Rev. George Fisher preached his farewell sermon in the Methodist church, on Sunday evening. Mr. Fisher took as his text St. Matthew xxvi chapt. and 40th and 45th. verses--And he cometh unto the disciples and findeth them asleep, and saith unto Peter, What I could ye not watch with me one hour? Then cometh he to his disciples and saith unto them, sleep on now, and take your rest: behold, the hour is at hand, and the son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners.

Mr. Fisher discoursed chiefly on the necessity of doing something for Christ. He began by reminding the congregation that Christ was human as well as divine. He wanted sympathy. His human heart yearned for human sympathy. Christ picked out three of his disciples to sympathize with him in his great sorrow, to be near him in his great sorrow. But instead his three chosen disciples slept when he wanted their comfort. Christ visits them and finds them sleeping. He says to them: "What could ye not watch with me one hour?" He comes the second time and finds them sleeping, but says nothing; the third time he visits them and finds them sleeping. He says: "Sleep on and take your rest." Mr. Fisher then told of the different constructions which had been put on these words of Christ's. But whatever exigencies had been placed on the passage, it was clear an opportunity had been afforded and lost to the disciples to do something for Christ. We condemned the disciples in this position, but after all this was a very sleepy world. Generation after generation was found leading in the footsteps of the apostles. Our opportunities for serving the Master might not be of as precise a nature, but nevertheless there were opportunities. Life was rich with them. There were needy and sorrowful hearts all around us, calling us for aid, to watch with them, and if we accepted we would be serving Christ as much as if we had been in the disciples' place. The helping of man was the best way of serving God. "What are we doing in this world of suffering humanity?" asked the preacher. There were Christ's helpless and needy ones all around us calling today as loudly as Christ called to his disciples. "How many opportunities there are for us?" That to wait for a special opportunity was to wait for it when it came. It was for us to do our duty when it came, and then we would be ready for a special opportunity when it came. If we all looked out for and prayed for opportunities, how many there would be awaiting us! How few Christians there were, who threw themselves wholly into the service of Christ. Helping and sympathizing with struggling humanity was Christ's constant vocation. Mr. Fisher then took up the other phase of the text. Not only did opportunities for service present themselves, but opportunities would soon be past. How pathetic was the position of the disciples as we found it. They had no longer the opportunity. The same would soon come to us all. "There is no more awful punishment that can come to man, when he looks back upon the lost opportunities of his life. Let us awake and put on our strength in the work for the Master. To lose our venture in the higher service of the Master, means much to us and much to others. Let us not be found sleeping with the door of opportunity open for us. Let us remember, that that door may be closed, and the opportunities may never again be offered. You and I are passing day by day golden opportunities for doing and receiving good. We neglect them, pass them by, never to meet them again."

It was an able discourse and held the close attention of the congregation throughout. Mr. Fisher said his removal came as unexpected to him as it did to the congregation. He had left himself entirely in the hands of the stationing committee of the conference. He realized that he was going to a more arduous and responsible position and his trust was in God. Mr. Fisher, his voice choking with emotion, spoke of the good work of the choir in appreciative terms, and his manner convinced all that it was very difficult for him to part from the congregation at Newcastle.

EDITOR UNION ADVOCATE:-- DEAR SIR:--The "Moniteur Acadian," a French paper edited at Shediac, N. B., publishes a list of the revisors appointed by the provincial government and makes the remark that in the parish of Alnwick and Rogersville, English speaking officers were appointed to the exclusion of French speaking ones.

It is important that all family and christian names should be spelled and written properly and according to the dialect of each nationality. In those two parishes, especially in Rogersville, all the electors with very few exceptions are of French origin and they are entitled to their right of preserving their family names. If revisors and census takers are not competent to give the French people that privilege and right, it is a wrong inflicted on those loyal citizens by the government, in appointing officers unable to spell and write their names as they should be. It often happens that the electoral lists are absurdly and shamefully made up; the spelling of French names is ridiculously made, showing great ignorance on the part of the officers in charge and a gross insult to deserving citizens. Many a time French electors, entitled to exercise electoral franchise are debarred from voting on account of their names not being properly written.

