CHAPTER V.
A WOMAN'S WILL.

Certainly not the squire, much less Mrs. Lucas and the servants, who petted, caressed, and spoiled her to her young, willful heart's content—scarcely spoiled her, though, for beneath all the obstinacy, willfulness, and high spirits there beat a true, womanly heart that only required the slightest kindness and show of love to pour out its wealth of affection.

Mrs. Lucas had a sad time of it with young puss, but she loved her with all her matronly heart, and wiped away the tears she often shed for "Poor Master Hugh" when Grace came bounding down the stairs or rushing into the housekeeper's room.

This same bounding and rushing had been the cause of many scenes between her uncle and herself. The squire was not accustomed to being startled out of his life by a sudden entry or exit, and it made his old heart leap into his mouth to hear her jump eight of the wide stairs and alight at the bottom with a crash. Of course, he complained rather crossly, but he met with ready response.

"Grace, my girl," he had expostulated, with a frown, as on the second morning she had jumped up from the breakfast-table, upsetting the urn and scalding the cat, to see something from the windows, "Grace, my girl, you must not leap about like that. Look here, you've played the deuce with the breakfast things."

"Oh, so I have! There's a mess. What'll Mrs. Lucas say, unky?" and she burst into a merry peal of laughter and stood regarding the wrathful cat and overturned urn with intense enjoyment.

This was rather calculated to make the squire angry; but he kept his wrath down as he never had done with Hugh, and, trying a different tack, said:

"The Bond of Sympathy Between One Woman and Another."

If you are discouraged with your condition, weak, tired, subject to headaches, backache, bearing-down sensations, weakness of bladder, constipation, hot flushes, melancholy, tendency to cry over trifles, nervousness and loss of interest in things generally, I want to help you to better things.

My own was probably as deplorable a case as could be found, yet it ent and to-day I am a well woman quickly yielded to "Orange Lily" treatment. "Orange Lily" is a simple, natural, common-sense remedy that you apply yourself. To go to drinking harmful drugs for troubles such as ours, is like trying to cure a sprain with pills. The only right and effective treatment is a strictly local application, like "Orange Lily."

Because I am sure in advance of the wonderful results you will have, I want to send you ten days' treatment, FREE. Will you write me to-day, NOW, and let me help you? Enclose three stamps. Address MRS. LYDIA W. LADD, Windsor, Ont. Sold by leading Druggists everywhere.

lady darted off and stood at the other end of the table with a very unlady-like but not altogether unbecoming smile of daring.

Mrs. Lucas, who was not so young as she had been, toddled after her, Grace, with the speed of a young deer, just changed sides.

The housekeeper, panting, kept up the pursuit, never being anywhere near her young charge, who had forgotten, in the enjoyment of the chase, the primary cause of it, and was in her glory in dodging the old lady round the table.

It was too comical for the squire, who burst into a laugh, and of course lost the battle, for Grace made a rush at him, and, clinging to his neck, declared nothing should tear her away.

"Well," said the squire, utterly routed. "Let the young hussy stay, ma'am."

This will serve as a specimen of the battles that were fought daily between the squire and his adopted niece.

After she had been there a month the squire, who was getting more fond of her than he would have owned, began to think of sending to London for some tutors for her, Grace being, as he once intimated, as innocent and uneducated as a child.

Besides, now that the squire had given up all hope of Hugh's return, he had begun to look upon this wild tomboy of a girl as the heiress to the Dale, and his pride made him anxious that she should be made fit for the honor; added to which, as Mrs. Lucas and he had managed to keep her within the Dale grounds, the country neighbors were beginning to express themselves curious to see the girl who had supplanted Hugh, and the squire did not choose that my Lady Hastings and Sir Charles Bowden should see the heiress to the Dale in her present rough and uncultivated state.

He had not given so much concern to his son's education; but then, in those days, a man who could boast of "book learning" was thought to be rather at a disadvantage than otherwise, while the women were expected to play a little, sing a little, and know a little of most things. Grace could neither sing nor play, and knew nothing. So a couple of tutors came down to teach her—at least that was their avowed intention. Miss Grace had other ideas.

"Throw learning to the dogs; she'd none of it!"

The two pedagogues trotted to the squire with piteous look and accent. They could do nothing with her.

The squire, as usual, began by being wrathful.

"Ay, my men, you don't know how to manage her!" and he stamped off to the room which had been set apart as a school-room.

Here they found her sitting on a stool, looking defiant but beautiful, her rich hair falling in a grand, darkly-colored mass, her dark eyebrows knit as tightly and obstinately as the squire's.

"Now, madam"—his usual form of address on these occasions—"what's this I hear? Won't you learn yer books?"

"No, I won't," said Grace; "I hate 'em!" and she threw a "Guy's Catechism of Useful Knowledge" into the fire-place, the unfortunate tutor meekly picked it up.

"D'ye tell me you won't do your lessons?" repeated the squire.

Grace nodded.

"Hem!" said the squire. "Very well, my fine madam. Mr. Tompkins, don't trouble with her again."

This was a marvelous let-off, Grace thought; but in the afternoon she read the riddle.

Two days before she had seen a cream-colored pony rearing about the road in front of the Dale. At once she coveted it, and worried the squire to get it for her.

The spirited little animal belonged to a tenant, and the squire, knowing that he could buy it, though he also knew he should have to pay a fancy price, promised her she should have it.

This afternoon Grace said: "Uncle Harry, you said you would buy me that pony—have you got him yet? I do so want him!"

"Do you?" said the squire, nodding his head. "I wish you may get him, my girl."

"Why, uncle," cried Grace, "you promised! Oh, you won't break your word!"

"You want the pony, do you?" asked the squire. The girl's flashing eyes answered him enough. "Well, you see," said the squire, "we can't have everything we want. Now, I wanted you to learn your books, and you promised like a good girl, but—"

HOW A YOUNG GIRL SUFFERED

And Was Restored to Health By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Told By Her Mother.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—"I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound enough for what it has done for my daughter. She was 15 years of age, very sickly and pale and she had to stay home from school most of the time. She suffered agonies from backache and dizziness and was without appetite. For three months she was under the doctor's care and got no better, always complaining about her back and side aching so I didn't know what to do. I read in the paper about your wonderful medicine so I made up my mind to try it. She has taken five bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and doesn't complain any more with her back and side aching. She has gained in weight and feels much better. I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all mothers and daughters."—Mrs. M. FINOON, 516 Marcy Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Oh," interrupted Grace, stamping her feet, "but I hate 'em! I didn't think they were so nasty."

"And I didn't think the pony 'ud cost so much money, my lass," retorted the squire.

Grace saw that she was beaten, but would not cry "Enough!" yet, and retired to the corner of the room to sit and ponder.

She held out till bed-time, then, when Mrs. Lucas appeared with the candles, she went to kiss her uncle, and whispered, rather reluctantly, though:

"Uncle, I'll learn my lessons. Do, do buy me the pony."

She kept her word, too, and for one week harassed herself almost to death over grammar, arithmetic, and the "polite languages," but they could do nothing much with her.

"I hate French and arithmetic—oh, the whole lot of 'em," she said to her uncle, nodding her head decisively, "and I won't learn 'em!"

But she read eagerly all the old books of travel she could get hold of and anything relating to adventures or the chase.

There was an old book, "The Wild Sports of the Savage World," that she knew almost by heart, and from which she would repeat passages to the squire—who bore them with a wonderful patience—with eyes all ablaze and lips set apart with the fire that filled her soul.

Her music tutor thought he would be rather more fortunate than the other; but, alas, after a few days' trial, the squire decided to send the tutors back to London and take Miss Grace in the rough as she was.

Had Squire Darrell, of Dale, displayed half the patience with poor Hugh that he had practiced with the fiery, willful girl, there would have been a lighter heart in his breast and no such name as "Laurence Harman" on the roll-book of the "Mary Ann."

The squire had had a lesson and it had done him good.

Two months having elapsed since Grace's arrival, the squire determined one fine morning to take her round on a visit of introduction.

British Budget Goes Through

Sugar Prices Expected to Soar -- Maori Tribes Entertain Prince of Wales--San Remo Conference Ends With Differences Settled--Mexico Has Another Military Revolt--Sinn Feiners Establish Trial Courts.

CHAMBERLAIN BUDGET CARRIED.
LONDON, April 29. Austen Chamberlain has carried the whole of his budget proposals. Motions for the rejection of an increase in excess profits duty and the Corporation tax were defeated in the House of Commons last night by a vote of 287 to 75.

SUGAR TO SOAR.
OTTAWA, April 29. There is every prospect of an early and considerable increase in the price of sugar, it was announced to-day by a man closely in touch with the market. The present price, high as it is, is based on the former cost price of the raw material in Cuba.

A PICTURESQUE RECEPTION.
ROTORUA, N.Z., April 29. The picturesque celebration arranged by the Maori tribesmen, enemies of the British in the Maori war, in honor of the Prince of Wales, on the shores of Rotorua Lake, to-day, furnished one of the striking features of the Prince's tour. A thousand native warriors, clad only in loin clothes and armed with spears, performed fierce war dances, while a thousand graceful Maori maidens, in brilliant Maori costumes, did their languorous dances to the accompaniment of soft, native music. The strike of locomotive engineers and firemen continues, and the Prince with his party has arranged to return to Auckland to-night instead of continuing to Wellington by motor.

