

THE LABOR ADVOCATE.

We Demand all the Reforms that Justice can ask for, and all the Justice that Reform can give.

TORONTO, CANADA, DECEMBER 19, 1890

No. 3.

$1.50 A Year, in Advance.
Single Copy, 5 Cents.

VINGS BANK.

THE CANADIAN
BANK OF COMMERCE

Established 1867.

OFFICE, TORONTO

CAPITAL PAID UP,
MILLION DOLLARS - $6,000,000
- $8,000,000

WALKER, General Manager
CLUMMER, Ass't Gen. Manager

Branches in Toronto

Messrs. King and Jordan, etc.

Messrs. Johnson, etc.

Toronto Branch, etc.

Mr. J. H. King, etc.

do do do

Messrs. G. R. Bell, etc.

Toronto do Messrs. T. H. Hartman, etc.

Messrs. King and Jordan, etc.

Messrs. Hartman, etc.

Mr. W. H. Hartman, etc.

Mr. W. H. Hartman, etc.

Branches in each city.

Bank Department.

of account rates allow you deposit and withdraw. Interest paid to the present in each city.

WICKLAYERS' UNION.

No. 2 Ontario.

Every Wednesday Evening at 7:30 o'clock, in Central Labor Hall,

JAS. C. LUCAS, President.

B.M., 251 Elizabeth St.

NOTICE.

For the Fire Protection for the members of the Order of Officers

Department of Agriculture, Toronto and Ottawa, etc.

Business with any of the Inspector members of the Board of Trade, etc.

ZENS STEAM LAUNDRY

• SHUTTER ST.

WORK A SPECIALTY.

Goods rated for and delivered.

D. S. BOGAN, Proprietor.

188 TORCH ST.

Toronto, Ont.

Telephone 270.

ONEY SAVED!

BY ACTING VOA

KEYS, WINES, BOTTLED ALE, ETC.

5 per cent. Discounts on all cash orders of $1.00 or over.

Address mentioning this paper

L.F.A. & CO., 289 Yonge St.

Telephone 270.

IN CARLTON,

188 TORCH ST.

GIBR. Proprietor

Brand's WINES LIQUORS AND

COADS always on hand.

NEW ROOM IN CORNATION

Rooms Vacant.

HEALTH CURES

Lat. Vines

Private practice

only. Chiropractic

and the like.

Lady Chiropractors

Wanted.

SILVER COMPANY

Manufacturers, 248 Spadina Ave.

AUCTION SALES.

Antiques, Household & Specialty.

Langdon & Co.

Antiques and Curiosities Markets

Special PRIVATE SALES AT

QUEEN ST. WEST.

WORK AND WAGES.

LABOR NOTES AND NEWS FROM ALL QUARTERS.

Interesting Items, Facts and Pictures Brought to You by the World of Industry

— CANADA —

The wages of one of England's most important ports is working as a common laborer in the Leithbridge colliery.

Louis Leland, of Central Street,

Hull, a mill hand in the employ of Mr.

J. R. Booth, was engaged by a dynamite explosion in the mill at noon on Monday.

A short time ago the wages of operations in the Kingston cotton mill were reduced ten per cent. Last week an order was issued that wages be increased ten per cent.

A GRAND TRUNK brakeman named

Hank of Rockville lost his left leg through getting his foot caught between the wing rail and being unable to get out of the way of a freight train.

(There was a scene of a struggle for the Saturday morning when the shipments to Mr. Joseph Le

Hill, at Belding, was burned to the ground.

The loss is estimated at $6,000, and the fire will throw fifteen men out of employment.

PARSONS & GIBSON, street car manufacturers of St. Catharines, are manufacturing for the new Ottawa street railway. They have received orders for larger cars from New Westminster and are tendered for supplying cars to St.

Johns, N. B. Kingston, etc.

A new company composed of Hon. H.

McGill, Mr. P. Mc C. Berkeley

Dunn, Mr. G. H. Pratt, and other local business men, has been organized in Ottawa for the purpose of supplying electric electric power for machinery or what will be undertaken to supply light.

The annual meeting of the Montreal club was held at Donheadham on the 1st of December, 1890.

Members of the Club Committee, and at the meeting of the members, Mr. Nathaniel Thomson, chairman president, and Mr.

Francis Harrelle, secretary.

