Socialists Use Obstructive Tactics, But Government Given Overwhelming Support

taking of a census of the 1918 conscripts. The debate was marked by obstructive tactics by the Socialists, the intervention of Premier Briand and finally by a emand for a secret session. The debate became tumultous at times. Deputy Pierre Brizon, a Socialist, was finally deprived of the use of the floor for intemparate language. The chamber's strong confidence in the govern shown by a vote of 450 to 38.

Caught Cold While Walking in Park with King of Bavaria—The End Came Suddenly

Paris, Nov. 22—The death of Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria was caused by a cold which the aged monarch caught while walking in Schoenbrunn Park ten days ago with the King of Bavaria, according to a Zurich despatch to the Parisien. The cold despatch to the Parisien and of the right lung. When it was realized yesterday that the emperor's condition was serious, his daughter, Archduchess Marie Valerie and his nephews, the Archduke Charles Francis, heir apparent, and Joseph Frederick, were summoned to the bedside.

Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria-Hungary is Dead

Aged Monarch Passes Away After Long Life of Sorrow and Suffering—Archduke Charles Francis Succeeds

Francis Joseph, Emperor of Austria-Hungary, died last night at nine o'clock at Schoenbrun Castle. The first intimation that his health was failing was given on November 12 and later it was announced that the heir apparent would be associated with him in the government of the country on December 2.

Emperor Francis Joseph I, was born on Aug. 18, 1830, succeeded to the throne as Emperor of Austria, Dec. 2, 1848, when he was little more than eighteen years of age, and was crowned King of Hungary on June 8, 1867. He was thus eighty-six years of age and had reigned nearly sixty-eight years. He has been oftimes referred to as the "man of sorrow." His only son, the hope of the Hapsburgs, committed suicide. He had fallen in love with a beautiful actress and a mysterious death followed. His army. The writer says that efficiency methods have been adopted by almost every important British manufacturer. There has been in effect an industrial revolution in Great Britain. The old ways will never be brought back. That has been found necessary and desirable in war time will be found equally necessary when the war is over. The manufacturing methods that have been found to get the best results with guns and shells will be found to be applicable to motor cars and table cutlery.

A Supremacy Tossed Away. England has at last wakened up. Mr.

of British arts and crafts. These they harnessed to cheap labor, and, backed by the German government, presently were able to make goods in German, more cheaply than they could be made in England. Death of Free Trade.

Joined to her Free Trade idols Britain saw no peril in this development. Thanks to her shipping industry, she was able to make great jrofits by importing German articles and re-exporting them in her own ships. Some of her Mad Mullahs of Free Trade insisted that Germany was gradually ruining herself by making goods so cheap, and it was not until the war came that the people of England realized the position. Mr. Marcosson says, however, that the awakening was a thorough one. British men and women showed that they had not lost to old qualities which a gen ration ago had made Britain the workshop of the world. He thinks that there is a possibility that Britain will go to the other extreme and will disregard altogether the warnings of her economists, who tell her that she cannot make a profit by banning Germany and refusing to trade with her, which recalls the solemn prediction of Norman Angell that there would never be a great war because it would not pay the belligerents.

British Plantation Rubber Is Saving Canada Millions

Low Prices of Rubbers and Overshoes Due to Britain's Control of Situation

Here in Canada many of us have fallen into the truly Anglo-Saxon habit of considering the "Mother of Parliaments" slow and a bit behind the times. The present price of rubber, when its cause is revealed, affords one of the many proofs that such an opinion is away off the mark.

Thanks to great rubber plantations established, in the face of criticism and ridicule, many years before in her tropical Dominions, Great Britain at the outbreak of the war held a firm and tightening grip on the world's supply of raw rubber—a grip reinforced by her dominating navy. From 60% in 1914, the production of these plantations has grown this year to 75% of the whole world's output, leaving only about half the requirements of the United States alone to come from all other sources.

The result has been that the needs of the Allies, enormous though they are, have been plentifully supplied, while Germany has been reduced to registered mails and the "Deutschland" in desperate attempts to mitigate her rubber famine. Neutrals have been allowed all the rubber they want, at prices prevent any of it from reaching the enemy, while Canada and other parts of the Empire have an abundant supply at equally favorable Government-regulated prices. actually lower than before the war, so long as they

In this foresight and generosity of the British Government lies the reason why rubber alone, of all the great staples, has not gone up in price, why rubbers and overshoes, in spite of increased cost of fabric, chemicals and labor, are as inexpensive as ever, while shoes are costing several dollars a pair more. Wearing rubbers or overshoes through this winter to protect these expensive shoes is more than practical thrift—it is grateful patriotism, for in thus saving leather we make it easier for the Government to secure the absolutely necessary supplies of this alarmingly scarce material for our soldiers.

Both Thrift and Patriotism Point to Rubbers!