A CURIOUS SITUATION.
DUBLIN, April 29. It is stated that six persons, arrested early on Sunday morning, on Mill Street, Cork, on suspicion of being implicated in the holdup of bank officials last November when eighteen thousand pounds sterling was stolen, were tried by a Sinn Fein court and found guilty. Following the trial, representatives of the Republican army on Tuesday visited the Munster and Leinster Bank at Cork and also the National Bank, and offered to hand over the prisoners and furnish evidence of their guilt under certain conditions. The bank officials, it is said, refused these conditions or to deal with the situation except through constituted authorities.

GONZALES TROOPS REVOLT.
JUAREZ, April 29. Troops of Salma Cruse, commanded by General Gonzales, have revolted and taken possession of the port, one of the most important on the Isthmus according to a report received here last night.

POLES, BUT NOT PATRIOTS.
WARSAW, April 29. A state of seige has been declared in Posen and that region, as a result of fighting between the police and strikers. An unconfirmed report says that a number of persons have been killed or wounded. The despatch says that crowds cheered Germany, and that German flags were flown.

THE GERMAN PLAN FAILED.
BRESLAU, April 29. The German authorities announced the discovery of an alleged Polish plan for the military occupation of upper Silesia and German territory to the north and east of that district.

HUNGER STRIKES FOR WORMWOOD SCRUBS.
BELFAST, April 29. Sixty hunger strikers were transferred last night from Belfast jail to destroyers for conveyance to England. It is believed they will be lodged in Wormwood Scrubs prison.

MOTOR ENGINE TRAGEDY.
PRINCE RUPERT, B.C., April 29. With a steel spike, which he had used in starting the gas engine in his boat, driven through his head, the body of Charles S. Hess, fisherman, was found to-day on board his boat. It is believed that the engine back-fired when Hess attempted to start her.

JAPANESE OCCUPY SAGHALION.
TOKIO, April 29. A Japanese force, on its way to the relief of the Nikolsevsk district in Eastern Siberia, occupied the northern section of Saghalien Island (Russian territory) unopposed, it was announced in a War Office communication to-day.

HEAD-ON COLLISION.
SANBORN, Minn., April 29. Five persons were killed and twelve injured when passenger trains Nos. 516 and 517 on the Chicago and Northwestern railway met in a head-on collision near here early to-day. The accident was said to have been caused by misinterpretation of orders. Four cars were wrecked and both engines.

THREE CENT PAPERS FOR PARIS.
PARIS, April 25. Newspaper proprietors of this city have decided unanimously to advance the price of dailies from ten to fifteen centimes, effective May 1st.

SAN REMO CONFERENCE SATISFACTORY.
LONDON, April 29. Premier Lloyd George, speaking in the House of Commons to-day, on the subject of the recent Allied conference at San Remo, said that before the conference there had been some misunderstandings, serious enough in themselves, but made grave by the deliberate fomenting on the part of very reckless persons. "But," continued the Premier, "I am very glad to say that the sky is once more clear. So far as I can see everyone is gratified and satisfied at what happened at San Remo." The Premier declared that the conference had been the most remarkable one in every respect held since the armistice. There never had been such a conference as regarded the satisfaction, with agreement by all the parties concerned, or the happiness, which it has been able to bring about. The conference, declared the Premier, dispelled all suspicions that the Treaty of Versailles was not to be enforced. There had been no difference of opinion between the Allies as to enforcement of the treaty. A misunderstanding arose, he declared, over questions as to who should put down the disturbance in Ruhr, which threatened the peace not only of Germany, but of Europe. The French thought it ought to be suppressed by the Allies, the Premier asserted, but all others believed it should be left to the Germans. This difference had been settled, Mr. Lloyd George said, and the Germans informed that at the moment German troops in Ruhr were reduced to the proportion fixed by the Allies last August, the French troops would be withdrawn from Frankfurt and Darmstadt. The misunderstanding of France concerning Great Britain's intentions regarding the revision of the Treaty had been removed. He claimed that he had made it clear that Great Britain did not desire a revision of the Treaty which must be made the basis of the policy of the Allies and that Great Britain would act with France and other Allies in its enforcement. Great Britain had also made it clear that she would not give sanction to any policy of annexation by France in Germany. It was impossible, he declared, to have another Alsace Lorraine. Such a policy had been advocated by some powerful personages and journalists in France. I need hardly assure the House, Lloyd George said, that Premier Millerand and his associates readily and sincerely gave the assurance that the vast majority of the people of France were just as much opposed to a policy of that kind as the people of Great Britain. I attach enormous importance to that. Another misunderstanding that had been removed was that on the part of the French, who, no doubt, thought that Great Britain did not mean to enforce the Treaty with regard to reparation and disarmament. There was no difference of opinion on disarmament, Lloyd George said, but when it came to ordering disarmament, there was no one in Germany who seemed to have the power to enforce the decree, and that was one of the greatest difficulties the Allies had to face.

Strange Freaks and Feats of Dancers.
Dances have been held in many strange places, but seldom under more uncanny and weird conditions than that in celebration of the opening of a new town morgue, in Idaho, some time ago.

Coffins were arranged to form seats and tables for purposes of refreshment. A tempting display of cold meats was arranged on the slabs intended for more gruesome purposes; coffin-plates were utilised for crockery, and coffee was drunk from tins designed to contain embalming fluid.

Dancing was kept up in this strange environment until the early hours of the morning; and the dancers, numbering thirty couples, vowed they had never enjoyed themselves so much.

To a recent entertainment provided by a leader of American society the guests travelled in auto-hearers, and the reception-room were filled with spectral beings shrouded from head to foot in white. Tiny toy skeletons served as favours; prominent among other weird decorations were gleaming skulls, from whose orbits green electric lights glowed; while an Eastern palmist foretold the future of the guests under a canopy of cross-bones.

Fairy Scenes in a Salt Mine.
The stroke of midnight was the signal for a wild ghost-dance to the accompaniment of clanking chains; and then, presto! in a moment the garments of death were cast off; the women appeared in all the splendour of gay gowns and flashing gems, and the men in evening clothes.

The salt-mine at Wieliczka has been the scene of some of the most charming dances ever held. A thousand feet below the surface of the earth stands miles of galleries and vaulted chambers supported by massive pillars, all studded with the "diamonds of the rock salt" and dazzling in their brilliancy and beauty.

In these chambers, with the crystal walls and pillars flashing back hundreds of lights in all the colours of the rainbow, the scene is of almost unnatural beauty; and when to this fairy scene is added the kaleidoscope of hundreds of figures in many-hued costumes moving in the mazes of the mine, it is easy to imagine that no more dazzling spectacle ever greeted the eyes of man.

Bride Who Had 117 Partners.
Less beautiful, but distinctly novel, was a dance given some time ago by the proprietors of a coal-mine near St. Etienne. The guests were taken down two thousand feet into the bowels of the earth, and the dance was held in a large chamber, the grim walls of which were festooned with coloured lights, which transformed it into a veritable hall of the fairies.

Among remarkable dances is one given to celebrate a Polish wedding. Dancing commenced on Saturday evening, and continued, without intermission, for thirty-six hours, until Monday morning.

In accordance with Polish etiquette, the bride was expected to dance with every male guest present, and as the men numbered one hundred and seventeen, and the bride danced with each of them, pausing only for the barest refreshments, her feat was of almost superhuman endurance. During the thirty-six hours, this energetic young lady covered a distance of no less than forty miles, and at the end of her record dance declared she was "quite ready to begin again."

Bagdad's Change of Dress.

The war has wrought a wonderful change in the people of Bagdad, not the least of which is their change of dress, according to the Times of India, which says: "In Bagdad to-day the young bloods are showing a desire to adopt European dress. We cannot imagine why anyone should want to discard the picturesque Arab headress in exchange for a hillycock hat, but there is no accounting for taste. Relief at getting rid of Turkish misrule had presumably to be celebrated in some way or other, and the acquisition of a new suit of clothes, even if they are ready-made reach-me-downs, is undoubtedly an event which would appeal to the nut of Bagdad who, like nuts all over the world, wants to be unlike his elders."

AT THE BALSAM.—The following are guests at Balsam Place:—Mrs. S. E. Pinsent, Clarke's Beach; Mrs. T. LeDrew, Cupids; A. LeGrow, Broad Cove; G. Boyle, Carbonear; J. P. Haliburton, Bonne Bay; Miss M. Good-year, Ottawa; Miss L. Thompson, Hr. Grace; L. Redmond, New York; Miss M. Jeffrey, Whitbourne.

How Did It Plan Out?

Rev. F. W. Hollinrake, pastor of Barton St. Methodist church, Marmilton, Ontario, who recently announced that he had decided to sever his connection with the Methodist body, has accepted the pastorate of Ebenezer Tabernacle in the same city, on the understanding that he is not to receive any fixed salary, but that collection plates will be at the doors of the church to receive any individual toward his salary. Ebenezer church is independent of any other church organization.

Fads and Fashions.

Plain and striped materials used together are favored. Long white scarfs are in great favor for sports uses. Attractive coat suits are trimmed with elaborate stitching. Hand-made blouses have long collars and panel fronts. Sleeves and necks are being finished with treated frills. Dancing tracks for young girls show many ribbon sashes. Instead of pure white, linen color is used for collars and cuffs. Lots of dresses are made with full tunics in contrasting colors. Long necklaces of heavy, brilliant beads are worn with dark costumes. Frocks of tissue gingham have biblike collars of sheer organdie.

