DOMINION vs PROVINCES. An important judgment was given last week by the Supreme Court of Canada in regard to the legal right of Dominion or Province of leasing fishing privileges and to the riparian rights of the owners of the lands abutting thereon which will be good news to many of our farmer fishermen.

The latter have claimed for years that justice was done them by the province usurping the right to the fisheries of the streams running through or past their lands, and very many of them, not being able legally to fish in such waters did so illegally, running the risk of detection.

The following particulars of the judgment is given: OTTAWA, Oct. 13.—The Supreme Court of Canada gave judgment this morning in the fisheries case, involving questions of the greatest importance and hundreds of millions of dollars of value, between the Dominion and the provinces. Both sides claimed the jurisdiction over fisheries in inland waters and the ownership of the beds of rivers, lakes and harbors, as well as the right to issue fishing licenses.

The questions submitted to the court arose in the case of the Queen vs. Robertson, decided by the Supreme Court of Canada in 1882. That was a case where the rights of the Dominion of marine and fisheries to give a lease of a portion of the Miramichi river for the purpose of fishing, was challenged by C. A. Robertson, who was interrupted in the enjoyment of his fishing. The court held that the general power of regulating and protecting the fisheries is in the Dominion of Canada, but that the license granted by the minister of marine and fisheries was void because the law only authorized the granting of leases "where the exclusive right of fishing does not already exist by law," and in this case the exclusive right of fishing belonged to the owners of the land through which that portion of the Miramichi flows.

It was also held that a license given by the federal authorities to fish in streams running through provincial property would be illegal. This judgment led the provinces to assert their right, and a friendly reference to the Supreme Court of Canada would be the result. The chief justice announced that four members of the court were practically a unit in their findings, these four being Justices King, Taschereau, Girouard and the chief justice. As the judgment seems desperately involved, your correspondent presents the following analysis, made by Amelia Irving, O. C. who conducted the case for Ontario. Mr. Irving says:

Practically the judges are in accord in favor of the provinces, except inasmuch as it confirms the decision in the Queen vs. Robertson in respect of non-navigable waters and extends the same rule of law to all navigable rivers and great lakes, the beds of which are wholly in the provinces, the right of fishing therein being a public common right, subject to provincial legislation.

By the judgment today the Dominion is confined to the powers of conservancy and regulation of fisheries. The Dominion has power to enact the imposition of a general license upon all persons fishing, but such license cannot be restricted to any particular lake, river, or other water.

In the case of public waters, the judgment of the Supreme Court in the case of Holman vs. Green is recognized, the lands thereof belonging to the Dominion and as a consequence the right of fishing therein belongs to the Dominion. In tidal waters neither the Dominion nor province has any power to restrict the public right of fishing.

ORGANIZING. An effort is being made to perfect the organization of Liberal Conservatives throughout the various provinces of the Dominion by organizing county and provincial associations. A Provincial Association was formed for Nova Scotia a few days ago, and a meeting was called to be held in St. John yesterday for the purpose of forming a Provincial Association. Sir Charles Tupper and Hon. G. E. Foster, with other prominent party men were expected to be present.

A thorough organization of the party has long been needed and no time better than the present could be proposed for that purpose.

Obituary. After a brief illness which she bore with Christian fortitude, Mrs. James Somers passed peacefully to rest at her home at Lyttleton on Friday morning, Oct. 19th, leaving a husband, four sons and three daughters (one married daughter residing in the west) and a large circle of friends and kind neighbors.

Temperance Meeting.

The public meeting held in the Methodist Church, Newcastle, under the auspices of the W. C. T. U., on Wednesday evening last, attracted a large attendance, the church being comfortably filled. Mrs. G. N. Clark presided. The proceedings commenced by singing "All hail the power of Jesus' name." Prayer by Rev. John Clark. Singing, "I want to be a worker for the Lord." Mrs. Clark then introduced Mrs. J. K. Barney, of Rhode Island, Warden Superintendent of jail, prison and reformatory work.

