CHAPTER XXXV.

Conclusion.
The gray dawn broke with sullen reluctance, and the wind, that had been howling round the house all night, as if in tormenting mockery of the lithe, motionless figure stretched out so peacefully upon the bed, had sunk into a grim, threatening murmur.

Lights were still burning upstairs and down, and many feet were continually passing to and fro in a hushed, noiseless manner; the whole household was awe-stricken and overwhelmed. Two doctors had arrived; one a famous physician, who had held many a wrestling bout with grim death, and come off the victor. He had gone in his self-possessed, placid manner, straight to the silent room, and had there examined the form that lay so exquisitely and horribly like a piece of statuary. And he had sent word to the stricken man, waiting below, that death had not taken full possession as yet—that she still lived—as yet. It was pure comfort, but it was some, and a poor the man of mysterious skill would have given one, if he could have done so, truthfully in face of the awful agony which darkened the face of the man awaiting him in the library.

"Is there any hope?" Percy had asked, hoarsely.

"While there is life, My lord, you can help me to frame my answer if you would compose yourself sufficiently to tell me how this happened, to the most minute detail."

Then Percy had stepped out from the darkest shadow of the darkened room, and told the two all that there was to tell.

"Poison!" said the great doctor, quietly. "Where is the dagger?"

Percy drew it from his bosom without a flush or a shade of hesitation, and handed it to him.

"Hem," said the doctor; "if you had sent to Dr. Maywell instead of for me, it would have been fortunate; he understands savage poisons. Send for him at once, and say that I am here."

A messenger was dispatched on the instant, and the two doctors left the room, the smaller one murmuring as he did so:

"It will go hard with his lordship, if this turns out as we expect, doctor."

So the night passed, and the dawn turned into day, and still the exquisite form was marble to all the efforts of science to change it into life.

About eight a carriage brought the expert in poisons, Dr. Maywell, and in a grim, hushed silence they took him upstairs. He was a little, absent man, with only one object in life—the discovery of new poisons and their antidotes, and he passed by the grim awful misery of Percy, and the hushed terror of Lillian Devigne, with complaisant unconsciousness.

But when he bent over the still form when his small, white hand touched the little red wound in the sweet, soft skin, his manner was full of an intense, absorbed interest.

"Where is the instrument—the knife?"

"Don't Forget—that when constipation, biliousness or indigestion is neglected, it may cause a serious illness. Act upon the first symptom—keep your digestive organs in good order by the timely use of BEECHAM'S PILLS"

—the dagger?" he asked. "They told him it was downstage, and that Lord Vering would not part with it out of his sight."

The doctor stood talking with his brethren, and while he was doing so, Charlie and Lady Mary arrived. Charlie turned sick, for the moment, at the hushed, funeral look of the place, and passed into the library, and held Percy's hand in silence.

No word was possible for a minute before that white, haggard face, tightly set lips, and hollow eyes.

"Tell me the worst, Percel!" at last whispered Charlie. "Is she—"

"No!" said Percy, shuddering at the unspoken word. "She lies up there—my darling, just out of heaven. Oh, my God, Charlie, the punishment is more than I can bear! Who is that?" he added, as Lady Mary came noiselessly in.

"Mary, my wife," said Charlie. "Kyra's sister," added Lady Mary, softly and tearfully, and, without a word, she glided upstairs to take the place beside the bed, which she never left till the time came.

"You can't tell me all now," said Charlie, taking his hand. "Don't cry, dear Percy; but let me stay here with you," and he drew aside to the window, out of sight of the white and pained face.

Presently the door opened, and Dr. Maywell came in.

"Where is the dagger?" he asked, sharply.

Charlie started and drew near as Percy took out the dagger and handed it to the weird-like little man.

He took it, turned up the gas, and bent his keen, gray eyes on the blade. Then scraped it with a little, sharp instrument; then called for a glass of water, and—swiftly cut the water with the extreme point of the dagger twice or thrice.

Percy looked on with hungry, hollow eyes; Charlie with awe struggling with amazement.

Then the little man took a drop of the water and examined it with a pocket microscope, and looked up suddenly with what might have been mistaken for an expression of amazed disappointment.

The animalculae are all alive; this thing isn't poisoned!"

Charlie rushed forward all aglow. "Who the devil said it was?" he exclaimed, with a mad thrill of joyful hope. "Let me look at it, doctor; yes, it is the same dagger; it is rusty enough now, but I cleaned it as bright as a new shilling with oil and sand-paper just before I left the world. Why, you don't mean to say that you thought Kyra had poisoned herself with it? Look out doctor, My God!"

"Hem," said the doctor; "if you had sent to Dr. Maywell instead of for me, it would have been fortunate; he understands savage poisons. Send for him at once, and say that I am here."

A messenger was dispatched on the instant, and the two doctors left the room, the smaller one murmuring as he did so:

Came Too Late.

CHAPTER I.

Something of a Mystery.

"I nearly forgot you were in the room, my dear Miss Olivia," he said, with a smile. "Yes, like the Jew who regretted he hadn't asked more. Yes, yes! He accepted, and at once: 'If you will have the draft deed made out, I'll sign it,' he said, quietly."

"Dear me, how very sudden and prompt!" murmured Miss Amelia. "Y—es," said the old man; "but we lawyers are not accustomed to such suddenness, and I—er—I felt it my duty to ask him for the name of his legal adviser, to whom I might send the draft, and—er—for references."

"Of course," assented Miss Amelia. The girl held her hands above the keys and turned half round, as if absently waiting for the sequel.

"Well, my dear Miss Amelia, I was very much surprised, indeed, by his response to my very natural request. 'Send the draft to me at the George Inn, where I am staying,' he said, quite quietly and indifferently. Oh, quite! His manner was perfect, though—er—rather haughty and reserved, perhaps. 'Send the draft to the George. As to the references, I need not trouble you with them, as I am quite willing to pay any deposit—or the whole amount, if you like, here and now.'"

"Now, really!" exclaimed Miss Amelia, in a subdued murmur. Olivia struck the chord softly, and smiled.

"Of course, such a proceeding was quite unusual and—er—unbusiness-like," continued Mr. Sparrow; "but it was scarcely one I could object to. I was the vendor, he the purchaser, and—er—in short, I declined to accept any money, and sent the draft to the George the next morning. It came back in an hour, the deeds were engrossed that afternoon, duly signed, and the money paid."

"By check?" murmured Miss Amelia, with some shrewdness. Mr. Sparrow nodded approvingly.

"No, my dear Miss Amelia, for if it had been a check I should probably, as it no doubt occurred to you, have been able to learn something of Mr. Faradeane through his bankers. The money was paid in gold and notes, which are, to all intents and purposes, untraceable." Thank you; one more cup. Two pieces of sugar. Thank you. In gold and notes. So far, I think you will admit, the proceedings were—er—slightly mysterious."

"Charmingly so," assented Miss Amelia. "And they are nothing to what follows," said Mr. Sparrow, with a knowing nod. "Having obtained possession of The Dell, Mr. Faradeane has had it put in repair throughout, and is now actually residing there!"

"There was only one thing more mysterious he could have been guilty of," said Olivia, with a smile. "He could have let it!"

