The Heir of Bayneham —AND— Lady Hutton's Ward.

CHAPTER XXVI.

"Claude, I quite despise of you," said the countess haughtily, "I have explained my motives. Your wife is young, beautiful and untrained in the world's ways; it is your place to warn her, and see that her very innocence and simplicity do not cause her to act imprudently."

Lord Bayneham sighed; he was not quite clear as to what his mother really meant. He saw one thing plainly; she was not actuated by any unkind feeling toward Hilda, but before he had time to reply Barbara entered; her face glowing with exercise, and her hand filled with choice fern leaves.

"See, aunt," she said, touching Lady Bayneham's face with her fresh, red lips, "I have found all these treasures, they will make your collection complete. Good-morning, Claude; you look—well, not one half as bright as the morning."

For the first time she noticed the uneasy expression of both faces.

"I am sorry to hear Hilda is not well this morning," she continued. "Pauline tells me she has not left her room; so I will go and see her."

"If you are not otherwise engaged, Claude," said Lady Bayneham, as Miss Earle quitted the room, "perhaps you would go with me round the shabby. I should like a short walk before the heat of the day comes on."

"I am quite at your service, mother," he replied listlessly, longing to be with Hilda, and to read, for his own satisfaction, the truth in her beautiful eyes.

Lady Bayneham wished some time to elapse before her son saw his wife, resolving to give a change to his thoughts and ideas. Of all fatal deeds that morning she had committed the most fatal.

"Let us go down the Lady's Walk," she said, taking her son's arm. "I like the quiet shade."

They turned down the broad, shady path called the Lady's Walk; tall, branching trees met there overhead, forming a depth of cool shade. The morning air was soft and clear, the birds sang sweetly, the flowers bloomed, and all nature was smiling and gay. As they drew near the end of the walk Lord Bayneham saw something shining and glittering in the long, thick grass.

"What have we here?" he said stooping for the shining prize. He nearly dropped it again, in uncontrollable astonishment. It was his wife's bracelet, the one he had seen upon her arm the night before and had spoken to his mother about; it was the very same; there were the costly pearls and the pale, pure gold, with his initials and those of his wife entwined.

"Hilda's bracelet!" cried Lady Bayneham, in sheer wonder; "why, how did that come here? How careless to drop a valuable piece of jewelry like that! Is it injured?" she continued, for her son did not speak.

"How strange that it should be here!" she said, taking it from his hand. "Why, Claude, Hilda wore this last evening; I saw it on her arm when you bade her good-night. How came it here?"

No reply came from the young earl; but a strange, dark look gathered over his handsome face, marring its beauty with passion.

"She must have been out this morning," said Lady Bayneham; "yet Pauline said she had not quitted her room. Can there have been a robbery, Claude?"

"We must inquire," said Lord Bayneham sternly. "This bracelet was on my wife's arm when I bade her good-night; this morning I find it here; who has dropped it?"

For a moment the mother and son looked steadily at each other, then Lord Bayneham turned to re-enter the house. In the hall they met Lady Hilda's maid—pretty, smiling Pauline—who dropped her most courteous courtesy before the young earl.

"Is Lady Hilda down yet?" asked the countess.

"My lady has been indisposed all the morning," replied the maid; "she has not yet left her room."

"Has she not been in the park?" asked Lady Bayneham quickly.

"My lady is ill," said Pauline again, with a look of astonishment, "and has not yet left her room."

"Hush, mother," said the earl, when the maid had passed on. "Ask no questions from servants. Hilda will explain it, and we shall find no mystery after all. If she is dressed we will go to her room."

"Perhaps you had better go alone," said Lady Bayneham; "if there has been no robbery it is all right. Since Lady Hilda's jewel robbery I have always been nervous."

"I prefer your accompanying me, mother, if you will," said Lord Bayneham; "in your eyes I read a half-doubt of my wife. Come with me, that I may show you how groundless it is."

They went together up the broad staircase and through the corridor to the door of Lady Hilda's room. A sweet, low voice, that expressed both pain and fatigue, bade them enter. Lady Hilda had risen, and was sitting in her little boudoir, the untasted breakfast on a table by her side. Lord Bayneham forgot even his errand when he saw her pale-face and dim eyes.

"Have you been ill, Hilda?" he asked anxiously. "Why did you not send for me?"

"I did not sleep," she replied, looking with some surprise at her visitors, "and my head aches. Do you want me for anything?" she asked, "or is this a morning call?"

She tried to smile, but Lord Bayneham saw her pale lips, tremble; then he remembered his errand.

"We have been puzzled," he replied, with a smile. "I have been for a walk with my mother this morning—quite a good boy, you see. Last night, when I left you, you wore this bracelet; it was fastened on your arm, and this morning I found it in the Lady's Walk, and you have not quitted your room. How came it there, Hilda?"

He held it out as he spoke, and a long, low cry came from her pale lips.

"Look!" cried Lady Bayneham, and Claude, springing forward, caught his wife as she was falling, pale and senseless, to the floor.

"There is your answer," said the dignified countess, as she rang the bell. "Take care, Claude. It seems to me that there is a dark shadow hanging over our house. Why should she faint. There was nothing so alarming in your words."

CHAPTER XXVII.