J. C. Gould, M.P., who is the head of one of England's greatest shipping corporations, began commercial life as an office boy in Cardiff, which he now represents in Parliament. He was an ordinary seaman in the South African trade. He learned the insurance business in America. The war interested him in shipping. He has made 1,000,000 pounds sterling in four years.

Big Handicap for Shamrock IV.

New York, April 21.—The Shamrock IV. may have to give six minutes time allowance to the American defender in the coming America's Cup races. This is only an estimate, but it is one that was hazarded yesterday by Col. Duncan F. D. Neill, who will act as Sir Thomas Lipton's personal representative in the cup matters and who arrived from England yesterday on the steamship Adriatic to remain until after the contests in July.

Charles E. Nicholson, Shamrock's designer and builder, admitted when he was in this country last winter that Shamrock would have to give either the Resolute or Vanitie a handicap of several minutes over the thirty mile course, and expressed confidence she would be able to do it. It is known he designed her at the top of the measurement class for 75 feet waterline boats, figuring her to run away from the American yachts, which measure well below the top.

Resolute is almost at the bottom of the class, and the Vanitie is expected to rate much lower, with the changes being made in her, than she did in the trial races in 1914. Their actual measurements have been kept secret, as have the Shamrock's and comparative computation can only be based on what is known of the hull lines and spar lengths of all three, but undoubtedly the handicap in the coming contest will be the largest in any cup races ever held, and instead of the defender giving time, as was the case in the last races, seventeen years ago, the shoe will be on the other foot.

The Genesta, Galatea and Thistle, the challengers in the late 80's, received a few seconds' allowance each from the Puritan, Mayflower and Volunteer. The Vigilant also had to give more than a minute and a half to Lord Dunraven's first cup hunter, the Valkyrie II. Then Capt. Nat Herreshoff trimmed the Defender down so that the Valkyrie III. had to allow her 28 seconds.

When Sir Thomas sent his first Shamrock here the Columbia had to give her seconds in each of the first two races. In the first the Columbia won by 10 minutes and 8 seconds over the allowance she was required to give. In the second she was far ahead when Shamrock II's topmast was carried away and the latter withdrew. In the three days intervening before the next and deciding race, Herreshoff cut down the Columbia measurement so that the Shamrock II. had to give her 6 seconds.

Government Ownership.

London Daily Telegraph.—A moment's consideration proves that the nationalization of shipping must be fraught with dangers political as well as economic, apart from the reaction of the inexperienced administration of shipping on the industrial life of this country. What are the characteristics of Government control as exemplified by a thousand and one examples during the war? "It is," as Mr. Noble has said, "extravagant and wasteful. It destroys all initiative. It stereotypes mediocrity. It is self-satisfied. It scorns advice. The idea of co-ordination is foreign to its nature." As an instance of Government methods, he quoted the case of a ship in St. Katherine's Docks, which was loaded and unloaded nine times as a result of the conflicting orders of five different Government Departments. The agitation for the nationalization of industry, whether mines or shipping—and they are intimately related—does not concern only particular classes of employers, investors or workers; it cuts at the very foundations of our national prosperity.

Military Man Commits Suicide.

Captain Wilfred Pippy Blew His Brains Out at Noon To-Day-- Found in His Room, Crosbie Hotel, With Heavy Colt Revolver Beside Him.

passed through his head and entered the wall of the room. The body was later removed to Carnell's Mortuary Rooms.

Mr. Pippy is a returned soldier of four years' service, 38 years of age and married, with three children. He is a brother of Mr. G. Vater Pippy. He held the commission of Captain in the Royal Nfld. Regiment. His wife and children were staying with his mother-in-law.

He was alright up to one o'clock this morning, having at that hour terminated a social game of cards. A friend of his, with him up to one o'clock, says that he was quite himself then. He is not known to have been in financial difficulties and his action is therefore not due to that cause. The sympathy of all will go out to the bereaved ones. Besides one brother he leaves a sister, Dr. Olive Pippy, who is practicing at Grand Falls.

The gun at Signal Hill will be fired at ten o'clock Sunday evening to indicate to the public of St. John's when their clocks shall be changed.

DO YOU MAKE NEW FRIENDS?

"I don't make friends as easily as I used to," a woman of 35 or 40 said to me the other day. Now isn't it true that our relationships with people, are the material out of which all happiness and all pleasures except some of those relating directly to physical comfort and physical sensation, are made? Indeed, half our joy in possession of things is based on the effect of this possession on other people. And isn't it further true that love of friendship are the two most beautiful flowers of these relationships? And now if these things be granted (and I cannot see how anyone could deny them) doesn't it seem perfectly plain that the woman who did not make friends as easily as she used to, must have said with a sigh of regret?

Hardening Of The Heart Can Be Avoided. As people grow older they are subject to hardening of the arteries, but the right sort of living will keep at bay this enemy of old age. A hardening of the heart to new impressions is also the natural tendency of old age, and the right sort of mental living will keep this enemy at bay, too. How long since you have made a new friend?

Well, she didn't. She said it with little air of pride. Now what can you make of that? Why should one feel that a grown-up reserve, a lessening of the friendliness and warmth and hopefulness that makes one quick to think that each acquaintance may become a assured friend, is something to be sad about? To say "one" instead of "she" because I think this attitude is typical. And I think it is a most unfortunate attitude and one to be battled against. The man who will keep his mind open and keep on learning the day of his death. And the man who will keep his heart open and keep on making friends to the day of his death.

A Year To Regret. A year passed without adding one friend to one's store, is an incomplete year. One should look back with regret. Most of us are placed by circumstances in contact with new people Fashions and Fads.

Shantung ribbons are favored. Shell pink never falls in favor. Polo coats are chiefly tan colored. Eton jackets persist in their appeal. Loop-fringe trimming is still in vogue. The latest coats show no fastenings. Little sleeves appear on basque gumpes. Nothing is cooler looking than organdies. Blouses appear with tucks and drawwork. Blue serge and foulard together are favored. The tie sash may have long fringed ends. Hats, when large, are very soft and drooping. Soutache is used to trim the Summer suit. White lace tunics are worn over black satin slips. Slim, draped lines are being revived for skirts. There is no end to the approval of pile-fabric coats. Black jet bugles and white pearls appear on black net. Long coat suits are usually trimmed with braid.

PERHAPS.
Seems like I'll never kick again
When days get hot an' overhead
There's not a cloud to herald rain,
If soon the popples blossom red
An' grass an' grain begin to grow
An' Nature takes on milder ways,
I'll think about this winter's snow
An' let the old sun burn and blaze.

Right now I don't believe I'd mind
The burning weather of July,
I think I much prefer that kind
To snow drifts piled up window high;
An' when I walk along the street
An' sighs on every hand are heard
Regarding the terrific heat
I don't believe I'll say a word.

I'm over fed on ice and snow,
Of wintry blasts I've had my fill,
I long to see the winter go,
And nightly pray that soon it will;
And if perchance the summer brings
Us blistering days that sear and burn,
I'll voice in all my murmurings
No wish for winter to return.

It may be I shall grumble then
When I am sweltering with the heat,
Shall imitate my fellowmen,
And say that it's too hot to eat;
Perhaps I shall forget just how
I've suffered all this winter long,
But still the way I feel just now
The sun will never get too strong.

Mainly About People.

Mr. Asquith has adopted a strenuous regime to keep himself fit for his political work. Among other things, he has rationed himself to a small cigar after lunch and one cigar only after dinner. During the Paisley election he never ate anything before his evening meetings, and after a light lunch went every day till 11 a.m. without another meal. Reading is now his chief relaxation, and he habitually reads until one or two o'clock in the morning.

The three successive American ambassadors to Turkey are Oscar Solomon Straus, a native of Georgia, an LL.B. of Columbia and lawyer; Henry Morgenthau, who was born in Mannheim, Germany, and who landed in New York when he was twelve years old, an LL.B. of the College of the City of New York and Columbia; and Abram L. Elkins, a native New Yorker, also a Columbia LL.B. He is now a judge of the New York court of Appeals.

POTATOES.

To-day I bought a peck of spuds, my hungry form to fill; I had to soak my Sunday duds ere I could pay the bill. I paid as much to buy a peck as much as once a bushel brought; and so I wept and cried "By H e c k!" and drank a will-be-waught. I drank a horn of Adam's ale, my spirit to revive; for how can one dig up the kale, and keep his pop alive? They say we run to luxuries, when we a-shopping go; for costly meats, imported cheese, our hard earned bucks we blow. "Eat simple fare," the wise men say, "cut out the rich and fine, and you may save some coin each day, and put the same in brine." The wise men sagely chew their curds and hand us logic pure; but is there simpler fare than spuds, the stand-by of the poor? 'Tis not the farmer makes them dear; the grocer's not to blame; some fat and heartless profiteer is at his beastly game. Somewhere there is a middle-man whose rake-off is a crime; the layer is the also-ran who gets stung every time. Somewhere there is a scamp, somewhere a humpen rope; these crazy times will soon be o'er, and sense will come, I hope.

Fishery Proposals.

