those baked at home and raised with "Paisley Flour."
Best because they are light, wholesome, and digestible, and because mothers can see that all the ingredients are clean and sound. Economy also results from home baking with "Paisley Flour." It costs less than buying from the baker, and much less than cake and bun flours.

A MYSTERIOUS QUEST.

CHAPTER II.

A Remarkable Adventure.

But why should it involve mystery? Why should there be no one in the house from whom he could obtain intelligible replies to his queries? Was this merely accident or was it design? The one person he had encountered whose face spoke intelligence and a desire for communication had surprised him so much by the coincidence between her presence and the picture he had painted, that he had been made for the moment powerless, and so lost the one opportunity offered him to make himself acquainted with the true meaning of the adventure which had fallen him. Was this fortunate or was it not? Was this wealthy lady of high position and incomparable taste the friend or art-lover who had drawn him there? What could be more probable? And yet how greatly was the mystery enhanced if this were the case. He was gazing steadily at the immovable countenance before him when this idea came; and, fascinated as he was by what he saw, there seemed to rise a film between him and it, out of which there slowly grew on his gaze the face of the unknown visitor. Not the face he had put upon canvas and which was at this moment illuminating the dim recesses of his studio, but of herself as she stood there looking at him with a most human contrast with the sumptuousness of her apparel and the dignity of her bearing.

A true face, a good face, with features perfect enough for art, and a smile tender enough to satisfy the most exacting nature. Why did he not thrill before it? Why did not the feeling of contempt which swept over him at its remembrance fill up the void in his heart and make this second recognition of her charms one of promise and unalloyed delight? Because he had seen something more winsome; because she was the Dream, while before him lay the Reality; because his taste and judgment alone awarded to her the palm of beauty, while his heart throbbed to what was pressed in this other face, this other form, which, if dead, had touched a chord in his nature never sounded before, and, as he began to think, would never be sounded again. The Reality—yes, he had found it. As this belief seized him, he grasped his pencil with avidity. He no longer felt himself held back by doubts. He would draw the picture before him, but as he did so, he would draw another in his mind that should be the basis for his long-hoped-for chef d'oeuvre. Not for the unknown Montelli alone should his pencil fly over the paper, crystallizing into perpetual existence this dream of fading loveliness. He would earn for himself more than the paltry dollars he felt burning in his pocket; he would earn a right to the reproduction of this face, which must henceforth be the expression of his loftiest instincts.

His pencil obeyed his enthusiasm; the features of the sweet unknown began to show themselves upon the broad sheet of paper before him. He was very much absorbed, or he might have taken a look at the old croone seated in her low chair behind him. If he had done so, would he not have lost himself in further questions? Would he not have wondered why she gazed at him so intently, with eyes that were certainly not lacking in earnestness, if they were in candor? And would he not have queried, why her glances only left him to travel to the clock, and so, with one quick flash, to the young girl, and back again to him. There was mystery in all this, if he could have seen it, for there was expectation in her look; an expectation that increased as the minute-hand of the clock moved on toward nine; and expectation here meant interruption, and interruption meant—what? The sly face of the croone made no revelations. But he saw nothing behind him. Life, hope and love were all, for the moment, concentrated in the end of his pencil, and not the sound of opening door and hurrying feet could have aroused him now from the dream of creation that engaged him. But there was no sound; all was still; even the mysterious watcher behind him seemed to hold her breath; and when the clock struck, which it presently did, the faint noise seemed to be too much for her aged nerves, for she half rose, and painfully sank back again, clasping her hands with energy, as if to still the beating of her heart. But the artist worked on.

Suddenly there was a change in the room. No one had entered it, and yet it seemed no longer like the same spot. Something strange and unaccountable had occurred; something which caused the moisture to start on Hamilton Degraw's forehead, and the expectancy in the old croone's look to deepen into strong excitement. What was it? The artist, catching his breath, listened. What silence! What an oppression of silence! And yet there it comes again, that soft sigh, so light as to be almost inaudible, and yet, to his ears, so thrilling with promise that he leaped to his feet like one who breaks some bond asunder.

At the sight of his eagerness, the old croone, who had arisen also, smiles hungrily to herself. If she has heard the sigh also, she shows no anxiety to advance, but stops where she is, content that he should take the precedence, and stand first at the young girl's side. He was there in an instant, and though no signs of life greeted him from the motionless form, he could not tear his gaze away from her face.

"Sweet one," wailed up from his lips, "was that the sigh of your departed spirit grieving it had left a body that could be so loved? Or is life but pausing in these pulses, and will it—"

He does not finish. How can he, when at these muttered and well-nigh incoherent words he perceives the faintest flush of color suffuse the cheeks? Or was it but a fancy? It has fled now, and the breast does not heave. It must have been a hallucination like the sigh. And yet—and yet—those lips seem to be less closely. There is something in the face he has not seen there before. It is not life, and yet, it is not death. Where are her friends? Where is there a physician? Why is he not one instead of being a useless artist? With a cry, he turns to the old croone.

"Help!" he shrieks. "See! her lips are growing red! And look at her hands; they are becoming warm! Now—now, they flutter! The roses on her breast are disturbed! She is not dead! We shall have her again—"

He paused, struck even in his frenzy by the abandon of his own words. "I am a fool," he muttered. "But then the old witch does not understand me. Will she understand what she sees?" And bounding to the old woman's side, he drew her, wondering and chattering, up between the candles, and pointed to the young girl's face. As he did so, he uttered an irrepressible cry; for in an instant he had been gone, the miracle had happened, and two wide, dark eyes, luminous with wonder, stared back into his from amid the wreaths of those tangled locks of hair.

