MY OWN FIRE-SIDE.

Let others seek for empty joys,
At ball or concert, rout or play; Whilst far from Fashion's jolly gait, Her gilded domes and trappings gay, I while the wintry eve away, Twixt look and lute the hours divide,
And marvel how I e'er could stray From thee—my own fire-side!

My own fire-side! Those simple words Can bid the sweetest dreams arise; Awaken feeling's tenderest chords,
And fill with tears of joy mine eyes.
What is there my wild heart can prize, That doth not in thy sphere abide,
Haunt of my home-bred sympathies,
My own—my own fire-side!

A gentle form is near me now;
A small white hand is clasped in mine;
I gaze upon her placid brow,
And ask, what joys can equal thine:
A babe, whose beauty's half divine,
In sleep his in other eyes doth hide, Where may love seek a fitter shrine, Than thou—my own fire-side!

What care I for the sullen war Of winds without, that rave earth o'er; It doth but bid me prize the more The shelter of the hallowed hearth;
To thoughts of quiet bliss give birth; Then let the churlish tempest chide, It cannot check the blameless child, That glads my own fire-side!

Shine of my household duties;
Bright scene of home's unsullied joys;
To thee my burdened spirit flies, When Fortune frowns, or Care annoys; Thine is the bliss that never cloy; Thine is the smile whose truth hath oft been tried;
What, then, are these world's tinsel toys,
To thee—my own fire-side!

Oh, may the yearnings, fond and sweet, That bid my thoughts be all of thee, Thine ever guide my wandering feet,
To thy dear smiling sanctuary!
Whate'er my future years may be,
Let joy or grief my fate betide, Be still an Eden bright to me,
My own—my own fire-side!

Miss Jervis's Pride.

How she Reconsidered her Decision.

Great purple shadows swept across the hayfields. The distant landscape was becoming indistinct, and the moon was slowly rising in the heavens. After awhile the twilight deepened into as much of darkness as there would be in the summer night, and silence fell upon the earth. Then a girl stole noiselessly across a small garden, and stood beside a gate that led into the adjoining churchyard. A yew tree spread its dark branches above her; but the silver tints that were glancing down upon the tall gravestones, and that were bringing out the delicate lines of the old church-spires, touched also her white face, making it whiter than usual. She did not start as a tall figure approached from the further side of the churchyard. She had evidently been expecting some one; and when she heard the words:

"You are out late, Miss Jervis," she quietly answered:
"I was waiting for you. I wanted to say 'Good-bye' to you before you went away."

"I thought you had done that already," replied the young man, with some bitterness.

"Not quite," returned the girl, wearily.
"You were too angry for me to say it as I wished."

"Had I not a right to be so?" he asked.
"Ever since I have been at Sheldford you have been deceiving me. I believed you to be as earnest as I was myself; and now—"

He paused.
"And now?" Her voice had a sharp ring in it as she repeated his words, as though she would give denial to what he had said; but her face looked like stone, in the moonlight—white and immovable—and she continued: "I did not understand that you could really be so earnest; otherwise I might have told you before what I have told you to-day."

"You did not believe in me. You looked upon me as heartless—as a deceiver. You do not believe me now."

"I do."
"What do you believe?" he asked, impetuously. "Nothing good, or you would not have given me the answer you have given me."

"Everything good, except the knowing what is good for yourself. I want you now to say 'Good-bye' to me without any anger in your heart. The day will come when you will perhaps bless me for what I have had courage to do to-day." And she held out her hand.

The young man hesitated.
"Is there no hope?"

"None!"

Her voice rang low and clear through the summer air. Again he hesitated; then suddenly taking both her hands in his, he bent down and kissed her for the first time. She gave a faint cry, and disengaged herself.

"We part in peace." With these words she turned and fled—not looking back, or perhaps she might have repented her decision. Once in the house, she sat down in the empty sitting-room, made light as day by the moonbeams. The old dog rose as she came in, and when she threw herself into a chair he laid his head in her lap.
There came a sound of clattering plates in the kitchen, on the opposite side of the narrow passage, and her mother's voice sounded sharply, giving her directions about supper. Presently she entered.

"Where have you been, Ally? How ill you look! And you're all shivering.
Come into the kitchen, child." Annie's gone off to bed, and there's a bit of fire in the grate. It might be winter instead of mid-summer, to feel your hands."

