Newcastle Citizens Hold Public Meeting

To Decide About Celebration on August 4th, The Anniversary of Declaration of War

The public meeting, called by Mayor Stothart to determine what would be fitting in the way of a celebration on the 4th August, that being the anniversary of the Declaration of War by England, was held in the Town Hall on Monday evening, and owing to the short notice given, there was a very small representation of citizens.

Mayor Stothart called the meeting to order and Magistrate J. R. Lawlor was appointed chairman, J. H. Brown, secretary.

Mayor Stothart, after explaining the nature of the meeting, read the following communications:

Sackville, N. B., July 19, 1915

Dear Sir:

I have a circular letter from Henry Cust, Chairman of the Central Committee, for National Patriotic Organization. It is dated, London, Eng., 16th of June, 1915. I enclose herewith the most important clauses contained in the circular. I am sending these to the Mayors of the different cities and towns throughout the Province.

Will you be good enough to take such steps as you think are best suited to local conditions in your town and as will make the celebration a success worthy of the occasion.

Yours truly,

JOSIAH WOOD,
Lieutenant-Governor.

His Worship,
The Mayor of Newcastle,
Newcastle, N. B.

The Central Committee for National Patriotic Organizations,
Hon. President—The Prime Minister,
Vice-Presidents—The Right Hon. The Earl of Rosebery, K. G., The Right Hon. Arthur James Balfour, M. D.

Chairman—Mr. H. C. Cust.

Dear Sir:

This Committee is to carry the spirit of the Imperial meeting at the Guild Hall on May 19th under the Presidency of the Lord Mayor of London at which the Prime Minister proposed a vote of thanks to the Empire outside the British Isles for their splendid services rendered during the war. The Central Committee are anxious that public meetings of a patriotic and Imperial nature should be held throughout the Empire on August 4th next, the anniversary of the Declaration of War against Germany. Steps are being taken by us to carry out this idea in Great Britain. The Secretary of State for the Colonies has given his approval and support and the High Commissioners and Agents General, who have taken up the suggestion with enthusiasm, are making the necessary arrangements for inviting the co-operation of the Dominions. The Committee feel sure that the other dependencies of the Crown will be glad to participate in this demonstration of the solidarity and enthusiasm of the Empire in the cause of the Allies, and its increasing determination to carry on the conflict until a peace, honorable, durable and satisfactory, is assured. I would ask you to be so good as to lay the proposal before the Chambers of Commerce in the hope that they will give as much publicity as possible to the campaign and undertake the arrangements of such demonstrations in the Capital and in such other towns as may appear to them to be expedient.

The following resolution is suggested by the Committee for submission at all meetings:

"That on this anniversary of the Declaration of a righteous war, this meeting of the citizens of Newcastle, records its inflexible determination to continue to a victorious end the struggle in maintenance of those ideals of liberty and justice which are the common and sacred cause of the Allies."

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
HENRY CUST,
Chairman.

The chairman then called the meeting open for discussion.

Rev. Mr. Harrison suggested that if it were possible to secure one or two prominent speakers to come to Newcastle, that much could be accomplished in the way of increasing the enthusiasm of the people, bringing more strongly to their minds the seriousness of this war, and by this much valuable assistance would be rendered recruiting. There would be a general demand all over the Province for these speakers, and quick action should be taken. An urgent appeal is now being made for machine guns, and if our people were brought to a full realization of how matters are at present with the Allied armies, they would make a stronger effort to lend their assistance. He suggested the appointment of a committee to take the matter in hand.

Mr. E. A. McCurdy called the attention of the Chairman to the presence at the meeting of His Honor Judge McLatchy, of Campbellton, whom, he said, might offer some valuable suggestions.

Judge McLatchy said he had come to the meeting for the purpose of getting a few ideas for the benefit of his own town. A meeting had been held in Campbellton the other evening along the same lines, and when he saw the notice of this meeting, he thought he would attend. It had been discussed at the meeting of the Campbellton citizens the advisability of getting two prominent speakers, Sir George E. Foster and the Hon. Mr. Marcell. Both these gentlemen have Dominion-wide reputations as speakers, and he would advise getting both of them, or even one. The services of the band could then be had and our hall filled. He suggested having printed slips for distribution during the meeting to those likely to donate. The idea was to get the people together, and if possible, impress most forcibly upon them the real condition of affairs at the present time. More men were required, and we must put forth our best efforts. The papers are continually calling for more men, but many of us fail to recognize the seriousness of the matter. We ought to do all we possibly can, "but," the speaker said, "do we do all we possibly can?" We must put our hand to the plow and go forward. We have gone into the thing too light-heartedly. This meeting had been advertised, but the work had been left to about twenty-five people. No people's hearts burn any better than our own; we are sending our sons to the front, and only about five or ten per cent. of the people left behind are subscribing to the different funds. The speaker said, while not wishing to give any particular prominence to Restigouche, that county, in proportion to size, was doing as well as any other part of the province. The people must be enthused with the spirit of patriotism and giving; we must drive home the full responsibility that rests upon each one of us, and we must all work together. Men who have no work, in many cases have wealth, and should use it. A man who stands back and does nothing is a discredit to the country.

Mr. McCurdy said he thought it would be fitting for the Town of Newcastle to give the matter serious consideration and organize a celebration worthy of the town. It need not be along the line of a celebration of victory, because the present position of the contending armies does not justify a celebration of that nature. Every town and village can do all in their power, however, by contributing of their means towards the various organizations for raising funds. He would suggest that we engage the band and hold a parade. Prominent speakers from outside might be procured, who would put the matter before our people and thus assist to a marked degree, recruiting. There are two ways we can assist the Mother Country—sending men to the front, and by contributions. The British army and our Canadian troops are not equipped as well as are the Germans. This is a decided handicap to our Canadian soldiers, and we should make it our business to see that it is remedied. Only by a united effort can we accomplish this. A wave of enthusiasm is now over the Dominion, and soon this disparity will be overcome. We are now in the serious part of the fight and we must go fully into it. Time is the essence of success, and if we wish to succeed we must not procrastinate. Germany has been preparing for the past forty or fifty years, while all other armies have been sleeping. There is no question of the ultimate result of this great war, because the side of right must surely win. By being thoroughly equipped with machine guns, many Canadian lives will be saved. If Committees are appointed (Continued on page 4)

ACTIVE WORKERS BEGIN TO FORGE AHEAD IN BIG VOTING CONTEST

Beautiful and Useful Prizes Make Strong Appeal to Appreciative Contestants who Count Upon Earnest Effort to Make Them Winners—Deserving Contestants Realize That Only Work Brings Success

$400 Lonsdale Piano, The First Prize, Has Arrived

With a total of nineteen ladies entered by themselves or friends, as contestants in the Advocate $700 Prize Voting Contest, the great prize distribution affair may now be considered to be in full swing.

The big question, which will be asked, and repeated time and time again between now and August 26, on which date the winners will be known, is: "Who will be the winners?" To this question there will perhaps be as many questions as there are contestants. For the present, at least, the chances of all contestants would appear to be fairly equal. If all contestants were now putting the same energy and determination into their efforts, the chances would be equal. Apparently, however, such is not the case, for reported which have been reaching the contest department the last few days from friends of contestants who are watching the progress of their respective favorites with keen interest, indicate that some contestants are displaying more activity than others, and that the next few days will witness a marked separation between the workers and the wishers.

Those ladies who are active workers, are the ones, of course, who have firmly grasped the all important fact that, in this contest, just the same as in all the big things in life where success is sincerely desired, there is one all-potent, dependable, never-failing element upon which success is surely built. That element is just plain, every-day, honest, faithful, persistent, determined effort. While the dreamer, the wisher, the idler, builds his or her air-castles, and dreams dreams of what he or she would like to have and be, and while the idler dillys on the byways of life, the worker faces facts and conditions, honestly and fearlessly as he or she finds them, and works, works, works, with steady progress towards the goal of success. The Advocate contest will be an object lesson which will demonstrate in material terms the great principle that success comes, not to those who dream, and wish, and passively desire, the good things of life, but to those who work for them. At this time, no one, of course, can predict with any degree of certainty who the winners in the Advocate voting contest will be. Another week or so will be required perhaps, to separate the workers from the wishers. But within a short time this separation will come about, and seven or eight contestants will stand forth as the real workers, and possible winners in the contest. Then, within the remaining few weeks of the contest, which will fly with almost unbelievable speed; the principle of the "survival of the fittest" will assert itself, and those with the most stick-to-it-iveness, resourcefulness, energy, enthusiasm and confidence in themselves and their ability to achieve success will forge ahead of their competitors, and rush ahead to victory.