In commencing her remarks Mrs. Barney directed their attention to several passages of Scripture and then forcibly related her experience in dealing with cases coming under her observation in pursuing her work.

The prisoners and jails of her own country were full, 85 per cent of the inmates being there as the direct result of the liquor traffic.

She would endeavor to present to them a picture to-night at which she would ask her hearers to look. The picture would be one as presented in the front rank, of which she would place the inmates of the prisons of Canada who are the victims of the traffic. But she would not take the 85 per cent, she would content to take the half, and half the men and half the female occupants of the prisons could be placed in the procession. Next in order would come the inmates of our insane asylums, who are directly the victims of the traffic.

Of course, they think whatever mother does is right. Still the work is going on, and gradually a healthier temperance sentiment is being developed. Mrs. Barney, on satisfaction of reading papers on "Reasons for subscribing for the Dominion organ, the Woman's Journal."

After the discussion of other important matters, and completion of arrangements for the future, the convention adjourned.

PRESENTATION. There was quite a large gathering of citizens and visiting gentlemen in the upper hall of the Willbur House, on Monday evening, W. W. Hay, Esq., was called to the chair and acted as master of ceremonies in a most felicitous manner. Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur being called in, Mr. Hay read an address, signed by a number of transient and permanent boarders at the Willbur and prominent citizens, which contained warm expressions of esteem for Mrs. Wilbur personally, and as host and hostess; expressions of regret that they were about to retire from hotel life.

The W. C. T. U. County Convention.

The annual County Convention met in Masonic Hall on Tuesday, 12th, at 10 a. m. Mrs. McLeod of Newcastle acted as secretary to order. The first half hour was devoted to a Bible reading by Mrs. McLeod. After the minutes of the last convention had been read and adopted, officers for the coming year were elected: Mrs. McLeod, President; Mrs. Haviland, Vice-President; Miss Shirreff, Corresponding Secretary; Mrs. G. N. Clark, Recording Secretary; Mrs. Park, Treasurer.

Dr. Brown read a paper on Methods of the W. C. T. U. Work best adapted to a prohibition town, which evoked a spirited discussion.

Mrs. Barney, who arrived on the accommodation from the north, was present in the afternoon, and gave a Bible reading which was listened to with deep interest. Mrs. Barney in other ways contributed to the success of the day. She pinned the white ribbon on several ladies who joined the Union, and explained the significance of the little badge.

Miss Thomson, of Newcastle, read an excellent paper on Band of Hope work in which she, with her co-workers, Mrs. Reid, has been very successful. The Newcastle Band of Hope has 148 members. The greatest difficulty met with in this work is the objection some of the children make to the pledge because it prohibits beer. Their mothers make beer, and they want to be free to drink it.

Of course, they think whatever mother does is right. Still the work is going on, and gradually a healthier temperance sentiment is being developed. Mrs. Barney, on satisfaction of reading papers on "Reasons for subscribing for the Dominion organ, the Woman's Journal."

Upper Nelson Notes.

The fancy dress ball, given by Mrs. Alex. Parks to her friends last week, was pronounced by all who attended to be the event of the season, in the fact that the ladies in their various costumes looked so charming that it was hard to decide who was the belle. The general verdict, however, was in favor of Miss Jane McKelvie, as "Undine," in green and silver, and the eldest daughter of the host, Miss Jennie Parks, as "a very fairy Lillian" in blue and white. William Kirk as violinist, accompanied by Miss Mabel Parks on the piano, furnished music for dancing. Singing and parlor games were an attractive feature of the entertainment, which ended by the company joining hands around their worthy host and hostess and singing, "Should auld acquaintance be forgot And never brought to mind," etc.

