PUT THEM OUT OF THEIR MISERY

After some hesitation the Globe has come out with an article giving reasons why the Ontario government should be supported in Muskoka and Sault Ste. Marie—North Renfrew, for some reason, is not mentioned. The title is "Strength in Premier Ross," and that is probably the best line, or rather the only line that is left to the friends of the administration. If the article is a signal of distress rather than a war-cry, that is the fault of circumstances. The government is beyond medical aid and it would be a more humane act to put it out of its misery than to pump oxygen into its lungs. About a year ago it threw out hints in the direction of a coalition. As these came to nothing, it made last winter the same appeal that it is making today—that it should be strengthened in the by-elections then pending, so that the ministers would have time and energy to attend to their public duties, without being worried by the fear of a defeat in the legislature. We must have some strong government, said the Globe; the parties will not have a coalition government; Mr. Whitney cannot give us a strong government; the only recourse is to "strengthen Premier Ross." This had a reasonable appeal, as the province had to be governed in some way; and shortly afterwards the government was able to announce that it had now "the three Norths," and had also obtained the allegiance of Mr. Gagey. Mr. Gagey had originally been elected as a wicked Tory, but had seen the light, and his heart had been melted by the spectacle of Mr. Ross and his colleagues "building up Ontario."

By electing government members in "the three Norths" the people did their best to "strengthen the government," but the government showed no indications of renewed vigor. There was a lot of curious dickerings in North York, not at all indicative of strength. North Renfrew was kept quiet, as it is to be expected that "a vote to strengthen the hands of the Premier will be a patriotic vote, and he who casts it will in future years recall his action with pride." But for some reason the government will not allow North Renfrew to take part in the patriotic work of strengthening the government. Then Gagey, to put mildly, proved to be a source of anxiety and discomfort rather than of strength. We will not go over the incidents of a famous political trial, but hurry on to the report of Chancellor Boyd and Chief Justice Falconbridge, which was loudly proclaimed as something that would "strengthen Premier Ross." Still, the government did not seem confident of its strength. The by-elections were delayed for several months, and even to-day the electors of North Renfrew are not allowed to take part in strengthening the government.

In the meantime the newspapers favoring the government have been sounding anything but a confident note. The Globe has told us that the cancer of corruption has eaten into the body politic; the Kingston Whig has demanded a reform of the civil service; the Huron Signal protested against the trickery practiced in Centre Bruce; the Huron Expositor said that the course of the government illustrated the saying that "whom the gods would destroy, they first make mad."

Mr. Smith, who says this last attempt to "strengthen Premier Ross" will be any more successful than the earlier ones, North Renfrew is abandoned, so that even the winning of Muskoka and Sault Ste. Marie would leave the government no better off than before. The province is thereby, third of the present government, and wants a change. It may want a Whig government; it may want a non-party government; in any case the right course to pursue is to "assist nature," as the physicians say, to allow public opinion to work its way, whatever may become of the politicians. There is no use in prolonging the agony of a dying government. The elements of a strong government must be in existence, and the sooner the people grapple with the question of forming such a government, the better for all concerned.

A BAD TIME TO NEGOTIATE

The Montreal Street Railway Co. is negotiating with the City of Montreal for a fifty years' extension of its franchise. Inducements have been offered by the company to secure at this stage of a franchise which has still fifteen years to run a firmer grip on a lucrative monopoly. The company offers to pave a portion of the streets, to remove snow in winter and sprinkle the streets in summer, and sell ten tickets for a quarter during the hours of the day when the cars are used by workmen. This offering the City Council rejected, demanding instead an unlimited percentage of fare and an increase in the percentage of the gross earnings.

