-in-law (the plaintiff), when it is established by the testimony of those who knew her best, and especially by her correspondence, that at the time of her will, she enjoyed the full use of her intelligence.

Article 847, C.C. (Que.) applies only to deaf and dumb persons and to those completely deprived of hearing. One who still can hear, although very little, and however deaf he may be, may make an authentic will in the ordinary way, and evidence tending to show that the declaration in the will that it has been read to the testator is false, must be made by the one attacking the will. Such proof can be made only by disproving the evidence, the proof must be conclusive and leave no doubt in the judge's mind, the presumption being in favour of the authenticity.

A will may be established when the testator, at the time of dictating the will, has sufficient discretion for that purpose, and on execution of the same remembers that instructions had been given, and accepts the document to be signed as containing such instructions. [Murphy v. Lamphier, 31 O.L.R. 287, distinguished; Parker v. Tilgate, 8 P.D. 171, approved in Perera v. Perera, [1901] A.C. 354, followed.]

Faulkner v. Faulkner, 49 D.L.R. 504, 46 O.L.R. 69, reversing 44 O.L.R. 634.

The fact of a testator suffering from paresis at the time of making his will is not sufficient ground for setting it aside where the court is satisfied that at the actual time of the making of the will the testator could and did fully appreciate what he was doing and was in fact "a free and capable testator."

Bartlett v. Bull, 16 D.L.R. 82, 5 W.W.R. 1207, 26 W.L.R. 831.

A greater scope of general mental capacity is requisite where a testator by will disposes of all his property, than where he deals with a single or separate part thereof. In order that a testamentary disposition of property may be sustained the testator must be of reasonably sound mind, memory and understanding.

Thamer v. Jundt, 4 D.L.R. 753, 3 O.W.N. 1307, 22 O.W.R. 206.

Soundness of intellect required of a person making a will at the time of the making thereof consists in having sufficient understanding to appreciate the character and the effects of the document to be made and in having sufficient will power to manifest such understanding.

Madore v. Martin, 3 D.L.R. 731, 18 Rev. de Jur. 480.

One who knew and appreciated that he was making a will, the effect thereof, the property possessed by him, and how he disposed of it, as well as those who had claims upon him, was competent to make a testamentary disposition thereof.

Toal v. Ryan, 4 D.L.R. 25, 3 O.W.N. 1267.

Where the evidence does not shew that the testator when making his will was under any insane delusion nor that he had such weakness of intellect and mental decay as to destroy testamentary capacity, the will should not be refused probate on the ground of incapacity, because it appears that the testator was a feeble old man, 79 years of age who was found a few months later to be suffering from senile dementia and was declared incompetent in lunacy proceedings taken for the purpose of placing some one in authority to provide necessary care and nursing for him.

Whether the general faculties of a person's mind are so affected by insane delusions as to render him incompetent to make a testamentary disposition of his property as a whole or of that part in respect to which a delusion exists, is a question of fact to be determined from all the evidence.

Thamer v. Jundt, 4 D.L.R. 753, 3 O.W.N. 1307, 22 O.W.R. 206.

DELUSIONS—BURDEN OF PROOF.

Where the provisions of the will itself prove that it was not affected by insane delusions, it must be found that it was not so affected; and after the court is sufficiently satisfied of the due execution of a will as required by law by an apparently competent testator, the onus of proving that the will was affected by insane delusions is shifted upon the party opposing the will on that ground. DELUSIONS—AS TO FAMILY—PARANOIA—MONOMANIA.

Where the testator was afflicted with the form of insanity known as monomania or paranoia and his insane suspicion and aversion towards his own family took the place of natural affection and perverted the sense of right of the testator, his will depriving his wife and any benefit in his estate and making inadequate provision for his infant children while the bulk of the estate was given for religious purposes, will be set aside.

A testator has sufficient capacity to make a will whose mind and memory are sufficiently sound to enable him to understand its nature and effect, who has a comprehension of the extent of the property he was possessed of and the objects of his proposed bounty, and this notwithstanding that he periodically suffered from melan-

DELUSIONS.

To be capable of making a valid will, a testator must have the normal exercise of his thoughts, possess all his intellectual and moral faculties, have entire freedom of his affections, and a will free from all influence and capable of making a choice of his heirs. Where one for a long time lived in constant fear of being poisoned, and had hallucinations about it, he is incapable of disposing of his property by will. A party proceeding to attack an instrument may ask, by exception, not only for the nullity of a deed opposed to him, but also the nullity of a deed invoked against him as proof of a right.

Robert v. Robert, 24 Rev. Leg. 136.

A person who is instrumental in framing a will and who obtains a bounty from that will is bound to establish that the will was made willingly and deliberately and without pressure or influence. [Fulton v. Andrew, L.R. 7 H.L. 448; Donaldson v. Donaldson, 12 Gr. 431, followed.] In an action to set aside a will which disposes of the greater portion of the estate as a residue unascertained as to value, it is a fact of importance that the testator thought the estate of but one-half the value it really was. When it is proved that a will has been properly executed by a person of competent understanding, and apparently a free agent, the burden of proving undue influence rests on the party alleging this. It must be shown that a person having the power to overbear the will of the testator duly exercised such power, and by means of the same, obtained the will. [*Baudains v. ACTION TO SET ASIDE — PARTIES — HUSBAND AND WIFE.

An exception to form presupposes some defect and not an absence of interest, which goes to the merits. An heir has an interest on asking to set aside a will which disinherits him, even if there is another will which also disinherits him, particularly if the latter is to the benefit of another legatee. An action to set aside a will should be directed against the husband and wife common as to goods, if the estate under the will is partly of movables and partly of immovables. If such an action has only been directed against the wife authorized by her husband, the plaintiff may obtain a delay to add the husband personally.

LAW OF DOMICILE—ADMINISTRATION.

The testatrix died in 1915; she then was resident in the State of New Jersey. She left a will made in Ontario in 1880; she was then a British subject. At her death she owned real and personal property in Ontario and also in New Jersey. Upon an application to a Surrogate Court in Ontario by a trust company for a grant of letters of administration with the will annexed, a contestation arose, and the Judge of the Surrogate Court found that the will had been duly made and executed according to the law of Ontario, and that at the date of the execution of the will the testatrix was a British subject within Ontario. Letters of administration were accordingly granted to the trust company, and there was no appeal from the decision of the Surrogate Court:—Held, upon an application by the administrators for advice, that the Surrogate Court Judge had power to grant letters of administration or letters probate, irrespective of the question of domicile. Wills Act, R.S.O. 1914, c. 120, s. 20 (3). History of the legislation and review of the authorities. Held, however, that the will, though duly executed and free from defect in form, might be open to attack, either because the testatrix was, according to the law of the domicile, incapable of making a will, or because the will contravened the law of the domicile. The letters granted in this jurisdiction should be regarded by the court of another jurisdiction as conclusive, quoad form. If the testatrix had, at the time of her death, acquired a domicile in New Jersey, the estate, real and personal, vested in the applicants as trustees, was to be administered having regard to the rules of succession in New Jersey.

Wherever circumstances exist which excite the suspicion of the court, it is for those who propound the will to remove such suspicion, and to prove affirmatively that the testator knew and approved of the contents of the document, and it is only where this is done that the onus is thrown on those who oppose the will to prove fraud or undue influence, or whatever else they rely on to displace the case made for proving the will. A codicil setting out the testator's life insurance policies and providing that "one-quarter of these policies go direct to my wife, but all my other property now goes, with my last son dead, to my three daughters under the terms of my said last will" revokes a bequest in the will to the testator's wife of half the residue of his estate.

any son may become entitled in so far as it may necessitate the sale or conversion of any real estate for that purpose.

GENERAL AND SPECIFIC GIFTS—SUBSTITUTION—ABATEMENT.

A codicil and the will must be read together as one instrument and expressing the one final will of the testator; the words "residue of my estate" and "not hereby otherwise disposed of" refer also to dispositions made in the codicil. A specific gift by a codicil of "all my interest in a mortgage," in addition to a general pecuniary legacy by the will, is not substitutional of the latter, and not affected by an abatement provision in the will; the words "all my interest" are intended in the ordinary meaning that the principal as well as the interest be given.

CODICIL.

Where a testator leaves a will and several codicils it is the net result of the testamentary writings that is to be construed as his last will. [Douglas-Menzies v. Umphelby, [1908] A.C. 224, followed.] Where a codicil directs that a stated pecuniary legacy is bequeathed in the "place and stead" of a stated pecuniary legacy in the will, the effect is as if the amount specified in the codicil were inserted in the will for all purposes, even to the change of the mode of division of the residuary estate which by the original will was to be divided amongst the testator's children "in proportion to the personal property herein bequeathed to my said children."

MILITARY WILL REVOKED BY LETTERS.

In arriving at a conclusion as to a will of a deceased person to be gathered from various documents admitted, the court must have in view the real intention of the testator and must gather it from the documents presented. If in the series of testamentary documents the court finds one which has been wholly and completely revoked by the provisions of a succeeding will, the one so revoked will not be admitted to probate because it has no part to play in the devolution of the estate. Letters written by a soldier on active service, which furnish conclusive evidence that he considered a prior will in force, and shewing that he considered a subsequent military will which is inconsistent with it as repudiated, are sufficient to revoke such military will.

(§ III A-75)—CONDITIONS—SUBSTANTIVE GIFT—TRUST OR CHARGE.

No precise form of words is necessary in order to create conditions in wills; any expression disclosing the intention will have that effect. A provision in a will expressed in the form of a condition may operate as a substantive gift by creating a trust or charge.

Re Cleghorn, 48 D.L.R. 511, 45 O.L.R. 540.

Where a will provided that certain bank stocks and bank deposits should be held by the executors in trust for the widow of testator, with power, if she should request it, to transfer them to her absolutely for her own use, a written request is not essential, and the widow's election or request may be shewn by proof of the transfer to her of the shares and bank deposits.

Fulton v. Dauphinee, 1 D.L.R. 63, 46 N.S.R. 168.

Specific devisees of property to a son, in one clause of a will are not modified by a subsequent clause, which, following the provision for the distribution of the residue of the estate declares the intention of the testator in the distribution of his property to be that his children should receive equal shares. The direction in a will as to the disposition of the interest of any of the testator's children in his estate, upon the death of any of them or upon the termination of the interest of any therein, occurring in a clause declaring the terms and conditions in the several devises and bequests given in trust, applies only to the property covered by that clause.

Re Jones, 3 D.L.R. 261, 3 O.W.N. 672, 21 O.W.R. 272.

The effect of a confirmatory clause in a codicil not specifically referring to the original will by date or otherwise, but purporting to be a codicil to the testator's last will, is to bring the will down to the date of the codicil and to effect the same disposal of the property as if the testator had at that date made a new will containing the same dispositions as the original will, but with the alterations introduced not only by the last codicil, but by the intermediate codicils, if any, so far as they remain unrevoked. READING CODICIL WITH WILL.

The intention of the testator with reference to the cutting down of an absolute gift in the original will by the terms of a codicil must be gathered from a consideration of the whole will and the codicil read together as one document.

CONSTRUCTION—INTENT—"MY ESTATE."

Under a will whereby the testator gives his widow the family residence during her natural life and a certain sum of money yearly to be paid to her in monthly instalments "so long as my estate will pay the same," and which will makes other bequests and a devise of land to the testator's son, with a direction that at the decease of the widow the proceeds of the residue and remainder of the estate, both real and personal, including the family residence, be divided among certain persons; the words "my estate," in the clause providing for the widow, mean the estate of the testator not otherwise devised or dealt with by the will, and the annuity of the widow is payable only out of that part of the estate which the executors have in hand, exclusive of the family residence and the particular bequests and the land devised to the son, notwithstanding that the will contains a power on the part of the executors to sell the real estate.

WORD PARTLY ERASED—PROBATE.

Upon a question of construction of a will the original will may be looked at, not to vary or cut down the words of which probate has been granted, but simply to enable such words to be interpreted by the court, and the exception is applicable where it appears that a vital word was partly erased by inadvertence in the original will, but was retained intact with its context in the probate standing unrecalled by the Surrogate Court.

"PERSONAL TERMINABLE ANNUITIES," MEANING OF.

