PARCEL POST NOTICE.
Reduction in Weight.

Until the opening of navigation parcel delivery on many of the present routes must be partially, and in some places, entirely suspended, the difficulty of securing dog teams and weather conditions making it extremely difficult to convey heavy mails over tracks impassable for horses. The Maximum weight of parcels for winter courier routes, until the end of April, is decreased from 11 pounds to 5 pounds, and these can only be accepted in small numbers. Whilst every effort will be made to deliver parcels the Department cannot guarantee prompt delivery. This does not apply to places on the line of Railway, but only to delivery by courier. Postmasters in Outports are requested to put this regulation into effect.

CHAPTER XIX. CASTLES IN SPAIN.

"Bah!" interrupted Edward More—"what did you leave for—you did no good, I suppose?"

"On the contrary, I did a great deal for his highness, I hope," replied the imperturbable captain. "I have never been accused of cowardice, my friend, and there were some sharp brushes now and then. Yes, if I had stayed I should have come back to you a colonel, or a general, who knows? But I came back—that is what you want to know—in consequence of a little unfortunate affair with a brother officer. A foolish young Spaniard, with too much fire in his blood and too little discretion in the use of the rapier. Poor boy! He fancied that his little ladylove—a pretty little thing enough, your young friend, Miss Bromley, reminds me of her immensely—and I were too great friends; it was no fault of mine, I swear! The little girl would look at me with her black eyes, and it wasn't for me to tell her that though a cat may look at a king, a young girl, as handsome as herself, with a jealous young boy lover, must not look at another man.

"I liked the boy better than his little ladybird, but what was I to do? He forced a quarrel on me and—one mustn't smoke here, of course, not even a simple cigarette! Ah, well, you know best! Where was I? Oh, yes. He fell at the first thrust, straight through the left lung. I don't think he lived three minutes afterward," and with a gentle sigh the sensitive captain warmed his hands and looked pensively at Edward's horror-stricken and disgusted face.

"It turned out afterward that the boy was a near relation to Don Carlos himself, and so, as I have a horror of imprisonment in those dirty Spanish jails, and a still greater dislike to facing six muskets early in the morning, I thought it best to make for the frontier and pay a little visit to dear old England."

"But what made you come here?" asked Edward, after a significant pause.

The captain raised his eyebrows and smiled.

I should get a hearty welcome from my dear Edward!"

"His dear Edward" bit his lips and looked as if he would have liked to pitch the gentle captain out of the window.

"They said she was beautiful," resumed that fascinating gentleman, "and allowing for the exaggerations usual in such a case, I expected to see a pretty little girl of the dairymaid type; but, by Heaven, they were right! She is simply lovely!"

"You are talking of Miss Weston, I suppose," growled Edward.

"Of whom else is all London talking?" rejoined the captain. "Of whom else but of the girl who comes into a million of money, and of the man who refused her and it on the same day."

Edward More looked from under his frowning brows, and commenced to bite his nails.

"I doubted the million—I always make allowances for report and gossip," continued the captain, in a soft tone of self-communion, "but I distinctly refused to believe that any man could be so mad as to decline even half a million of money, though it was tied in a bundle with a charming young lady—and so I came down here to get a true version of this pretty little romance from your veracious lips. So proceed, my dear friend," he said, laying his hand on Edward More's knee, and looking up into his face with a smile full of confident power.

"I can't tell you any more of your you know already," said Edward More, irritably.

"The million is correct, then?" said the captain.

cepted—if he had married this beautiful creature, your chance of becoming Sir Edward, of More Park, would have been small.

Edward's face went from red to white, but he said nothing. The captain watched him, with his head on one side, and his dark eyes gleaming keenly under the languid, half-closed lids.

"That was what concerned you, my dear Edward; and Cyril—foolish Sir Cyril!—did not even see her, you say?"

"I didn't say so," growled Edward; "but he didn't see her, as it happened."

"Never has seen her!"

"Never, that I am aware of," replied Edward.

The captain sat and nodded his handsome head at the fire thoughtfully.

all you want to know—more than I can tell you, I've no doubt. Is it money you want? If so, for Heaven's sake say so out at once; you needn't hesitate—it won't be the first time you've asked me for it."

"Nor the last, I hope," muttered the captain, sweetly.

Edward glared at him savagely.

"How much is it? If it isn't too much, I'll try and get it for you, and you can go. Plainly, Morton, I don't care to have you here; you must go."

The captain stretched out his legs, and looked in the attitude he assumed as if he never meant to move again.