Proper names and family names should never be translated in a foreign tongue. The French people never change English names, and English people should not impose on French people names which are not only ridiculous and nonsensical, but offensive and absurd.

The suffrages of the French element of Northumberland county is worth having. It should be respected--surely in these two parishes, officers can be found who could give this small gratification to the French people of the county of Northumberland.

The next premier of N. B. may yet be in need of French votes in Northumberland county and his colleagues as well. Please guard--as late Mick Adams would say--lector.

ROGERSVILLE ELECTOR. July 9th, 1900.

MR. EDITOR:-- In looking over the events of Dominion Day in your valuable paper, I noticed that the speakers of the day, with the exception of Mr. Samuel Thomson, failed to notice the late Senator Adams. And by the way the late Mr. Adams' friends will not forget Mr. Thomson for his thoughtfulness. Whether the omission on the part of the others had any significance or not, I cannot say, but it seems to me, a reprehensible procedure on such an occasion, to land one of Northumberland's noble sons and ignore another. While the Hon. M. Adams will never be seen on earth again, yet the memory of his noble character still exists in the minds of many, and will continue to exist as long as one of his fellow citizens remains alive.

MR. EDITOR:-- Can you tell me when the sidewalks are to be repaired?--CITIZEN.

The Town Council ordered the lumber for the sidewalks sometime ago from a Rogersville man, but it arrived here only a few days ago, and at a time when the council was busily engaged on the streets. The sidewalks will be attended to as soon as possible,--probably within a week. It is not the intention of the council, however, to encourage wooden sidewalk building, as the board is in favor of asphalt sidewalks, and will probably have one laid along Castle street before long.--Ed.

MR. EDITOR:-- Permit me to congratulate you and your readers on the pronounced improvement in your paper, within the last few weeks and more particularly in that of last week. The article "Jossip about Women" must be of interest to every mother and sister and lover of home, which is the real foundation of society. Mrs. Julia Ward Howe's contribution, prognosticating the future, shows that she is really the American Queen and is of inestimable worth to the literature of the times. Your report and description of Dominion day aside from the historical interest attached to it will be greedily devoured by all who have the welfare of Newcastle at heart. Of course there are other features I might refer to but the increase in your subscription list is the best proof that your "Social and Personal" column, is fully appreciated by your intelligent and discerning readers. The fact that an extra edition of last week's issue was exhausted is proof that the Advocate is read in spite of bilious cynics.

I am as ever the friend of the Advocate, its publishers, its editor and its readers. WILLIAM MURRAY. Newcastle, July 10.

LONDON, July 9.--Admiral Bruce has sent a telegram to the Admiralty department from Taku, under date of July 7, to the effect that there are grounds for hoping that Prince Ching with his army is at Peking protecting the legations against Prince Tuan's army and the Boxers.

CHICAGO, July 9.--A special to the Times-Herald from San Francisco says: In regard to the present situation in China, Ho Yow, the Chinese consul general in San Francisco, a diplomat only second in importance to the Chinese minister in Washington says: "The origin of the whole trouble is interfered with our religion in China. I do not question the worthy intentions of the missionaries who have gone there, but they have made the mistake of trying to convert the people who are not educated as a race even to the point of religious toleration. Good missionaries merely waste their energies and incense the people. There is another cause for the present uprising aside from the religious work of the missionaries proselytizing China. It has so happened that whenever a missionary has been injured or killed in the country, the nation which he represented has made the tragedy the occasion for asking grants of lands from the Chinese government. This course, in the eyes of many of our people who are extremely suspicious, has been misconstrued and misrepresented. From a political point of view, it seems to have been a fatal mistake on the part of the powers to have bombarded the Taku forts before they had landed sufficient forces to be able to support that step or follow it up. Instead of relieving the legations in Peking, they aggravated the situation, stirring up an ignorant and maddened people to frenzy. In my opinion, the powers would need an army of about 250,000 men to subdue this one northern province by force.