Alice arose mechanically. She walked dreamily into the kitchen, where her mother drew a chair to the fire for her. Presently a ruddy, good-humored looking young man entered, saying:

"Let me have my supper here, mother.
The fire looks pleasant, though it is summer-time."

When she went to her own room, instead of undressing, she opened the window and gazed out toward the yew tree under which she had parted from Mr.
Scrope; and then suddenly twisting her long hair, she turned to the looking-glass, not with any feeling of vanity, but in order to find out what had attracted him.

It was more than a handsome face that answered back her gaze, one which showed an amount of earnestness and intelligence not often met with. Of this she was no judge herself, neither of the continual change of expression which Mr. Scrope had begun by curiously observing, and ended by being thoroughly interested in.
He was passing the long vacation at Sheldford, reading and fishing. He had made the acquaintance of William Jervis on the banks of the river, and through him, whom it was a condescension on the part of Mr. Scrope to notice—of Alice herself.

Alice perhaps understood the footing on which they stood better than her brother; and the innate pride in her nature caused her to accept it with reservation. She felt the gulf between them; and measured it by the world's standard. Therefore, when Mr. Scrope made his somewhat startling offer, she, in spite of her surprise, was not unprepared with an answer. And now that she had given it, she asked herself if she had done right.

Mr. Scrope was an only son. A brilliant future was before him. A world of which she knew nothing, was familiar to him.
Could she, who was accustomed to the lit-tleness incident to circumstances somewhat above actual poverty, move with propriety in circles accustomed to every luxury? Would his relatives, so far above her, accept her and her belongings? She answered "No." Mr. Scrope had argued what matter, since it rested with him to give her place and position in the world as his wife. But that, she knew, would be a separation for him from all former associations; and her own untidiness to move in her lover's sphere would make her a drag upon the life of him to whom, before she knew it, she had given her heart. Such had been the train of argument she had pursued. She had struggled free from the prospect open to her—not without pain—and had dismissed it as a dream of beauty that had ought to do with waking hours.

And now—but it was over.

The morning rose and she went about her tasks as usual—perhaps even more energetically, since she needed an outlet for her pent-up feelings. Mingled with pain there came a sense of happiness in the knowledge of Mr. Scrope's love. To have possessed it—may! perhaps to possess it still—carried her into another world, in which, however, she must always be alone, since all that had passed must forever remain her own especial secret.

Mr. Scrope went abroad, and after a time he returned home to begin his career.

Alice Jervis pursued her homely and monotonous life. She grew quieter and graver, and worked more diligently. She believed that she had decided rightly as regarded Mr. Scrope's happiness; and the sacrifice she had made for his sake made her feel that she had a right to be interested in him. She lived in this excitement of seeing his name in the papers, and in gaining every particular of him within her grasp. She smiled when she read his name among the presentation at court, or noted his presence at the court balls. At such times she looked down at her shabby dress and poor appointments surrounding her, and wondered what sort of an appearance she would have made under other circumstances. At length she saw another announcement. Mr. Scrope was going to be married! She turned pale, and put down the paper. And yet she had expected this announcement, had looked for it day after day. Nevertheless she felt a strange pang, which, as long as he was unmarried she had escaped.

Down by the river, where the water-flags hoisted their yellow standards among the reeds, and where the forget-me-nots blossomed along the banks, she sauntered, listening to murmuring waters, whose burden was "Past! past! past!" Even Rover appeared to understand it, for he looked up mournfully into her face and whined. Then the gray bars of clouds spread across the setting sun, and blotted out the sunlight; but still Alice paced up and down under the poplar willows, until the evening was far advanced. Night was settling in around her. The light of life was over. She had scarcely realized until the present moment, how persistently Mr. Scrope had been in her every thought.

The morning after reading the news in the papers, another very startling piece of information came to her: She was an heiress! By one of those strange chances in life that are so common now a days, her mother's brother, beginning life as an artisan, had amassed a princely fortune.
And now at his death he had left it between Alice Jervis and her brother. Alice Jervis sat down and wept bitterly. To her it had come as a mockery. Her lot in life was cast, and what did she want of money now? In due time she read of the marriage itself. She cut it out of the paper, and placed it in her pocket-book. It was all over.