"Wait a moment, my dear Miss Olivia," said Mr. Sparrow. "There is nothing mysterious in his living at The Dell, but the manner of his living. In the first place, he is living there with only one servant—a man-servant; in the next, no woman is permitted to pass the gate, I must give it as a fact. Old Mrs. Williams, from the farm, was stopped by the man-servant as she was entering the gate with some eggs and butter, and informed, quite civilly, but firmly, that no female would be permitted to enter the premises, and that for the future she must leave her basket outside."

"Good gra—" gasped Miss Amelia.

"More than that," continued Mr. Sparrow, in a state of mild excitement; "Mrs. Williams tells me that the place is barricaded as if for a siege, and that a large mastiff is prowling—loose, actually loose!—about the place, day and night."

"Great Heav—" Miss Amelia tried to ejaculate, but Mr. Sparrow, thoroughly warmed to his work, rushed on:

"I've heard, too, from several people, that lights are seen burning in the windows nearly the whole night through. Indeed, the people in the village—of course it's very foolish—declare that Mr. Faradeane never goes to bed. Several people have seen him walking up and down The Dell lane at the most unearthly hours. Now, Miss Olivia, what do you think of the affair?" and the little man leaned back with an air of satisfaction.

Olivia laughed thoughtfully.

"Yes, it is rather mysterious," she admitted, to his palpable delight. "Do you think that he is a coiner, or simply a gentleman suffering from the pangs of a guilty conscience?"

Mr. Sparrow could not see the twinkle in the dark eyes, and as the sweet voice was perfectly grave, took the question seriously.

"Well, I must confess that the thought did—er—cross my mind; I mean in respect to coining; one reads such—er—extraordinary stories."

"Ah, yes!" breathed Miss Amelia, with a delighted little gasp. "Good gracious! fancy a coiner in Hawk-wood! Of course, you have hinted your suspicions to Smallbone?"

Smallbone was the village policeman, who, if having nothing to do from one year's end to the other can produce happiness, should have been in a continual state of felicity.

"Well—er—no," said Mr. Sparrow. "Perhaps it occurred to Mr. Sparrow, aunt, that even coiners are not so utterly imbecile as to set about their work by attracting the attention of all their neighbors," said Olivia.

"Ahem! That is true! That is very true," remarked Mr. Sparrow, with a little cough. "And I confess that the counterfeit coinage theory scarcely holds good. Mr. Faradeane does not give one the idea of—that class of criminal."

LONDON, July 24. The Governor, St. John's:

In the Somme sector, the enemy achieved little by heavy counter attacks, except very severe losses, only recovering part of Fourreaux Wood and part of the village of Longueval. Our attack was resumed yesterday. Fighting was intensely violent. A large portion of Pozieres was captured, and further gains and prisoners were taken. Progress was also made in Fourreaux Wood and in the direction of Guillemont.

The French made progress north and south of the Somme, capturing 3,000 prisoners.

Round Verdun there were some slight French successes.

On Sunday night our light forces engaged six enemy destroyers. The enemy ships were repeatedly hit, but reached the Belgian coast.

The Russians have won further victory in Volhynia, capturing 14,000 prisoners. They are advancing rapidly toward Erzining in the Caucasus.

Italians have captured various mountain positions and numerous prisoners.

In Egypt a Turkish force has advanced towards Kabila.

Further important successes are reported from East Africa.

He is quoted as saying, "It is the most poignant grief of my life that I am unable to take more active part in this war. It is my earnest desire to take my place in the trenches to deal such blows as my age and strength would permit. If I could take my place with the youngest of you, I promise I would leave my mark on the enemy, but the inscrutable Almighty has willed it otherwise. The burden of thinking, deciding and leading has been hard upon me. Realizing this, I know my life must not be risked in the foremost line of battle where my feelings, if unrestrained, would carry me swiftly. My life must be considered carefully for the welfare of Germany, in order to carry out the duties assigned me by divine appointment."

FROM WEST TO EAST.

BERLIN, July 24.

Emperor William, it is officially announced to-day, has moved from the western to the eastern theatre of war, accompanied by the Chief of the General Staff of the Army in the field.

A VOTE OF CREDIT.

LONDON, July 24.

Premier Asquith to-day asked the Commons for a vote of credit for £450,000,000. This vote is the largest asked by the Government since the beginning of the war, and will bring the total voted this year to £1,050,000,000. The total since the beginning of the war is £2,832,000,000, approximately $14,160,000,000. Moving the vote of credit the Premier said that recent expenditures out of the vote of credit approximated five million pounds daily, and represented all out-going. The Premier said that all expenditure from April first to last Saturday was £559,000,000. Navy and Army munitions cost £379,000,000; loans to Britain's allies, £157,000,000; food, railways, etc., £23,000,000. The average daily expenditure for the war was £4,950,000. The Premier said that he hoped the expenditure for the army and navy would not exceed the present level in the near future. The munitions cost remained stationary at the highest level yet reached, but he added this might increase.

COMMISSION OF INVESTIGATION.

LONDON, July 24.

Introducing a bill for the appointment of a commission to investigate the Dardanelles and Mesopotamian campaigns, Premier Asquith announced in the Commons that the commission will be given discretion as to the privacy or otherwise of their proceedings. The commission would sit in India as well as in London.

REDMOND QUESTIONS THE GOVT.

LONDON, July 24.

Redmond asked amid loud National cheers, whether the Government had decided to depart from the terms of the agreement, arrived at by the Irish party, based upon proposals made by the Secretary of State for War, Mr. Lloyd George, whether the Government had determined to insert in the bill new proposals, at variance with the agreement, without consulting the Nationalists; and whether the Premier had received any intimation that a bill so framed would be vigorously opposed by the Nationalists. The Premier, in reply pointed out that the agreement was subject to approval and of revision by the cabinet. Two main points, he said, had emerged from the agreement. These had been accepted by both sections of the cabinet, the Unionists and Home Rulers. The Unionists, the Premier said, influenced very largely by the attitude of Redmond and his friends during the war, had agreed that Home Rule should be brought into immediate application, while the Home Rule section had agreed that the six Ulster Counties should not be brought in without their consent. Redmond repudiated the interpretation placed upon the agreement by the Premier, and asked whether it was not a fact that on Saturday last the War Secretary, Mr. Lloyd George, and Mr. Herbert Samuel, Home Secretary, had sent him a message saying that a decision had been reached by the Government on the two points mentioned. Mr. Asquith repeated that the Government were not introducing any bill until it was satisfied that it met substantially with the assent of all parties.

IMPERIAL COMMERCE.

LONDON, July 24.

Premier Asquith made it clear in the Commons that the appointment of a commission to consider commercial problems after the war, which was recently announced, would not interfere with the holding of a larger conference in which the Dominions would participate. In reply to a number of questions, he said that the Government's desire was, as soon as possible, to convene a conference of representatives of the United Kingdom, the Dominions and India, to consider the commercial policy to be adopted after the war.

DEUTSCHLAND'S WIRELESS SEALED.

BALTIMORE, July 24.

The Deutschland's wireless equipment was sealed to-day by the Government radio inspector. When she arrived on the 10th inst., she was informed by the Customs officials that if she stayed in port more than two weeks, her wireless would be sealed. The two weeks' limit expired to-day.