Why the City Council of Montreal should consider a fifty years' extension of the Street Railway franchise on any terms is an enigma. The attempt of the company to secure an extension

now when the 30 years' franchise conferred upon it lacks nineteen years of expiration was sufficient to excite suspicion. The franchise is bringing enormous profits now and by the time the thirty years' franchise expires the returns may bear a still more generous proportion to the cost of operation. Scientific developments promise a rapid reduction in the cost of operating electric railways. The storage battery is being perfected, and it may be that by the time the Montreal Street Railway franchise expires one cent fares will earn good dividends on the investment. In nineteen years Montreal will have the option of renewing an agreement with its Street Railway according to the new conditions of operating the railway as a municipal concern. Many municipalities own and operate their electric railways to the great advantage of the people. The principle is not in the experimental stage. Its virtues have been proved, but the World believes that in less than twenty years public ownership will have made such headway that no municipality will think of wantonly surrendering public utilities into the hands of corporations. The Montreal Street Railway is not blind to the strength of this movement, and it is trying to head off municipal ownership in Montreal by negotiating for a fifty years' extension of its franchise now when its present franchise has nineteen years to run. In negotiating with the Street Railway Co. the Montreal City Council cannot afford to ignore the lesson that the City of Glasgow has taught the world. Last year the Glasgow Street Railway, owned and operated by the municipality, made a net profit of $500,000 after making allowance for depreciation and renewals, paying over a considerable sum to the common good and providing for the sinking fund. Early in November the annual municipal election will take place in that city, the leading question at issue being a proposal to introduce a universal two-cent fare. When a city like Glasgow proves its ability to operate its street railway with such results Montreal may well hesitate to extend its street railway franchise on any terms that the company may offer.

DISRAELI'S DISCOVERY

Little more than a generation ago a Conservative workman was about as rare in Great Britain as a socialist in winter. Till 1898 he possessed no vote and therefore he was a reformer and a Liberal. It was part of the creed of the old Tories that to give working men votes was to commit political suicide. Therefore they fought with dogged desperation to stave off the evil day. Amid the dust and din of Reform demonstrations, stump platforms and the like they stood with all the courage of despair. But the astute and respectable Jew who had annexed Peel's place because there was none other to dispute it with him was all the while silently hoodwinking and educating the stolid phalanx of squires who formed the backbone of his party. He it was who first discovered the shadow of the coming Conservative workman. And his discovery was strong enough to weld his widowed followers into donning the stolen garments of the wrangling Whigs who he had caught bathing, and even to add to these sundry novel and advanced appendages. It may have been a leap in the dark, but it was also a leap out of the dark and Disraeli's faith was justified by the discovery that even among the masses are born either little Liberals or little Conservatives. Also there was both point and truth in the bit of parchment that described the only unannounced portion of the Tory Reform Bill as consisting of the first word "whereas" it did not prevent a large part of the credit for the extension of the franchise from ascription to Benjamin Disraeli. So well did that artful doggerel play, his crafty second act was played by the uncondemnable blunders and consequent ill-will committed and aroused by the first Gladstone administration of 1869 that at the election of 1874 the Conservative party secured for the first time in years a sufficient and reliable majority. The Conservative workman had been found to be not a myth, but a very substantial fact, and he would indeed, with a vote he well knew how to use. It was rather a rude shock to the Liberal jokers, who had found in Disraeli's wonderful discovery a whetstone for their slender equipment of wit. They had to console themselves with the flattering unctious that, after all, these new intruders on the political field were numerous enough to be considered as a part of the existing party. Chamberlain's prime concern now is how he stands with the workmen. Their support is essential to his success. He would be a rash man who would accept the vote of trades union delegates as in any sense a final indication of the views of the mass of workmen on the fiscal issue. During the last twenty years there has been a marked change in the attitude of the working classes in Britain on this and kindred questions. Workmen, believers in protection, are plentiful everywhere, and are quite alive to the fact that a tariff involves the imposition of a duty on grain and food products generally. They have learned that the standard of living in strongly protectionist nations, like the United States, is higher than it is in the United Kingdom. They see on every side some markets flooded with the cheap overflow of protected labor, while they themselves suffer from lack of employment. That they have been largely influenced by these patent considerations is evident from the many working class constituencies which returned Conservative members of parliament often of a strong protectionist variety. Here, too, Mr. Chamberlain's unrivalled faculty of political diagnosis has stood him in good stead. The most recent advice all go to indicate that his propaganda is eliciting a quite extraordinary degree of popular enthusiasm. It looks like enough to be true when decorous members of the House of Peers are shrieking hysterically and displaying a fluency in the use of aristocratic Billingsgate truly appalling. When the very structures that looked as solid as the earth itself are cracking and swaying at the sound of the Birmingham trumpets, some stamping and tearing of hair is natural and satisfactory also to those who want the ground cleared and devoted to more profitable purposes.