UNDERGROUND PASSAGE.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Nov. 20.—Deep interest has been aroused on both sides of the river by a story of an underground passage under the river connecting old Niagara with Fort Niagara and used by smugglers years ago which has been made public by Mrs. Louise Armstrong of Minnesota. The truth of the woman's story will be investigated. When she was a girl and was living at Niagara on the lake, on the American shore a main underground passage led from the old French sally port to the water's edge. From this passage other byways branched off, in these were stored smuggled goods. A like condition she believed existed in Niagara on Lake Ontario. She had been shown the passage on both sides of the river but was compelled to give her word that she would never tell of what she saw for a lifetime at least.

The Evening Chit-Chat

By NORTH CARROLL

A woman in our neighborhood who has recently had her youngest daughter—the last of a family of six—leave the home nest, has had a nervous breakdown and is in a sanitarium.

And she blames her trouble to loneliness, pure and simple.

"I was always used to young life around the house," she says, "and I missed it so. It seemed to me as if everything had just stopped."

Another woman who had lost one child by death and two by marriage has taken to spending much time at the home of a neighbour who was just a bare acquaintance in the old days.

"I can't see what has come over Ellen to be so intimate with Mrs. L.," comments one of her old friends. "She never used to have any use for her."

"Ah," responds a wiser woman, "You forget that Mrs. L. has three daughters growing up. Ellen really goes there to see them, to talk to them and their friends. She's just hungry for young life."

I don't think that young people as a rule realize how large a part their happiness, their delight in living, their vitality and exuberance, their plans, ambitions and their wonderful power of saying "Some day," play in the older folks' lives.

With the eternal selfishness of youth, they seize the stage for themselves, crowding the older generation into the auditorium to be their audience, and then, when they are tired of their own playing, they run lightly away and quite forget that their audience, now grown quite too old and stiff to climb back onto the stage and become actors themselves again, are left to gaze drearily at the dispiriting vacancy of an empty stage.

Now it seems to me that just as the pauper of worldly goods becomes the responsibility of the community and is supplied with the necessities of physical life out of a general store, so the pauper of young life becomes the responsibility of the community and should be supplied with social young life to keep them from social starvation, out of the general store.

And I think those who should take charge of this responsibility, who should be the "oversers of the poor" for this kind of poverty, are the young people of the neighbourhood, the "crowd" to which the missing young folks belonged.

I think the sight of any of these empty homes should be a challenge to all the young folks who pass them to "run" in for a few minutes: to carry their own joys and ambitions there as well as into their own homes; to go occasionally to ask for news of the distant ones; and always to cheer, news there when any comes to them.

I know it's difficult, young folks for you to imagine further and see yourself lonesome and depressed because these imaginary beings, having become the centre of your universe empty.

Nevertheless, all this is very likely to happen to you some day.

And you'll remember that, won't you, the next time you are passing one of these empty homes that call to you to come in?

No Man is Stronger Than His Stomach

A strong man is strong all over. No man can be strong who is suffering from weak stomach with its consequent indigestion or from some other disease of the stomach and its associated organs, which impairs digestion and nutrition. For when the stomach is weak or diseased there is a loss of the nutrition contained in food, which is the source of all physical strength. When a man "doesn't feel just right," when he "doesn't sleep well," has an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach after eating, is rigid, nervous, irritable and despondent, he is entitled to make strength.

Such a man should use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, it cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition, it enriches the blood, invigorates the liver, strengthens the kidneys, nourishes the nerves, and GIVES HEALTH AND STRENGTH TO THE WHOLE BODY.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic medicine of known composition, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit. Ingredients printed on wrapper.

Uncle Walt THE POET PHILOSOPHER.

When winter winds are raging fierce, with snowdrifts in their track, it's mighty nice to have a tierce of huddle in the shack. Then one can sit before the fire in peace and joy, gadzooks, and knock some music from his lyre, or read detective books. The howling of the blustering storm, that gets the poor man's goat, but makes his cottage seem more warm, from trouble more remote. He sees the snowy gusts career outside his cheerful hut, and comfortable and serene reflections fill his nut. He sat down a plunk or two when'er he drew his pay, and now it doesn't make him blue when comes a stormy day. Across the street there lives a skater who never saves a red, and when bad weather fills a date, his children howl for bread. A poor, dejected, sad-eyed drove, their misery's intense; they shiver round an empty stove, and wish their pa had senses. It matters not how poor or fine may be the toiler's pay, he ought to put some down in brine, to meet the stormy day.

Why Not be Well and Strong

When weak and run down DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD will help you back to health.

This letter tells of two women who have proven this.

Mrs. D. Stott, Cobourg, Ont., writes: "After recovering from typhoid fever I was left in a very low state of health. I was weak, nervous and unfit to do any work. A friend of mine, Mrs. G. M. Brown, had used DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD and told me that it benefited her wonderfully. I took courage and began the use of the medicine. After taking the first box I began to feel an improvement in health and now after using four boxes I am completely cured. I now feel like myself once more and believe that I can attribute the cure to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

Life is too short to spend weeks or months dragging out a miserable existence of weakness and suffering. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cures by forming new rich blood and building up the system. You can depend on it to benefit you, 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, at all dealers or Edimonton, Bates & Co., Toronto.

Wedding Bells.

LEDRU-BURSEY.

The wedding of Mr. Joshua LeDrew, son of Abraham W. LeDrew, and Miss May Bursey, daughter of William Bursey, took place on Thursday night at 8 o'clock, at 10 Bond Street. The bride was given away by her father. The bridesmaids were the Misses Hobbs and Hines who were becomingly dressed for the occasion. The happy couple were united in marriage by the Rev. W. H. Webber.

WHITE-PAYNE.

A pretty wedding was held at the C. E. Cathedral, at 4 p.m. Wednesday, when Mr. A. W. White, of New Perlin, spent the altar miss Mary J. Payne, of Aquaforte. Rev. J. Brinton officiated, and the bride, who was neatly attired, was assisted by Miss Lillie Rice, while the groom was attended by Mr. S. Coish. After the ceremony a reception was held at the residence of Mr. A. Horwood, Barter's Hill, and a very pleasant time was spent. The happy pair left for their future home, New Perlin, by Thursday morning's train. The Telegram extends congratulations.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—I generally read the editorials in our newspapers, and heretofore have considered and believed such a column to be of interest to the vast public, and to deal with some question of interest to the reading community.