Irish Suffer Defeat From Terra Novas.

Notwithstanding the disagreeable weather, the B. I. S.—Terra Novas football match was pulled off on St. George's Field.

A meeting of both teams had been eagerly looked forward to, as the championship depended on the result, consequently a large gathering of spectators was in evidence. Owing to the rain shower, which made the grass wet and the ball greasy, good play, especially combination work was very difficult. The score at the finish was Terra Novas, 2 goals; B. I. S., 0.

A feature of the game was that the score was no indication of how matters went, as from an onlooker's viewpoint the B. I. S. showed up best, but their luck was against them. The teams were:—

Terra Novas—Walsh, goal; J. Kavanaugh, J. Hart, backs; W. Duggan, T. Jackman, E. Kavanagh, halves; Evans, L. Kavanagh, R. Jackman, Cull, forwards.

B. I. S.—Phalen, goal; Thomas, T. Duggan, backs; Brown, Burke, Brien, halves; Williams, Phalen, Smith, on-stantine, Morgan, forwards.

SALVIA is a non-sticky preparation and is the ladies favorite. A large generous bottle 50c.

SMALL POTATOES.

The man who has a patch of beans, or succofash, or other greens, believes the gods would make a hit if for that patch's benefit they regulated wind and rain; and when they don't, it gives him pain. If from his little footy field he thinks he'll have a bounteous yield, he doesn't seem to care a rap how it may fare with 'other chap. Destroying hail may fall and beat the stuffing from a neighbor's wheat; a cloudburst spoils some fellow's oats, and drowns another's short-horn shoats; or, maybe, just across the way, the lightning hits a stack of hay; and he will view his little stretch of arishokos, and say (the wretch!), "The climate's perfect. I maintain; there's just enough of wind and rain; no man could ask a better show than we are getting here below!" But if his little patch of rape he finds is in unthrifty shape, the fact that neighbors' crops are fine will not prevent his doleful whine. He is a small bore skated, you say; ah, well, we all are built that way.

MINARD'S LINIMENT FOR SALE EVERYWHERE.

Our Volunteers.

Quite a number of the volunteers in training were inoculated yesterday. A squad had rifle practice and another squad were engaged at Swedish drill on the "Darsena."

This is to certify that fourteen years ago I got the cords of my left wrist nearly severed, and was for about nine months that I had no use of my hand, and tried other Liniments, also doctors, and was receiving no benefit. By a persuasion from a friend I got MINARD'S LINIMENT and used one bottle which completely cured me, and have been using MINARD'S LINIMENT in my family ever since and find it the same as when I first used it, and would never be without it.

Disarmament First.

When the Allies dictate peace, as they will to the Hohenzollerns or to a German republic that has thrown the Hohenzollerns out, disarmament will be the first demand. And the only hope of the saving of Germany's people from fifty years of pauperisation lies in a generosity from victors unparalleled in the history of the human race.—Brooklyn Eagle.

The Deutschland.

The little episode of the Deutschland, elevated by the German and the American press, which dearly loves a sensation, into quite a fine dramatic performance, threatens to degenerate, after all, into a very good farce. Undoubtedly it was a great feat for a submarine three hundred and fifty feet long (sic) to come safely across the turbulent Atlantic in the incredibly short time of sixteen days, even though it ran less than one hundred miles under water; and Germany is hardly to be blamed for going wild over it. The fact that several British submarines, very much smaller, did the same thing a year ago is not considered relevant. Allowing the magnitude of the journey out, the world will attach more importance to the question of the journey back again. The good ship does not seem to be in a great hurry to undertake it. A week ago she was at all appearances ready to sail, with a nice little cargo of nickel and rubber compactly stowed away. To-day we learn that she has had her wireless apparatus sealed as a penalty for outlawing her welcome, the official duration of which is two weeks.

The newspapers will, of course, be much exercised as to the cause of the delay. It is not impossible that it is remotely connected with the presence of British cruisers off Cape Henry. That they will be kept apprised of her movements and departure is likely enough. The comparative shallowness of the channel from the Chesapeake to the sea, which at its deepest point is only sixty feet, precludes the possibility of her leaving in daylight and makes even a night departure fraught with some danger. It is probable, however, that it is less the cruisers themselves than the country, since they are known to make use of that Captain Koenig fears. The idea of a huge steel net or series of nets just outside the territorial waters is not extravagant; it has been adopted many times with success in the English Channel and the North Sea. Moreover, so nearly perfect are the means at the disposal of the British navy for tracking submarines, that once the Deutschland is sighted her chances of escape, will be very slim. She may be able to remain submerged for four days, as her captain claims, but she cannot travel under water for anything like that length of time; she will be compelled to rise to the surface until her storage batteries are recharged.

There is another possible explanation of the Deutschland's immobility. It is known that the Bremer is expected shortly on this side, to duplicate the Deutschland's triumph. Can it be that she is already overdue? It will be deplorable if any accident has overtaken her and robbed American reporters of columns of good copy. But it will not bring peace of mind to the Deutschland's crew. They have completed the first, and easier, part of these undertakings, and with great glory. If the rest is not accomplished, or at least attempted, it will be turned to ridicule. If it is attempted they will be involved in a contest of wits in which the chances are not all on their side.

Deplorable Tragedy.

This designation of the Irish deadlock by the English press is hardly an exaggeration. One of those situations has arisen for which it seems impossible to affix the blame or to find a remedy; yet a remedy must be found. The Prime Minister's words hint at nothing less than a general election. This is the last remedy anyone would wish, and it would certainly in the end prove no remedy at all.

The news of the crisis is almost as startling as it is puzzling. A very short time back the public was congratulating itself that the theory question was settled for a time at least. The press re-echoed with praises of the five generally accredited with the greatest share in the performance—Lloyd George, Redmond, Carson, Devlin and Craig. It is strange that an arrangement receiving the approval of all of these recognized spokesmen of all sides of opinion should prove unacceptable. The Prime Minister, and the House of Commons generally, seem to lay the blame for the present impasse at Redmond's door. Asquith declares he is ready to ask the country if the Government's proposals are not fair and just. What proposals? All that we have heard is that the Cabinet, after long discussion, were unable to come to an agreement; it is certain at least that they have no Bill to bring forward. Undoubtedly the Nationalists are taking an uncompromising attitude, but it is not at all clear what their demands are to which the other side cannot accede. It is a great pity that the spirit of concession cannot be as fully manifested as in the earlier stages, considering the times and the temporary nature which any settlement would have. It will be a deplorable tragedy indeed if at the very moment when Britain is exerting her utmost efforts in the war, already promising glorious success, she is torn by domestic strife and an ignominious political debacle. From such a catastrophe it will not be any statesman but the good sense of the nation which will save it.

NON-COM'S AND PRIVATES (Medically Unfit.)

Paver, Edwards, Bradbury, Bowering, Cross, Evans, Gladney (D.C.M.), Harris, Mars, Oke, Penney, Stenlake, Thompson, Bursey, Hussey, Jesseau, Hollett, Kent, Stockley and O'Dea.

TIME EXPIRED (Refused to Re-engage.)