JUDICIAL OR DIPLOMATIC.

If the arbitrators in the Alaskan boundary case concede the entire contentment of the United States, this country will not easily repeat the conclusion that diplomacy was a factor in the award. Lord Alverstone may have a fine judicial mind. It is questionable if a fine judicial mind is in its element in the determination of an acute international issue. If Lord Alverstone could exercise his judicial mind without regard to any other consideration save the purely judicial aspect of the Alaskan boundary question, his decision would not be open to doubt. Perhaps His Lordship has given such a decision. Apprehension is as to the belief prevalent in British diplomatic circles that the friendship of the United States must be maintained at any cost, and that the entire area of disputed territory is not worth the risk of impairing that friendship. The general sentiment of Great Britain shares these views of British diplomats. The London Times reflects this sentiment when it speaks of the irritation which the new British Ambassador to Washington would have to face, both in Canada and the United States, if the Alaskan tribunal broke up with a disagreement. In other words, it would be better that Canada's just claims in Alaska should be sacrificed rather than subject an ambassador at Washington to irritation arising out of failure to placantly give the United States everything they asked for.

The danger is that Lord Alverstone has not been able to entirely free himself from the contagion of this sentiment, and that consciously or unconsciously he played the diplomat as well as the judge in determining the issue at stake in the Alaskan boundary question. His Lordship might almost be forgiven for forgetting that as a judicial tribunal which included such conformed judges as Elihu H. Root, Senator Turner and Senator Lodge. The United States opposed three diplomats to Britain's three eminent jurists. The diplomats went into the conference with their minds made up. The eminent jurists entered the conference with their minds open. The three diplomats were firm in their resolve that not a single inch of the territory in dispute should be handed over to Canada. The United States could not lose, and it was possible for them to win by securing the support of any one of the British arbitrators. It will be a matter for regret if Lord Alverstone has been the determining factor in confirming the contentions of the United States. Canada would prefer that as B. Aylesworth, K.C., in whom she has quite a much confidence as in Lord Alverstone, has also concurred in the judgment which, according to cable reports, gives the United States a sweeping victory.

Hon. Clifford Sifton prepared such a masterly case for Canada in the Alaskan boundary case that the cable forecasts merely leave us in doubt as to whether the capital of British Columbia shall henceforth be written Victoria, B.C., or Victoria, U.S.A. Mr. Robert Jaffray in the senate might be very useful in blocking Crown's Nest Pass deals, and he could count on the energetic support of the Globe. The exact number of favors which R. Gagey has opened is not recorded, but "more than enough," says Hon. J. R. Stratton. Now that Mr. Spence is planning to take over the street railway nineteen years hence, he might also plan to make the street railway company heat its cars this winter. Oh, yes, Mr. Ross will fight in North Renfrew as soon as he sees which way the cat jumps in Muskoka and the Soo. The Alaskan Arbitration Commission has fixed the boundary line, and it now remains for Seymour Gourley, M.P., to fix bayonets.

MUNICIPAL MATTERS.