Every person in Newfoundland will agree that if Hon. W. F. Coaker succeeds in getting through legislation during the present session of the Legislature, having for its object the betterment of the care and cure of codfish, he will be conferring a boon on the fishermen and merchants, which will cause his name to go down to posterity as the greatest benefactor of the ages. For years without number there has been a wrestle with conditions of the fishery, and serious endeavours were made to induce the production of a really first class make of dry fish. But all these efforts failed of their purpose, because there was no unanimity behind them. Private firms exhorted their dealers to give more attention to the preparation and cure of our staple export. Supercargoes on the Labrador pleaded with planters to turn out a superior make, for shipment to Europe. Agents visited the stages and stores of fishermen and pointed out to them the advantages to be gained by being less careless in their methods of splitting, cleaning, salting, washing, and spreading their voyages. And all this availed nothing because there were no penalties for failure to carry out instructions. The current price ruled, and the long credit system obliged suppliers to be very cautious in insisting that good fish be made, consequently the cull had to be very broad, and fish not by any means merchantable had to be passed as such, if current accounts were to be paid, and so things went on from bad to worse.

Without legislative standardization and an authorised cull, nothing could be done to generally improve and better the conditions under which fish were treated and made. The credit and the current price dominated and governed the whole situation. Undue competition amongst shippers was another factor which militated against improvement, and many and insidious, particularly on Labrador, were the wiles adopted by buyers to secure fish which really belonged to some other trader, in order to complete hurry cargoes. Quality was not always considered the predominant necessity and qualification. Quantity was the ruling feature, and so long as parcels were passable, they were eagerly snapped up by the irregular purchaser. Stealth in buying and speed in loading were the only requirements, and perhaps an extra, in the shape of ten or twenty cents per quintal above the current price was sufficient to cause the diversion of a pile or two from the legitimate supplier. This system of illicit dealing continues perhaps until this day, and nothing but legislation will restrain it. Mr. Coaker's proposals already have gained the support of many men interested in the fisheries and their future improvement and propagation, and there is no doubt but that his announced Bill will receive unqualified approval. Under its provisions there is an incentive to all to make good fish. The man or men who fail to bring their catch up to the standard of cure will be penalised on the price, and the loss will be to themselves alone. The standardization of grades, with a graduated price, will work out to the benefit and advantage of the good fishmakers, and the cull, being in accordance with the provisions of the Bill, will not be conducted in a slipshod manner or be governed by commercial exigencies or favoritism. Another well taken step is that No. 2 fish will not be granted export as No. 1. Therefore protection is assured, and to put it in the language used by the Honorable Minister in his speech at the House of Assembly on Wednesday afternoon, "The difference in price between No. 1 and No. 2 will be made such, that a man making bad fish one year, would never want to do so again." The Telegram has ever been, and will continue to be, an advocate for better methods in the making of codfish, and should the Bill introduced by Mr. Coaker, entitled "An act for the standardization of Codfish," be the only bit of constructive legislation passed by the Government, during the present session of the Legislature, it will be well worth the time spent, as its admission to the statutes will be of incalculable benefit to Newfoundland, providing always, that it is not smothered in legal phraseology and rendered of no effect by exceptions. But Mr. Coaker, we think, may be trusted to look out for and avoid such pitfalls.

Sacred Concert.

United City Choirs Give Magnificent Recital.

Those who were privileged to attend the Grand Sacred Concert, given by the Massed Choirs of the City Churches, in the Roman Catholic Cathedral last night, spent a most wonderful and uplifting two hours. To describe the feeling of rapt admiration which fell upon the vast audience, the nave, aisles, transepts and galleries of the spacious sacred edifice being filled as the first note of the Grand Organ burst forth in Basil Horwood's Sonata, to the final diminuendo of the Hallelujah Chorus, which closed the programme, would need the pen of a Maestro, and the writer feels himself all too inadequate to perform the task allotted of giving anything like a thorough description of an event which has no precedent in St. John's. Some three hundred voices took part in last night's concert, which was well and ably conducted by Professor Hutton, the organists being Messrs. Gordon Christian and F. J. King. His Excellency the Governor and suite, Lady and Miss Harris, His Grace the Archbishop, and the Clergy, and the Clergymen of the other churches, were present, and among the audience were many prominent in State and Commerce, as well as in the professions, all animated by the one desire—to partake of a musical feast, of which they were not denied.

Yesterday the finishing touches to the rebuilding of the organ were given by the addition of a one string stop to the swell, replacing a mixture stop, this change giving the instrument a greater variety of tone, and Mr. W. J. Vey, who completed the work, is to be congratulated on his successful achievement. The programme as published was gone through, with but one exception, the illness of Mrs. Christian during the week, though present with the Choir, preventing the rendition of the Quartette "The Lord is My Shepherd," in which Mrs. Christian, Miss Christian, Messrs. Trapnell and Mews were taking part. A musical critic suggests that the items deserving special mention were: No. 6, "Babylon," solo by Miss Langmead; No. 7, "The Marvelous Work," solo by Mrs. F. J. King; No. 9, "Fac ut Portem" (Stabat Mater), solo by Miss Brown; No. 12, "Worthy is the Lamb," Chorus, from the Messiah (Handel); No. 18, "Bow Down Thine Ear," solo by Mr. Carl Trapnell, and the thrilling and magnificent triumph of the Hallelujah Chorus, during the singing of which the audience stood. As a matter of fact, from the point of view of the average student of music, there was little to choose between any of the items, but critics have to be allowed a little more latitude in their discrimination. Taken as a whole the performance was wonderful and considering the short time engaged in practice, worthy the highest appreciation, which it received from no less a dignitary than His Grace the Archbishop of St. John's himself in the appended complimentary and congratulatory letter. We understand that, responsive to many requests, the concert will be repeated in the near future, notice to be later given of the exact date.

ARCHBISHOP ROCHE EXTENDS CONGRATULATIONS AND GRATITUDE TO CITY CHOIRS—GENERAL OFFER FOR P. M. D. FUND.

(Copy.)
The Palace,
St. John's, Nfld.,
April 29, 1920.

My Dear Mr. Hutton:

I hope you will permit me to congratulate you and your splendid united Choirs on the success of the Sacred Concert which was so largely attended this evening. It was a treat in sacred music such as has never before been enjoyed by the music-loving public of St. John's. I am sure the large audience present fully appreciated the unique opportunity afforded them of hearing the united Choirs of the City Churches. On my own behalf, as well as on behalf of the Cathedral congregation, I would ask you to be good enough to convey our very sincere gratitude to the members of the various Choirs for so generously placing their musical talent at our disposal. Personally, I am more deeply touched than I can express in words by the broad, liberal, Christian spirit of our fellow-citizens of other Creeds which made it possible to unite all the city Choirs in one grand Feast of Sacred Song. Long may this spirit reign amongst us!

With reference to the request made in the press a few days ago that the concert be repeated for a worthy charitable object—the Permanent Marine Disasters Fund—I wish to say that I am most happy to allow the Cathedral to be used for that purpose, and, if the Choirs decide on giving a second Recital, I hope it will be as largely patronized as was the concert this evening.

Sincerely yours,
(Sgd.) E. P. ROCHE,
Archbishop of St. John's.

McMurdo's Store News.

FRIDAY, April 30, 20.

People with irritable skin have found a Menthol and Camphor Cream of service, and we are occasionally asked to recommend something different and more stimulating than the ordinary after shave. In such cases we suggest McMurdo's Camphor and Menthol Cream, and those who use it almost invariably find it the very thing they need for the purpose. In winter time it is useful as an application to chilblains, relieving the itching, burning and general irritation; while in summer time it makes an admirable application to insect bites and stings. Western Notes.

The West Coast is very appreciative of the regular and constant mail service with which it is being favored since the new Government came into power, and the people are of opinion that retrogression, not progression, is the order of the day.

Schooner Goldwin Roy, owned by William McLean, of Searston, Grand River, which recently brought in a full load of seals (1250) from the Gulf, has left for North Sydney where the fat will be disposed of at prices fully equal to those paid in St. John's for the steamer catches, is not in excess of the sum per quintal. It will therefore be seen that Mr. Coaker is not altogether the "booster" he thinks he is.

Desirous of emulating the success of the Goldwin Roy, Capt. George Genge, outfitted schooner Cedella and with an experienced crew, sailed from Channel on April 5th to engage in the seal hunt. No word however, has been heard from the vessel since leaving, but the wish is generally expressed that a paying trip will be the outcome of the voyage.

The coasting fleet belonging to Channel and Port aux Basques have begun to get ready for the season's cruising, and a great stir is observable along the waterfront. One vessel, "Minnie D." Capt. Lawrence has already left for Sydney to load coal, of which there is a great scarcity in the places named at present. Capt. T. Keeping in a new schooner has arrived at Port aux Basques from Burnt with salt cargo, which is being discharged at the premises of E. Pike, Limited. After unloading this vessel will take on a cargo of green fish for Bunsport, Maine, purchased by T. M. Nicholson.

So far there has not yet been any election of a new Road Board, under the Local Affairs Act, for Channel, and people are wondering if the old Board, elected in 1917, have been permanently gazetted, and have authority to go on for ever.

LATHROP ENGINES
Built for the Fisherman.

A. H. Murray & Co., Ltd.
april 30, eod St. John's.

House of Assembly.
(Yesterday.)
House opened at 3.30 p.m.
Petitions were presented by Lieut. E-mail for telephone connection for Cape La Hune and Petites, for a fog alarm at Burgeo, and a gas buoy at the western entrance of that harbor; from Mr. Targett for a sum of money to repair the public wharf at New Perlican; and by Mr. Cheeseman for telephone connection for Point au Gaul.

The answers to questions by Mr. Sullivan were tabled by Mr. Squires, and appear in another column.