Connors, Deveaux, Evans (2), Howell, Lee, Mayo, Mallard, O'Toole, Pilgrim, Ross, Richardson, Thorne, Thistle and Walsh (3).

Discuss Unto Me.

"Graham Wallas, in his 'Great Society,' wrote few more interesting sentences than that in which he remarked the paucity of genuine discussion around him, the lack of skill in meeting each other's minds which 'particularly in this country where mere talk is always contracted unfavorably with action, is discussion rare. The only way we can justify our substitution of talking for acting is to talk badly. And we like to talk badly. To put into talk the deliberate effort which action demands would seem an insufferable pedantry. Talk is one of the few unspecialized talents still left in a mechanical world."

"The plain man resents any invasion of this last preserve of freedom. He resents the demand that will and effort be put to work in raising talk into real discussion where points are met and presuppositions are clarified and formulations made. So conversation is left to grow wild as a common flower along the wayside of our personal contacts."

"Discussion should be one of the most important things in the world, for it is almost our only arena of thinking. It is here that all the jumble of ideas and impressions that we get from reading and watching are dramatically placed in conflict. Here only is there a genuine challenge to put them into some sort of order."

"Without discussion intellectual experience is only an exercise in a private gymnasium. It has never been put to the test, never had to give an account of itself. It is some such motive that impels people to discussion; though they are too often content with the jousting of paste-board knights. But a good discussion is not only a conflict. It is fundamentally a co-operation. It progresses towards some common understanding."

"This does not mean that it must end in agreement. A discussion will have been adequate if it has done no more than set the problem in its significant terms, or even defined the purpose that makes such a setting new. The effort to say exactly what you mean, sharpening your idea to the point that will drive home to others, is itself invigorating. A good discussion tones up your mind, concentrates its loose particles, gives form and direction. When all say exactly what they mean, then for the first time understanding—the goal of discussion—is possible."

"Some people have a fatal gift of dereliction. Wit is perhaps the most common means. Discussion has no greater enemies than those who can catch an idea and touch it off into a puff of smoke. Wit should salt a discussion but not explode it."

Household Notes.

Keep folded newspapers handy upon which to place soiled pots and pans, and save cleaning smutty marks from the tables.
Crocuses make a pretty winter house flower. They can be planted and treated like hyacinths or any of the flowering bulbs.
When mahogany furniture looks a little cloudy, put olive oil on a clean cloth and rub it. This will make the surface clean and bright.
When children have an abnormal craving for candy it can sometimes be gratified with stuffed dates, which are not so injurious as candy.
Brass polished with oil and rottenstone will have a deep rich yellow tone. The whiter, more brilliant tone is caused by acid polishes.
Scoop out fresh tomatoes, break an egg into each and season well. Strew with crumbs and a bit of butter and bake a few minutes.

A British Hero.

Private George Wilson is one of those creatures who seem to have stepped straight from the age of chivalry into this age of magazine rifles, machine howitzers, and find that the human qualities of courage have not changed very much after all.

In a wood near Veronell there was posted a German machine gun, and because it was so well screened the machine gun was a menace and a nuisance. The Highland Light Infantry, moving forward in the attack of the 5th Brigade, found it more than a menace and a nuisance. They were losing a number of good men because of it, and they felt that it should be silenced. Private Wilson, not a man strikingly heroic to the eye, felt this concrete fact even more than his comrades. Not only did he think the mitrailleuse should be put out of action, he thought he should be the man to effect this ideal. He mentioned the fact to his officer.

The officer said "No" with a certain amount of promptness, and the machine gun continued its steady industry of slaughtering Highland Infantrymen. It also continued to anger Private Wilson until, at last, his emotion reached that point when it overruled the axioms of discipline, and he determined in spite of his officers to go out and silence the tormenter.

He went out. Another man jumped forward with him, a man of the Middlesex Regiment, and in the face of a tremendous fusillade the two charged the gun. They rushed forward for many yards, though every yard should have meant death. The Germans loosed excitedly at them to pull them up, but for moments they were untouched. Then, suddenly, the throng of bullets caught the Middlesex man, and down in a heap he went.

Private Wilson, however, did not go down. He survived amazingly in the face of the frantic firing. The luck of heroes was with him and he was not touched. Bullets spat and hised all about him but he went running on. The Germans, unable to touch him with their rifles, swung the machine gun on him. They intended to blow him out of existence with the spouting jet of its many bullets.

Private Wilson was too sharp for them. As a gunner jumped to the firing levers of the maxim, the Britisher's rifle went up and jumped off, and the gunner collapsed against the tripod of the gun. Another man sprang to the firing seat, kicking aside his comrade; he died before he could sit down. There was another man in his place immediately—an other man dead immediately. In this mad and magnificent charge Wilson could do no wrong. Every time a man leapt to the gun the infantryman's rifle spoke, and that man died. Wilson in this breathless moment shot the entire crew of six.

He rushed in to capture the gun, and as he did so the German officer who commanded the detachment came to his feet. Wilson had wounded him already, but not enough to make him helpless. The German rose pluckily, and his revolver jerked off in his hand at once. It was Wilson's day of days, however, for the revolver missed, and Wilson finished his man with the bayonet.

With this act he had accomplished his end; the quick-firer was silenced. That, however, was not quite enough for the Light Infantryman. The gun was still unsafe and he saw no reason why it should not be used. There was a mass of Germans not a hundred yards away, and the Britisher determined they should have a sample of their own gun's fire. They did. Working calmly at the firing levers, in a penumbra of shrapnel bursts, Private George Wilson sent 750 rounds of ammunition into the Teutonic mass, and the mass broken. They went down right and left as the bullets bit into them, and when they had had enough they fled.

When all this was done, Wilson picked up the quick-firer and carried it back as a peace-offering to the officer who had forbidden him to capture it. He then fainted, but not for long.—W. D. Newton in "The Undying Story."

CONFIDENT OF VICTORY.

LONDON, To-day. Naval expenditure, added the Premier, proceeded at a uniform rate; it had reached high water mark, exclusive of munitions, in last November. From January to June it retained a fairly constant figure, rather less than in November. The July total, continued the Premier, probably would be higher than that of November. It was expected, apart from any change in policy, that the present level would be maintained for the near future. Munition expenditure had increased steadily and continuously up to May; in that month and during June and July it was fairly constant. Under all heads expenditure might be expected to expand a little more. Daily average loans on oil munitions had dropped from £1,490,000 in the first period to £1,320,000 in the second period, but these figures, said the Premier, were very misleading, because in the first period there was one item of 12 million pounds attributable in reality to the previous period. Allowing for that the average expenditure under this head had increased. The figure for the second period was told by the fact that the Government had advanced £11,000,000 to Australia to enable the Commonwealth to finance the purchase of wheat contracted for by the Home Government. After a speech by Winston Spencer Churchill, in criticism of Premier Asquith for not reviewing the war situation, Lloyd George, Secretary for War, replied, saying it would be premature to survey the military situation and prospects in the middle of the battle. The prospects are good, the War Secretary said; our generals are more than satisfied with the proud valor of our men. They are leading men as great as the British infantry was in Wellington and Napoleon's day. They never have been greater, than now. One thrills with pride when one thinks one belongs to the same race. They are pressing back a formidable foe who devoted his best brains to the study of the war for years. I feel confident that victory is assured to us, continued Lloyd George. Numbers and all other resources are on our side. There was only one fear, that years of training on the part of a great military power might be something that might be insuperable; our men have demonstrated that it is not so, and that British resourcefulness and intelligence are as in the fields of commerce in the past, when they have been able to snatch victory out of what appeared to be complete commercial disaster. They are going to snatch victory again in a few months from what appeared at one moment to be something that was invincible. There is no doubt at all that we have won this battle is that we have simply to press on with all our resources and with the material at our command and victory will be ours.

