CHAPTER IX.

Holme Castle is what is known as a very regular household; that is to say that everything is done at stated times, and the big clock in the hall that strikes the hours and half hours, and grows at the quarters, as if it had a settled spite against Time, is the controlling spirit of the place.

At eight o'clock Dulcie is roused, very considerably aroused, by a tremendous beating of a gong, and under the impression that the Castle is on fire, at the very least, springs out of bed and goes to the window.

Her apprehensions are allayed, however, by a knock at the door, and the voice of the demure servant-maid murmuring, "Eight o'clock, ma'am."

"Oh," says Dulcie, not overgrateful. "Is anything the matter? I mean, what time is breakfast?"

"Nine o'clock, miss."

"Thanks," says Dulcie. "Stop a minute, is there a bath-room—of course there is; but where is it?"

"I'll wait and show you, miss," says the maid.

Dulcie puts on her dressing-gown—she looks very tall and slim in the long, striped robe de toilette—and opens the door.

The maid goes to a small room at the end of the corridor, fitted in the most complete fashion as a bath-room and proceeds to turn on the hot water. But Dulcie stops her.

"Not hot water," she says—"I never use it. Thanks, that will do. Nine o'clock, you said. Will you please bring my aunt a cup of tea?"

"Yes, miss," says the maid, eyeing first the bath and then the slim, graceful figure, with barely suppressed wonder. No hot water! When the "young ladies" have a bath, it is a ceremony of much elaboration and preparation, and more hot than cold water by a great deal.

"You are sure you won't have any hot, miss?" she says, doubtfully. "The water is very cold—it comes from a well in the stable-yard, and—with a little irrepresible shudder—"it is like ice."

"That is beautiful," says Dulcie, nodding her head; and the maid wonderingly departs, to recount in the servants' hall her admiration and awe of the new "young lady," who can face cold water without blanching.

Long before nine o'clock, Dulcie, with sparkling eyes and peach tinted cheeks, the result of "no hot water," descends and enters the breakfast room.

Apparently the family are still upstairs, for there is no sign of them, and the butler and footman who are laying the cloth glance at her with subdued surprise. Evidently the ladies are in the habit of keeping the hours and nothing more. She looks round the room, stands by the fire a moment, then goes out into the hall, and seeing a door open, naturally makes for the fresh air.

As she steps outside she realizes that the Castle is indeed a castle; traces of the old moat are still discernible, though the moat has been filled in, and now forms a wide terrace that runs round the outside of the building. From this terrace is a view of the park, a mighty expanse of grass-land, studded with glorious trees, beneath which glide the graceful deer. Under the terrace is the pleasure or ornamental gardens, beautifully kept, with velvety lengths of lawn and brilliant flower-beds. Here and there a marble faun rises from amongst the green, or a Titan bends beneath the weight of a pitcher from which trickles a crystal stream.

In all her life, Dulcie has never seen such a place as Holme Castle, has never even imagined it, and she stands looking from the park to the Castle itself, a stately pile of weather-stained and very grimy stone, with all a girl's delight in the grand and the beautiful. Suddenly it flashes across her mind that this—all this, Castle and park, and pleasure, yes, and title, too, may be hers by the utterance of a mere word—"Yes;" and the thought brings the blood to her face, and a strange light in her eyes.

Then she smiles.

"If one were base enough to sell one's self, it would be a good price!" she murmurs. "What would not one do to be the mistress of all this?"

Then she laughs softly; and passes along the terrace until it ends abruptly by a flight of stone steps leading, as she judges by the buildings, to the stables. She pauses here a moment, looking wistfully downward, until suddenly there comes upon the air the sound of the barking of dogs, the neighing of horses, and the grunting of pigs.

For animals, Dulcie has what Aunt Fernor describes as "an insane affection." Often that good lady's heart is made to beat with terror by Dulcie's insistence in the matter of patting strange dogs and stroking strange horses.

She listens for a moment, glances at her watch, and finding that there are still twelve minutes between now and nine, she runs down the steps, passes under the old stone archway, and finds herself in the stable-yard. Grooms and stable-boys are busy at work, grooming and leisurely passing to and fro with straw and buckets, and they stare at the vision that has suddenly descended amongst them. Without pausing to consider whether it is quite the correct thing for a lady, and a visitor, to wander alone round the stables, Dulcie makes for an open door, and is instantly surrounded by half a dozen dogs of various breeds, from a huge mastiff to a wiry-haired Skye-terrier, who sniff and point round her for momentary inspection, and then as she stoops down and pats them, and addresses them in endearing accents, jump up with friendly energy. A groom comes forward to drive them off.

"They won't bite, miss," he says, with a sympathetic grin. "Down, Leo! down, Snip!"

"I am not afraid," says Dulcie, laughing. "I am never afraid, and I have never been bitten."

"No, miss," says the man, touching his cap respectfully. "Ah, that's just it! I believe there's nothing dogs hate more than for people to be afraid of 'em. They know directly. It's like distrusting of 'em, you see, miss."

Dulcie nods, and draws the great head of the mastiff against her with a caressing grasp.