Exhibition of the $400 Lonsdale piano which will be awarded as first prize in the Advocate contest, will do more, by far, than words can do, to impress contestants and the public with the beauty, and merit of this prize. The piano has arrived in Newcastle, and just as soon as suitable arrangements can be made for its exhibition, it will be placed on view, and any contestant, or musician will have the privilege of "trying" the piano, and examining it as critically as one may choose to examine it. The Lonsdale Piano Co., of Toronto, who manufacture this instrument, welcome the most rigid tests of their product that can be made, as each and every piano they concern puts on the market is built of the very finest materials procurable, and only workmen of the highest skill are employed in their factory. The tone is perfect, and in every little particular the Lonsdale is guaranteed to be an absolutely first-class piano. No matter what price she might pay for a piano, were she to buy one, the winner of the Advocate first prize, could not get a better piano than will come into her possession on August 26.

No woman who loves home life, who takes pride in her home equipment, and who appreciates a properly appointed table, can fail to look upon the beautiful cabinet of flat silverware which will be awarded as second prize, with any feeling less than that of keen desire. Nothing more beautiful, for real use in the home, could be imagined than the finest plated silverware which make up this prize, together with the handsome polished oak cabinet containing the collection. This silverware is manufactured by the Canadian Wm. A. Rogers, Limited, of Toronto, by whom it is guaranteed. This company for generations has stood squarely behind every article of its manufacture, and now, as in the past, the unwavering policy of the company is to make "quality" the watchword, and to guarantee to every purchaser of a "Wm. A. Rogers" product that he or she receives the best article of its kind which the money will buy. The second prize in the Advocate contest will consist of the heaviest sectional plated ware made. Not only by its winner, but by generations to follow, will this prize be used and treasured. The guaranteed retail value of this prize is $150.00.

Exceptional beauty, as well as a high degree of usefulness, also mark the third prize. This will be a five piece silver tea service, in the plain pattern now so much preferred by people of cultivated tastes. Each piece is ebony mounted, which feature adds appreciably to their attractiveness. This silverware, also, is from the Canadian Wm. A. Rogers, Limited, 570 King Street West, Toronto, and is extra heavily plated. The Canadian Wm. A. Rogers Limited guarantee goes with this beautiful tea service, and the lady who wins it will have the assurance of positive knowledge that nothing of superior quality can be obtained. This prize is also guaranteed as to its retail value of $100 by the manufacturers.

The winner of the fourth prize will receive an extraordinarily fine collection of genuine cut glass, manufactured by the Wallaceburg Cut Glass Works, Wallaceburg, Ont. This concern specializes in light cut glass—in fact they are the only manufacturers of this particular line in Canada and their product has met with an exceptionally favorable reception among persons of refined tastes. Simplicity is the distinguishing feature of this cut glass. The patterns are extremely pretty, and nothing more artistic could find a place on a carefully appointed table. This prize is $50 retail value.

This week the names of twenty ladies who have entered the contest of their own account or who have been nominated by friends, are published for the first time. Not all of these ladies are expected to be active workers—in fact it is known that some of them are making no positive effort to get votes—among the twenty there are a number of highly promising vote getters, and several who are known to have accomplished very creditable results already. Next week the vote standing of each contestant will be published, and each week until the close of the contest the standing will be shown.

Many readers will doubtless indulge considerable curiosity as to the identity of Miss "A." In regard to this it is sufficient now to say that Miss "A" is one of the real workers in the contest, who for quite valid personal reasons does not desire her name published. She is, therefore, designated Miss "A" for the purpose of making it plain to other contestants and the public at large that she is a participant in the contest, and a possible prize winner.

Blackville Citizen Shows His Spirit of Patriotism

Mr. M. Schaffer is Paying $35 Per Month to a Volunteer With The 55th

M. SCHAFFER,
One of Blackville's Leading Merchants

The Advocate is pleased to produce in this issue a photo of one of Blackville's energetic and patriotic citizens, and a business man, in the person of Mr. M. Schaffer, who is conducting on an extensive scale a departmental business in that thriving locality.

While the Advocate's representative, in company with Mr. John S. Scott, who is conducting the Voting Contest in the interest of the Advocate, was in Blackville on Thursday last, a call was made on Mr. Schaffer, and a visit made through his up-to-date store. Here was found the very latest conveniences always found in a first class department store, even to the cash carrier system.

A visit through this store reveals an immense stock of all saleable wares, including an extensive line of furniture. Mr. Schaffer, who has a thorough knowledge of his business, has the faculty of being able to study the wants, wishes and tastes of his patrons, and in this particular he has laid the foundation for the success of his steadily increasing trade.

Besides being an energetic citizen and business man, Mr. Schaffer has a patriotic spirit worthy of any of the great men of our country. When the present war broke out, not having sons who could take their place on the firing line, and having a strong desire to show the patriotic blood that flowed in his veins, he made the splendid offer to the young men of Blackville that he would pay to the first one who would volunteer, the sum of $35.00 per month during the period of the war, and today Edward McPhail, of Blackville, who accepted his offer, is with the 55th Battalion now at Valcartier.

In this and many other ways, Mr. Schaffer has proven his worth as a citizen and his loyalty to the flag under which he enjoys his freedom. Knowing conditions as they exist in his native country, he knows the absolute need of the Empire's call to the men of Canada for assistance. In the matter of contributions for Red Cross and other purposes, Mr. Schaffer has always been found to the fore, always ready and willing to give, not particularly that his name may be placed with those of the generous-hearted, but because the true spirit of patriotism and loyalty runs in his veins, and Blackville is indeed lucky to have such a worthy citizen numbered as one of its residents.

Reception Tendered Blackville Volunteers

Citizens Met and Did Honor to Their Boys—Address and Presentation

On Friday evening the 9th inst., the citizens of Blackville held a very pleasant reception in honor of the five young men of that locality who have joined the 55th battalion, and who are now at Valcartier in training preparatory to their going to the front. The five young men who have answered the call of the Empire are Edward McPhail, Stanley McDonald, John Peterson, Joseph Ross and George Stewart.

In a very patriotic manner the citizens of this thriving village, showed their appreciation of the many way in which these young men so willingly volunteered their services to the cause of the Empire, and as a further tribute to their loyalty, subscribed a large sum of money to purchase presents for each one of them. A very appropriate address was read by Dr. L. Beaton, and the following presentations were made to the boys by Rev. H. T. Montgomery.

Edward McPhail, wrist watch*
Stanley McDonald, wrist watch.
John Peterson, wrist watch
Joseph Ross, wrist watch
George Stewart, fountain pen.

Major Donald, of the 55th battalion, who was present, made a very stirring speech, in which he outlined the great need of the young men of Northumberland to come to the assistance of the flag of Britain, the flag which means freedom and liberty to all who live beneath it. Speeches were also made by Mr. J. H. Dale, who made the collections to purchase the presents, and by Mr. John Williams, who is a Belgian, and who in his own sincere and patriotic manner, expressed his appreciation of the benevolence of the citizens of Blackville towards his native country.

An interesting program of music was also carried out, and in all a most pleasant reception was held, and best wishes extended to these young men that ere long this cruel war would cease and that they would return to home and friends as heroes of their King and Country. The Advocate hopes to be able to publish their photos in its next issue.

Confirmation at St. Mary's Church

One Hundred and Forty Young Persons Were Confirmed On Sunday

The Rt. Rev. Bishop O'Leary, accompanied by his Secretary, and a special preacher, reached Newcastle on last Saturday evening, for the purpose of administering the Sacrament of Confirmation for which the young people of the congregation, with some adults, have been preparing for some months past.

One hundred and sixty candidates presented themselves for instruction early in May, but as some wedding took place from time to time, one hundred and seven only were confirmed. On Sunday morning there were several services, because of the presence of the priests who came to render assistance. Father Dixon celebrated early Mass at 6.30 a.m., followed by His Lordship, the Rt. Rev. Bishop O'Leary, when the candidates for Confirmation received the Blessed Sacrament of the Eucharist. After the 8 o'clock Mass, celebrated by the Rev. Dr. Sibilet of the Eudist Order, and at which he preached a sermon suitable to the occasion, the Bishop examined the candidates on Christian Doctrine. The examination, severe and comprehensive, evidenced a very thorough knowledge of Christian teaching. The examination having been brought to a close, the Bishop administered Confirmation, after which he addressed first, the young ones who were recipients of the Sacrament, and then, their parents.

The 10 o'clock Mass was offered by the Rev. Fr. Vautour, who acted as Secretary to the Bishop.

The Bishop and the several clergymen present left for Bridgetown at 1.30 o'clock. Fourteen candidates were there confirmed, having previously undergone a lengthy and severe examination, as at Newcastle. From Bridgetown the party left for Eel Ground where nineteen young persons were confirmed. Altogether one hundred and forty were confirmed on last Sunday by His Lordship Bishop O'Leary. Bridgetown and Eel ground are, at present, attended from Newcastle. The last Confirmation was administered three years ago.

