Whom Others Envy.

Through years of patient toil and sacrifice
He climbed Fame's ladder, round by round,
Nor rested till his hand had grasped the prize
For which he toiled. Self-made, self-crowned,
He stood among his lofty dreams, and weighed
Their worth, together with the price he paid.

A millionaire—he bartered love for this—
Love binds the wings of him who would arise.
He rose unfeathered. Now with famished eyes
He gazes on another's Paradise,
While memory taunts him with a shy, sweet kiss.
A frightened, fluttering thing, the first, the last,
No childish voices echo through the past;
He wears his laurels, but he paid their price.
—Row Herwick Thorpe.

Master of His Fate.

CONTINUED.

Next day these two met as if nothing had happened. Herbert kissed her awkwardly, only dimly recollecting she had seen him last night, and Ethel, whose heart was wrong that he should look at her with those shamed eyes, did not look back at him at all. After that day there was a gulf between them.

"My wife has lost her fancy for me," he said once, half laughing, and yet bitterly, to O'Connell. "She's made a hero of me, you know—she's that sort—and there's not much of the hero about me, eh, O'Connell? And less since we met, eh, old chap?"

O'Connell laughed his great laugh and told Bert not to be Samson and let Delilah shear his locks, and then they went on making plans for their trip to Ayrshire for the great Golf competition.

Ethel, who was a little more than a little nervous, was brought her, and she read it through hastily; it was from her husband. Since that night she had not seen him.

"I am not worthy to come near you, and yet I must come to say good-bye. The arrangements are all made, and I join Stanley to-morrow in town. Your lawyer, Mr. Neil, will tell you all I have done; I have left you everything except the money I took for my outfit, and when I see you, Ethel, if you will see me, I shall promise not to trouble you again. It is all the atonement I can make. Yet I feel I can't say good-bye to England without seeing your face. I want to see it alive—I always think of it as lying at my feet. Let me come and look at you asleep—send me a message for the sake of old times."
"BERT."

"For the sake of old times!"
She sent him a message, and in the soft December twilight, struck through by the red light of dying day, he came slowly into the room, the big strong man, and stood before her, his head bent, his lips working.

Ethel raised herself on her elbow and looked up in his face with her loving, radiant eyes—what miracle was this, that they were happy eyes again?
"Why, Bert?" she said. "Why, Bert?"
"Ethel, can you say good-bye—can you let me touch your hand?"
"No, I cannot say good-bye," she said with a low laugh. "And I am tired, Bert; kneel down and put your strong arms around me, and let me lean my head—ah, so! Oh, Bert, no one holds me like you. What are you saying?"
"Can you ever forgive me? Oh, Ethel, how small you are—you are worn to a shadow! and this little hand won't you let me kiss it good-bye?"
"No," she said, and the hand wound itself round his neck, "because we are not going to part, dear—never, till death parts us, and even death cannot part us. But we are going to begin again—you and I—for I was wrong, too. Oh, it was true what you said that night. Oh, God, forgive me! I did draw my skirts away from you. But never again; oh, never again."
"We cannot look on the tears that rained down her husband's face, or hear the sob that shook him; she had grief and such recollections angels only may see, and, seeing, rejoice. "I was mad," he whispered. "Ethel, I did not know what I did, but I can conquer, and I your white face and your skirts drawn aside from me—you Pharisee! You thank God you are not as I am—you know you do, and you drive me on to hell with your shudder when I touch you, and your cold eyes! You are to go and call on Mrs. O'Connell to-morrow, do you hear?"

"I cannot," she said slowly; "you will not ask me to-morrow. You agreed I need not go. Bert, do not say I shrink from you. We are man and wife, dear, for better or worse! Oh, Bert, love me again, and be yourself—your old loving self! Oh, Bert, make me love you again—my heart is breaking!"

She clung to him suddenly, putting one satin-smooth arm round his neck, but he flung her rudely and roughly away, with the first oath he had ever given her. "Will you go?"

"No—I cannot!"

And then in one flash the world seemed to reel, and she saw him passionately seize the gleaming blade—saw him advance with murderous fury, and stood as if struck to stone. Her brain swam; her strength gave way. And then a sharp, terrible thrust, a great pain, something wet staining the soft fur on her gown. * * * She was lying on the floor, and with a will and horrified cry he was bending over her, as if the sight had cleared his vision.

