Wishes.

Think of me as your friend I pray,
And call me by a tender name;
I will not care what others say,
If only you remain the same!
I will not care how dark the night,
I will not care how low the storm;
Your love will fill my heart with light,
And shield me close, and keep me warm.

Think of me as your friend I pray,
For else my life is little worth;
So shall your memory light my way,
Although we meet no more on earth;
For while I know your faith secure,
I ask no happier fate to see;
Thus to be loved by one so pure
Is honor rich enough for me.

STORY.

Farmer Harewood's Boy.

The work of the farm house was over for the day; the children—with the exception of the eldest son, who had gone to the village—were in bed, and in the big comfortable kitchen Farmer Harewood, his wife and his wife's sister, Mrs Lucas, were sitting around a center-table. The farmer was reading the Farm News, his wife was putting a patch on the knee of little Harry's diminutive knickerbockers, and Mrs Lucas was crocheting a hood of blue and white zephyr for a small niece.

There was silence in the kitchen save for the snapping of the fire in the stove, the ticking of the big eight-day clock in the corner, and the rustle of the farmer's newspaper, and when Mrs Harewood sighed deeply, both her sister and husband looked up in surprise.

"What's the matter, Sarah?" asked the latter. "That sigh is the loudest I ever heard you give. Has anything gone wrong? You look as if you had a big load on your mind."

"I believe you're more than half right, Hester," she said at last. "I'll think it all over to-night, and make up my mind what to do. I'd be lost here without George, and he shan't leave the farm if I can help it."

"Force won't keep him, Eli," remembered that said Mrs Lucas, feeling that she had said enough, folded up her work, and taking up a lamp from a shelf by the stove, went upstairs to her own room.

Just at daybreak she was aroused from a sound of horse's hoofs in the yard, and looking out of the window she saw Eli trotting away on old Roan.

"Where can he be going at this hour?" she thought.

When she went down stairs at six o'clock, George was standing by the kitchen table, having just come in with two pails of milk. His face wore a discontented, unhappy look and he merely nodded in return for his aunt's cheery "Good morning."

A few minutes later his father entered, and George, who had gone to one of the windows, and was looking out dejectedly did not even glance up.

"You were out early, Eli," said Mrs Lucas. "I heard you ride away at daybreak."

"Yes, I went to Pine Ridge on a matter of business."

"That's where you sold Vixen-papa, isn't it?" asked little Harry, and Mrs Lucas saw a quiver pass over George's face as the child spoke.

"Yes, my boy, I sold Vixen to Lawyer Stanley. George," turning to his son, "I've made up my mind to part with that five-acre lot by the river. What do you think of that?"

"Of course you are to get a good price for it, sir," said the young man, indifferently. "It is the best piece of land you have."

"But I haven't sold it. I am going to give it away!" repeated George, roused out of his indifference, and staring at his father as though he had not heard him aright.

"Yes, deed it over, every inch of it, to some one I think a great deal of, and who deserves it," laying his hand on his son's shoulder, and his voice breaking a little. "I'm going to give it to my son, George Harewood, to have and to hold, as he sees fit, without question or advice."

"To me! You intend to give that fifty acres me, father?"

"Yes, my boy, and with my whole heart. You've been a good son, George, and I only wish I were able to do more for you. But I'm not a rich man, as you know, and I have your mother and the three little ones to provide for, too. Still, I want you to have a start, and this fifty acre lot will yield you a handsome profit. You can have three days in the week to call your own, and that will give you a chance to work it, and if you choose to break in that pair of young oxen I bought the other day from Bageley, you can have them for your trouble."

"This—this seems so much, sir," stammered George. "I don't know how to thank you."

"Too much! Then I don't know what you'll say to this," and the farmer took his son by the arm and led him out on the porch. "There's another present for you my boy."

"Vixen!" The word came from George's lips with a long sigh of joy, and with one bound he was at the side of the little black mare he had never thought to see again, and both arms about her neck. "Oh, father, I'd rather have Vixen than anything else in the world!"

And he buried his face in the pretty creature's mane, and in spite of his eighteen years, fairly broke down, and sobbed aloud.

That ended George's desire to leave the farm. He was never again heard to mention the subject, and he grumbled no more about the hard work, and the monotony of his life, but in every way tried to show his appreciation of his father's kindness.