Where the cessation of the "personal terminable annuities" of a will "through the death of the beneficiaries or otherwise," is a condition precedent to the accumulation and vesting in trustees of certain funds of the testator's estate to specific uses, the phrase, "personal terminable annuities" comprises all annuities given for life under the will.

HOTCHPOT — BRINGING SETTLED PROPERTY INTO—VALUATION.

On a testamentary provision that certain legacies should be set aside for the use of the testator's children on their bringing into hotchpot property received by them under a marriage settlement, and that the residue of the testator's estate should be divided among them in certain proportions, the settled sums so brought into hotchpot are to be deducted from the legacies and not from their residuary shares. The value of the amount settled is to be ascertained, where the trustees have power to change the investments, as of the date of the settlement and not of the testator's death. [Kirkcudbright v. Kirkcudbright, 8 Ves. 51, 32 Eng. R. 369; Re Willoughby, [1911] 2 Ch. 581, applied.] Where, under such provision they acquire the income for life only of the settled fund, the full fund, and not merely the present value of the life estate at the testator's death, must be brought into hotchpot.

Re Nordheimer, 14 D.L.R. 658, 29 O.L.R. 350.

Such a testamentary provision is a "direction to the contrary" under a marriage settlement of real property to the effect that a child should, in order to share in the testator's estate, bring the settled estate into hotchpot at a fixed valuation unless the testator should by will "direct to the contrary."

HOTCHPOT—WHAT MUST BE BROUGHT INTO.

A bequest of money and income to a son on condition that he keep up and maintain as a "gentleman's residence" certain property acquired under a marriage settlement, but of a lesser amount if he fails to do so, shews a clear intention on the part of the testator that the value of such property was not to be brought into hotchpot under a further testamentary provision that all money, property or interests received by or to which any of the testator's children were entitled under any marriage settlement should be brought into hotchpot in adjusting the several amounts to be set aside from the testator's estate for their benefit; since to hold otherwise would defeat the purpose of the bequest.

INCONSISTENT RESIDUARY GIFTS—EFFECT GIVEN TO LATER ONE.

The rule that where two clauses in a will are repugnant and incapable of reconciliation the later must prevail applies to inconsistent residuary clauses. But, if there are two gifts in the same instrument, each sufficient to include the residuary estate, in a case where lapsed shares of the first gift would leave something for the second gift to operate upon, the first of the two gifts is preferred—i.e., the "rule of thumb" is not applicable because a meaning can be attributed to the last clause which removes the apparent repugnancy. After giving many substantial specific legacies, a testator in his will said: "The residue of my estate to go to the deserving poor of F." Then followed this clause: "Balance of my estate divided between those in the will pro rata."—Held, that the two clauses were hopelessly inconsistent, and effect must be given to the last gift as the last intention of the testator.

Re Nolan, 40 O.L.R. 355.

"CHARGING MY EXECUTOR"—"OUT OF MY ESTATE."

The words "charging my executors to allow my mother . . . 15 shillings per week" denote a clear intention to create an annuity in favour of the testator's mother and should be given effect to by implying

A gift to "all living children" of a person comprehends those living at the testator's death and those who are at that time en ventre sa mere. It is an immediate gift to them on the testator's death, notwithstanding that it is gift of the residuary estate and part of the estate has been set aside to provide annuities, which part will not fall into the residuary estate until the death of the annuitants. When a gift is made to children attaining the age of 21, the period of distribution is the date upon which the eldest child attains that age. All children coming into existence before that period has arrived are entitled to participate in equal degree with the other children who attain 21 years. Upon the eldest child attaining 21, the class will be closed and no child born after that time will be entitled to participate. By his will a testator directed that the residue of his estate should be paid "share and share alike to all living children" of his brother G.R. Charlton and his sister, L.J. Miller. By a codicil he directed that "should any of the children of my sister L.J. Miller one of the beneficiaries named in my said will die before attaining the age of 21 years the share to which she, he or they would otherwise be entitled shall go to those children of my sister who do attain the age of 21 years to be equally divided between them." It was held that, although without the codicil the will should be construed as a gift to the Charlton and Miller children per capita, the codicil indicated an intention that the distribution should be per stirpes. Although the postponement of the period of distribution as to some of the beneficiaries might not in itself be sufficient to show an intention that the distribution should not be per capita, yet such intention is shown where the share of a child dying is given, not to the other member of the class, but to the brothers and sisters of such child. The gift in question should therefore be divided into as many parts as there were living children of G.R. Charlton and L.J. Miller at the time of the testator's death and apportioned in proportion to the number of children in each family. As, at the testator's death, there were four Miller children and eight Charlton children, one-third of the gift should be set aside for the Miller children and when the eldest Miller child should attain 21 it would be entitled to a share of that one-third in proportion to the number of Miller children then living.

DEFINITENESS.

out the provisions of the will if he refuses to do so voluntarily.

FAITH OF BENEFICIARIES — PUBLIC POLICY.

A codicil to a will, which declares that any of the children of the testator who shall be members of any denomination or church, usually known as baptists or antipedo baptists, or whose doctrine or practice is opposed to the baptism of infants, shall only be entitled to receive one-half of his share as institute, substitute or legatee of his estate, and to the whole of his share only by a bona fide discontinuation of membership of this denomination or church, is not void as contrary to public order and good morals.

Thorton v. Parker, 54 Que. S.C. 413.

BEQUESTS TO WITNESS — NULLITY — INTENT-ACCY.

A legacy to a witness of a will, in English form, is void, but does not affect the other provisions of the will. If such legatee is also made the testamentary executor, under an arrangement by which he accepts a fixed sum in lieu of his legacy and all his rights, such acceptance is not a ratification of the contested provision of the will, and the legacy made to the witness being void, the property illegally given remains in the ab intestat succession of the testator.

Vandette v. Vandette, 24 Rev. Leg. 220.

UNIVERSAL LEGATEE — STRANGERS.

The universal legatee, who was made a colegatee in undivided ownership by a will, is entitled to take part in the partage or division of the estate of said deceased whenever the same takes place. He has the right to exercise the action in "retrait successoral" against a stranger who has bought, before any partage, from one of the colegatees the universality of the rights and interests of the latter in the said estate. An inscription in law against such action is unfounded.

Laforest v. Aubry, 18 Que. P.R. 82.

The designation of a fiduciary legatee by these words of a will, "the Protestant Corporation of the town (Megantic)" does not apply, either separately or jointly, (a) to the Methodist church of the Town of Megantic; (b) to the Presbyterian church of the Town of Megantic; (c) to the Anglican church of the Town of Megantic.

(§ III B—81)—DESCRIPTION OF BENEFICIARIES AS "HEIRS."

The use of the word "heirs" in a will is not always limited to its technical sense, but may be synonymous with legatees or devisees.

"HEIRS" — LEGAL AND COLLOQUIAL MEANINGS, CONSIDERED.

In a will in which the testator made bequests to a number of persons, some of whom were his nephews and nieces, and were so designated in the will, while the remaining legatees were strangers, and then a subsequent clause provides for a distribution of certain remaining moneys equally "among the aforesaid heirs," the word "heirs" in this connection must be given its strictly technical and legal interpretation instead of its popular signification, and, in the absence of circumstances preventing the court from adopting such strict meaning, the expression will be construed to mean those persons named in the will who would be entitled to the estate if there were an intestacy. CHARITABLE BEQUEST—RELIGIOUS AND SANITARY INSTITUTIONS—PUNCTUATION IN HOLOGRAPH WILL—43 ELIZ. C. 4.

A bequest for religious purposes is prima facie a bequest for charitable purposes and is not void for uncertainty. It must be so treated unless the testator's intention to the contrary is clearly shown. A bequest to sanitary institutions is likewise valid as a charitable use. In construing a doubtful clause in a holograph will the punctuation is to be regarded as one of the indicia by which the testator's intention is to be arrived at. Where a testator bequeathed his residuary estate to trustees in trust to use and employ the same and the income therefrom "for the benefit, advantage, assistance, or the founding of such charitable, religious, educational or sanitary institutions," as said trustees might from time to time see fit and deem advisable. Held, that the words "charitable," "religious," "educational" and "sanitary" were to be read disjunctively, that all such classes of institutions were charitable purposes and the bequest not void for uncertainty. The charitable objects enumerated in the statute 43 Eliz., c. 4, are not to be taken as the only objects of charity but are given as examples only.

VII., c. 26, s. 47, "for the permanent endowment of . . . a charitable object as hereinafter directed" and "shall be so paid for the purpose of being invested by him in Ontario Government stock as by the aforesaid Acts directed and the whole of the interest thereon shall be paid over as it matures in perpetuity to the Hospital for Sick Children."—Held, that the gift of the income in perpetuity, without any restriction as to the purpose for which it was to be used, was in effect and in law a gift of the corpus. [Mayor, etc. of Beverley v. Attorney-General (1857), 6 H.L.C. 310, 318, followed.] The intention of the testator must always be the guide in the interpretation of wills; but, when once the intention is clear, the legal effect of that intention must follow, even if it could be shown that the testator did not know the effect in law of what he had directed. The statutes (since repealed and re-enacted in amended form by 5 Geo. V., c. 20, s. 25) merely constituted the Treasurer a trustee—the effect of the trust declared must be ascertained upon the ordinary principles.

Re Carter, 42 O.L.R. 57.

DESCRIPTION — REMUNERATION OF EXECUTORS — TRUST FOR CROWN.

By his will the testator gave the whole of his property to two persons as trustees and executors "for the purposes after-named." The whole estate was of the value of about $12,000. He then gave seven specific legacies, amounting in aggregate value to $9,300, to different charitable institutions. He made no disposition of the residue. He appointed the executors "for the consideration of 8 per cent of the whole estate as set forth in this my will." The description in the will of the institutions to be benefited was inaccurate, and there was some uncertainty as to what institutions were intended. Upon evidence submitted, an order was made determining the objects of the testator's bounty. The clause above quoted was construed as giving the executors a commission of 8 per cent on the whole estate as remuneration for their care, pains, and trouble. The testator, so far as known, was the last of his family; he was unmarried, and had no relations:—Held, that the provision made for the executors indicated that the testator did not intend them to take the residue beneficially; and, by virtue of s. 58 of the Trustee Act, R.S.O. 1914, c. 121, they held the residue in trust for the next of kin, who would take upon an intestacy, if there were next of kin; and there being no next of kin, the executors held for the Crown. [Middleton v. Spier (1783), 1 Bro. C.C. 201, followed.] Held, also, that the gifts of named amounts to named charities could not be construed as carrying with them a gift of the residue or surplus, for distribution among the named charities; nor could a general gift for charitable purposes be implied; also, that there should not be a reference for the purpose of an inquiry as to claimants; any meritorious claim would, no doubt, be recognized by the Crown.

PERPETUAL TRUST FOR CARE OF GRAVE — LEGISLATIVE SANCTION — CEMETERY ACT.

A direction in a will to the executors to deposit a sum in a bank or invest it, "the yearly interest to be devoted to the care of my grave," creates, leaving statutory provisions out of consideration, a perpetual trust; and, as the purpose is not charitable, is void; but legislative sanction is given to this particular form of perpetual trust, by the Cemetery Act, R.S.O. 1914, c. 261, s. 14, especially subs. 4; and, where there was such a direction in a will, it was declared that the executors might pay over the sum mentioned to the "owner," i.e., the person owning, controlling, or managing a cemetery (s. 2(c)), making an agreement with him as contemplated by the statute.

The Mortmain Act (9 Geo. II., c. 36), is not in force in Saskatchewan. A bequest to a trustee "for Christian work or otherwise as she sees fit" is void for uncertainty.

PERPETUITY—MASSES.

