The Last Day.

Were this the last of earth, How should I think and act?

How should I live and die? Would I not guard my heart?

Would I not love my friends With loving care?

And yet this fleeting life Is so full of joy and care, How long we live and die, How long we live and die.

O that we could but see The end of all our days, O that we could but see The end of all our days.

O that we could but see The end of all our days, O that we could but see The end of all our days.

O that we could but see The end of all our days, O that we could but see The end of all our days.

O that we could but see The end of all our days, O that we could but see The end of all our days.

O that we could but see The end of all our days, O that we could but see The end of all our days.

GENERAL NOTES AND NEWS

A good example is the best sermon.

Perhaps you are weak and weary, all run down, get tired with slight exertion, feel faint and dizzy, or dull and languid, then you need a good tonic regulator to make pure blood circulate, and give you strength.

A clear conscience can bear any trouble.

Cured of Deafness.

Harry Ricardo, of Toronto, was deaf for eight years, and also suffered with Chronic Rheumatism.

Let no one suppose that by acting a good part through life he will escape a fair share of recovery.

This is an epidemic worse and more depressing than an ordinary cold, and requires prompt remedies to break it up.

An old and well tried remedy is Baidre French Ointment.

A man never knows what a weak, sickle, and uncertain master he has in himself until he is at liberty to govern his own life and to do as he pleases.

Advice to mothers. Many children suffer and die from no other cause than an excess of Worms in the Stomach or Intestines.

There is an inextinguishable blessing in a cheerful spirit.

Another hairbreadth escape is recorded.

At White Bear Islands a woman belonging to Conception Bay found herself in the water, the vessel having gone down, and as there was no means of reaching the shore, she gave herself up for lost.

At that critical moment she saw two Newfoundland dogs that had been on board swimming for their lives shoreward.

As soon as the news of the disaster reached St. John's the Government took prompt energetic measures for rescuing the shipwrecked crews and bringing them home. Two steamers that lay at Harbor Grace were hastily got ready for sea; provisions and clothing in abundance were put on board, and in less than twenty-four hours they were despatched to the scene of the disaster.

The mail steamer "Flores" was taken from the usual route, provisioned and sent to the same destination.

Fortunately there were two steamers at Labrador when the storm broke place, and there at once devoted themselves to the help and rescue of the shipwrecked people.

The steamer "Vanguard" was one of these, and she arrived at Harbor Grace on the 20th, having on board 1500 of the shipwrecked people, brought from Grady. The other was the mail steamer "Flores," and she reached Tilt Cove on the same day with 240 people on board.

Sailing vessels are arriving with detachments on board. The "Lady Elinor" brought 200 to Harbor Grace. There is no doubt that the steamers now gone north will be able to find and bring home the remainder of the wrecked crews, some of whom are still exposed in perilous circumstances.

The poor people, as they arrive, are in a PITIFUL plight, but thankful to reach their homes alive. Many of them had everything that their hard earned catch-of-fish is good, and they come home to face the long, cold winter with hardly anything in their houses.

They will receive all the help that is possible both from private charity and out of the public funds, but with all that can be done for them their privations and sufferings will be great.

The Government deserves much credit for the prompt and judicious measures they adopted for the relief of the sufferers.

ESTIMATE OF LOSSES. At present the loss by this storm is estimated at $200,000 to $30

TRYING THINGS.

A HALLOWEEN STORY.

"Well this is a pretty fix for a man like me" and Silas Hammersmith straightened up and glared at the mirror in his bachelor apartments as if he considered it in some way responsible for the present deplorable state of his affairs. "Oh, it's no use talking! This is a good one on me! To think that at my time of life, and he waded his hand in disgust at the mirror, "I should go and fall in love! I thought when in my sorrow state of twenty I got through with that sweet little affair of Mary Kelly (bless her bright eyes! It was a nice little episode, too, but she married another man who had the money to keep her), I thought then that I had got through with the tender passion, but that to this was like milk to champagne. It is preposterous, and of course I have no chance beside the young fellow; but I am only thirty-five. I am not bad looking either—that is not very bad looking. I don't squint nor wear glasses, nor—but I've forgotten what will please the girls, though she doesn't seem like the ordinary run of girls. Ah, my sweet Dora! What have I to offer in exchange for your young fresh face and care-free heart? Nothing but the will and the power to keep you care-free and happy throughout all life. But I think Jack Liston has the inside track, though he's a jackanape, a dude! but he's young and stylish, and that's what takes with the girls. Yes, I'm almost sure she cares for him more, but I can't wait very long to see! I must do something—this unrest is unfitting me for business, and if I don't attend to that I may as well shut up shop. But how am I to find out Oh, there is too much at stake! If I ask her, which is the straightest way out, and she says no, even in that gentle voice of hers, I can never look her in the face again; and if I don't ask her I will see her, talk to her—but that is misery, the worst consolation possible, a privilege to see every civil young man of her acquaintance. Dora! Dora! No, I must put an end to it. I must—Ah!—for a sound of feet and loud voices announced a noisy entrance. The foremost one exclaiming: "Hello, Hammersmith are you making your will that you look so lugubrious?" And he exchanged shy winks with his companion. But Hammersmith smiled quietly as he remarked: "You are rather noisy cubs. What's afoot now?" "O, we are going to have some fun, and we want you to join us."

"What kind of fun do you mean to have?" "Well, you see, Halloween is coming and that night people always try tricks, to see whom their future husband or wife is going to be." "And do you expect me to engage in any such nonsense?" Hammersmith asked good humoredly. "Well, no," said young Liston, who had spoken first. "Of course such a grave old face as you don't care much about women and all the tricks we intend to try are on some girls who are going to try tricks." "And who may the girls be? Any friends of mine?" "Yes, indeed, but I will not tell you their names unless you promise to be one of the party."