"How kind of you—how I value your candor! Yes, my dear Edward, I do want money—a lack of money is my normal condition; I never wanted it more than I do now, for, to tell you the truth, I was compelled to leave Spain, for which I had fought and bled—a gunshot wound on the left shoulder, nothing very serious, don't look so alarmed!—I left Spain so hurriedly that I had no time to bring away with me my dressing case, which was full of Bank of England notes!" He laughed softly at this piece of pleasantry, and then, in a musing voice, said: "Yes, five hundred pounds would be quite sufficient. Don't make it more, my dear Edward—I would rather you wouldn't."

"Look here, Morton, you have got no hold on me. I'm not under your thumb that you can extort money from me."

"Extort!" echoed the captain; "why my dear fellow, you offered it to me, like the generous-hearted creature you are."

The public men of Bonne Bay interested as they were in the trade of the Gulf Coast and not unmindful of what they owed to the fishermen, ought to at once press the special claim of their port as the right place for the building of a west coast hospital, and he urged that they ought to act immediately now that the question had been so prominently and opportunely brought forward by Mr. March.

Bonne Bay's Protest.

There are no people in "this Newfoundland of ours" more independent, as a class, than the stalwart residents of that portion of St. Barbe District from Bonne Bay to Flower's Cove...

is open. Naturally there is a rush for space on all the coastal steamers, during the November and December months, by Bonne Bay dealers, but with limited accommodation their whole freights cannot be taken.

A Public Meeting was called at Woody Point on the last Wednesday in January, and a Committee appointed "to prepare a full statement, dealing with the business grievances and hardships caused by the breakdown of the transport system before the close of navigation."

Cod Oil Competition.

Recognizing the need for encouraging the efforts of the Newfoundland Cod Oil factories to improve the manufacture of cod liver oil, the Marine Dept. last March opened a competition for this end. Six prizes were offered, three of $50, $30, $20 for that part of the coast South and West of Cape St. Francis...

intrinsic value as what they represent will the gold pieces be highly appreciated by the recipients, and that the competition will prove a strong incentive for the better manufacture of cod oil.

Died at Sydney.

The news of the death of Mr. A. C. Chambers, which occurred at his home on Commercial Street, North Sydney, Sunday evening, after only a week's illness, was heard with genuine regret by his many friends and the public generally.

Personal Mention.

Capt. C. Taylor goes as navigating officer on the s.s. Viking this Spring. Mr. J. Goff, of Carbonar, is a guest at the Crosbie.

Western Notes.

During the first week of the present month, the fishermen of Chanaan and vicinity did exceedingly well, the value of their fares for that period averaging something like $450 per boat.

LECTURE BY CAPT. KEEGAN, M.C.
Last night at the Kilbride Amusement Club's Hall, Kilbride, Capt. Kegan, M.C., gave a most interesting lecture on his reminiscences of the Great War. Although the weather was most disagreeable, the hall was completely filled and the audience attentive and enthusiastic. Mr.
J. Doyle introduced the lecturer, who for two hours held the gathering with an absorbing description of his experiences from Beaumont Hamel to Flanders, including the Gasdecourt drive and the struggle at Monchy. He paid tribute to our fellow heroes, and related many humorous stories of our boys in the trenches. Rev. J. Coady, P. M., moved a vote of thanks, and traced the history of the war with faithful appreciation of the Navy and Army, and their protection of our home interests, and he announced that Capt. Leo Murphy, who was then in the audience, would deliver a lecture at a later date. Mr. Doyle seconded the motion in an enthusiastic address, and it was carried amidst loud applause. Motion pictures, showing some of the training of "Ours," were shown, and an impromptu dance followed an enjoyable evening to a close.

Shipping Held Up.

The hard-packed ice outside, which extends to Cape Race, and east to an unknown distance, and fills the harbor, is holding up about 13 foreign going-ships. Among these are the Nevis, J. Miller, Muriel B. Walters, Thos. W. Malley, H. Fatten, Lilla Stan-
hillier, Annie M. Nadeau, Victoria Chimes, Bella Scott, Huntley, and Jama. A strong N. W. wind, 24 hours' duration would clear the shore, but until then the shipping here must necessarily remain in port.

Business Men Leave.

By to-morrow morning's special train which connects at Placentia with the Kyle, Mr. G. M. Barr, Mr. and Capt. K. Keegan, Miss Marjorie Barr, Miss Mary Skinner and Mr. Ed.

remainder of the party will visit various points in Canada and the States.

ning will be acting manager of the business here.