When Lady Hilda opened her eyes and saw her husband bending over her, a cry of fear and terror escaped her lips. The face that she had never seen stern or angry before was both new; there was no smile on his lips, such as he was wont to greet her with. Anxiety and sorrow, mingled with impatience, darkened his brow. Her illness alarmed him; he could not understand it.

"Did I frighten you, Hilda?" he whispered gently. "How your hands tremble! Surely you are not afraid of me. I have never been angry with you, love; only—I don't understand."

She tried to answer him, but her overwrought nerves gave way, and she wept passionately, bitterly, as one who had no hope. He soothed her with gentle words, such as one uses to a griefed child. Lady Bayneham quitted the room; tears and caresses were not in her line.

"You shall not be teased any more, just now," cried Lord Bayneham. "You have not strength to tell me anything. Lie down again and try to sleep; it grieves me sorely to see that face."

Her passionate weeping was abated; she lay passive and still, listening to his voice with a sick feeling of despair.

Lord Bayneham gave Pauline strict injunctions that her lady was not to be disturbed; he then left her, hoping she would sleep.

His mother anxiously awaited him, and asked hastily, "What is it, Claude? Why was Hilda so frightened?"

"She is very ill," he replied sadly, "and nervous, not frightened, mother. What can she have to fear? I was too abrupt."

North Pole.
SEEKING A NEW LOCATION.

LONDON.—The earth is wobbling on its axis, according to Colonel P. Jensen, the Danish scientist who returned recently from a degree measuring expedition into Greenland. He reports that Greenland is moving westward at the rate of 20 yards a year. This seems to confirm the recent reports of surprising climatic changes at the North Pole. It is now established that there is a periodic shifting of the latitude of the North Pole. The movement is difficult to detect because of the small area of the Pole—about the size of a tennis court. Some authorities say that the poles are gradually changing their positions; and that this alteration to the world's axis will in time mean that regions which are at present ice-bound will become warm and habitable countries.

Mrs. Mary Hocking, Madoc, Ont., writes—
"Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has done me a wonderful lot of good. I suffered from general weakness and was so run down and my heart and nerves were in such bad shape that I would sit down and cry and not know what I was crying about. I also used to have weak spells. Thanks to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, however, I am real well now. I shall always keep a box of the Nerve Food in the house, and recommend them to my friends; they are a wonderful medicine."
(Mr. J. W. Vince, Druggist, of Madoc, Ont., says: "I have sold Mrs. Hocking your Nerve Food, and the medicine has done her much good.")

Inadequate School Accommodation.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir.—In this evening's issue of your paper I see Mr. P. G. Butler announces that he had to refuse thirty-two more children admittance to the educational institution of which he is principal. That statement seems to infer that it is not his first refusal for this school year. I think it would be interesting public matter if we could get a correct statement from every principal of every educational institution in this community regarding refusals to admittance, and also to overcrowding, which is a detriment and great injustice to every teacher and every child of the classroom overcrowded.
Mr. Butler has the courage to give the public some facts regarding conditions prevailing under his notice. Are all principals free to do the same? If they are, as I have afore said, it would be interesting public matter to break the monotony of the dull winter evenings. We are still waiting for a report from the Rotary Club re the knowledge that has been gathered by them from the Survey they made of the city re all the boys of the city. They may not have intended to publish it, but I do not think it would be too much to ask of them to do so, yet I do not expect that if the report is made public that we will get "swelled heads" over it, as it is very evident that conditions which are prevailing below a certain level and which affects both sexes alike, if it ever got the sunlight of publicity would give us as a community anything to boast of.

It is not because that some of our boys are "placed" that we should ignore those who are not, but that seems to be the prevailing sentiment of the average citizen is selfishly inclined and where selfishness exists so also does "dry rot." I venture to say that none of those who have been refused admittance to educational institutions this school year are the offspring of those who compose the various school boards or either of those who blocked the way to general school improvements when the issue was a live one something over two years ago. When the right value of education from a national point of view is considered it will become a public issue, and the various denominations will have no control over it. Until then we will have to dig down deeper and deeper and get very little for our money. I mean, all would have to pay the price as seems now do not have to pay at all, but get all the cream, therefore they do not have to bear the rub. I hope others who are not encased in a shell of indifference will exert their influence with Mr. Butler and strive towards an improvement of the conditions which are prevailing in educational matters in this country and particularly in this city.

Respectfully yours,
GEO. H. TUCKER.

A CHRISTMAS WISH.
I wish that I were Santa Claus. I'd come around to you,
And with my pack upon my back I'd find your chimney fire,
And with a smile upon my face I'd stand behind your bed
And maybe laugh to hear you snore, unmindful of my tread;
Then when I'd found the sock you wear I'd work my magic there,
Supplanting with some joyous thing your every bit of care.

I wouldn't give you neckties gay or fancies made of gold,
I wouldn't give you anything which can be bought and sold,
I'd leave the glass tobacco jars and cash trays all behind,
And give you strength for every task; I'd give you peace of mind.
No trining thing of brass or plate to mark my love I'd give,
But I would leave the richer joys to cheer you while you live.