In fact, Eli Harewood was wont to say occasionally in confidence to his wife, that he had reason to bless his sister-in-law for her good advice, and that he owed it to her that he had a stalwart arm to lean on in his advancing years.

But George never knew to what he owed the change in his fortunes.

Work gives you an appetite for your meals, it lends solidity to your slumbers, it gives you a perfect and graceful appreciation of a holiday. There are young men who do not work, but the world is not proud of them. It does not know their names even; it simply speaks of them as "old Soandso's boys." The great busy world doesn't know that they are there. So find out what you want to be and do, and take off your coat and make a dust in the world. The busier you are, the less harm you are apt to get into, the sweeter will be your sleep, the brighter and happier will be your holidays, and better satisfied will be the world with you.—R. J. TEMPERANCE.

TEMPERANCE NEWS AND NOTES.

It is hoped to erect a temperance temple for Kansas Woman's Christian Temperance Union on the Ottawa Assembly Grounds.

Steamer bars are to be abolished in Ontario, as they should be wherever transportation companies value human life.

The arrests for drunkenness in Great Britain for the past ten years are said to have reached a total of nearly two millions.

Of 640 persons who entered five saloons in Columbus, Ohio, within an hour on Saturday evening, 554 were found to be young men.

A sample of W. C. T. U. activity is the fact that one Illinois woman alone has established twenty-five new local unions within the last five months.

A New York white-ribboner suggests that coffee stands be placed close to every saloon, each person to receive a piece of bread or a cracker, with coffee or tea, at a penny a cup.

There are 16,000 bands of hope and juvenile temperance societies in the United Kingdom, with nearly 2,000,000 members. The Scottish Union includes 600 societies and 130,000 members.

This is how an exchange figures it out: From a bushel of corn a distiller gets four gallons of whiskey, which retails at $16. The government gets $3.60, the farmer who raised the corn gets forty cents, the railroad gets $1, the manufacturer gets $4, the retailer gets $7 and the consumer gets drunk.

A HINT FOR MOTHERS.

Mrs Willard says: "Begin to teach temperance in the lullaby song and the twilight evening story." The Pennsylvania Bulletin contains the following suggestion in furtherance of this idea: A telegram comes into the house. Children will ask numberless questions about it. Mothers, it pays to stop, and take time to answer all these countless little inquiries. Don't finish your story until you have told of the wonderful telegraph system which extends over our bodies. Tell of the fine network of nerves upon which messages are constantly being carried to and from the brain, and central office. They must be kept soft, like an egg, in order to keep the telegraph apparatus in working order. Alcohol sucks the moisture from these delicate nerve cells, and then they do not work perfectly, and the drinker thinks he feels better, when the truth is he only feels less.

Mother and child are walking the street, and notice a sign over a store. What was it placed there for? To show what is contained within. God has made man so that he cannot help but hang out his sign and show to all what he keeps within. A dishonest person will seldom look you square in the face; he cannot laugh full and round and open, like the true-hearted honest man. There are those who read character in everything, but the tobacco user and the drunkard hang out a sign so plain that all who see may read.

A BOY'S TEMPTATION.

You have heard of the old castle that was taken by a single gun, and it seemed hopeless to try to take the castle; but one soldier said, I will show you how we can take the castle. And he pointed the cannon to one spot and fired, and went on all day, never moving the cannon. About nightfall there were a few grains of sand knocked off the wall. He did the same next day and the next. By and by the stone began to come away, and by steady working his gun for one week he made a hole in that castle big enough for the army to pass through.

Now, with a single gun firing away at every boy's life, the devil is trying to get in at one opening. Temptation is the practice of the soul; and if you never have any temptation, you will never have any practice. A boy who attends fifty drills in a year is a much better soldier than the one that drills only twice. Do not quarrel with your temptations; set yourself resolutely to face them.

The abandonment of Iceland by its inhabitants is one of the most interesting episodes in the shifting of population that the world has ever known. There is a little country that has a civilization, a literature and a history of its own, and yet its people find the conditions of life so severe that they are turning their backs upon it all and seeking new homes. Several hundreds of Icelanders have come to this country during the last few years. Homes are found in the agricultural regions of the Canadian North West, and there the Icelanders will be merged in an entirely new civilization while the old Icelandic nation becomes merely a tradition of the past.