Kipling's Foresight.

That remarkable author, Rudyard Kipling, was as varied, in his writings, as he was clever, and he seemed to be just as comfortable when writing a scientific as when a fictional work. Among the former "With the Night Mail" occupies a prominent and honored place, for not Verne nor any of the others could ever lay claim to deeper vision in to the future or a clearer realization of the coming wonders of Science. Now that aerial mail services are a reality, his book can be read with greater understanding, and greater appreciation, perhaps than before. To many,
"With the Night Mail" was but a piece of highly romantic and improbable fiction, but many there were who could enter into the remarkable story, recognizing readily that the forecast was neither impossible nor improbable. Those are, to-day, completely upheld in their belief, and more so than ever, if that were possible, the wizard Kipling is esteemed by his legions of readers all the world over.

Rocking the Boat.

By EUTH CAMERON.

"Well, I'm thankful to say, I'm not so timid about germs. My carcass isn't quite so valuable to me as all that," said my neighbour. The "timidity" to which he referred was displayed by two friends of ours who had gotten off a street car because they had heard someone sneezing on it, and had walked home the rest of the way.

You notice I put quotes about timidity. That is that I may leave no doubt that the use of the word was my neighbour's, not mine. The word I would have used would have been "common sense."

But People Know What Sort of a Mat He Is.

My neighbour's sneer. "My carcass isn't quite so valuable to me as all that," is a common one. And an easy one. And one that shows him up to thinking people in a far different light from the one he intends to paint himself in.

Only a fool thinks that in this present crisis, one can live to oneself alone. Not to do everything within reason to avoid catching the disease that has already killed as many as fell in this terrible war, is to be absolutely selfish.

You Are Not The Only Sufferer.

Suppose you fall sick are you the only sufferer? Indeed, no, either some member of your family must take care of you, running inevitable risk of contagion (have you not noticed how many times it was the member of the family who had taken care of someone else and gotten all tired out, who died of the plague after the original patient had recovered?) or a nurse must be drawn from the too small supply. The doctor, already working night and day, must find time for one more call. And since every person coming down with the influenza is a potential spreader of the disease, you may be responsible for the illness or death of some delicate person who sat beside you in the car.

Be Reasonable But Not Panicky.

Of course, it is always a big question where reasonable precautions stop, and where panic begins. If you

No Ray of Hope.

Colonel Henry Watterson, the veteran editor of the St. Louis Courier-Journal, contributes an article to the New York Herald, in which he roundly condemns the Prohibition amendment to the constitution. In conclusion he hands out this warning to his fellow-countrymen:

"Have a care! I give it you straight! There are no flies on this writing. I claim to be the only son of the seventh daughter of the seventh son, in a straight line from Brian Boru, the Scottish prophet—or was he Irish—and I know everything that has ever been or ever will be, and I tell you—confidentially, of course—that the world is on its last legs, that having gone into collapse and eclipse twice already, it is headed for a third descent into the vortex that yawns before it; the process being as simple and easy as falling off a log; Woodrow to get back home with his gospel of sweetness and light; Marconi, with his wireless to get in touch with Mars; some fool to explode from the top of the Washington monument a bomb which will stifle the universe and destroy all living things, including the fantastical profiteers of Miami and the horsey girls over at Palm Beach. I am not pessimistic. Dear me, no, but I am nether blind nor deaf, and I refuse to be dumb. Even as it is, the world upside down; England in ferment, Germany in flames; Florida and Hell-for-Sartin given over to the Bolsheviks of Prohibition, where shall we look for a ray of hope?"

THE PURSUIT OF HAPPINESS.

It isn't in the things you own Which you must keep and use alone; It isn't in the goals you claim, Nor is it in a selfish fame; It can't be found upon a shelf; You cannot seek for joy itself And separate it from the things Which life to every mortal brings.

No man can properly express Just what is human happiness. Had you the wealth of every mine, And every gift and talent fine Of all the sages wise and gray, You could not give one single day Alone to seek for happiness his goal. With any hope of real success.

Who longs for happiness must learn That it will mean early rising, but you can make up for lost sleep in the middle of the day. If you arise at five and do your heavy sweeping, ironing, washing, etc., before breakfast, you will be able to rest at the hottest part of the day. After the breakfast dishes are done do your marketing, then on your return make up the beds and twelve o'clock should find you practically through for the day.

After lunch strip off, have a cold sponge or shower, and lie down until four. Then you can dress in fresh clothes, finish preparing your dinner and will be already to greet your husband when he returns. If you will only save yourself in this way you will be rested and refreshed at night instead of exhausted.