Week's War News

Dunsmuir, July 22—Work was resumed all over the South Wales coal fields today, with practically all the 200,000 miners who went on strike back in the pits. No demonstrations attended the reopening of the mines.

Naples, July 22—Two thousand Italian volunteers from the United States were landed here today and received a great ovation. Headed by bands, they marched in procession through the principal streets, carrying the American and Italian flags.

Constantinople, (via London), July 23—There has been no change in the situation on the Gallipoli front in the past week. Both the Allies and the Turks have confined their efforts to desultory small arms fighting and sapping operations. The weather has been excessively warm.

Petrograd, July 23—The Germans are suffering men in their attempt to take Warsaw on a scale only comparable to the Galician campaign. Von Hindenburg in particular has given whole battalions to certain slaughter against the Russian strongholds north of Warsaw, according to official despatches. The Russian losses thus far have been comparatively light.

Petrograd, July 23—The great battle for Warsaw has reached its decisive stages. South of the Vistula the Russians have withdrawn to their strongly fortified outer defenses extending from Novo Gorkovsk to Ivanorod, and are checking the Austro-German advance. North of the river the right arm of the Russian army is holding Von Hindenburg at the Narow river and inflicting severe losses by sudden jabs against the German line.

Amherst News: It is understood that the officers and men of one of the companies now at the detention camp in Amherst, have applied to headquarters to be relieved from their work here and to be sent forward to the front. They are asking, in other words, a chance from home service to active service abroad. The report is that the captain of the company intimated his desire to go on active service and his men at once filed a request that he ask the military authorities to allow them to accompany him.

ITALY'S KING FACES DANGER WITH HIS MEN

Watching Italian Soldier Cut Wire Entanglement, Refused to Retire to Safety when Group Became Target for Austrians.

Udine, Italy, via Paris, July 19—King Victor Emmanuel recently stood his ground while he and a group of officers were the target of Austrian gunners, refusing to retire to a place of safety because he was interested in watching a young Italian soldier who was trying to cut the wire entanglements in front of the Austrian trenches. The King marked the progress of the wire cutter attentively from the time the latter left the Italian lines. The ruler and the officers about him attracted the attention of the Austrians, who began to shell them. The King was advised to retire from the spot, but declined. For a short time the Austrians did not see the wire cutter, but when they did discover him they made him the centre of a terrific fire. The soldier, however, redoubled his efforts and accomplished his work, returning to his own lines unharmed amid the cheers of his comrades. The King wished to congratulate the daring youth, and the soldier was brought before him. When asked his name the young man gave it, adding that he was a leader of the republican movement in Romagna, which tried to overthrow the Monarchy in June 1914. Now, he declared, he was determined to shed his last drop of blood for his King, the first soldier of the land.

Speech of Premier at Peace Congress Indicates Probability of Joining in Struggle
London, July 19—The Daily Telegraph's correspondent at Copenhagen says: "That it is not impossible that Sweden will enter the war was indicated by a speech of the Swedish Premier, Dr. Hammarskjold, in replying to a deputation representing the peace congress recently held in Varberg. The Premier said: "The Swedish government sincerely hopes to remain neutral, but it does not necessarily follow that peace can be maintained. It is as dangerous to believe Sweden favors war as to believe that she favors peace at any price."

Campbellton Boys Trim Bathurst Team

The Morell Bros. as Battery Won Splendid Game for Northern Town Team

The following is an account of a ball game played in Campbellton on Friday, the 16th inst., between Campbellton and Bathurst, in which Herb and Horace Morell, of this town, but now residing in Campbellton, as Campbellton's battery, won a splendid game for their town. The game was fast and interesting, despite the fact that the diamond was not in the best of condition. Horace Morell pitched glittered ball for the locals and allowed the visitors only three hits. The Bathurst boys played good ball, but were unable to connect with Morell's "back-breakers," and marvellous twists, hence no scores for Bathurst. Ulrich for the visitors tried hard to prove his right to fame, but the team behind him were off form.

It is expected that this game will mark the opening of the season in Campbellton, and probably several games will be staged between local teams.

A letter received from Herb Morell is to the effect that the Campbellton boys are very desirous of playing a game with the Newcastle boys some Wednesday afternoon, but so far have been unable to arrange a game. Of course our local team is at a great disadvantage in the way of being able to put up the real classiest stuff they were able to do a couple of seasons ago, due to the fact that a number of the best players are now playing a more important game with their German contestants across the way. However, we believe there is enough of the good quality left to give the northern town boys a run for first, and a game some Wednesday afternoon would be a good drawing card, and would be another opportunity for the Red Cross to make a few dollars. We trust the late defeat at the hands of Chatham will not discourage the home team so much so as to prevent a game with Campbellton being arranged.

YOUNG MAN, BELIEVED TO BE INSANE, THREATENS TO KILL PARENTS

Flourishing a knife and threatening to kill his parents, brother and sisters, a young man who works in the I. C. R. shops and resides with his parents on Main street west, caused considerable excitement yesterday afternoon, greatly alarming members of his family and nearby residents. The police were notified and soon after appeared on the scene but the young man had disappeared. About nine o'clock last evening Sgt. Belliveau visited the house where the young man lives and placed him under arrest.

It is understood that he will be given a medical examination today as it is believed that he is insane.—Moncton Times.

Popular Blackville Young Couple Wedded

Miss Myrtle D. Moorehouse and Mr. Victor N. Dunphy Joined in Wedlock

On Wednesday, July 21st, at seven o'clock in the evening, one of the prettiest weddings of the season took place at Upper Blackville, when Miss Myrtle D. Moorehouse, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Moorehouse, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Victor N. Dunphy, at the home of her parents, in the presence of about forty friends and relatives, Rev. A. K. Dunlop performing the marriage ceremony.

While the wedding march was being played, the groom and officiating pastor walked into the guest room, where the groom took his place under a beautiful floral arch of evergreen vines, ferns and wild roses, with a floral bell-shaped nosegay of blush roses overhead. The father of the bride came next with the bride leaning on his arm, and presented her to the groom under the arch.

Pastor Dunlop then performed the marriage ceremony, and after the usual congratulations were extended to the happy couple, a most delicious wedding dinner was served. The bride, who is one of the most popular young ladies of the community, was very prettily costumed in a marriage suit of white crepe de chene trimmed with lace and ribbons of white. She was the recipient of many beautiful presents of crystal, linen and silver sets of a very high quality, which testify to the esteem in which she is held by her large host of friends. The groom's present to the bride was a gold watch and chain, with her monogram engraved thereon.

At nine o'clock the newly married couple, followed by several carriages and most of the bridal party, went to the station where they took the ten o'clock express for Newcastle, enroute for Moncton, St. John and other towns in the province on their honeymoon trip. They were showered with rice and good wishes from their many friends. The bride's traveling dress was a unique suit of cream Panama cloth, and black picture hat trimmed with ostrich plumes.

Among the guests who were present were Mr. and Mrs. Judson E. Moorehouse of Blackville; Mrs. James Sheppard and daughter Isabelle, of Massachusetts; and Mrs. P. Burns and daughter Miss Agnes and Gertrude, of Fredericton.

Weak, Tired, Depressed

That is the Usual Condition of Persons Afflicted With Anaemia

Anaemia is the medical term for poor, watery blood. It may arise from a variety of causes, such as lack of exercise, hard study, improperly ventilated rooms or workshops, poor digestion, etc. The chief symptoms are extreme pallor of the face and gums, rapid breathing and palpitation of the heart after slight exertion, headaches, dizziness and a tendency to hysteria, swelling of the feet and limbs and a distaste for food. All these symptoms may not be present, but any of them indicate anaemia which should be promptly treated with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These Pills make new, rich blood which stimulates and strengthens every organ and every part of the body. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have made thousands of anemic people bright, active and strong. The following is one of the many cures. Mrs. Phillips, wife of Rev. W. E. Phillips, Princeton, Ont., says: "Some years ago, while living with my parents in England I fell a victim of anaemia. The usual complications set in and soon I became but a shadow of my former self. My mother, who had been a former nurse of many years experience, tried all that her knowledge suggested; tonics of various kinds were tried, and three doctors did their best for me, but without avail, and a continued gradual decline and death was looked for.