Says the New York Tribune: "It is related that a few years ago the Prince of Wales declined to attend a luncheon following the opening of a town hall at Halifax, England, because the local 'big-wigs' had determined that the newspaper men should dine apart, in another hotel; and once Disraeli, when touring in Buckinghamshire, shut himself up in his room on learning of a similar resolve, and sent word to his hosts that he would remain there until the journalists were accorded a place at his table."

THE ACADIAN

WOLFVILLE, N. S., JUNE 6, 1890.

Acadia College Anniversary.

The anniversary exercises of the present week have been most successful and should be of great encouragement to the friends of Acadia. The attendance has been large throughout and the various exercises have been of a highly interesting nature.

The public exercises in connection with the anniversary began on Sunday, when the baccalaureate sermon was preached in the Baptist church by Rev. J. W. Manning, of Halifax, from 1 Corinthians iii., 10.

The closing exercises of Horton Collegiate Academy were held in College Hall on Wednesday afternoon at 2:30. The matriculating class consists of fifteen students, only five of whom delivered essays.

The first speaker, William R. Parsons, of Halifax, spoke on "Fidelity Protection." He reviewed the history of this important industry—fishing—as connected with England and America and the legislation made respecting it.

L. A. Cooney, of Grafton, was the next speaker and his subject, "Academic Endowment." He spoke of the great need of facilities in carrying on the work in Horton Academy and made a strong plea for the raising of a fund for the benefit of this institution.

The last essay was given by Miss Blackadar, of Hampton, N. B. The subject was "Food." She showed how necessary food is to life of all kinds and in all stages. Physical food, mental food, spiritual food are all essential to growth, to existence.

This year, for the first time in the history of the Academy, diplomas were awarded to full matriculants. Following are the class, of whom the first seven received diplomas:

Miss Helena Blackadar, Hampton, N. B. Miss Etta Cook, Wolfville, N. S. Frank C. Ford, Port Williams, N. S. J. Edgar Higgins, Wolfville, N. S. Warren I. Moore, Wolfville, N. S. Allison Payzant, Dartmouth, N. S. Charles H. Read, Port Elgin, N. B. L. A. Cooney, Grafton, N. S. William Creelman, Grafton, N. S. John Magee, Cornwallis, N. S. Archibald Mason, Tanook, N. S. William R. Parsons, Halifax, N. S. Lindsay Slauswhit, Tanook, N. S. George Starr, Starr's Point, N. S. Lew Wallace, Wolfville, N. S.

At this stage the Principal stated that one of the teachers of the Academy had resigned his position to take a course at Harvard. Miss Blackadar advanced and presented the retiring teacher, Mr. E. R. Morse, on behalf of the Academy, with a handsome dictionary and read an appropriate accompanying address.

ACADIA SEMINARY.

The closing exercises of the Seminary took place in College Hall on Wednesday evening. The Seminary graduation exercises are always one of the pleasant features of Anniversary. The Hall was beautifully decorated with flowers and foliage and presented a very pretty appearance.

The salutatory essay was delivered by Miss Lowe, of Amherst. Her subject was "Power of the Individual." In the great movements which have influenced the world the power has been in individuals not in armies.

"The Hermetic Art," was the subject of the essay of Miss Walker, of Yarmouth. The speaker traced the history of the theory of alchemy to the science of chemistry. Alchemy was to chemistry what astrology is to astronomy.

"The Venerable Bede," was spoken to by Miss Bliss Franklin, of Wolfville. This essay was gracefully written and was delivered in a pleasing manner. The speaker gave a glowing tribute to the memory of this venerable ecclesiastic, "the father of English learning," and said that while other names shone more brightly in literature and history, this gentle, pure, simple-minded scholar and writer was deserving of all praise and veneration.

The fourth essay was written in French and the subject, "Les quatre Genies de la France." The speaker, Miss Ella Chipman, of Berwick, seemed to have a good acquaintance with the language of "Belle France," and her delivery was distinct and pleasing.

Miss Archibald, of Sackville, was the next speaker, and the subject of her essay, "Aurora Leigh." This most extensive work of Mrs. Browning was handled in a manner indicative of careful study of the work, and of considerable critical power on the part of the essayist.

This was one of the best essays and was delivered in an excellent manner. Miss Brown, of Yarmouth, spoke on "The Divine Art." Music is the language of the soul. Good music has a logic of its own. The speaker reviewed the history of music from the ancient Egyptians to the present time.