"What have I done, Ethel? My God—what did I do?"

He was wiping the film from his eyes, but a gray mist came over hers and she knew no more. Her face lay white and peaceful at her husband's feet, and her blood was staining his hands. He had killed her—he had killed Ethel—his darling, his beautiful wife! Was he mad—or had he awakened from a dream of madness—too late? Too late forever!

What is the kingdom of God? Every kingdom has its exports, its products? Go down to the river, and you will find ships coming in with cotton, you know they come from America. You will find ships with tea; you know they come from China. Ships with wool; you know they come from Australia. Ships with sugar; you know they come from Java. What comes from the kingdom of God? Again we must refer to our guide-book. Turn up Romans, and we shall find that the kingdom of God is, I shall read it: 'The kingdom of God . . . is righteousness, and peace, and joy'—three things. Rightness, of course, is just doing what is right. Any boy who does what is right has the kingdom of God within him. Any man who does what is right has the kingdom of God within him. Any boy whose heart is filled with joy because he does what is right has the kingdom of God within him. The kingdom of God is not going to religious meetings and hearing strange religious experiences; the kingdom of God is doing what is right—living at peace with all men, being filled with joy in the Holy Ghost.

Boys, if you are going to be Christians, be Christians as boys, and not as your grandmothers. A grandmother has to be a Christian as a grandmother, and that is the right and the beautiful thing for her; but if you cannot read your Bible by the hour as your grandmother can, or delight in meetings as she can, don't think you are necessarily a bad boy. When you are your grandmother's age you will have your grandmother's kind of religion. Meantime be a Christian as a boy. Live a boy's life. Do the straight thing; seek the kingdom of righteousness and honor and truth. Keep peace with the boys about you, and be filled with the joy of being a loyal and simple and natural and boy-like servant of Christ.

She clung to him, sobbing through pure joy. "And the old love will be the same, just the same. Oh, I think it is more precious, because we nearly lost it forever!"

"These are the last tears you will shed for me," he said brokenly; "I will keep my word and make you happy. If I can live down the past—stone to you for the past—please God I will!"

What a Horse Might Say.

Don't hitch me to an iron post or railing when the mercury is below freezing. I need the skin on my tongue.

Don't leave me hitched in my stall at night with a big cob right where I must lie down. I am tired and can't select a smooth place.

Don't compel me to eat more salt than I want by mixing it with my oats. I know better than any other animal how much I need.

Don't think because I go free under the whip I don't get tired. You would more under the whip.

Don't think because I am a horse that iron-woods and briars won't hurt my hay.

Don't whip me when I get frightened along the road, or I will resent it next time and maybe make trouble.

Don't trot me up hill, for I have to carry you and the buggy and myself too. Try it yourself some time. Run up hill with a dog load.

Don't keep my stable very dark, for when I go out into the light my eyes are injured, especially if snow be on the ground.

Don't say whoa unless you mean it. Teach me to stop at that word. It may check me if the lines break, and save a runaway and smashup.

Don't make me drink ice-cold water, or put a frosty bit in my mouth. Warm the bit by holding it a half minute against my body.

Don't forget to file my teeth when they get jagged and I cannot chew my food. When I get lean, it is a sign my teeth may want filing.

Don't ask me to "back" with blinds on; I am afraid to.

Don't run me down a steep hill, for if anything should give way, I might break your neck.

Don't put my blind bridle so that it irritates my eye, or so leave my forelock. Don't be so careless or my harness as to find a great sore on me before you attend to it.

Don't lend me to some blockhead that has less sense than I have.

Don't forget the old book that is a friend to all the oppressed, that says: "A merciful man is merciful to his beast."—Farm Journal.

Protection of Animals.

The first law in the world to prevent cruelty to animals we owe to an Irish member of the British parliament. Lord Eakine attempted to introduce such an act, but so much fun was made of it that he desisted.

Then came into the house of commons, from Galway, on the West coast of Ireland, Richard Martin, an Irish gentleman, or as the folks called him Dick Martin, and he was voted for two things.