A bequest for the saying of masses for the repose of souls is not in this province void as superstitious. [Elmsley v. Madden, 18 Gr. 386, followed.] A bequest of the residue of the testator's estate (consisting of both realty and personalty) to a church, "to be invested and kept invested . . . for ever and the interest . . . to be applied and expended . . . for the saying of Holy Masses . . . for the repose of the soul of the testator and his descendants for ever," was held, ineffective as creating or tending to create a perpetuity, and not a charitable use. [O'Hanlon v. Logue, [1906] 1 I.R. 247, not followed; West v. Shuttleworth, 2 My. & K. 684; Heath v. Chapman, 2 Drew. 254, followed.] In any case the personalty alone would have been applicable to the trust declared. The questions arising upon the will were (in the absence of objection) considered upon an originating notice notwithstanding that the time had not come for realizing the residue. An insurance policy taken out by testator on his life named his mother as beneficiary. Held this was presumably a gift to her and the moneys payable under the policy on testator's death belonged to her; the fact that she agreed to a loan being obtained on security of the policy did not operate to release her interest except for the mortgage debt; the testator's will made subsequent to the date of the insurance providing for an annuity for his mother without declaring that such bequest was in lieu of the insurance, did not by implication put her to her election; nor did the expression in the will that all life insurance "monies" should form part of his estate mean that said policy should form part of his estate, the deceased being presumed to know what his legal rights were and to be disposing only of property which he had a right to deal with. Re De Blois Trusts, 5 D.L.R. 119, 11 E.L.R. 141.

Held, that the widow took a life estate only with power of appointment to the children or to some of them and a gift over to the children if the power were not exercised. The widow having purported to convey the fee, the court further held, that the mode of conveyance adopted by her amounted to a bargain and sale, taking effect under the Statute of Uses, and was not a tortious feoffment which under the law would work a forfeiture under the Statute of Limitations (R.S.N.S. 1900, c. 167).

A gift by will of the "right to remain in a dwelling house free from rent" made in favour of a person named and of his family, is to be construed as a restriction upon a prior devise of a life estate in these and other lands to another; it does not confer any estate in reversion but a continuing right of possession during the life of the life-tenant and possibly until the closing of the estate by the division directed to take place after the death of the life-tenant.

A devise of the testator's "real estate at 62 Muir avenue" has a wider meaning than a devise of "his house at, etc.," and will include a shop built on part of a garden adjoining and formerly used with the house known as No. 62, the shop being erected close against the house and requiring the house for its support.

And held, that the chattel property bequeathed to the granddaughter became hers absolutely by the terms of the bequest: The testator meant that the land and goods should go in the same manner; and, as the land, by force of the rule of law, became the granddaughter’s absolutely, so did the goods. The testator, dying in 1887, by his will set apart his house as a home for his wife and family, and then gave all his estate to his executors in trust to convert and use for the maintenance of his wife and family, and to pay certain sums to his sons, and, at such time, after the expiration of five years from his decease as might seem advisable to the executors, to divide among all his children share and share alike, all his estate, save such portions as the executors might retain to provide from the interest for the wife and family residing in the homestead, any balance of income being divided yearly among all his children. The will further provided that on the death of the widow the income should be divided until the time for division previously referred to: and "in case any of my children should die without having received his or her portion . . . and leaving issue him or her surviving at the time a division of the estate shall be made among my children the child or children of such of my children so dying shall represent and receive their deceased parent's share but if any of my children should die leaving no issue him or her surviving the share or portion herein given . . . to such child shall revert to and become part of my estate and be equally divided among all my surviving children." The executors kept the estate intact until the widow died (in 1917 or 1918), and after her death paid over to the executors of a son, who had died in 1907, leaving children, a sum representing part of his share in his father's estate:—Held, that the children of the deceased son took under the will of their grandfather, whose executors ought to have paid to those children the sum aforesaid. The gift was to the children of the testator, subject to be devised in favour of the child or children of such of the testator's children as should die before the actual receipt of their shares, leaving children surviving. RESIDUARY DEVISE—TRUST—INTENTION.

A testator devised all his residuary estate to A., to have and to hold the same unto A. forever, coupled with a limitation that A. should execute and carry out any request and directions which the testator might give A. respecting the property devised, by a document under his hand and seal. Held, that the testator, having died without making any request or giving any directions, A. took the property beneficially and not as trustees for the next of kin.

(§ III G—136)—APPLICATION OF GIFT OVER — CHILDREN DYING WITHOUT ISSUE SURVIVING—INTERPRETATION OF WILLS ACT, s. 33—SALE AND DISPOSITION OF ESTATE BY EXECUTORS—DEVOLUTION OF ESTATES ACT, ss. 14, 19.

Where there is a gift over to other beneficiaries contingent on the death of the children leaving no issue living at their death, the children take an absolute interest in the real and personal estate subject to the proviso. In the Wills Act, R.S.O. 1914, c. 120, s. 33, the words "dying without issue" mean a lack of issue in the lifetime or at the death of the child or children. Held, also that power of sale according to the Devolution of Estates Act (R.S.O. 1914, c. 119, s. 14), may be exercised, subject to consent of official guardian or order of judge of the Supreme Court.

CY-PRES DOCTRINE.

Where literal compliance with a secret condition attached to a gift becomes impossible from unavoidable circumstances, and without any fault of the party, it is sufficient that it is complied with as nearly as it practically can be, or as it is technically called cy-pres. Ignorance by the beneficiary of a condition annexed to a gift does not protect the devisee from the consequences of not complying with it, but where compliance with the condition is contra bonos mores, the devisee might well be absolved from compulsory compliance with the condition.

Held, that in view of the surrounding circumstances and bearing in mind the terms of the first will, it was clearly the intention of the testatrix to dispose of all she possessed in the manner stated, and the legacies should be held payable out of the estate of the deceased and the land resorted to for that purpose.

Dusablon v. Martel, 18 Que. P.R. 36.

PECUNIARY LEGACIES—MIXED FUNDS—REALTY AND PERSONALTY.

The general rule of law as to pecuniary legacies in the absence of sufficient indication of a contrary intention, is that they are payable by the legal personal representatives of the testator out of the personal estate not specifically bequeathed. Unless charged upon it by the will they are not payable out of the real estate: [Robertson v. Broadbent, 8 App. Cas. 812.] Where a testator is minded to make his real estate, in addition to his personal estate, assets for the payment of debts and legacies, or either of them, the presumption is that the real estate is made an auxiliary fund, only secondarily liable to the personal estate, which still retains its primary liability. It is absolutely necessary, therefore, not only to have an expression of operation of the real estate, but also a sufficient exoneration of the personal estate, either wholly or partially, before there can be any interference with the ordinary rule for the application of assets. This expression of oneration and exoneration may be found if the court, after looking at the whole will, is convinced that there was an intention on the part of the testator that not only the real estate should be onerated, but that personal estate should be exonerated.

PAYMENT IN PARTICULAR MANNER.

BEQUESTS—CHARGE ON.

Where a will gave the proceeds of an insurance policy on the life of the testator in equal shares to his children, and a later clause declared that, if money enough to pay certain legacies, which were a charge on real estate devised to one of his children, was not realized from the sale of property specifically designated, other than that on which the legacies were chargeable, the difference should be paid from the insurance money, the latter provisions of the will are not in derogation of the earlier bequest of the insurance money, and the two will be construed so as to give the money to the children of the testator subject to the payment of any deficiency in such legacies. An executor held to have been vested with an implied power to sell certain of his testator's real property, and a proposed sale thereof approved. A codicil to a will contained the following clauses: "I bequest income of the property of the G.V. Hotel, to Mrs. D., after her death property or money to go to A. I bequest Mrs. D. to pay Mrs. I, $5,000 on the sale of G.V. Hotel property or until that time $20 a month." The court approved of a sale of the hotel. Held, that the gift to Mrs. D. must remain untouched so far as Mrs. I. was concerned, that is, that the request or bequest in favour of Mrs. I. failed.

MAINTENANCE — BREACH OF DUTY — FORFEITURE—REMOVAL.

A legatee who does not fulfil the duties obligations to which he is bound by the will may have his legacy declared forfeited or reduced. When a legatee is charged to house, feed, clothe and furnish the other things necessary to a minor, on condition that the latter works for him until of age, all the charges on the legatee may be converted into money if the legatee refuses or neglects to fulfil the obligations, or if it becomes impossible for the minor to live with the legatee. A universal legatee charged with a particular legacy to a minor, with an obligation to house, feed and maintain him, and who is at the same time appointed testamentary executor, is not subject to be removed from that position, and, as he has not complied with the provisions of the particular legacy, the court converts into money the obligations he had to fulfil to the minor.

(§ III L—190)—INSUFFICIENCY OF PERSONAL ESTATE TO PAY DEBTS—SALE OF LAND — PECUNIARY LEGATEES—MARSHALLING OF ASSETS.

General pecuniary legatees have no right to marshal as against specific devisees. A devisee is as much an object of the testator's bounty and as much to be favoured as a legatee and, where the testator has manifested no intention to prefer the legatee to the devisee, the usual order of administration, according to the practice of the court, ought to be followed. The order in which assets are liable for payment of debts remains as heretofore: Devolution of Estates Act, s. 15. The testator by his will directed, first, that all his debts and funeral and testamentary expenses should be paid by his executors as soon as convenient after his decease. He then devised and bequeathed all his real and personal estate in the manner which followed, i.e., he devised all his land to his son, and made certain pecuniary bequests. The son died, leaving his widow and infant children entitled to the land specifically devised to him. The personal property of the testator proved insufficient to meet his debts; after exhausting it, the executors sold the real estate, and paid the remaining debts out of the proceeds. There remained a balance in their hands:—Held, that the legacies were not payable out of this fund. (2) That no case had arisen for the marshalling of the assets of the deceased so as to entitle the legatees to payment. (3) That the widow and children of the son were entitled to the fund. [Rickard v. Kissmuller v. Balcom, 24 B.C.R. 353, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 535.

Can. Dig.—147.

PREFERENCE OF LEGACIES.

In case of preference in the matter of particular legacies when the property of the succession is insufficient, art. 885 C.C. (Que.) contrary to the French law, recognizes that the implied wish of the testator governs the provisions of the will, and that it is for the court to determine which legacy the testator intended as a preference. This preference may result from the order in which the legacies are set out in the will. But the fact that the testator has declared a legacy inalienable, while he has not given the same character to the others, implies that he has given it a preference. The following circumstances indicate that a testator has not wished to subject a legacy to the payment of other special legacies: (a) when the testator especially determines the conditions and charges of the first legacy without subjecting it to payment of the others; (b) when the testator leaves other property, especially hypothecary obligations, and it appears by the whole of the will that his intention was that the particular legacies should be paid in the same manner as these latter obligations.

LEGACY TO CHURCH COMMITTEE—CONTRIBUTION TO "BUILDING FUND"—ULTERIOR DISPOSITION—APPLICATION TO PURPOSE INTENDED—LAPSE OF DEVISE—ARTICLE 964, C.C. QUE.

At a time when the congregation of a church was heavily encumbered with a debt incurred in building the church, a committee was formed to direct contributions to be applied in liquidating the debt by means of a "building fund," and the testatrix made her will by which she bequeathed certain real property to that committee. Several years later the committee were relieved of their duty and the building fund ceased to exist, and during the year previous to the death of the testatrix the original debt in respect of which the building fund had been established was fully paid. There remained, however, at the time of her death balances of debt still due for expenses incurred for other building purposes. In an action to have the bequest declared to have lapsed on account of failure in its ulterior disposition:—Held, that the bequest must be construed as a bounty to the trustees of the church for the purposes of building expenses, including debts incurred for such purposes subsequent to the construction of the church; that the motive of the testatrix was not to make a contribution to any particular fund, but to benefit the congregation in respect to its building liabilities generally, and that the legacy did not lapse in consequence of the "building fund" having ceased to exist and the extinction of the debt in regard to which contributions to that fund were to be applied.

Where the income of an estate varies from year to year, each year is to be considered separately; and annuities will be paid therefore in the order of priority established by will; and an annuitant who does not in any one year receive the full amount of his annuity cannot charge the arrearage upon the income of subsequent years in priority to those annuities payable in that year.