Milady's Boudoir.

LEARN TO SAVE YOURSELF.

Women who remain in town the greater part of the summer often find themselves almost exhausted at the end of that time, particularly when they have all their own work to do.

She is in constant motion—sweeping, dusting, making beds, cooking, and far worse washing and ironing. Almost all of the housewife's tasks are heating in nature, and when the temperature is already high it is no wonder that at the close of the day she is practically exhausted.

Learn to save yourself as much as possible, housewives, if you do not want to break down before the summer is over. There are many ways that you can save yourself. For example the greatest heat of the day is between noon and three o'clock. The coolest is between five and eight in the morning. Why not make out a schedule that will bring the heaviest work when it is cool and will leave the hottest hours for rest.

This will mean early rising, but you can make up for lost sleep in the middle of the day.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir:—One would not expect to find a large concern like the Dominion Iron and Steel Co. engaged in the fisheries of this country, but there it is. Last fall they had several of the men from their plant at Port au Port catching herring here and their agent at that place would come down every now and again to look after them. The fisheries are certainly open to every one, but considering the concessions and privileges that have been granted this Canadian Corporation by the Government of this country, it looks very small to see it competing with our fishermen in their own special line of work.

Unfair Competition.

FACIAL EVIDENCE.

All punk emotions leave their trace, quite legible, upon your face. As I go weaving down the street, I size up every man I meet; his face instructs me, not his dress; and seldom do I miss my guess. "That man," I say, "is prone to growl; he looks as gloomy as an owl; he has no checkrein on his bile; it takes an effort when he'd smile. His face is like a printed leaf, and all the contents speak of grief. And yonder gent of middle age gives way to foolish spells of rage. His temper is a sudden thing that knows no curb or leading string, and it has made him look quite old ere half his nervous days are told. No doubt at home he is a bear and holds a reign of terror there, though on the street he tries to look as cheerful as a babbling brook. I do not want him for a friend, and so I'll dodge him till the end. That pompour skate who's coming now thinks there's a halo on his brow. His face expresses mist pride, but recent is his head inside. No man has any right to be as proud as this old scout I see, unless he has accomplished more than living till he's reached three score." And thus I'm musing as I chase; I read a record in each face, and e'en the victims must confess it's seldom that I miss my guess.

atmosphere around the Peace has changed remarkably in a few days. The deliberate caution which marked the opening of an important committee in Geneva way and even the tentative delegates are being forward at a great pace. The pace has been general. He was discussing the probability of the treaty of peace will be signed and work would be hastened.

Commission of Enquiry

English Miners Demands—Peace Congress Moving Rapidly—British and U. S. Favor Sinking German Warships—Wilson Has Arrived at Boston.

SERIOUS SITUATION.
LONDON, Feb. 24.—The commission of enquiry into the coal mining strike has been organized. Premier Lloyd George said he has advised that to grant the demands of the miners would throw upon the government a burden so serious that it might have the effect of throwing scores of not hundreds of thousands out of employment. It might cripple the export trade. It might, he said, bring the coal, iron, steel, machinery and the figures the government has advanced and that is the reason for the inquiry. A commission of enquiry, the Premier said, would be appointed. The commission would cover the question of wages and hours of work, the cost of production and distribution of the coal, the general organization of the mines, profiteering, social conditions and other matters. Mr. Justice Bigham, of the King's Bench Division, is chairman. The commission reported by March 31. While he asked for a report by March 31, the Premier said that a strike for ten days under the present conditions would cause a breakdown of the coal and other industries, and the government would have to feed the workers with such fuel and supplies as it could spare. He said the coal-miners' strike has fallen on a very heavy class of the country. The composition of the commission, the Premier added, could not be announced until after the miners on Wednesday to decide whether they would take part in the inquiry. The Premier said the country had reached a most serious turning point in its history and the government hesitates to make the concessions asked for by the miners without the closest consultation.

WEDNESDAY WITH BUSINESS.
PARIS, Feb. 23.—The atmosphere around the Peace Conference has changed remarkably in the few days. The deliberations which marked the progress of important commissions given way and even the most active delegates are being carried away by a general talk of peace has been general. This was reflected to-day by Stephen Pichon, French Foreign Minister, in his regular Sunday talk with foreign newspaper correspondents. He was discussing the probable date of the peace treaty which will be signed. He said that the work would be hastened as soon as the necessary foundation had been laid. He added that it was now regarded possible that the end might be reached before the middle of May and that he saw no reason to doubt it. M. Pichon said that Germany would be first dealt with because of the greater importance of the problems presented in her case, but added there were important peace questions for settlement in connection with Austria, Bulgaria and Turkey. The commissioners who are considering reparations, the minister said, are now reaching an agreement. In conclusion M. Pichon said that Premier Clemenceau was about to undertake consideration of the Russian question when he was shot. He said the subject would await his return to his office.