Should there be a general uprising throughout China before they could do any sort of policing for that great territory, with its four hundred million people, or bring them under subjection, they would require not less than 1,000,000 soldiers, and many millions of dollars would be wasted and many lives be lost before the entire country could be brought under subjection. The zealots are not open to reason, as they are possessed of strange superstitions. Very many of the Boxers, probably by far the larger number, have never in their lives seen a European face and believe implicitly in the horrible things told about foreigners. The Chinamen are well armed, and they are well supplied with weapons of the latest pattern, many of them supplied from our own great arsenals. Shan Tung province is notable for its men of fine physique and stature. This province could probably place in the field 100,000,000 men closely approaching six feet in height. Whatever China may have been in the past, she is no insignificant enemy to cope with to-day. Her strength is formidable, and if it is expended upon invaders the result will be a terrible slaughter. If the members of the legations have been murdered, it cannot bring them back to life by killing in turn. A peaceful adjustment of the difference might be had and compensation secured. Such a policy would save many lives and enormous expenditures on the part of injured nations."

Yours, etc. A FRIEND.

A Circus Man Accustomed To Smoking High Class Cigars, Contented, with a "Stinker."

He wore a fedora that might have been white once upon a time, a stringy red neck tie, pinned together by a large glass pin, which under a blazing sun might be taken a mile away for a diamond, adorned his bosom an ill fitting Prince Albert, that had seen its best days, combined with cracked patent leathers evidenced a strong attempt to be "swagger" looking, so consequently when he asked the drug clerk in a neighboring town, the other day for a thirty five cent cigar he attracted considerable attention. He was a circus man so when he received an answer in the negative, his down cast drawl was heard asking if there were any in town.

"Don't think so replied the compounder of "kill or cure". "Ah well", Give me a five cent cigar. He received it, bit off the end, applied the match and went out puffing as hard as if he held between his teeth one of the Prince of Wales' favorite brand.

The regular monthly meeting of the Town Council was held last Wednesday evening.

The absentees were Ald. Ritchie and Phinney. Minutes were read and approved.

A communication from R. J. Parke, Toronto, asking about electrical plant was on motion of Ald. Hickson laid on the table.

A number of accounts were referred to their respective committees.

The assessors bill was on motion laid over until the next meeting.

A largely signed petition was read asking the council to examine into the necessity and convenience of having a street opened from the east of the gas house to Pleasant street.

Acting on the instructions contained in the By-law passed at last meeting in reference to the issue of debentures your committee advertised for tenders and received offers from the following:--

Slimson & Co., D. R. Laird, E. P. Williston, Amaluis Jarvis & Co.

The tenders of E. P. Williston [for $8,000] and D. R. Laird [for 10,000] being the highest, were accepted. We think there will be no difficulty in placing the other $2,000 on the terms of one of the above tenders."

On motion the report was received and adopted.

Ald. Lounsbury read the following report from the Board of Works:--

A petition has been handed us signed by a large number of ratepayers, asking that a street be opened up from McCullum street to Pleasant street.

Your committee has examined same and think it necessary to open up said street and have taken steps to ascertain cost of land."

On motion the report was received and adopted.

Ald. Lounsbury moved that a committee of three be appointed to take the necessary steps to acquire the Mason property at Brown's and report.

Ald. Hickson, Malby and Lounsbury formed the committee.

On motion the council adjourned until Tuesday night.

Death of Bartholomew Stapleton.

The many friends in this province will learn with regret of the death of Bartholomew Stapleton which occurred at his home in Chatham, Monday morning. His constitution which was a vigorous one up till a few months ago, weakened perceptibly of late, and his death was expected to occur at any time. The funeral took place yesterday afternoon and was one of the largest in the history of Chatham.

Bartholomew Stapleton was born in Devonshire, Eng. in 1812. In the year 1838 he came to Newcastle and entered the employ of the late Daniel Witherall. On the following year his wife and child arrived from England when he went to Chatham and started business for himself, in 1841 he erected the residence in which he lived till the time of his death. He occupied the position of captain of police for a number of years. He was an influential member of the agricultural society from 1845 and was president for many years, and by his sound common sense did much to aid the advance of agriculture in this province.