Council yesterday afternoon wasted more than half an hour talking about the sort of a committee to which Mr. Spence's motion for a Street Railway Purchase Fund could most happily and appropriately be referred. The committee rather than the proposition itself. The Mayor made a ruling on a point of procedure, and every alderman round the room discussed the shortcomings of His Worship's ruling, which actually seemed to place the Mayor's resolution before the council. For had the motion itself been discussed the unpleasant subject of taxes could not have been avoided. Mr. Spence's resolution looks to the creation of a fund for purchasing the Toronto Railway Company, as well as an "adequate system of public parks, gardens and playgrounds." One year's accumulation during the next eighteen years the City's receipts from the trolley franchise. This scheme takes a great many things for granted. In the first place it supposes that the Council of next year could withdraw a sum of money from the treasury for investment, and a next step, which would not be interfered with by succeeding councils, but would be completely nullified if it were cumulated. The usual trouble with the Council at the end of any year's operations is an overdraft in the bank, or a surplus in the treasury. One year's Council could not bind its successors, except perhaps through the intervention of the legislature, by a new experiment in municipal law.

A glance at the financial side of the idea may be enlightening. Last year the city received from the Street Railway Company the sum of $150,000, or roughly speaking, one mill of the nineteen mills subtracted in taxes from the taxpayer's dollar. Of course, the property owner pays more than nineteen mills. Taking into account local improvement charges, he discharges some twenty-three mills and more of his dollar. The one mill more, however, if the property owner's receipts were funded next year, would have to be immediately made up in increased taxes, and the property owner might not like that. Two or three years hence he would be apt to like the idea less. The amount withdrawn from the treasury would increase year by year. Next year $100,000 in street railway bonds fall in, and the property owner would receive 50 cents in debt charges some $50,000. That and the certain increase in street railway earnings would mean, therefore, that in the next year the property owner would be funded would pass the quarter of a million mark and come nearer to two mills on the dollar than the one.

The present generation of Toronto

taxpayers are pretty heavily burdened. The proposal that they shall tax themselves two mills additional even for such a commendable purpose requires no illustration. The Council, however, is beginning to experience the balm of the property. The city is growing, building is active, vacant spaces are filling up. If a wise civic policy could be assured, this property, which is the natural inheritance of the next generation in a city upon which taxes have heretofore been heavily laid, should be able to provide for the taxing over of the street railway franchise.

Ald. Spence's resolution calls for the investment of the funded street railway receipts in the purchasing of park property as the City Council "direct." The city would not derive any revenue from parks. At the end of the year the City Council would not be an accumulation equal to the needs of the case. Everything is in favor of the citizen of the next generation. He may in all probability be allowed to control the bodies that send his taxes. He will not be the case of the Toronto taxpayer to-day. His money is spent by the School Board, the Police Board, the Board of Health, all uncontrollable bodies. The new Board of Education is likewise uncontrollable. It is proposed to make the Street Railway surplus another uncontrollable thing. Such is the tyranny of precedent that the taxpayer should be allowed to control something.

It transpires that the College-street

site recommended by the secret committee on the new Carnegie Library is a piece of the Cosby lot. The whole block is in possession of Mr. Cosby, and the house at $15,000, or a total of $22,100. The piece proposed to be sold is about half the ground, while the buildings, are excluded. The minimum price is $55,000. Without touching on the fact that the site is a piece of the Cosby lot, it is proposed to be turned down in Council because the locality is entirely unsuitable for a library, or any other building.