Mr. Sullivan stated that on the other side conduct sheets were so strictly guarded that even on appeal to the War Office they were not allowed to be used as evidence in court in a divorce case. They could only have been obtained here through someone connected with the Militia Dept., and he would go further into the matter and the men who had friends in the Regiment would find out how the leakage occurred. The records were private documents and should not have been used for political purposes.

Sir M. P. Cashin wished to enquire into the dismissal of John Brazil, of Renewa, who had given 9 years' service on the Fiona, Baleine and Cabot. He had been promptly dismissed on return of the present Government, though there was no charge against him during the previous administration. On the contrary he had an excellent record for special service in referring to the matter could be prosecuted for contempt of court.

Mr. Higgins thought such matters as referred to should be left out of discussion, as the Court is at present judging them, and the subject of a man taking his seat is being enquired into.

Mr. Coaker said a member is responsible only to the House for statements made there.

Mr. Higgins.—That is not the point I make. Is it the intention of the House to discuss the right of a member to take his seat while the subject of an enquiry? We have not the method here as in England of a Committee of Enquiry, but if we are going to have the examination here, let us have it.

Mr. Hibbs.—Stay in your seat. I won't till the Speaker says so, replied Mr. Higgins.

Mr. Hibbs.—Any member who has transgressed the law will get what is coming to him.

Mr. Higgins.—We might as well see where we are. Has a member the right to take his seat in the House when duly elected though under enquiry?

Mr. Warren.—As the Minister of Fisheries stated, any statements by a member within the rules of debate, and while on sub-judice matters are alright, but a paper dealing with such a case does so on its own responsibility. As to the taking of a seat, resolutions have been passed on the very subject, and unless Mr. Hibbs is out of order, his comment is alright.

Mr. Higgins.—We will have a chance later to discuss the whole matter and tell some stories.

Mr. Hibbs.—I don't think I'm wrong when I say men received money for nothing. It has been sworn to in Court. It was done all over the country, and I ask, is it fair? Men who should have the money to spend were ignored. In Fogo district some $17,000 was due us. I found my opponent ignoring the Boards and spending, or authorizing and gave away, about $5,000, and I ask the leader of the Opposition where it went.

Sir M. P. Cashin.—You have a lot to learn.

Mr. Hibbs.—Mr. Halfyard was innocent in the matter and not suspicious.

Sir M. P. Cashin.—He got his share of the money.

Mr. Hibbs.—The same tale can be told of Twillingate and Bonavista. Talk of demoralization. You cannot expect men to be honest when they are jibed by neighbors who got money for nothing. The Local Affairs Act was torn to shreds.

Mr. Higgins.—The Court is considering that question.

Mr. Hibbs.—Where holes that one could drive a horse and cart through left in the Act purposely?

Mr. Higgins.—You are suspicious.

Here the Speaker ordered the cross-firing to be stopped.

Mr. Hibbs continued that the funds were prostituted, and it would have been to the interest of the district if they had been spent properly. He then took up Mr. Moore's references to men whose positions in the House rendered them defenceless. They were not patriotic, could do no good, and were the emanations of a vindictive spirit. He charged Mr. Moore with making a handsome profit by selling a boiler for $1,375 to Mr. Woodford, which was bought for $650, entered free of duty, and a freight charge of $120.

Mr. Moore.—You are altogether wrong. What about the labor, etc., in putting it in.

Mr. Hibbs had also found he had received favors in 1917-18-19, the records showing some 33 entries had been passed for goods imported by him duty free.

Sir M. P. Cashin.—There was more than that. Some $2,600,000 of goods was entered free. You're a scaven-ger, too, evidently. You insinuate. Why don't you bring in all the free entries, not some?

Mr. Hibbs.—Other goods were brought in, with good intentions, for public buildings, etc.

Mr. Moore.—Or for churches.

Mr. Hibbs said he did not wish to attribute dishonest motives, and asked how much patriotic work Mr. Moore had put on for $33,683 in 2 1/2 years, the latter replying some $60,000 had not been paid at all. He then asked as to Hon. W. J. Ellis being paid $251,000, to which Sir M. P. Cashin replied Mr. Ellis was a contractor, and could not put up buildings for charity; adding, be honest in your statements, give a list of work. Mr. Ellis' reputation is too well established to be blemished.

Mr. Hibbs had no intention of doing so. He thought money paid Mr. Jesse Whiteway by the Board of Works Dept. was only an inducement to him to resign his seat in the Upper House to contest Bay de Verde district.

Mr. H. Archibald (Mr. Grace) took up the subject of Sectarianism. He wished to state that no sectarianism had been used in his district, and the statement that he had canvassed "with an Orange Manual in one hand and prayer-beads in the other" was a gross falsehood. He deplored the state of affairs in the country to-day. The General Election had been fought on sectarian lines, and it was a clear fight between Protestants and Catholics. The Protestants had won, and will win in the next General Election. The member for St. George's had said that if sectarianism continued there would be trouble. "What does he mean by that?" asked Mr. Archibald. "What kind of trouble? The Protestants are two to one and if trouble comes it is easy to tell which will win out." The member then touched on fishery matters.

The House adjourned at 6.30 until 3.30 to-day.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS.
Mr. Sullivan.
(1) To inform this House how or in what manner Confidential Documents in the custody of the Militia Department relating to returned soldiers 2583 Michael Doran, 8253 Martin Tracy and 2583 Private Milley, came into the possession of the St. John's Daily Star and were published in that paper on March 12, 1920.
(a) No Confidential Documents in the custody of the Militia Department relating to any returned soldiers came at any time into the possession of the St. John's Daily Star, nor were such published in that paper or in any other newspaper on March 12th or any other date.
(2) And to inform this House if any enquiry has been or will be held into this regrettable breach of confidence on the part of some person in the Department of Militia.
Answer covered by the reply to No. 1.
(3) And if he is aware that the only legitimate use an officer or a soldier may make of documents or information of which he becomes possessed in his official capacity is for the furtherance of the public service in the performance of his duty, and that the publishing of official documents or information or using documents or information or using them for personal controversy, or for any private purpose, without due authority, will be treated as a breach of The Official Secrets Act 1911.
(a) This question is practically a quotation of a part of par. 1860 of the King's Regulations and Orders for the Army, issue of 1912. This paragraph comes under the heading of "Documents and Maps marked Secret, Confidential or for Office Use only." The entire paragraph 1860 reads as follows:—
"Documents and maps classed as 'Secret' or 'Confidential' are not to be referred to in any catalogue or publication which is not itself a document marked 'Secret' or 'Confidential', as the case may be. The only legitimate use an officer or soldier may make of documents or information if which he becomes possessed in his official capacity is for the furtherance of the public service in the performance of his duty. Publishing official documents or information or using them for personal controversy, or for any private purpose without due authority, will be treated as a breach of official trust under the Official Secrets Act, 1911."
(a) In so far as Mr. Sullivan's question No. 3, consists of an exact quotation from Rule 1860 above quoted, it is correct Army Law.
(4) And also to ask him as head of the Militia Department if he is aware that the Company Conduct Sheet of a soldier is to be destroyed on his discharge.
(a) In the case of Imperial soldiers 2 Conduct Sheets are kept for each soldier, a Regimental Conduct Sheet and a Company Conduct Sheet. The Regimental Conduct Sheet is the permanent document, and is compiled from the Company Conduct Sheet. As the compilation proceeds the Company Conduct Sheets are destroyed, this being done at definite periods. The Company Conduct Sheet contains the details of the soldier's conduct, giving the exact dates and particulars of every military offence. The Imperial authorities do not keep a permanent record of all these details; they keep a summary only. Consequently the Company Conduct Sheet, when summarised and its contents transferred to the Regimental Conduct Sheet, is destroyed, the King's Regulations providing that before the Company Conduct Sheets are destroyed, the entries in the Regimental Sheets will be checked and completed. As an illustration—take the case of a soldier who had a record of being drunk on five occasions. The Company Conduct Sheet would give the exact date and particulars of each case of drunkenness, while the Regimental Conduct Sheet would merely indicate as a summary that that particular soldier had been drunk on five occasions within a specific period of time, but would not give the day of the month or the details of the occurrences. My honourable friend will be able to secure full information in all these particulars by reference to the King's Regulations already referred to.
In the case of the Newfoundland Regiment, the considerable trouble and expense of taking each soldier's Company Conduct Sheet and digesting it for the purposes of having a permanent digested record of the soldier's career in the form of a Regimental Conduct Sheet was not adopted, the Company Conduct Sheets being kept, instead of the Department going to the trouble and expense of having the soldier's record gone over in each case and specially summarized for a permanent Regimental record. So that my honourable friend may have an opportunity of further studying the question in which he appears to be interested, I would refer him to the King's Regulations, paragraph 1919, under the head of "Regimental Conduct Sheets," where he will find that the Regimental Conduct Sheets of non-commissioned officers of the rank of Colour-Sergeant and upwards will be kept as Confidential Documents.

when Hon. Dr. E. A. Smith, Minister of Lands and Mines, appeared in the House yesterday afternoon wearing a pair of khaki-colored denim trousers. The Minister's appearance, clad in the modern democratic attire, was the signal for a wild outburst of applause by members on both sides of the House.

There doesn't appear any likelihood of the general adoption of overalls by the members as the session is about over, but the appearance of a Cabinet Minister in overalls may be regarded as a hint by the provincial civil service to don denim suits.