Use the famous Red Rose Tea.

The following letter appeared in the London, England, "Financier and Bullionist," in its issue of June 25:

To the Editor of The Financier and Bullionist:--

Sir,--A dry dock proposition has come to my notice, to which I feel sure should be given publicity in the interest of the British investor.

Some promoters in St. John, New Brunswick, have obtained a charter for the construction of a dry dock at the Port of St. John, and have been promised subsidies for a term of twenty years by the city of St. John, the Provincial Government of New Brunswick and the Government of the Dominion, aggregating some £5,000; and an effort is now being made to obtain a substantial subsidy from the British Government for a term of years. Under these subsidies the promoters propose to make an issue of bonds to build a dry dock at the Port of St. John, which is not now required, and which the trade of the port does not warrant.

One can understand the British Government aiding the construction of a dry dock at an naval station such as Halifax, but one cannot understand why the British Government should be asked to grant a large subsidy to assist in building and equipping a commercial dry dock at the Port of St. John in opposition to the other docks and wharves now constructed there.

If the British Government grant a subsidy for this proposed dry dock at St. John, New Brunswick--which can only be used for commercial vessels, as St. John can never be a naval station or base--it is establishing a very wide principle of giving aid to Colonial commercial ports, and if it is done in one case, in justice it cannot be refused in others. The door for such subsidies, once having been opened, will be found hard to close.

The subsidy given by the City of St. John--a city of 80,000 people--amounts I believe, to the paltry sum of £300 for twenty years, when the city expects some millions of other people's money to be spent in its midst. This shows the lukewarm local feeling in regard to a dry dock.

It is pertinent to inquire how much capital has been in St. John (a place of considerable wealth) for this purely local enterprise, and how many merchants and shipowners will invest £1 in such a scheme. It is a good thing for the promoters, who will doubtless draw substantial salaries during the life of the subsidies--providing the dock is built; and when the subsidies end they will be too old to trouble themselves much about the money of their investors.

Halifax is the only winter port of Canada and the terminus of an all Canadian line of railway, as opposed to St. John, a terminus of the Canadian Pacific, running partly through United States territory, whose bond privileges may be stopped at any time, as, indeed, has often been threatened. The British Government aided the construction of the dock at Halifax with a substantial subsidy, as it is a naval base; but even with the handsome subsidies from different sources, and a large amount of work done for the navy, I doubt if the Halifax dock has ever declared a dividend.

If the people of St. John and Canada are earnestly desirous of making St. John a great port and meriting the assistance of the British Government in the establishment of shipping facilities, they should reduce the port charges and expenses to vessels--that is, if they ever expect to successfully compete with Halifax and Portland.

Canada as a field for investment of British capital merits the attention of the British public; but a dry dock scheme, such as the one proposed at St. John, New Brunswick, should be received with the greatest caution.--Your obedient servant, June 21st. J. K. L.

Canada's Pulp Wood Trade

A correspondent of The Paper Mill, a prominent British trade journal, makes the following estimate of Canada's foreign trade in pulpwood, pulp and paper: "The value of the exports of pulp was £255,000 last year as against £148,000 in the fiscal year 1897-98 that is, they increased by £107,000. Nearly the whole of this important gain is to be credited to the British market. Last year Britain's imports of pulp from Canada amounted to £124,000, as against only £33,000 the year before, bounding up £101,000 in the single twelvemonth. To put the case otherwise, Britain's imports of Canadian pulp were last year more than four times as great as they were the year before."

London (England) Outlook.