DIFFERENCES OF OPINION.

PARIS, Feb. 24.
(By the A.P.)—While the Supreme War Council has not discussed the disposition of surrendered German warships, the naval experts of the Council have studied the subject. British and American officers agreeing that the proper solution of the question will be to sink them in deep water. French and Italian officers do not take this view, and if the experts do not soon reach an agreement the matter may be taken up directly by the Supreme War Council.

RESIGNATION NOT ACCEPTED.

PARIS, Feb. 24.

ON THE ROAD TO RECOVERY.

PARIS, Feb. 24.
The most optimistic omens are seen in the decision of the doctors attending Premier Clemenceau, to publish only one daily bulletin on his condition, beginning to-day. The Premier has passed the dangerous point and is well on the road to recovery. All danger of pulmonary congestion, it is said, is removed.

SITUATION IN MUNICH IMPROVED.

WEIMAR, Feb. 24.
(By the A.P.)—The situation in Munich, although still critical, is much more hopeful than yesterday morning, according to information received in German Govt. circles here at noon to-day. A Bavarian Government, by the Council of Workmen, Soldiers and Peasants, has not yet been proclaimed, although there were reports that it would be.

A STRANGE REQUEST.

VLADIVOSTOK, Feb. 24.

LONDON, Feb. 24.
(Via Reuters)—C. B. Harnsworth, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, replying to Col. BLUFF CALLED.

PARIS, Feb. 24.
The French destroyer Oriflamme captured on February 19 in the Baltic Sea the German steamers Elbe and Berger which were navigating without permission. The destroyer took her prizes into the Kiel canal on the way to the nearest French port, but the German authorities closed the locks at Brunsbüttel and endeavored to prevent the passage of the destroyer and the steamers on the ground that the captures were illegal. After the commander of the destroyer had made an energetic protest the Oriflamme and its prizes were allowed to proceed to Dunkirk.

MORAL RESPONSIBILITY FIXED.

PARIS, Feb. 24.
The sub-committee of the Peace Conference dealing with the responsibility of the authors of the war has completed its work. Its report has not been made public but at its meetings and the hearings it gave were attended by nearly all the members of the full committee, there seems no doubt that the report will receive formal approval and be laid before the Supreme Council. It is believed that the sub-committee has made findings only as to the moral responsibility of the authors of the war and not as regards technical violations of international law by individuals. Other sub-committees dealing with the responsibility for the war have not yet reached the point of reporting their findings.

WILSON IN BOSTON.

BOSTON, Feb. 24.
President Wilson was the guest of Boston to-day. Thousands of people from all parts of New England arrived on early trains to swell the throngs in the streets through which it was arranged that he should pass on his way from Commonwealth Pier to his hotel in the Back Bay district. For the greatest part of the crowd this was the only opportunity to see the President, as Mechanics' Hall, where he was to deliver his only address of the day, seats but 7,000 people. The George Washington dropped anchor off quarantine shortly after dark last night. The most exciting moments of the trip came on Sunday afternoon when it was suddenly discovered that the steamer running through a dense fog was headed directly for Thatcher's Island, off Cape Ann. It was the destroyer Harding, running ahead as a guard ship, which discovered the danger and gave a warning signal. Engines were reversed and the ship was stopped.

ONLY TWO MURDERED.

BASLE, Feb. 23.
A semi-official despatch from Munich, quoting a Foreign Ministry note, says the only persons killed in Munich were Kurt Eisner, the Premier, and Deputy Osel. The despatch says that Minister of the Interior Auer was seriously wounded, as also were two of the members. Minister of War Ross Hauper was taken to a place of safety and the other reports of killings were unfounded.

Our American Letter.

Charleston, South Carolina, Feb. 4. The new postage stamps of Newfoundland are very beautiful. "The trail of the caribou" is a happy phrase and should help to perpetuate the glorious deeds of the Blue Puttees in Turkey, Belgium and France. The present issue approaches in beauty of design the old time fish and seal stamps which were so much sought after by collectors.