I was somewhat surprised on reading the editorial in last night's Chronicle to glean the most important fact that Mr. McGrath makes a public matter out of a private feud. I refer to the English-McGrath controversy of two days of age.

I am not personally acquainted with Mr. English, and the subject on which he writes—re correction of Mr. McGrath's new book—does not interest me at all, but I feel it but due to a citizen, and a matter of fair play, to take up my humble pen and wield it in Mr. English's defence.

Vituperation isn't nice, and barely permissible during election times, but when scathing, cutting, and immediate infliction of personal wrath is made on a man in the editorial columns of a newspaper, and all because that individual has thought it proper to correct some supposed errors, it is time then to raise a defence and guard from such continuity.

I think, Mr. Editor, Mr. English, has a perfect right to his own opinion, and the fearless manner in which he has given those opinions to the public has something manly in it. After all, Mr. McGrath may be an excellent political campaigner, but as to historical past, present or to come—here—are doubts.

A little learning is a dangerous thing, quotes the scribe—so it is, so is a little authority, and a little authority in the hands of some men is like a supply of thunder bolts in possession of some angry god.

Mr. English, I understand, was employed on the reportorial staff of the Chronicle—so were a number of other excellent young men—for a while.

The fact of Mr. English having to leave the staff is no stigma on his literary escutcheon, the fact of his having disagreed with Mr. McGrath on the analysis of some mineral finds in this country, does not deceive the public, nor make Mr. McGrath's star any brighter, with English's but a poor gleam.

I have no doubt, Mr. Editor, that Mr. McGrath's new book is a very nice one—for myself I think the binding excellent and in this age of "clipping and scissors" success one would almost be tempted to try the road to Parnassus oneself.

In conclusion then, and this was not undertaken as a long letter, I shall get a copy of this new wonder in book form, fortunately I am not learned enough in the great chemical branches to be able to judge between what Mr. McGrath says and what Mr. McGrath should say in his work, but, sir, I have discerned sufficient to mark, that Mr. McGrath has not done himself or his book any good by his virtuous outburst of last evening.

Yours sincerely,
EX-REPORTER.

NEVER HAD ITS EQUAL

Rochester, N.Y. Man Found Something Good in Canada.

Mr. Thos. Johnston, whose home is in Rochester, N.Y., 44 Tremont Street, is enthusiastic over one Canadian product at least. He says:

"While visiting in Millbrook, Ont., I was suffering from a sprained knee, and could get nothing to help me until my father gave me a bottle of Egyptian Liniment, which relieved me in a few minutes. I have never had anything to equal it in my life—I am sure if your liniment was introduced to the people of Rochester it would sell like hot cakes."

Quick work is one of the strong points of Douglas's Egyptian Liniment, it goes right to the spot.

It stops bleeding at once. It prevents pond-flesh or inflammation, and is a positive safeguard against blood-poisoning. It relieves all kinds of aches and soreness.

Broken Pledges.
On Thursday we drew attention to the failure of the Prime Minister to keep his pledge to put shipwrecked sealers in as good a position as regards the voyage as an owner who had insured, and we pointed out that Sir Edward Morris had promised to do it before the Spring of 1910, and that he had failed absolutely to do what he declared was a simple matter.

On Friday, we pointed out that the Premier had several times pledged himself to a reduction in taxation, especially in regard to tea, sugar, and pork, and that he has not even attempted to keep his promise, but has pursued a policy of wilful extravagance.

Here is another pledge which has been ignored. It has reference to the promise of Elective Road Boards made by Sir E. P. Morris in his Manifesto of Oct. 3rd, 1908. This is what he said then—
"Owing to the cumbersome and costly character of the law dealing with the question of the Election of Outport Road Boards, the people of the Colony have not been able to avail of it. I propose the adoption of a simple and inexpensive measure whereby they may enjoy this advantage—namely, that they may have a fuller share in the Management of their own local Affairs."
Three sessions of the Legislature have been held since the General Election of 1909, and the sealers are still in the same situation in regard to wrecked voyages as they have ever been. Folks are still paying heavy duties, and the profits of the importers' expenditure in these duties, on tea, sugar and pork and other articles of prime necessity. And still the Old Road Board System is in vogue over almost the whole Island.

The Mary A. Wreck.
The schr. Mary Alberta, Skipper M. Blundon, which was towed up from Bay de Verde last night by the s.s. Fargo, has her mainmast gone close to the deck, it being smashed in three pieces; the jibboom is also smashed in three pieces, the main boom is broken, stanchions beaten away, foremast sprung at the deck and the port side above the water line badly stove. In the big storm of Saturday evening last while riding it out with two anchors down and a mooring out, the schr. Lucky Change, anchored just ahead, burst one of her anchor chains and dragged the other and fell down on the vessel, causing the damage. The anchor of the Lucky Change fouled the Mary Alberta's chains and the vessel thus held, was thus saved from destruction on the rocks.

It is impossible to mention one without thinking of the other. As soon as Christmas Presents come up the first thought is ROPER'S, and this year, in Schr. Driven Off.