Mr. Chambers, in the erection of his new house, is making considerable progress. The same can be said of Mr. Kirk, who, with the assistance of Mr. Walsh, of Nelson, has nearly completed the improvements to his "farmhouse" as it is called. Mr. Alex. Gratton has been, for some time, the guest of his sister Mrs. M. Monahan.

Our popular teacher, Miss Rebecca Cushman, intends closing her school Thursday and Friday for the purpose of attending the Teachers' Institute.

The mysterious disappearance of a lounge from a ball room, recently, is creating a "furore" of excitement. A person who could walk off with a lounge on such a night as that, must be a marvel of tact and diplomacy. We should be happy to make his acquaintance, as our best all round marks of the ravages of Father Time.

Farmers around here are all through digging and threshing, and have taken to dog farming. To further this end they build first outside upon which to hang their dogs, and in the evening, the lurid glare of these, lighting up the fading landscape, give the village a most picturesque appearance.

[These Notes were received on Thursday morning of last week, although intended for last week's Advocate. They were mailed on Tuesday instead of Monday.]

Apple Dryers.

J. H. L., in the Montreal Witness, gives the following description of an home made dryer suitable for drying apples, which may be useful to those who have more apples than they know what to do with just at the present time.

Sir.—In driving through the country country struck by the large amount of apples lying around to waste which might be utilized either by being gathered up and fed to stock, or else dried for future use. I think that it was in the "Witness" I first saw some hints on building a home made evaporator. I acted on those hints at once, and I would just as soon do without some of my other implements as my apple dryer. For the benefit of those who would like to build one I will tell you how I made mine. In the first place you want to bring the size of your stove into your calculations. Mine is one of those with two ovens on top, within all the better as you have the heat from the fireplace, and the oven beside. I made my box about three feet long and about one foot wide, and high enough to hold seven or eight inches long; get a board to make it as high as you like, but this is high enough for ordinary use. Having decided on the size of your dryer get a board for the top (haddock will do), and make it the size of the centre about two inches wide and within six inches of each end; this forms an opening for the hot air to ascend through the dryer. Now get a scantling, 2x2 inches, to make a frame for the lower end of the box, the same size as the board for the top. For sides I used one half inch siding (you cannot have it too dry), to which the cleats have to be nailed to hold the trays. For the front I used the same as for the ends, made in the form of a door so as to be easily taken off when you wish. For the back I used a piece of sheet iron of an old range table (a piece of old smokestack will answer well). This can be tacked on as soon as you have nailed on the sides to the top and bottom. For feet, get a piece of light wagon tire; cut four pieces about sixteen inches long; get a blacksmith to bend the ends at right angles and put a hole through them so that you can bolt them to the bottom of your frame. Don't let your dryer be any closer than twelve inches from the wall, and the dryer will be apt to scorch the fruit, and also interfere with using the front of the stove for cooking. Before bolting the feet get some stove strips of sheet iron or galvanized iron, and fasten them to the bottom of the frame to keep it from the heat, and let the front project half an inch out for the door to rest on, and a little hook on the top to hold the door fast. For trays use galvanized wire cloth, which can be got at most hardware stores. Get them cut to the width you want, about half an inch wider than the trays are, to be so that you can get them in and out of the stove to keep them from rattling out. Make a frame of wood the size you want the trays, half an inch by one and a half inches for the sides, an inch by one and a half inches for the ends, and one and a half inches for the top. Now nail on your wire cloth with half inch cleats, and your evaporator is ready for use. When nearly done you want to watch close, or else you may scorch your fruit. We dried a lot of apples last fall, and we can give you excellent recipes for use when the apples get scarce, and had the pleasure of hearing a good exclamation, while munching a piece of pumpkin pie in spring time. "How delicious! How did you manage to dry your pumpkins till this time of the year?"