I'd make you glad to walk the street and glad to greet the day;
If grief lies heavy on your heart I'd lift it all away.
I'd touch your eyes with golden faith so you would wake to see
The beauty of your bitter loss and why it had to be.
And running over all the joys which I have had from you,
You'd wake on Christmas morn to find your fondest dreams come true.

THE CHEMISTRY OF OPTIMISM.

A friend of mine has worked out for himself a formula which he considers shows the part which mental science can play in healing sickness.

This is his formula:

Indigestion equals bad health. Indigestion plus worry over indigestion equals worse health. Indigestion plus courage and optimism equals better health, perhaps ultimately good health.

Substitute for indigestion any body ill and the formula still holds true. My friend picks out indigestion because it is the thing he himself has had to fight.

Give Your Body A Chance.

His philosophy as expressed at more length is this. If anyone has a basic physical trouble he should consult a physician and let that physician do what he can to correct it. That should not be neglected. But neither should one stop there. One should do what one can to aid the physician by removing anything else the body has to fight against so that it may concentrate its force in fighting against the physical ailment.

Optimism and pessimism both have definite chemical effects upon the body.

Optimism, courage, hope, faith increase the body's ability to get rid of disease germs or of diseased conditions.

Pessimism, worry, cowardice, produce poisons in the body and add to the ill health which the body has to combat. It has been definitely demonstrated that when a cat is frightened by a dog while eating her dinner, poisons that arrest digestion are produced by the fear she feels.

Nature wants every man to be well. The external tendency is always towards health.

The body never stops working towards health and the more help you give it, the fewer obstacles you place in its way, the better chance you have of overcoming whatever basic physical defect the body is fighting.

Which Reserves Will You Bring Up?

It is as if the health tendencies were an armed force fighting against another force, the disease tendencies. Courage brings up reserves to the health tendencies. Pessimism brings reserves to the disease tendencies. And it may be just these reserves that will decide the battle.

Doesn't that seem to you like a perfect commonsense philosophy. Can you find any holes in it anywhere? I can't. Then, what's to prevent our adopting it? Nothing that I can see.

as quoted in the press would lead the uninitiated to suspect that our fish exporters were not as zealous in the cultivation of trade in Cuba and other West India markets as they might be. The answer to this is that in every West India market of any consequence they each have a resident agent who is constantly canvassing for orders and in addition it has been their practice for at least a quarter of a century to annually despatch a special representative from the home offices to make a tour of the larger markets, and personally adjust any difficulties in need of adjustment. We think it is probably not too much to say that in no other history in Canada which is engaged in the export trade is there a better sales organization than among the Nova Scotia fish exporters and we are sorry that the Special Commissioner at Havana has thought it wise to broadcast views to the contrary which appeared in the Halifax papers last week.

The hope of the trade is that presently world markets will improve and for the reason that supplies generally are not more than the world might easily assimilate. The difficulty of course is the decreased purchasing ability of so many markets. If these should shortly change for the better there would still be time to clean up present holdings in this market before the opening of a new season. There has been no recent purchases of Lunenburg cargoes, but it is thought that if any one were to offer $6 per quintal he would find a good many takers.—The Maritime Merchant.

Dried Fish.

The outlook is still discouraging. There is no market to-day where you can sell anything at a profit and as a result local exporters are continuing to mark time. The secret of the whole difficulty of course is the condition of things in Europe. (Advocate please take notice—Ed. Tel.) and it does look as though nothing could be quite right elsewhere in our foreign markets until Europe is well started on the road to recovery of her financial strength. In our best market, the West Indies, the industrial conditions are not so bad at present, but our difficulty to do business there lies in the fact that our competitors are willing to sell at prices which our fishermen are unwilling to accept. Norway for instance is offering dried codfish at Havana at figures which are away below the fishermen's idea of value here. Why is she doing it? Because she cannot make her usual sales elsewhere.

The representative at Havana of the Canadian Trade and Commerce Department, who was in Halifax last week, was quoted as saying that our difficulty in finding a market in Havana is our unwillingness to provide a white nape fish. That, however, is not the reason, as every fish exporter knows. The reason is that other countries are flooding that market with supplies at prices which our people are not willing to accept. The question of white nape or black nape, like most questions, has two sides. The white nape would cost approximately a half cent per pound more to produce and in no other of our many West India markets is there any call for it, and even in Havana, for some time past, the premium on it has been only a quarter cent per pound. Something more than whitening the nape of Lunenburg bank fish is necessary to stimulate trade activity for us at Havana at the present. We are credibly informed that Norway is selling her fish in Havana these days at a loss of at least $1.50 per hundred pound case.

Ungenerous Treatment of Marlborough.