By his will the testator directed that the whole of his assets be converted into money and the proceeds distributed in pecuniary legacies. These legacies were made subject to a proviso for abatement. One of the legacies was to M. Subsequently, he executed a codicil containing the following clause: "I wish to leave to M. all my interest in the mortgage on . . . (certain lands)." None of the principal of said mortgage had been paid at this date. Held, that the legacy of the mortgage was a specific legacy, the mortgage was withdrawn from the effect of the clause in the will directing all the assets to be converted into money, and that the legacy was in substitution of that given by the will and not subject to the proviso in the will for abatement. [Burroughs v. Cottrell, 3 Sim. 375; Scott v. John, 4 O.R. 457, followed.] Held, that on the facts the provisions for abatement set out in the will did not apply. The deceased left a letter directed to his solicitor, asking that certain chattels be given to the parties designated and that a cheque he had drawn be given to the payee. Held, that these dispositions could only be supported as donatio mortis causa, and as there was neither actual nor constructive delivery, they must fail.

DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY — CHARGE ON LAND.

The estate of the testator, who died in England, consisted of two small sums of money in England, a considerable sum in a bank in Ontario, and valuable real estate in Ontario. By his will he appointed an executor, and gave him $1,000. He gave his cousin in England (who predeceased him) an annuity of $600, to be provided from the rents of the real estate in Ontario—"my nephews to whom . . . I bequeath that property contributing this charge in such proportion as they shall mutually agree or . . . as my executor shall deem just." He then gave to the same cousin all his property in England. Then followed a legacy of $5,000 to his niece, and then—"Subject to the above-mentioned charges, I give . . . to my nephews . . . my real property" in Ontario. There were two nephews; to one three-fifths of the property was given and to the other two-fifths. Lastly, he directed that "all other property than the above-mentioned which I possess in Canada" should be divided equally between three named persons.—Held, that, though the annuity was made a charge upon the real estate, the legacies of $1,000 and $5,000, notwithstanding the use of the plural in the words "subject to the above-mentioned charges," were not so made a charge. The bequest of the property in England was a specific legacy. The residuary bequests were not specific, and had not priority over the pecuniary legacies of $1,000 and $5,000. A gift of "my property at A," is specific. The words "in Canada" at the end of the residuary bequest were not added with the view of making the gift specific, but because all in England had already been given.

I. Competency.

A. IN GENERAL.

Of evidence, see Evidence.
Witness fees, see Costs.

(§ I A—1) — DISQUALIFICATION — COMPETENCY OF ONE NOT ONTARIO LAND SURVEYOR.

Sections 3, 25 of 1 Geo. V., c. 41 (Ont.), respecting land surveyors, do not prohibit a surveyor who is not an "Ontario land surveyor" from testifying as to surveys made by him, although the weight of this testimony may be measured in some degree by s. 25.

Cardwell v. Breckenridge, 11 D.L.R. 461, 24 O.W.R. 569, 4 O.W.N. 1295.

(§ I A—2) — TESTIMONY OF PURCHASER AS TO VALUE OF SHIPMENT LOST BY CARRIER.

In an action against the defendant company to recover the value of two black fox pups and one cross pup, part of a lot of nine shipped at Dryden in Ontario, to be delivered to the plaintiffs at Sackville, N.B., on the ground that the three foxes died of suffocation on the journey through the negligence of the employees of the defendant company. Held, that a part owner who had purchased the foxes and who stated in his evidence that there were several fox ranches where he lived, that he knew the market value of foxes from what people said and from what he had read, and that he had been engaged in the fox business to a considerable extent since making the purchase, was a competent witness to prove their value.

Trenholm v. Dominion Express, 43 N.B.R. 98.

(§ I A—4) — RELIGIOUS BELIEF.

A witness in a criminal case is not entitled to affirm in lieu of being sworn unless he states that he objects to the oath on conscientious scruples; a mere statement of his preference to affirm and that he considered it optional is insufficient to make legal his testimony given on affirmation, although no objection was taken until cross-examination.

The King v. Deakin, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 62, 16 C.R. 271, 19 W.L.R. 43.

(§ I A-8)—COMPETENCY NOTWITHSTANDING DEATH SENTENCE.

A person under sentence of death is competent as a witness on the trial of another for a criminal offence. [R. v. Hach, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 196, followed; R. v. Webb, 11 Cox C.C. 133, distinguished.] Section 1064, Cr. Code, giving special directions for the safe custody of a convict sentenced to death does not interfere with the powers conferred by s. 977 upon courts of criminal jurisdiction to order the convict to be produced as a witness on the trial of an indictable offence.

R. v. Kuzin, 21 D.L.R. 378, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 66, 25 Man. L.R. 218, 8 W.W.R. 166, 30 W.L.R. 803.

(§ I A-9)—PERSONS JOINTLY CHARGED—ACCOMPLICES.

Where two persons were jointly charged with theft and one pleaded guilty and the other not guilty, the former may be called as a witness against the latter although sentence had not yet been passed upon the plea of guilt; in such a matter it must be left to the discretion of the presiding judge to decide what is the fairest and most convenient course to pursue in the particular case, and whether there should be an adjournment of the trial or an immediate sentence of the accomplice; and where he is holding the trial without a jury, it is not error for the judge to take cognizance of the accomplice's evidence before sentencing him, although in receiving the testimony the judge expressed a view favouring a different course had there been a jury.

R. v. McClain, 23 D.L.R. 312, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 488, 8 A.L.R. 73, 7 W.W.R. 1134, 30 W.L.R. 388.

(§ I A-10)—COMPETENCY OF COUNSEL AS WITNESS.

Counsel may in strictness testify for the party whose case he is conducting, although the practice is highly undesirable. [Cobbett v. Hudson, 1 El. & Bl. 11, followed.]

Robert Bell Engine v. Gagne, 20 D.L.R. 235, 7 S.L.R. 154, 7 W.W.R. 62, 29 W.L.R. 322.

(§ I A-14)—COMPELLING ATTENDANCE—CRIMINAL LAW—SUBPOENA FOR ATTORNEY-GENERAL.

The magistrate, under s. 671, Cr. Code, is vested with some discretion in issuing subpoenas to witnesses, because of the words of that section "if it appears to the justice that any person is likely to give material evidence," and may refuse to issue a subpoena if the reasons advanced by the applicant do not show that the witness sought to be examined is likely to give material evidence. A magistrate is justified in refusing to issue a subpoena for the attendance of the Attorney-General before him as a witness if it appears that the Attorney-General could not give material evidence.

[R. v. Baines, [1909] 1 K.B. 258, 21 Cox C.C. 756 applied.]

R. v. Allerton, 17 D.L.R. 294, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 273, 19 B.C.R. 493, 27 W.L.R. 894, 6 W.W.R. 522.

B. HUSBAND AND WIFE.

(§ I B-15)—HUSBAND OR WIFE—CRIMINAL TRIAL.

In criminal cases of the class in which the wife is not competent as a witness against her husband, if she is called by the Crown and gives evidence although stating that she came to court voluntarily and was willing to testify, the conviction cannot stand unless it clearly appears that the evidence she gave did not affect, and could not have affected, the result. [Makin v. Attorney-General of N.S.W. [1894] A.C. 57; Allen v. The King, 44 Can. S.C.R. 331, applied.]

R. v. Allen, 14 D.L.R. 825, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 124, 41 N.B.R. 516.

(§ I B-16)—WIFE AS WITNESS AGAINST HUSBAND—CRIMINAL LAW—NONSUPPORT TRIABLE UNDER SUMMARY CONVICTION PROCEDURE.

The evidence of the wife is not admissible against her husband on the hearing before a magistrate of a charge under Cr. Code, s. 242a (amendment of 1913), whereby it was made an offence punishable on summary conviction for a husband to neglect without lawful excuse to provide for his wife and children when destitute, as no corresponding amendment was made to the Canada Evidence Act when s. 242a was added to the Code.

R. v. Allen, 17 D.L.R. 719, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 67, 50 C.L.J. 543.

II. Examination.

See also Discovery.

A. IN GENERAL.

(§ II A-30)—EXPERT WITNESS—HYPOTHETICAL QUESTION.

It is not necessary to embody in a question put to an expert as a hypothetical question all the facts relating to the subject upon which the opinion of the witness is asked. It is sufficient that one fact which has been proven, or more than one, be stated to the witness, and he is told to assume the truth of the fact stated, and his opinion is asked upon it.

Wilson v. Bell, 45 N.B.R. 442.

(§ II A-32)—REFRESHING MEMORY—CONSISTENCY OF STATEMENTS.

For the purpose of rehabilitating a witness, and shewing that he is consistent with himself, evidence may be given to shew that the witness had made the same or substantially the same statement as that given in his testimony, prior to the inconsistent statement. [See R. v. Anderson, 16 D.L.R. 203, and annotation following.]

R. v. Neigel, 39 D.L.R. 154, 13 A.L.R. 137, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 232, [1918] 1 W.W.R. 477.

REFRESHING MEMORY—FROM PLEADINGS.

Where the original memoranda from which a declaration is copied has been destroyed, a witness may be permitted to look at the declaration for the purpose of refreshing his memory.

Matheson v. C.P.R. Co., 35 D.L.R. 514, 10 S.L.R. 295, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 456.

REFERENCE TO NOTES MADE AT TIME OF TRANSACTION.

A witness may properly be asked to refresh his memory by looking at a copy of his notes which he was prepared to verify, as having been made by himself from the original which was a transcript of his stenographic report of the interview between the parties; and refusal to permit that course is ground for a new trial where it is impossible for the Appellate Court to say that its rejection did not materially affect the issue.

(§ II A—33) — EXAMINATION — LEADING QUESTIONS.

In examining one's own witness, leading questions must not be put to the witness on material points, but are proper on points that are merely introductory and form no part of the substance of the inquiry. The rule against leading one's own witness will be relaxed where nonleading questions fail to bring the mind of the witness to the precise point on which his evidence is desired, and where it may fairly be supposed that this failure arises from a temporary inability of the witness to remember.

Maves v. G.T.P.R. Co., 14 D.L.R. 70, # A.L.R. 396, 16 Can. Ry. Cas. 9, 25 W.L.R. 503, 5 W.W.R. 212.

EXAMINATION—LEADING QUESTIONS.

It is not leading a witness to ask him whether something took place before or after a certain event.

B. CROSS-EXAMINATION.(§ II B—35)—CROSS-EXAMINATION.

A convicting magistrate called as a witness in an action for malicious prosecution to prove certain documents, who has been sworn and examined on other matters, is liable to general cross-examination.

IN MATTERS OF MOTION.

The law does not permit a cross-examination of witnesses in support of a motion to dismiss an opposition made under the provision of art. 651, C.C.P.

Chavallier v. Montreal, 50 Que. S.C. 418.

(§ II B—36)—TO DISCREDIT WITNESS.

Where a party to a proceeding puts forward a witness who makes certain statements under oath, and where it is desired to shew by his own books or those of the person who puts him forward that his statements are not true, the production of such books may be compelled so as to test his accuracy; and when the witness is under cross-examination, the books may be used for that purpose, and to prove that his evidence is not to be relied upon.

Re Baynes Carriage Co., 8 D.L.R. 309, 27 O.L.R. 244.

(§ II B—37)—CROSS-EXAMINATION OF ACCUSED—QUESTION AFFECTING CREDIBILITY.

When the accused becomes a witness on his own behalf he may be cross-examined as to whether he has been convicted of any offence, even though the conviction is altogether irrelevant to the matter in issue, the inquiry being relevant as affecting the credibility of the accused.

(§ II B—43) — CROSS-EXAMINATION — STATEMENT OF ACCUSED IN PRIOR PROCEEDING—ABSENCE OF RECORD.

An accused person on a murder trial giving testimony on his own behalf may be asked whether or not he made a certain statement at the inquest although the original depositions are not available in court; and he has no right to demand before answering that he be informed of what was taken down in the depositions; but if use is to be made of the latter to contradict him the original deposition should be produced.

R. v. Mulvihill, 18 D.L.R. 189, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 354, 19 B.C.R. 197, 26 W.L.R. 955, 5 W.W.R. 1229. [Affirmed in 18 D.L.R. 217.]

IN CRIMINAL CASES.

A statement by a female witness on a trial for rape, in response to a question of the counsel for the accused, that she would like to see the prisoner go to prison for life, will not permit the Crown prosecutor to question her as to the commission of a similar offence by the accused against the witness. A cross-examination by counsel for the accused on a trial for rape as to acts of cruelty committed by the accused against the witness and the complaining witness, to which in addition to answering the question fully, she volunteered the further reply that the accused was also guilty of a similar offence towards her, will not permit the Crown prosecutor to question her as to the details of such assault.