Wholesale prices of foodstuffs are tumbling but the retail prices remain the same. The dealers say the reason for the disparity lies in the fact that stocks on hand were bought at war-time prices. This excuse may serve in some cases but it cannot be accepted from merchants who are constantly turning over their stocks. Some dealers have proved the so-called law of supply and demand to be a hoary old fraud. With profiteurs con- spiring together, it becomes a dead letter.

A most puzzling affair is the mysterious murder of distinguished Chinese in Washington. It is rumored that the murderer or murderers mistook them for the Chinese mission to Paris and that the crime was the outcome of a plot hatched in a country adjacent to China.

The British and American troops at Archangel are seemingly hard beset, their little army facing an overwhelming force of the Bolsheviks. Fierce fighting has occurred in the deep snows and intense cold of that region and fears of a disaster are entertained by many. It seems strange to think that we are actually at war with a former ally, but waiting technicalities aside, that is the exact situation. The outcome of our invasion of Russian territory will be watched with many misgivings. It is hoped that the present sporadic attacks will not develop into another great war in which millions of Russians may be engaged. Who would have thought that a professional pianist would one day rule the rehabilitated Polish nation. Let us hope that as a statesman Paderewski will exhibit the same brilliant qualities he has shown as a pianist.

The King of Hedjaz is being made the butt of the comic paragrapher. He seems to be as well known as the Akkoonid of Swat.

It becomes more apparent, every day as the Peace Conference progresses, that America will be compelled to do her share of the governing of the conquered territories. Congress will have to furnish the necessary mandatory power and a pretty fight is predicted in that behalf when the matter is brought before it. Armenia and Syria have declared their preference for American rule and are asking this nation to assume control of affairs in those countries. This will bring America into the very troubled Eastern situation and the problems that will arise will not be easy of solution.

Striking in a dozen different industrial centres at once, British labor has brought on the test which it has been waiting three or four years to make, waiting until the end of the war, after which there would no longer be the irresistible appeal to stand by for the national salvation. Men are out by hundreds of thousands, in a score of important trades, and the movement is apparently growing rather than receding. There are indications, when stories coming from England since before the general elections have been taken into account and there will be no recession of the wane until a moral and material victory is won. British labor is probably trying to find out just where it stands. During the war it got pretty much what it asked for, but that was because employers, with the government pressing them, had to give it. On the other hand, during the war, they had to compromise principle time after time because they were appealed to in the name of the nation's safety. On the whole the gains they made were large, but they still left conditions in many industries that demanded improvement. What the British unions are no doubt doing to-day is trying not merely to make such of the ground they have won, but chiefly to see what strength the opposition to them will develop in these days when talk of unemployment is beginning and when it would be supposed ordinarily that a strike would be inappropriate from the worker's own viewpoint. It should not be forgotten that labor in Great Britain is not merely an economic or social question, but also a political one, with a party that carried the union label claiming to be the official party of the opposition in parliament by reason of its numbers. Nor should it be forgotten that recent developments, in the British army and elsewhere, indicate a reflection of conditions further east that makes the present strikes more terrifying to capitalism in England than ordinary demands for higher wages and shorter hours. The labor struggle is worth watching closely, because it is only an example of the struggle that is certain to come to this country before long. Everywhere labor is anxious to know how much it has gained, not merely in money or time but in actual strength and influence during the war. Almost the only way the labor leaders have of determining this is by calling widespread strikes and studying the reaction of the country. The labor discussions in the Peace Conference may lead to international measures that will sweep away many of the existing difficulties, but the average man is a sceptic on this point. If something like that does not happen, however, it is easy to predict that America, like England, France and other countries, will have a rapid and ever more serious succession of labor problems to solve in the next few years. Proletarianism has now become the war of the world's new watchword and it does not have to take the form of Bolshevism to pursue its ends. Our military reservation will soon be the scene of unusual activity when troops from overseas debar by the thousand. The system of docks built at the cost of $20,000,000 is capable of handling scores of the largest ships afloat at one time. We have now at this port several thousand troops who were ready to sail for France until the signing of the armistice dashed our hopes of foreign service.

President Wilson's speech in the French Chamber of Deputies was the first to be delivered by an outsider in 70 years. It was at once a ringing appeal for international justice and a touching tribute to the heroism and the chivalry of France.