Three years slipped away. Three travelers entered a hotel in a little foreign town. The youngest of the women was Alice Jervis, now a beautiful woman, a little past her first youth, but whom one knew in a moment in spite of the improvement that had taken place. Her brother was with her, but he was scarcely to be recognized. A tutor and three years of foreign life had caused a wonderful transformation. The elderly lady, Mrs. Jervis, was not much altered, excepting that her dress was as handsome as your heart could desire. They took their places at the table d'hôte, and exactly opposite to them sat a lady and gentleman. The latter looked weary, and his short, black moustache twinkled with the curvings of the relentless mouth beneath it. The lady was fair, fashionable and vivacious.

Alice Jervis started. She would have moved, but William Jervis, all ignorant of past events, had exclaimed: "Mr. Scrope!" Mr. Scrope looked across, wondering at the friendly recognition from an apparent stranger. Then his eye fell upon Alice, and he started; but quickly recovering himself, he bowed, saying:

"Pardon me if at first I did not remember you."

Mrs. Scrope had turned in delight to ward William Jervis: "The first English voice, excepting my husband's—that I've heard for three weeks. I do not understand Italian, and have consequently had no one to talk to but Mr. Scrope. Can you imagine anything more dreadful?" Then, turning to her husband, she said: "You must introduce me to your English friends."

"Mrs. Scrope—Mr. and Miss Jervis," said Mr. Scrope, his look riveted on Alice.

The face that had never left his memory in spite of his marriage, had grown to a higher beauty than even he had imagined to be possible. Though he knew it not, it had come about through her striving after an ideal that she deemed worthy of him.

Still the pulses that throbbed so painfully, Alice conversed with him as with an old acquaintance; and yet the remembrance of their parting on that moonlight night was vividly present to both of them.
Mrs. Scrope talked incessantly, the more especially as William Jervis was a lively talker, with a frank, half-jesting, half deferential manner that had something very winning in it.

Alice Jervis watched Mrs. Scrope narrowly, and wondered why Mr. Scrope married her? Instinctively the answer came: Because he did not care very much about her, but found that the alliance would add lustre to his career. There was something paradoxical in the idea, but it passed with her. She had argued that if Mr.
Scrope had really cared for herself, to care much for Mrs. Scrope was impossible.

So they met, and so they parted, in the little out-of-the-way Italian town; and Alice had seen Mr. Scrope once more:
Was she glad, or was she sorry?

The Scropes returned to England. The Jervises remained abroad. And they heard nothing more of one another.

Years after she came to Sheldford.

Exactly why she had come there she could not tell. It was more to gratify an old longing than for any definite reason though she had persuaded herself into the belief that she had business in Sheldford.
At any rate, upon the anniversary of that day eight years ago when she had waited under the yew tree to say good-bye to Mr.
Scrope, Alice Jervis stood with her hand on the wicket gate, quietly reviewing her life and once again asking herself whether love or pride had the greater part in her decision. The branches of the yew were waving gently, the roses were rustling their silver-tipped leaves, and the white-moonlight fell upon the graves. Still with her hand upon the garden gate, she looked toward the church trying to believe that the years had stood still, and she was there, waiting for Mr. Scrope. She was turning away, when a dark figure approached her, and a well-remembered voice said:

"Miss Jervis!"

"Mr. Scrope!"

"Yes. I was waiting for you. I wished to see you before you go away."

Almost her own word at their last interview.

She looked at him half fearfully. It was so strange to see him there at that hour of the night, and an almost superstitious awe came over her.

"I wanted to tell you that you have ruined my life so far. I heard that you were at Sheldford. I knew you would be here to-night. I have come to ask you if you repent the past, and are willing to atone for it?"

Alice shrank back.

"Mr. Scrope!" was all she could say.
"The inferiority, if there be any, is on my side," he said. "You have improved the past. I have wasted it. Yet the wasting of it I lay to your charge. I knew you better than knew yourself. I wanted a wife who would understand me, and give me sympathy. You could have done this, and you refused. Will you refuse it now?"

Bewildered, and yet indignant, Alice shrank further away from him.

"Mr. Scrope," she said, "I bid you go back to your wife. I bid you to repair the brilliant prospects you seem so wrongly to have marred."

"I wish I could," he answered, sorrow-fully. "My wife is dead, Alice, or I should not be here to-night. She died two years ago. You are hard and unjust, as you have always been."

"Dead!" stammered Alice, "How could I know? I have but just returned to England." She moved nearer to him, and held out her hand: "Forgive me!"

Their eyes met; and Mr. Scrope, looking down into hers, stooped and kissed the quivering lips for the second time in his life.