The schr. Willie Martin, Skipper W. Martin, of Little Heart's Ease, T.B., was towed in the Narrows this morning by the Ingraham and is now at Steer's wharf. With eleven men and three women (passengers) the schooner left St. John's last Wednesday morning early for Heart's Ease with a load of general winter supplies below decks. A smart clipping breeze from the southwest brought the schooner down off Baccalieu in about seven hours. There a heavy sea struck her quarter and broke off the rudder at the upper pintle. She was going under double reefed canvas at the time. There was no chance of looking up for Trinity Bay, and as the wind had increased, the only thing to do was to give it to her before the wind for Cape Bonavita and try to steer her by the canvas. With a skirt of the mainsail and a double reefed foresail the skipper ran her before the wind, hoping that there would be a chance of the wind favoring him enough to look up for Catalina. The wind quickly chopped from the west and they were not getting pure food. The wind increased, night set in and the rudderless schooner was driven off the land. To ease her in the drift the anchor was dropped from the bow with 60 fathoms of cable attached. This kept her head to the wind. The night was bitterly cold and the watch on-deck spent a terrible time. When morning broke the schooner was conveyed to be 40 miles to the S. E. of Cape Bonavita. The wind kept veering further to the north and the schooner drove south all day Thursday and the following night. Yesterday morning the wind veered round to the N. E., and later in the day more easterly. There was now a chance of getting back to the land if they had any help in steering. The genius of the Newfoundland fishermen now came to the surface. Samuel Martin, the skipper's brother, invented a yoke made of five-eight iron, a supply of which happened to be on board, and attaching lines to it and passing it out on each side of the quarter, let it go overboard, and by means of a short rope and a buoy attached to the yoke and brought up through the rudder trunk, made the yoke clip tightly around the broken rudder under water and held it in position. The lines on each side of the schooner were used to move the rudder in steering. By using this they steered the schooner west all day yesterday and last night, and when daylight broke they saw land. They had been driven off about 60 miles from Cape St. Francis. They saw a steamer last night and fired up a distress signal, but she came towards them for a short while and then passed away to the S. E. Mr. Martin deserves to be congratulated on his invention. He no doubt saved the lives of the people on board.

The Food Question.
Collier's (Canadian edition) of August 26th contains an article entitled "Pure Food Town." The article, which is sure to be interesting to all housekeepers. The people of Westfield (Mass.) woke up to the fact that they were not getting pure food or pure material for use in food. They do not want, and will not have, fruits, jams, etc., in which certain preservatives are used, peanuts that have been varnished to make them look nice, etc. Of the groceries tested in the laboratory one of the most frequently adulterated is baking powder. A delightful concoction known as a tart proved to be puff-paste made with alum, with a jelly centre dyed with coal-tar. The article goes on to say: "So little baking powder is used in some homes that this product would seem comparatively unimportant. But a great deal of baking powder, however is used in the bough cake and biscuits, and a great deal of this is adulterated." The adulteration may be by ammonia, which is fraudulent but not injurious, or by alum, which is decidedly injurious, as it hardens the tissues of the mucous membranes. As a precaution, look at label and see if ingredients are stated. Better refuse it if alum or something that looks like alum (such as potassium), is one of them, or if the ingredients are not stated by the manufacturer it will not be select some other brand.
Jams, jellies, catsups, confections, gelatine, dessert powders, flavoring extracts are often colored with coal-tar dyes. These dyes are sometimes harmless, but very frequently injurious, depending on the particular combination. There is one bottle of Creme de Menthe at the Normal School which contains a coal-tar dye sufficiently poisonous to have killed two people. The bottle is almost full, but the small amount used caused the death of a man and his wife, and then the product was sent for analysis. Extracts are also adulterated with wood alcohol and with tumeric, a fraudulent adulterant.
No doubt many cities and towns will profit by Westfield's experience and follow its example.—(Canadian Home Journal).

THE POSTMASTER.

The postmaster is a patriotic and overworked citizen who consents to give his services to government in return for the privilege of naming the delegates to the county convention. He has one of the most exhausting positions in the country, as he is obliged to sign his full name several times each month and leave his other work once in a while to see if the postoffice is still open. The postmaster's salary is a mere bagatelle compared with his true worth. If it were not for him the grand old party would have to go on the ballot by petition. The congressman who has a docile troupe of performing postmasters in every county never has to explain his vote to an impatient and prying public, for each postmaster is also the editor of a weekly newspaper which tells everything about the congressman which it is safe for the common people to know. Postmasters sometimes die, but they never resign except at the request of the United States marshal. They are a very sensitive class of individuals and can scent a change of administration in ample time to reform their political views. Postmasters are visited twice a year by government bloodhounds on falsebeards, who ask impertinent questions relative to the cash on hand and keep the postmaster away from his business. The postmaster is highly respected in every community where the box rents are not collected in advance. The government will stand for almost anything except political activity on the part of postmasters, unless it is in defence of human rights and the administration. Insurgent postmasters are quite rare, but steps are being taken to remedy this defect.

The schooner Mary Alberta, wrecked at Bay de Verde by coming into collision with the schooner Lucky Chance, was towed here last night by the S. S. Fogota. She was loading fish here for Monroe & Co. and had about 400 eggs on board when the storm came on.

THEY ACT QUICKLY AND ALWAYS CURE

POSTMASTER TELLS OF QUICK RELIEF DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS GIVE.

Two of them taken before going to bed clears away his Pain in the Back—Why they always cure more serious Kidney Diseases.

Buck Lake, Ont., Dec. 1.—(Special). How quickly Dodd's Kidney Pills relieve pain in the back when taken in time is evidenced by Mr. James Thomas, the well-known and highly respected postmaster here.

"I wish to inform you that I always find relief for pain in the back by taking Dodd's Kidney Pills," says Postmaster Thomas. "Sometimes in the mornings I cannot straighten up for hours, but if I take two Dodd's Kidney Pills before going to bed the pain all disappears and I have no trouble in the morning."

Dodd's Kidney Pills act directly on the Kidneys. Where pain in the back is caused by slight Kidney disorders the pain is relieved at once. Where the complaint is of longer standing and the Kidneys are diseased the cure takes longer, but Dodd's Kidney Pills never fail. Thousands of Canadians tell of the cure of Kidney Disease of all forms, from pain in the back to Bright's Disease, by Dodd's Kidney Pills. There is not on record a single case of Kidney Disease or of diseases resulting from diseased Kidneys, such as Rheumatism or Dropsy, which Dodd's Kidney Pills have failed to cure if taken regularly and according to directions.