As painting had exceeded sculpture, so music was destined to exceed painting. The great masters, Mozart, Mendelssohn and Beethoven, were referred to in terms of praise and admiration. This essay was gracefully written and displayed no little originality.

"Three Great Pictures" was the subject of the essay of Miss Halfkenny, of Wolfville. The speaker described in glowing and beautiful way the great master piece of Leonardo da Vinci, "The Last Supper," which renders famous the convent of Santa Maria delle Grazie; Raphael's crowning effort, "Moses;" and "The Last Judgement," by Michael Angelo. The essay was clothed in exquisite language and was rendered with fine effect.

The last essay was delivered by Miss Ina Maria Chipman, of Berwick. The subject was "Women of Fiction and of History." The creations of George Eliot and Shakespeare were referred to. These are not so much inventions as existences. But whatever impression the lives of fictitious characters may have upon us, they do not impress us in the same degree that real personages do.

The influence for good of such lives as those of Lady Rachel Russell, Mme. de la Tour, and others referred to, is incalculable. No life can be passed and no life influenced thereby very prettily and feelingly was the usual valedictory given by the last speaker.

The graduating class is composed of nine young ladies who received diplomas in the following order:— Classical Course: Mabel Evangeline Archibald, Sackville; Evelyn Ellen Annie Lowe, Amherst. Literary Course: Alice Monita Brown, Yarmouth; Ella Chipman and Ina Maria Chipman, Berwick; Bliss Tremaine Franklin and Lalla Annis Laura Halfkenny, Wolfville; Jennie Seabourne Walker, Yarmouth. Vocal Music: Mary Elizabeth Nelson.

Music of a high order was rendered by young ladies of the Seminary and was listened to with much pleasure. Addresses were given by Hon. J. W. Longley and Rev. Mr. Cobourn.

At 11 o'clock on Thursday began the closing exercises of the College. This year Acadia sends forth the largest number of graduates of a year in her history. The graduating class consists of nineteen, the names of whom are as follows:— B. H. Bentley, Shefield's Mills; F. J. Bradshaw, Centreville; P. E. I. H. W. Brown, Wolfville; W. W. Chipman, Bridgetown; C. A. Eaton, Amherst; P. R. J. F. Eaton, Canard; J. F. Harris, Canard; J. F. Herbin, Windsor; Miss A. G. Jackson, Port Williams; C. R. Minard, Wolfville; F. S. Messenger, Paradise; N. A. McNeil, Long Creek; P. E. I. J. B. Pascoe, Dorchester; N. B. G. P. Raymond, Helton; F. M. Shaw, Wolfville; W. B. Wallace, Wolfville; H. F. Waring, St. John; C. M. Woodworth, Weston.

W. B. Wallace was the first speaker and "The Dual Language Problem in Canada" was his subject.

Though for many apparently valid reasons unity of language may seem desirable for Canada, yet coercion as a means to this end, in the light of past observation and experience, appears unwise and impolitic. The firm allegiance of the French Canadians to, and deeds of valor for their new home-land, Canada, since she passed from France to England's hands, gives to coercion a hateful appearance of harshness and injustice.

Yet there is reason to believe that community of language will one day be the rule in Canada. Necessity and convenience, hand in hand with natural law, will bring about the desired end, and out of the death of years will spring a people bound by stronger tie than love of flag, or unity of hopes, speaking a common language, the Anglo-Deorum tongue.

Cicero's "De Natura Deorum" was the subject of the essay of J. E. Eaton, of Truro. Man has ever had an intuitive belief in the existence of Gods. Their nature can only be deduced by reason, or system of Philosophy. This question "Concerning the Nature of the Gods," has always exercised the minds of men. Thus we find Cicero among others considering it. He introduces his readers into an imaginary conversation, in which the chief exponents of three different systems of Philosophy are represented, the Epicurean, the Academic and the Stoic.

The views and objections of each are given in the form of a dialogue. Cicero himself acts as judge, and decides impartially in favour of the Stoic doctrine, which presents a curious mixture of monotheism and polytheism, but has much in common with Theism, as existing at present. The book itself is well written, and gives much valuable information, as it contains a digest of the views of all important thinkers at and before that time and comprises what would otherwise be attained only by a vast amount of study and research.