At a meeting of directors of Hochberg and St. A. An auto mail at Montreal on Saturday, the 1st, it was decided that there would be held the Dominion Convention of the three "white" mills now in the syndicate, the mills comprising which will work jointly from January 1st, when an advance in motion may be looked for.

A portion of the Grand Trunk's old and newly purchased stock was sold on Saturday the 1st, Mr. W. Wilson, known among his peers as "Billy-tom."

He was driving in his team to the Bonnefamille station and died a few hours afterward.

The funeral took place on Tuesday, the 9th, with Masonic honors.

Mr. W. Wilson, director to the Toronto

McGill, the contractor for the extension of the Great Northern Railway, was awarded to Sherdell, Ross & Co.

As a result laborers are at great demand, and contractors are in great de-mend, and the contractors are in great de-mend, and contractors are in

THE PARNELL SCANDAL.

JUDGE OF PENTECOST ON THE IRISH LEADERS' ESCAPE.

The Policy of Compromising A Great Cause by Establishing Political Alliances and Irrational Weaknesses. Heresy of British Public Opinion. — Men Die But Principles Never.

(From "The Standard," London.)

This judgment of ours for help in Ireland last but yesterday was going for Ireland but for the combined forces of the Irish National party in Ireland, of which Mr. Parnell for ten years has been the acknowledged leader, and with the aid of Mr. Gladstone, for it is now known how many years, has been acknowledged leader.

Up to a comparatively few days ago, Mr. Parnell and Mr. Gladstone were the two leaders most prominent, were seen together in apparent, if not real, harmony to gain at once more or less control to the desires of both leaders and old parties. But now, it is evident, the spirit of antagonism of long headed, is the two famous leaders. The one naturally extends to the two parties, in their relation to each other as parties, and it has arisen, but with the respective party lines, and, as we express it, within the Irish party, produced on important facts.

The immediate occasion of this state of affairs, so unfortunate from the point of view of the present political complications, and apparently remote from the main issue, was the outbreak of a scandal in which Mr. Parnell was involved. It became known that the Irish leader was maintaining other relations with another Mrs. O'Connor, the widow of one of his friends.

I say that the publication of this sexual scandal was the immediate occasion of the present political complications, and appeared due to the fact that those who were most responsible for the account, were the two elements of assumed between the English Liberals and Irish parties, xated, and that the domestic scandal referred to was more the occasion than the result.

Whether or not I am right in supposing, that sooner or later a rupture between the Irish and Liberal leaders would have developed entirely apart from this scandal, it is not difficult to see that the present situation furnishes a fitting opportunity to the moralist to point out several wholesome lessons which may be learned from the circumstances before us.

In the first place, it should be apparent, that it is very dangerous, and apt to be disastrous, to any cause based upon some great principle of justice, to entangle it with political influences which necessarily involve a certain amount of corruption.

It is well known that Mr. Gladstone, all on one side and injustice all on the other, it is the case of Ireland against England. From Ireland England takes everything. To Ireland England gives nothing, and the Irish people are left to themselves. The theory of government is that the subject owes obedience and subjection in exchange for the protection which the government is supposed to secure, permanent action in the interest of individual states or property.

The proofs of government is to force the subject into obeyed and subjects and give very little protection. But whether the theory of government is that the proofs of government make great opposition to the subject, and when the government is composed of one race and the subjects are of another, this is particularly true.

The experience of the race, by which alone we learn what is right and what is wrong, has shown that it always works unopposed for one nation to rule an other, and in this case of Ireland had been unopposed for nearly a century.

It is well known that the men who were converted by Henry the First, have been used as to elect the sympathy of the world. For hundreds of years he has been

BLEEDING AT EVERY PORE.

Data of the English politicians who helped on the Irish leaders, and helped them to alleviate their woes, and at most without avail. She has been played upon by English tax gatherers and rents, and in all the ways of English popular opinion papers. While her own people have been starving, millions of dollars worth of food raised by their own labor from land which should be theirs, while living in houses which should be theirs, but which they had made, has been forcibly taken from them by the English who have no rights in Ireland except those established by their conquest. Ship loads of food and money have been sent from the country to alleviate the suffering of the hungry Irish peasants, only to be forcibly appropriated by the official tax gatherers and titled landlords of England. Subsequent to this, the English politicians are struggling for political independence from England. Their aim is just. So long as government exists, each race should provide for their own government by their own people.