The breach between the two Royal sisters—Queen Mary II, and Princess Anne of Denmark, afterwards Queen Anne—ended in a serious explosion. Anne was at Court one evening early in January, 1692, when the Queen attacked her for making an allowance of £1,000 a year to Lady Marlborough from her Parliamentary annuity. The Queen could make no impression on Anne's obstinacy, and her open defiance to her power provoked her so that she persuaded King William to dismiss Marlborough from all the employments he held, believing his disgrace would lead to a separation between the Princess and her objectionable Lady-in-waiting. The blow was struck on the day after the alteration; Marlborough was in waiting on the morning of January 10, as Gentleman of the Bed Chamber. William's manner to him was as usual, but before a couple of hours had elapsed, Lord Nottingham—the Secretary of State—brought him an order from the King to sell at once all the offices that he held, as from that date he was to consider himself dismissed from the army and all public employment, and forbidden the Court. These orders were as insulting as they were peremptory; William had just reason for complaint, but he should have remembered Marlborough's services at the Revolution in Flanders, and in Ireland. Colonel Tollemache was promoted to fill Marlborough's place; Lord Colchester got his troop of Life Guards; Lord George Hamilton got his regiment, the Royal Fusiliers; and Lord Lansdowne his post of Gentleman of the Bed Chamber; but he received a round sum from each of his successors in the offices of which he was deprived. Admiral Russell had the courage to upbraid William for his ungenerous treatment of one who was not only "the foremost English soldier, but who had, in fact, set the crown on his head," but he only incurred the King's displeasure, without benefiting his friend.

WHITE WHISKERS.

My Uncle Hiram's whiskers spread abroad, a goodly sight; when he was young their hue was red, in age a snowy white. Like some old prophet he appeared, or like a Druid sage, and people marveled at his beard, and it was all the rage. But Uncle Hiram wished to seem much younger than he was; he longed to see dark whiskers gleam upon his ancient jaws. He bought a can of whiskers' dye, to make his spruce brown; and now he is the village guy—boys fear him through the town. His beard is bridled green and pink, with yellow streaks between; he's soaked it in the kitchen sink, and rubbed in gasoline. His dignity is gone for keeps, he has become a jest, and in the night my uncle weeps, his groans disturb my rest. I much admire the ancient gent who wears no cheap disguise, who would not give a wooden cent for kalsomine or dyes. The marks of age are not a shame, no blushes should they cause; grow old with grace and play the game, and look like Santa Claus. But painted whiskers and the like are frightful things to spy, and when we meet them on the pike we wring our hands and cry.

"Well, why don't the railroad companies leave the last car off?" asked Larry the Bat.

Rotary Luncheon

ADDRESS BY DR. J. A. ROBINSON.

Rotarian J. W. Morris presided at the Rotary Club luncheon held at the Green Lantern yesterday. In addition to a large attendance of members there were present among the guests Hon. Robert Watson, Messrs. Alex Mitchell of New York, Eric A. Bowring, H. F. Glass, E. Templeton, Harold Knight, and C. Macnulty. The speaker of the day was Dr. J. A. Robinson, whose subject was "The Permanent Marine Disasters Fund." Dr. Robinson in opening his address stated that the first suggestion of establishing a permanent fund came at the time of the "Greenland" disaster. Later on in 1912 a number of vessels were lost and special appeals were made which resulted in the sum of $20,000.00 being realized. One result of the absence of a permanent fund was that some families were given aid whereas others whose bread-winners had lost their lives in wrecks that escaped public notice were not provided for. It was but fair that those depending on seamen and fishermen who paid the price of admiralty in a dory should be entitled to the same relief as others and this thought was the whole genesis of the fund.

In 1914 came the great sealing disasters of the "Newfoundland" and "Southern Cross" when 255 sealers lost their lives, leaving 720 dependents of whom over half were small children. There was an appeal for the charity of the people and it was nobly responded to by the people of the United States as well as the people of this colony. Most generous was the response from the outports as well as from the city.

The fund raised was over $300,000.00 and it was a matter of which the Committee felt justly proud that the total cost of launching the appeal and of handling this large sum was less than thirty-six dollars, or twelve cents for every thousand dollars. These figures could be proved by Hon. Robert Watson, the treasurer of the fund, and indicated the unselfish service of the members of the Committee in charge of the fund. The interest from this fund provided the means for giving an annuity of fifty dollars a year to ninety-five widows. The amount was no doubt small but it represented much to those who had lost their husbands and had children to provide for.

The act of 1913, which has been called "the Fishermen's Insurance Act," is not in fact an insurance act but provides that the dependents of those who lose their lives by accident through drowning or otherwise on the high seas or within the territorial waters of the colony shall be entitled to receive the sum of one hundred dollars. This has been done by the Government through the agency of the Committee. Last year thirty-seven payments were made but in some years the loss of life is much heavier. Assistance in these cases is given only after strict enquiries into facts. The speaker instanced cases to show how much the grant assisted widows who had lost their husbands but pointed out that the grant was for one payment only and that afterwards the Committee had to provide for these families.

He did not come to make an appeal to the members as he was glad to say that the fund was solvent, and that the Committee felt assured that it would meet the requirements of the next few years but the demands on the fund were increasing and he hoped that all would do their part to see that it would be maintained and that those who were dependent upon it would not be deprived of the much needed assistance that it gave them.

In 1921 the fund provided for 26 widows, 3 mothers and 97 children, the total expenditure being about $8700.00 but last year the fund provided for 47 widows, 4 mothers and 198 children and the expenditure increased to $8732.00, an increase of over eighty per cent. on the expenditure of the previous year. These figures showed how the demands on the fund were increasing and it was necessary, therefore, that all who were interested in such a vital matter should do all in their power to help the fund.