"Now, that there dog, Leo, the big 'un, he's one of the best-tempered animals I ever see, but most people when they see him begin to back and look fearful at him, and he gets nasty directly. Get down Turk! They'll make your dress in a mess. I'm afraid, miss."

"Never mind," says Dulcie. "I am so glad there are so many dogs! I shall often come and see them, if I may."

The man grins with satisfaction.

"Yes, miss; for if you're fond of dogs, there's the hounds in the kennel at the home farm. But you mustn't go there alone, miss."

Dulcie nods.

"May I go into the stables?" she says.

The man touches his hat and opens the inner door. She picks up the line of the canine crowd, a small black and tan, and passes in. There, all sleek and shining, with their cloths on, stand the carriage horses, and a couple of hacks. The stables are perfect in their way; solid oak, shining brass and steel, plated straw, all as clean and neatly ordered as a toy stable from the Lowther Arcade.

"They are all quiet, miss," says the man, stripping the cloth off the nearest horse and passing his hand over the shining quarters. "There ain't a kicker in the stables, miss; Sir Hugh wouldn't have one at any price."

Dulcie, filled with infinite delight, rises up to them, one by one, and strokes and pats them, murmuring propitiating endearments, which the horses seem to understand, for they arch their necks, and push their cool, smooth noses, into her small white hands confidingly.

"Beautiful creatures!" she says. "How warm and well kept they are!"

The man grins and nods gratefully.

"Yes, miss, we take care of 'em; they're good nags, all of 'em; but the best of 'em is in here. It's the master's charger, miss; he came down by steamer, poor fellow, a week ago. A beautiful creature, miss, and as kind as a kitten. And yet, they do say that he's as fierce in a battle as the master himself. Sir Hugh rode him through the war, miss."

"Oh, I should like to see him," says Dulcie, eyeing the door wistfully.

The man opens it, and a magnificent black charger turns his head toward them, and neighs as they enter.

Dulcie stands and stares at him eagerly.

"Are you sure he is quiet?" she says; "he looks so big and powerful."

"He's as quiet as a lamb, miss, he is, indeed," and he goes up to him and slips the cloth off.

Dulcie puts down the terrier and goes up to the horse and strokes him, then gaining courage, puts her arm round his neck, and turns her head to laugh triumphantly at the man, when she sees in the doorway, where the man stood, the tall figure of Sir Hugh; he is dressed in a suit of shooting cords, and is smoking a cigarette, and there is a smile and a look of admiration on his face, which may be meant for the horse or the slim, graceful girl, or possibly both.

He raises his hat.

"Good-morning," he says, and at the sound of his voice Dulcie sees that the horse pricks its ears and turns its head with as plain a gesture of welcome as if it were made to a human being. "Is this fair?"

"Is what fair?" she demands.

"To wear the affections of my old Nigger from me? On the first morning, too!"

She laughs.

"Is he very fond of you?"

"Astonishing and incredible as it may sound, I believe he is," he answers, with a smile.

"He is a beautiful creature," she says. "You must be fond of him."

He nods.

"Your man tells me that he has been in battle with you—has he?"

He nods again.

"Yes, he was in the last fight, and two or three skirmishes before that. He is a thorough soldier, is Nigger."

"Come and speak to him," says Dulcie. "He is dying for a word."

He laughs, and goes up to the horse and puts his hand on its shoulder, very near that of Dulcie, which lies white upon the black shining skin.

"Well, old man," he says, and the horse paws the ground and stretches out its head to him. "Well, old man, got over your sea-trip. Yes, he looks well."

Dulcie looks from man to horse and the thought flashes through her that they look both of them perfect specimens of their kinds.

"If," she says, "I had a horse like that, I think I should be happy—I mean quite happy."

He smiles.

"There are not many like him," he says. "Poor old Nigger! He had a narrow squeak for it last time."

Tales of Submarine Battles in North Sea.

Devonian Survivor Describes Fight in Which Four Germans and Eleven British Ships Were Engaged—Saw One U-Boat Torpedoed—Squadron of Airplanes and Patrol Vessels Joined in Battle—Two Merchant Vessels Sunk.

Albany, September 19.—A vivid tale of an exciting battle between eleven British and four German submarines off the Irish coast, during which the liner Devonian and another steamer of a fleet the British warship was convoying was sunk, was told to-day at the State Employment Agency on Chapel Street by Cecil Troutman, a survivor of the Devonian. Troutman was adrift for nearly four hours before he was picked up by a patrol boat.

"We left Liverpool," he said, early in the morning, a group of fifteen vessels, to be convoyed through the danger zone by eleven British submarines going along the surface. About thirty-eight miles off the Irish coast four submarines of the U-boat type were seen in the distance.

"We immediately received orders to put on speed and make the greatest headway we could, sailing in pairs. Six of the English submarines submerged until they were half awash, while the remainder threw a cordon around the merchant ships. "It took just ten shakes of a lamb's tail before the crews were at the guns on the underwater boats' decks, and then things began to happen. You could fairly hear the shells scream as they whizzed through the air and dropped through the surface of the sea in the direction in which the submarines were first seen.

