NOTICE TO ADVERTISERS.

Evening Mercuny OFFICE:.....MACDONNELL STREET. TUESDAY EVENING, JUNE 9, 1868

THE FLYING COLUMN.—Col. Anderson C. B., of the Royal Artillery, has been appointed to the command of the flying column to act on the western frontier. He proceeded to London, the headquar ters, on Monday.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.-On the after noon of Tuesday last, a man named John Stephenson, a resident of Amaranth, made an incision five inches in length in his throat with a razor. He was under the influence of drink at the time. His recovery is doubtful.

THE DOCTORS DISAGREE.—The Doctor have lately disagreed in Toronto, and one of them has turned pamphleteer in con sequence; more recently they have had a squabble in Brantford, and Dr. Tufford, homeopathist, on Tuesday of last week charged Reginald Henwood, William C E. Griffin, and Peter VanEvery with having used the title of M.D. in con ection with their names, having no legal right to do so. The charge could not be sustained and the complainant had to pay the costs.

INHUMAN.-The Advocate tells of an inhuman wretch in Mitche'', who turned bis blind daughter out of doors, and refused her re-admittance or any assistance whatever because she could be of no fur ther use to him. He thought she should be a charge on the corporation. charitable person took her in, and others equally kind secured her a situation in the Industrial Asylum at Toronto, and collected money enough to send her there, the father refusing the smallest contribution.

NOT So .- "At Guelph, men are in hot haste to enroll as volunteers; and a force outside the required strength of the local corps, is being taken on. A subscription has been set on foot, to supply each man with the necessary kit."--Hamilton Times [Not so friend Times. There is no doubt of the loyalty of the Guelph people, but they are not so extremely excitable as it might be inferred from the foregoing they are. There was some sort of cockand-bull story that something of the kind alluded to above had taken place in Acton, but nobody appears to have heard any thing of the sensation except the Ad-

BRANTFORD RACES .- These races came off last week. On the first day, Wednes day, there was a trotting race, which was won by "Commodore Nutt," owned by Mr. R. B. Coulson, hotel keeper, Guelph. The race was for $100, open to all horses that never beat three minutes; best three in five to harness. There were four entries: "Lady Norfolk," W. Nevil; "Black Bear," J. Gillespie, Hamilton; b. m.,
"Donna Maria," W. Hodgins. Brant; g. g., "Commodore Nutt," R. B. Coulson. The Expositor says the race was a splenahead more than a length at all the three heats. The first heat was made in 3.02 heats. The first heat was made in 3.02; it the second in 3.03; and the third in three minutes.

RUNAWAY.-On Monday afternoon Mr ames Taylor, who lives or formerly lived E. in the Paisley Block, was thrown from his waggon and severely injured. was driving down Quebec street with a horse attached to a light waggon; the 20 CASES THIN'S FAMILY vehicle containing some iron and other freight. Taylor being somewhat the worse of liquor, drove against a double waggon, and some of his horse's harness being broken by the collision one of the shafts dropped a certain distance, and the Byes beast made off with all the speed at its command. It made a short turn at the Montreal Bank and Taylor, whose seat was not very secure, was thrown out, one of the wheels passing over his head. He Over Mr. Higinbotham's Drug Store FREEMAN & FREEMAN Coffee's hotel. After some time he red, Dr. Orton being in attendance. Aux Noix.

On Thursday last two gentler Guelph from Toronto, and patronizing an establishment where horses and buggies are for hire, went north towards Elora. having some excellent spirits in them they resolved, as the song says "to play a trick on the first man they would meet," if he would let them. They met two or three men before they found one able to appreciate their humor. At last they drew up at a hotel by the wayside, the proprie tor of which has not been long in his pre sent establishment. After taking soundings the travellers represented themselves as Yankee Fenians who had come over from the States to purchase horses for O'Neil's army. If they were to be believ-ed they had plenty of money, and were willing to pay even more than a moder-ate price for horses likely to make good chargers. The landlord not being posted on the horse question referred them to a particular friend, one Barney ——, who knew everybody and everything, and was as finished an adept in talking horse as in drinking whiskey. The travellers sion known to Barney, and were gratified to learn that "Bedad, they had just come to the right place, for there was plenty of horses for sale in that quarter and plenty of Fenians to sell them." Barney was deputed, and received promise of a liberal fee, to scour the country, and inform all who wished to horses to Fenian gentlemen to come them-selves and bring their nags to the tavern on the following (that was, last) Saturday at 2 p. m. On the day and at the hour appointed no less than 15 horses wer ented for sale, and as time wore away considerable drinking and swearing and much fuss and commotion. But the pretended buyers had returned to Guelph told their story and were in Toronto when they should have been half way betw this and Elora. Barney came to Guelph on Sunday to look for the two Yankee Fenians, and learned only then how he had been sold. He said he had suspicions that the men were not what they gave themselves out to be, for he watched them narrowly, and one of them drank ale, which if it was not an infraction of all Fenian commandments, was at least contrary to the spirit of orthodox Fenian-Barney returned home enjoying the melancholy satisfaction of being able to tell his friends that they and he had been victimized. The foregoing owes nothing to fancy, but is a plain statement of facts that actually occurred between Thursday of last week and the first day of

