HIGH PARK IN SEPTEMBER.

A Day of Picnics at the West End Pleasure Resorts.

The suburban train of the Grand Trunk was crowded on every outward trip Saturday afternoon with a gay, brightly lit people in picnicking costumes bound for the Humber and High Park.

These two pleasure grounds are becoming more and more popular every year, not only among west end people, but among the residents of the other quarters of the city.

At the present time the weather is so delightful that even football can be indulged in with pleasure. From the highest point of the park there are delightful views of the lake, and the picturesque country through which the Humber winds its ready way.

Sports of all kinds were indulged in on Saturday afternoon by the scores of thousands of football and the more modern baseball lovers of both sexes.

Handsome cashmere at the Bon Marche. No. 2 station was taxed to its utmost to hold the prisoners brought in on Saturday night.

Short cut plishes in all the new shades at the Bon Marche. Cornelius Walford. This gentleman, whom it is claimed is an eminent representative of the insurance interests of the mother country, arrived in this city at the end of his week.

The Bon Marche will keep open every night during the exhibition till 10 p.m., so that strangers visiting the city may have an opportunity of looking through our store and prices.

Going for the Industrial directors. On the temperance stone at Queen's park yesterday afternoon Wm. Burgess spoke in very strong terms against the directors of the Industrial exhibition association for licensing liquor vendors to sell the intoxicating cup on the grounds.

Darwin in Holy Trinity. A young English clergyman, who may have been a delegate to the British association meeting in Montreal, preached in Holy Trinity last night.

Summer dry goods at slaughter prices at the Bon Marche.

THE COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS OF CANADA.

Presentation of an Address and Portrait in Oils to Hugh Blair.

The quarterly meeting of the Commercial Travelers' Association of Canada was held at the rooms of the association on Saturday night.

IS THE GLOBE SOLD.

To Duncan McIntyre—What His Paper Says About It—The Globe's Denial.

The following articles from the Montreal Herald and the Cornwall Freeholder deal with the reported sale of the Toronto Globe to Duncan McIntyre. The Herald is owned by Mr. McIntyre, and the Freeholder is the property of one of his most intimate friends and associates, and coming from these sources the rumor of the sale, notwithstanding the Globe's evasive denial, would appear to have some foundation.

From the Montreal Herald. For some days past rumors have been flying here and in the west, to the effect that Mr. Duncan McIntyre has secured the purchase of the Toronto Globe newspaper by the purchase of it by Mr. Nelson of Edinburgh, brother-in-law of the late George Brown. The Globe in its issue of Wednesday under the heading of 'Tributes to the Globe,' instead of confirming or contradicting this report, takes great pains to tell its readers that 'the Canadian Pacific railway,' a statement which nobody has made, so far as we are aware, in connection with the proposed sale of the Globe, as well as of the public generally, that the reported purchase by Mr. McIntyre, which the Globe does not mention, and which McIntyre has been an active and staunch reformer all his life, and there is nothing unlikely in his making an effort to rescue the old organ of his party from the clutches of a ring of speculators and wreckers, and to restore it to the position which it held in the days when George Brown and John A. Macdonald had the confidence and support of Alexander Mackenzie.

The Globe winds up its evasive denial of the purchase of the Globe by Mr. McIntyre, and declares its independence, which very few will believe. The Globe, as everybody knows, has for the last few years been in the hands of a ring of speculators and wreckers, and to restore it to the position which it held in the days when George Brown and John A. Macdonald had the confidence and support of Alexander Mackenzie.