He became a constant visitor at Mrs.
Jervis's and after a few days Alice consented to be the wife of her first and only lover, Mr. Scrope. The marriage was celebrated in all the pomp and ceremony attending the elite, and Alice became the happy mother of several children.

The Late Mrs. Marter.

By the death of Mrs. Marter, which occurred at the residence of her son-in-law, the Hon. E. B. Wood, in Winnipeg, on 21st October, another of the old landmarks of Brantford has been removed. The deceased lady was the second daughter of the Hon. Harris Hatch, who died about 47 years ago, of heart disease, in his seat at the Magisterial Sessions at St. Andrews, N. B.

In 1832 she married the late Dr. Marter, well and favorably known to all the old residents of this city. In the latter part of that year the newly married couple left New Brunswick and took up their abode in the then village of Brantford. In 1858 the Dr. and Mrs. Marter left here for Nova Scotia, where they remained for a few years, and then returned to Brantford.
Shortly after their return here, the Doctor died, leaving Mrs. Marter with four young sons—her two daughters, Mrs.
Rubidge and Mrs. Wood having been married some years prior to this event—all her children, now grown up men and women, have reason to bless her for her faithful training and example. Some four years ago the lamented lady accompanied her daughter, Mrs. Wood, to Winnipeg, with whom she remained up to the time of her death. It was only last week that Mr. Rubidge received a cheerful letter from her, saying if God spared her life she proposed coming to Brantford during the ensuing summer, to remain some time with her children in Ontario.

Being possessed of a kind noble and generous heart, Mrs. Marter had the esteem of all, was beloved by many and best by those who knew her most intimately. Besides her own sons and daughters, she has left 24 grand children and many relatives and old warm friends throughout the Dominion to mourn her loss.

W. Rubidge, Clerk of the Crown, Levee, married her eldest daughter, and Chief Justice Wood the second. They, with her sons and their families, have our deepest sympathy in their bereavement.

Mrs. Marter was 65 years of age at the time of her death.—Brantford Weekly

Betting and other Vices.

There are many glaring vices in society which require exposure, and reformation. This remark is not to be applied exclusively to the faults and failings of those who are sometimes conveniently, but not very wisely, characterized as the lower classes. It applies equally to those who move in the higher circles, who visit first-class hotels, who have access to the finest drawing-rooms, and whose reputation and standing are more than unexceptional. Among even these there is often a laxity of moral sentiment which both undermines their influence, and vitiates their character; and a very partial acquaintance with the proceedings of the legal courts, and of many public places of amusement, will suffice to show that habits are indulged, if not crimes committed, which will hardly bear the full light of day, and the practical tendency of which is to destroy personal virtue and domestic peace, if not to hinder commercial progress and tarnish the reputation of the nation.

The sad revelations which are now so very frequently made in divorce cases, and the pitiable and revolting crimes which are occasionally exposed, as in the persons of Morton, of Philadelphia, and Gilman of New York, and others, bring a blush to the cheeks of all virtuous-minded persons; and yet even these mournful instances of crime often have their origin in what at the time appears to be innocent, as well as pleasant recreation; and which almost unconsciously leads to a gradual deviation from the path of strict integrity and propriety. In one case there has been an inordinate desire for fashion and display, in another an overpowering love for company and mirth; and yielding to these there has been an extravagant expenditure upon useless objects or sinful pleasures, and a too frequent visitation of places of amusement, a too familiar association with loose characters, and a passionate indulgence in billiards, and cards, and other games.

The United States Tariff.

The Committee of Ways and Means of the House of Representatives at Washington being about to take up the tariff question, much speculation is indulged in on the subject of possible changes in the tariff. In view of the powers of this important committee, which extends to the initiation and reporting of measures affecting the revenue, its composition is being closely scrutinized. The chairman is Mr. Fernando Wood, of New York, and though the Western and Southern States are largely represented, it is a matter of surprise that only one member from the Eastern, or manufacturing States, has been appointed on the committee. Possibly this circumstance may have alarmed the Protectionists, and given rise to the suspicion that a bill to reduce the tariff will be reported and that an effort will be made to press it through both houses during the extra session. It is said that Protectionists are urging delay upon the committee, but it remains to be seen if their recommendations will have the desired effect. The chairman of the committee is known to be thoroughly conversant with the subject of the tariff; but of the ten remaining members five, on the Democratic side, being lawyers and a sixth a planter, it is believed that they do possess the tactical ability to carry any measure contemplating extensive changes through the House of Representatives.