"Suddenly two periscopes, well to our starboard and on a line almost with the ship, were seen following us. One was quite near, the other a little distance off. From one of the half submerged submarines a white streak shot out under the surface straight towards the U-boat. There was a dull explosion. The periscope disappeared. Oil floated on the sea. She had gone down.

"Almost simultaneously a streak of white shot out from a place near where the other U-boat had been seen. Then another. Both travelled in our direction. The ship right in back of us was hit amidships and sank in a few minutes. A second after another torpedo struck our ship near the stern. Two men were immediately killed by the explosion, the ship carpenter and his assistant.

"I was on the promenade deck when the thing occurred. I was so fascinated by the spectacle that I hardly realized the danger. Far away I heard the hum as of a mighty bee. The volume increased. Others were heard. I looked about and up. Coming toward us at a mighty pace of speed were a number of airplanes. Over us they began to soar about like seagulls. Swooping up and down, circling, criss-crossing and swerving, they dropped bombs that sank silently into the sea.

"Suddenly, as if by signal, they all flew toward one point. Slower was their speed. They were trailing a sub. From down on the horizon came a number of submarine chasers. They trailed after the planes, some caught up—shot ahead of them in sprays of sea, and kept their positions there. They were waiting for the time when the submarine they were chasing should come up for air.

"It all took less time than it takes to tell it. Our ship was rapidly sinking. Men were leaping overboard, others were frantically getting the lifeboats down. I decided that I would have a better chance if I got hold of a bit of some of the wreckage that littered the sea than in one of the crowded boats.

"I jumped overboard and got on a large floating box. I was on this nearly five hours. The other ships did not stop to pick us up, but, according to Admiralty orders, kept on going."

The American's Share in the War.

(Toronto Globe.)

On his return home from the United States, Mr. Balfour, referring to his special mission to Washington, laid stress on the moral significance of America's intervention in the European campaign. Mr. Asquith was equally emphatic in his estimate of the moral and material reinforcement of the Allies by the United States. The immediate effect has been to convince Germany of the hopelessness of the struggle. This is not admitted by Berlin, but it is well known that the military aspect of the war has been profoundly affected by the presence of American troops at the front. The knowledge that huge reserves are available for the Allies greatly alters the whole outlook. The promise of military assistance on a large scale next year has changed the situation materially in favor of the Allied armies.

The defection of Russia makes the aid of America timely and of greatly enhanced importance. The Allies, while they will welcome the return of Russia to the firing line, have made their plans for the future on the assumption that Russian troops are, for all practical purposes, out of the war for the remainder of the campaign. The original Allied plans for this year's spring offensive contemplated a continuous wastage of the German reserves on both fronts until a point was reached in the diminution of the enemy's effective strength where the issue could be forced. The failure of Russia upset the calculations of the Allies and altered the whole situation. It was at this stage the United States entered with assurances of assistance that saved the Allies from a serious dilemma. This aid, while it will not be available until next spring, gives the commanders freedom to press the offensive to the utmost this year, with the knowledge that failure to attain a decision will not leave the Allies exposed to risks due to heavy losses. The heavy fighting on the western front is carried on with the knowledge that reserves will be forthcoming in time to turn the scales against the enemy at the most critical period of the war. That the military situation is favorable, despite Russia's defection, is evident from the attitude of American journals. The New York Evening Post, ridiculing the rumor that France is "bled white," says:—

"An army which could suffer the serious casualties arising from Nivelle's rash tactics in the battle of the Aisne and 'come back' as it did in Flanders and around Verdun is plainly not at its last gasp. Were France in a parlous state we should not be witnessing the leisurely process of preparation which General Pershing's divisions are being put through. They would have been thrown into the front line, as Great Britain was compelled to throw her volunteer forces into the trenches before Ypres in the late fall of 1914. We should not have the further intimation that America need not be in too much haste about rushing her troops across the sea, but should take her time for training them at home; to which end French and British officers are to be delegated as instructors. With France more than standing fast, with Great Britain holding her own against the U-boats, the panic cry of 'Too late!' has lost its power. In this different mood the twenty-five thousand men who marched down Fifth avenue yesterday no longer appear as a pitifully small instalment on a huge and pressing debt, but as the index simply of immense resources for the mobilization of which the necessary time is not wanting. The Allies in the west have not developed sufficient striking power to achieve that 'breaking through' which we must regard as postponed to an indefinite future. But they have shown the power to pin the enemy permanently to the defensive and subject him to a bitter process of attrition."

It were a mistake then to assume that the war could not be brought to a successful termination but for the soldiers of Uncle Sam. At the same time it must be evident that the moral and material support brought into the field by the United States removes all doubt as to the final outcome. A draw between the contending armies or a premature peace might conceivably be forced on the Allies by the default of Russia. But no such danger now threatens. The American troops take the place of the Russians in the scheme of the Allied offensive. Although this may involve another year of war, the progressive wastage of the enemy's strength continues, and the time will surely arrive when the combined armies of the Grand Alliance will advance to final victory. Victory through the wearing down of the enemy, rather than the gain of territory is the aim of the Allied commanders. While it may be possible for Germany to break down the Russian defensive, active operations by Germany in the eastern theatre will not stay the wastage which is diminishing the enemy's reserves in manpower on the western front. Counting Russia out of the war for the remainder of the campaign, the odds are still heavily against Germany.