FIGHTING AT POSIERES.

LONDON, To-day. A British official issued to-night reads: Fighting has continued in the village of Posieres, where the number of prisoners taken by the Australian troops reached the total of six officers and 145 of other ranks. On other parts of the battle front there has been considerable artillery activity on both sides. Between Amiens and the sea nothing of importance has occurred.

NO HOME RULE BILL.

LONDON, To-day. Confirming publicly to-day the suspicion that the Cabinet had been unable to reach a decision with regard to the Home Rule Amending Bill, Asquith, in the Commons, announced that the Government would not introduce any bill of this kind with regard to which there was no substantial agreement among all parties. This was taken in the lobbies of Parliament to mean that Home Rule was dropped for the moment. David Lloyd George's negotiations had come to naught. The stumbling block appears to have been the retention in the Imperial Parliament of Nationalist representation in undiminished numbers.

LONDON BUDGET.

LONDON, To-day. At Posieres the Australians are still fighting furiously with the Germans for possession of the village at the head of the road leading from it to Bapaume. The greater part of the village is now reported to be in their hands. There has been a diminution in the vicious fighting which began on Saturday night. Along the British front from Thiepval to Gullemeat a condition of comparative quiet prevails. South of the Somme along the French line the only fighting reported is that minor engagements resulted in the French capturing a German battery south of Estrees. Eastward in the Verdun region the French have occupied a German redoubt west of Thiamont, taking with it five machine guns and two score prisoners. Forlin still asserts that the only result of the British attack on Sunday along the Thiepval Gullemeat line was the penetration of a few houses in the village of Posieres, and that the Australians obtained these only after having suffered sanguinary losses. That German troops have been removed from the Verdun front for some operations is apparent from the German statement that Brundeburg Grenadiers of Douaumont fame defeated the British in the fight on Sunday at Longueval. Although unofficial reports have credited to the Russians a big gain against the Germans in the Riga sector, neither Petrograd nor Berlin communications have as yet recorded any important changes. Petrograd claims the dislodgement of the Germans from the village of Galichani on the Lipa River in Volhynia, while Berlin says that near the Galician border in southern Volhynia strong attacks by the Russians against the German line were repulsed. Emperor William is reported to have left the French front to observe operations in the East. The Russians have made further progress against the Turks in the Erzincan region of Turkish Armenia, while south along the Persian front the Turks report they have gained fresh successes over the Russians. The Italians in the Astiaco and Avia regions of the Austro-Italian theatre report continued advances against the Austrians.

A CRITICAL SITUATION.

LONDON, To-day. The Daily News reports that David Lloyd George, in view of the failure of the Irish negotiations in which he was the chief agent, has offered to resign office. The Premier's attitude, says the News is understood to be that if Lord George resigns office the Premier should consider himself obliged to resign also. There is no doubt that events of the past week culminating in the Irish fiasco, adds the paper, have weakened the Coalition Government's position.

A DEPLORABLE TRAGEDY.

LONDON, To-day. All London papers commented editorially, earnestly and gravely on the collapse of the Irish negotiations. The Daily Telegraph says, in the abandonment of recent hopes of a settlement of the menace of trouble in Ireland by the Commons we have the old mill-stone once more around our necks, heavier and more dangerous in shape than ever. We shall be fortunate if it does not hamper our progress with every step through the deep water to be traversed. The Daily News says the collapse of the negotiations leaves the Irish problem not merely unsettled but worse than it has been at any time since the eighties. There has been a plethora of delay and misunderstanding until now we are faced with a breakdown of the political truce which existed since the beginning of the war. Leaders of the nation who should be devoting all their minds to defeating the enemy will again be distracted by internal feud and dissension. The Graphic says, once more the attempt to establish Home Rule, has failed because, like previous Home Rule schemes, it neither satisfied Irish sentiment nor secured justice for Britain.

NOON.

DISASTER IN OHIO.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, To-day. Fifteen men were killed and 18 overcome by gas in a new water works tunnel extending from the shore to the west side of the Crib to-night. Two bodies have been brought ashore. Firemen and a life saving crew have gone to the rescue.

WILL IT MEAN A GENERAL ELECTION?

LONDON, To-day. A significant remark was made in the Commons this afternoon by Premier Asquith at the conclusion of the debate on the motion for adjournment made by John Redmond, Nationalist leader, following the announcement by Premier Asquith that the Government had no intention of introducing any Home Rule Bill for Ireland with regard to which there is no substantial agreement among all parties. In appealing to the Nationalists not to throw away the opportunity of bringing Home Rule into immediate operation, Asquith said: "I ask the House, and will ask the country if necessary if the Government's proposals are not fair and just." Before the motion of Redmond was voted down, Asquith directly addressed the Nationalists denying that any partiality had been shown to either side during the negotiations. Asquith declared that the exception of the six Ulster counties from the Home Rule Act was to his mind the greatest vice and take arrangement ever made in the history of political controversy. He asked the Nationalists not to break off negotiations.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

PARIS, To-day. On the south bank of the River Somme yesterday evening French troops captured a block of houses south of Estrees and drove the Germans out of their trenches. Between the Oise and the Aisne several German patrols were dispersed near Tracy. On the left bank of the Meuse in the Verdun region there was grenade fighting; at Hill 304 on the right bank of the Meuse violent cannonading was in progress. At Fleury and La Lufe German attacks on the French positions and at Baschville in Alsace are claimed to have failed. Sub-Lieut. Nungess of the French aviation corps brought down his tenth aeroplane.

GERMANY A BESIEGED FORTRESS.

LONDON, To-day. A grave admission of Germany's plight is contained in a review of the war up to date in the Frankfurter Zeitung, which says in part that Germany is a besieged fortress, and therefore everything depends on the besiegers as to when an end will be made of the bloody work. That Germany will never haul down its flag we very well know; yet holding out is now beginning to gain its real significance.

A Crackerjack Salesman?

By RUTH CAMERON.

"There was a man in a store I was in to-day," said the Author, "who thought he was a crackerjack salesman."

"And was he?" I asked.

"Not on your tintype," said the Author, "at least not for me." I supplied the monosyllable and he went on.

"I'll tell you why. I wear a forty coat, and he didn't have one, so first he put on a thirty-eight and told me it looked all right. That kind of a coat ought to fit snug," he said.

"I didn't quite like myself in it, so he said there might be a forty in the stockroom and sent up to see. There wasn't, and what did he do next but haul out a forty-two and put it on me and tell me that looked all right."

That Settled Him.