Ald. Ward was indignantly

indignant yesterday, because some newspaper had represented him as receiving cash from the city. He said that he had merely drawn his indemnity as a member of Council. WOULD BENEFIT CANADA. Editor World: Is Canada indifferent to the present fiscal agitation in England? My own opinion is that Canadians are not only intensely interested, but the great majority are heartily in accord with Mr. Chamberlain's policy. Canada more than any other part of the empire would benefit in increased trade and commerce by the adoption of an imperial tariff against the highly protected foreign countries who every year are gaining a stronger foothold in the Canadian market. The impetus to colonial agriculture would soon create an imperial supply of goods, food, and raw materials, and in place of the comparatively small portion of her import trade from the United Kingdom, the Dominion would enjoy the bulk of it. The next few months will witness the strongest attack on the English steel and iron trade by the United States Steel Trust. The immense plants have caught up the home demand and are turning down their works, but if the proposed Chamberlain tariff were adopted, the competition of British steel in Canada, factories would spring into being all over the Dominion, and the Canadian artisan would benefit by the increased activity of the Canadian farmer. Already sites are being obtained in Ontario, as well as in the Dominion. And yet we find the English trade press returning to Mr. Chamberlain, "The colonies are not enthusiastic." Surely it "up the Canadian speculator to cheer on the struggling hero who almost alone is fighting the great-est battle of the hour, and who is fighting against the prejudice and shortsighted folly that, like a drowning man, would clutch at any straw, and who is fighting to reason. We should do more than cheer. We should agitate the issue in town and country, in parliament, and out of parliament, in session and out of session, in councils, trades and societies, and in the press. We should support the solitary flag of the Dominion of resolutions of confidence and approval. He asks for nothing more than that we should stand by him, and only helping the cause of the empire, he loves better than office, but only helping themselves and the Dominion." F. A. HILTON. SAULT STE. MARIE AND MUSKOKA. Editor World: The arguments advanced by the government organ that Muskoka and Sault Ste. Marie should return supporters of the government in the by-elections on the 27th inst., shows the weakness of the man who appears to be the Dominion's chief official officer. The Premier is not the whole government, and there is no certainty that the whole cabinet will be so united as to give him a free hand, even if these two constituencies return supporters of the present administration. The appeal of these ridings is as if a jury were appealed to and urged to compound a felony and let a criminal go free because, in so doing, he would be of great service to his fellow man. The electors of Muskoka and Sault Ste. Marie are organ to hoodwink them or draw the wool over their eyes by such a whining appeal as this is the day's issue. Hugh A. Brennan, Galt, Oct. 12, 1903.

TO PROMOTE SINGLE TAX.

The first issue of The Canadian Single Taxer appeared yesterday, and it is a creditable little eight-page affair, single tax movement has made such an advance in Canada generally, and in Toronto particularly, that the time has come when a local single tax paper is essential to maintain the ground we have already won. It will be the official organ of the Canadian single taxers. Eat What You Like—Give the digestive organs some work to do. POLITICAL NOTES.

The visit of Premier Ross to Ottawa has revived the rumor that he will soon quit Ontario politics and seek the federal arena. It is known that Mr. Ross' entry into federal politics was to have followed the last provincial election, but the uncertain result of the battle delayed the official announcement. It was hoped that he would have emerged from the fray with a following strong enough to have warranted his withdrawing and leaving the generalship to another. He had his eye on Mr. Stratton. But he could not quit till he had set his colleagues on firm ground. So far, however, the soil has been of the shifting kind. Mr. Ross would like to get away from the strife. He is very anxious for the strife to cease, and the Globe rounds the word that the best way for him to do it is to give Premier Ross the Soo and Muskoka. Then North Renfrew could be dismissed as a non-entity, and it would be all over in 1904. Mr. Ross finds much favor around the Parliament Buildings, and it will probably carry.

A resident of Stevensville, in Well-

Land county, said yesterday that the rupture between the representatives of the neighboring ridings of Welland and Monck would probably result in a permanent disagreement. J. P. Gross, M.L.A., who was in the city with Richard Harcourt, and the Minister of Education entertains a lively objection when the members of the Welland party are in the city. The same is used for ridings, and when there is a rupture between the two, he in a measure represents both the Welland and Monck. But the two Townships of Monck, Painswick and Newboro, were never intended to be greater than the whole of Welland county when the rupture came to be distributed. When Mr. Morley died there was quite a scramble for the registry office. Mr. Cruikshank, of Fort Erie, J. H. Thomson of Ridgeway, and J. C. Crowe of Crowland were the principal applicants. Mr. Ross and the former, Thomas and Cruikshank, and Mr. Harcourt wanted Crowe. Mr. Ross got intensely interested when he learned that the Minister of Education had practically clinched for Crowe, and is said to have assured his friends that he would see that Mr. Crowe would have no say. But Crowe got it and is there yet. This was deep humiliation. The rupture between the two ridings was a severe blow.