"Later my parents decided to join my brothers in Canada, and it was confidently expected that the ocean voyage, new climate and new conditions would cure me. For a time I did experience temporary benefit, but was soon as ill again as ever. I was literally bloodless, and the extreme pallor and generally hopeless appearance of my condition called forth many experiences of sympathy from friends whom we made in our new home in Acton, Ont. Later a friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and although in a condition where life seemed to have little to hope for I decided to do so. After using three boxes I began to mend. Continuing I began to enjoy my food, slept almost normally, and began to have a fresh interest in life as I felt new blood once again running in my veins. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills brought about a complete cure and I am today in robust health. My husband is rector of this parish and I have recommended the

UNDER-HAND FIGHTING

University Writers' Criticisms of "Made-in-Canada" is Superficial

"Show me a man who puts up a 'Made-in-Canada' placard and I will show you a man who hopes to increase his own private and personal profit, at your expense or mine, out of the movement."

The above extract is taken from an article signed "S.L." and occupying an editorial or semi-editorial position, which appeared in the April issue of the "University Magazine," a review which is published in Montreal and circulated chiefly among university graduates.

Throughout Canada, at the present time, there are thousands of "Made-in-Canada" placards displayed in the most important manufacturing, wholesale and retail establishments. In the advertisements and on the products of our leading manufacturers, whose reputations are national, and in many cases, international, the words "Made-in-Canada" appear. It is quite true, of course, that these "Made-in-Canada" placards and advertisements are intended to promote the sale of Canadian goods and, consequently, to yield legitimate profits to those who make and sell the goods; but "S.L." sees great wickedness in this and seems to infer that Canadian goods should be sold at cost or, better still, at a loss. Are we to assume that "Made-in-Germany" or "Made-in-Austria" goods were formerly sold in Canada without any regard for "private and personal profit" to those who made them, or that goods made in other countries are now being sold in Canada for similar disinterested motives?

Admitting that manufacturers and dealers who advocate the "Made-in-Canada" policy hope to derive personal benefit from it, which no reasonable person thinks of denying, surely they can also be given credit for a broader interest in the success of the movement and for entertaining the belief that the adoption of the policy will be of great advantage to other classes as well as to themselves.

M., Tuesday, August 3, 1915, for dredging required at Grand Lake, St. John River, N. B. Tenders will not be considered unless made on the forms supplied, and signed with the actual signatures of tenders. Combined specification and form of tender can be obtained on application to the Secretary, Department of Public Works, Ottawa. Tenders must include the towing of the plant to and from the work. The dredges and other plant which are intended to be employed on this work shall have been duly registered in Canada at the time of the filing of this tender with the Department, or shall have been built in Canada after the filing of the tender. Contractors must be ready to begin work within thirty days after the date they have been notified of the acceptance of their tender. Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, for five per cent. (5 p.c.) of the contract price, but no cheque to be for less than fifteen hundred dollars, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned. The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order, R. C. DESROCHERS, Secretary, Department of Public Works, Ottawa, July 19, 1915.

10 CENT "CASCARETS" IF BILIOUS OR COSTIVE

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Sluggish Liver and Bowels—They work while you sleep.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret tonight will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months.

Will This Prophecy Also be Realized?

Monk's Forecast Made in 1640 Has Been Fulfilled in Part—When Peace Comes

Senator David, city clerk of Montreal, recalls to mind a remarkable prophecy made in 1640 by a German monk named Hermann, which German as well as French papers have repeatedly published since the Franco-Prussian war of 1870-71.

When he was interested in a local French newspaper during the time of the war as a result of which Alsace and Lorraine were lost to France, the senator published the prophecy in his paper. In short, it was that France and Germany would meet in a tremendous struggle early in the seventies, (the prophecy was made in 1640). The monk further prophesied that France would be defeated, and that Paris would be besieged. The war would also mark the birth of a united Germany, and this, as events showed, proved to be exactly the case.

In the subsequent course of his prophecy, the monk Hermann, after having reviewed political and economic conditions in Europe, declared that France and Germany would again meet in a terrific struggle, in which many of the other nations of Europe would participate. It was prophesied that hundreds of thousands of lives would be lost, and that France would be devastated by the war.

Paris would not again be bombarded, but would be set on fire, the monk said, after which the French people would rise up and annihilate their foes. The end of the war would see the disintegration of the Germanic Empire, the banishment of the Emperor Wilhelm, who would be the last of the Hohenzollerns to sit upon the throne of Germany, and the establishment of a peace to which practically all the nations of Europe would be signatories.

The senator declared that last year he read in a French newspaper published in Paris, that the German people were exceedingly superstitious regarding the Hermann prophecy, and that even the Emperor, though ready for war at that time, feared to court a realization of the monk's prophetic vision.

The monk said that the second struggle between France and Germany would occur forty-three years after the first war. Forty-three years added to 1870 is 1913, but, and the senator smiled, forty-three added to 1871, the year the Franco-Prussian war ended, is 1914.

AN EXTRAORDINARY STATEMENT

There are few public men better known in Great Britain, than Mr. T. P. O'Connor, journalist and member of Parliament. He is also quite well known on this side the water, where he has paid several visits and seen for himself conditions as they are. It is with considerable surprise therefore that Canadians have read a remarkable statement he made in the British Commons a few nights ago, that

"The recently was speaking to one of the greatest men in Canada who, after referring to the war, made this strange observation. 'This is the last time Canada is going to do this.' He (O'Connor) was surprised, and on asking for an explanation, was told that we could not count in the future on a splendid contribution from Canada to our armed forces if we did not take 'Canada more into our confidence.'"

The informant whom Mr. O'Connor represents as "one of the greatest men in Canada" should either learn to think and talk sense, or keep better company when he is talking nonsense. Canada does not imagine for one moment that the money of her taxpayers or the blood of her sons is employed in the special or local defence of either England, Scotland or Ireland. Canada asks no thanks and wants no thanks for fighting in a war which is as much a battle for Canada, a battle for the United States, above all, a battle for liberty, as it is a battle for the people of the British Isles. "One of the greatest Canadians" was an impostor if he presumed upon "T. P.'s" ignorance of Canadian sentiments, or the "T. P." is an impostor if he invented a fictitious personage on the source of the words which represent Canada as the home of hucksters, whose rulers bargain as to the terms upon which Canadians fight, or refuse to fight, not for the safety of British shores, but for the safety of Canada, the security of this continent, and the welfare of humanity.

Canada does not give or refuse the money of her taxpayers or the lives of her sons, according to the success and failure of her attempt to bargain for a larger share in the management of the British Empire, "Canadians," as a contemporary once remarked, "are not Hessians, but free men."

The Chatham World says a recent visitor to that town complained that he "only found Chatham on the timetable after a search for it." By what other means would he expect to find it?

WASHINGTON'S LAST NOTE

Courteous and polite, yet at the same time, significant, is the note which President Wilson last week despatched to Berlin. The discussion of the points at issue between the United States and Germany has, because of the German habit of evasion, and the German disposition to confuse the situation by the injection of extraneous matters, been long drawn out, but this last note from Washington has an air of finality about it, that cannot be misunderstood. There seems to be nothing further left for the United States to say. The note sums up with great lucidity, calm dignity and directness, the American contentions that were set forth in detail in preceding communications, and it is difficult to see how Germany can further postpone a definite declaration of her intentions. The door is left sufficiently ajar for the entrance at the last minute of a proper realization of the calls of humanity, and it is for Germany to say what shall be the next thing.

The note while making no threats, amounts to an ultimatum. It declares that the United States will maintain its rights at any cost. That does not necessarily mean actual warfare with Germany, for there are other ways of making the power of the United States felt. One would be to sever every tie with Germany and her Allies, to shut them out completely from all intercourse with the American people. Another would be to encourage her enemies. Congress in special session doubtless would find ways and means to make the just anger of the American people felt by those who have aroused it. President Wilson has done well to show that he is tired of discussion, and he will be heartily supported by the people. What is to be the outcome of their efforts on behalf of the seas, of neutral rights and general decency, will be known in a few days.

County Court

County Court opened at the County Court House here yesterday morning, His Hon. Judge McLatchy presiding. There were no criminal cases and no jury. The following civil cases were heard:

Williston vs. Rundle—Action for the recovery of Solicitors fees between Attorney and client. Williston filed record for himself and H. A. Carr acted as Attorney for Rundle. Settled by parties.

McKay vs. Caesar—Hon. L. J. Tweedie for Plaintiff, A. Davidson for defendant. Upon application of defendant, the trial was postponed until Sept. 7 and defendant was allowed to issue commission for examination of witnesses in U. S. A.

The Judge also disposed of Chamber matters, principally matters of review.

Application was made under the new Naturalization Act, 1914, by Mr. J. E. Ander for naturalization papers, and was therefore held over until the September sitting.

Court adjourned to meet Sept. 7 to take up McKay vs. Caesar trial.

The celebration will be a complete success.

Chairman Lawlor suggested that a committee of five or seven gentlemen be appointed to secure the services of several speakers and the band. Those present at the meeting would do all possible to make the day a success.