First, he was very fond of animals; and second, he was known to be early much inclined to fight anybody that he thought insulted him. So one day he brought in a law to protect animals.

Immediately somebody made a cat-cull.

He just stood out on to the floor of the house of commons, and said very gravely that he should be very much obliged for the name of the gentleman who had seen fit to insult him. There was dead silence. The gentleman didn't give his name, and Martin walked back to his seat amid the cheers of the house of commons, and his law became the law of Great Britain and the first law of its kind in the world.

Now these societies have spread over the world.—Dumb Animals.

WHEN THE HAIR

Shows signs of falling, begin at once the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. This preparation strengthens the scalp, promotes the growth of new hair, restores the natural color to gray and faded hair, and renders it soft, pliant, and glossy.

"We have no hesitation in pronouncing Ayer's Hair Vigor unequalled for dressing the hair, and we do this after long experience in its use. This preparation preserves the hair, cures dandruff and all diseases of the scalp, makes rough and brittle hair soft and pliant, and prevents baldness. While it is not a dye, those who have used the Vigor say it will stimulate the roots and colorants of faded, gray, thin, and red hair, changing the color to—or even black. It will not set the pillowcase nor a pocket-handkerchief, and is always agreeable. All the dirty, gummy hair preparations should be displaced at once by Ayer's Hair Vigor, and thousands who go around with heads looking like the frothy porcupine should hurry to the nearest drug store and purchase a bottle of the Vigor."—The Sunny South, Atlanta, Ga.

"Ayer's Hair Vigor is excellent for the hair. It stimulates the growth, cures baldness, restores the natural color, cleanses the scalp, prevents dandruff, and is a good dressing. We know that Ayer's Hair Vigor differs from most hair tonics and similar preparations, it being perfectly harmless."—From Economical Housekeeping, by Eliza B. Parker.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., JAN. 26, 1891.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Temperance Index of Jan. 23d, in its report of the enforcement of the liquor laws for Colchester county last year, shows that there was sold for medicinal purposes at Acadia Mines, on physicians' certificates, $768.94 worth. One physician granted seven hundred and thirty-three certificates. The favorite prescription seems to have been "one bottle of whiskey, price $1.00." Have we no laws or limit to govern medicinal drinking? It looks as though some legislation in this direction would be in order.

Are we to have a general election before Parliament meets? is a question that is at present agitating the political horizon. A rumor was current here a few mornings ago that Parliament had already dissolved and that a general election would be held at the earliest possible date. But as days have come and gone since, bringing no official announcement of such an event, but rather inclining towards the contrary, the expectations of an early dissolution are fast fading away. Yet the report of Sir Charles Tupper being on the way to Ottawa has given the rumor a new impetus, particularly among the opponents of the present administration.

There are some people in this world who appear to think that a newspaper publisher is only pleased when he has an opportunity of giving away space in his paper without receiving anything in return. We are frequently asked to give gratuitous notices to lectures, concerts and entertainments of various kinds; and in the past have generally complied. Usually in return we have received at least one complimentary ticket as compensation, but frequently even the courtesy is withheld. Quite recently an entertainment was given, the managers of which had solicited and received nearly three dollars' worth of advertising, but did not see fit to furnish even a ticket in return. We do not want the earth, but even the editor has rights that should be regarded. Our paper is not a free-for-all. When we give ten lines of free reading, notice it is the same as donating one dollar and we would like the public to look at it in that way.

The Nova Scotia Fruit Growers' Association will be held in Wolfville. We look upon this organization as one of the greatest importance, and would like to see a much greater interest manifested in it. In this county especially the fruit-growing industry is a most important one, and all are interested in it to a greater or less extent. This being the case it is essential that all information bearing on the successful cultivation of fruit should be had; and there is no better way of gaining this information than in attending the meetings of the association and hearing the experience of those who have spent time and energy in searching out the best methods. The exact date of the meeting has not yet been fixed, but it will be some time during the last half of February and will be announced in a few days. We hope to see our town filled on that occasion by those interested in fruit-culture from all parts of the Province. Let King's county, at least, have a full representation, and sustain her reputation as the banner fruit-growing county.