INSANE AND ADRIFT ON LAKE ERIE.—Henry Sims, a resident of this city, on Saturday received a telegram from his brother-in-law living in Buxton, Can., stating that the latter's son, John Johnson, had started on Friday to come to Cleveland in a small boat. The son is nineteen years of age and is insane, having been once in a lunatic asylum. He has often threatened to run away from home and come to Cleveland, and it is presumed he left Friday to escape from his parents, as the telegram stated he had on a pair of blue pantaloons, vest and socks, but neither coat nor boots. If he left with no more clothing than is named he must have frozen to death if the storm of Friday night did not capsize his boat. Buxton is on the north shore of Lake Erie, nearly opposite Cleveland, and the relatives of the young man hope that the boat and body may possibly be driven ashore in this vicinity.

The police at Ottawa on the 8th instant, captured a young man named Magotte, a notorious burglar. He has confessed to burglarizing the residence of Mr. Myrand, Theodore street, and carrying away a lot of valuable jewellery of Mr. S. Bray, Mr. Dugal and others.

The St. Andrews Standard.

Saint Andrews, November 14, 1877.

REMOVAL.

The STANDARD office has been removed to the building immediately opposite the late office, in the building recently occupied by Mr. Bradley. The printing and publication are on the second floor.

The entrance to the STANDARD office is from the side door on Whitlock's lane, next Mr. Lochary's store, which will be more direct than through the store formerly occupied by Mr. Bradley.

THE TROOPS according to the Russian reports have suffered severe reverses recently. Plevna is surrounded by 120,000 Russians, who are resolved to take the place if they can. Osman Pasha has sufficient supplies to enable him to hold out for a few weeks. It is not improbable that ere long, meditation will be offered to end the war.

SUBSCRIBERS who have had their bills presented to them and are not paid, and who are indebted to us for years, will understand why their papers have been stopped, and the bills handed to a magistrate for collection. It is impossible to carry on any business, unless it yields a return—Patience is a great virtue, but there are people who do not hesitate to try the patience of good nature, and several of our subscribers are of this class, whose promises to pay have been annulled, but these will not answer in future; those who do not pay each year, will have their names struck off the list and their accounts handed to an Attorney for collection.

ANNUAL MEETING.—A notice in these columns to-day informs the public that the Annual Meeting of the Charlotte County Agricultural Society will be held on the 29th inst. This establishes the fact that was stated last week, "that the Annual Meetings were always advertised by the Secretary in the STANDARD." It also shows that the correspondent "Plain Farmer" was incorrectly informed; the Society has ever been conducted according to law, and all meetings open to its members. We preferred publishing the letter of "Plain Farmer" rather than giving an extract from it, and in future will not refer to what correspondents state, but publish their letters in full, and let them pass for what they are worth. Our correspondent should have been positive before making a statement, which however he has since acknowledged to us was not correct.

SOME of our exchanges appear to take a great interest in Dr. Tupper's movements—his sayings and doings and intentions. His speeches are said to be violent, his assertions characterized as reckless, and that he has fallen out with his old colleague Sir John A. Macdonald. These reports emanated from the brain of some fearful politician, as they have no foundation in fact. It was reported last week that the Doctor was to spend the winter on the shores of the Mediterranean, for the benefit of his health. This also is incorrect. The Doctor has no idea of leaving his seat vacant in Parliament during next session.

THE SCHOOLS.—A brief visit to some of the public Schools during the week, was highly gratifying. The progress being made is commendable to teachers and scholars. Having noticed several of the Departments a few weeks ago, which were doing well, we visited the No. 1 advanced Female Department this morning, and found on the register 67 pupils with an attendance of 61 scholars. The excellent order, attention and ready answers of the pupils and improvement in the Department are creditable alike to Miss Hanson the teacher and her scholars.

DEATH OF REV. MR. TILLEY.—The sad intelligence was received here on Monday last, of the death of the Rev. W. H. Tilley, one of the most highly esteemed and promising young clergymen in the Dominion, and beloved by all who had the pleasure of his acquaintance. He was in his 38th year, and leaves a wife and children, for whom, and his respected father, the worthy Lieut. Governor of this Province, universal sympathy is felt, in their affliction.

IN Scotland wheat was poor, and only about half a crop. The yield of Barley is also inferior in both quantity and quality being deficient about 30 per cent.