No payment were made except after careful enquiries and all were by cheque through local agents of the fund, who gave their services freely. The fund is absolutely non-political, and two things only were enquired into—the loss of the father or son and the need for assistance. Appeals for support had always met with a ready and generous response. In conclusion, Dr. Robinson asked the members to do all they could to further the work of the Committee in charge of the fund and to give it their good-will.

The address received the close attention of those present and at its conclusion Rotarian Morris in extending the thanks of the club to the speaker stated that the address would be an incentive to all who heard it to assist the Committee in its splendid work. The vote of thanks was carried with much applause.—Daily News.

Japanese Shipping Outlook Gloomy.

YOKOMAMA—Although directors of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha, Japan's greatest shipping concern, have declared a fifteen per cent. dividend on the year's operations, the Japanese ocean transportation situation is anything but bright. During the war Japan built up a fleet of merchant ships that sailed every sea and replaced much of the tonnage of the nations more actively engaged in the war. With the signing of the armistice came a swift reaction, demand for tonnage gradually lessened and the profits of the ship operators declined proportionately. Japan has not yet completely emerged from the depression. Efforts are being made by her shipping men to cut down operation costs by bringing about a new coal agreement and reducing wages, but attempts at economy are likely to be offset to a considerable extent by the tendency of the present Japanese government to withhold subsidies, on which the country's shipping has been dependent ever since Japan sought an important place as a sea power. So far the government has not touched the trans-Pacific lines to any appreciable extent, but sweeping reductions in subsidies have been made in respect to companies running ships between Japan and China. So far as the companies are concerned, the subsidy is needed as much as ever, but the government has felt the necessity of cutting down expense as well as the companies. Shipping men are urging the government to assist in financing a new ship construction programme, but so far they have met with little encouragement, and the bill setting forth the proposal has been temporarily shelved.

"Flagship" of "Dry Navy" Disabled.

New York, Dec. 30.—With the sub-chaser Hansen, federal "dry navy" of the port of New York, tied up at the Battery with engines disabled, the Narrows was left unguarded to-night long enough for 15 rum runners to slip into port with nearly $7,000,000 worth of liquor for New Year's, the police department was advised.

IMPORTANT FINANCIAL RESOURCES.

"To a seafaring nation like Japan the freight receipts in marine transportation form most important financial resources and under these circumstances it is the best policy for the promotion of national welfare to make freight receipts a part of the national income," stated Yonejiro, president of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha, in present support of the bill. "The prevailing condition of Japanese ships on the trans-Pacific service is a national humiliation when it is compared with the boats of British, Canadian and American fleets. The construction of superior steamships would not only relieve the shipbuilding industry but the present is very opportune as shipbuilding costs are very low." Mr. Ito recalled that the Nippon Yusen Kaisha had planned to build half a million tons of ships, but the programme was cut to 150,000 tons owing to the depression. Some operators have formed a union to boycott Japanese coal and buy from Manchurian mines, where superior coal is available at less cost. The general level of ship salaries is already low, and further reduction may lead to difficulties in getting men, operators fear. Rates of pay are not much below foreign schedules.

When the marine police heard that the Hansen had been "torpedoed" and the smugglers were heading for port, six patrol boats took up the hunt in the upper bay, flashing their searchlights over the long Brooklyn waterfront, a favorite receiving spot for bootleggers.

The crippling of the Hansen proved a lucky break for bootleggers owning the small blockade-running boats. For weeks the vigilance of the prohibition navy's fleetest vessel had kept the crews of the waiting smuggling fleet on edge and reports reached the city that they even were having difficulty in getting food.

MADE ST. PIERRE MAGISTRATE.
CAPT. GEORGE CHANOT, V.C., RE-CEIVES ISLAND APPOINTMENT.

North Sydney, N.S., Jan. 5.—St. Pierre, Miquelon, the quiet French Islands off the coast of Newfoundland, will have as its magistrate a man worthy of its place in the history of the last fragment of the once great western empire. The appointment is Captain George Chanot, one of the two French soldiers who were awarded the Victoria Cross by the British Army during the great war. In addition he has been decorated with the Croix de Guerre with five palms and four stars, a chevalier of the Legion of Honor of France, commander of the Italian Order of the Crown of Italy, a chevalier of the Belgian Order of Leopold and with seventeen shrapnel bullet and sword wounds by his enemies the Germans. In addition to his magnificent war record M. Chanot has had a brilliant career as an advocate in the department of Lozere, France, but on account of the loss of a lung and the consequent weakness of address, he was obliged to abandon what promised to be an exceptional career.

C.L.B. Band Elect Officers.

POPULAR PRESENTATION MADE.

The annual meeting of the C.L.B. Band Club took place Monday night last in the Armoury. The reports of the Secretary showed that the Club was in a very flourishing condition. The election of officers for 1923 resulted as follows:

Pres.—Staff Sergt. E. V. Vavasour.
Vice-Pres.—Corp. A. J. Wiseman.
Secretary—Lt.-Corp. Jas. Snow.
Treasurer—Sergt. Thos. Kelly.