Take "Cascarets" If Headachy, Bilious And Constipated

Best for liver and bowels, bad breath, bad colds, sour stomach.

Get a 10-cent box.
Sick headache, biliousness, coated tongue, head and nose clogged up with a cold—always trace this to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach. Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months.

Lieutenant Badcock Wins D. S. C.

Word has been received in town that Lieutenant Badcock, R.N., who is well known here, has received the Distinguished Service Cross, though for what services we have not been informed. Lieutenant Badcock married Miss Frances Pinsent, daughter of Mrs. C. S. Pinsent, of this city. He is, we understand, private secretary to Commodore Tyrwhitt, who commanded the destroyer flotilla in the famous Heligoland Bight action, 1914, off the Dogger Banks, 1915, and last year in the great Jutland Battle. Lieutenant Badcock's many friends will learn with pleasure of his distinction.

Wilhelm War
Crazed Egomaniac.
German Emperor Puts Himself Even Before Duty, "Me Und Gott."
Washington, Sept. 15.—National leaders here look upon Kaiser Wilhelm as a dangerous and crafty egomaniac, who always thinks on himself first, Germany second and then of God as the protector of his plans.

In his ordinary messages the Kaiser always thinks of himself as the only person to be consulted. The people are an after-thought, and there is usually some reference to the Deity as favoring the Germans.

What the Messages Show.
An examination of some of the Kaiser's recent messages is illuminating. Just to take this year: Jan. 6, after his first peace bubble was punctured, he issued the following proclamation to the army and navy: "Conjointly with the allied (central powers) rulers, I proposed to our enemies to enter forthwith into peace negotiations. Our enemies refused my offer. Their hunger for power desires Germany's destruction. The war will be continued. Before God and humanity, I declare that on the Governments of our enemies alone falls the heavy responsibility for all the further terrible sacrifice from which I wish to save you. Our enemies did not want the understanding offered by me. With God's help our arms will enforce it."

Jan. 27 appeared an account of his speech in reply to the Austrian Emperor's congratulations upon his birthday. "Here again the big 'I' and the big 'My' are used; then comes the country, with a final appeal to the Deity: Me and My Army."

"Your majesty's presence here to-day is a new and sublime proof to me that your majesty, as well as your army and your people, feel before God and humanity, I declare that on my people in their unshakable purpose to bring the present war, with the help of the Almighty, to a happy and joyful conclusion for our people."

March 18, accepting the resignation of Admiral Von Tirpitz, originator of submarine frightfulness, the Emperor paid tribute to Tirpitz's work, winding up: "This is gladly acknowledged by me and by the German nation."

March 31, when the Reichstag adopted the Government's tax programme, he sent his congratulations to Chancellor Bethmann-Hollweg, and wound up with these words: "God is with us."

April 24, after the French offensive in Artois, the Kaiser congratulated Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria, German commander: "I send my thanks and those of the Fatherland, God will help further."

May 6 the Kaiser forgot himself and actually put the Fatherland first in a birthday message to the Crown Prince: "In grateful and full confidence the Fatherland and I look upon you and the other battle fronts which imperatively resist all attacks."

June 2 the Kaiser, delighted by the cessation of the French Champagne offensive, wired the Crown Prince: "I charge you to express the thanks of myself and the Fatherland to all the leaders and troops."

On the same day he wired to the Bavarian Crown Prince: "With me the German Fatherland thanks its sons for their loyal devotion."

When Riga fell the other day the Kaiser wired to Prince Leopold of Bavaria, in charge: "I express to you and to the Eight army my and the Fatherland's congratulations. Onward with God."

Dates of the World's Series.
The First Game Will be at Chicago on October 6th.
Cincinnati, Ohio, September 20.—When the silver half dollar tossed by Frank Navin, of the Detroit Club, fell tails up, after President Harry Hempstead of the New York National Baseball Commission here to-day officially announced that Charles Comiskey, owner of the Chicago Americans, had won the toss and had the privilege of saying where the first game of the next world series should be played. Shortly afterward it was announced the series will open on the grounds of the Chicago Americans on October 6th while the second game will be played there on Sunday, October 7. On October 8 the two ball clubs will be found travelling on their way to New York, where the third and fourth games of the series will be played, October 9th and 10th. October 11 will see the players travelling westward and the fifth game, if it is necessary, will be played at Chicago. Then, if another game is found to be required, a two day wait will take place Saturday, October 13th, and Sunday, October 14th being open, and the sixth game being played at New York, on October 15.

The commission selected Umpire Chris O'Loughlin and Evans of American League, and Umpires Kilmer and Rigger of the National League, officials.

Behind the Back Praise.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

A group of married women were comparing their husbands' faults.