THE LAST RITES. FUNERAL OF THE LATE ARCHBISHOP BENSON. LONDON, Oct. 16.—The funeral services over the body of the Most Rev. Edward White Benson, Archbishop of Canterbury, took place at 11 o'clock this morning in the Cathedral at Canterbury this forenoon. The great edifice was crowded with people, among whom were the Duke of York and Prince Charles of Denmark, as the representatives of the Duke of Wales, the Duke of Connaught, Duke of Cambridge and a host of ecclesiastical, political and social dignitaries.

There were several distinct services, the first being the Requiem Mass, at 10 o'clock in the morning. The coffin containing the body of the deceased Archbishop was covered with a white and gold embroidered pall and was placed in front of the altar surrounded by lighted tapers. The Very Rev. Wm. Farrar, D. D., Dean of Canterbury, opened the series of services by celebrating the Mass, which was followed by the singing of the "Te Deum" and the "Gloria." The weather was extremely disagreeable, high wind and rain falling, but this did not prevent the effect in keeping people away from the cathedral. Everybody present wore deep mourning, and the choir sang in black.

At 12 o'clock the funeral procession was formed, and the coffin was carried to the cathedral, the clergy attached to the diocese following, followed by the members of the House of Commons, members of the House of Lords, bishops and members of the nobility. The coffin was borne by Rev. Wm. D. Mahagan, D. D., Archbishop of York and Primate of England, and the Most Rev. Lord Plunkett, D. D., Archbishop of Dublin; Very Rev. F. William Farrar, Dean of Canterbury and the Rev. Hugh Benson.

Next came the coffin, with the pall bearers, the Earl of Cranbrook, Lord Ashcombe, Lord the Lightfoot, the Dean of Lincoln, Sir E. M. Thompson and the Chancellor of Exchequer.

Within the cathedral the family and relatives of the dead Archbishop, the family of the Archbishop of York and other representatives of private mourners occupied places in the rear of the choir.

As the procession reached the nave the choir sang "Gloria" (Sent Out Thy Light), and afterwards a special anthem composed by Sir Herbert Stanley Oakley, composer to Her Majesty, Scotland and Professor of Music in the University of Edinburgh.

The clergy who officiated at the interment comprised Canon A. J. Mason of Canterbury, the Right Rev. Randall T. High Benson and Archbishop of York, Rev. Wm. D. Mahagan, D. D., Archbishop of York and Primate of England, and the Most Rev. Lord Plunkett, D. D., Archbishop of Dublin; Very Rev. F. William Farrar, Dean of Canterbury and the Rev. Hugh Benson.

Fine Apples.

The apple crop this season is the largest ever known in Canada. Miramichi, of late years, has paid much attention to apples, and is beginning to reap the advantage of raising its own. A mistake was made in planting too many of the summer varieties, which will not keep, instead of the winter varieties of apples which are most valuable because there is no necessity of forcing sales or cutting prices. Among these early varieties the "New Brunswick" is particularly numerous, and although a fine looking apple, a good table apple and cooker, yet its season is so short that it is hard to dispose of them before they are worthless. It would probably make a fine apple for evaporating or drying.

Local Pickups.