PIGEON MATCH.— A pigeon match took place in the neighborhood of Holliday's brewery on Friday last between Messrs. Ward (the champion shot) and Hewer on one side, and Messrs. Holliday and Black on the other. The stakes were simply the price of the birds. Seven were let go for each of the marksmen. The score is as follows: Ward, 1011111-6; Hewer, 1110011—5; Holliday, 0100001 -2: Black, 0110101-4. Messrs. Ward and Hewer were thus the winners by five DEGREES CONFERRED .-- At the annual convocation of the University of Toronto, held on Monday, the degrees of L L B and B A were conferred on Mr. J. M. Dunn, Head Master of the Grammar School, Guelph. We believe this is the first ocupon which any person has gone up to be examined for the two degrees at one time, and it reflects great credit on Mr. Dunn's scholastic ability in being able to carry off both degrees simultaneously. Also, the degree of M D was conferred on Dr. J. H. Newton, Guelph.

CORONER'S INQUEST .- Dr. Orton, coron er, held an inquest on Monday last, on the body of a child of Mr. Henry Hambleton held. The following sides near the G. W. Station. # The Braes of Yarrow

Historical Tale of the Six'eenth Century.

CHAPTER VII.

At sight of the strange face with its profusion of coarse hair outside the window, Lady Margaret drew back startled.

The packman, holding the rope which supported him in his dangerous position firmly with one hand, drew the other across his tace, slightly moving his beard and whisk-ers. With a subdued cry of joy, the lady recognised him.

Gilbert.'

She thrust her hand through the grating and he touched it respectfully with his lips.

'Courage, dear lady, courage,' he said, his woice tremulous with emotion. 'I come to save you—to restore you to your child.'

'Ah, my bairn—is she safe?'

'Safe and well.'

'Then you were not captured?'

'No, I escaped them, thinking you were out of danger. Discovering my error I followed you hither, obtained entrance in disguise, and was sent to the chamber above this one to rest for the night. I filed the bars of the window, and with this rope and our holy mother's help have been able to reach you.

She looked around hopelessly.

e looked around hopelessly.

t can your presence serve me? Alas,

It can, it can—but stay : let me look in to

"It can, it can—but stay: let me look in to your face."

She raised her eyes to his, and a slight flush suffused her cheeks as she met his ardent gaze. For the first time she divined something of the real natura of the passion—ate devotion with which he served her, and her eyes drooped to the floor.

'Yes, you will trust me,' he said firmly in a low voice.

'I will trust you,' she echoed falteringly.

'Then watch you the door and give me timely notice if any one approaches.'

What are you about to do?'

'To break your prison bars; then with this rope, your life dependent on my arms, we will reach the ground. Not far hence Andrew waits with horses, and we can be far upon the road to safety before your absence is discovered. Do not speak more now, for every instant is precious.

She obeyed, and passing over to the door remained there listening. He produced a strong armourer's file, and, still hanging by the rope, began to work upon the centre bar of the grating. His was a strong hand; but it was doubly strong now, for the whole strength of the first bright love of a fible heart was added to it. So he worked cautiously and stoutly, forgetful of the abyss beneath his feat, and that the slightest relaxnion of his hold upon the rope would hurl him into the jaws of death.

The wind, cold and keen, whistled by him and around the tower as he worked, and its shrill cries deadened the grating sound of the file.

Gilbert having played the part of the packman in the hall with so much discretion that shrill cries deadened the grating sound of the file.