One would think to listen to them that those husbands were all compounded of faults. Not big faults, you know, but little faults. The sort a wife can complain of without wifely treason or without loss of standing. Big faults like unfaithfulness or drunkenness or dishonesty, a wife usually hides, from pride. Little faults she likes to talk about with other members of the sorority.

Some Faults of Husbands.

One husband was terribly disordered. He never put anything back where he found it.

Another was impatient with the children, never wanted to play with them or talk with them.

Two were court-martialed for being late to meals.

And then one of the women agreed with another one about some fault the latter had ascribed to her husband, selfishness. I believe it was.

And lo, quick as a flash, the first woman had about faced, and was trying to prove that her husband wasn't so very selfish after all, certainly not so selfish as the husband of the woman who had tactlessly agreed with her.

Her Husband Would Have Been Surprised at Her Praise.

Isn't it funny the way we do that. We can criticize our own both to their faces and behind their backs, but the minute anyone else ventures to criticize, we bristle like a dog who sees a strange dog coming up on his lawn.

I am sure the husband would have been surprised if he could have heard her warm defense of him. He would have been astonished to find how she appreciated him.

I am sure many a husband or wife or brother or sister or father or mother would be surprised if he or she could hear the housemate who is so fault-lavish and praise stingy in their presence praise them to others when occasion rises.

Why Keep All Praise For Other Ears.

One often hears the person who praises you to your face and criticises you behind your back criticised.

True, that is not a straightforward thing to do.

But at least you do hear the nice things, and perhaps he is as sincere in praise as in blame.

And when a person keeps all his praise of you for other people you never have the gratification of hearing it. Somehow it is difficult for housemates to say pretty things to each other. I don't know why it is harder to phrase a compliment to an intimate than to a comparative stranger but it is. One feels oddly shamefaced about them.

But that is when one first attempts them.

Like all good habits (and had ones) this one becomes second nature before you know it, and the compliments that once stuck in your throat soon slide out as easily as fault finding.

This is to certify that I have used MINARD'S LINIMENT in my family for years, and consider it the best liniment on the market. I have found it excellent for horse flesh.

PROCRASTINATION.

Procrastination is the habit of putting off until the middle of next week what should have been done yesterday morning. It is one of the worst habits known to the human race, being exceeded in deadliness only by the practice of curing a cold in the head by drinking lemon extract by the pint.

Putting off until next week what should have been done yesterday morning.

Some of our ablest scientists and medical men, who have made a careful study of the subject, declare that procrastination is caused by a germ which is a blood relative of the hook-worm germ. However, procrastination can be cured if taken in time, while the hookworm fever is harder to shake off than a land agent on a commission basis. It is the sacred duty of parents to watch closely for the first traces of uninterrupted procrastination on the part of their children, and when it appears in a pronounced form it should be removed with a relentless hand and a blunt shingle. Many a business man has been ruined for life because his parents failed to extract the procrastination from his system in early youth, with the result that he never paid a book account until the interest had eaten up the principal.

There are times when procrastination becomes highly irritating to people who are of a punctual and orderly nature. There is the man who is never able to get to his seat in the front row of the dress circle until the first act is half over, when it takes him twelve maddening minutes to undress standing up, in the meantime causing nine other people in the same row to arise and blot out the stage during the duet scene. Another smiling and urbane procrastinator is the member of an important committee of the Commercial Club who fails to arrive and make a quorum until everybody wishes he had been run over by a beer truck. Nobody would object to a certain amount of genteel procrastination if the party indulging in it would procrastinate on his own time.

On some occasions procrastination can be said to be a good thing. The business man who procrastinates buying a line of blue-sky securities until the promoter dies of morification of spirit and slow starvation will never have to mortgage a steam-heated home to make up for his hurry. If we would all procrastinate a little more on the needless extravagances, we would be able to retire earlier in life and enjoy some scenery that doesn't grow around home.

Everyday Etiquette.

"George Smith always wants to stop and talk on the street. Do you think that is polite?" asked Jean.
"A young girl should not allow a man to detain her in conversation on the street. He should walk by her side until their talk is completed," replied sister Marian.

Fads and Fashions.

A great many ruffles are seen. Coats are cut on very loose lines. Satin suits have linings of wool. Black velvet is favored for evening.

Tunics are worn over narrow skirts. The three-piece suit will be much worn. Corduroys are liked for children's wear.

To be fashionable, one must dress quietly. Formal street frocks are made of velvet. Keep the little girl's dress very simple. Evening gowns with square trains are seen.

Filet blouses are trimmed with crochet balls. Scotch tartans appear among panne velvets. Some smart jackets show deep square collars. Children are to wear Tam o' Shanter hats.

Full short skirts are made with draped bodices. Navy and brown are the favored shades in Paris. All hats depend on line, not trimming, for style.

A great many cloths are made in imitation of fur. Frilly vests peep out from severe tailored suit coats. Bands of jet are a novel trimming for many serge.

There is a lovely new material called buckskin cloth. Ostrich facings are very frequent in the new estin-hats.

Milady's Boudoir.