Following the election of officers a social hour was spent, when a very pleasing presentation was made to the ever popular Bandmaster "Sandy" Morris. The presentation was made by Sergt. Thos. Potties, who on behalf of the Band presented Mr. Morris with a handsome silver Coffee Percolator with electric attachments. Mr. Morris, who was completely taken by surprise, very graciously replied. He said it was always a pleasure to be associated with such a loyal band of co-workers. Congratulatory speeches were made by Staff Sergt. John J. Pippy, Staff Sergt. Feet and other members. After refreshments had been done full justice to, and the singing of "Sandy's A Jolly Good Fellow," and "God Save The King," the party dispersed.

"Flagship" of "Dry Navy" Disabled.

New York, Dec. 30.—With the sub-chaser Hansen, federal "dry navy" of the port of New York, tied up at the Battery with engines disabled, the Narrows was left unguarded to-night long enough for 15 rum runners to slip into port with nearly $7,000,000 worth of liquor for New Year's, the police department was advised.

The 15 little vessels are believed by prohibition officials to have aboard at least 50,000 cases of liquor. They represent only a part of the fleet of rum-laden craft which since a few days before Christmas had been laying outside the three-mile limit, awaiting opportunity to run the gauntlet into the city.

It developed that a mysterious order had been received on the Hansen to have her engines repaired, but the authority for the order could not be learned. The rum chaser then went to her dock and her engines were taken down.

With the Hansen out of the way, Federal Prohibition Zone Chief Appleby to-night endeavoured to press every available small boat into service to head off the blockade runners. He said the Narrows were guarded by police patrols and the coast-guard men also were vigilant.

News that the Hansen was harmless for the night and probably would be until over New Year's spread confusion throughout the co-operating enforcement forces. Urgent calls were sent to the police for patrol boats to reinforce the prohibition navy small craft.

When the marine police heard that the Hansen had been "torpedoed" and the smugglers were heading for port, six patrol boats took up the hunt in the upper bay, flashing their searchlights over the long Brooklyn waterfront, a favorite receiving spot for bootleggers.

Last Cruise of the Alaskan.

CAPTAIN BAILLIE BEFORE SAILING SAID HE DID NOT LIKE THE STEAKS.

VICTORIA, B.C., Jan. 5.—"I don't like it. I wish I were through with her. I wish to God I had never seen her," Captain J. A. Baillie, Victoria, of the hundred-ton steamer Alaskan, uttered these words when he set sail from Victoria a week ago for what proved to be his last cruise. Yesterday, one of the Alaskan's destinations, Barclay Sound. The boat contained a dead seaman and several of the Alaskan's life belts. Distress signals were observed by the light-keeper at Pacheana Point last Tuesday. The Alaskan and her personnel of eight men have been given up as lost.

The Alaskan's history in the last few months has been a chapter of accidents, culminating a week ago in a seventeen shrapnel bullet and sword wounds by his enemies the Germans. In addition to his magnificent war record M. Chanot has had a brilliant career as an advocate in the department of Lozere, France, but on account of the loss of a lung and the consequent weakness of address, he was obliged to abandon what promised to be an exceptional career.

Subsequently M. Chanot was promoted to Sub-Lieutenant, Lieutenant and Captain. Just before the close of the war, when he was in hospital for the fifth time, with three wounds, he was chosen as a member of the delegation to visit the United States. The armistice cancelled the necessity of his visit and he is exceptionally pleased that his appointment has made his deferred visit possible.

Giant Liners Pounded by Seas

WAVES BROKE OVER SHIP'S TOPMASTS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Two giant liners one of them the largest on the ocean—reached quarantine to-day after fights with the worst gales their commanders had seen in years. The Majestic, with several prominent persons aboard, was not actually damaged, but the smaller Samland, of the Red Star, had a starboard lifeboat smashed, several port holes broken and considerable damage to her decks and forward structure.

The Majestic, which was held up outside quarantine most of the night in the blinding storm, slipped in at daybreak. Her officers reported that on December 30, she fought a vicious gale at a speed of five knots per hour. Her normal speed is 24 knots.

Huge Seas Pounded Ship.

The officers said that on the night of the 30th huge waves pounded over the decks of the liner, at times breaking over her topmasts. Wireless equipment had to be constantly repaired, and every passage way to the interior of the ship was battened down. Below decks, however, in the dance hall, the passengers danced most of the night. With the great ship pitching and pounding in the gale, the orchestras played steadily and the passengers refused to go to their staterooms.

Samland Battered.

The Samland had more trouble than the Majestic. She is a much smaller ship and as she dropped her anchor in quarantine she showed plainly the effects of the battle through which she had come. She was 21 days out of Danzig, her officers reported, a bit more than four days overdue. Ice and snow caked her bows. A starboard lifeboat was shattered. Parts of her rail had been carried away. Port holes were broken. For days at a time she barely crept through the waves which threw her around at will.

Her passengers, most of them Germans and Russians, were battened below decks with officers constantly passing among them to assure them of safety. Several times, officers reported, panics were narrowly averted when the ship pitched violently over waves. Five other ships were in quarantine when the snow cleared away to-day. All of them were storm pounded, and all of them were late. None of them, however, reported such terrific battles with the storm as did the Majestic and Samland.

Scholarly Architecture at Wembley.

Triumph of Arts in British Empire Exhibition Buildings.