Wasting Public Monies

Mr. James McDonald, of the Major's Path, called at our office yesterday and makes allegations which show how the present Government are wasting the people's monies. Mr. McDonald says that there is a piece of the Portugal Cove Road at its eastern end, which was formerly repaired for the very modest sum of $50, but which this year has cost the very high figure of $200. Another section, that on which he lives, the Major's Path, was given no attention this year at all, no grant having been received for it.

Wedding at Br. Grace.

BANVILLE-O'BRIEN.

The marriage of Mr. Thomas O'Brien to Miss Aggie Banville took place at the Cathedral at 5 o'clock last evening. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Fr. Finn in the presence of a large number of friends. The bride looked extremely pretty in her becoming costume of cream silk voile made over silk, wearing a bridal veil and wreath of orange blossoms, and carrying a handsome prayer book of ivory. She was given away by her brother, Mr. N. Banville. The bridesmaids were Miss Maggie Banville, sister of the bride, and Miss B. Dicks, who looked very well indeed, dressed in pale blue silk muslin, with hats to match. Miss Kitty Banville, another sister of the bride, was also present. The groom was ably supported by Mr. W. Madigan, of the firm of J. & W. Madigan. After the ceremony the party with 30 guests repaired to Cochrane Hotel and sat down to a sumptuous dinner. His Lordship Bishop March proposed the health of the bride, which was responded to by the groom. Among the speakers were Mr. W. H. Kennedy, Mr. W. Madigan, Mr. M. A. Duffy, of St. John's, and others. After dinner the party were entertained by music, songs, &c., and later by a dance, which was kept up until the wee sma' hours. The groom's present to the bride was a gold nugget brooch, and to the bridesmaids nugget stick pins. These nuggets were brought from Yukon for this particular purpose. The bride who, for the past eight or ten years, has assisted Mrs. Farrell at Cochrane House, and has by her pleasant disposition made many friends, as well as for herself as for that popular home, received a number of telegrams during the day from Boston, New York and other places, conveying the congratulations of friends. The wedding presents received were many and valuable and showed the high esteem in which the young couple are held here. Your correspondent wishes Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien a happy journey along the matrimonial way.

Cannot be cured with ordinary soothing syrups. The disease must be attacked at the root to eradicate the irritation of the lungs, heal the wounds and strengthen the respiratory organs. The composition of of Tar and Cod Liver Oil and other Medicinal Extracts marks it amongst all other remedies as the true specific for the diseases of the throat, the bronchial tubes and the lungs. Here are a few conclusive proofs:

Thanksgiving Sunday

AT WESLEY CHURCH.
To-morrow will be observed as Thanksgiving Day at Wesley Church. Rev. J. W. Bartlett preaches at the morning service and Rev. F. R. Matthews, B. A., in the evening. It has been a busy season for mechanics, and it is hoped that a liberal response to the appeal for donations towards the further reduction of the debt of the new church will be made by all who are earning good money.

That Missing Schooner

The schooner Gladys, Skipper J. Butler, arriving here to Montreal & Co. from Shoal Bay this morning, was able to solve the mystery of the schooner that was seen by the people of Bonavista twelve miles off the Cape last Saturday in the storm. Skipper Butler says that the schooner was the Louis, and that there was nobody on board of her. She drove out of Shoal's Cove, St. Brendan's, Saturday last. She drove down across the Gladys that was anchored there, and to save his own schooner Butler had to slip her chains. She belonged to Mr. Kalem Noah, St. John's. She had just come out of the Bay with wood and all the sails were on her.

We notice by Scotch papers to hand that Susie Mann, a native of Harbor Grace, died recently at the residence of Allan, Stirlingshire, Scotland. The deceased lady was a daughter of the late John Mann, and aunt of Mr. John Mann, who successfully laid the Atlantic cable on the 27 July, 1866.

Tim Shannahan on "Shale."

We're going ahead like wildfire, says Tucker, and we're travelling so darned fast that we'll soon find it a kind of 'inconvenient' to discover our exact location. Vulgar names, that our medicated grandfathers gave to the outposts, are being all wiped off the map, and high-sounding nicknames with a flowery twang are given to them instead. 'Twill take the present generation a hundred years or so to get familiar with the new names, and so little confidence will be placed in them that ninety-nine out of a hundred will persist in sticking to calling Punch Bowl, Punch Down, even though his dourly educated daughter turns up her nose and tries to do a faint. He's afraid his letter will go wrong if it isn't marked Punch Bowl, and he knows his parcel will not arrive at Punch Bowl if it isn't marked Punch Bowl.

We're not satisfied with the changing of the names of towns, says Tucker; we're gone a step further and now we call oil boring "shaling." This is certainly the greatest relief, the greatest boon, we as a people have had pushed our way for many years. We have had many a tussle with oil borers; hundreds of them have come and gone, and spirits ran high when a new man would arrive on the scene clad in a knickerbocker suit and wearing a soft autumn whisker and puffing cigarettes. But as time went on we soon got tired and found it difficult to get up enough steam to read a column or so of oil boring. But now 'tis shale—a delightful change, for the name isn't long, and when we get calling oil boring "shaling" long enough to get a graduate's degree 'tis oil were trying to strike, and that will make it all the more interesting. Shaling—this ought to be a fine opportunity for promoters of Xmas Numbers to give us a change in the Xmas hash.

GOES IN S. S. SEAL.

We understand that Capt. Baxter Barbour of the s.s. Fogota will go as ice master in the s.s. Seal the coming spring, when she makes her first trip in the Gulf. Capt. Farquhar, who has had a successful career both in the Gulf and front will be in command, but no better man could be had to look after the fat when the white-coats are about than Capt. Barbour.

A few evenings ago as an old man named Hickey was alighting from the train at Harbor Main with a lot of parcels in his arms, a young man approached and asked him to give him some of the parcels so that he could slight the more expeditiously. This the old man was glad to do, but later found that a parcel valued at $18 had been stolen from him by the obliging party, whom Hickey does not know.

Stole His Parcel.