The Human Clock usually Breaks Down instead of Runs Down

"It has long been a favorite idea of mine to compare the human body with my old clock here."
 "Without proper attention the old clock gets run down and stops until I wind it up again and then it ticks away just as heartily and regularly as ever."
 "And so it is with the human body, but the great difference I find is that the human clock usually breaks down instead of runs down because people neglect to take proper care of their health."
 "Through all these years I have managed to keep well and to keep young by using restorative treatment whenever there are indications of the system becoming run down."
 "Fortunately I learned the value some years ago of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and to its use I largely attribute my healthful condition at this age."

 "When I hear people talking about being unable to sleep or of suffering from nervous headaches, indigestion or worn-out feelings I ask them, 'Why do you not use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to increase your nervous energy?'"
 "So many people, as age advances, suffer from a lowering of the vitality, from high blood pressure or hardening of the arteries, but I have found that the use of this restorative treatment, when required keeps my health at the high water mark."

Young-Adams Co.

IN "UNCLE TOM'S CABIN."

The Young-Adams Company gave one of the best presentations of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" ever seen in this city, and at last night's performance they were greeted by a capacity house.

Miss Marjie Adams as Topsy, nearly brought down the house with her many mischievous pranks and escapades. This is a new role for this talented lady and she performs it to perfection. Mr. H. Wilmot Young in the role of Uncle Tom was the genuine kind hearted old negro slave, and his mastery impersonation of this character evoked much praise from the audience. Mr. Perry Norman as Mr. St. Clair was especially good in that role. Miss Marguerite Young played the dainty little Eva, and was more pleasing and acted the part to life. Other members of the cast who ably sustained their parts are—Elisa Harris (Miss Gladys Butler), Geo. Harris (Mr. John J. Gregory), Geo. Shelby (Mr. Geo. Carruth), Haley (Mr. Jack Simmonds), Parks (Mr. Donald Mack), Marie St. Clair (Miss Vivian Mayo). The most impressive part in the whole piece was the Death scene in the last act.

This production will also be given for the matinee to-morrow afternoon which no doubt will be of particular interest to the young folks. On Monday and Tuesday of next week "The Marriage Question" will be staged. This is a beautiful story of springtime and love eternal, and is also a splendidly costumed bill.

Robbers at Large.

During the past couple of weeks a series of robberies have been committed along Water Street, from the Long Bridge to the Court House. The robbers evidently have good knowledge of conditions and so far, the police have not been able to make any arrests. In several instances clues have been left, and at any moment the police may succeed in rounding up the gang.

Personal.

Ex-Pte. W. F. Doran, late of the Canadian Expeditionary Force, has secured a position as time keeper with the St. Lawrence Pulp and Paper Co. at Lomond, Bonne Bay, and leaves to take up his duties there to-day by the prospero.

Mr. Roger O'Neil, brother of Messrs. W. J. O'Neil (Eagan's Bakery), who served at the front and held an important position in London since the war, arrived home on a visit yesterday by the Kyle.

John Keefe, the obliging messenger at the Supreme Court, son of Sergt. Keefe, has entered the employ of the Martin-Royal Stores Hardware store to learn the trade of locksmithing.

Mr. Hutton wishes us to state that he regrets so much that the name of Mr. F. J. King, who played the opening organ solo so magnificently, as well as the name of Mr. Gordon Christian, who played the accompaniments in such a masterly manner, were inadvertently omitted from the programme of last night's concert.

E. W. Bachus, president of the Fort Frances Pulp and Paper Co., who ran foul of the paper controller and the finance minister, et al., in the controversy over a supply of newsprint to Winnipeg papers, is generally recognized as the "stormy petrel" of the pulp and paper industry. He is now a wealthy lumberman of Minnesota, but in years gone by had to fight his way on the frontiers there. Probably this did not mollify a natural pugnacity of temperament which for four years or more has struck fire when he met in combat an equally vigorous gladiator, E. H. Backlin, general manager of the Winnipeg Free Press. Mr. Bachus has a pulp and paper mill across the Rainy River on the American side, the Minnesota and Ontario Power & Paper Co., and some years ago he and Sir Adam Beck had a few rather torrid encounters. Mr. Bachus is still trying to collect a bill of $150,000 from the Eastern paper mills as a refund for supplying what he claims is more than his share to the western section.

Legislative Council.

THURSDAY, April 29.
The Legislative Council resumed its session at 4.30 p.m. After the passing of the Minutes, Hon. Frank Macnamara spoke on the Address in Reply. He said in part: Mr. President, I am of opinion that the Regulations are injurious to the fishery and to the trade of the Colony. At any rate I have no hesitation in saying that they are not of benefit to the country. Three million dollars is the estimated loss accruing through these Regulations, due in some measure to late marketing. We now find that we have 250,000 qts. of fish unsold, and with Norway and other producing countries in competition this can only be sold at a sharp loss. The Regulations have prejudiced our customers in the Mediterranean. These Regulations were started in the wrong way and at the wrong time. We should have waited until the fish was standardized and then we would have something upon which to demand a fixed price. At the same time I believe price fixing by law is unworkable and impossible to carry out. Hon. Mr. Gibbs' announcement that supply and demand had been exploded is false. The law still holds good in the markets of the world. Are not the stock exchanges always regulating prices according to supply and demand. Another item of importance to us is transportation. Adequate facilities for handling and a proper premises to receive freight is an important feature, and is equally so with the ships controlled by the Government themselves.

Hon. Mr. Milley states that Mr. Monroe was not a member of the Advisory Board at the time he sent the telegram of advice re curtailing supplies.

Hon. Mr. Mews said the amount of fish to be disposed of was not nearly a quarter of a million but 150,000 qts. and this will be disposed of before the end of July, at what will be not ruinous prices. As to the losses incurred he was not in a position to refute the statement made.

Hon. R. K. Bishop moves that further discussion on the address in reply be deferred.

Hon. Mr. Browning gave notice of question.

Hon. Mr. Shea stated that the answers were in course of preparation. A Bill for "An Act to amend the Industrial Societies" was read the first time.

A Bill for "An Act to amend the Food Control Act 1917," was read a first time.

A Bill for "An Act respecting the Department of Public Works" was read a first time; also a Bill for "An Act respecting the effect and application of certain Acts passed subsequent to the consolidation of the Statutes. The House adjourned until this afternoon.

Seen From the Lobby.

House of Assembly, April 29.
Yesterday's session of the House, from the viewpoint of the scrapping visitor, was the best since opening. There was lots of scrapping and cross-firing, and not a dull moment for the afternoon was experienced.

Mr. R. Hibbs (Fogo), brought a hornet's nest about his ears when he set out to deliberately make himself offensive. Referring to the $500,000 which had been allocated to road improvements, etc., he stated that at least $900,000 of it had been squandered. As he warmed up to the subject and got more and more reckless in his statements he received more and more interruption, until eventually he had to cut it and speak about something else.

The Speaker had to rise three or four times and insist on order being kept, but his voice was like one crying in a wilderness.

Mr. Archibald (Hr. Grace), made his maiden speech. He caused considerable applause (from the visitors) and sent a bombshell into the Government seats, when he stated that the "riff raff about graft he didn't believe." "If there has been graft," he said, "prove it. Don't be forever talking about it." And this from a member of the Government!

This last speaker caused a sensation when he took up the subject of Sectarianism. I never heard such plain speaking on the subject. He certainly did not mince matters, and if he spoke too plainly, everybody excused him because of his evident sincerity and evident hatred of sectarianism.

His remarks in this connection were interesting enough, but when he left it to take up fish matters, his audience dwindled and—

But "what boots it now to tell?"

Mainly About People.

Gabriel d'Annunzio, the hero of Fiume, will not sit down to a meal if there are 13 at the table. He drinks only a special kind of Rhine wine. His favorite dish is "Scampi," a small crab fish that resembles the American shrimp, and is found only in the Quarnero. He knows all that has been written about this food. He is a lover of ice cream. The dining table must be done in red, the walls and furniture must be covered with red tapestry, and he must have his favorite flowers morning, noon and night.

Mrs. Wilson, wife of the American president, is a devotee to salt water bathing. The "first lady" of the United States will have ample opportunity to indulge in the healthful pastime this summer when the presidential party is encoined at the summer home of Charles R. Crane at Woods Hole. The estate has an excellent private beach, where members of the Wilson family may take their daily dips in strict privacy.

Blasco Ibanez, who is now back in Europe, was made to say things before the University Club of Philadelphia about the dominating influence of American women over their men folks and stirred up a tempest which quickly subsided when the noted author declared the report to be untrue. He admitted saying that the women here have time for culture and arts while their husbands pursue dollars. He admitted when he was in love he was more dominated than the most henpecked.

Sir Harry Lauder arrived in England the other day after an extended tour in Australia, the United States and Canada, and leaves almost immediately on a three month's trip in South Africa, which he will visit for the first time. He reported himself in the very best of health, a fact which he attributed to his simple living, his fondness for work, and his even temper. He said: "I like to whistle when I'm putting on my kilts in the morning, and I'm very easy tempered." Such a recipe for good health would be worth trying if some of us did not find it so difficult.

A good deal has been written lately about Pearl White, the movie thriller, for it is as impossible for popular film stars to avoid publicity as it is for actresses on the stage, but not many people know that a chance visit to a lonely log cabin had much to do with her choice of profession—or rather with her parents' choice. Miss White was born in a remote district in Missouri, of Irish-Italian parents. Her first home was a small log cabin at the foot of the Ozark Mountain. Visitors from the outer world were rare, and the principal callers at the lonely homestead were Indian trappers, who brought their skins and furs to her father for sale or exchange. But one day a new sort of visitor turned up—a travelling showman. Little Pearl was only five years old at the time, but the showman had a practised eye and he remarked her beauty and professional possibilities. He spoke to her parents, and it was through his persuasion that they decided on acting as her career. Had not the travelling showman passed that way, Pearl White might have adopted some other vocation, and the film would have lost one of its brightest stars.