"That settled him for me. I might have gone back to the thirty-eight on his say-so, but not after that. He showed himself up too plainly. Oh, yes, he was smooth as butter and persevering and polite, and I know he thinks he's a crackerjack salesman, but not for me. I'll look out that I don't get him the next time I go there."

I don't suppose there is anyone who hasn't met the clerk who thinks because he persists in trying to make a sale by hook or crook that he is a crackerjack salesman or woman.

The girl who urges a thirty-four upon us with the assurance that "they run large," and the next day tries to make us take a thirty-eight because "they run small, Madame," belongs to this class.

Making You Feel Uncomfortable If You Don't Buy.

The clerk who forces a sale of something you don't really want by trying to make you feel uncomfortable if you don't take it, is another member.

The clerk who so ungraciously accepts a legitimate return (you notice I say "legitimate") that she makes you feel like a criminal, is another.

I know a woman who never enters a certain department of her favorite shop because a clerk in that department once made it so unpleasant for her when she wouldn't buy every time she was shown goods. That woman's trade is now worth considerable money and she would like to trade in that department, but she cannot bear to, just because of a clerk who doubtless thinks herself a crackerjack saleswoman.

One Can Understand The Temptation.

Of course one can understand the feelings of the clerk who pushes a sale too hard. He or she is forever forced on by the economic urge. The temptation to distort the truth and to use unfair methods must be great. To remember that it isn't good business should be the safest antidote.

"I'll look out that I don't get him the next time I go there," said the Author.

Is it good business to create such a feeling?

Which is the really crackerjack salesman, the clerk who wins a sale and loses a customer, or the clerk who loses a sale and wins a customer?

The go-back clerk is the clerk who can always come back.

War vs. Metal.

It Takes About A Hundredweight of Bullets To Kill One Soldier.

It has been estimated that only one bullet in every hundred that is fired hits a man, and of those men hit only one in thirty-five succumbs. In other words, it takes 4,500 bullets to kill a single soldier.

During the Spanish-American war in view of the awful slaughter that has taken place during the present war these figures sound rather startling, yet they are well within the mark.

Of course such calculations as these refer to averages only. An enemy advancing in close formation, as the Germans have been doing recently before Verdun, may be mown down wholesale by rifle and machine-gun fire, and in such cases the average of fatal casualties, compared with the number of rounds expended, will be considerably higher.

Shell fire is, as a general rule, even less destructive than rifle or machine-gun fire. A modern high explosive shell makes no end of a row when it bursts, kills possibly a couple of men if it explodes inside a trench, frightens a lot more, and—that is about all. The ruined walls of Rheims Cathedral will testify for many years to come that the shell that shattered one statue seldom hurt its next door neighbor.

250 Turks Killed by One Shell.

Shrapnel is more dangerous, provided the fuse is timed just right, and the gunner who fires it knows his business. A shrapnel shell contains a number of small round bullets, each about the size of a marble. What execution a shell of this sort can do, given a favourable opportunity, was shown at the "Battle of the Landing" in Gallipoli, last April twelvemonth.

An attack was about to be launched against our left, and a fold in the ground hid the attacking Turks from our troops. They were, however, observed by the Queen Elizabeth far out at sea, and a projectile from one of her big guns was dropped right plump into the midst of them.

It was a shrapnel shell weighing 1,800 lbs. and holding 12,000 bullets. The attack was smashed, and 250 Turks were killed. This works out at one man per fifty-two bullets, and it probably represents the maximum efficiency of shrapnel fire during the present, or any other war. For, you see, the conditions, from our point of view, were exceptional and ideal.

On the other hand, there are many remarkable instances of shell fire—even concentrated and prolonged shell fire—accomplishing little or nothing in the direction of destroying life. During one of the tremendous preparatory bombardments, for example, that ushered in the early stages of the Battle of Verdun, the Germans fired between 20,000 and 30,000 shells of all calibres against the French lines, in the short space of five hours. Yet the fatal casualties amounted to fewer than a hundred, out of about 18,000 men engaged.

The Power of a "Jack Johnson."

One reason for this is, of course, that modern armies, when acting on the defensive, dig themselves in so deeply and so cunningly that they are practically immune from other than the bombardment of Santiago by the American fleet resulted in the death of one mule. At Trouville it took 15,000 shells to kill a single person. At Lorquy double that number were fired, and not one fatal casualty was recorded. At the naval battle off the Falkland Islands, when Admiral von Spee's squadron was sunk by Sturdee, the Invincible was hit twenty-three times, but there was not a single casualty amongst her crew of 950.

Yet the power of the modern shell is tremendous. If the charge of one of the large calibre ones—say a German "Jack Johnson"—were burned away quickly, it would send some millions of cubic feet of gas into the air. But instead, it is detonated in a thousandth part of a second, and these millions of cubic feet of gas, with their steel casings, crush everything in their immediate vicinity to the finest powder. Yet men even a comparatively few yards away, especially if they are lying down and under some sort of cover, however slight, usually escape with their lives at all events, and more frequently than otherwise they are not even injured.—Pearson's Weekly.

In Milady's Boudoir.

SLEEPING OUT OF DOORS.

The interest of outdoor sleeping has become so keen that all new apartment buildings are fitted with sleeping porches. If you reside in an old-time flat make a sleeping apartment of the back porch. It is no trick at all, and you can rig up a fine little camp. The department stores are well equipped to supply you with everything you may need in the way of comfortable furnishings.

Your investment will pay you many times over. Instead of awakening with a before-breakfast grinch and a heavy, dull head, you will open your eyes to a day that is like a new experience. Work will look like good fun. The worries of yesterday will be relegated to the everlasting dust heap of the forgotten past.

Any woman who takes the trouble to learn something about the respiratory and circulatory system of the human body will become enthusiastic about sleeping in the open air, for the wisdom of it is apparent. She will appreciate four fundamental facts—that the thorax is a distensible air-tight cage; that it contains and is filled by the heart, lungs and great blood vessels; that the exchange of gases in the blood takes place in the lungs; and that on the development of the chest and respiratory muscles depend the development of the lungs and the force of the circulation. Deep-breathing and unlimited fresh air are the finest of all figure-developers. The sunken chest, prominent collar bones and scrawny neck will respond almost at once to outdoor sleeping.

These Carpet Squares are remarkable for their exquisite colors and perfect design. Beautiful old Blues and deep Brown tones are blended in a fine Wilton that is very pleasing and restful to the eye. Another—a Tapestry in quaint Grey Tints has a lovely Pompadour border of roses in subdued colors. Yet another in lovely Old Rose and Reseda.

There is also a quantity of handsome Axminster Art Squares suitable for Den, Dining-room and Library.

THE BIG LEAGUE SERIES.

By Bert L. Standish, 75c. ea.

Here they are! Just what you've been looking for. Baseball and Romance combined, the most interesting stories ever written.

The author managed a league team a number of years ago and is thoroughly familiar with the doings of baseball players on and off the field. Father and son will find equal delight in reading these magnificent stories.

"Any Boy with Plenty of Grit," "Baseball at its Finest," and "The Girl in the Case"—these are the elements which compose the most successful juvenile fiction ever written. You don't have to be a fan to enjoy these books; all you need to be is really human and alive, with plenty of red blood.