NOSEBLEED AND HOW TO STOP IT.
Nosebleed, unless it is of frequent occurrence or unusually severe, is not an alarming ailment and some people have it quite often, especially young children, who are often relieved by losing a little blood this way.
The simplest means of checking nosebleed is to lay cold applications on the bridge of the nose and forehead and lie back quietly until the discharge ceases. Holding the hands above the head and the sudden application of a cold article, such as a key or a cloth wrung in cold water or the hands dipped in cold water and the feet in hot water ought, one or all, to be efficacious; if not, prepare a small roll of absorbent cotton or lint tied by a piece of thread. Thrust the roll up the nose to press the blood vessel and check the discharge. When the latter is over, withdraw the cotton by means of the thread.

A child should be made to lie quiet for a time after a nose bleed and be strengthened by a course of cold plunges and salt baths under the direction of a physician.
The membrane inside the nostrils is very delicate and a child must be taught not to poke anything up the nose or touch it with the nails. Sometimes when a child is run down physically an irritated spot or sore will come in the nose.
If this does not yield to simple remedies consult a physician for a healing lotion and in regard to the general toning up of the system.

Your Boys and Girls.

Stammering is due to a particularly nervous temperament, and only very sympathetic treatment can effect a cure. Stammering in a child should receive immediate attention, and the first thing to be done is to improve the little ones health by means of plenty of sleep, fresh air and good food. Every day he should take deep breathing exercises in the open air, these deep steady inspirations strengthen the muscles of the throat and counteract a spasmodic habit of breathing.

Notice should be taken of the sounds which the little stammerer has the most trouble with, and sentences composed for him to repeat each day, very slowly and clearly. He should be asked to read each day. This exercise should be omitted whenever he seems over-excited or run down in health and it goes without saying that he should never be scolded or laughed at.

Large black velvet hats are apt to be trimmed with jet.
There are many draped crowns among the autumn hats.

Summed UP.

One of the shortest summings up on record is believed to be that delivered by the late Commissioner Kerr at the Old Bailey in a case where a man was charged with being in the unlawful possession of a gold watch.
The appearance of the prisoner certainly did not correspond with the legitimate possession of such costly ornaments, but he asserted his innocence of the charge, and declared that he had found the watch and chain on the pavement.
The judge looked at the man in the dock and then at the men in the box. "Gentlemen of the Jury," he said, "I have walked over the pavements of London during the last forty years, and I've never found a gold watch and chain there yet. Consider your verdict!"
Painted leather hats are one of the millinery novelties.
Soft-toned materials are used in the chic tailored suits.

War News.

Messages Received Previous to 9 A. M.

BRITISH ATTACK.

LONDON, Sept. 26. The British made an attack to-day on a wide front in the Ypres region. Good progress is reported by the war office.

BRITISH ADVANCE.

LONDON, Sept. 26. Along the northern half of the battle line to the east of Ypres, where Haig resumed the offensive this morning, the British have advanced at numerous places for a distance of from 1,000 to 1,200 yards. An early report, which was somewhat vague, indicated that the British infantry were fighting along a line only a few hundred yards of Zonnebeke. The Germans are resisting desperately, and along a front of some thousands of yards astride the Ypres-Menin road a terrific struggle is proceeding.

GERMANY AGREES TO EVACUATE BELGIUM.

LONDON, Sept. 26. Germany has agreed to evacuate Belgium on certain conditions. It is declared in a German official statement. Germany, it is stipulated, must have the right to develop her economic enterprises freely in Belgium, especially in Antwerp. This statement was made to a supplemental reply to Pope Benedict's peace move. It was in the form of a verbal communication by Foreign Secretary Kuchlmann to the Papal Nuncio at Munich, where in the Foreign Secretary specified the conditions under which Germany was willing to conclude peace on the basis of evacuation of Belgium.

WHY NOT?

LONDON, Sept. 26. Horatio Bottomley, editor of 'John Bull,' attributes to Sir Douglas Haig that last night's raid resulted in so the statement that "We can take Lens whenever we like."

AIR BATTLE.

LONDON, Sept. 26. Although details are lacking, it is reported that a thrilling battle occurred between the German and British airmen a few miles from London, which probably accounts for the fact little damage in the metropolis. The German airplanes, although they crossed the coast at different points, were met and continually harried by a large force of British machines.

Whether any of the raiders have been brought down has not been learned, but according to reports the German fleet, which was coming towards London at a great height and at great speed, was completely broken up, while the anti-aircraft guns boomed constantly, establishing a barrage around the city. As on Monday night diners in hotels and restaurants and audiences in the theatres and at the opera, all of them for the most part were indifferent and unaffected. Many were laughing and joking and others were reading newspapers, magazines and books, which they had provided for themselves, apparently for a siege. The morning papers devote more space to descriptions of Monday night's raid than that of last night, all agreeing that the latter was a failure. The papers containing editorial comments on the raid, repeat the demand for reprisals, and call for warnings of night raids the same as during the day.

RAIDERS DRIVEN OFF.

LONDON, Sept. 26. Lord French, Commander of the Home Defence, reports that the first group of raiders which appeared over London last night was driven back by gunfire and not more than two penetrated the city's defences. Half an hour later the second group of raiders was driven off while approaching London.