The Solicitor is investigating also the claims of Rideout and Power for damages to horses and harness, etc.

A GREAT SUBJECT, ELECTRICITY, And how it is treated in the new Encyclopaedia Britannica.

A famous definition of Electricity, that in the charter of the British Institution of Civil Engineers, granted in 1828, begins with the words "the art of diverting the great sources of power in nature for the use and convenience of man."

It is only by taking a wide view of the subject that this intimate relationship can be realized, and that some conception can be gained of the absolute dependence of civilized humanity to-day upon the brain-work and hand-work of the engineer.

It may, therefore, be of some interest to give a very brief and inadequate sketch of how this great subject has been treated by high authorities, each knowing how the other has planned his subject in the new edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

What has the Engineer got to do?
Putting aside any elaborate classification of his functions, he has (1) to provide means by which people and every commodity used by man can be transported from place to place; (2) to provide machines for the purpose of producing those commodities; (3) to provide all the works necessary to secure the life and health, the wealth, i.e., the well-being of the community.

MOTIVE POWER. groups it is the provision of motive power that is the primary and fundamental requirement of the engineer. How is he to move the commodities? To do so he must have the means to move the machines? So also even with the others. How, for example, is he to move the water for a town water supply, how is he to remove the sewage and other waste material? Ultimately to obtain this power of movement the engineer must go to nature.

The great sources of Power in Nature.
These are practically three—the energy of the wind, the energy of falling water, the energy of fire, the energy of the sun, the energy of the earth, the energy of the windmill, the second, the energy of fuels, is still the most important of all, and the processes by which the engineer renders it available as mechanical energy are the most complicated and various.

FUELS. whose article Fuel (17 pages) further gives a full description of the nature, origin and method of winning the principal solid fuel nature produces for the use of man. Liquid Fuel, the next section, is by Sir Fortescue Flannery, with which should be read Sir Boverton Redwood's article Petroleum (7 pages). The third section Gaseous Fuel is by Professor G. Lunge, with which may be read Professor V. B. Lewis's article Gas and Gas Manufacture (13 pages).

How are the fuels used?
The first step in the production of motive power is to burn these fuels in some way. Thus they are sometimes used to heat air, and thus used in an Air Engine (by Sir James Ewing)—but far more commonly are employed to generate steam, then used to drive a Steam Engine. This article (17 pages) by Sir James Ewing, includes both the ordinary reciprocating engine and the steam turbine engine. To generate this steam, the fuel may be coal burnt in ENGINES, the furnace of a Boiler (13 pages) by Mr. J. T. Milton, or it may be oil or gas, as described in the section of the article Fuel alluded to above. In these cases the working substance is heated outside of and apart from the apparatus in which the heat is converted into mechanical power.

INTERNAL COMBUSTION ENGINES. Another class of heat engine, of constantly growing importance is that known as "the internal combustion engine," of which there are two main groups, viz., the Oil Engine (18 pages) by Mr. Dugald Clerk, in which the liquid fuel may range from heavy oils and paraffin to the light and volatile petrol. These are the type of engines particularly used for Motor Vehicles (by the late Hon. C. S. Rolls Vehicles (by Mr. Stranmillis) and for aeroplanes and dirigible balloons, as described in the articles Flight and Flying and Aeroplanes.

The engines moved by gas are described in Gas Engine (6 pages), also by Mr. D. Clerk.

The Power of Falling Water. The various forms of water wheels and water turbines the means by which this source of power is utilized, are described in the article Hydraulics (175 pages), by Professor Unwin, perhaps the greatest living authority on this subject. It is only in recent years that water-power has grown enormously in importance and that its accessibility may now be converted into a once thinly populated district into a busy hive of industry. Engineers have discovered how to convert it into a form of energy, electricity, which can be transported more easily and efficiently than mechanical power to the point where it is wanted.

Electricity. The central article Electricity is by Professor J. A. Fleming. Mechanical energy, derived from coal or water, is converted into electrical energy by means of the Dynamo (17 pages) by Mr. C. J. Hawkins, perhaps raised or lowered by Transformers (9 pages), by Prof. Fleming to different pressures, and finally employed for the production of mechanical power in electric motors, (Motor Electric, by Dr. Louis Bell), for Lighting (Electric, by Professor Fleming) or for various electro-chemical or electro-metallurgical purposes, described in such articles as Alkali, Acetylene, Nitrogen, Iron and Steel, etc. Omitting a great number of other articles concerned with electricity, in the scientific or practical aspect, mention must be made of the article Electricity Supply by Prof. Fleming, to which Mr. Garcke adds a section on the commercial aspects of the subject.

The transmission of Power. The natural energy of a fuel or a waterfall having been converted into mechanical energy in working conditions, the problem of transmitting it to the points where it is required for use. These problems and the means of solving them are described in the article Power Transmission (15 pages) by Prof. Dalby. "Mechanical Transmission," by ropes, belts, shafts, chains, etc., when the distance is comparatively short, and for driving the machines or mechanical tools in a factory or engineering works. For longer distances other methods are necessary. "Hydraulic Transmission," by which mechanical energy is used to drive pumps which force water at high pressure where it is required. "Pneumatic Transmission," where it is required to move a mechanical power by Water Motors (by Professor Beare). Mr. A. de W. Foote then describes "Pneumatic Transmission," where compressed air is used instead of water, largely in working conditions, cutting machines, driving drills for explosives in mines and quarries, and operating machine and other tools. These methods are nowadays more and more giving place to "Electric Transmission," which is treated by Dr. Louis Bell in the last section of the article Power Transmission.