PROSPERO DUE.—The s.s. Prospero is due here this evening from Sydney.

POLICE COURT.—Not a solitary prisoner was in the docket at the police court to-day.

WEATHER REPORT.—The weather across country is calm and fine, with temperature 43 to 74 above.

ANNIVERSARY MASS.—The anniversary mass at Belvidere Cemetery was celebrated to-day. A large number of worshippers were present.

INVESTIGATING FIRE.—An investigation is still going on in the destruction by fire of the oil plant of Mr. Jas. Vinnicombe at Outer Cove.

BOGUS AGENT.—We learn that several people are now lamenting the absence of a bogus magazine agent who was around town recently "doing the queer."

THE STEPHANO.—No word of the Stephano reaching Halifax has yet been received. She did not leave the wrecked steamer Matatua until Sunday morning last.

OVERHAULING THE FIFE.—Ships' carpenters and painters are now busy overhauling and fitting out the yacht Fife at the Dry Dock wharf. She will soon be in readiness for her owners.

CATHEDRAL S. S. PICNIC.—The Cathedral Sunday School Picnic takes place to-morrow at Hafey's Farm, Freshwater Road. Teas will be served by the Women's Home Mission Association to visitors.

LEAVING FOR THE WRECK.—Diver Butler, with full equipment, leaves on the Trepassey train at 5 p.m. to-day for Holyrood, St. Mary's, where he will go down and make an examination of the ill-fated steamer Matatua.

A TOTAL WRECK.—There seems to be no doubt that the s.s. Matatua, the lumber laden liner, ashore at Peter's River, will be a total wreck, as she is now breaking up on the rocks, caused by a heavy sea. A portion of her cargo has been salvaged.

DOING WELL.—Mrs. John Mercer, 48 Spencer Street, has received the following cable from her son, Sergt. F. Mercer, who was wounded in the recent fighting, and is now in hospital in London: "Wound healing. Now convalescent. Am all right."

TO CUT OUT HEAD LIGHTS.—We understand that the Municipal Council will be approached to pass an act prohibiting the use of head lights on motor cars while driving through the city, similar to the rule adopted in the chief cities in Canada.

STILL DETAINED.—The S.S. Kite which was ready to sail for Baffin's Land, has not yet got away. A new trouble has arisen between the crew and owner to the effect that the former want a guarantee as regards payment up to a certain time in case of the loss of the vessel.

DOG FISH CARRY AWAY TRAP.—Mr. Wm. Purcell, of Portugal Cove, met with a heavy loss this morning, when his codtrap was torn to pieces and partly carried away by an exceptionally large number of dog fish. The unwelcome visitors are causing a lot of anxiety among fishermen all along the south and east coast of Conception Bay.

TO-MORROW'S RACES.—The pony races at Mount Cashel Garden Party to-morrow promise to furnish a splendid attraction. Last evening some fifteen ponies were practising on the course, and a closely contested series of races is assured. A novel feature this year will be the division into two classes of ponies, affording the smaller ones a competition in their own class.

Our Baseball Column.

PLAGIARISED AND OTHERWISE

Owing to the Wanderers-Cubs game for the H. D. Reid Cup at the Garden Party to-morrow, there will be no regular League fixture this week.

The following is the standing of the teams at present:—

Cubs	.....	2	0	2	0
Wanderers	.....	2	0	2	0
Red Lions	.....	2	0	2	0
Pld. Won. Lt. Pts.
F. I. S.	.....	2	0	2	0
Wanderers	.....	2	0	2	0
Red Lions	.....	2	0	2	0

Two more games will complete the first round, viz.: Cubs-Red Lions and B. I. S.-Wanderers, and it is likely the League will order a double-header for Wednesday, August 2nd.

"I love to hit," Nuts Ellis said, "As big league players do. It always warms my heart when I can get a hit or two."

"I know you like a hit or two," Ump Chesman made reply, "But when you hit I wish you wouldn't hit me in the eye."

With apologies to Mr. Chesman, and with sincerest sympathy for his accident, we herewith unload another one received in this morning's mail. It is entitled "A Little Spasm on an Incident in Last Week's Game," author unknown:—

The good old "Gem" to Umpire Fred Makes such a strong appeal, He doffs his mask—ball cracks his head, He does not make a squeal.

The crowd floods round, the First Aid man Yells: "Brandy bring, or Whisky," Fred lifts his head, says "Alright, boys, Next week, I'll feature "Du Risky." (N.B. "De Reszke.")

A fan enquires if it is possible to throw a baseball further than one can hit it. Personally we don't know, but so far as the St. John's League is concerned we know that a ball has been batted further. Finn, the Cubs' outfielder, once threw a cricket ball, in open competition on St. George's Field, from one goal post right over the other, which is the record for throwing in Newfoundland. Hiltz, two seasons ago, batted a ball that landed a considerable distance down Field Street, which is claimed to be a much greater distance; and McHenry, while playing with Grand Falls last year, batted a "homer" which went sailing in line a clear twenty feet above the western goal post. Perhaps some reader could furnish us with actual figures or records.

The "evening up" process is still being worked by umpires in recent games despite our treatise a few weeks ago.

In reply to "IRISHMAN" we have to state that Umpire Chesman was wrong in his decision in the Wanderers-B. I. S. game in the Mount Cashel series. The play was, Chaurling slid home; when P-tit tagged him he dropped the ball. Umpire declared runner out claiming that it was necessary only for the pitcher to momentarily hold the ball.

A favourite sport in our league is trying to run Art Hiltz down between FIRST and HOME.

To "FAN": We regret we cannot publish your letter as it is too abusive and in any case this column is positively not going to be used for getting off anonymous spleen on either officials or players. Try not write over your own signature and we will publish anything you send? Both the player and the official you refer to will be in the game to-morrow at the Garden Party, and why not go there and tell them personally what you think of them. By attending the Garden Party you will probably help the Orphans, if nothing else.

If your thumpers fall to thump, If your pitchers hit a slump, If you lead an' lose your trump, ALWAYS blame it on the Ump.

Another "FAN" wants to know if the bases are filled; the batter hits a liner which strikes the man running from first to second, then caroms off him and hits the man running from second to third, who in disgust kicks the ball and it happens to hit the man going home from third. Candidly we can't dope it, it looks more like football to us, but the Ump. informs us that only one man is out—the player which the ball hit first, as the rule states that if a baserunner is hit by a batted ball he is out, after which the ball becomes dead and must be returned to the pitcher before the game can be resumed.

"Bleacherite" writes that our column cannot be called a Baseball column at all; that we should stand out more dope, and that we should write more in the peculiar vernacular of the diamond. To answer his statements in rotation we would say:—

1.) That the column doesn't pretend to compare with OTHER columns, local or otherwise. It is evidently serving the purpose for which it is intended, namely, for advance notices and reports of games, and to air any grievances that may exist.

2.) We don't know any dope, and this being so we do not care to inflict "on a long suffering public" a line of dope, of which neither they, nor we, know the meaning.

3.) Same as No. 2.

Propos of "Bleacherite's" remarks, the following is taken from the recent issue of The Baseball Magazine:—

THE NEW BASEBALL REPORTER.

By Treve Collins, Jr.