Our thanks are due to the obliging Collector at Eastport, for courtesies extended to us while there a few days ago.

THE PRINTERS MISCELLANY for September is one of the best numbers issued, it has a large correspondence and many useful hints to the profession.

The Methodist Church has been much improved in appearance from the coat of paint on the outside. Many other buildings in the town would be the better of similar treatment.

THANKSGIVING.—The Lieut. Governor, has appointed Thursday, Nov. 22d, a day of Thanksgiving to Almighty God, for the abundant harvest. Truly the day should be observed by all the people in this Province.

ENTERTAINMENT.—A number of the young men of the Town, will give an amusing entertainment in Stevenson's Hall, to-morrow evening, consisting of Ethiopian comedies, Stump Speeches, Irish Comic Songs, The "Quintessential Variety Club," contains talent of no mean order, and will give a pleasant entertainment.

The storm and heavy rain on Friday last were the heaviest this season. We have not heard of any damage to shipping, although the gale at one time was almost equal to the great storm known as the Saxby gale. The ground was so dry as to render plowing difficult, but the rain of Tuesday has made it friable.

The Circuit Court was opened here yesterday by Mr. Justice We don, and there being no Criminal business, the Grand Jury were dismissed after a short address from his Honor, congratulating the County on the absence of crime. Only one civil cause was entered which was undefended, and the Court closed the same day.

The Boston Pilot says:—The Rev. W. J. Foley, of St. Andrews, New Brunswick, preached a very eloquent and impressive sermon to a large congregation in the church of the Immaculate Conception, Worcester, Mass., on All Saints Day. Father Foley, during his short visit to his friends in Worcester, became a general favorite with priests and people, who greatly admired him for his excellent singing and eloquent preaching.

We have received a specimen copy of Golden Hours for the Young. It is a non-denominational Sabbath School paper, and more suitable for Canadian use than the American or English publications of a similar character. The reading matter is varied and well chosen. It is printed on fine paper from clear type, with appropriate illustrations, and we can heartily commend it to Sabbath Schools. Price for 4 copies one year, $1; 10 copies $2; 20 copies $3; 50 copies $7.50; 100 copies for 1 year $16. Address, C. Blackett Robinson, publisher, 5 Jordan Street, Toronto.

The Mail Steamers for England ceased running up the St. Lawrence after Saturday last. The mails will be landed at Halifax. The steamer of the 24th will be the last outward bound from the St. Lawrence this season.

Opinions appear to be very much divided on the question of the President's Southern policy; and what is most noticeable and curious is that nearly all the symptoms of opposition are from members of the Republican party. The policy is generally endorsed by the Democratic leaders; and in this instance the President is wounded in the House of his friends. There is really no valid objection to be urged against that policy; and in the course they are disposed to pursue the Republicans are acting inconsistently and unwisely. The essential feature of the President's policy is that of justice and toleration. Is not this supposed to be characteristic of the Republican party? Why, then, shrink from its application? The honor of the Government, and the peace of the country, are superior considerations to party prejudices, or sectional distinctions; and in the end the President's policy will be generally accepted as the right one, although the Republican party as such may fall to pieces.

PUBLICATION.—An article on "The Ultramontane Movement in Canada," by a prominent Canadian writer, will appear in the November-December number of the North American Review to be issued in a few days.

Sir Edward Thornton is again to return to Washington, notwithstanding the report to the contrary.

The Bank of Montreal has declared a dividend for the half year of six per cent. The stock sells for one hundred and seventy.

DRESS REFORM.—A lady in St. John through the Globe urges upon her sex, a reform in dress, to drop the long skirts, which sweep the streets, and "to adopt a style at once reasonable, convenient and tidy." Other places might follow the example with a good grace.

THE ST. STEPHEN TOWN COUNCIL.—The Mayor and some of the Councillors of the St. Stephen corporation do not work very harmoniously together, it would appear, judging from the remarks in the last issue of the St. Croix Courier.

MILLING ON THE ST. CROIX.—The Calais mills are doing very little, and there is a poor prospect for getting logs to the mills in season to permit much sawing before cold weather. At the same time Calais manufacturers are said to have an abundance of orders for dimension stuff, which they are unable to fill.

It appears from the orders on the County Treasurer, that the Warden and Parish Councillors are reducing the County expenses very materially, so much so, that the expense for supplies will be reduced nearly 50 per cent. This is undoubtedly a worthy beginning, and an improvement on the old order of management, which the taxpayers will be slow to appreciate. Where the people have the choice of their officials, they generally make a wise selection.