The British and Canadian press have made various comments upon Canada's demand for national recognition, as put forward the other day through the Canadian Commissioner at the Paris Exhibition, the Hon. J. Israel Tarte, who is also, of course, the Minister of Public Works in the Dominion Cabinet and one of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's chief colleagues among French-Canadian statesmen. The question is one of so much public interest in view of the larger place Canada is now taking in Imperial life, that we asked Mr. Tarte to favor us with his views. This he does in the following terms:

"For the thorough understanding of the case to which you allude, it is necessary to give you a short history of what has happened here in connection with the Exhibition. When I came to Paris as Chief Commissioner for Canada, I found out that our country was not recognized as a self-governing country. We were not accredited directly with the French authorities. There was a widespread discontent among our exhibitors and among the members of the staff. Delays and annoyances of all kinds had made the position very difficult. I immediately remonstrated with the Royal Commission, and through Lord Strathcona I called the attention of Mr. Chamberlain to the unfairness with which we were treated. The Secretary of State for the Colonies understood the position at a glance and through his good will and speedy intervention I was accredited directly with the French authorities.

I am afraid that some of the English officials in Paris did not see my action with much satisfaction. I do not include in that category Colonel Jekyll, whom I have always found a perfect gentleman. One good morning I read in Le Matin, a French newspaper, that Mr. President Loubet was going to visit the Trocadero Pavillon. I had not been notified by the French authorities, who I may say immediately, were altogether in the wrong. However, I made preparations to receive the First Magistrate of the Republic. While the President was visiting some other pavilion, I was informed that he would not come through our main door, but would get first into the door of Western Australia on Mauritius, and then would continue his visit through a couple of side doors of the Canadian pavilion. I need not tell you that arrangement not only was not suitable, but was an insult to us, as we have paid 90 per cent. of the colonial building, and our exhibition represents at least 60 per cent. of the whole thing. I would have failed in my duty had I submitted to such a treatment. I protested with every possible energy, and I said that I was not in the habit of receiving by my kitchen door. I had not a word with Colonel Jekyll, who came on the spot as the President was approaching, and whom I invited to receive Mr. Loubet with me, which he did.

In other words, somebody had endeavored to inflict an indignity upon Canada, and I did not submit to it. We are a self-governing country; an exhibition is a matter of business which is not only our right, but our duty, to administer ourselves.

I hope that nobody in England will be scandalized because "La Marseillaise" was played. It would be played at Windsor Castle if Mr. President Loubet was to visit the Queen. It is perfectly true that not only myself, but all the Canadians, French and English, shouted "Vive la France" as it was our duty to do so that occasion.

You are in a position to do a great deal of good in directing public opinion on colonial matters. A big self-governing country like Canada, which has a population of six millions, must not be treated as if we were a lot of children. I know that neither Mr. Chamberlain nor any of your important public men have any such idea. But under-strappers, who have much to do with the general administration of affairs, can do any amount of harm. We have had to suffer a good deal since I have been here.

Perhaps you will permit me to add that on the occasion of the visit of the President they were as many Englishmen as Frenchmen, and every one of them was with me in the stand I took.

I must offer excuse for having written so long, but I was anxious to give you a full explanation, so that you may, when the occasion arises, defend our position, if you agree with me.

J. ISRAEL TARTE. You will never get tired of Red Rose Tea.

Model Bride of Gotham.

The Girl who Hurried up Her Wedding to a Bankrupt.

(From our special correspondent.)

New York, July 4.—

The prolongation of the period officially known as "the season" may be considered entirely due to the ever unexpected and yet never surprising vagaries of our climate.

Once more, therefore, the world of the metropolis finds itself without opera (transferred to London), without more than a dozen theatres where plays and comic operas are given in contradistinction to polite vaudeville, and without other resources for the extermination of an evening than those afforded by the restaurants.

"All New York" is supposed to be settled in the suburbs, but in reality remains in town, clinging to the cold comfort of thrice told theatrical tales before the footlights, and such social changes as may be rung on the kaleidoscopic palm gardens.

A certain contingent of the fashionable world possesses the resource of polo at Meadowbrook, another that of golf at Ardsley and other country clubs, the glory of Tuxedo is great. There is, in fact, a study of contrasts in weddings, and the pages of romance would need to be ransacked to furnish a greater one than that provided by the actual marriages of the moment.