Gilbert having played the part of the packman in the hall with so much discretion that even Tushielaw had been without suspecting a trick, was conducted by Yetholm Will to the chamber—or rather cupboard—which had been called the rook's nest. The name was given to it on account of its proximity to the roof; and indeed a dozen respectable crows would have filled it nicely.

There was barely room enough for a man of average height-to lie down straight. It was square, the roof low, and the light hole—it could not be called a window—not more than twenty inches in diameter. There was a stone seat in a recess of the wall, a small table and a bundle of dried reeds on one side. The light-hole was crossed by one strong iron bar, the walls were naked and cold looking, and the atmosphere of the nest was that of a prison.

'This is your kirnel, frien', said Will, iron bar, the walls were naked and cold looking, and the atmosphere of the nest was that of a prison.

'This is your kirnel, frien', said Will, about to close the door. 'Gude nicht' 'An' a soun' sleep, till ye,' bellowed the big voice of the dwarf from the dark passage; 'if yo hae a mind to flee awa' afore mornin', ye can jist drap oot o' the hole, an' ye'll gang doon at a fine rate, I'se warrant ye. Haw, haw—ho!'

'Thanks, friend, but I'm owre wearied to try tricks o' that sort,' said the feigned packman.

Thanks, friend, but I'm owre wearied to try tricks o' that sort,' said the feigned packman.

The red head of the dwarf appeared between the legs of Yetholm Will.

Gif you should try it,' cried Hornie, 'ye'll pass the roun' chamber on the road, where ye can look in and see the bonny bird.

'Haud your daumed tongue,' cried Will, eatching the little man by the neck and dragging him away.

Gilbert heard the stout oaken door locked, and the hoarse laugh of Hornie as the two descended to the hall.

He lost no time in preparing for the accomplishment of his purpose. He opened the pack which had tempted the cupidity of the borderers, and took out of it a long rope. He secured the pack again, and mmediately tested the strength of the iron bar across the light-hole, it was strong enough to sustain thrice his weight and the file he removed the bar from its sockets, secured the rope to it, and then mounting upon the table squeezed himself through the hole feet foremost.

Clinging to the mason work, and without once looking downward, he placed the bar across the hole inside and then trusted himself to the descent.

But he had little more than discovered the window he risked so much to discover when the look of the door of the rook's nest was steadily turned. A pause, and after, the door was slowly pushed open. There was no light to show by whom the door had been opened, or to reveal that the rook had taken wing.

The stealthy comer groped about the room.

"What's the gowk doin'?'

"There's something wrang, answered Yetholm Will, for there's naebody here.'

An oath from Pate, and a light was procured by Eddie Craig. They saw at once what had happened, and Hornic came rolling up the stairs in time to laugh at their confusion.

'He has left the pack, though,' the dwarf

The nas left the pack, though, the dwarf said with a cunning leer in his strange eyes.

'An' that's a' we want,' added Eddie Graig as he proceeded to break open the packman's store.

The pack was found to be of stronger stuff than they had expected, and they were occupied several minutes in forcing it open. That done the contents ware revealed.

A number of stones, and a quantity of small sticks and furze!

Ding-a'-doon swore; Eddie and Will looked as if they had been cheated out of fair spoil; and Hornie sat upon the worthless pack, laughing as if it had been a capital looke.

There was a ruph to the light hale.

pack, laughing as if it had been a capital joke.

There was a rush to the light-hole. The rope was discovered to be heavy as if with the weight of a man.

Devil confound him he'll pay for the trick, 'growled Pate.

With a few swift crosses of his knife he cut the rope from its fastening. The iron bar fell inward, the rope went down, and the three men grinned with satisfaction.

'We'll gang doon and see what's come o' him,' said Pate, with much the same tone as that with which an ordinary man might have asked a friend out for an evening stroll, only much gruffer.

As the men were passing from the apartment there was a sharp whistle. Pate wheeled about, and saw Hornie swinging on the edge of the light-hole by his long arms.

'What are you whistling for Beelzebub?' The ghaist o' the packman, Clootie,' returned the dwarf promptly.

A queer expression of half rage, half fear passed over the countenance of Ding a'-doon. Then, after a moment's hesitation, he followed his companion, leaving Hornie in darkness.

TO BE CONTINUED.

An organized gang of robbers are operating about Windsor. Last week, as two men named Moynahan and Jones were leaving Windsor by the gravel road, they were stoped by four men, masked, who robbed them of all the valuables they had about them, amounting, however, to but a few dollars' worth.
