Poetry.

If your Foot is Pretty, Show It.

If your foot is pretty, show it, No matter when or where ; The foot takes all the men. The face, so fair and lovely, May charm the gazer's eye; But if the foot is homely, He'll quickly pass her by.

If your foot is pretty, show it, For it will catch the eager eyes Of every man you mee! Don't toss your glossy ringlets, Nor pout your lips so sweet; But gently lift your petticoats,

And show your handsome feet. If your foot is pretty, show it, At concert, ball or fair; For that small pedal index Tells where your graces are; Tie figure may deceive me,

All hooped and padded o'er;

But let my eye survey the foot;

If our foot is pretty, show it, If you want to catch the beaux, No longer hide that tell tale charm Beneath so many clothes. A graceful foot betrays a form, Of rare and faultless grace ;

Full rounded limbs it doth reveal, For fancy eyes to trace. If your foot is pretty, show it, Twill help your other lovely charms To win some nice young man.

The practiced eye may well distrust A nicely padded breast; But when it rests upon your foot, It knows of all the rest.