"This fellow's baseball dope is bull," the would-be writer moaned, And as he read the columns o'er, he shook his head and groaned.

"Oh, woe is me," he gasped aloud, like sundry dying fish.

"Tis criminal to serve our fans with such an awful dish.

"Why I could give him cards and spades and beat him too, at that." He fiercely chewed his score card up and battered in his hat.

He then turned to the Editor, and frowned portentously.

"Why don't you can that guy?" he said, "and give the job to me?"

"I'll give you real live baseball dope, the kind fans like to read.

"The stuff that covers all the plays and shows real class and speed." Ye Editor was much impressed and said to What's-His-Name,

"Go out to see the Pirates and write up a sample game."

The would-be-scribe annexed a pad, and grabbed a pencil too, And at the grounds, he wrote, and wrote, until the game was through.

He warbled sweetly of the spring, and likewise odd-lot socks, He wrote a ton or two of dope on Dodds's golden locks.

He noted sundry scattered hits, and balls, and strikes and such, And wrote of men that "swing like gates" which peeved him very much.

The comments of the fans he heard, he scribbled down with joy. To him this baseball dope of his was gold without alloy. The game was o'er, back home he sped and there re-wrote his notes, Elaborating here and there to get the players' goats.

To THE Big Chief he sent his stuff, but sadly lack it came, "Your story's very good," he read, "But SAY WHO WON THE GAME?"

Important Notice to Readers!

WITH REFERENCE TO EVERYMAN'S LIBRARY.

The Booksellers have recently received the following communication from the Publishers of Everyman's Library:—

"Messrs. Dent & Sons sincerely regret that owing to the embargo placed by the Government on the importation of paper and materials for its manufacture, causing an increase in its cost by nearly 200 per cent., and also to the further increased cost of labour and other materials, they are compelled on and after July 1st to advance the prices of this library as follows:—

Cloth Edition, 1/3 net; Bancroft, Library Binding, 1/10 1/2 net; Paste Grain, 2/6 net; 3/4 Pigskin, Library Binding, 2/6 net; Aldine Morocco, 3/6 net; Bedford Morocco, 3/6 net.

The local price for the Cloth Edition of 'Everyman's' will therefore be 45c. instead of its old price of 35c.

The Navy in the Dardanelles.

Do not let to-day pass without getting your tickets at Dicks & Co.'s for Lieut.-Com. Howley's lecture Thursday evening. Those who have had the privilege of hearing a short account of his experiences and of the wonderful work of our navy, advise all to avail themselves of this one and only opportunity of hearing the story from the lips of a son of Nfld., whom it is proud to number among the heroes of this great war.

Haig's Army is Equal to Best Says Authority.

Civilian Forces Have Surpassed Most Optimistic Hopes of France—Have Had Hardest Share But Won Out—Military Experts Are Astonished at What Has Been Accomplished by British Arms North of the Somme River.

Paris, July 19.—The recent British successes aroused the greatest enthusiasm here; less for the intrinsic value of the ground gained than as indicating the satisfactory condition of the British army. A high military authority said to-day:—

"The progress of the British fully equals our most optimistic hopes. I need not explain to Americans that the new British army has been an unknown fact hitherto. We realised the thoroughness of their training, the adequacy of their equipment and munitions, but it seemed difficult to believe that masses of civilians without a scrap of military training could in so short a time become able to meet the best continental troops on equal terms. You Americans ought to be especially gratified by the result, which shows that unmilitary nations can at the spur of necessity build an army as good as any. For the British have proved this to be the case.

"Without depreciating the task of the French, I say that the British had certainly the hardest share of the Somme offensive. What they have accomplished has astounded military experts. Above all, it has given the French enormous encouragement. Hitherto they knew the English had the quantity, now we are sure they have the quality as well, and our hope and confidence have certainly grown greater.

"That is the lesson of the past week's fighting." Conversations with members of the British forces sent from the Somme trenches to take part in the fourteenth of July review, heighten the favorable impression. Apart from the high morale the most notable feature is their universal trust and admiration for their own officers of whom all speak in the warmest terms. One Sergeant, a veteran of the South African war, said:—

"The secret of our success has been the way we have been led by our regimental officers, who are always ready to set an example themselves when we are in a tight place. There are no more reckless fighters. They learn of the lesson that lives wasted are lives lost to England. In all my twenty-one years of army life I have never known troops whose officers are so popular or men so eager to obey."

One French expert emphasizes the value of the physical condition of the British troops. "Modern earth fortification warfare," he says, "is the most tiring kind of fighting ever known. In the last instance the winner is he who can best support physical fatigue. Surely the British have an immense advantage over their opponents, who are now compelled to utilize troops staled by months of holding trenches and often too old or too young to support the terrific strain of these battles."

Health Hints.

Have you ever noticed a bread wagon with the doors wide open and the dust and dirt from the street blowing in over the bread? Just stop and think of the dirt, and you will always ask your Grocer for Lynch's Bread wrapped and sealed by machinery in a dust and germ-proof wrapper.—July 18, 16.

Wreckage Picked Up.

WHAT DOES IT INDICATE?

The Minister of Marine received the following message to-day from Mr. Geo. Badcock, Port au Choix:—"J. Noel's motor boat picked up Saturday half mile off this port, portion of ship deck 12 by 16 feet with iron bolts at stem, decking 2 1/2 inch thick covered with cement on top one inch thick stern round, painted underneath brown and varnished portion of electric wiring attached and tied Hibelts underneath; Richard Atkins of Georgetown picked up on the western side of Point Riche tied Hibelts apparently used as body straps, were chafed off and holes worn through on P.T.O. Inside of belt have examined everything, but can find no names or marks of identification of any kind."

KANSAS.

By GEORGE FITCH,

Author of "At Good Old Swash."

Kansas City, the largest and loudest city in the middle west, is located beside and occasionally under the Missouri River. The city is in Missouri, but is so close to the state line that about 100,000 of its inhabitants have spilled over into Kansas, where they are irretrievably lost for census purposes. In spite of this Kansas City's population does as much work and makes as much noise doing it as a million New Englanders.

Kansas City was first located beneath the bluffs of the Missouri, but climbed these bluffs with great excitement many years ago and has now spread over several dozen hills in a manner which makes a ride in a Kansas City street car resemble a trip in a scenic railway. The business section occupies two hills and a valley and the quickest way to get down to

Your Boys and Girls.

Not even Christmas with all its wonder and excitement means as much to some children as their own one day—their birthdays. And it is not an exaggeration to say that the child who is not convinced that his own birthday is the pleasantest day in all the year has really never been given a proper birthday. Remember in planning the next birthday that this one day is the child's own. Should the child want a party, give him a picnic more than a party, give him a picnic. While you are planning what sort of birthday will make the child happiest, do not forget that the great source of birthday joy comes in the element of complete surprise and the greatest secrecy should be maintained with regard to the preparation for birthday doings, so that nothing can detract from the birthday happiness.

In planning birthday surprises do not make the mistake of giving the child too much at once, but rather spread the surprises out from the little toy hidden in the child's shoe to the morning to a last token tuck under the pillow at night. There are many clever schemes of spreading the joy of surprises out over the whole day.