Coal Situation Never so Serious Declares Wholesale Dealers Who Issue Sharp Warning to Ontario.—Shortage of Ten Millions of Bituminous Exists in the United States Get Coal Where You Can is The Advice to Consumers.

TORONTO, April 8. (By Canadian Associated Press).—The coal situation never was so bad as at present according to George H. Cushing, managing director of the American Wholesale Coal Dealers Association, who addressed the Toronto Wholesale Coal Dealers Association at a banquet here to-day.

There is a shortage of 10,000,000 tons of bituminous coal in the United States, Mr. Cushing said. Inadequate transportation facilities had caused the shortage he stated and what was needed was more motive power, rather than more railway cars.

The buying of coal for consumption in the Middle Western States is just beginning and will be heavier later on, Mr. Cushing said. The Eastern operators are going to send coal to tidewater for export purposes and are going to find that only four per cent. is wanted. The result will be, in his opinion, that the people of Ontario are going to be between the blockade at tidewater and the congested area in the Western States.

My advice to you, he added, is to watch for these periods and get coal when you can.

Widely fluctuating prices between Eastern and Western American points were predicted by Mr. Cushing. Although stating that he did not think any decent man would attempt to justify the present prices of coal, Mr. Cushing held out no hope for an improvement in coal prices and said he did not think anyone would ever see the prices go down again to where they were before the recent advances. (The advice to get coal where and when you can, applies equally to Newfoundland this year.—Ed.)

Lipton Will Use

SHAMROCK IV IN CUP RACE.

London, April 17.—Regarding the statement that in the event of the Shamrock III, proving faster than the challenger, Shamrock IV in the trials, he would ask the New York Yacht Club to be allowed to substitute the boat for America's Cup. Sir Thomas Lipton declared to the Associated Press yesterday.

"I have never dreamed of suggesting such a course. I am fully aware that having challenged with the Shamrock IV, I cannot race any other boat against the American defending yacht, without issuing another challenge in accordance with the rules covering the contest."

Shamrock III Sailed.

New York, April 17.—The 21 meter yacht Shamrock which Sir Thomas Lipton will use in the trial races against his Shamrock IV preliminary to the America's cup races, sailed from Southampton April 8, for New York, Colonel Neillside, of the British sportsman announced upon his arrival here yesterday on the steamship Adriatic.

The small yacht, under Jury Rig, probably will take a month to make the journey by way of the Azores, he said.

"I expect Sir Thomas will be here in about four weeks and preparations for tuning up will soon be on in earnest," Colonel Neill added. "The mast, boom, gaff, smaller spars and rigging for the big racer were brought over on the Adriatic, when the small yacht arrives here she will be taken to the yards at City Island, where the Shamrock IV is located, and Col. Neill will begin immediately to refit her for the speed trials off Sandy Hook."

The Potency of Perfume.

The real, sure-fire potency of perfume cannot be thoroughly appreciated under ordinary circumstances. It takes surroundings that are conducive to the receptive frame of mind to permit of the genuine realization of what scent exactly means. Nowhere, of all the wide and extended ranges of the spacious sphere, will be found a spot meeting those requirements more than a moving picture theatre, where all is quiet and those who are not making love, reading aloud the titles, discussing the dresses and screen performances of the actors and actresses, telling funny stories, talking politics, commenting on the visualized story, have their eyes glued to the silver screen, and silence reigns supreme. There the philosophic minded may to their hearts content and to their fullest capacity experience the odors that permeate the night (we were going to say desert) air. Each lady, and each of the she-men, has his own particular brand of stinker, and the heterogeneous mixture of odors is such as will offend the stoutest olfactory organ. Every movement or gesture of a lady, sends waves of perfume toward you and you emerge therefrom gasping and panting for breath. Perhaps a gas mask would be useful. But how much nicer it would be for the poor, unsuspecting male if the other sex either standardized their perfume or used none at all! This is a plaintive wail of a heart that is discouraged and weary.

Paris a New and a Sadder City.

The city of Paris in many of its characteristics is not the Paris of a few years ago. The boulevards lost the touch of gaiety, and the sombre days of the early seventies. The crepe of the widow and sorrowing mother is everywhere in evidence. The mid-services of the great churches are no longer patronised by semi-gay and tourists; they are filled with widowers. Around Notre Dame wounded soldiers, who, although not begging, are there in the streets, and reality of the price that many Parisian lads had to pay for their country's liberation from the Prussian yoke. The same description applies to the Madeline in the heart of the city. In the Government offices old soldiers are back in their places, minus legs, arms, and here and there some may be seen working with bandaged eyes. War has painted a death hand upon every part of Paris. In theatre, exchange, market, and store the havoc that was made upon the manhood of Paris is too eloquently portrayed. It is only when a stranger converses with the people that he makes the discovery that there is something in Paris stronger than death. An elderly lady presides at a table near the Grand Opera. She wears a medallion of three boys on her breast. A British officer, passing through the city recently pointed to the emblem, and she at once ejaculated: "Yes, monsieur, my boys. They died for France, and I will not mourn." The officer raised his hat.

Literary Celebrities Who Were Cripples.

It is one of the curiosities of literature, as well as one of the finest instances of the triumph of the spirit over the flesh, that Frank Smalley, the out-of-doors novelist, who wrote "Lewis Arandel" and "Frank Fairleigh," never set foot to ground during the whole course of his life.

To the tens of thousands of his readers in Mid-Victorian days, Smalley must have appeared as a man who was either a gentleman jockey or an enthusiastic rider, of every sport on the calendar, is almost uncanny.

Yet he wrote all his novels "on his back." They had an immense vogue in their day, and his success brought much cheer to one of the most delightful and optimistic of men.

Bryon's Brave Fight.

But optimism and good spirits have not always been associated with crippled genius. Sometimes, as in the case of that literary giant, Alexander Pope, physical infirmity embitters both the temper and the pen. Certainly, from the point of view of brilliance, his satire is his best work, but it is, none the less, biting and acrid for that.

Pope was a sad cripple, his spine being so weak that he had always to wear stays to support it. In his later years he spent much of his time in his grotto at Twickenham, and when he did stir abroad sought the seclusion of a sedan chair with drawn blinds.

Bryon is the most romantic of literary cripples. The malformation of his feet was congenial, and was a source of lifelong misery, yet he was beloved of many women, had a countenance of singular nobility and even beauty, and was the most popular poet in his lifetime in the whole history of English literature.

Doubtless his mother's references to her "lame brat" made in his hearing when a child, had much to do with Bryon regarding his lameness, and to his defect must be attributed that of his work. Yet Bryon is admirable for the way he fought his infirmity.

He became a fine boxer, a splendid dancer, and, as everybody knows, he swam the Hellespont in imitation of Leander.

A Blessing in Disguise.

Perhaps the most famous of all literary cripples is the Wizard of the North, Sir Walter Scott, patriot, poet, novelist, antiquarian, lawyer—a universal genius, and an out-door man par excellence. Yet he was partially a cripple.

It is told of him that when he was very young he one night showed such determined opposition to the idea of going to bed that his mother chased him round the room, presumably in a playful manner, and laid hold of him with more than usual roughness. Whether this had any deleterious effect upon him it is hard to say, but next morning he was in a high fever, and when, in a few days, he attempted to put his right foot to the floor, it was discovered that he had lost the use of it.

To his crying day he walked lame, although even in boyhood he triumphed sufficiently over his infirmity to fight and climb among the best. Doubtless he told the story himself concerning the strange apparent cause of his lameness, but otherwise, unlike Bryon, he never refers to it. He was of too robust a temperament to allow a physical infirmity to affect his manhood. It was, too, probably a blessing in disguise, for it threw him much into the company of old books and old folk, from which he gathered those stores of legendary lore which stood him in such good stead in his great literary career.

With Many Ailments.

Samuel Johnson, the Sage of Fleet Street, is as famous well nigh for his physical defects as for his learning, conversation, and writings. His unwieldy form, his half-blind eyes, his scrofulous face, his St. Vitus' dances, are as familiar as his homespun coat and his ungartered stockings. He was not a cripple in the sense that Scott and Bryon were cripples, but his deformities had a profound influence upon his mind, and temperament, making him subject to deep depression at times.

ried Browning, spent long years on her couch. At the age of fifteen she met with an injury to her spine, which kept her in a recumbent position for several years, and from the effects of which she never recovered. It was during these years that she wrote those sonnets which are her greatest claim to immortality.

Hash-Up of Fashions.

It would indeed be difficult to define exactly what is to be fashionable or not during the coming spring season—so varied and various is the taste of the great and despotic designers of Madame la Mode, writes a correspondent in Paris. I have spent two consecutive afternoons assisting at the great function of the parade of new models at two of the largest creative ateliers of Paris.

At one there were a hundred new models; at the other, two hundred and fifty. And, after viewing these two great shows, I am obliged to say there is in reality no really new mode.

This season is to be a sort of hash-up of every mode that has ever been conceived for the adornment of the feminine form divine.

You may follow the inspiration of any kind, sort, or period of fashion that suits your own particular style of beauty.