An analysis of the trade of Montreal from the opening of navigation to the 1st Nov. shows the number of arrivals of sailing vessels to have been 487 of 355,777 tons, say 72 vessels and 15,599 tons less than last year; whilst of "inland" vessels the number was 5,700, which is a slight increase over the arrivals of 1876. The revenue of the Montreal Harbor Board up to 31st Oct. this year was $178,654, a decline of $27,859 as compared with last year.

ROBERT WATSON, Esq.

A portrait of Mr. Watson, the respected cashier of the St. Stephen Bank, with a biographical sketch, appeared in the Canadian Illustrated News. The portrait while life-like hardly does our old friend justice, as his genial smile is absent, however the picture would be known. Much is omitted in the brief record of Mr. Watson's life, such as his energy and success in promoting the building the branch railways and other public works, in this, his native County.

The Cashier of the St. Stephen Bank is the youngest son of Robert Watson, who came from Scotland to St. Stephen about 1783, and we find by Mr. Knowlton's history of St. Stephen that his father was a great friend of the Rev. D. McCall, who was the pioneer Methodist minister of St. Stephen at that early day of Methodism. Mr. Watson died in 1817, and in 1818 his son went to St. John and served his time in the countinghouse of the late T. Milridge, Esq. In 1823 he returned to St. Stephen, and was shortly afterwards appointed Deputy Treasurer and afterwards Collector of St. Stephen, and continued in the Customs until 1838, in consequence of the death of the late lamented David Upton, Esq. he was appointed Cashier of the St. Stephen Bank. This institution which Mr. Watson was largely instrumental in establishing in 1836, has gone on through all the vicissitudes of trade and panics, without at any time passing a semi-annual dividend of over 4 per cent. including a bonus.

Mr. Watson has been identified with all the public works in St. Stephen. Simultaneously with the opening of the St. Stephen railway, in 1865, he opened the Watson House, which he built and furnished at an outlay of $25,000, and which was unfortunately destroyed by the great fire of 14th May, 1877. Mr. Watson has since with most praise worthy energy, erected on the same site a block of nearly fire-proof stores, 80x80, now ready for occupancy. He will leave the place of his birth all the better for his exertions. From principle for about 30 years he has been a teetotaler, and also an abstainer from the use of tobacco—urging on all fitting occasions upon the young in particular to follow his example. Although vigorous, physically and intellectually, Mr. Watson may be considered among the oldest men in the Banking Department of New Brunswick or perhaps the Dominion. It would appear that Mr. Watson has always set a good example to his neighbors to erect substantial buildings. His hotel was brick covered with slate, and his residence is also brick covered with mastic—and a very elegant building—and he has just completed his block of brick stores with gravel roof, making it nearly fire-proof. Mr. Watson has been twice married—first, in 1836, to the daughter of the late Rev. Dr. Thompson, by whom he had two children—both now dead—and in September, 1851, to Miss Whitlock of St. Andrews, by whom he had two daughters, one of whom is married to Mr. Thomas J. Smith.

A ST. JOHN SEA CAPTAIN FINED.—A Baltimore despatch of the 6th inst., says that Captain Berryman, of British bark "Exile," of St. John, N. B., was on the 5th fined $1,000 at the Baltimore custom house for violation of a United States law. The bark, it was alleged, put into Tybee, Ga., for orders, and remained forty hours without having regularly entered and cleared, as required of vessels stopping over twenty-four hours in a port of the United States. The fine was paid under protest.

The crop reports are now as complete as possible. The revised statement is approximately as follows:—The wheat crop is the largest ever harvested in this country, amounting to 325,000,000 bushels. The yield of corn is slightly less than that of the previous seasons amounting to 1,280,000. With such an enormous production of grain, and the prevalence of good prices and active markets, which seem now to be assured, the business interests of the country cannot withstand the onward march of prosperity.

The success of those American laborers who went over to England not long ago, to find work and take the places of striking mechanics, has not been of such a singular character that others would be justified in following their example on the strength of it. There are in proportion to the population, more workmen out of employment in England than there are here, and those who are employed rarely get as good wages. Moreover, the American masons who recently went over there obeyed their communistic instincts and joined the strikers, after all.

TO THE PUBLIC.