I believe that if the Irish people were governed by their own countrymen, in their own country, and in their own way, with the present law and moral system, they would be far better off than they are. It will make it easier for him to be governed or who governs him to long as landlords and interest taxes can logically appropriate nearly all he earns. It will make it easier for him to be governed or the landlord and the rest of other people, and in its results, there is a great deal to be gained.

Nevertheless, the demand that Ireland shall be governed by the Irish is as just as was the demand that the American colonies should govern themselves.

The Irish leaders, therefore, in my opinion, should adhere to their principle and fight it out on that line making no alliance with any English party, unless the English party would be in accordance with the terms of the Irish demands, and without the necessity for any of those confidential conversations which Mr. Gladstone, in his way, always engaged in with all politicians.

When men are fighting for a principle, that they want to wait, because if their principle is truly real, no matter how radical it is, the world will sooner or later adopt it. If the principle is real, it will spread its wings, and finally count all his splendid services, since it is evident that it has wrecked the structure which it has built, has been a curse to the world, and has produced a principle that is not true.

The people who are fighting for a principle that yields no results, but which is not real, will feel that their efforts were徒劳的, and that they should feel that, as far as they are concerned, the cause is lost. And when such people will be exposed, it is evident that they should feel that, as far as they are concerned, the cause is lost.

When men are fighting for a principle, that is not real, but which is not adopted by the world, will be exposed, it is evident that they should feel that, as far as they are concerned, the cause is lost.

CHARLES WALTERS.

THE STRUGGLE FOR HUMAN FREEDOM.

If, instead of parliamentary politicians, we appear to be the only ones who are interested in power and wealth, we will be blessed with writers and speakers who will go up and down the country, preaching the doctrine of national independence for England, in the language of Patrick Henry and Thomas Paine in this country before the achievement of our political independence, and that the world will gain the day, and far more success as a political man as Mr. Gladstone.

THE END OF THE TROUBLES.

Whether or not I am right in supposing, that sooner or later a rupture between the Irish and Liberal leaders would have developed entirely apart from this scandal, it is not difficult to see that the present situation furnishes a fitting opportunity to the moralist to point out several wholesome lessons which may be learned from the circumstances before us.

In this country we have seen more than one promising reform movement utterly to overthrow political influences. Where is the old fireback party, the man Labor party, the United Labor party, with Henry George at its head?

Many of you, and I, in our obscure place in the world, have broken away, to a greater or less extent, from the old party, and have given up the old ways, and we have each now little circle of conservative friends and neighbors who are watching us to see whether our philosophy of life brings forth in us real fruit or not.

What is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

what is the use of the old ways, and

LABOR ADVOCATE

A WEEKLY
LABOR REFORM NEWSPAPER

Editorial, the Toronto Tribune and Faber 125 Yonge St. A 125 K. C. L.

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

BY THE

GRIP PRINTING & PUBLISHING CO.

34 & 35 FROST STREET WEST,

TORONTO, CANADA

Telephone: 125 K. C. L.

Yearly Subscription, $1.50, to advance.

Single Copy, 25 cents.

Editor: THOMAS E. DAWSON

TORONTO, CANADA, DECEMBER 19, 1890

A NATIONAL DISGRACE

PROBABLY it would be difficult to find among Canadian politicians a man more utterly unfit for the position of Minister of Justice than that the callous, cold-blooded, blood-thirsty creature who now occupies the position. The course of Sir John Thompson in remaining deaf to all appeals for a remanifestation of the sentence of Blanched, executed on Friday last at Sherbrooke, following so closely upon the hanging of his chum, who was sent to his death upon purely circumstantial evidence, is calculated to disgrace Canada in the eyes of the civilized world as a country where a barbarous code, long since abandoned by all nations professing enlightenment, still survives.

We do not take the position that under no circumstances ought the law to exact a life for a life, or claim that it would be wise or desirable in every case to substitute life imprisonment for the gallows. Just we do assert and without fear of contradiction, that the tendency of enlightened public opinion, and the actual practice of every civilized country to day is to limit the death penalty to the most extreme cases. In order to justify the carrying out of the death sentence it ought to be proved that the prisoner is beyond the shadow of a doubt the man who actually committed the crime, and that the fatal result, as pronounced. It is in the last degree improbable that either Birchall or Blanched would have been hanged in England, the United States, or any of the countries of continental Europe—Russia and Turkey perhaps excepted. The want of direct evidence in the first case and the lack of pronouncement in the second world, outside of a country where public opinion is at least fifty years behind the age on such questions, have secured a remanifestation in both instances.