G. P. Raymond spoke on "The Hudson Bay Route." Canada's future is full of grand possibilities. The great extent and fertility of her soil, the abundance of her minerals, timber and fish, and her complete system of railways—in all these lies great capabilities for her advancement. That a practical route via Hudson Bay and Straits would be attended with great advantage to Canada's progress is apparent. Such a route would afford a short transit for carrying freight from Canada to Europe. Railways would then be constructed to ports on the south-west coast of Hudson's Bay which would open the country to the pursuits of farming, lumbering and mining.

If such a route were established the fishing and trade of Hudson's Bay would probably be better regulated and protected. But such a project would be attended with many difficulties. Ice in large quantities, prevalence of storms, tidal currents, heavy ice, liable to drift vessels into the bay, making working of the compass owing to magnetic changes arising from the near approach to the magnetic pole—these impede navigation through Hudson's Strait in a great degree. As the need for such a route increases these difficulties may, to some extent, be overcome.

H. F. Waring spoke on "Mythology, an Index to the People's Character." Mythology is the theology of the heathen. The speaker treated the subject under three headings—savage mythology, barbarian mythology, and psycho mythology. He showed how nations had unconsciously attributed to their deities their own peculiar natures.

The Greeks with love for the beautiful and graceful worshipped Apollo. The Scandinavians, bold and warlike, worshipped Thor.

"The Relative Influence of the Poet and Statesman on National Life," was the subject of the essay of Miss Jackson, of Port Williams. Nationality, in distinction from empire, is founded on a novel unity intrinsic in the human race, rather than on military force. The work of the statesman has reference to social organizations of the people, which are the result of moral unity. Hence the statesman's work is to the people's life what discipline is to the education of a child; it furnishes those conditions in which progress can best be made. The poet's work on the other hand, is that of an instructor. It falls directly upon the individual and appeals to the emotions as well as to the intellect. To define the limits of these two departments of man's activity which work into each other so intricately were by its nature an impossible task. Whatever may be peculiar to either of them, giving them distinctive spheres of operation, they join hands in this, to lift the people by knowledge and culture a little nearer the Godlike—the highest aim of life.

C. M. Woodworth, spoke on "Politics in a System of Education." The aim of the best education is to form the best character for life's work. Hence politics, which treats of duties, rights and relations of citizens and nations claims first rank among the agencies for education. It presents finer problems on grander issues than does the study of languages, mathematics or science and tends to produce effective citizen, and a grand nationality. As basal and essential to the study of politics should be the study of the ethics of citizenship and the development of a noble patriotism, the one furnishing the best guide for conduct, the other developing right springs of action. Politics is an excellent educator and its utility to citizens is undeniable. The genius of our race and the spirit of our age demands a more thorough study of its elements in our colleges and schools. More attention should be given the history, resources and constitution of our own country. The teaching of Economics has been a well marked success. The channels in the future and the dying out of the idea that it is pious to neglect political duties show that, for directing the potent forces of the present as well as for giving the finest education, Politics should be well taught in a system of education.

"Livingstone and Stanley" was the subject of the essay delivered by C. A. Eaton. For thirty centuries Africa has been the world's great puzzle. A strange and significant fact is that amidst the greedy graspings of an earth-encircling commerce and the universal lust of national conquest, that with all the untiring efforts of a consecrated, intelligent, missionary enterprise this marvelous continent has lived, struggled and died into itself unknowing and unknown. Fifty years ago it was given to English money and English men to break the eternal silence and introduce wandering Africa to a wondering world. Among the many famed for successful African exploration David Livingstone and Henry M. Stanley stand first. Livingstone spent 33 years in Africa. Stanley is famous for his explorations on the Congo and his relief of Emin Pasha. These grand characters teach us that even yet true worth and heroic work for God and fellow man receives from the world recognition and reward. But what of Africa? It stands to-day as it has stood for centuries, a challenge to civilization. The traffic in slaves and rum has turned the whole continent into a festering sore. It is for the English speaking nations to save Africa and no other. It can be done only by a just and humane administration of the country, by the establishment of a legitimate commerce and above all by a consecrated common sense system of Christian Missions.

The last essay was a valedictory poem given by W. W. Chipman, of Bridgetown, entitled "Janque Vale." It would be useless to attempt to describe it. The poem displayed poetical talent of a high order. Some passages were truly extraordinary. It was delivered in a pleasing style and was well received by the audience. Music was furnished by the College Double Quartette, which has delighted many audiences in Wolfville, and the Amherst Band.