Mr. McCurdy thought it would be advisable for the Town Council to take the matter up. Others would co-operate and assist in any suggestions made. Any necessary expenditures could be incurred by them. As a member of the Board of Trade he would be pleased to act on a Committee, but as he was shortly to go to the United States on other business, he regretted he would be unable to do so. Mr. McCurdy stated that the Board of Trade had already collected $100 for machine guns, and will have enough for two, and probably three. The Board has the assurance that others will come forward with suitable contributions, and combined with Chatham, some four or five guns will be furnished by the Miramichi for the 55th. The speaker concluded by saying he thought the Mayor's proposal to hold celebration was very fitting.

Mayor Stohart said he was pleased to hear a previous speaker remark about putting our hand to the plow. It reminded him of the quotation:

"He who with the plow would thrive
Himself must either hold or drive."
And so if our celebration was to be a success, we must put our hand to the plow and either hold or drive. He said the object of the meeting was to get the opinion of our citizens about a celebration. He would do all he possibly could on a committee. The committee, he said, could be made up from the Council, the Board of Trade and possibly from the Red Cross.

Ald. McKay was heartily in accord with the movement, and thought it also advisable for the Board of Trade to form a committee to work in conjunction with the Council and take the matter into consideration. Ald. Doyle said he would give all possible assistance, and thought Ald. McKay's suggestion was a good one. Would not be advisable to leave it entirely with the Council.

Ald. Stables agreed to do his part. He had heard talk about the government not being able to turn out machine guns in time, and if this were true, he thought the money raised could be used to better advantage. He enquired of Mr. E. A. McKay, who said he had heard something to the effect, but assured the meeting that arrangements could be made with the government to manufacture our guns first and leave their own orders till a later date. Our names, Mr. McCurdy said, would be stamped on our own guns.

Ald. Hayward said he favored the idea and would give his assistance. We could not be too much interested in the work, and favored the different committees joining.

The chairman thought it would be advisable to form into a committee of the Aldermen present and then get all other committees into a united action.

A motion by Ald. McKay, was seconded and carried, that this meeting send an invitation to each of the different societies in town to meet in conjunction with the Town Council to take action and make the necessary arrangements and to meet again in the Town Hall on Thursday evening at eight o'clock.

Rev. Mr. Harrison suggested that the meeting be advertised in the Advocate.

Ald. Doyle suggested that the Mayor get in touch with outside speakers right away.

The Mayor thought it would be better to wait until after Thursday night's meeting, but it was afterwards decided upon to take immediate steps. The meeting then adjourned.

A New Questions and Answers Department of Interest to Shooters

Readers are reminded that this column is open to questions which should be sent to me in care of the Sporting Editor, and to discussions by the readers on anything connected with hunting or target shooting.—A. P. L.

One of Newton's laws says that action and reaction are always equal and in opposite directions, which explains why firearms from the gentle .22 rifle to the muscle-pounding wild-cat gun, have a tendency to move in the direction of the shooter's shoulder.

If a rifle, shotgun or revolver were supported directly in line with the axis of the bore, the barrel would recoil straight back and would have no excuse for jumping upwards. Revolvers jump worse than other firearms because their load is heavier in proportion to their weight, and their support is relatively so much farther below the axis of the bore.

Many sportsmen are under the impression that this jump of a revolver barrel causes the bullet to fly wild and leads to the oft-repeated statement by the fairly good rifle shot that he can't shoot a pistol because he isn't able to hold the pistol tight enough to keep it from jumping and so spilling his aim.

Now, in the first place, there isn't a man living who can hold a large calibre revolver so that it will not jump, and in the second place, the effect of jump on the flight of the bullet is small and is a constant quantity which has been compensated for when the sights are put on in the factory. Therefore, if a man gives this excuse for poor pistol pointing you are safe in requesting him to tell his tale to the submariners.

A. D. H., Plymouth, Ind.

I have a rifle that is loaded. Can you inform me if there is any acid or chemical I could put in the barrel to eat the lead out and not injure the rifling if so, what is it and how long should it stand in the barrel?

Ans. Lead offers a very high resistance to the chemical action of the various acids and alkalies. It is extensively used in various manufacturers because of this fact. There are of course several different chemicals which will affect lead, but unfortunately all of the chemicals which will affect lead will affect in a much greater degree the iron or steel of the barrel. The best way to remove lead is to use a brass brush. Brass is softer than the iron or steel of the barrel and cannot harm it, for it is much harder than the lead and scrubbing the barrel with a brass brush will cut out the lead without harming the barrel.

Reader.

Will an autoloading shotgun shoot and penetrate as hard as a pump gun?

Ans. Yes, owing to the fact that the autoloading shotgun keeps the shell locked into the chamber.

WAR INVENTIONS

The statement that "Necessity is the mother of invention," has never been more demonstrated than by the present war. In times of peace the calls for invention and improvement are continued and often very urgent, but they are never so urgent, so great, or so vital as in a war of such proportions as the present.

It is generally accepted that Germany had been strenuously preparing for this world conflict for a number of years, and that in such preparing she had used the best brains of the empire. In doing so, she not only followed the old and well beaten paths but immensely improved them and developed new lines as well. The allies had been developing in the more peaceful directions and were not so well prepared when war broke out.

So with the enormous advantage of the highly developed German science, as applied to all lines of war preparation, there was little the allies could do in the early stages of the war to check the all but irresistible advance of Germany and her allies. As the German hordes poured through Belgium and France, some of their really terrible inventions of destruction became apparent, for the first time.

THE ROSS RIFLE

The Ross rifle was adopted by the Laurier Cabinet on the recommendation of Sir Frederick Borden, then Minister of Militia. He found that much delay in delivery occurred when he ordered rifles from England, and was afraid that at some critical time he might find ourselves practically without weapons. As someone jestingly put it, if the Americans ever invaded us we might have to borrow from them the guns with which to fight them. At the outset the Conservative party as a body favored the retention of the British rifle, although from the first General Hughes wanted a Canadian made arm and considered the Ross the equal of any other in the world.

Fortiwith the British rifle manufacturers started a crusade against it, striving for instance to have it ruled out at Bisley. Sometimes they said it was too light, then that it was too heavy; accidents which never occurred were reported; the trajectory that is the curve or path of the bullet through the air, was now too high and now too low; it was a poor weapon for target shooting, or else good for nothing else, and in actual war would be found worth less—this was the way in which the Ross rifle was attacked in England as well as in Canada. But, as improvements were made in it, the Canadian Militia began to set a high value on it, and during the present war some of our best shots have pronounced it superior to the Lee-Enfield.

Among the first of these was the enormous mortar used to destroy the forts of Namur and Antwerp, forts which it was thought could withstand practically any artillery. As a fact, they could withstand artillery known up to that date, but the inventive powers of the Germans had developed this enormous gun, which, with a very few shots from a very long distance, could completely silence forts which could not be taken in many months by the heaviest possible ordnance, previously devised. Shortly after this, it was discovered in the ill-fated battle of the Chilian coast, that the naval guns of the German boats were differently arranged than those of any other country. Their mounts were so made as to permit them an extreme elevation of about 30 degrees, enabling them to throw their shells to a much greater distance. So, in meeting vessels with guns of the same or even somewhat greater range, these German guns would completely outclass the enemy. They could shell and sink the enemy boats before the enemy boats could even get within shooting range. That is another enormously important invention of German science. Then came the latest development of the latest type of German submarine. In their submarine warfare, the Germans found that they could not safely depend upon the merchantmen to halt when called upon, many of them got away because of their superior speed. To prevent this, they again invented something. This time it was a compact high power disappearing gun so arranged within the submarine, that it may be raised, instantly through the top of the submarine and start firing the instant they come to the surface. Many of their recent captures have been made by shell fire by such guns. Then, when they found they could not pierce the allies lines, they resorted to that diabolical invention of the gas cylinder with which we are all so familiar in the daily news.

The allies have been in many cases able to offset these developments by equally wonderful inventions of their own. The famous French gun, for instance, by recent reports is a counter balance for the giant German mortars. We hear vaguely as yet, that an invention has been perfected for definitely locating a prowling submarine twenty miles away, so that it may be destroyed. Recently, it is said that a Canadian has invented a counteracting gas which, if let loose in the presence of the German gas, completely neutralizes it.

But, most important of all, it has been definitely stated that England has officially established a department of inventions including the best inventors in England to give all possible help in inventing and developing devices for overcoming the enemy's inventions, as well as to greatly increase the greatness of their own resources. The United States has established a similar department with Thomas A. Edison as its chief. The value of invention has never been so decisively established and so imperatively needed as at present, the world over.