R. v. Paul, 5 D.L.R. 347, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 339, 4 A.L.R. 377, 21 W.L.R. 699.

CROSS-EXAMINATION IN CRIMINAL CASES—DIRECTION OF COURT TO CALL ALLEGED ASSOCIATE IN THE OFFENCE.

Where, on charges of assisting a prisoner to escape and of conspiring with the prisoner for that purpose, the indictment is laid without calling before the grand jury the prisoner, who had been recaptured, the Trial Judge is not bound to give a direction asked by the accused that the prisoner be called as a witness for general cross-examination without making such witness a witness for the accused, nor a direction that the Crown make the prisoner its witness, if the Crown is prepared to permit counsel for the accused to interview such prisoner as to the evidence he can give and offers to facilitate his being called as a witness for the defence if desired. [R. v. Holden, 8 C. & P. 608; R. v. Stroner, 1 C. & K. 650, distinguished.]

R. v. Hagel, 16 D.L.R. 378, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 151, 24 Man. L.R. 19, 6 W.W.R. 164, 27 W.L.R. 271.

C. PRIVILEGE.

(§ II C-45) — CRIMINATING EVIDENCE — GOVERNMENTAL INVESTIGATION.

The powers conferred on an Investigation Commission to compel the attendance of witnesses and production of documents for the purpose of enabling the government to proceed in civil and criminal prosecutions, is no abridgment of the immunity of giving criminating evidence recognized by the Dominion and Provincial Evidence Acts.

Kelly v. Mathers, 23 D.L.R. 225, 25 Man. L.R. 580, 8 W.W.R. 1208, 31 W.L.R. 931, 32 W.L.R. 33.

SELF-INCRIMINATION.

The right of a witness to refuse to answer questions put to him, on the ground that his answer might tend to criminate him is a civil right which has been taken away from him by the Ontario Evidence Act, R. S.O. 1914, c. 76, s. 7, in respect of civil matters.

Re Ginsberg, 38 D.L.R. 261, 40 O.L.R. 136, reversing 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 447.

TO DIVULGE SECRETS OF STATE—MILITARY SERVICE ACT.

A court cannot compel a witness, who is a subordinate of the Minister of Justice, to answer questions put to him, when he has received instructions from the Minister to state only the number of men actually on active service under the Military Service Act, 1917, and amendments, is under 100,000, and to refuse to reply to any other questions tending to divulge administrative acts of the state, with regard to the military service of Canada.

Rheault v. Landry, 20 Que. P.R. 187.

APPREHENSION OF CRIMINAL PROSECUTION—DISOBEDIENCE OF JUDGMENT.

The plaintiffs launched a motion to commit G., the chairman of the defendant board, for breach of the injunction granted by the judgment of Lennox, J., in this action (32 O.L.R. 245, 261, 18 D.L.R. 456). As witnesses for the plaintiffs upon the pending motion, G. and certain other persons were examined before a special examiner; and the plaintiffs now moved for an order compelling G. and the other witnesses to attend for re-examination and to answer questions which they had refused to answer and to produce books, papers, and documents relating to the payment of salaries of teachers in the employment of the defendant board, and, in default, for the commitment to goal of G. and the others:—Held, that this motion was properly made in the action: it was not necessary to begin an independent proceeding by originating notice, making G. and the others parties; the notice of motion was directed to the persons individually affected, and that was sufficient. Held, also, that there could be no reasonable apprehension on the part of G. or other witnesses that by answering the questions which they refused to answer they would make themselves or the board liable to a criminal prosecution; the witnesses themselves were fully protected under s. 7 of the Evidence Act, R.S.O. 1914, c. 76; the defendant board could not be proceeded against criminally; and the statement of one member of the board, made upon an examination in a civil action, could not be used against another in a criminal proceeding. Held, also, that three members of a religious teaching fraternity, who were employed by the defendant board as teachers, and were among the witnesses examined whose re-examination was sought, and who admitted that they had been teaching without legal qualification, were not excused from answering questions, as to salaries paid to them, on the ground stated by them, viz., that they had made perpetual vows to devote themselves to the welfare of children and their own sanctification, and that the interests of the school children might be prejudiced if they answered the questions.

Mackell v. Ottawa Separate School Trustees, 40 O.L.R. 272. [See also 32 D.L.R. 1, [1917] A.C. 62.]

SECRETS OF CONFSSIONAL.

Although by Quebec law, as in the old law of France, a confessor cannot be compelled to divulge the secrets of the confessional, the penitent has the right, if he wishes, to testify as to what the priest said to him in the confessional. The incapacity of a penitent to be witness of what passed at the time of his confession to a priest cannot be raised by an inscription en droit; it is an objection to the evidence which should be decided by the judge presiding at the hearing.

Lefebvre v. Jobin, 52 Que. S.C. 492.

(§ II C-47) — PRIVILEGE—AUTHORIZATION OF SOLICITOR'S ACT.

The authorization or direction to a solicitor to send a letter on behalf of the client is not within the privilege between solicitor and client, and the latter, called as a witness in a criminal case in which he was the complainant, cannot on that ground decline to answer a question put by counsel for the accused whether he, the witness, had not authorized his solicitor, at or about the time the accused brought civil proceedings against the complainant, to write a particular letter which the solicitor had sent to the solicitor for the accused.

R. v. Prentice, 20 D.L.R. 791, 7 W.W.R. 271, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 436, 7 A.L.R. 479, 29 W.L.R. 665.

WHO MAY CLAIM PRIVILEGE.

The exception rules of law which permit a witness to refuse to answer question on the ground of professional privilege or reasons of state, are to be strictly applied, and have no operation when the refusal conceals a guilty knowledge or the discovery of acts or omissions having for their object the commission of an offence. In the cause of public order the Minister of a department can invoke this privilege on the ground of reasons of state, but a subordinate cannot. Therefore, s. 13 of c. 30, R.S.C. 1906, does not protect a clerk in a post office savings bank who may be compelled to disclose the amount to a depositor's credit.

PRIVILEGE—PENAL ACTION—EVIDENCE OF DEFENDANT.

Bouquet v. Bellegarde, 40 Que. S.C. 379.

EXAMINATION OF DEFENDANT—REFUSAL TO ANSWER—PRIVILEGE.

Section 5 of the Canada Evidence Act does not apply to a witness under examination in the Superior Court upon a proceeding to quash a saisie conservatoire issued in virtue of the provisions of C.C.P. Said witness may refuse to answer questions tending to incriminate him.

Robinson v. Casey, 12 Que. P.R. 94.

III. Impeaching; discrediting; corroborating.

(§ III—50)—IMPEACHING—DISCREDITING—CORROBORATING.

The denial by the defendant of a conversation which the Trial Judge finds took place is not sufficient to set aside the defendant's evidence in favour of the plaintiffs in an action for commission on the sale of land, where such denial does not appear to have been made with intent wilfully to pervert the facts and might be attributable to the infirmities of age.

(§ III—51)—PRIOR STATEMENT TO CONTRADICT.

Where a person under conviction for arson is called by the Crown on the trial of another person on the charge of wilfully setting the same fire, to prove that the latter had instigated him to commit the offence, the testimony of the convict that he had caused the fire at the instance and direction of accused may be rebutted by the testimony of other prisoners that the convict had admitted to them that the accused had had nothing to do with the fire, on the convict denying having made such admissions.

R. v. Webb, 16 D.L.R. 317, 24 Man. L.R. 437, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 424, 27 W.L.R. 313, 6 W.W.R. 358.

(§ III—53)—RIGHT TO CONTRADICT OWN WITNESS.

Section 23 of The Alberta Evidence Act (1910, 2nd sess., c. 3), expressly provides that, although a party producing a witness shall not be allowed to impeach his credit by general evidence of bad character, he may contradict him by other evidence, and there is no rule of evidence by which a party cannot contradict by other evidence the statements of any witness called on his own behalf.

If a witness disappoints the party calling him, another witness may be called to give a different account of the transaction. A petitioner, in an action contesting the validity of an election on account of bribery, is not bound by the testimony of a witness he called, which was adverse to the interest of the party calling him. [Melhuish v. Collier, 15 Q.B. 878, 19 L.J.Q.B. 493, followed.]

Hemm v. Bashford, 26 D.L.R. 573, 9 S.L.R. 68, 33 W.L.R. 473, 9 W.W.R. 1044, reversing 8 W.W.R. 793.

CONTRADICTION BY WRITTEN STATEMENT—LETTER.

A proposal to contradict a witness by means of a letter previously written by him was properly rejected where the witness' attention had not been directed to those parts of the letter which were to be used for the purpose of contradicting.

Robinson v. Haley, 42 N.B.R. 657.

(§ III—54)—CONTRADICTION ON IMMATERIAL MATTER.

Where the accused giving evidence on his own behalf in a criminal trial is asked, in the course of his cross-examination as to some previous offence about some irrelevant fact, the Crown is bound by his answer and cannot tender testimony in contradiction thereof. [R. v. Muma, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 285, 22 O.L.R. 227, approved.]

R. v. Mulvihill, 18 D.L.R. 189, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 354, 19 B.C.R. 197, 26 W.L.R.

955, 5 W.W.R. 1229. [Affirmed in 18 D.L.R. 217, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 134, 49 Can. S.C.R. 587, 6 W.W.R. 462.]

(§ III—55)—UNRELIABLE WITNESS—EFFECT ON JURY.

If a jury believes that a witness cannot be relied upon, the only result should be the rejection of his testimony by them in considering their verdict; it should not affect the other legal evidence in the case.

Alexe v. Canadian Western Lumber Co., 8 D.L.R. 1, 22 W.L.R. 559, 3 W.W.R. 267.

(§ III—57)—DISCREDITING OWN WITNESS—USE OF PRIOR STATEMENTS.

The right, affirmed by s. 9 of the Canada Evidence Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 145, of shewing that one's own witness, if found by the court to be hostile, had made a previous statement inconsistent with his present testimony, does not enable the party calling the witness to use the latter's previous statement as evidence of the facts contained therein the previous statement is admissible only for the purpose of impeaching the credit of the adverse witness who has denied that he had made it, and the jury should be so instructed.

R. v. Duckworth, 31 D.L.R. 570, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 314, 37 O.L.R. 197.

Where an adverse witness, whether a party to the action or not, is called to prove a case, but his evidence disproves it, the party calling him may yet establish his case by other witnesses, called not to discredit him but to contradict him on facts material to the issue. A party at a trial is not concluded by a statement of one of his witnesses brought out on cross-examination, where it appears that the witness, who was opposed in interest to the party calling him, was called merely to establish certain material facts necessary to enable the party calling him to make out a case.

ADVERSE WITNESS.

It is ground for ordering a new trial that evidence of a statement made by a Crown witness to the police, and taken down in writing on their inquiry into the crime, was improperly admitted for the Crown on the witness' failure to identify at the trial as belonging to the accused certain clothing which in his statement to the police he had identified as such, when there had been no finding by the Trial Judge, under s. 9 of the Canada Evidence Act, that the witness was adverse, and that such statement was read by the Crown counsel to the jury and referred to by the Trial Judge as being in evidence, although the latter, in his charge, advised the jury not to base a finding on the statement so admitted. [Allen v. The King, 18 Can. Cr. Cas. 1, 44 Can. S.C.R. 331, and Ibrahim v. The King, [1914] A.C. 616, 63 L.J.P.C. 185, applied.]

R. v. May, 21 D.L.R. 728, 23 Can. Cr. Cas.

(§ III—58)—CORROBORATION—CHARGE OF FORGERY—CR. CODE, 1906, s. 1002.

The corroboration required by s. 1002 Cr. Code, on a charge of forgery, is additional evidence that will fortify and strengthen the credibility of the main witness and justify the evidence being accepted and acted upon if it is believed and is otherwise sufficient.

R. v. Scheller, 16 D.L.R. 462, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 1, 7 S.L.R. 239, 6 W.W.R. 261, 27 W.L.R. 621.

RELEVANCY.

Facts which tend to render more probable the truth of a witness' testimony on any material point are admissible in corroboration thereof although otherwise irrelevant to the issue, and although happening before the date of the fact to be corroborated. [Wilcox v. Gotfrey, 26 L.T.N.S. 481, applied.]