Editor World: Several weeks ago I had the pleasure of reading an interesting article in The World, the gist of which advocated the possibility of establishing a shipping port on the Labrador coast, to be connected by a railway with the interior of Canada, thereby shortening the ocean trip to Europe by several days. Although schemes now may appear visionary, there is no telling in this age what may be accomplished. At all events, it is a subject which should be taken up to take a more expansive view of the same subject, but in a somewhat different direction. The Liberal party should not sacrifice his personal independence one hair's breadth. Others who spoke of the subject were Mr. E. B. Smith, H. Hickerson, E. B. Lester, Dr. J. E. Elliott, D. B. Resolutions were also passed endorsing the policy of the Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, and the preferential trade with the colonies. Mr. Justice Teetzel, presided at the trial of J. WHY DO LOBSTERS TURN RED?

London, Oct. 12.—The question is often asked, says The Lancet, without a satisfactory answer being supplied, why do lobsters turn red when boiled and prawns turn red on boiling? One reason may be that the black pigment in a lobster is a compound in the lower state of oxidation, which boiling oxidizes to the higher state, red human hair is said to owe its brilliancy to iron being in the oxidized state, and by means of reducing agents, such as pyrogallol acid or hydroquinone, the color may be restored. In short, oxygen is a great painter, and probably accounts for the beautiful autumn tints of plant life.

CIGARET AS A BRIBE.

Boys Given Packets for Going to Sunday School.

London, Oct. 12.—It is scarcely conceivable that in these days, when the habit of cigaret smoking among children has so grown that it has to be checked by penal acts in some states of the United States, cigarettes should be held out as an inducement for boys to attend Sunday school. Such, however, is the case at All Saints' Sunday School, Warrington, in Somerset, the vicar of which is the Rev. R. Lowman Lang. The section of the school in which the practice is in vogue is the Bible class, where a number of lads are taught by a Mr. Wilmut under the supervision of the vicar. Some Sundays ago each of the boys was presented with a strong cigar and they were promised that if they attended regularly, and induced others to come, they would all be presented with cigars. The attendance the following Sunday increased nearly a hundred per cent, and the teacher came provided with a large package containing more than 100 cigars. Each boy receiving a packet of ten or a dozen. The cigars were handed round in the presence of the vicar, the Bible class leader explaining that they were given to the boys as an inducement to attend the school. Further promises were made that all new boys attending the class would also be presented with cigars. It is held that the boys were induced yesterday, in relating the incident that the cigar given him on a previous Sunday made him feel very ill after he had smoked it. Both the cigars and the money were handed to the boys during the service, when the vicar was smoking. Nearly all the lads were altogether too young to be encouraged in the habit. The parents of the boys were not consulted in the matter.

KELLEY THE BOODLER OBJECT OF NEW TREATY

Supplemental Clause to Be Negotiated to Be Retroactive in Character.

Much interest in the efforts of the United States authorities to supplement the extradition treaty with Great Britain is manifested in Toronto. Prosecuting Attorney Folk of St. Louis is now in Washington urging immediate action, and makes no secret of the fact that this move is directed toward apprehending in Canada, Kelley, the fugitive agent of the Baking Powder Trust, indicted in Missouri for bribery.

Finally Grew Cautious.

Not wholly unmindful of this aspect of the case, Kelley retained a Toronto legal firm before disappearing from Ontario. A firm of Toronto detectives have been employed since to keep in touch with Kelley and arrest him as soon as the extradition law is changed to include his case.

Washington Press Comment.

A dispatch, discussing this phase, says: "The new treaty with Great Britain is desired so that 'Baking Powder' Kelley can be brought back from Canada. The treaty with France is desired so to extradite Ellis Washburn, Mr. Folk thrusts out the question as to whether the extradition treaties, when once secured, will prove retroactive in character."

Many Difficulties Remain.

"But, after all, it resulted by our government officials that when it comes to a matter of actual extradition it is impossible to determine just how the country is to be interested in constraining the treaties. The requests for extradition must be made through diplomatic channels, and they are answered through the same channels. Each case is passed upon very much on its own merits, and the workings of the treaty are made to accord with the laws of the country applying them."
