

SPORT IN MAINE.

Annual Summer Outing of the Maine Sportsman's Fish and Game Association.

Company of Nearly Five Hundred People to Spend the Week at Kineo, Moosehead Lake.

KINEO, Moosehead Lake, Me., July 8.—The Maine Sportsman's Fish and Game Association is here for its annual outing, a company of nearly 500 people, to remain during the present week. Boats have been busy all day bringing the visitors, and more will come tomorrow.

After discussing the subject, Mr. Carleton had something to say about the people of the state who are not in sympathy with the fish and game laws and who would like to see them repealed, and the commission on inland fisheries and game abolished.

Mr. Carleton quoted from an editorial in a leading Maine paper recently as follows: "According to the present outlook there will be a strong effort made to abolish the fish and game commission in the next session of the legislature."

"The destruction of crops by deer throughout the northern section of Maine is largely responsible for this condition of affairs. When men are obliged to watch these animals, tramping down and eating their grain and forest crops, it is easy to see that a change of some kind is bound to come."

"Now I am free to say that farmers should have compensation for crops thus destroyed. 'We are inclined to think,' says the writer, 'that the farmer will have his inning in the near future.'"

"Every pound of freight brought into Maine, flour, corn, sugar, tea, coffee, every railroad fare, all this comes cheaper to the farmer on account of the reduced rates and excellent train service of our railways, made possible only by this great country travel through Maine, the fisherman, the hunter, the canoeist, the summer tourist."

"So, my farmer friend, don't be led into disgust and hatred of our fish and game laws by the ranting of demagogues. The laws are your friends. Abandoned farms by the score have been purchased, many hundreds of thousands of dollars of taxable property added in summer houses, hotels and cottages by these laws."

HOME FROM EUROPE.

Senator and Mrs. Ellis Returned from a Thoroughly Enjoyable Trip.

The Senator Talks Interestingly of His Journey and Discusses the Political Situation in England.

Senator J. V. Ellis and Mrs. Ellis returned to the city yesterday after an European tour of about ten weeks duration. The Senator had expected to be in the city for a few days, but he has been so thoroughly interested in the political situation in England that he has decided to remain here for a longer period.

To a Sun reporter last night, the Senator expressed himself as delighted with his trip, which had given him an excellent relaxation from work and had afforded him a most interesting study of the political situation in England.

The Senator's trip was a most successful one. He visited London and other places in England, and he was particularly interested in the political situation in England. Wagon Bridge on Central Railway Destroyed by Fire—Engineer Killed.

MORTON, July 8.—Another fatal accident has occurred on the Central Railway. This time only one life was lost, but one seriously injured. The accident occurred at what is known as the wagon bridge, about 23 miles from here, a portion of the train from Chatham falling through a gap occasioned by the burning of the bridge. The most fortunate man was William Nodwell, the engineer, who met death with his hands on the throttle trying to save the lives of the others of the train, crew and passengers. The injured man is Trackmaster Jackson of the road. His head is considerably cut and several ribs are broken.

The train, consisting of engine and tender, was on the bridge when the bridge collapsed. The engine was thrown into the water and the train was derailed. The engine driver, William Nodwell, was killed. The trackmaster, Jackson, was injured.

The train arrived at Cumberland Bay at 4:30 local time. About thirty yards beyond the station is Wagon bridge, formerly known as the bridge. It is 12 feet high and 12 feet wide. Between the station and the bridge is a sharp curve with a few trees growing very close to the track, and it is impossible to see the bridge until the engine is within twelve yards of it. When the train left Cumberland Bay the fireman was busy in the tender. Suddenly the engine started by the engineer shouting "The bridge is gone!"

The engine crashed into the water, and the train was derailed. The engine driver, William Nodwell, was killed. The trackmaster, Jackson, was injured.

Norwegian Bark Henry Leaking Badly—Captain and Crew Left to Save Their Lives.

Men at Sea Four Days in Open Boat Suffering Great Hardships Before Picked up—Henry was Bound for N. B.

HALIFAX, July 8.—The Norwegian bark Henry, Captain Aas, in ballast, twenty-two days out from Londonderry, Ireland, for New Mills, N. B., was abandoned June 13 in lat. 37, lon. 47 W. The officers and seamen were four days in a boat before they were picked up by the Russian Finn bark Ava, bound to Metan, Gaspe Bay. They were 19 days on board the Ava, from which vessel they were transferred to the steamer Arctic, and taken to Sydney. The bark Ava was reported by Capt. Aas as running short of provisions, but he thought they would have enough to take them to their destination.

The bark Henry began to leak about a week after leaving Londonderry. The leakage grew worse, and for several days before abandoning the vessel the pumps were worked constantly, and those not in the pumps were engaged in bailing with tubs. When the crew left, only the deck was above water and the vessel had a bad list to the port side. When last seen her main yard was in the water.

The men suffered great hardship during the four days they were in the boat through the rough weather and heavy seas. There had been a succession of gales, and over two weeks the men had most difficulty in getting alongside the Ava owing to the heavy sea.

TRANSVAAL CONCESSIONS.

Position of British Government Re Various Railroad Grants, is Said to be Fully Disclosed in a Blue Book Which Has Just Reached Washington.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—The position of the British government relative to the various mining, railroad and other concessions in the Transvaal is fully disclosed in a blue book containing the subject which has just reached Washington. The subject is of the very first importance to the state and war departments, as some of the most troublesome and weighty problems now confronting them arise from claims of various concessionaires in the Transvaal, Porto Rico and Cuba.

The blue book was made last September when Sir Alfred Milner, the British high commissioner, promulgated the celebrated order, "No. 27 of 1898," giving notice that the British government reserves the right by statute to recognize or to modify any concession made by the late South African Republic "without proper legal authority or contrary to law, or the conditions of which are not in accordance with the law, or which appears to affect prejudicially the interests of the republic."

The British government adopted a similar position in the case of the Transvaal. The concessionaires have made an exhaustive report set out in the blue book. It lays down some important principles. One interesting statement is this: "On the first of September, 1898, Her late Majesty annexed the territories and obliterated the sovereignty of the South African Republic."

"It is clear that a state which has annexed another is not legally bound by any contracts made by the state which has ceased to exist, and that no contract of a state which has been extinguished can be enforced against it if the annexing state refuses to recognize them."

The commission also asserts the right to "examine whether the rights which it is asked to recognize have in fact been duly acquired. A point of interest in the Cuban case is controversy. It accepts Sir Alfred Milner's most important suggestion in the report, that the new government is justified in cancelling or modifying a concession when "the maintenance of the concession is injurious to the public interest."

Concerning the question of preferential trade, Senator Ellis stated that the British government has a point of view, especially since their magnificent assistance during the war, he had heard no particular reference toward that form of closer union. Regarding the present conference of English and colonial representatives, now being held to consider the re-organization of the judicial committee of the Privy Council, he said that he was of opinion that the great difference of opinion among the representatives concerning the jurisdiction of the proposed court, and the difficulty of arranging it to the satisfaction of all, it seemed doubtful whether or no anything would be accomplished in this direction at the present sitting.

Returning to personalities, the senator spoke enthusiastically of the fact that the country abroad is a beautiful trip and you want to take it as soon as you can. Don't wait till you get old, he said.