Despatches from Berlin, carefully framed to create the impression that they originated in Russia, suggest that the people are tired of the war and are likely to clamor for peace if the Grand Duke Nicholas is forced to evacuate Poland and fall back upon the line of the Bug. It requires only a glance at the map of Russia to see that the great mass of the Slav race are as remote from the sound of war's alarms as they would be if they dwelt on another planet. The evacuation of all of Poland, and the retention by the Germans of the portions of the provinces of Suwalki, Kovno, and Courland now held by them, would give the German powers a little under three per cent. of the area of Russia in Europe. When they cross the Bug in pursuit of the Bear—if they ever do—the German armies will still be 650 miles from Moscow, and to reach it must traverse the most difficult country in Europe. But even were they to occupy Moscow Russia would be unconquered still—as Napoleon discovered a century ago—so long as her will to fight remains and her western allies continue to supply her with munitions and war supplies. There are between thirty and forty million men of service age in the Russian Empire. Not more than one in five of them has as yet been called to the colors. The war to the great mass of the people means only the disappearance from their familiar places of a small proportion of the men who have had military training.

To say that among the people there is a demand for peace is to presuppose that they have a grasp of the meaning and scope of the war and know how it is progressing. The Intellectuals and the Bureaucrats are doubtless no less well informed than the average man in western Europe as to what is happening, but unquestionably the bulk of the Russian peasants only know that the Little Father is having some trouble on the western border of the Empire, and that to prevent the soldiers who are helping him from taking too much vodka it has been found advisable to close the State dram shops.

Russia is not yet a democracy, whatever she may become as the result of the changes war will inevitably bring, and the little group of men in Petrograd who make war and peace on behalf of her swarming population are as determined to see the thing through as Asquith or Kitchener. The war was begun because Russia refused to give up her small Slav satellite, Serbia, to the unrestrained vengeance of Austria-Hungary. It will be continued to a successful end because Russian statesmen know that a Teuton triumph now would make the Balkan States the plaything of Germanic diplomacy, and the bridge across which the Teuton would pass to the possession of a great empire in the Near East. Russia may be badly hammered during the next six months, but the Bear will take it all standing up.

PRINTING

FINE PRINTING IS AN ART

Do you know good printing?
Do you like good printing?
Do you know that it always pays to have the BETTER kind?
Perhaps you have been used to the one class of printing and know no other.
If this is so, it is time for you to have a look around and investigate and see what's what.
Do you know you do not have to go any farther away than Newcastle to obtain the BETTER class of printing.
Perhaps you have not given it a thought, but a great deal depends on the stock used in order to get a BETTER job. Investigate this.

Last, but not the least, do you know that The Advocate Job Department turns out only this BETTER class of work. If you will read on a little further, we will tell you how and why.

1st—We cater to that class of people who use only the best stock, and who know what BETTER printing is.
2nd—In order to give these customers the class of work they want, we have to keep in stock only the best grades of material. We do not handle cheap lines.
3rd—In order, again, to be able to turn out that BETTER class of printing, we employ only experienced and competent printers, who keep abreast of the times and watch the styles.

4th—What is as important as the above is equipment. If The Advocate Job Department was not fitted out as it is, with the most modern machinery and the very latest in type faces, it could not handle the fast growing trade, that has developed in the past year, of turning out that BETTER class of printing. Only the best inks are used, because this is necessary when, high grade stock is used.

Now, Mr. Business Man, if you will read the above over carefully, see how your supply stands, then get in touch with this office, we feel sure you will become a customer. Give up that old-fangled notion that first class printing comes only from the large city printing offices. As a matter of fact, the reverse is the case, and prices are invariably lower.

REMEMBER THAT WE DO ALL KINDS OF PRINTING

For commercial use, we have superior grades of Letter, Note and Bill Head Stock, at prices and quality to suit any business and any purse. Our prices range from $2.50 to $4.00 per thousand for Letter Heads, and from $2.50 to $3.25 per thousand for Envelopes. Our Envelopes are the same material as our papers, and therefore match. We are always pleased to submit samples of stock, and prices, on application.

More Business IS WHAT WE WANT

You want the work—we want to do it for you. We have just the grade of paper you want, so why not let us get together in a co-operative way and make a strong pull for increased business—more business than usual.

HIS LEGAL WIFE

BY MARY E. BRYAN

But, first of all, he would pay back the loan of the impulsive and generous young heiress. True, she did not want him to pay it back, and she would not miss it from her large possessions; but he could not bear to have her lose anything more through the rash contract she made with him.

She had suffered enough because of it in the finding out that it was all through a mistake that she had put this barrier between herself and the man she loved.

"But, after all, was it a mistake?" mused Harry. "She would not think so, if she knew all. But ought I to tell her? It would not be to me, and if she did, it would be giving her more pain—poor girl! After all, he may make her a good husband; though I wouldn't bank on his constancy, if by any chance she should lose her fortune."

CHAPTER IX

Mr. Mangrum's round, smiling face grew several inches longer when he comprehended that the big speculation he had counted upon was to pass over his grasp. Here was Harry Lee putting in an appearance before the prescribed time—out with cash actually in hand to redeem Green Valley. But he could not repudiate his signed and witnessed agreement, even if he had not been the conscientious man he was.

So the two repaired to the office of a notary public, and in a little while, the eight thousand dollars in bank-notes were transferred to Mr. Mangrum's purse, and Harry Lee thrust the title deed for his old home into the breast-pocket of his coat with a thrill of joyful pride. Then shaking hands with Mr. Mangrum, who was generous enough to congratulate him, he turned his steps to his present home. Here he felt anxious to get there. It was the first night he had stayed away since they came to the city. But Lucille would not be uneasy, for she would imagine he was looking after the money she believed he had lately inherited from the rich cousin in England. She would lead his father to accept this explanation of his absence. The old man in his present weak, convalescent state, would not reason as to the probability of the English cousin leaving his fortune to his American relations—only kindred—nor would he be apt to ask many questions.

A happy thought came to Harry. Acting upon it, he stepped into a restaurant and ordered a nice lunch for three to be sent up to his lodgings. A broiled chicken, a salad, a beef cutlet, and a bottle of old port. Then going out, he made another stop in the doorway of a florist, where he bought a great bunch of fragrant roses and long-stemmed lilies for Lucille.

With the flowers in his hand, he sprang up the rickety stairs of the apartment house, two steps at a time, not stopping now to notice the higness and unloveliness of the place, the sounds of quarreling women and noisy children, or the smell of cooking cabbage or steaming sudges.

He went straight to his father's room, where he found the old clergyman asleep in his easy-chair, with "The Imitation of Christ" open on his knee, and his thin white hands folded upon the page.

Harry stood for a moment, looking in tender solicitude at the pale, patient face, worn with the storms of years, but still keeping its look of childlike trust. Then he laid a lily on the open page, and stole softly from the room, going into the little sitting room connected with it. This, with its folding bed, was also Lucille's sleeping apartment; and all the best and prettiest bits of furniture, pictures and ornaments contributed to give it a cozy look. But the low rosewood sewing chair, beside the little table was unoccupied; Lucille was not there, and Harry went on to the kitchen, sure of finding her there.

She did not see him as he came in. She was bending over the gasoline stove—hot and worried, her fair curls disheveled—in the act of making tea and toast for lunch. She lifted a slice of overbrowned bread from the toaster.

"Burned!" she exclaimed, in disgust. "I was never intended to be a cook, and I won't be! I'd rather die than keep on like this!"

Harry had crept up behind her. He took a long stemmed rose and lightly touched the back of her white neck with the flower. She turned quickly. Seeing him, she smiled through the tears of vexation that stood in her pretty eyes.

He drew her to a seat beside him, and taking the roll of bills from his pocket, dropped it in her lap. She caught it up eagerly, and unrolled it in a twinkling.

"Oh!" she exclaimed, rapturously, looking up with sparkling eyes, "they are one hundred dollar bills! I never saw any before. Is all this for me?"

"Yes, count it and see if there is enough to buy a new frock and an Easter bonnet."

She spread out the crisp bills on the kitchen table.

"Five hundred dollars!" she exclaimed, ecstatically. "Oh! how many beautiful things this will buy! Dear Harry, you are so good!"

She turned to him, flushed and radiant, and threw her arms around his neck.

Her happy little heart beat dangerously close to his, her rosebud mouth was raised temptingly to be kissed. It was a great temptation, and Harry was nigh yielding to it, and clasping and kissing her as if no barrier interposed between them. But he remembered that things had changed since yesterday. A marriage—solemn rite of Church and State—stood between them, a wife, though only in name and in law. He had no right to clasp this pretty child with a lover's warmth. He bent and gently kissed her on her low, white brow, where the damp, silken ringlets were clustering.

She was too preoccupied to remark his grave self-control.

"Harry," she said, presently, when she had seated herself and gathered up her precious bills, "there must be lots of money in this lucky inheritance, since you can give me so much to spend on myself."