The execution of Blanched is a specially shameful page of medieval barbarity. There was admittedly no premeditation about the crime, which was the result of a drunken row between two boon companions, in which one of the men in hot blood drew a pistol and inflicted a wound resulting in death. The jury who tried the case voted down in an appeal for clemency but in vain. Sir John Thompson is evidently a man who prides himself upon his heartless inflexibility, and his Icel- fowl-like ability to close his ears against all appeals for mercy and steel his gaze—or whatever supplies the place of a heart in his anatomy—against all considerations of humanity. Blanched died on the gallows for an offence which would have been amply expiated by a long term of imprisonment, in order that Canadians may be enabled to boast that they carry out their laws inflexibly.

There is no doubt that a great many people really take a horrible and gloomy pride in the fact that a greater percentage of murderers finally reach the gallows than in other countries.

It would be difficult to believe this were it not for the opinions brought out during the exhaustive discussions over the Birchall case, but the tone of many letters, editorials and sermons called forth by that tragedy makes it plain that we have among us persons who literally gloat over every fresh victim sent to the halter as a sort of proof of the "true loyalty" and rights either of their employees or the gage no such prominence to the village fore render careless parents anxious to terminate their sons' days.

It would be folly of course to expect the Churchman or any paper of its kind in this country, in contrast to the Times, to be advanced by disregard "moral sentiment" of the Yankees, among whom capital punishment for murder is the exception rather than the rule. This feeling has been encouraged by the dense and deplorable ignorance of party editors—and most of them are very ignorant outside of partisan politics who have fostered the idea that the United States is morally lax in the treatment of murder. The truth is that the practice of the American people in this matter is strictly in accord with that of most civilized nations, and in no respect exceptional. The following taken from the Twentieth Century shows how the gallows is falling into disuse in the leading European countries.

In England during the decade 1870-79, 145 of 259 persons condemned to death were hanged, in 1880, 110, no executions having taken place since 1876; in Scotland, none since 1865; in Ireland, none since 1845. In Germany and Austria, capital punishment is still to force, but it is restricted to the most reluctance. France might almost be placed in the same category, for of 632 persons condemned for capital crimes in 1877 only 24 were condemned to death, and of these only six were exonerated.

It will be noticed that while the advocates of the gallows fancy that they are glorifying British institutions by stringing up every convicted murderer without regard to extenuating circumstances, in England over one-half of the condemned have their sentences commuted. The action of the Government instead of being a subject for domestic self-congratulation as showing our superiority over our neighbors, ought to make every Canadian hang his head in shame. The "sentimentality" which the friends of the halter deprecate is simply the refined feeling of humanity and enlightenment which is making itself felt everywhere throughout civilization, in modifying the bloody vindictive codes which have come down to us from barbarous ages. Those who affect to argue that good-works place themselves in line with the intelligent and progressive ideas of Britons, Americans and the Western European nations, but with Russian brutality, Oriental despotism, and the crude and crass indifference of semi-barbarous peoples

SUNDAY STREET CARS

At the special meeting of the City Council held on Monday evening the principal question which came up in connection with the street railway franchise was the proposal to refer to the people the question of whether the street cars should run on Sunday. After a long and somewhat acrimonious debate—as debates involving religious issues nearly always are—the proposal was voted down by a large majority only six aldermen venturing to support it.

Our own view of the matter is that while Sunday street cars would undoubtedly be a great convenience and would not necessarily involve any intrinsic hardship or injustice, no Labor Reformer ought to favor such a proposal so long as there is the slightest danger that in practice they might become the means of causing any man to be compelled to work seven days in the week. The day of rest, whether that day be Sunday, Monday or any other day, is too great a blessing to overwork humanity to be lightly thrown aside for any prospective advantage. It may be said that there is no need for street railway employees to work seven days in the week—that every man could be secured his day off. Of course he could, but the matter is not to be dismissed in this easy off-hand manner. The question is not what might, or could, or ought to be done to place the street railway employees on the same scale as his fellow workers in ordinary occupations, but what would be done were the road in the hands of a money-making corporation. And the verdict of all experience is that it is not safe to depend upon any corporation, no matter how fair their promises or how stringently they may be bound by agreements, to respect the formal attack on organization upon the family resources, and the rights either of their employees or the gage no such prominence to the village fore render careless parents anxious to terminate their sons' days.