The Union Advocate is only one dollar per year when paid in advance. Wide width striped and printed blankets only 50c per yard at J. D. Creighton's Slaughter Sale—don't pay 75c to 12c for same goods elsewhere. The tail of the northerly storm which did so much damage along the shores of the Eastern States on Wednesday last week reached here on the early part of the morning. The wind blew heavily and rain fell in torrents until about noon when the rain stopped and the wind moderated, and about 2 o'clock the sun came out. Any one wishing wedding invitations should call and see the fine lines available at this office. Park's Cotton warp only 60c a bundle at J. D. Creighton's Great Sale, also Heavy Grey Cotton Steadfast, worth 80c 50c per yard. Rain fell steadily on Thursday afternoon. Come in and see our 7 1/2 c. flannels, etc., best the Machine. Clark & Co. Dressing machines are at work in this vicinity. Business reading notices inserted in this column at ten cents per line. Notices are accepted of all age, and the yield is rapid and sure, and to twenty-five in one. Not so among them. The price of single copies of The Union Advocate is only two cents. A full church list to Mrs. J. K. Barrow's admirable new in the Methodist Church on Wednesday evening next. Heavy flannels, 32 inches wide, regular 10 cent goods now 7 1/2 c. at Clark & Co. The waste pipe leading from the fountain on the square was found to be stopped, preventing the running off of the water, the result being seen as soon as the water tank that was under the fountain and the fountain itself was found to be overflowing. Sunday next is the 21st Sunday after Trinity. Tonsillitis is reported to be prevalent among children in town. School district assessment sheets and school rates on post and county rate notices always on hand at the Advocate office. A few days ago we received a budget of American campaign documents from the Mr. William Murray, of Boston. The budget comprises quite a variety, from the small leaflet of four pages to the more ambitious pamphlet of one hundred and eighty pages—all on all the important free coinage of silver question and the evil results which would follow its adoption. We hope shortly to find time to glance through this mass of campaign literature. In the meantime we return thanks to Mr. Murray for his kindness in sending us so much information on what we consider the right side of this important question.

You Can Be Well.

When your blood is pure, rich and nourishing for nerves and muscles, the blood is the vital fluid, and when it is poor, thin and impure you must either suffer from some distressing disease or you will easily fall a victim to sudden death. In the meantime we return thanks to Mr. Murray for his kindness in sending us so much information on what we consider the right side of this important question.

Sunday Services and Lectures.

Methodist Church next Sabbath—morning and evening. The Rev. Wm. Lawson of Richibucto will deliver the annual sermons, and collections will be taken at both services for the missions of the Methodist Church. On Monday evening at eight o'clock, the Rev. Wm. Lawson will deliver his famous lecture on "Father Matthew, the Modern Apostle of Temperance." A silver collection will be taken at the close of the lecture. JOHN A. CLARK, Pastor. Newcastle, Oct. 19th, 1896.

A MESSAGE TO MEN. PROVING THAT TRUE HONESTY AND TRUE PHILANTHROPY STILL EXIST. If any man, who is weak, nervous and debilitated, or who is suffering from any of the various troubles resulting from youthful folly, excess or overwork, will take heart and write to me, I will send him confidentially and free of charge the plan pursued by which I was completely restored to perfect health and manhood. After years of suffering from Nervous Debility, Loss of Vigor and Organic Weakness.

I have nothing to sell and therefore want no money, but as I know through my own experience how to sympathize with such sufferers, I am glad to be able to assist any fellow-being to get an well aware of the prevalence of quackery, for I myself was deceived and deceived upon until I nearly lost faith in mankind, but I rejoice to say that I am now perfectly well and happy because I had an honest man to advise me to make this certain means of cure known to all. If you will write to me you can rely upon being cured and the great satisfaction of having given a great service to one in need will be sufficient reward for my trouble. Absolute secrecy assured. Send no silver to come postpaid. Write for free address, Mr. Geo. G. Strong, North Riverwood, Mich.

Selected Literature. A SEA CHANGE. A TALE OF A MATE AND A COOK. BY MORGAN ROBERTSON. (McClure's Magazine.) (Concluded.) He backed up against the side of the forward house. Off to the westward was a speck—the revenue cutter. It was a tangible reality, and his faded faculties seized it. He traced back, painfully, the events of the morning. 'She chased me out here,' he whispered. 'Who was that Dago? He knew me. Who was the nigger, and the crowd on the beach? They were not the crew—I'm not the mate. He walked aft. 'Here I stood this morning—last night—when I was struck; and then—all at once—it was daylight, and I was here.' He moved a few steps. 'And nothing is the same.' He noticed the broken wire rope on the deck. 'What parted the lit? It seems—yes—it must be—that is what hit me. I remember now; I saw it knocked me senseless, and meanwhile the boat had trouble. But they haven't mended the lit, and it was a hemp lit, too—and I'm still in her—no, I'm not—I'm not John Dorsey. I'm somebody else. Who am I? I can't make it out. Who am I? He clung to the rail and screamed loudly and hoarsely, in an agony of terror. Then he ran forward, then aft, and forward again. He burst into the captain's room, examined again the face in the glass—which he loathed—and fled from it.