"I have not said it was an inheritance. You jumped at that conclusion, my pet. No, there hasn't been a fortune come to us. It is only a moderate sum, but it will make us comfortable. You and my dear old father will not need to suffer privation any more."

"We will move from here—won't we?"

"Oh, yes, we will go—where? Can't you guess?"

"Oh, to one of those lovely houses uptown, or one of the fine flats near the park, where we can have servants and handsome furniture, and give receptions every week!"

"Would you like that better than to go back to our dear old home in Green Valley?"

"Go back to the country!—to that horrid, lonesome place! Why, Harry?"

His face clouded.

"Horrid place! It is the loveliest spot on earth. Lucille I thought you were so happy there. You used to say you were happy as the day was long, and you nearly broke my heart crying because we had to give it up."

"Oh, well, you see, that was because I had never lived anywhere else. But now it seems I should die of the blues if I had to live there among those old trees, and the cows, and the prosy people. I like the rush and the bustle and the variety of the city. There's always something going on, and the shop windows are a constant feast for the eye, even when you haven't any money to buy things, and when you have, why it's just heavenly!"

She stopped, for a look at Harry showed her the grave disappointment in his face.

"Don't look so glum, you good boy," she went on, coaxingly. "That's my nature, Harry, and I can't help it. I can't be a pattern girl, and I'm afraid I won't make you a model wife. Ada Glynn would suit you better. She used to be your sweetheart, you know, and she likes you now. She was asking about you this morning."

"Ada Glynn? Was she here this morning? I thought—"

"You thought her grandmother had forbidden her to come here. Well, but the old lady has taken it all back now, and she has found out you were right, and that the spiritualist prophet was a fraud. I should wonder if she was not quite willing for you to go to see Ada again. And indeed, with a teasing look and a little pout of her small, red mouth, 'I think it would be better if you did go back to your schoolgirl sweetheart since you are really set on living in the country. Ada sighed this morning and said she wished she was back in Green Valley. Think of that, when she is living here in her grandmother's fine house, and driving out in the park in a grand carriage every afternoon! To be sure, the house is an old-style mansion, in a part of the town that's been long ago left by the tide of fashion, and her grandmother keeps Ada secluded as a nun; but still, it's something to live in the city and have all you want. Goodness knows, Ada has no reason to like Green Valley. She had to be the household drudge there, and nurse her sick mother beside. But she looked happier then than she does now. That may be because of her marriage. It's broken off, you know."

"Did she really care for the man, do you think?" asked Harry, with so much interest that Lucille gave him a quick glance of suspicion. "I thought the marriage was in a manner forced on her by her cranky old grandmother."

"So it was, and Ada says she did not care for Floyd Grafon. What a lovely name he has! And his picture is handsome as Apollo! I don't see how she could help loving him; and I believe she did. Anyway, she must have been mortified to death when the marriage was broken off, for it had been announced in the papers. Ada would not talk about it, but she intimated that her grandmother did it because she found out Grafon was marrying Ada only because he believed she was to have her grandmother's money. I wonder how the old lady found it out?"

"Perhaps she put Grafon to the test—had him informed that Ada was not her heiress. Mrs. Travers is very shrewd," Harry said. Then he added, earnestly: "I am glad you do not think she cared for him."

"You say that in a very heartfelt manner," retorted the girl, quickly. "Perhaps you cherish the hope that she still cares for you?" with a glance of jealous scrutiny.

"I do not think she ever loved me," he answered, "and I know I had only a boyish fancy and a cousin's regard for her."

"She would make a charming wife for you in the old house at Green Valley. She can train roses, and raise chickens, and make butter."

"So you can, you little tease!" he said, looking fondly into the lovely face, that had just one cute little spot of kitchen smut on the peachy cheek, "and you will go with me to Green Valley and be the fairy of our old home."

She shook her head, but he could not believe that this small, sweet creature would really oppose herself strongly to his will and his interests. He did not know the steely strength and cunning persistence that underlie the dainty softness of these pink and white darlings.

Further talk was prevented by the arrival of the waiter from the restaurant, bearing a tray filled with the delicacies Harry had ordered.

Lucille jumped up with joyous alacrity, and arranged the various dishes on the white-covered table in the little dining-room.

"How nice the roast chicken looks with the plum-jelly and the pretty salad! And these are oyster patties! And, oh! these are strawberry tarts and chocolate russe! No wonder you told me to throw away my poor little burnt toast!" she said, as she put out the various dishes, after placing on the table the few pieces of delicate old china and silver that remained to the Lees of their once elegant table service.

She finished by putting in the center a china bowl filled with the fowls, which Harry had brought her. She stood off, looking at the table; and Harry was admiring the effect, when Doctor Lee came in.

He stopped in surprise at beholding the lunch table, with its uncustomed bountiful and festive appearance. He glanced from the roses and the roast chicken to the smiling faces of Harry and Lucille.

"What new departure is this?" he asked, his sad eyes brightening up. "You failed to make your appearance last night, Master Harry; and here you are today in a brand new suit, accompanied with all the luxuries of the season. Does this mean that Providence has smiled on us at last?"

"I hope so, my dear father. Have some wine, and drink, and then I will tell you all about it," Harry answered.

It did him good to see these two he loved, enjoy the nice food they had so long been deprived of. He kept them company, notwithstanding his late and luxurious breakfast. When their appetites had been appeased, and the good doctor was slowly sipping the old port, and Lucille was stripping the pink California grapes from a fine cluster, and inserting them between her pretty lips, Harry put the question:

"Were you uneasy at my staying away last night, father?"

"Not much, Lucille gave me a hint that you were attending to some important business. She said something about a legacy that had fallen from the clouds, or from our millionaire cousin in England, which I told her she must have dreamed it."

"But I did not, did I Harry?"

"Yes, dear, so far as the legacy is concerned."

the more bound in honor to return the money?"

"No, I don't see it at all. It's just foolish in you to take it so. Oh, Harry, if you loved me you would do what would please me, you would think of me first of all."

"God knows I have thought of you first of all and above all," he answered. "It is for your sake that I—"

He stopped abruptly, then went on more calmly: "And if you loved me, Lucille, don't you think you would be willing to do what would be for my interest, even at a small sacrifice of your wishes? Don't you think you would remember that I owe a duty to others beside you?"

"Duty! hate the word!" she pouted. "True lovers do not think of duty to any but the one they love."

"I don't know what your ideal of a true lover may be, but I know that no true man will forget to consider the happiness of his old parents, or the honorable claims of others upon him. One of the manliest of old-time lovers said to his sweetheart: 'I could not love thee, dear, so well Loved I a color more.'"

"He was a cold hearted prig, and I would have told him to take his honor and go."

She looked so like a pretty, spoiled child as she said this that Harry smiled and reassured. This sweet, childlike creature could not but yield and be contented.

Harry was deeply sorry to oppose her wishes, but he felt that it was best. Her fancy for city life will wear away, he thought; and the influences here are not beneficial to her. Beside, the Green Valley home was already bought and his plans mapped out. To carry them out seemed the surest way to the future. Lucille would so eagerly enjoy. He was working for her good, for her happiness, as well as for her honor and independence. He loved her so well that it gave him keen pain to refuse her; but he had too strong a fiber of manhood in him to be swayed by her caprice.

She caught the reflection of his smile, and her face became radiant. She thought she had conquered.

"You will stay; I know you will," she said, clasping his arm with both her little hands. "You go out with me this afternoon to hunt a pretty house. Your father will like it. He will get over his foolish homesickness. Let's go at once, Harry. I'll run and put on my hat."

He caught her hand as she started off.

"No, Lucille," he said gravely; "I am not going to take a house in town. I am sorry not to be able to do as you want, but I must go to Green Valley for the present. In a few years we will be so situated, I hope, that we can live wherever you like. Try to be reasonable, and give me your help and your sympathy, my sweet."

He put his arms gently about her as he spoke. She drew out of his embrace, and turning without a word, went into her room and shut the door.

With a heavy heart, Harry took up his hat and left the house, after a few words with his father, to tell him not to be uneasy if he was absent a good deal. He would explain all in a little while.

As for Lucille, he trusted that her mood was only temporary. She would have a little girlish cry that would have the effect of clearing her brain, and making her see things in a brighter and truer light.

But he had never fathomed the true character of this girl. There was a strength of will, a passionate selfishness, dominant in that little white curled head.

She had her cry, but it was a short, stormy outburst of anger and vexation, that left her only more determined to have her own way. She bathed her face and put on her street dress.

"He shall see! he shall see!" she repeated to herself, as she fiercely stuck in long fastening pin through her hat as though she were stung by somebody who had dared to oppose her. "I'll punish him for not caring for my wishes. I won't go to stupid old Green Valley! What would be the use of buying beautiful clothes when there would be nobody to see them? I am not suited to such a narrow sphere," she went on, looking at herself in the mirror with almost wondering admiration.