His visit to the devastated region was referred to in sentences that showed his horror at the cruel vandalism perpetrated by a nation of barbarians and his determination that such things should never again come to France while the civilized nations held their present ideas regarding the peace and happiness of the world. President Wilson carries home with him one of the priceless stained-glass windows of Rheims Cathedral, presented to him by Cardinal Lusin. In company with the aged Cardinal who remained at his post, through all the horror of the savage bombardment which reduced his city to mere piles, now a desolate ruin, and saw with his own eyes how the Germans had wrought the deed of shame. "It is beautiful, though a ruin" he said as he traversed the debris covered aisles of what was once the most glorious edifice in France. Gazing up at the old rose window from which was wont to stream those wondrous rays that seemed emblematical of France's chivalry and faith in mankind, he must have found it hard to forgive the foul and irreverent beasts in human form who dared to lay their impious hands upon the fair dwelling place of the most High God. Gone are now the glories of the edifice which was at once an inspiration and a delight to all the world. It stands however, although a blackened ruin, as an everlasting witness to the attempt of Satan to destroy the world and who shall say that as a result of its destruction, the power of the enemy waned and finally culminated in the utter collapse of the German hordes.

Girls! Have a Mass of Beautiful Hair, Soft, Glossy, Wavy

A small bottle destroys dandruff and doubles beauty of your hair.

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few week's use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance.

Get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter for a few cents and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine.

What of the Inspection?

The selection and grading of the herring packed on the West Coast was poor; that on the East Coast was little better. Some Green Bay herring received in this market on the last steamer was found to be packed badly and many small fish were found packed in packages marked "large fulls." The foregoing is taken from the New York Fishing Gazette of 25th January, and upon reading it one is immediately constrained to ask: What of our inspectors, the Fishery Board, and all our rules and regulations relative to inspection and government brand? We understand that it was to prevent the possible happening of conditions as recorded in the Gazette's statement quoted above, that the Fishery Board was brought into existence, inspectors were appointed and rules and regulations of inspection and government branding adopted. If therefore the allegations of these Gazette be unfounded they are a libel upon our herring inspectors and the Fishery Board as well as upon our packers and the industry. If, on the other hand, they be founded upon actual conditions, then to our mind our energies to protect the Newfoundland Scotch-style herring industry have been a failure, or there has at least been laxity of duty in some direction. We therefore urge that the matter be investigated, the seat of the trouble located—which should not be a very difficult in view of the fact that the packer's license number and also the inspector's initials are stamped upon all packings of Nfld. Scotch-style herring—and steps taken to prevent its re-occurrence. Otherwise let us go away with the inspection altogether, and all the official frills and ratiocination with which the industry is at present encumbered. While we stand four square for the protection and advancement of our industries, in the meantime we contend that all the government inspection and branding in the world will not maintain the reputation of the quality of goods, if improperly applied.—Western Star.

Coal Operations on the West Coast.

Coal mining operations both on the Reid areas at South Branch and the St. George's Coal Fields at Robinson's, continue with satisfactory results. At South Branch some seventy men are working, including about ten double and four single teams. A diamond drill is in operation. They are "drifting" at the present and have gone about 150 feet at a depth of about 80 feet below the outcrop of the seam. The seam is now twenty-two and a-half feet wide and dips at an angle of seventy degrees. Five hundred tons of coal have already been conveyed to the railway line a distance of four miles. Next year a spur line will be put in from the main trunk to the workings. At Robinson's over 150 tons of excellent quality coal have been put out, and the vein shows a width of five feet, four inches. They tunnelled 150 feet and expect to tunnel another hundred feet by the end of April. This tunnel is 135 feet from the level where the seam usually the early autumn of the same year, and by himself gave a splendid concert at the College Hall.

While at Whitbourne, the Rev. Dr. Lucas had the misfortune of falling out with the hotel keeper with whom he stayed. At that time Whitbourne was quite a thriving place, and it was the centre of the Reid Co.'s machine shops; and it boasted three neat hotels. The dispute between the good Doctor and the proprietor grew very keen, and it led to a lot of correspondence in our daily papers; and it was very detrimental to any good impressions which the good man may have made. In his correspondence he was very indiscreet; but it seems to be a failure of good people, to display a proper share of discretion. In their goodness, and in their desire to do good to others, they seem to think that they have become the sole proprietors, and the sole possessors, of all the graces; and that if others do not see eye to eye with them they are utterly astray. This trait is largely developed among men of the class of whom we now write; and it is this trait which sometimes makes them Evangelists, instead of ordinary Christians or regular clergy.