You may attire yourself in the modes of ancient Egypt or Greece; you may be stately and mediaeval; you may be Elizabethan, with hooped skirts and even the suggestion of a ruff; you may wear the wide lace collars and flowing skirts of the period of Charles I. or the slim and more subdued draperies of all the old English painters of the 18th century, or again, the rounded and panniered robes and lace-trimmed bodies of the corresponding period of 18th century France.

Has there ever been an epoch when we have been offered so much choice?

The Ghosts of Famous Castles.

The news that a "veiled specter" has recently been seen on three separate occasions promenading the corridors of Windsor Castle recalls a story told by a young officer, Mr. Carr Glyn, of the Grenadier Guards, some twenty years ago.

Mr. Glyn was reading a book in the Castle library when, glancing up, he saw the black-veiled figure of a woman walk past him and disappear in the inner library. As she did not return, he followed her; but found to his amazement that she had completely vanished, although there was no means of exit from the inner room.

The Woman in Black.

When he told his uncanny story the following morning it created consternation in the Palace, especially when it was discovered that three centuries ago the room had had an exit at the very place through which the black lady had passed. It was generally believed that the mysterious figure must have been that of Queen Elizabeth herself, of whose midnight appearances in her old haunts in the Castle many stories are told.

But Queen Bess is only one of the several royal spectres which are said to haunt our royal palaces. The Duchesse de Mazarino, one of the Merry Monarch's many favourites, has been seen more than once in the rooms and corridors of St. James's Palace, which is also said to be a favourite haunt of Nell Gwyn, of the saucy tongue and merry laughter; and of that turgid beauty, the Duchess of Cleveland.

Hampton Court Palace, too, has the reputation of being visited by the shades of several great people who have once "walked in splendor" within its historic walls. Strange tales are told of spectral figures which vanish when accosted; of mysterious noises, the uncanny opening of doors without visible agency, and of sounds of merriment and snatches of song proceeding from empty rooms.

When Henry's Wives "Walk."

But the most affrighting vision of all is that of a white-robed figure running down a corridor, with her long hair streaming behind her, and disappearing into the chapel. This startling apparition is said to be that of the unhappy Catherine Howard, the second queen whom Henry VIII. sent to the executioner's block; and who, so long after her tragic death, repeats an incident in her troubled existence when, escaping from her guards, she rushed into the chapel to beg for her life from her tyrannous lord who was praying there.

Catherine of Aragon is also said to haunt the Palace of Hampton, where her spectre has been seen many a time, clothed in black, and lighted taper in her hand, walking up a certain staircase, and disappearing through the beautiful archway known as Queen's Gate.

On the night before the death of Frederick III, father of the present ex-Kaiser, a sentry declares that he had seen the figure of an old woman, bowed with age, and carrying a broom in her hand; and his story would certainly have been scoffed at as the creature of a disordered brain, had not a similar figure been seen on former occasions, notably on the death of the Emperor William I. This grotesque old lady, whose visits bode so little good to the House of Hohenzollern, is disrespectfully spoken of as "The Sweeper."

A Herald of Calamity.

Spectres in white or even in black are perhaps intelligible, but what are we to think of the "Red Man," who is said to haunt the Tuilleries, and to have been seen by no less famous persons than Catherine de Medicis and the great Napoleon, the latter of whom is said to have had a long conversation with him on the eve of his ill-fated Russian campaign.

During the night before the late Empress of Austria was so treacherously assassinated, a sentry on guard in the Castle of Schonbrunn was frightened "out of his wits" by the spectacle of a beautiful woman, robed in white, and wearing a long, flowing white veil, walking along the corridor where he was on duty. Thrice he challenged the trespasser, and had started in pursuit of her, when she vanished as suddenly and mysteriously as she had appeared.

This was by no means the first appearance of the "lady in white," for she was seen as long ago as 1867, just before the tragic death of Maximilian, the ill-fated Archduke, who was made Emperor of Mexico; again, in 1889, on the very night when Rudolf, of the very Austrian throne, was so strangely done to death in the forest of Mayerling; and on other occasions when a member of the Imperial family has died.

So coincident have been her appearances with disaster to the reigning house of Austro-Hungary that her visits have always been dreaded as the heralds of calamity.

I want another bottle of "Brick's Tasteless", it is the best preparation I have ever taken to give me an appetite.—apr28,12

Fighting H. C. L.

(From the Sydney Record.)

The "Overall Clubs" in some American states have been formed in an effort to pull down the cost of living. The example is being followed in North Sydney. The theory is that a lessened use of ordinary suits will help to enable supply to catch up to demand and so to bring prices down and, in the second place, that any excessive prices for suits which they have in stock will be glad enough to cut down the profit and price when they find the goods staying on shelves and hangers, because men are substituting overalls and old coats for new suits. But what is to happen to overall prices in these American states? If demand for overalls catches up on supply, or if there are profiteers among overall dealers, a further upward trend in the prices of these goods will follow. Moreover, the maker of suits will scarcely operate his factory to capacity and so pile up a surplus stock, at a time when production costs are high, if demand shows signs of slackening off; on the contrary, if his plant is suited to the work at all, he is more likely to add overall-making, to his undertakings. In that case, perhaps, there would be a check to rising overall cost, but what of the price of suits since suit production would have been lessened?

Our Blinded Soldiers.

Letter From Sir Arthur Pearson.

Dear Sir,—To the generous public who form your readers I owe much for the support they have given to Dunstan's—the Hostel which I established just five years ago in London for the care and training of the soldiers who lost their sight in the war. I think everyone knows how that heroic effort the men have made to overcome their handicap; the amazing triumph which has been theirs in the class-rooms and workshops of St. Dunstan's; and how their leisure time they have taken to light in dancing and rowing—all sorts of recreations at which they could excel—getting as close back to normal life as possible.

Impressive as that fact is, the sequel is more so. More than a thousand of these men have completed their training, have been set up in some occupation they have mastered, and, having put their training into practice, are able to speak not only of their interest in their work, but of the most astonishing success in competition with sighted workers.

At of real contentment, real enjoyment of life, and happiness and of hope things which seemed lost to them ever when first the news was broken to them that they were blind. These men who have already returned to something like their old life, while some five hundred are still training; these men who have gone back to their homes in this country in the sister lands of the Empire, from the most remarkable body of blinded men that the world has ever known. Among these are a considerable number from Overseas. Tragedy inseparable from the word blindness—but they have given to this word a new meaning—they have turned it into a distinction conveying the idea of great-hearted courage, of infinite resource, of such accomplishment as other men may wonder at. They have made the appellation blind a mark of achievement.

So long after the termination of hostilities, it might be thought that the work of St. Dunstan's was nearing an end. May I tell your readers more than ever now I need their support?

With some five hundred blind men training the Hostel is almost as crowded as ever. And on the heels of these men blinded on the battlefields are coming to us those others whom blindness has overtaken gradually. 23,000 men were discharged from the army with seriously damaged eyesight, and it is impossible to gauge how great the demand on our resources will be or how long continued.

But apart from this tragic fact we are dealing now with an exceptional large number of different cases. The men who were physically fit passed through their course of re-education in an astonishingly short time; others cannot. They need the most careful individual attention, and though they will win out in the end, their training must go slowly.

We are hampered, too, by the difficulty of getting suitable shops and small poultry-farms for the men who have completed their training, and who must, therefore, remain at St. Dunstan's instead of making room for them.

We have Convalescent and Rest homes in the country and by the sea to maintain for the use of those blinded soldiers who want change and special care.

Meanwhile the organisation for the after-Care of the men who have left St. Dunstan's is rapidly becoming our chief concern. Because they are doing so wonderfully well is exactly the reason why nothing must be neglected to keep up their spirits, to watch over their work that it does not unconsciously deteriorate, to see that they get the best materials and the best markets, to keep alive that bond of fraternity which had its beginning at St. Dunstan's.

With this big programme before us we have to face the fact that the cost of everything is still going up by leaps and bounds. We are not going to do things less well than before for brave blinded soldiers, and therefore our expenses must be greater.

When you think of these men living and working in perpetual darkness you will feel that money which can bring into their lives internal sunshine is money with a power for good at money seldom has.

Contributions to St. Dunstan's sent direct, or through this Journal, will most gratefully be acknowledged.

Yours faithfully,
ARTHUR PEARSON,
Chairman, Blinded Soldiers' and Sailors' Care Committee, St. Dunstan's, Regent's Park, London, N. W. 1, England.

RE-BUILT Piano Case Organs.

(Six Octaves.)

BY FAMOUS MAKERS.

We have in stock a number of Rebuilt Organs, piano case, six octave, by Bell, Doherty, Thomas, etc., which we are offering at the same price practically as five octave parlour organs. Every instrument guaranteed.

Owing to its limited scale the five octave organ is only suitable for sacred music. The advantage of the six octave instrument is apparent since its larger scale will accommodate any piano selection, while the finish, style and tone of these instruments should appeal to everyone.

Rebuilt Piano Case Organs $150 to $175

Rebuilt High Top, 5 Octaves $100

Rebuilt Low Top, 5 Octaves $85

Will You Risk Just Twenty Dollars?

A "flyer" on the New York market very often makes a tidy profit if placed in a promising stock. Here's an example:—
15 Shares
at $3.50 per share

costs $52.50

A one-third cash deposit secures and controls 15 shares. One-third of $52.50 is $17.50, and commission and exchange makes it $20.00. We expect the same stock to sell around $6.00 inside four months, netting over $35 profit besides your original investment. Ask us about it and have us suggest a stock to you.