A system which thus tends to prevent quick-witted and aspiring pupils from completing their school course to the poverty, or the greed of their parents, ought to be tolerated no longer.

—W. must have free school books

CAPITAL AND CAPITALISM

The Montreal Echo moralizes as follows: "Capital and labor should be the very best friends. Without either the other would be in a bad plight. Whether this is merely a general adulation to classes and about the cry of the poor for justice, in the much abused name of religion."

FREE SCHOOL BOOKS

No long as the parents of school children are compelled to provide them, at their own expense, with the necessary text books and every father of a family knows what a constant outlay is required for that purpose—the often repeated boast that Canada provides "free education" for her children is a piece of the worst rhetorical bombast. Education is not "free," and never has been. It is no light matter for the poor man, who has to exercise the closest economy in purchasing the actual necessities of life in order to make ends meet, to have to pay out a quarter this week, and half-a-dollar next, and so throughout the year, to provide a numerous family with the outfit required. The sums may appear trifling to the man who never knows what it is to want a dollar or needs to pinch and save, but at the end of the twelve months they make a very respectable aggregate. The cost of school books is felt as a serious burden even by those of moderate incomes, and in the case of the very poor it has not a little to do with the evil of truancy, which our educationalists are trying to remedy by compulsory education. It is not to be wondered at, that people who are barely able to provide their families with bread and blankets and coal during the winter, should keep their children at home rather than incur the liability of having to find them text books.

It is folly to talk of compulsory education and devise plans for getting the children who are growing up in ignorance into the school houses unless the community is also prepared to furnish the pupils with all the means of instruction. Where is the use of running in the trams and compelling these to attend school regularly, unless they are to be provided with books at the public cost? You certainly cannot compel parents to buy school books in those cases—and there are many of them—in which stress of poverty and the expense of an outfit is the cause of truancy. Without free school books compulsory education will be an absurd farce. The law may secure compulsory school attendance, but it is a non sequitur to call it compulsory education.

The evil results of the present system are perhaps most noticeable in regards to the pupils of more advanced classes. The more rapid the progress made by the scholar the greater the cost entailed for books. More text-books, and those of a more expensive character, are required in proportion to the diligence and application of the pupil, and his ambition to learn. The consequence is that poor parents, who love without grubbing the expense of the earlier years of instruction, feel the increased outlay keenly when the higher branches are reached, and are under the temptation to withdraw their children from school at too early an age. Many a bright, intelligent youth with a decided taste for learning has been taken from school at the age of four or five of fifteen and sent to work because his parents could not meet the increased cost of the high priced books required for a continuance of his studies. Obviously it is the more active minds and ambitions of the pupils—the very ones who ought to be kept at school until they acquire a thorough education—who will make the greatest demands on the Echo to the statement put in by the counsel for Toronto in the street railway arbitration, instead of the city owing Frank Smith five and a half millions or anything, the street railway company will be due the city $112,420.60. This puts quite a different face on the matter. Of course the five million claim was preposterous and simply put in as a bluff. The city could do literally with Frank Smith in the matter and not exact the last cent. If he will pay the $112,420 and get out, we think they ought, in common fairness, to throw off the realtor, and profit. ——————

According to the statement put in by the counsel for Toronto in the street railway arbitration, instead of the city owing Frank Smith five and a half millions or anything, the street railway company will be due the city $112,420.60. This puts quite a different face on the matter. Of course the five million claim was preposterous and simply put in as a bluff. The city could do literally with Frank Smith in the matter and not exact the last cent. If he will pay the $112,420 and get out, we think they ought, in common fairness, to throw off the realtor, and profit. ——————

The Mail which is consistently and persistently in favor of monopoly on every occasion gives the following advice to the City Council:—"Having sat down upon the attempt to put the running of Sunday cars to a popular vote, it is now in order for the City Council to assign a mandatory power on the flattened corpus of that small part of the body politic which wants the city to assume control of the street cars." Any alderman who is rash enough to follow the Mail's advice will think they have sat down on a handful of carpet tacks or a nest of hornets before they are through.

What do the workmen of this city think of the following from the Vest of Wednesday? Speaking of