Honorary certificates were awarded as follows:—In the Sophomore class—G. D. Chipman, natural science; McFarlane, natural science; McLean, history; Scaman, history. In the Junior class—Bass, natural science; Corey, English literature and history; Fash, history; Litch, history; R. O. Morse, English literature; Hutchings, history; Secord, natural science. In the Senior class—Chipman, physics; J. E. Eaton, classics; Miss Jackson, metaphysics; F. M. Shaw, classics and psychology; Waring, psychology and history; O. M. Woodworth, moral philosophy and modern languages.

The degree of B. A. was then conferred on members of the graduating class. The degree of M. A. on Rev. M. B. Shaw, of Berwick, Charles H. Day, of Yarmouth, Stephen Seiden, of Halifax, and Rev. A. J. Faulkland, of Seranton, Penn., in course; and on Rev. J. E. Goucher, honorary. A chair of political economy and history has been founded by Mark Curry, Esq., of Windsor, and will be known as the Mark Curry professorship. It is understood that a chair of science is also to be founded and that the Alumni will assume its liability. The need of a suitably-equipped gymnasium on the hill has long been apparent. An attempt is being made to fill this want and with every prospect of success. The President stated that the Senior class had started a fund for this purpose and had headed it with $200; the Juniors had supplemented this with $100 more; the Sophomores, Freshmen and Academy students with the same amount—making in all $600. The Governors have decided to add $500 to this amount and $500 more is needed. This amount will probably be raised and the gymnasium erected this summer. Addresses were made by Judge Graham, of Halifax; and Attorney-General Longley. THE CONVERSATION. The anniversary was brought to a close by a conversation last evening in Assembly Hall, which, with the adjoining rooms, was very tastefully decorated for the occasion with flags and flowers and looked exceedingly pretty. A large and appreciative audience was present. Excellent music was rendered by the Amherst band and was thoroughly enjoyed. During the evening a programme of an hour in length was rendered by the "Leipzig Trio" and received showers of applause. The affair was a most enjoyable one and reflected the utmost credit upon the class of '90.

STRAY LEAVES

FROM "Book of Wonders." (LESLIE LORING DAIVSON.) With a Preface by Harl Harloe. Edited by Ben Zeene.

In the death of Leslie L. Davison, the author of the "Book of Wonders," Nova Scotia certainly lost a brilliant writer. It was with real regret on my part that I read the concluding article in that very interesting series of articles which has been running in the ACADIAN during the summer months, entitled "Book of Wonders," contributed by Ben Zeene. Such articles as "Down," "The Happy Hunting Grounds," "A Graveyard Vision," "The Last Hour," and the poem in the concluding article, "The Long Ago," are really extraordinary. In reading them it is difficult to imagine that their author was but a boy of sixteen. . . . The author of the series of articles tells us that he wrote a story, but does not give it to the public. Will not Ben Zeene favor us with this also? Better still, why not collect his complete works and publish them in one form? I am sure every one who has read this series of articles would hail such a course with delight and would be impatient for its publication. "READER," in ACADIAN of Sept. 27th, 1889.

"Shades of my Grandfather."

No! not exactly that, but Shades of all kinds for hanging on people's windows to keep the sun, moon, dust, flies, frost, inquisitive gazers, in fact a shade that is useful for many purposes. A well dressed window is a sign of refinement to passers, and a source of satisfaction to those within the house. You say, "It is all very well to talk about pretty furnishings, but it takes lots of money to buy them." Well, if you buy these things in some places we will agree with you, but if you buy from us we can fit you out so cheap, for instance:

- 1 Sett Curtains, $1.00
1 Dado Shade, .80
1 Curtain Pole, .65
$2.45.

Who would be without these improvements when they can be had at such a trifling cost, besides the convenience, no rolling up shades on a stick and punching the cloth full of holes, till it looks like a milk strainer.

We are the headquarters for Curtains, Shades, Curtain Poles, the largest and best assorted stock in Wolfville. Ten patterns in Dado Shades, besides numerous patterns in "Lancaster" Linens and Cambrics. We have also samples of over forty more shades which can be ordered at short notice. All shades are mounted on first-class rollers, no tacks used in putting them on, all fastened with "Wyant's" patent clasp. "Haswell's Patent Guide" will prevent the shades from running crooked, only 15c extra.