R. v. Rabinovitch, 21 D.L.R. 609, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 496, 25 Man. L.R. 341, 30 W.L.R. 609.

CORROBORATION—ORAL TESTIMONY.

The "evidence" of the claimant which requires corroboration under s. 12 of the Alberta Evidence Act, 1910, 2nd sess. c. 3, in order to recover against the estate of a deceased person means the oral testimony of the claimant.

Brocklebank v. Barter, 22 D.L.R. 209, 8 A.L.R. 262, 30 W.L.R. 159.

PRISONER'S TESTIMONY ON PERJURY CHARGE—INCONSISTENCIES WITH FORMER TESTIMONY.

Where the accused gives evidence on his own behalf in defence of a charge of perjury, material variances in such testimony from that in respect of which the charge is brought may in themselves supply the statutory corroboration which Cr. Code, s. 1002, requires, namely, that the accused shall not be convicted "upon the evidence of one witness, unless such witness is corroborated in some material particular by evidence implicating the accused."

R. v. Nash, 17 D.L.R. 725, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 38, 7 A.L.R. 449, 28 W.L.R. 960, 6 W.W.R. 1390.

CRIMINAL TRIAL—CR. CODE, s. 1002.

The evidence of witnesses called for the defence may be looked at for the purpose of finding the corroboration required by statute (Cr. Code, s. 1002) for conviction of certain offences. [R. v. Girvin, 45 Can. S.C.R. 167; R. v. Fraser, 7 Cr. App. R. 99, followed.]

R. v. Wakelyn, 10 D.L.R. 455, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 111, 5 A.L.R. 464, 23 W.L.R. 807, 4 W.W.R. 170.

Evidence which is consistent with two views is not corroborative of either, but if the accused has denied under oath the correctness of one of such views, the evidence becomes corroborative as to the other.

R. v. Peterson, 32 D.L.R. 295, 27 Can. Cr.

Cas. 3, 9 S.L.R. 432, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 600.

CORROBORATION—CRIMINAL CHARGE—INDECENT ASSAULT.

R. v. Fontaine, 18 D.L.R. 275, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 159.

CORROBORATION.

On a charge of conspiracy to defraud, the evidence of the accomplice may be sufficiently corroborated by entries found in a memorandum book found upon the prisoner. The King v. St. Pierre, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 82.

GOVERNMENT INSPECTOR ENTRAPPING SUSPECT INTO OFFENCE—WAR REVENUE ACT (CAN.), 1915.

The effect of the Act, 8-9 Geo. V., Can., c. 46, s. 2, amending the Special War Revenue Act, 1915, is to make a government inspector who buys an unstamped bottle of perfume a competent witness although he does this to entrap the seller and to convict him of an infringement of the law. Such purpose is legalized by the amending Act and its execution does not place the inspector in the position of an accomplice so as to throw doubt on his testimony.

Sifton v. Brunet, 31 Can. Cr. Cas. 1.

CORROBORATION—DENIAL.

Evidence which is consistent with two views is not corroborative of either, but if the accused has denied under oath the correctness of one of such views, the evidence becomes corroborative as to the other.

Peterson v. The King, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 332, 55 Can. S.C.R. 115, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 345, affirming 32 D.L.R. 295, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 3, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 600.

(§ III—59)—DISSUASION FROM GIVING EVIDENCE.

The provision in Cr. Code, s. 180, to the effect that every one is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to two years' imprisonment who dissuades or attempts to dissuade any person by threats, bribes, or other corrupt means from giving evidence "in any cause or matter, civil or criminal," contemplates that the person to be dissuaded must be one who is required to give evidence; it was not intended to apply where the dissuasion was from giving evidence before a person having no proper authority to take it.

R. v. Rosen, 33 D.L.R. 715, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 259, 9 S.L.R. 401, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 382.

TAMPERING WITH WITNESS.

Tampering with a witness on any prosecution under a Provincial Liquor License Act (R.S.O. 1914, c. 215, s. 78 and R.S.C. 1906, c. 152, s. 150), does not include tampering with a possible witness before the commencement of the prosecution.

R. v. Armstrong, 31 D.L.R. 82, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 151, 36 O.L.R. 2.

INDICTMENT FOR RAPE—CROSS-EXAMINATION OF COMPLAINANT AS TO PREVIOUS IMMORAL CONDUCT—DENIAL—COLLATERAL MATTER.

The King v. Muma, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 285, 22 O.L.R. 227.

IV. Credibility.

(§ IV—60)—UNCONTRADICTED TESTIMONY—DEMEANOUR.

A judge or magistrate cannot legally refuse to give credit to testimony if the following conditions are fulfilled: (1) That the statements of the witness are not in themselves improbable or unreasonable; (2) that there is no contradiction of them; (3) that the credibility of the witness has not been attacked by evidence against his character (4) that nothing appears in the course of his evidence or of the evidence of any other witness tending to throw discredit upon him and (5) that there is nothing in his demeanour while in court during the trial to suggest untruthfulness.

R. v. Covert, 34 D.L.R. 662, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 25, 10 A.L.R. 349, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 919.

CREDIBILITY—CORROBORATION.

Bank of Montreal v. Italian Merchants' Exchange, 16 D.L.R. 851.

Upon a reference to the Master in Ordinary, the Ontario practice, which tends to give him final discretion as to the credibility of the witnesses appearing before him on the reference, is tempered by the circumstances, including such tests as whether there be some unmistakable document or something of the kind which shews the contrary or which the Master has failed to take into consideration and in the absence of any such circumstances the rule of practice will be given effect.

Nassar v. Equity Fire Ins. Co., 8 D.L.R. 645, 4 O.W.N. 340, 23 O.W.R. 340.

The Master or other officer who hears the evidence of the witnesses is the final judge of their credibility.

(§ IV—62)—AFFIRMATIVE AND NEGATIVE TESTIMONY.

A witness who testifies to an affirmative is ordinarily to be credited in preference to one who testifies to a negative. [Leffeunteum v. Beaudoin, 28 Can. S.C.R. 89, applied.]

Charlton v. The King, 8 D.L.R. 911, 14 Can. Ex. 41.

AFFIRMATIVE AND NEGATIVE TESTIMONY.

In estimating the value of evidence, the testimony of a person who swears positively that a certain conversation took place is of more value than that of one who says that it did not, because the person who denies the conversation may have forgotten the circumstances. [Chowdry Deby Perod v. Chowry Damlot Sign, 3 Moo. Ind. App.

347; Lang v. Jackson, 20 Beav. 535, adopted.]

Dunphy v. Cariboo Trading Co., 7 W.W.R. 326.

(§ IV-63)—INFORMER—CREDIBILITY—MOTIVE.

Upon a prosecution of a physician for issuing a certificate for the purchase of intoxicating liquor for nonmedical purposes contrary to the provisions of the Canada Temperance Act, the credibility of the informer will be adversely affected by any of the following circumstances, if present (a) the informer being an unknown adventurer, (b) the informer being an employee of the prosecution at a weekly wage to build up cases, (c) the informer making a false statement to the physician in applying for the certificate.

R. v. McAllister, 14 D.L.R. 430, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 166.

V. Fees.

See Costs.

(§ V-65)—FEES.

On the dismissal of an appeal from a summary conviction on which there is a rehearing, the practice in Saskatchewan does not require that the witness fees of a witness called on such rehearing shall on taxation be divided because he also attended the sittings on the same day as a witness in another case. [Hamilton v. Beck, 3 Terr. L.R. 405, followed.]

Fahkala v. Hannuksela, 8 D.L.R. 107, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 260, 2 W.W.R. 921.

CONDUCT MONEY—NONPAYMENT, EFFECT OF. Parsons v. Francis, 11 D.L.R. 847, 18 B.C.R. 157, 24 W.L.R. 938, 4 W.W.R. 1015.

Witnesses are taxed under the authority of the Trial Judge and the court has no jurisdiction to interfere with the taxation, which is considered part of the final judgment.

Consolidated Gold Mines v. Condasco, 12 Que. P.R. 333.

WITNESS FEES—RECOVERY UPON DISMISSAL OF ACTION.

If an application is dismissed, owing to the default of the plaintiff in proceeding the defendant is entitled to the hearing fee. The defendant is not entitled to the inquest fee if the only witness heard was examined with a view of trying to justify the postponement of the case.

Beaudin v. Union Abitibi Mining Co., 16 Que. P.R. 228.

(§ V-69)—PROFESSIONALS.

Under a subpoena requiring a solicitor to attend before a special examiner for cross-examination upon an affidavit made as solicitor, where the knowledge basing the affidavit was acquired by the deponent in the course of the rendering of professional services, the witness is entitled to a professional witness fee per diem of $4 in advance, pursuant to Con. rr. 492, 443, and disbursements tariff item 119.

Campbell v. Verral, 7 D.L.R. 321, 4 O.W.N. 177, 23 O.W.R. 175.

WITNESS FEES—TAXATION.

The court cannot review the taxation of witnesses' fees without making them parties.

ENDORSEMENT—ACTION FOR RECOVERY OF LAND—FAILURE TO SET OUT PARTICULARS—RULES 33, 77—FORM 5. Morrow v. Morgan, 17 O.W.N. 280.

(§ I-2)—VALIDITY.

A conviction under the Canada Temperance Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 152, was set aside where no place of trial was mentioned in the summons and defendant did not appear.

The King v. Wilson; Ex parte Harrington, 40 N.B.R. 383.

SUMMARY CONVICTION MATTERS—SUMMONS.

A summons under the Canada Temperance Act stated that the information upon which it was issued was laid more than three months after the offence. The information was in fact laid within three months. The defendant did not appear, and a conviction was entered.—Held, the summons was bad on its face and was not cured by ss. 723, 724, Cr. Code, or s. 146 of the Canada Temperance Act, and the conviction should be quashed.

The King v. Kay; Ex parte LeBlanc, 41 N.B.R. 99.

OMITTING ADDRESS — VALIDITY.

The omission in the writ of summons of the address of a defendant company is fatal, and the writ will be set aside.

Brown v. North American Lumber Co., 21 B.C.R. 258.

WRIT OF SUMMONS — IRREGULARITY — SPECIAL ENDORSEMENT — RULE 33.

Watson v. Morgan, 9 O.W.N. 281.

FORM — SERVICE — ESSENTIALS — VALIDITY.

Bailiffs can only serve writs within the limits of the district for which they have been appointed; it is necessary, therefore, to understand by the words "or in any other district" of art. 121, C.C.P., the exception intended in the said art. 7608, R.S.Q., when it says "and in other districts in the cases provided by law." The authority of the bailiff should appear on the very face of the writ of summons, by stating the district for which he is registered. That part of Form 2 of the appendix to the Rules of Practice, according to which the writ of summons is addressed to the defendant himself instead of to the sheriff or a bailiff of the district where he is to be served, does not agree with the provision of art. 121, C.C.P., and, consequently, it is beyond the power of the judges of the Superior Court to make a similar form. The notice to the defendant, in the writ, that if he does not appear judgment will be given against him by default, appears to have been inserted in the form of summons many years ago, in order to avoid subsequent writs of the English procedure of that period. A notice to the defendant "that in default of his doing so," of appearing, judgment will be given by default, is essential. The mention in the writ of the district in which it must be served, the order given to the sheriff or a bailiff of the district enjoining him to cite the defendant to appear, and the notice to the latter "that on default of his doing so" judgment will be given against him by default, are three elements essential to the validity of the writ of summons, and their omission constitutes a violation of substantial formalities which involve the nullity of the proceedings.

ORIGINAL SUMMONS — AFFIDAVITS — ENDORSEMENT — WRONG STATEMENT OF CLIENT'S NAME — RULES 264, 417, 747.

The nonfiling of an original summons on the hearing of an application, where the other party is not misled, is not fatal and leave will be given to file under r. 264, giving general power to amend, and r. 747. As to effect of noncompliance with the rules, the wrong statement of a client's name following the signature of a solicitor, and the omission to endorse a summons, etc., with a notice as to material to be read, may be corrected. Affidavits made by the registrar and one of his clerks and sworn before the deputy registrar may be used in support of an application to cancel a certificate of title. Affidavits used on an application and not endorsed with a note shewing on whose behalf they have been filed (r. 417) may be amended. In chamber applications the court will not usually decide important questions of law or complicated and contested issues of fact, where they can be more properly determined by an action.