FIREMEN GIVE THRILLING PAGEANT

A few weeks ago the firemen of St. Louis turned actors and, under the personal direction of their fire chief, presented an unusual production which the chief had written. The pageant, which was witnessed by 40,000 persons, showed the firemen in several thrilling episodes and gave the audience a vivid idea of the manner in which the various kinds of and gave the audience a vivid idea of the manner in which the various kinds of fire apparatus are used in real fires. About $6,000 was spent in laying out what appeared to be a city street, in an abandoned motordrome where the spectacle was presented. The production opened with drills by the "Fire Zouaves," a company of firemen all of the same height, and by fire horses. There was also an exhibition of ladder climbing and the proper handling of ropes and life nets.

The thread of a love story ran through the scenes and furnished special inter-est in spectacular rescues. One fireman, cut off from escape in a burning struc-ture, made a daring leap for his life. The burning of the stage buildings was made more real by the use of especially designed blowtorches, by means of which men behind the scenes occasionally filled the windows with flames. Interesting illustrations of the pageant appear in the December Popular Mechanics Maga-

enterprise yielding handsome profits. For this woman's unusual line of trade a force of trained collectors, scattered over all parts of the world, is engaged in gathering no fewer than 700,000 specimens a year. She was first interested in this work through the work of her husband, who was a Harvard entomologist. Now instead of these exquisite insects being mounted for scientific collections only, they are used chiefly for decorative purposes in a score of different ways by jewelers, florists, modistes, and others.—

Capt. Frederic C. Curry of Brockville writes interestingly in the Canadian Forestry Journal of the work of the Canadian wood-cutters in France. During April and May the writer was attached to the engineers as officer in charge of a party of soldiers engaged, as part of the second army of wood-cutters, in cutting timber for the trenches in one of the second army of wood-cutters, in cutting timber for the trenches in one of the fring line. Here he had an opportunity of seeing some of the steps taken toward preserving one of the most valuable of France's national assets. Forestry was not a subject that the writer had ever given much consideration to, but the striking difference between the care taken by the French and our criminal carelessness in this respect, especially in Northern Ontario, was enough to impress the most indifferent of citizens. He writes:

The forest itself consisted of about seven square miles, and was divisied into six "series," each series being further in the forest itself consisted of about seven square miles, and was divisied into six "series," each series being further in the forest itself consisted of about seven square miles, and was divisied into six "series," each series being further in the forest itself consisted of about seven square miles, and was divisied into six "series," each series being further in the forest itself consisted of about seven square miles, and was divisied into six "series," each series being further in the forest itself consisted of about seven square miles, and was divisied into six "series," each series being further in the forest itself consisted of about seven square miles, and was divisied into six "series," each series being further in the forest registry, and the hugher the purchase with the purchase the purchase in our case, the British government.

gates, a stin penaity being awarded for leaving the gate open. A small variety of deer was also plentiful, but the writer did not see any at close enough range to identify. They were not much larger than a goat and about the same color as our own deer. One only saw them as a patch moving across the avenues of the trees in the distance. Engineers at Work

Our work in the forest consisted of felling small trees, mostly oaks and ashes, up to nine inches across the butt, for use in the trenches as dug-out props, etc. Smaller stakes were also cut for use in wire entanglements and in revetting the sandbag walls of the trench. The majority of the actual felling had been done before the writer's arrival and when he took over command we were merely getting out the logs from some of the inner coupes, where work had been stalled by the mud and clearing up the brushwood and stumps from the other coupes.

Logs were handled on sledges we built for the purpose and skidded quite nicely through the mud, unusually large ones being hauled singly, butt first.

Road Building

The brushwood was first thrown into piles and then on the coupe being cleared of logs it was bundled according to its nature into "fascines" or "firewood." The former were bundles ten or twelve feet in length and as many inches in diameter, made by laying the branches alternately, "butt and brush" and bound here and there after "choking" with withes or iron wire. They were largely used in road building across swampy ground, and if you ever wish to punish infantry just march them a few miles across a troad made of this material. At Valcartier we experienced one road of this sort through which the horses sank to their flanks when the fascines, which had not been properly tied, started to spread. They are, of course, only used for temporary roads, filling in shell holes, etc., but in France were employed to form a cushioning layer, several feet below the stones of the paved roads.

Brushwood that was too short for fascines were trimmed of its finer branches and cut into four-foot lengths, which were also bundled and ultimately went to the trenches in the form of charcal.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in giving relief; its harmlessness; its certain unfailing action in regulating sick sour, gassy stomachs. Its millions of cures in indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis and other stomach trouble has made it famous the world over.

Keep this perfect stomach doctor in your home—keep it handy—get a large fifty-cent case from any drug store, and then if anyone should eat something which doesn't agree with them; if what they eat lays like lead, ferments and sours and forms gas; causes headache, dizziness and nausea; erustations of acid and undigested food—remember as soon as Pape's Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. Its promptness, certainty and ease in overcoming the worst stomach disorders is a revelation to those who try it.