In justice to myself, family, relatives and friends, and to the public generally, it is due that I should expose the wicked attempt made by John Best to ruin my character. Best made a complaint against me for burning a School building at Beaver Harbor; I was lodged in the common jail as an incendiary for eight days, and a Bill was drawn up and laid before the Grand Jury at the present County Court, which was justly ignored by that honorable body, as there was not a shadow of evidence to convict me of such a gross outrage. I was therefore restored to the liberty which as an innocent man I was entitled to. I now solemnly declare that not even in thought did I desire to injure my neighbors by so horrible a deed as I have been unjustly accused of by Best and his unprincipled associates. I have heretofore borne a good character, and intend to keep it. I have several respectable friends who will bear testimony to the truth of the foregoing statements, and I trust the papers which published the scandalous statement of my being guilty of arson, will do me the favor to contradict the said report.

WANTED.

WE WANT reliable, energetic canvassing agents in every town in the Dominion for the new "Illustrated History of the Dominion of Canada." This work is truly magnificent, containing over 2,000 double column quarto page engravings. The work is published in Paris, on a plan which insures its welcome to every English reading family. To energetic young men or ladies, who are willing to work, we will guarantee a permanent position for two years, and a good salary. Don't fail to write for our private terms, sample pages, etc. This is a grand opportunity for school teachers to make more than double their salaries without interfering with their professional duties. The work is being manufactured at a cost of over $20,000, for the literary, artistic and mechanical work of producing the plates by the old well-known, reliable Lovell Printing and Publishing Co., of Montreal. All letters

WHAT PAYS? 1877.

IT PAYS every Manufacturer, Merchant, Mechanic, Inventor, Farmer, or Professional man to keep informed on all the improvements and discoveries of the age.

IT PAYS THE HEAD OF EVERY FAMIL-Y to introduce into his household a newspaper that is instructive, one that fosters a taste for investigation, and promotes thought and encourages discussion among the members.

The Scientific American

which has been published weekly for the last thirty one years, does this, to an extent beyond that of any other publication; in fact it is the only weekly paper published in the United States devoted to MANUFACTURES, MECHANICS, INVENTIONS and NEW DISCOVERIES in the Arts and Sciences.

Every number is profusely illustrated and its contents embrace the latest and most interesting information pertaining to the Industrial, Mechanical, and Scientific Progress of the world.

Descriptions, with beautiful Engravings of New Inventions, New Implements, New Processes, and Improved Industries of all kinds; Useful

Notes, Receipts, Suggestions and Advice by Practical Writers Workmen and Employers, in all the various arts forming a complete history of New Inventions and Discoveries consisting a weekly record, not only of the progress of the Industrial Arts in our own country, but also of all New Discoveries and Inventions and every branch of Engineering, Mechanics, and Science and Art.

has been the friend of all industrial publications for the past thirty one years. It is the oldest, largest, cheapest and the best weekly illustrated paper devoted to Engineering, Mechanics, Chemistry, New Inventions, Science and Industrial Progress, published in the world.

The practical Receipts are well worth ten times the subscription price, and for the shop and house will save many times the cost of subscription.

MERCHANTS, FARMERS, MECHANICS, EN-GINEERS, INVENTORS, MANUFACTURERS, CHEM-

ISTS, LAYERS OF SUBMERGED PIPE, OF ALL

PROFESSIONS, will find THE SCIENTIFIC AMER-ICAN useful to them. It should have a place in Family, Library, Study, Office and Counting

Room in every Reading Room, College and School. A new volume commences January 1st, 1877.

A year's number contains 52 pages and Several Hundred Engravings. Thousands of volumes are preserved for binding and reference.

Terms, $3.20 a year by mail, including postage.

Discount to Clubs. Special circulars, giving Club rates, sent free. Single copies mailed on receipt of 10 cents. May be had of all New Dealers.

IN connection with THE SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN,

Messrs. MUNN & CO. are

Solicitors of American and Foreign Patents, and have the largest establishment in the world. More than fifty thousand applications have been made for patents through their agency.

Patents are obtained on the best terms. Models of New Inventions and Sketches examined, and advice free. A special notice is made in the Scientific American of all Inventions Patented through their Agency, with the name and address of the Patented. Patents are often sold in part or whole, to persons attracted to the Invention by such notice. A pamphlet containing full directions for obtaining Patents sent free. THE SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN Reference Book, a volume bound in cloth and gilt, containing the Patent Laws, Census of the U. S., and 142 Engravings of mechanical movements. Price 25 Cents.