This is why Evangelists sometimes fail, and why only such a small number of them really gain the ear of the public. Such men as Moody succeeded, and such men as Torrey were sustained, in their work. Such men as I have written of succeeded, and those who have recently visited our city have succeeded, and they will continue to do so; but there are those who fall short, and whose star is never in the ascendancy. This class of men seldom get the support of a strong committee of management, and their best they only manage to keep afloat. One Billy Sunday, and one Fay B. Mills, or one D. J. Moody, or one Mr. Demarest, is worth twenty such people. But the Sunday's, and the Mills', and the Moody's, and the Hunter's, and the sorry plights into which men get, none are more lamentable, nor more pitiable, nor more humiliating, than that of the man, who thinks he has been called to specially preach the Gospel; but who lack the first principles of such a great work. These men start out to preach a Gospel which saves "people from their sins," but they personally have never been "saved from themselves"; and the wife is not saved from himself, must surely fall in his efforts to save others.

Precautionary Measures

Owing to the presence of "flu" in the community, every precaution will be taken by the Marine and Fisheries Department to prevent an outbreak among the sealing crews during the prosecution of the voyage. The steamer owners have been circularized to co-operate with Dr. Campbell, Port Officer, in the matter, who will make arrangements to cope with any cases that may occur at the icefields. In the interim between sailing day, a thorough inspection of the hospital accommodation on the different ships will be made, medicine chests will be refilled under the direction of the doctor and regulations will be made, which if carried out by the crews in co-operation with the ships' doctors there will be very little possibility of any outbreak of disease on the ships. Also before sailing, every member of the crews will be medically examined, and before being allowed to sign on for the voyage must prove vaccination within a certain period.

Grenfell Assn. Report.

We thank the International Grenfell Association for a copy of their official magazine, "Among the Deep Sea Fishers," for the end of 1918. In this issue appear the reports of the Superintendent, Chairman of the Directors, various committees and Secretary, and a perusal of these show the Association to have accomplished much good in the year just ended. A letter from the late Governor, Sir W. E. Davidson, expressed his thanks to the Seamen's Institute of this city for the hospitality and kindness accorded the many shipwrecked crews that have taken shelter there from time to time, and that the entire country joins in this, we feel sure.

The "Stamp" of Coolness.

"You chaps talk about nerve and keeping cool under fire, but I've seen a finer bit of presence of mind right here in my home town than I saw when I was in the thick of things over there. I was motoring with a friend, and as he was driving through the village he lost control of the car. It dashed into the post office, smashed through the plate glass window and finished up by turning on its side and burying the postmaster. My friend picked himself up and, advancing to the counter, or what was left of it, he said to the girl there as he took three cents out of his pocket, 'A stamp, please.'—Pittsburg Leader.

"Wellington" Damaged.

The S. S. Wellington which was on fire in New York harbour was considerably damaged and her repairs will cost thousands of dollars.

The Wellington was discharging her cargo of tobacco and sage when the fire made its appearance, but some of the crew think that it must have been smouldering for some time, and was only kept down because of lack of air.

The Last Invasion of England.

Yesterday, February 24th is the day that is memorable as being that upon which—in the year 1797—the last invasion was made by an enemy on the shores of Great Britain. Three men-of-war and a lugger manned by flying British colours, to get close enough to the Pembroke shore to land the invaders—six hundred regular troops and about eight hundred convicts and sweepings from the prisons of France. The news of the invasion created great alarm in the country, the number of the army being grossly exaggerated, and the inhabitants of St. David's and the neighbouring towns hastened to arm themselves. The lead was stripped from the roof of the Cathedral and made into bullets, and those villagers who did not possess guns assembled armed with scythes and reaping-hooks. By nightfall all the British forces available—consisting of yeomanry, cavalry, two companies of infantry, with some seamen and artillery, under the command of Lord Cawdor, arrived on the scene. As the French vessels had in the meantime sailed away, leaving the invaders without any means of retreat, it was not surprising that they should offer to lay down their arms peacefully, provided they were promised a safe conduct to Brest. This offer the British refused, and demanded an unconditional surrender, which was immediately given, and the invaders were marched off in detachments, under escort, to various prisons in Pembroke, Carmarthen, and Milford. For this the Pembroke-shire Imperial Yeomanry have the honour "Fishguard" on their appointments and colours.

Interesting Photo.

A gentleman in the city received, by the last mail, an interesting photo of the Manor, Asheville, North Carolina, U.S.A.—a popular health resort. This place is of special interest to Newfoundland, as many of her sons have spent enjoyable times there, and remember it with pleasure. Sir M. P. and Lady Cashin are at the Manor at present, and report their son's condition much improved.