Miss Dora's favourite. Poor Silas Hammersmith, he imagined that Dora could not possibly care for him, was plainly perceived by everyone to be madly in love with Dora. The sisters of these young men, each with the wish to do what was possible in her brother's cause, and prompted by the brothers, had concocted the little scheme to draw Dora out, and if possible to find out where her preference really lay, something of which as yet Miss Dora had given no hint, and at the same time to have a little fun with Hammersmith, for whom she would willingly have sacrificed her maiden name.

The night came, clear and cold, as Halloween generally is in Canada. Everything had gone well with the plot. They sat before the wood fire piled high on polished brass and iron in the quaint old fireplace, and burned hazel nuts tied in leaves and named for their true loves and themselves. They had "turned the key," and found the first letters of his name, in fact had gone through with the whole routine of tricks laid down by their grandmothers in the days when Halloween was as much of an institution as Christmas or New Year. But the crowning trick of all was to be the last. Each in turn was to be blindfolded and led by the other two to a locked door, there to stand alone and call thrice for the future husband, and the one whom they were fated to have would unlock the door and kiss them. Everything had gone well so far, and the girls were in high glee, but Dora objected.

"What if somebody would really come?" she said. "Nonsense!" said the other two. "Of course it's all fun." "Buy what if he should?" "Why nothing could come except some person, and he would know it to be a joke." "Well, one of you go first." "No," they insisted. Dora must go first.

"I'll draw lots," said Dora firmly, "if it falls on me I will go first, but not else." To this they were obliged to agree, and as fate would have it the lot fell on Dora; so she must be confessed with a good deal of trepidation she let them adjust the handkerchief blinding her, and she was led to the hitherto locked bedroom door. Of course the boys on the other side of the door had heard all the conversation and knew that Dora was coming to try her fate. So, as before agreed upon, Hammersmith was deputed to unlock the door and kiss the waiting beauty. Poor fellow, his knees shook under him, and his heart beat so loud and so fast that he thought it would choke him; but remembering all that was at stake, he noiselessly turned the key, and before they were hardly aware of it, had folded Dora in his arms, who, half-frantic with fear, forgot to struggle and lay quite still. While he whispered: "Dora, it is I, Silas Hammersmith, I love you, dear! Will you be my wife?"

moment, Dora said softly:—"We will remember this Halloween, Silas!" And Silas answered "stoutly": "This one, and every one as long as we both shall live. I like 'trying tricks' at Halloween!"—Toronto Globe.

"Malden, Mass., Feb. 1, 1880. Gentlemen—Suffered with attacks of sick headache. Neuralgia, female trouble, for years in the most terrible and excruciating manner. No medicine or doctor could give me relief or cure until I used H-op Bitters. The first bottle. Nearly cured me—The second made me as well and strong as when a child. "And I have been so to this day." My husband was an invalid for twenty years with a serious "Kidney, liver and urinary complaint." "Frolicious" by Boston's best physicians— "Incurable." Seven bottles of your Bitters cured him and I know of the "Lives of eight persons." In my neighborhood that have been saved by your Bitters. And other notes are using them with great benefit. "They almost do miracles!" —Mrs. E. D. Slack.

"Little Sweethearts." BY JOHN READE, F. R. S. C. I hear there is a wonderful little picture coming out that will be admired all over the continent, it is entitled "Little Sweethearts." To me it is one of those charming creations with which one cannot help falling in love at first sight; nor does the vision depart on close acquaintance. With simple directness, in language that all the world can understand, the artist has told his story—a story of a young romance which, nevertheless, is as old as humanity itself. He has depended for effect on no accessories of luxury or ornament. All this creative thought and sympathetic insight and magic skill of craft have been centered on two youthful figures, who give the picture its name. What charming "little sweethearts" they are! The handsome boy, with his peachlike skin and bronzed complexion, with the half-forgotten love offering of strawberries in one brown hand, while the other rests caressingly on the shoulder of the little maid, on whose face he gazes so fondly; and the little maid herself, with her wealth of amber hair, the eyes half-closed, half-tender, and the sweetly smiling lips, conscious of the just uttered assurance of the old rhyme:—"If you love me as I love you, nothing shall ever part us."

The whole conception is admirable, and not less so is the execution in reproduction as in the original. There is nothing artificial, nothing adventitious in the beauty of the boy, the lovely wild expression of the girl's face, manner and expression, are set off by no alien finery. His dress is that of the peasant class to which he belongs. Her hair is curled in a small cross pendant from a ribbon round her neck. Gesture, look, tone, combine most eloquently to impart the meaning of the scene. Nothing trivial or far-fetched directs attention from the subject. The sombre background of cloudy sky, seen through interlacing branches, makes more emphatic the bright joyousness of the young forms and faces. Though the subject is so old as humanity itself, the artist's touch is so fresh and so true, that the girl's love and faith, neither of them have as yet begun to take life as a service. The reflection may suggest a touch of pathos in connection with a love-making that takes no thought of tomorrow, as the possibilities of that morrow obtrude themselves on the mind of the pensive beholder. To those who have passed the season of "loves young dream," it is like a glimpse of a far off world long since left behind; the world which they knew before the years of wild romantic worship, of passion and conflict with life's stern realities. It is such a motive, the assurance of an age too candid either to willfully deceive or to fear deceit—an age when every one, animate and inanimate, still bore the seal of the Creator's sanction and was made to the good, when the return of a man to the thought re-creating—"How good is man's life—the more living! how good is his love!"