A correspondent in yesterday's Herald says: "Our higher institutions of learning have always received a fair share of the intelligent benevolence of our people. This time Acadia is in luck, and her old friend, Mr. J. W. Bares, of Wolfville, is the generous benefactor. On Tuesday last, as we learn at a meeting of the college board, the president of the college read a letter from Mr. Bares, intimating that the latter was ready to add $10,000 to the college endowment, provided the governors would set apart a similar amount of donations already made by him, and thus secure the establishment of a $20,000 professorship. The proposal was assented to with heartiness and enthusiasm, and a resolution of thanks was adopted and sent to the generous donor. It is understood that the new professorship will be associated with the chair filled by Dr. Jones, and that it will hereafter be known as the J. W. Bares professorship of classics." In June last Mark Curry, of Windsor, donated $20,000 to the college, and founded the "Mark Curry professorship of history and political economy." By his recent gift Mr. Bares has resumed his place in the front rank among the honored benefactors of Acadia. Doubtless we shall hear from time to time of others who will be prepared to imitate the example of the gentlemen we have named.

Dr Bourinot's Lecture.

A large audience assembled in College Hall last Friday evening to listen to the lecture of the celebrated Canadian politician and author—Dr Bourinot. The subject, "Parliamentary Practice and Procedure in Canada," was an appropriate one to be presented to a Canadian audience by a lecturer so eminently Canadian and patriotic, and was listened to with the greatest interest. The lecturer traced the history of Canada in its political relations from the Treaty of Paris till the present time. If we have men to give us independent government it is because we had men who gave their lives and their efforts in its accomplishment. Responsible government is the natural sequence of representative men in Parliament. The reason that responsible government was not given to the provinces earlier is that they did not in reality ask for it. Joseph Howe was the first in Nova Scotia to agitate for it, and his ideas of it at first were very indistinct. It had to work itself out as it did in England by a natural sequence of things. The political struggles of these early days taught our public men to rely upon themselves, and gave them the ability to build up a nation on the northern part of America. The lecturer contrasted the mode of government of Canada and the United States, and pointed out the great advantages which the government of Canada has over that of the Republic to the south. The legislature of the United States is practically controlled by committees and consists of men who are it consults looking for the presidency and are not likely to do much in helping the president. The speaker is the most partial man in the house. The people's representatives may be two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight, nine, ten, eleven, twelve, thirteen, fourteen, fifteen, sixteen, seventeen, eighteen, nineteen, twenty, twenty-one, twenty-two, twenty-three, twenty-four, twenty-five, twenty-six, twenty-seven, twenty-eight, twenty-nine, thirty, thirty-one, thirty-two, thirty-three, thirty-four, thirty-five, thirty-six, thirty-seven, thirty-eight, thirty-nine, forty, forty-one, forty-two, forty-three, forty-four, forty-five, forty-six, forty-seven, forty-eight, forty-nine, fifty, fifty-one, fifty-two, fifty-three, fifty-four, fifty-five, fifty-six, fifty-seven, fifty-eight, fifty-nine, sixty, sixty-one, sixty-two, sixty-three, sixty-four, sixty-five, sixty-six, sixty-seven, sixty-eight, sixty-nine, seventy, seventy-one, seventy-two, seventy-three, seventy-four, seventy-five, seventy-six, seventy-seven, seventy-eight, seventy-nine, eighty, eighty-one, eighty-two, eighty-three, eighty-four, eighty-five, eighty-six, eighty-seven, eighty-eight, eighty-nine, ninety, ninety-one, ninety-two, ninety-three, ninety-four, ninety-five, ninety-six, ninety-seven, ninety-eight, ninety-nine, one hundred.

The Red Men in the United States.