Curtain Poles!

All lengths for Bay Windows, Screens, &c. A novel feature in these is the Link Joints, so that a pole can be fitted around the curve of a Bay Window, thereby having the recess of the window in the room.

Don't forget, we will put these shades on your windows free of charge, and will guarantee our Rollers to stand. We sell no trashy goods.

Splendid assortment of Curtains in white and colors. We are the pioneers in the shade business in this town and intend to sell cheaper than anyone, notwithstanding the solicitations of other dealers to put our prices up.

Acacia Villa School.

The closing exercises of Acacia Villa school, Horton Landing, A. McN. Patterson, principal, were conducted on Tuesday, May 28th. In the forenoon the classes passed a thorough and very satisfactory examination in Reading, Spelling, Grammar, Arithmetic, Euclid and Algebra. There was a small class in Latin and French. In the afternoon the hall was crowded with neighbors and friends of the school, and a number of parents of boys from various parts of the Province were present. Among those from your town were Miss Graves, principal of the Young Ladies Seminary, and Madam Bower. After the exam. of a class of 12 in Natural Philosophy, and one of six in Censor, both of which were well up in their work, there was a literary and musical programme, which was superior to any previous thing of the kind in our memory. The recitations and dialogues were all good, but the audience were most pleased with "the school," of which Master Allen Shefford was the Patriotic Irish-American teacher. Music is becoming quite a feature in the school, and both the instrumental and vocal were highly creditable to teachers and pupils. Miss M. Fitch teaches the violin and Miss Ida Jones the piano; the latter also teaches French, and their boys with four or five violins and the piano delighted all who heard them. A number of the boys have fine voices and sing several songs together in perfect harmony. At the close Allen Shefford delivered the valedictory, an original essay entitled the Elizabethan Age. In matter, style and delivery this essay was equal to nine-tenths of the baccalaureate orations at our Colleges. I understand Master Shefford will matriculate at King's College and is destined for the ministry. I predict he will be heard from in the future. The day closed with the National Anthem, school and audience singing to the accompaniment of four violins and the piano. The name of the school is Acadia Villa, from the Acadia trees going about the house, not Acadia as some of the papers have it. The College at Wolfville is the only institution bearing the name Acadia that I know of. The school was founded by J. R. Hea, D. C. L., now of Montreal; but the present principal, A. McN. Patterson, has taught it for more than a quarter of a century, and under his able management Acadia Villa has become popular all over the Province. The number of boarders last term was 45, and day scholars seven, making a total of 52, the largest number ever attending. Several of the boys were boarded at Duneden Cottage. The distinguishing features of Mr Patterson's school it seems to me are its thoroughness in the primaries and its home-like character. Parents know that their boys will find a home here and will be as carefully looked after out of school as in. They are as well trained, morally and physically as intellectually. A sound mind in a sound body, and a right spirit within, are the aim of the Principal's training at Acadia Villa. OLD PUPIL.

BADLY BOTHERED.

Ex-Governor Warrumbell Tells a Good Story of His Own Experiences. 'I was an ex-Governor of the Province of New Brunswick, and I was a member of the Executive Council of the Province of New Brunswick.'

What is to be done about it? One way is for society to take charge of every homeless child and provide for it an environment that will tend to develop its better qualities.

Let society take charge of all children that are not being properly trained, whether they have parents living or not. It will be as well to settle down to the work of growing up in wickedness until maturity, and then board them in jail or work-houses.

Something can be done by improving homes, but as a rule those who have gone so far as to settle down to the work of growing up in wickedness until maturity, and then board them in jail or work-houses, are almost hopeless.

BARON MUNCHAUSEN. He Turns Up Again as Alive and as Chipping as Ever. A native newspaper published at Bitlis, in Asiatic Turkey, narrates the following remarkable story.

How Two Men Fought for a Lady and a Seal. Something like fifty years ago two young men, one a lawyer and the other a doctor, loved the same girl in the town of Grand Gulf, Miss.

THEY MEANT TO KILL. When two men fought for a lady and a seal, the result was a tragedy. The heat apparently roused the animal from its torpor; it began to move its body, and suddenly flew into the air, still holding the man by the leg.