(From "The Spectator.")
As yet most of us connect the British Empire Exhibition with a post-mark and the future. It seems singularly dim and far away. Most of us have not begun to think even of our work for the summer of nineteen-twenty-four, still less of the possible amusement of a casual evening or two. But if you go down to Wembley, as the present writer did, and see ponds being filled up, engines running here and there, and huge steam diggers spooning the earth up a ton at a time, the time seems short—too short we might think who remember quite well the banal courtesies of the White City or Earl's Court. There is something magnificent about this great work. The scale is gigantic, the effort purposeful, the materials of the composition masculine and impressive. They are the earth of banks and excavations, the steel and concrete of the vast skeleton buildings, the smoke of the numberless little engines, and the moving figures of more than a thousand men. So great is the scale that on a day of late autumn the mists played their part even within the oval "A" without in the periphery of the great Stadium, which is considerably larger than the Coliseum. But, fortunately, this prodigious exertion of the new powers of man has for once been directed. Mr. John W. Simpson and Mr. Maxwell Ayrton, the architects, have neither been overwhelmed by the gigantic labors which a single stroke of the pencil immediately involves, nor have they been made contrarily flighty by it. The public is going for the first time in England, to see an Exhibition which has been designed by scholarly and capable architects instead of by the concoctors of restaurant and cinema facades.

ARCHITECTURAL CHARACTERISTICS.

The chief characteristic of Mr. Ayrton's designs is a clean squariness of outline. The general lay-out of the Exhibition is regular, and most of the buildings are low and flat-roofed with no applied ornament. The chief effects of the design are made, with broad flights of steps and wide arches, while the actual structure of the buildings gives an impression of squareness and mass. In the present writer's opinion, the design for the Stadium, where this severity has been departed from a little, is the least successful of the drawings. Up to the point to which the actual structure has arrived, it is fine and massive. The lower stages give exactly the impression of the rusticated basement courses of some vast baroque fortress, arches with huge keystones, a tunnelled entrance burrowing under the soaring height of the walls, while the broad flights of steps lead up to the wide terrace above. But the domed towers which are to occur in the course of the main facade seem somewhat little out of character. Or is it perhaps only the domed tops and not the towers themselves that are at fault? The horizontal lines used in all the other buildings are singularly satisfying to the eye in their restfulness and serenity, and somehow the domes seem a concession of the usual style. But this is one small point in the midst of an admirable scheme, and if concession to White City standards go no further there will be nothing to complain of. Indeed, so closely knit and graciously conceived is the design that we cannot help feeling a pang at the thought of the many dangers that must beset before the Exhibition is complete.

OF COLONIAL DESIGN.
For example, two of the most prominent sites in the scheme are to be occupied by Australian and Canadian buildings; two vast pavilions will stand flanking the Stadium, and facing the main entrance buildings on the other side of the lake. These buildings of course, will be most properly designed by Canadian and Australian architects, and these two gentlemen will therefore have it in their power to ruin the scheme of the whole lay-out. It should be perfectly easy for them each to design a building which, though admirable as an individual, might prove a disastrous "member" of the Exhibition. Aesthetic good citizenship will be an immensely important factor here. However, in the case of New Zealand the difficulty has proved to be non-existent, and a cordial aesthetic understanding has been reached already. It is not for a moment to be supposed that the other Dominions will show less sensibility. They will certainly show themselves courteous citizens of the world. It will, of course, be possible for the designers of these buildings to show great individuality and skill within the easy limits which considerations for the common good will impose. They will be faced by most interesting problems, no less in actual construction than in designing. We understand that the system upon which a great deal of construction (the reinforced concrete work especially) is being carried out in the British section are new. Here and there they are said to be revolutionary. Mr. E. C. Williams, the young engineer, has shown great resource in meeting several new problems which the work presented. To the layman, indeed, his share of the work is in some ways the most impressive part of his whole undertaking. It is difficult to know which to admire more, the daring energy of some of the great machinery which he controls or the minute intricacy and accuracy of the working drawings. We consider their painstaking delicacy, their laborious exactitude, and remember that upon the thousand or more calculations of strains embodied in the blue print before us will depend the safety of the 125,000 people whom the Stadium will accommodate.

DOWN TO THE LAST DETAIL.

Indeed, it is the trait of persistence in the human creature that the whole affair of the Exhibition chiefly emphasizes at the moment. It seems incredible that somewhere already the details of the mouldings of the finger-plates for the doors of the building, which is to stand where the steam excavator is working, are being drawn. Probably ribbon or the like "trivial delicacy" is being woven to decorate some particular stand in a building whose gaunt skeleton has just begun to show against the sky and the mud. It seems strange that so crude and primitive a thing should ever be brought to the finalities of varnish, light and carpet. The Stadium is to be inaugurated and opened to the public on the occasion of the playing of the football cup-tie final. We imagine that a good many people will be very much interested to see these bare bones which a year later they will see clothed. It will see clothed. It will be interesting to follow the development of an Exhibition planned and directed for once by men of taste. How far will they ultimately succeed to the old evil traditions and to the many vested interests that must be allied with the powers of aesthetic darkness?—B.E. E. News Service.

I Got a Job makin' a pitchur and it was lots of FUN —
JACKIE COOGAN
Brigus Jottings.