It was a marvellously beautiful face she saw reflected there. The flush on her cheeks, the glow of excitement in her eyes, had lightened the loveliness of the delicate little face looking out from the soft shadow of the rather shabby black plumes.

"Maraschino was right," she said, half aloud, still absorbed in contemplation of her image. "I am one of those creatures born for the eyes of the world. If I look like that in this blue serge, how would I look in beautiful, picturesque costumes? How would I look in that magnificent white and gold dress that Sybil Vane has sent to her dress-maker's to be sold because she got hurt and had to give up the stage? The dress is only a hundred dollars. Maraschino said if I had handsome costumes he would give me a star part in the 'Lady of the Tiger.' He offered to let me have the dresses if I would give up Harry. But now I can be independent. Five hundred dollars will buy everything I want. But then, I promised Harry not to think any more of going on the stage. Well, but the promise is canceled because Harry has been so mean to me. It would be a good revenge on him to go with Maraschino, after all. Only I don't like Maraschino. I'm afraid of him, somehow. He has a way of making me do as he likes. But there can be no harm in looking at the dress, and trying it on, just to see how I would look in it on the stage as the Princess Camerera."

So it was that while Harry Lee, sitting in his elegant apartments in the home of his legal wife, delayed the time of dressing for his bride's reception, while he smoked a cigar and thought about Lucille—how sweet, and pliant she was, and how her little, girlish faults would drop away as her womanhood developed—while her lover, trusting and faithful, though legally bound to another woman, was thus thinking of her, the wayward little beauty, arrayed in the cream-white, gold-embroidered stage dress, was standing before the tall mirror in Madame Marville's fitting room, fancying herself an opera queen, while madame and three of her satellites were exclaiming in broken English, at the perfect fit of the costume, and the wonderful way it set off ma'am's exquisite beauty. "And so cheap—not one third of its cost—a small one hundred dollars—bah! That was just giving it away," with a shrug of her plump shoulders.

"And so cheap—not one third of its cost—a small one hundred dollars—bah! That was just giving it away," with a shrug of her plump shoulders.

But Lucille hesitated. There was a struggle between the good and the evil of her mixed nature. The dress was a stage dress; she had no need of it unless she went on the stage. Should she go? It would be a fine punishment for Harry, and he would feel it sharply. Probably he would repent and let her have her way about living in the city. He would be very angry at first, but he would not give her up; he loved her too well. But she had no stage engagement open to her, except that with Maraschino, and Maraschino's black eyes gave her a strange feeling. They had a snaky charm. She shrank from him, yet she felt his influence.

No, she could not go with Maraschino; she could not buy this beautiful dress. But, oh! how exquisitely the lace half hid, half revealed the white curves of her breast and her lovely shoulders!

Just as her thoughts reached this point, she started. A familiar voice caught her ear—a low salutation in liquid Italian.

"Ah, Signor Maraschino!" exclaimed madame; "he had come about the dress? See, ma'am'selle has it on. It is magnificent!"

She turned, to feel the black eyes of the Italian manager fixed burning on her.

"I came to look at the dress for Milwood," he murmured, with his subtle, furtive look; "but I could never bear to see Milwood wear it after I have seen you in it, bella diva—carissima!" The last word was so low Lucille could only guess it, as the hot flush on her cheeks betrayed.

"I am dreading this ordeal—a little. How do you feel about it?"

"I'm glad Lee put his hand on his heart and bowing—I can say, with Lord Byron, my distinguished predecessor in matrimonial infelicities: 'Here's a heart for any fate!'"

She laughed, and looked at him more attentively than she had done before.

"I shall not be ashamed of him," she decided once more.

The door-bell rang. The callers were beginning to arrive.

"Come," Nina said, holding out her hand to Lee. But she quietly drew back the hand as he was about to take it.

The Advocate is pleased to be able to publish this issue a good list of notes from our regular correspondent from Blackville. A good correspondent had been secured from Blackville, and the Advocate expects to give good live news from that district each week.

Repairs Made to Road
Commissioner Johnston has done some good work on the road between Newcastle Bridge and the Bacon Road. Bushville grove has been thinned out, the roadway graded and gravelled, and drain pipes have been put in underground, instead of building the old-fashioned surface culverts across the road.

Some Were Overlooked
The Advocate regrets that in its anxiety last week to place a copy into every home in town, by delivery, instead of sending the subscribers papers to the post office, some were overlooked. The house to house delivery, made in connection with the Voting Contest, was for last issue only, and we trust the very few who were overlooked will excuse us, and receive their paper this week, as usual, at the post office.

Social Dance
The social dance held in W. J. Hogan's new building on Friday night was a grand success in every particular. The large room upstairs was fitted with electric lights and a good floor, although of new boards, but waxed for the occasion, was laid. A stand built in the centre was occupied by McEachern's orchestra, who pleased the large gathering of dancers by their splendid music. A long counter was erected at the rear of the room where ice cream, soft drinks and cigars were sold. Shortly after midnight sandwiches and tea and coffee were sold to those who wished them. A very pleasant dance came to an end about four a. m.

Pleasant Business Trip to Blackville

Campaign Director and Advocate Editor Combine Business With Pleasure

The editor of the Advocate in company with the Campaign Director, had a very pleasant and successful auto trip to the thriving village of Blackville on Thursday last, the latter in the interest of his campaign, and the editor renewing acquaintances among the Advocate's patrons along this route.

The day was an exceedingly fine one for such an outing, and the journey, combined with business and pleasure, was a most pleasant one. The road, notwithstanding the recent heavy rains, was in fairly good shape, and speed well for the commissioners of the different districts who have charge of the road repair.

All along the route at different sections, men were busily engaged in the work of turpinking and filling in, and with very few exceptions, the bad piece of road between here and Bridgetown in particular, the road to Blackville is in first class shape. Blackville was reached at 11.30 and the hospitality of Mr. Jacob Layton's popular hotelery was enjoyed in a first class dinner. The afternoon was spent very profitably in the transaction of business in the interest of the Advocate.

Blackville, just at this particular time of the year, is a most picturesque spot. Its green shady groves and quiet nooks are indeed inviting to the tourist who seeks the quiet among the hills that he may instill health and vigor into his being, by drinking in the invigorating atmosphere of this health-giving, nature-made villa by the Miramichi.

Business in general with the merchants is about on the average. The large number of stores who cater to a big country around them have every appearance of prosperity, and their clean, and tidy appearance speak well for their proprietors. Crops, also, are good, the recent heavy rains doing more good for their growth, owing to the sandy nature of the soil, than one would suppose. One thing particularly noticed by the writer was a splendid field of potatoes belonging to Mr. M. Schaffer, in the rear of his store.

Building operations between here and Blackville are about enough to be noticeable, new farm houses here and there being erected. The Pottington Pulp and Paper Co., Ltd. mill is going full swing, and in other ways prosperity prevails in this neighborhood.

N. B. School Teachers Asked to Contribute

A Suggestion That N. B. School Teachers Contribute to Purchasing Machine Gun

The following suggestion, from a New Brunswick school teacher, now in uniform, is a most timely one and worthy of space in this paper. In no more fitting manner could our school teachers prove their loyalty and patriotism than by following out the suggestion outlined below. It is felt certain that this matter will be taken up in earnest and the scheme thoroughly organized by the time our next issue is put to press. Following is the suggestion:

To the Editor of the Advocate,
Dear Editor:—I would like to suggest that the School Teachers of New Brunswick give a machine gun to the 64th Battalion which is about to be mobilized and whose Commanding Officer is a prominent New Brunswick Officer. We have our schools by the sacrifice of our fathers gone before, we shall keep them only by giving our lives and means. Our freedom is perpetuated in our schools, our homes are secured.

If each teacher would give $1.00 the machine gun would be a possibility and a mighty factor in the great struggle, and each teacher who thus contributed would be represented on the firing line which is upholding our Empire and guarding our shores. How can we teach patriotism next term if we fail to represent ourselves in this great struggle for freedom. The opportunity is ours, the need is great. Shall we like the brave boys from Canada, stand by "our guns" and win, or withhold our means and go down to defeat? We are not Canadians if we do.

I feel sure that the Chief Superintendent would act as Treasurer to whom all contributions would be made.

Here is a chance for the teachers to express their views and enter the great struggle. Shall we?

Nelson Young Man's Death
The death of Frank Handley, aged 18 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Handley, of Nelson, occurred at his father's home on Sunday afternoon about 3 o'clock. The young man contracted a cold while working in the woods last winter, which developed into tuberculosis, from which he was a sufferer for about five months. The funeral was held Tuesday morning to the Catholic cemetery at Nelson. Mr. and Mrs. Handley have the sympathy of numerous friends.