Land Titles Act, Re; Registrar v. Toohill, 6 W.W.R. 359, 27 W.L.R. 517.

(§ 1—4)—NAME OF PARTY.

Inasmuch as a writ of summons cannot be issued without a statement of claim annexed thereto, a writ expressly referring to the statement of claim as annexed thereto and the statement of claim are to be taken as one, so that one whose name is omitted from the writ is nevertheless a party if his name appears in the statement of claim.

Albertson v. Secord, 1 D.L.R. 804, 4 A.L.R. 90, 20 W.L.R. 64, 1 W.W.R. 657.

SUMMONS—DESCRIPTION OF PARTIES—PARTNERSHIP—EXCEPTION TO FORM —QUE. C.C.P. 154.

The name of the firm under which the defendant does business, as sole member, is not necessary in his description, and an exception to the form, based on this ground, will be refused.

Singleton v. King, 16 Que. P.R. 71.

(§ 1—6)—AMENDMENT—FRESH CAUSE OF ACTION—DATE.

An amendment of the date of the writ of summons commencing an action cannot be made for the purpose of including a fresh cause of action arising pendente lite.

Yukon Gold Co. v. Boyle Concessions, 19 D.L.R. 336, 29 W.L.R. 129. [Affirmed, 27 D.L.R. 672, 50 D.L.R. 742.]

AMENDMENT—WRIT ISSUED IN NAME OF DECEASED SOVEREIGN.

A writ of summons in time to prevent the barring of an action by the Statute of Limitations, but in which by error the name of a deceased sovereign was inserted, may, under Con. rr. 310, 312 (Ont. 1897), be amended after service, so as to cure the irregularity, notwithstanding that defendant was thereby precluded from setting up the statute as a bar.

Bank of Hamilton v. Baldwin, 12 D.L.R. 232, 28 O.L.R. 175, 24 O.W.R. 21.

An application made after service of the writ of summons to amend by correcting the corporate name of the plaintiff company where the name used in the writ was that of another corporation, will only be dealt with on notice to the defendant.

United Motor Co. v. Slina, 8 D.L.R. 471, 22 W.L.R. 738, 3 W.W.R. 521.

If an action has been wrongly taken under the summary procedure, it may be amended by striking out the words "summary procedure" in the writ.

Arnold v. Canadian Motors, 14 Que. P.R. 394.

(§ I-8)—RENEWAL OF WRIT.

It is an abuse of the process of the court to keep renewed for service, for the sole purpose of preventing the operation of the Statute of Limitations, and without any bona fide intention of proceeding in the action, a writ of summons of which service is deliberately withheld to keep the litigation pending for a longer time. A motion to vacate the renewal of a writ not served within twelve months of its issue will be granted where the order for renewal was made on an insufficient affidavit, reserving, however, to the defendants the right to move against the order if there were no adequate grounds for the renewal, and where, on the hearing of the motion to vacate, the plaintiff offers no good excuse for the failure to serve the original writ within the twelve months.

Appleyard v. Mulligan, 3 D.L.R. 288, 3 O.W.N. 943, 21 O.W.R. 557.

RENEWAL—ACTION BARRED.

Where owing to the expiry of a writ of summons, a cause of action has become barred by the Statute of Limitations, leave to renew the writ nunc pro tunc ought not to be granted.

ELECTION ACT.

As the Controverted Municipal Elections Act, R.S.N.S. 1900, c. 72 s. 8, provides for service of the petition in the same manner as a writ in a civil case, substituted service may be authorized in like manner, on proof of inability to effect personal service, although the five days allowed for service had not expired, nor had an application been made to extend the time. [Peterborough West Election Case (Stratton v. Burnham), 41 Can. S.C.R. 410, followed.] McLellan v. McIsaac, 21 D.L.R. 429, 48 N.S.R. 299.

II. Service.

A. IN GENERAL; ON NONRESIDENT.

(§ II A—10)—MAGISTRATE'S ORDER — MOTION TO QUASH—SERVICE OF NOTICE — SUFFICIENCY OF.

Service of notice of motion to quash a magistrate's order made under the Master and Servants Ordinance, 1904 (Alta.), for payment of wages may be made on the complainant by leaving it with an adult at his place of residence. [R. v. Trotter, 14 D.L.R. 355, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 102, 6 A.L.R. 451, applied.]

ON NONRESIDENT — ORDER FOR — NECESSITY OF OBTAINING BEFORE ISSUANCE OF WRIT.

Under B.C. order 2, r. 4, and order 11, r. 1, an order from the court for the service beyond the jurisdiction of the court of a writ of summons or notice thereof on one of the defendants, must precede the issuance of the writ itself, which can issue only with leave; and a service beyond the jurisdiction based on an order made after the issuance of the writ without leave, is a nullity and not a mere irregularity.

Bloom v. New York Tailoring Co., 13 D.L.R. 789, 18 B.C.R. 395, 25 W.L.R. 427, 5 W.W.R. 80.

SERVICE ON DEFENDANT'S HUSBAND — DEFENDANT'S KNOWLEDGE, EFFECT.

Under the Saskatchewan Practice, where it appears that a writ of summons which was to have been served ex juris was not personally delivered to the defendant, but was delivered to her husband for her, the service of the writ will be set aside on application of the defendant, in the absence of evidence showing that a copy of the writ ultimately came to the knowledge or possession of the defendant herself. James Bay & E.R. Co. v. Bernard, 23 D.L.R. 701, 24 Que. K.B. 6.

OF STATEMENT OF CLAIM — SEVERAL DEFENDANTS—ATTACHING MEMORANDA OF INFORMATION.

The proper course for a plaintiff to pursue who desires to use one original statement of claim for service on a number of defendants whose times for appearance may be different is to endorse upon the statement of claim only the memoranda which are uniform for all, and to use an attached notice where there is any variation in the information to be given to different defendants. If this is done, there is no necessity for a concurrent writ.

REVIEW—ORDER FOR HEARING—SERVICE ON PARTY DISSATISFIED — CERTIORARI — ORDER 62, JUDICATURE ACT 1909 — ORDER UNDER—APPEAL FROM.

The court will not remove by certiorari a judgment on review from the decision of a magistrate on the ground that the order for hearing the parties on review, or notice thereof, was not served on the party dissatisfied with the judgment, when the solicitor who tried the case before the magistrate appeared and argued the case for him on review. Semble: That there is no appeal from an order of a judge refusing a certiorari on an application made under O. 62 of "the Judicature Act, 1909." Ex parte Mayes Case, 46 N.B.R. 114.

SUFFICIENCY OF SERVICE—SOLICITORS—APPEARANCE.

Where solicitors in proper form and with the authority of the client give an undertaking to accept service of a writ of summons and to enter an appearance thereto, all obligation as to service of the writ is waived or dispensed with, and if the solicitors fail to enter the appearance the plaintiff may proceed to judgment as in default of appearance. WHEN CROWN MAY BE SUMMONED—SERVICE ON ATTORNEY-GENERAL.

The sovereign can be summoned before the courts only in the cases and in the manner provided by art. 1011, C.C.P. et seq. Consequently a summons to the Attorney-General (as representing the Crown) in proceedings against a county council to compel it to change the place for holding its sessions in order that he take note of the judgment and without any other conclusion against him, is illegal and will be set aside on exception to form.

Raymond v. Kamouraska, 46 Que. S.C. 117.

EXCEPTION TO THE FORM—QUEBEC PRACTICE.

An exception to the form, based on the fact that the copy of the writ served on the defendant appeared to have been issued in the name of a deceased sovereign though the original was in proper form, was dismissed as the defendant had suffered no prejudice.

Bradley v. Saucier, 14 Que. P.R. 270.

IN GENERAL.

To summon a defendant by service of the writ only without a declaration, or of the declaration only without the writ is an irregularity which makes the proceedings radically null. Therefore, the deposit with the prothonotary, in a case of capias, of a copy of the declaration for the defendant the day after the return of the writ and after the expiration of the three days following the service of the writ is a radical nullity and the capias will be quashed on exception to the form.

(§ II A-13)—PLACE—SALE OF GOODS — PLACE OF PAYMENT.

The fact that it is stipulated in a contract between a manufacturer in Ontario and his customer in Alberta that delivery should be f.o.b. in Alberta does not imply that the locus of the contract is Alberta, nor fix that province as the place of payment where the contract is silent on that point; and the debtor must seek out his creditor, and is liable to be sued in Ontario for the default in payment occurring in Ontario under R. 25 (e) of the Judicature Rules (Ont.). PLACE OF SERVICE.

A copy of a writ of summons cannot be left with a person having no authority to receive it for the defendant, in a building which is neither the domicile nor the residence, nor the business office of the defendant. A motion by the defendant asking for dismissal of the action on this ground will be granted with costs reserving the right to sue again.

De Angelis v. Waters, 18 Que. P.R. 103.

If a defendant has been fraudulently moved from the jurisdiction of his domicile, personal service made upon him does not give jurisdiction to the court of the place where it is made.

EXCEPTION TO FORM—PETITION TO REVISE JUDGMENT—SERVICE ON PARTNERSHIP—SAMPLE ROOM—QUE. C.C.P. 139.

A summons of a partnership carrying on business under a firm name should be served at its place of business, and, if the partnership has no place of business, on one of the partners. Such service cannot be made in a sample room, and it will be void if the partners have not acted in such a way as to give rise to the belief that they had a place of business there.

Cerat v. Courville, 16 Que. P.R. 69.

(§ II A-16)—SERVICE OUT OF THE JURISDICTION — ASSETS WITHIN THE JURISDICTION—KING'S BENCH ACT (MAN.) R. 291.

Service out of the jurisdiction of a statement of claim should not be allowed, under r. 291 of the King's Bench Act (Man.) upon a mere affidavit by the plaintiff stating that the defendant has assets in Manitoba of the value of at least $200 which may be rendered liable to the judgment in case the plaintiff should recover judgment in the action, without shewing what the assets are, because the rule requires that the possession of such assets must be shewn to the satisfaction of the court or judge, and this implies that the court or judge should have some information furnished from which to be so satisfied.

Gardner v. Eaton, 17 D.L.R. 637, 24 Man. L.R. 209, 28 W.L.R. 97, 6 W.W.R. 758.

NONRESIDENT—EX JURIS.

In an action for specific performance of an agreement for purchase of land the original purchaser is properly joined as a party, although he is living outside of Canada and has transferred all his interest in the contract and in the land to his co-defendant resident within the jurisdiction, and he may be served outside the jurisdiction with a statement of claim in such an action under the Manitoba King's Bench, r. 201, which authorizes service outside of the jurisdiction whenever any person out of the jurisdiction is a necessary or proper party to an action properly brought against some other person duly served within the jurisdiction.

Smith v. Ernst, 1 D.L.R. 547, 22 Man. L.R. 317, 20 W.L.R. 353, 1 W.W.R. 839.

SERVICE ON NONRESIDENT.

On an application for leave to serve a writ of summons out of the jurisdiction, it is essential to prove a prima facie cause of action against the defendant upon whom it is proposed to serve the writ ex juris.

Davis v. Wenatchee Valley Fruit Growers Assn., 9 D.L.R. 402, 23 W.L.R. 326, 3 W.W.R. 922.

JOINING DEFENDANT OUT OF JURISDICTION — FAILURE TO ESTABLISH CLAIM AGAINST RESIDENT DEFENDANT.

Where leave is given to serve a person out of the jurisdiction as a necessary or proper party defendant to an action brought against a codefendant within the jurisdiction, it is not necessary that the order for service ex juris should contain a condition that in case the action be dismissed against the party within the jurisdiction, the plaintiff shall thereupon consent to its dismissal as to the defendant so served out of the jurisdiction; the latter's rights in that respect, where the service is justified only if the action is properly sustainable against the codefendant within the jurisdiction, can be dealt with at the trial if a plea of want of jurisdiction is raised.