ONLY THE POORER CLASSES SUFFERED.

LONDON, Sept. 26. The area bombed in last night's air raid was inhabited chiefly by the poorer classes, but aside from the breaking of windows and slight damage to two or three small frame houses, there was no property loss. The Zeppelin raid early Tuesday morning on the Yorkshire coast and Lincolnshire resulted in some property damage in one populous area on the coast where a number of aerial torpedoes fell, but it is rather remarkable that no casualties of any seriousness were caused. It appears the raider got rid of a large cargo of bombs hastily and at random from a great height. The greater number fell harmlessly in the fields.

Six persons were killed and 16 injured in the southeastern outskirts of London in last night's air raid.

OSTEND BOMBARDED.

LONDON, Sept. 26. The German naval base of Ostend was bombed yesterday by British naval forces. British aerial patrols over the fleet encountered six hostile airplanes and downed two.

URUGUAYAN CONGRESS TO MEET.

MONTEVIDEO, Sept. 26. The Uruguayan Congress has been called to meet in special session on Saturday, to vote on the question of severing relations with Germany. This action was decided upon by Uruguay and the government as the result of steps taken by the Argentine Congress. The Foreign Minister will explain the government's plan for a break with Germany at the opening of the session.

ARTILLERY FIGHTING.

PARIS, Sept. 26. Intense artillery fighting occurred last night on the Verdun front between Beaumont and Bezonvaux, the war office reports.

PRESIDENT OF PARAGUAY RESIGNS.

ASENCION, Paraguay, Sept. 26. Eduardo Scherer, former President of Paraguay, resigned his seat yesterday in the Senate as a protest against the policy of the Government, which is said to lean toward breaking off relations with Germany. It is reported that Luis Riart, Minister of Interior, also would resign because of the attitude of the Government towards Germany.

NOT WILLING TO BREAK RELATIONS.

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 26. Rumors were current last night that President Irigoyen was not willing to break off relations with Germany, despite the action taken during the day by the Chamber of Deputies. It is announced that manifestation would be made before the Congress Palace to-day to demand an immediate rupture in the name of the Argentine Republic.

MCCALL WINS.

BOSTON, Sept. 26. The desire of Massachusetts to continue a war governor in office for a third term, was emphatically shown yesterday when Governor McCall was re-nominated at the primaries by a majority of 58,139 over Grafton D. Cushing, of Boston. Former Lieutenant Governor Fred W. Mansfield, who opposed Governor McCall in the election last year, again was nominated for Governor by the Democrats without opposition.

FROM MADRID TO PARIS.

MADRID, Sept. 26. American engineers are studying plans for a proposed new direct railroad from Madrid to Paris.

VATICAN DENIES REPORTS.

ROME, Sept. 26. The Vatican denies reports that the Pope intends to make proposals for peace negotiations involving mediation by King Alfonso of Spain.

LIFE IMPRISONMENT.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 26. General Soukhomlinoff, former Minister of War, was sentenced to hard labor for life after conviction of a charge of high treason, in Court today. Madame Soukhomlinoff was acquitted. Soukhomlinoff was convicted also on charges of abuse of confidence and fraud.

AMERICA'S FLEET.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26. Within a little more than a year the United States will have an ocean-going merchant fleet of more than 1,600 ships, aggregating 9,200,000 tons, the Shipping Board announced to-day.

PERU.

LIMA, Peru, Sept. 26. The Government has instructed the Peruvian Minister at Berlin to present to the German Government a demand that satisfaction be given within 8 days for the sinking of the Peruvian barque Lorton. If the demand is not met, diplomatic relations will be broken off.

SUPPORTS GOVERNMENT.

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica, Sept. 26. A joint session of Congress was held to-day to discuss the severance of diplomatic relations with Germany by the Government last week. The session was attended by 34 of the 43 deputies, only 7 of whom protested against the government's action. The minority attacked Minister of State Lara as pro-ally. The leader of this faction is Fernandez Queil, formerly editor of the Imparcial, a German paper, recently suppressed by the Government.

KILLED IN ACTION.

LONDON, Sept. 26. Brigadier-General F. A. Maxwell, V.C., D.S.O., a member of the late Earl Kitchener's staff, has been killed in action. With the exception of Lieutenant-General Birdwood, says the Express, it is a remarkable fact that all of Kitchener's Indian staff have lost their lives in this war.

FRENCH STEAMER SUNK.

PARIS, Sept. 26. The French steamer Admiral De Kersaint, 5,370 tons, was sunk on Sept. 14th after being attacked by a submarine in Spanish territorial waters. The submarine opened fire from the midst of a fishing boat fleet, the presence of which prevented the ship from using her guns effectively. After a long combat the steamer was sunk just outside territorial waters. The captain was taken prisoner on the submarine. Ten of the crew were killed or have died of injuries.

"THE FERMENT OF REVOLUTION."