The brides of the day are wedded under different conditions. Had Balasco and De Mille, the old purveyors of what was known as the Mother Goose series of plays at the Lyceum Theatre, been in search of a model for a heroine they could scarcely have found a better one than the young lady who advanced the happy day for her union with the senior partner in the cotton firm that failed for the neat little sum of thirteen millions at such an inopportune moment.

One would call this ceremony which took place within a stone's throw of the Church of St. Thomas eminently a marriage of practical people. The bridegroom, being plunged in the difficulties that follow a crash in business, could only spare the time from Saturday to Monday for the wedding and the briefest of honeymoons. The elaborate ceremony arranged for the last Monday in May and which was to have rivalled—in a smaller spectacular way—the Clark-Morris nuptials, advertised as a "diamond wedding," was, therefore, as promptly abandoned as he had been the farewell bachelor supper.

Out of the crash in cotton there comes still another illustration of woman's devotion calculated to encourage optimists and give the lie to up-to-date pessimism. The world of New York in 1900 seldom witnesses such examples, which are supposed to be peculiar to romance in novels and plays, and to find no counterpart or suggestion elsewhere. Anything unworthy, in a worldly community is always refreshing, and the wife of the senior partner of the defunct firm is already established as a heroine.

Many women would like to follow her example under corresponding conditions, but few women will. This is the era of unexampled luxury and extravagance, when the daughters and sons of money kings are exalted into great personages, and a trousseau purchased in Paris with money made in Montana is "the only wear."

The younger daughter of the much debated "to be or not to be" Senator Clark is, however, exempt from any suspicion of a marriage of interest. Her alliance with "a Morris" is one of affection.

In these wedding fetes, one cele-

WAY.

WORTH.

Charlotte H. Walworth.

On the broad overlooking the Buxton lawn...

He stepped his steps and re-entered...

At that moment he remembered the seal ring...

Who would unravel the knot of this twofold mystery?

CHAPTER IV.

Having nearly arrived at the mature age of 18...

Tom Broxton was a matter of importance...

On the subject of what was or what was not best for Tom...

That had been four years ago. The years have healing properties...

His 11 months of seniority, which counted for little on the calendar...

Fresh from the perusal of an effective letter of thanks...

"Just to think, papa, the dear boy is 18 years old! I suppose he will be putting on all the airs of a grown man...

Her metaphors were somewhat mixed, but as she was preparing her father's second cup of coffee...

ABSOLUTE SECURITY. Genuine Carter's Little Liver Pills.

Must Bear Signature of Scott's Emulsion.

Very small and as easy to take as sugar.

CARTER'S LIVER PILLS FOR HEADACHE, FOR DIZZINESS, FOR BILIOUSNESS, FOR TORPID LIVER, FOR CONSTIPATION, FOR SALLOW SKIN, FOR THE COMPLEXION.

The lawyer, deep in his own matter, glanced up quickly...

"Oh, that was just a figure of speech! I was talking about Tom. I've got an absurdly grateful letter from him...

Her father's head had been lifted just so long as his hand had been extended for the cup of coffee...

"Papa, you know I regard the breakfast hour as my exclusive property. You are breaking my rules."

"You are right, my queen of hearts, as you always are. I beg your pardon for my rude inattention. I am all yours. You were saying?"

"Nothing very profound." She smiled with restored good humor. "I have been wondering what we are going to do with Tom Broxton when he comes back to Mandeville for good..."

Twice during her remarks her father had taken off his glasses, wiped them abstractedly and replaced them on his nose with nervous energy...

"Is there no way of silencing that noise?"

"Dick's yodelling? Certainly. I did not know it annoyed you."

"Father, you must be working too hard. You are horribly nervous of late. I shall have to take you in hand."

"What about Thomas?" Her caressing hand fell of soothing. He drew her hands down with almost a petulant gesture.

"What are you going to do with him when he leaves college and comes home to live? You know we must plan for it."

"Does he want to go?"

"I have not broached it to him as yet. I anticipate no objections on his part. His father was a great traveler in his day. Indeed, I may say he was passionately fond of it."