On Saturday morning, before the dawn, the Angel of Death visited the house of Mr. Wm. Hiscock and bore away the soul of his daughter Sadie, who was just merging into womanhood. In this one house, as in many, the glorious season of rejoicing has become a time of sorrow with drawn blinds and bowed heads. Santa Claus passes by with a shake of his head, and Araal knocks with a summons not to be denied. Particularly sad is this occurrence, as it is the third time within 2 years that death has come to the home of Mr. Hiscock. First his wife was taken from him; a few months afterwards his son (a young man of 20 years), and now, the final blow, his daughter is snatched away. Two years ago upon the death of her step-mother the young lady who has just died took upon herself and uncomplainingly fulfilled the tasks of mothering five young children, her step-brothers and sisters. Endowed with a very frail physique, the additional care and responsibility of a number of young children was too much for her powers of resistance, and she gradually succumbed to that all-devouring curse of Newfoundland—Consumption. The large and representative attendance at her funeral Sunday was a mute testimony of the esteem in which the young lady was held by the whole community. The funeral oration delivered by the Rev. O. Jackson, pastor of the Methodist Church, was one of the finest the writer has ever heard. The whole sympathy of the community goes out to Mr. Hiscock in his sad bereavement.

The first gun in the political campaign (which and when not stated) was fired Saturday, when a motor boat gaily bedecked with flags arrived from Port de Grave to convey the popular young druggist of Brigus, Mr. J. F. Cantwell on a triumphant tour through this section of his district (in future). The day was windy and cold, but nothing daunted, this martyr of popularity invested himself in numerous coats and stepped manfully aboard the boat to brave the terrors of the crossing from Brigus to Port de Grave. Eye-witnesses in the latter place say that his welcome exceeded all imagination. The Welkin (wherever that is) fairly rang with the cheers of the people all along the route. The fact that Mr. Cantwell will be elected on whatever side he chooses to come is generally conceded by all in general. Mr. Cantwell is single-handed setting out to put down the bug bear of Sectarianism for all time. The voice of the people apparently demand his candidacy and all intending "Premiers" should govern themselves accordingly and take cognizance of this fact. Mr. Cantwell is not altogether unknown in local politics, as his excursions at various times into Harbour Main district are well known to both present and past administrations. It would be well for future executives to note that Mr. Cantwell has stated publicly that he is not for sale (neither he nor his influence) at any price.

The Brigus hockey team are practicing daily for their coming encounter with St. John's hockeyists. Last year they went to St. John's, and St. John's smiled satirically at the aggregation of Baymen who were coming over to play "Hurley" and offered them a team to oppose them, which to say the least of it, got a lot of entertainment and strenuous exercise. This year the team will go prepared to meet the best that St. John's can produce, and hope to, at least, give the fans of St. John's as good an exhibition of hockey as the Nova Scotians which have been imported yearly at much greater expense.

The Christmas parades of both the C. of E. Guild and L.O.A. were held amidst splendid Christmas weather. The picturesque colorings of both parties blended beautifully with the green of the arches and the whole carpet of snow around, meanwhile the bands discoursed march tunes. An entertainment for children was held in the afternoon by the L.O.A., and a dance in the night in the Public Building. Both events were largely attended and were very successful, reminding children and grown ups alike that once a year at least there is a time for relaxation and rejoicing.

Radio Helps Fishermen.

GOTHENBURG.—The radiophone is becoming a serious menace to the safety of the herring off the Swedish coast. The fishermen out at sea soon will be told from the Gothenburg radio central the exact location of the herring schools. This unique service, which will tend to eliminate wasteful waiting on the part of fishermen, and will doubtless mean a considerable increase in the catches of herring, is the newest commercial use to which the wireless telephone will be put in Sweden, according to plans just completed. While merchant vessels have for some time been required by law to carry wireless equipment, the smaller fishing vessels have hitherto operated without systems of communication with the land. They will now receive weather reports, forecasts, and news, as well as the radio tips regarding the appearance of the herring. Plans are on foot to distribute news in Sweden by radio telephone. Experiments are being made from Stockholm as a center.

France Turning Towards Colonial Development.

PARIS—A proper development of her rich colonies would help France fill the gap made by the waste of the general war, is the argument advanced to-day by Albert Sarraut, Minister of Colonies, who is known in the United States because of his work at the Washington disarmament conference. M. Sarraut is the leader in an effort to so equip French colonies that in case of another war, France would not depend on the outside world for her stocks of food, coal, and other supplies. The French colonies in Africa and Asia are slightly larger than the United States, with a total of 56 million inhabitants. Through protectorates and otherwise, France controls about forty per cent of the continent of Africa. According to M. Sarraut, the richest of all French colonies is Indo-China, with a population of 19 million people and an area six times that of the state of Alabama. M. Sarraut has a bill before parliament to bring about the development of France's colonies, their mines, forests, and agriculture, a programme which would require three billion francs. If France could arrange matters with Germany as she would be assured no further invasions, this money would be forthcoming by reductions in the national budget. M. Sarraut declares. The native populations of French colonies are described as well disposed toward their rulers, so much so that President Millerand recently made a trip through the African possessions of the Republic in perfect safety.