LONDON, Sept. 26. Under the heading "The Ferment of Revolution," the "Times" gives prominence to the first of a series of articles by a well-informed correspondent, who has made a careful study of revolutionary propaganda current among certain classes in this country. The writer of the articles shows that the movement runs counter to British Trade Unionism, but that it is sufficiently serious to demand public attention. He writes: "There exists at the present moment a revolutionary movement in this country which has gathered considerable momentum. It has passed the stage of mere talk and has realized itself into formidable action. There has been no attack on the throne, no rioting in the streets, no insurrection of visible property, but changes have already come about which are thwarting the efforts of the Government to continue the war with efficiency, and if these changes go further they may bring the country into confusion."

MONARCHIST PLOT A HOAX?

PETROGRAD, Sept. 26. A judicial investigation has shown that the famous monarchist plot early in September in which Madame Hitrove figured, and in connection with which several Grand Dukes were arrested, was a hoax. It appears that two volunteer soldiers and two civilians exploiting the monarchist tendencies of a part of the population for their own personal benefit, issued a proclamation bearing an imposing seal in which the restoration of the monarchy was demanded. One such document was found in the house of Madame Hitrove, with the proclamation swindlers' widely distributed list of false subscribers purporting to show that three million rubles had been collected, largely from among the Grand Dukes. As a matter of fact it develops, the swindlers collected 1,500 rubles with which they proceeded to have an orgy in Vitebsk on the Dvina.

ABSENCE OF GERMAN OFFICERS.

LONDON, Sept. 26. Perry Robinson, the "Times" correspondent, reports that German prisoners are extremely bitter about the total absence of German officers on their front. The prisoners say that officers regularly report when an attack is expected.

DIED AT PLYMOUTH.

LONDON, Sept. 26. Wm. Harry Edgecombe, Fourth Earl of Mount Edgecombe, Lord Lieutenant and Vice-Admiral of Cornwall, died yesterday at Plymouth.

CAPT. LAW MISSING.

LONDON, Sept. 26. Andrew Bonar Law has been informed that his eldest son, Capt. J. K. Law, is missing. His second son, Lt. J. K. Law, has been a prisoner of the Turks since last April, and the third Anthony, is a private.

Illustrated Lecture.

The attention of the public is drawn to the lecture to be given this evening by the Rev. W. H. Pike, dealing with his labours for the past six years, amongst the foreigners in Alberta. The lecture will be illustrated by one hundred slides, which have been prepared by the lecturer, at considerable expense, and will, no doubt, assist in portraying more clearly the conditions amongst which our young missionaries are labouring while endeavouring to bring the Gospel to those who are finding a home in Christian Canada. Considerable success has attended the lectures already given in Wesley and Cochrane Street Churches, and we would urge all who have not attended either of these to be present this evening. We pay honor, and welcome to the strains of martial music and banners our returned heroes from the battle field of the Empire and rightly so, can we not give equal honor and extend as heartily a welcome to those who have returned from the far-flung battle line where the Christian Church is waging a continual war against ignorance, superstition and sin. We understand that a portion of the proceeds will be devoted to the W.P.A. Christmas Fund while the balance will be used to assist in providing some necessities, such as folding organ, or such like, to strengthen the labours of the missionaries. Lecture in George St. School Room at 8 o'clock to-night.—Com.

Patriotic Fund.

For the benefit of the W. P. A. Red Cross Fund a dance is being held to-night in the C. C. C. Hall. The band of the Corps has an excellent programme of music prepared. The patriotic object of the affair ought to suffice for a large attendance.

Band of "Our" Regiment

HEARD AT HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE, LONDON.

The following telegram was received by His Excellency the Governor last evening from Major Timewell, of the Pay and Record Office, London:—"Matinee at His Majesty's Theatre yesterday, attended by H. R. H. The Duke of Connaught, was a great success. "The Band of the Newfoundland Regiment was very popular and made a good impression. "Eulogistic and extensive references are made in the leading daily papers. TIMEWELL."

CHILD GOES TO HOSPITAL.—A seven-year-old child reached the city last night to enter the General Hospital for medical treatment and was looked after by Inspector Lawlor, of the Health Department.

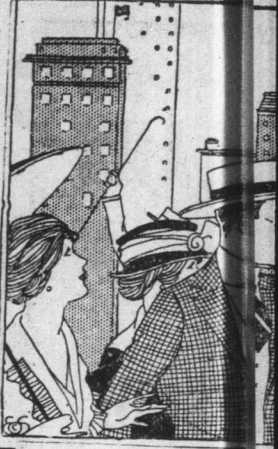

It costs less to buy where CLEANLINESS and SANITATION is the first consideration. Try ELLIS' SAUSAGES, they have made a name already.

ANOTHER ADVANCE IN GAS.—People having gas in their homes have been notified by the Gas Company that owing to the big advance in the cost of coal, gas oil and other supplies necessary for the production of gas, they are compelled to advance the rates to $1.50 per thousand feet, for power and heating, to come into effect on October 1st.

The Women's Patriotic Association will be greatly obliged if any of its members who have strong, serviceable chairs to spare will be good enough to lend them for use in the new work-rooms at "Sutherland Place", King's Bridge Road. About 200 chairs are needed at once. A. N. GOSLING, Hon. Sec. W.P.A.—sep24, 21, m, th