The lawyer rose from the table with his hands full of letters. A slight frown contracted his forehead, bringing his bushy gray brows almost into contact with each other. He loved this breakfast hour above all the hours of the day. It was full of peace and pleasantness. It was pleasant to look across the table into his child's beautiful, spirited face...

DO YOU FEAR HEART FAILURE? No death comes so suddenly and unexpectedly as that caused by heart failure...

The Old Reliable Remedy for Diarrhoea and Dysentery.

Grandma Mrs. Thos. Sherlock, Arnprior, Ont., recently wrote: 'My little girl, three years of age, was taken very bad with diarrhoea, and we thought we were going to lose her, when I remembered that my grandmother always used Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and often said that it saved her life. I got a bottle and gave it to my child, and after the third dose she began to get better and slept well that night. She improved right along and was soon completely cured.'

lawyer of Mandeville ever had before him. It was pleasant to prolong this communion time.

Presently he would go off to his office, and the sweet music of his darling's voice would be swallowed up in the harsher tones of angry men chaffering for their rights. But just now Olivia was growing a trifle inquisitorial, and it was that which sent him away from the table somewhat abruptly.

"No," he said, standing on the hearth rug; "I have not written to him yet. I don't want the pleasant anticipation of travel to get between him and the closing exercises of his college. I am somewhat apprehensive that Thomas may be lacking in energy."

"I don't know why you say that, papa. His reports from the very beginning have been just splendid. He stands first in all of his classes and—"

"Oh, as a student Thomas has made a fair record, but I should prefer more fire, more vim, more fervor of antic-

"You stupid papa—to want a fretful, puny baby always under your wing!"

Olivia championed the absent with warmth and decision.

"I think you are altogether mistaken, father, and inclined to underrate Tom. His letters to you, I suppose, are more restrained and formal. I see abundant evidence of ambition and of purpose. Tom is essentially well balanced. I have seen plentiful signs of restlessness."

"I hope I have molded him fittingly," said the lawyer, with pious self-gratulation. "Yes, I think he may be called essentially well balanced."

"He is just what I fancy Colonel Broxton was at his age," Olivia resumed, with unconscious point. "He is not one of those tiresome boys who bore you to distraction with wordy vaporings about what they are going to do and be, winding up by doing and being nothing. Moreover, the fact of his being so rich would incline him to deliberation. The spur of necessity is not pricking him to select a career in wild haste. Tom is very rich indeed, is not he, papa?"

Some of his letters slipped from the lawyer's grasp. He stooped to recover them. His sallow face was deeply flushed when he straightened himself almost defiantly. He did not look at Olivia as he answered curtly: "By no manner of means. That is one of the current local fallacies, a great mistake. Thomas's parental expenses have been heavy, and some of his dear father's investments turned out very badly."

Olivia soared superior. "I am rather glad to hear that. Rich young men are so apt to wax conceited and worthless on the strength of their father's hoarding. They lose the incentive to personal endeavor."

Her father regarded this flight with a somewhat acid smile.

"Your worldly wisdom becomes startling, my love. I think I shall have to get you a new doll to dress."

"Doll, indeed?" She mimicked his gravity. "Your capacity for insulting a helpless female becomes startling, my love. I think I shall have to get you a new pair of eyes the better to see, my dear." She came toward him, a riant, sparkling creature, and stood before him with crest uplifted. "Observe the length of my gown, if you please, and the Fyche knot which tops my mature and classic head."

Her father drew her to him almost roughly. "Olivia, you startle me in earnest. You are a young lady. The fact has burst upon me in a second. You are no longer my loving, trusting, unquestioning little darling. You will be measuring your strength with mine, demanding your place at my side rather than under my wing. It frightens me."

She laughed musically up into the furrowed face. "And it delights me. You stupid papa—to want a fretful, puny baby always under your wing in place of a wise young woman by your side! And you naughty papa, to let my eighteenth birthday almost dawn without a breath touching appropriate celebrations!"

"Celebrations?" He repeated the word perplexedly.

"Don't you even know, father, that a girl comes of age when she is 18? She doesn't come into a vote and all that sort of nonsense, but she comes out, and I propose to do that appropriately."