On the pilot-house was the boat's name, which he had not noticed in the articles. He saw it now for the first time. He sprang to the bow, and looked over. There, in block copper letters, where once had been the words 'Petrel,' he saw the boat's later name. Aft on the stern he read it again—'Avon, of New York.' He seated himself on a hatch, steeper in mind now for the removal of the 'Petrel' from the problem. As he sat there he noticed an anchor working in indistinct on the back of his hand—the soft, white hand of Jack Shiven, the cook. He looked at it in amazement, then pulled up his right sleeve. There, close to the elbow, was a wreath, and within it the initials 'J. D.' His toes open his shirt, and on his breast found a mole. He sprang to his feet, raised his clenched fist, brought it down, and said, calmly and decisively:—'I am John Dorsey. And this boat—' he scanned the fabric from trucks to curving deck with the eye of a sailor who loves his craft,—'has once been the 'Petrel.'

As the noon hour approached he thought of an observation. 'I know the latitude,' he mused. 'I can subtract that from the zenith distance and get the declination, and that will give me the month and day in the almanac. But what's the use? I'll know to-morrow, when I see the owners. The sun's well south of the line; it's the fall of the year. It was last January when my light went out.'

He threw on coal, started the engine, and shaped a course for the Providence channel. All that day and the following night he grumbled at the wheel to the boiler engineer, and next morning, as the languid islanders were waking to their indolent existence, he steered into the west entrance of Nassau harbor.

On the highest point of the low shore was a figure that waved his hand something red. He did not see it. Inside the harbor, he stopped the engine, while he puzzled over the mechanism of a patent windlass, which was new to him. Mastering this, he went on at half speed. The figure had left the rocks, and still waving the red cloth, was hastening toward the landing. Close in as he dared go, he again shut off steam, pried the small anchor off the rail, dropped it, and after paying out a few fathoms, banked the fires, and hailed a shore boat. As he landed, an old woman in a red shawl was waiting. She clung herself upon him with a glad cry, and after a moment he knew her for his mother. But his greeting of her was rather a cold one, for by his chronology it was only a week since he kissed her good-by. Later, when questioned, he said: 'I didn't know mother, at first; she had grown so old. She, on her part, declared, with streaming eyes: 'I recognized Jack! I understood me!'

'Why, I don't really know, Jack,' said the captain, resolved to humor his captor, whose maniacal strength prevented an escape; but his neck was nearly dislocated by the sudden shake he received as Dorsey thundered: 'Don't call me Jack! Answer me!'

'I don't know; I s'pose you came here. You ran off with my boat; but that's all right; good thing you did; don't choke me, don't.'

Dorsey had shifted his fingers. 'No nonsense. Where'd I go after we were taken?'

'We weren't taken. Don't you remember? You started the machine, and fooled the cutter, and got away. I s'pose you kept right on and brought up here.'

Dorsey released him. 'But that was in this boat. Do you belong in her?'

'I'm her captain and owner; and it seems I'm getting queer treatment from my cook. You've lost my cabin.' The captain grew easier. There was no gleam of insanity in the earnest eyes that were fixed on him.

'Was I the cook? What was my name? Where'd I come from?' asked Dorsey eagerly.

'You shipped in New York as Jack Shiven; that's all I know. You're not a bewildering success as a cook, but I'll admit you were a well-behaved man until lately. The freeman swears you're crazy. The grinning captain said nothing of his own doubts on this point.'

'Jack Shiven,' repeated Dorsey; 'yes that's what he called me. But, Captain, I meant the 'Petrel'—when she was taken—it was last week to me—but they tell me it's thirty years back—when you were fore the mast and I was mate; what happened? Where'd I go?'