The movement of goods and people. The motive power having been gained, how is it used? Water-borne traffic may be taken first. This is covered by the numerous articles on Water, Philip Watts, Ship and Shipbuilding, all 120 pages. Embracing, of course, warships of every class from the man-of-war to the submarine vessel, the article deals also with every other vessel on the water, from the giant Atlantic liner, to the small fishing boat, ice-breakers, steam trawlers and the like. There is a useful article Steamship Lines and a statistical article on Shipping. Sea-going and other vessels require works on land; therefore here may be mentioned the closely related series of articles by Professor Unwin, viz., Harbours, Breakwater, Dock, Harbour, Jetty, Pier, and Dredges and Dredging, by Mr. Walter Hunter. Lighthouses, by Mr. T. Gedy, Canada, by Sir E. B. Williams, is supplemented by special articles on the Panama, Suez, Kiel and Manchester Ship Canals, River Engineering, by Professor Vernon Harcourt, and another aspect of the same subject.

ROAD Borne can be gained from TRAFFIC. Traction, by Dr. Louis Dugald Clerk, and the general article on Roadways (41 pages) whose numerous sections include an Historical Introduction, General Statistics, Economic and Social Aspects, Accidents, Organization, Construction, Locomotive Power, Rolling stock, Intra-Urban Railways, and Light Railways, the writers of which are Mr. T. Gedy, Mr. R. V. Morris, Mr. A. T. Hadley, Lt.-Col. H. A. Yorke, Professor F. H. Dixon, Mr. B. Adams, Professor W. E. Dalby, Mr. W. B. Parsons, Major General C. E. Webber, and Mr. E. Garcke. The construction of railways leads naturally to the articles Bridges (22 pages), by Professor Unwin, and Tunnels (6 pages), by Mr. H. A. Carson.

Next follows Tramways (8 pages), by Mr. E. Garcke, while the effect that the introduction of self-propelled vehicles have had upon roads is well drawn out in the important article Roads and Streets. The motors themselves either for pleasure or commercial purposes have been alluded to already.

Goods and heavy materials of all kinds have to be moved not only from place to place, but from one level to another. Devices for so doing are described in Conveyors by G. B. Zimmer, in Cranes by Mr. Walter Pitt, and in Elevators and Lifts.

The winning of the Engineers materials. It is upon the miner and the quarryman that the engineer depends for the supply of the materials for his work. Leaving aside the extraction of the Mineralogy and Petrology, the relevant general articles are MINING AND Mineral Deposits (5 METALLURGY) pages) by Prof. J. B. Peck, and the article on Mining (74 pages) by Professor H. S. Munroe, Quarrying by Mr. F. G. Zimmer; Borings, Blasting, Shaft Sinking, by Prof. B. Peck. After the extraction of the mineral from the earth follows the treatment of the raw material to fit it for the hands of the engineer.

The general scientific principles are described in Metallurgy, Electro-Metallurgy, Electro-Chemistry; more directly in the article Ore-dressing, by Prof. R. H. Richards, but particular information must be sought in the various articles on the different minerals themselves, of which Iron and Steel (31 pages) by Prof. H. M. Howe can only be mentioned here. Mr. T. G. Horner's series on Annealing, Forging, Founding, and Rolling Mill continues the processes of dealing with this essential metal of the world's industry. The series of the articles on Petroleum, Paraffin, which includes the great shale oil industry, Naphtha, Asphaltum, Kerosene, by Sir Boverton Redwood may well be included at this place.

Mr. Horner's important article Tools (22 pages) describes fully every kind of implement, from hand tools to the more complicated machine tools in use in the engineer's workshop.

The Machinery of Production. Every industry of production has an article of varying length and importance devoted to it, and in each is described with illustrations, diagrams and plans, the machinery used, the machinery moved by the machinery. Different motive-powers described above. It must suffice to name but a few of those of fundamental importance and a bare list of titles of such articles can alone be given:—Flour and Flour Manufacture, Bread, Sugar Manufacture, Refrigrating & Ice-Making, Cotton Spinning, Weaving, Textile Manufacture, Bleaching, Dyeing, Textile Printing, Linen, Jute, Silk, Rope Making, Leather, Paper, Printing, Brewing, Spirits, Distillation, Menthol, etc. There are also many of such miscellaneous articles as Safes, Strong Rooms and Vaults, Cash Registers, Typewriters, Yachts, Cleaners, and Weighing Machines.

The Housing and Health of the People. The engineer plays an all important part in the well-being of the community. It is to him we owe the purity of our water, as is shown in the article Water Supply (32 pages), by G. F. Dowling. Desires to his inventions, Destroyers and provide various processes of Sewerage. To him we owe Ventilation, Heating and Lighting, by oil, gas, electricity, and the ordinary methods of heating, through destruction by fire by the mechanics devices shown in Fire and Fire Extinguishers. Though the Municipal Engineer, not directly concerned with the structure of our buildings, he commonly secures some control over their erection in towns. The articles by Mr. James Barriett may therefore be mentioned here. They include Building, Brick Work, Brick Making, Masonry, Mortar, Carpentry, Plaster Work, Plaster Work, Roofs, Glazing and many others. Though building is not strictly an engineer's work, yet he encroaches more and more into this sphere through the introduction of the new methods of construction in steel and reinforced concrete, as is shown in the article Steel Construction, by Mr. Bartlett. Concrete, by Mr. Wentworth Shields and Cement, by Mr. B. Blount.

This sketch, brief and inadequate though it be, may perhaps be regarded as the ordinary survey of a subject which enters so intimately into every activity and need of his daily life must prove of unending interest and practical value whether for serious study or for reference. For the practical man the concluding words of a technical review in a London paper may be quoted—"to the professional engineer the Encyclopaedia Britannica is as much his stock in trade as to the grocer his wares."

Cable News.

Special to Evening Telegram.

LONDON, Dec. 1. The morning newspapers in their editorial columns, display a tone of great anxiety over the Persian crisis. The majority of them agree that Shuster, the Persian treasurer-general, lacks Russia, and that Russia must support Russia, but several papers express misgivings over the outcome of Russia's action, and what they term the administrative anarchy which will likely result from Shuster's dismissal. By some it is feared that the success of Russian diplomacy will leave Persia little real independence. The Daily News (Radical) makes a serious attack upon Sir Edward Grey, accusing him of constantly yielding to Russia in order to maintain the anti-Powers against Germany. That paper asserts that Britain's support of Russia now, will mean the annexation of England and Persia, and that a Russian frontier in Asia, and committing England to a costly army to guard it. The News adds that England's support of Russia is the deadliest because it will probably prevent the Russian States from moving in Shuster's behalf.