Ghost dancing still continues, but old Indian campaigners agree that this is a singular Indian war. So far there has been no raid on settlements either of a blood-thirsty or thieving character. In a court of law Indians cannot compel the United States government to fulfill its treaty obligations. Drought has blighted the Indian's crops, also the roots and leaves. Suffering from hunger the Indian resorts to force to compel attention to his needs. That he has not made red-handed war would indicate that he is only appealing to justice in the best way that he knows how. General Nelson J. Miles admits that this uprising has been caused principally by white men. Appropriations have been made by Congress but misapplied. Even in the matter of clothing there is evidence of gross neglect. Instead of ready made clothing being forwarded to Pine Ridge and Rosebud agencies as ordered, cloth is sent when there appears to be no means of making it up into clothing, and the scholars are in rage. The agencies have been in the hands of eastern men with no knowledge of Indian ways and wants, but imbued with some false notions of civilization them, or bent on making money out of them. The Indians have traditions of the good old times, not so very long ago, when buffaloes were plentiful and supplied them with meat, clothing and tent covering in abundance. When in case of drought or failure of game they were free to roam off to some more favorable locality. The Indians are now far worse off than white settlers in the same states, who can and do migrate to places where their labor can be utilized, for the Indian is not permitted to leave his reservation. There he must stop, and no attention is paid to his complaints; he is moreover in a manner forced to adopt not only the dress, but also the religion of the white man. The red man's feelings are as acute as those of his white brother; he knows that his race is doomed; to be disarmed according to his idea to be disgraced and he will fight against it in the face of certain death. Discontent and excitement is more general than on any previous occasion and extends even across into Manitoba, where the Indians are in comfortable circumstances. General Miles attributes the Mesaki crosses to white men in connection with the Pines. The idea of supernatural intervention on the part of the Great Spirit with the promise of the restoration of the buffalo has a fascination for the Indian mind. The red men are well armed with rifles, and have abundance of ammunition, supplied of course by white traders in exchange for furs. They never had better war ponies; consequently they are in a condition to give the United States soldiers a good deal of trouble before the business is finished. The military arrangements were very unfavorable with that of the Dominion government—it puts but a very thin veneer on the savage. On the first opportunity Miss Emily Kicking Bull, Miss Mary Two Strike and their companions at the agency female schools ran off to join the ghost dancing in blanket costumes. At present there is not much excitement among the Indians of the territory. The president appears to favor the home department to the war office. This meets with great resistance from those who would lose the patronage, but it is sure thing that some great changes and reforms must be made in order to avoid the injury these constantly recurring alarms cause to the North Western States.

Information Asked For. MR EDITOR, Permit me to ask through the columns of the ACADIAN for information in reference to the appointment of commissioners of streets for the district of Wolfville. During the regime of the old court of sessions the limits of Wolfville road district were defined, and a board of three commissioners assigned to it, who were legally appointed by the authority of the statute in such case provided. One of the conditions of this statute was that the senior member of this board should retire annually and that a new member be appointed in his place, (which condition has never been repealed). This order of appointment and perpetuation of the board was rigidly adhered to by the old court of sessions and continued by the municipal council until the January term of 1890 when the names of the senior and junior members were dropped from the list and one new name substituted leaving the board with only two members, instead of three as originally constituted. During the recent meeting of the council both of the members of the board of 1890 were dismissed and two others appointed in their place. Now, Mr Editor, I would like to ask by what authority the council reduced the number of commissioners of streets in Wolfville to two in 1890? Why they dismissed two others in their place? And if a legal board for the collecting and expending the road tax in Wolfville? I have looked carefully through the minutes of the council for several years past and cannot find that any action has been taken in reference to the extending or contracting the boundaries of the district, or the adding to or striking off from the number of commissioners. I am, Sir, Yours truly, WOLFVILLE, Jan. 27th, '91.

THE OLD MINER'S STORY.

The miners of twenty-five years ago found the Pitter Root range of mountains between the minor districts of the Montana and Idaho almost an impassable barrier.

An old miner who lives in his typical cabin in the solitude he loves, by one of the great rushing rivers of Idaho, tells the story of his handiwork in the mountains.

He had been in the mountains for many years, and he had seen the gold discovered 'over the mountains' made him realize that the mountains were not a barrier.

A young Crow Indian had passed the river on the west side of the mountain range, and he had seen the gold discovered 'over the mountains' made him realize that the mountains were not a barrier.

One year later the prospector who had been rescued in a starving condition from the trackless mountain wastes was camped in the smiling valley of the Yellowstone with a party of friends.

A downy man was seen on the trail, and he was followed by the prospector and his party. They were surprised and then began a deadly fight.

The prospector and his party were shot down like wild beasts. One young Indian seemed to wear a human face.