'I tell you I am,' said Dorsey vehemently. 'My mother knows me.'

'She does? Then I'll take it on faith. But,' he seized Dorsey's hand, and began to shake it vigorously.—'Mr. Dorsey, I might have known it—I might have known it, if I'd thought. No man on earth but John Dorsey would have got by that cutter. Why, it was a miracle, that's what it was. Takes block-adaid to develop a man. I s'pose old times brought you round. Yes, don't you know? You was stoned and couldn't remember. And you've seen your mother. I'd give this boat to have been at that meeting. Thirty long years, winter and summer, she's set on those rocks, waiting for you, Mr. Dorsey, and now you've come! The cap'n was winking hard. 'Come here, Mr. Dorsey. There's only one thing that fits this occasion. If you'd smashed more furniture, you'd have found it. It was bottled the year you went under.'

A CLEVER DOG. The London Spectator tells the following story: 'A collie in Scotland, whom I know well, is in the habit of fetching from his master's room, slippers, cap, keys, or anything he is sent for. One day, sent on the usual errand, he did not reappear. His master followed, and found that the door of the bedroom had blown to and fro. The dog was again told to fetch something; and, as the wind was high, his master, after a few minutes' delay, followed him. He found him in the act of fixing the door firmly back with the door-mat, which he had rolled up for the purpose, and, having taken this precaution, the prudent animal proceeded to look for the slippers. This same collie, when walking with me, ran on in front and rang the gate-bell of the house to which I was going, so that I had not to wait when I arrived.'

Farm and Household. NOT EVERY ONE KNOWS. That a good liquid for preserving butter is made by adding to every gallon of strong brine a pound of granulated sugar and two ounces of saltpetre. Scald and skim the brine, let it get quite cold, then immerse the butter in it and keep under with a weight. That sweet cream butter is finer flavored than that made from sour cream, but does not retain the flavor so long. That saltpetre added to cream makes butter firmer in summer and dryer in winter.

Every ingredient in Manley's Celery-Nerve Compound is a blood maker and health giver. If you are weak or run down, try it. Dear Sir: It is with pleasure I can recommend Manley's Celery-Nerve Compound, as I am thoroughly satisfied it is a strengthening preparation, and as a tonic it is unequalled. Other members of my family, besides myself, have used it, and in all cases it gave the most gratifying and pleasing results. Yours truly, J. H. McPherson, 260 Yonge St., Toronto.

That if onion oil is applied to a wart once a day for a month the wart will entirely disappear. In many cases it will not require so long a time.—Scientific Am. Occasionally your pet canary bird should be fed with a hard-boiled egg, chopped fine and mixed with cracker crumbs, giving it not more than a thimbleful of the mixture at a time. For pickled red cabbage: Cut the cabbage into shreds and put it into a small stone crock. Season some vinegar with mace, cloves, peppercorns, salt and just enough sugar to take the edge of the vinegar. Heat the vinegar to boiling, but do not pour over the cabbage when it has become cold. Cover, and do not use for a month. Apple sauce is a simple dish, yet is often an appetizing accompaniment to either a plain or an elaborate meal. The fruit is best to be pared and prepared with great neatness and care, no speck allowed, cooked briskly in a saucepan, stirred often, till perfectly smooth, and done, the sugar to the taste added, a pinch of salt, a bit of butter, stirred more and at once put from the dish in which it was cooked. It takes but a few moments to make a good apple sauce. To pickle onions: Peel small onions and boil them in equal parts of milk and water for ten minutes. Put one gallon of vinegar in a preserving kettle with half an ounce of whole mace, the same amount of alum, one-quarter of an ounce of whole cloves and five tablespoonfuls of salt. Place the kettle over the fire and let the contents come to the boiling point. Drain the onions in a colander and put them into jars, turn the boiling vinegar over the onions, cover the jars and put a stopper.