The test for applying that part of the rule for service out of the jurisdiction (Man. K. B. r. 201 (g) which permits service ex juris upon any person who is a "necessary and proper party to an action properly brought against some person duly served within the jurisdiction" is whether both would have been proper parties to the action had they both been within the jurisdiction, and this without taking into account what may be the result of the trial.

[Massey v. Heynes, 21 Q.B.D. 330, applied.] Swanson v. McArthur, 12 D.L.R. 487, 23 Man. L.R. 84, 24 W.L.R. 1, 4 W.W.R. 231, varying 7 D.L.R. 680.

INTERPLEADER ORDER—SERVICE ABROAD.

Upon the application of the plaintiff, an order was made by a judge permitting the applicant to pay into court the amount of two promissory notes, made by him, held by B. in a foreign country, where he lived. The notes were given in Ontario in payment for a block of shares in an incorporated company, and the order purported to rectify the share-register of the company, by substituting the name of the plaintiff for that of the defendant as the owner of the shares. The order also directed the trial of an interpleader issue as to the money in court, and that B. should be plaintiff in the issue. The order was made after a notice of motion had been served on B., in the foreign country where he lived, informing him that a motion would be made for an order authorizing the plaintiff to pay into court the amount owing upon the two notes, and directing the Registrar of the court to execute a transfer to the plaintiff of the shares in the company, "and for such further or other order" as might seem just. No permission was obtained from the court to issue or serve this notice abroad; and, B. not appearing on the return, the order was made in his absence.—Held, upon B.'s application to set aside the order, that, the service of the notice being unauthorized, it was void as process; that, if treated as informal notice, it gave no correct information as to what the court was asked to do, and was, as to the matters complained of, no notice at all; and, therefore, the order was an ex parte order within r. 217, and should be set aside. Under rr. 25 and 3 (b), (j), a notice may be served out of the jurisdiction in interpleader; but the notice is to be in the form settled by the terms of rr. 629, 630; and r. 630 indicates the extent and nature of the relief that can be obtained against a nonappearing claimant. Assuming that there was a foundation for an interpleader order, the order went beyond the relief which the court was competent to grant against an absentee claimant. Order of Latchford, J., reversed.
Can. Dig.—148.

SERVICE OUT OF JURISDICTION—AFFIDAVIT.

A good cause of action must be shewn in support of an application for an order for service of a writ of summons ex juris.

Royal Bank v. Skeans, 24 B.C.R. 190.

DEBT OF RESIDENT.

A debt due from a resident of Manitoba to a person residing elsewhere is an asset within said province within the meaning of r. 291 of the King's Bench Rules and, therefore, a ground for allowing service of a statement of claim to be made upon the creditor outside of Manitoba in an action brought against him in Manitoba. SERVICE OF NOTICE OF WRIT OUT OF ONTARIO —ONTARIO COMPANIES ACT, s. 151, SUBS. 6 AND 7, ADDED BY 8 GEO. V., c. 20, s. 30—ACTION BY MIXING COMPANY — ENFORCEMENT OF CALL ON SHARES—"CONDITIONS" OF SERVICE—RULES 25-30—VALIDITY OF CALL—APPLICATION OF NEW SUBSECTIONS — SPECIAL ACT, 7 EDW. VII., c. 117—VALIDITY OF CALL—GENERAL STATUTORY POWERS—QUESTION FOR TRIAL—JURISDICTION OF COURT—LEAVE TO ENTER CONDITIONAL APPEARANCE.

The Ontario Companies Act, R.S.O. 1914, c. 178, having been amended by s. 30 of the Statute Law Amendment Act, 1918, 8 Geo. V. c. 20 (assented to on the 26th March, 1918), by the addition of subs. 6 and 7 to s. 151, a former action (see Superior Copper Co. v. Perry, 42 O.L.R. 45), between the parties now before the court in this action, was discontinued, and this action was commenced on the 31st May, 1918; the plaintiff company alleged that a call was, on the 18th October, 1917, made on the shares issued by the company, and claimed a declaration that the shares standing in the names of the defendants were not fully paid and were assessable and subject to call, that the call made was valid, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to sell the shares; they also claimed an order for the sale of the shares under the direction of the court. Notice of the writ of summons was served upon the defendant S. out of Ontario, and he moved to set aside the service. The added subs. 6 authorised service upon a shareholder out of the jurisdiction "in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as process is permitted to be served out of the jurisdiction in cases provided for by the Consolidated Rules:—Held, that each clause of r. 25 names, not a "condition" of permitting service, but a case in which service may be allowed; the "conditions" are to be found elsewhere, e.g., in rr. 26 to 30; the subs. 6 and 7 of s. 151 add a new case to the cases mentioned in r. 25, and make the procedure laid down in the later rr. applicable to the new case. Quere, whether the new subs. were applicable to the plaintiff company. [Toronto & Niagara Power Co. v. North Toronto, 25 O.L.R. 475, [1912] A.C. 834, distinguished.] Held, that the question whether the call sought to be enforced was one which could be supported apart from the company's special Act, 7 Ed. VII., c. 117 (O.), was one which could not be determined until all the facts were brought out at the trial of the action; and, therefore, the service should not be set aside; but the defendant S. should have leave to enter a conditional appearance, so that he might not be precluded from questioning, at the trial, the jurisdiction of the court. Although it is generally desirable that such questions should be determined at the earliest possible moment, the leave ought to be given in this particular case.

SERVICE ABROAD—JUDGE'S DISCRETION—REVIEW.

The Act in its scope and purpose is intended to affect procedure only and enacting in subs. 2, of s. 55, that the repeal effected thereby should not affect any jurisdiction, established or confirmed by or under any Act repealed thereby, the words "for any other matter" in clause (h) of O. 11, r. 1, must be construed to include any matter not covered by the preceding clauses of the rule in which the court had jurisdiction at the passing of the Act, and as by C.S.N.B. 1903, c. 111, ss. 52, 53, service abroad might have been authorized in an action such as the one in question, the judge had jurisdiction to make the order and the appeal should be dismissed. Where under clause (h) a judge in the exercise of his discretion on the facts decides that it is in the interest of justice that jurisdiction should be exercised and service abroad authorized, the court on appeal will not interfere with the exercise of such discretion.

Roy v. St. John Lumber Co., 44 N.B.R. 88. Appeal quashed in 29 D.L.R. 12, 53 Can. S.C.R. 310.

OF STATEMENT OF CLAIM—PARTIES OUTSIDE OF JURISDICTION—LEAVE.

Where the defendants without the jurisdiction are necessary or proper parties under clause (G) of r. 204, the plaintiff should issue a statement of claim, serve the defendants without the jurisdiction (see clause (G)), then apply for leave to serve the defendants without the jurisdiction and, having obtained an order, issue a concurrent statement of claim or claims on which the time for defence, or demand of notice as shewn by the endorsements thereon, is that prescribed in the order, and serve the defendants out of the jurisdiction. In the case of a sole defendant or all the defendants residing out of the jurisdiction a statement of claim should be issued and an order then obtained for leave to serve the defendant or defendants out of the jurisdiction and fixing the time for defence or demand of notice, and after obtaining the order, the time for defence or demand of notice and the date of the order should be inserted in the endorsement thereon. In a case in which there is a defendant residing north of the 55th parallel of north latitude and a defendant residing south thereof, the times for defence or demand of notice as fixed by the rule differing, a concurrent statement of claim should be issued. Parker v. Holloway, 9 W.W.R. 286.

SERVICE OUT OF JURISDICTION—RENEWAL—NEW AVERMENTS.

If a material representation upon which the leave to serve out of the jurisdiction was obtained in the first instance turns out to be unfounded, the plaintiff ought not to be allowed, when an application was made by the defendant to discharge the order for the issue of the writ and service, to set up another and a distinct cause of action which was not before the judge upon the original application.

Boyd v. Dean, 22 D.L.R. 676, 7 W.W.R. 1307, reversing 7 W.W.R. 1208.

INSUFFICIENT AFFIDAVIT—SETTING ASIDE.

In an action by a liquidator of a company, which is being wound up, s. 22 of the Winding-up Act does not prevent a defendant from moving to set aside a concurrent writ of summons and the service thereof. [Mersey Steel & Iron Co. v. Naylor, 9 Q.B. D. 648, applied.] The affidavit filed in support of an application for a concurrent writ of summons for service out of the jurisdiction must shew a good cause of action, otherwise the order may be set aside. Where notice of writ is served on defendant, not a British subject, in a foreign country, endorsement on writ under marginal r. 62 is not necessary.

Lyall Shipbuilding Co. v. Van Hemelryck, [1919] 3 W.W.R. 317.

APPLICATION TO SET ASIDE STATEMENT OF CLAIM FOR SERVICE EX JURIS—PLAINTIFF TO PROVE JURISDICTION.

An order for issue of a statement of claim for service ex juris (and the statement of claim and other proceedings) should be set aside on an application for such purpose unless the plaintiff prove in the clearest possible manner that the court has power to try the action. To dismiss such application upon plaintiff merely undertaking to prove at the trial a cause of action within the province or accept a non-suit is not good practice as it puts defendant to the trouble and expense of coming to the province to defend an action where there is a doubt as to the jurisdiction of the court to entertain it.

AGENT—CARRYING ON BUSINESS—LEAVE TO APPEAL.

An action was brought in the Supreme Court of Ontario against a railway company and a foreign steamship company for breach of duty in or about the carriage of goods. The writ of summons was served upon B., in Toronto, Ontario, as representing the steamship company. B. was the agent or representative in Toronto of a Canadian company, having its head office in Montreal, and that company was the agent in Canada of the foreign steamship company.
Neither B. nor the Canadian company had anything to do with the arrangements for the shipping of the goods in respect of which the action was brought. It appeared that the agency of the Canadian company for the steamship company was of a limited kind: It did not make contracts with shippers or passengers except on specific instructions, but received requisitions and forwarded them to the steamship company in New York;—Held, by Masten, J., in Chambers, that the Canadian company, through B., transacted or carried on some business in Ontario for the steamship company, within the meaning of r. 23, and therefore the service upon B. for the company was good service. Difference between r. 23 and the English Order IX., r. 8, pointed out. [Okura & Co. v. Forsbacka Jernverks Aktiebolag, [1914] 1 K.B. 715, distinguished.] Held, by Riddell, J., in Chambers, refusing a motion (under r. 507) for leave to appeal from the order of Masten, J., that there was no good ground to doubt the correctness of the decision.

A proclamation during a state of war, prohibiting the taking of any action against liquor licensees during the proclaimed period, does not deprive creditors from issuing the writ; but service of the writ, if arising out of an action in connection with the business as liquor licensees, will be set aside and the action continued to all other claims.

AMENDMENT OF RETURN—LAW FIRM.

Service of a motion on a firm of lawyers, in which there has been, after the appearance, a change as to one member in the composition and name of said firm, and made on the firm as newly composed, is irregular and null; a motion to amend the bailiff's return of service will be dismissed, sauf a se pourvoir, s'il y a lieu.

Dougan v. Montreal Tramways Co., 18 Que. P.R. 64.

RETURN—SATURDAY—EXTENSION OF TIME.

If the delay of 3 days given to the plaintiff by art. 154, C.C.P., to obtain permission to return a writ of summons which has not been returned on the day fixed, expires on a Saturday, permission should be asked for within such 3 days; the delay is not extended to Monday.

Duval v. Wade, 19 Que. P.R. 177.

CONTEXT OF RETURN—PRACTICE—CERTIFICATION.

The return by a bailiff is authentic and all statements therein are presumed true, so far as they are not contested with the permission of the court in the manner laid down in art. 236, C.C.P.; and this procedure is imperative. Unless the defendant has suffered injustice or grave prejudice, from a copy of a writ not having been duly certified, such omission or irregularity does not give rise to an exception to form, especially if the defendant has appeared within the legal delays.

IRREGULARITIES IN WRIT AND SERVICE THEREOF.

An objection on the ground that the address for service of the plaintiff endorsed on the copy of the writ served on the defendant was not within three miles of the place where the writ was issued as required by statutory rules, should be raised by a motion to set aside the writ itself and copy for service as well as the service and not by a motion to set aside the service alone which can be made only for irregularity in the method of service.