TEHERAN, Dec. 1. The Persian National Council rejected the Russian ultimatum by a big majority. The Foreign Minister has resigned. The vote of the National Council, which rejected the Russian ultimatum, was taken in open Council. Subsequently, at a secret sitting, the members were practically unanimous against compliance. A telegram from the British Foreign Minister, Sir Edward Grey, was presented to the Assembly during the sitting. The despatch urgently advised compliance with the Russian demand, but some members pointed out that England's advice hitherto had only tended to Persia's humiliation. They believed that Grey had been misled, and emphatically protested that Russian injustice had become intolerable, and thought that resistance on the part of the Persian Government would mean demands would awaken foreign attention and lead to an impartial enquiry. Compliance would be construed as a sign of cowardice, and would mean the suicide of a deputation of members of the National Council waited on Shuster before the vote was taken. The Treasurer-General begged the Council to consult only the interests of their country, and not consider him.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 1. In consequence of the rejection by the Persian National Council of the Russian demands Russia has ordered the troops now concentrated at Resht, the capital of the Persian province of Gilan on the Caspian Sea, to advance on Teheran.

TEHERAN, Dec. 1. Dowleh, ex-governor of the Province of Fals, was assassinated to-day.

LONDON, Dec. 1. The Commission of Herbert Montague, 2nd Lieut. in the Royal Fusiliers, has been cancelled because of his action of joining the Turkish forces at Tripoli, which is a breach of the neutrality law. Montague has sent reports to the English newspapers that the Italian soldiers have been guilty of cruelty against women and children, many hundreds of whom have been mutilated beyond recognition.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Dec. 1. James McNamara pleaded guilty this afternoon to the charge of murder in the first degree, in connection with the death of Charles Haggerty, one of the victims of the "Times" office explosion and fire. His brother John, jointly indicted with McNamara, pled guilty to dynamiting the Jewell Iron Works. It is thought James will get life imprisonment, and John 14 years.

Collection for Christian Brothers. Dear Sir,—Once every year we have an opportunity of showing in a practical way our appreciation of the good work done by those noble band of men, the Christian Brothers, who have given up their lifetime to the cause of religion and education.

There are in the ranks of the Brothers to-day men who would have adorned any walk of life, but at duty's call they have left home and friends and kindred, and everything that's dear, to teach religion and promote education in every land—a simple, pure and holy life, looking for no earthly reward. In the words of Brother Slattery of lofty memory "our wants are few and easily supplied." Many of the older Brothers who taught in St. Patrick's Hall—Rev. Bros. Holland, Fleming and Slattery—having fulfilled their life work, returned to the old land, hung up their armour and are now resting beneath the green sod of holy Ireland. But it is gratifying to know that the good work inaugurated and carried out by those men in their day still lives and flourishes. Let all of us then, both past and present, join in this one grand united effort to make this year's collection a record one and thereby go to show we do not forget those who did so much for us in days gone by.

Yours truly,

Not Salls, Oil or Pills, but Cascarets.

No odds how sick your Stomach; how hard your head aches or how Bilious—Cascarets make you feel great.

You men and women who somehow can't get feeling right—who have an almost daily headache, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath, dizziness, can't sleep, are bilious, nervous and upset, bothered with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach, or have backache and feel all worn out.

Are you keeping clean inside with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passage-way every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil? This is important.

Cascarets work while you sleep; cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gasses; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the decomposed waste matter and poison in the intestines and bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box from any drug store will keep your entire family feeling good for months. Don't forget the children. They love Cascarets because they taste good—

Stokers' Arrangement.

We learn that an agreement has been arrived at between the Firemen's Union and Messrs. A. J. Harvey & Co. to the effect that in future their steamers of the "Venture" type running to Sydney will take 6 regular firemen and another to act as trimmer, receiving a stoker's pay of $30 per month. If a vessel is at any other port besides Sydney, a second trimmer must be taken on for the trip. Heretofore the ships had 6 stokers and 2 trimmers the latter getting $25 each per month. The trimmers now on the Bellavente which goes to Sydney, Monday, are being paid off and a fireman taken instead. The Port of Prospero will in future take 3 regular stokers and another who will be a trimmer, but who must be a union man.

Dr. de Van's Female Pills
A reliable French regulator; never fails. These pills are exceedingly powerful in regulating the generative portion of the female system. Refuse all cheap imitations. Dr. de Van's are sold at 1/6 a box or three for 1/2. Mailed to any address. The Seebell Drug Co., St. Catharines, Ont.

Fogata Here.
The S. S. Fogata arrived from the North at 11 last night. Capt. Barbour says it was the stormiest trip of the season. The ship brought a full freight and the following passengers in saloon—S. Browning, Miss J. Pilon, Miss Cull, Miss Bemister, C. Bemister, M. Parsons, H. W. Davis, N. Kean, Mrs. A. Barbour, Miss S. Gill, F. Saunders, Rev. E. O'Brien, Miss B. Keates and 18 second class. The ship was harboured in the big storms.

In a recent storm the wind blew with particular violence on the higher levels and at least one residence narrowly escaped destruction, not by the storm, but by fire. This was the house of Mr. A. Horwood, who keeps a store at the corner of Cabot Street and Barter's Hill. A furious gust struck the domicile, burst in a window, the panes in which are 26 by 22 inches, and the flying glass barely escaped Mrs. Horwood's face as she stood in the kitchen. The lighted lamp which stood on the kitchen table was overturned and would have rolled to the floor, but was fortunately caught by Mrs. Horwood. Had it fallen to the floor a fire must have occurred, which under such weather conditions might have had far-reaching results.