"Appropriately! Why, bless my soul, yes, of course! What shall we do, Ollie?"

"I should like a fete champetre," said Ollie grandly. "Such a fete as the people of the country shall date back to and from for generations to come. I shan't come of age but once in my lifetime, you know, papa."

Her father looked overhead out of the bay window into her garden and upon the grassy terraces intervening between it and the cobblestone street.

The Matthews cottage, perched upon its well kept terraces, was one of the show places of Mandeville, but its dimensions were by no means imposing. In land it was conspicuously cramped.

"A garden party, my love? I believe that is your idea done in English. Do you think our modest little yard?"

She interrupted him with a gay laugh. "Oh, no, papa! That would be absurd, ridiculously so. Over at Tom's house is where I mean to hold my fete. We could give a lovely garden party among the grand old trees on Broxton lawn and such a delicious dance in the long, yellow parlor."

"But the people?"

"The Westovers are expected back from Europe on Monday. I should especially like them to see that one does not have to go abroad to know what to do on occasion. Oh, I want it to be very grand indeed, papa! Miss Malvina Spillman will help me to make it just perfectly lovely. She can act chaperon too. I can make out quite a splendid list of guests."

A strange hesitation seemed to bind her father's tongue. He who was generally eager in his readiness to gratify her slightest wish, stood mute and frowning in face of her very dearest one.

"You have a guardian's right to use the house, papa, haven't you?"

"Yes, Oh, yes, of course!"

"And I know Tom would be only too glad. I shall write for his permission." Still that unfriendly silence. "My heart is quite set upon it, papa."

THE FUTURE OF SOUTH AFRICA.

As the close of the South African war draws nearer, speculation as to the future of the former republics increases. It seems to be a matter, however, that requires little thought. Under British rule the settlement and development of a country are assured. But the restarting of the gold mines and the reopening of the many businesses in Johannesburg, Pretoria and other towns, which were stopped by the outbreak of hostilities, must first claim attention. It may be accepted as a fact that the Boers have done little or no damage to the mines, and in most cases we believe that the plant and machinery are uninjured. The pumping out of the mines will not take long, and any machinery which may have been spoilt or damaged will be replaced from the reserve which nearly all the principal companies have formed during the war. With the Rand in full swing the revival of business in Johannesburg and in Pretoria is merely a question of time. If both these towns could become fairly prosperous under the Boer regime they ought to develop to an extraordinary degree under the new government. Taxation of the mines under the new regime will be on such a scale that the shareholders will not be called upon to suffer any hardships through being required to pay their quota of the cost of the war. The abolition of a number of iniquitous monopolies, the proper regulation of native labor, and the imposition of equitable liquor laws will enable the companies to work low grade ore at a profit, and the revenue obtainable from this source alone should be more than equal to any administrative taxation which the government may impose. The two Boer States will unquestionably be governed honestly and straightforwardly. But the punishment of the irreconcilable element will doubtless be sharp. They, like the rebels of Cape Colony and Natal, will be taught that it is dangerous and unprofitable to take up arms against the authority of the Crown. But those who fought for what they believed a just cause and have been beaten, are entitled to consideration, and they must have it, if we are to have peace in South Africa.

THE SITUATION IN CHINA.

Since we last referred to the trouble in China, the situation has assumed a more serious aspect. The correspondent at Shanghai of the London 'Daily Mail' hasn't the least hesitation in stating that crimes, including the murder of all the European ministers and officials have been committed in Peking, at which when the facts are known the whole civilized world will stand aghast. The correspondent goes on to state that "Official information, when it comes, may even include the awful story of outraged English women and children, and public executions in the streets of Peking of even women and children, a story of frightful atrocity which will shock Europe. It may be almost taken for granted that the whole foreign quarter of Peking has been completely wiped out. "We should understand that the government of China has been entirely superseded by the Boxers," continues the correspondent. "Of my own knowledge, I know for a truth that most of the Manchu princes, with their adherents, generals and troops, are members of the Boxer society, and are busily engaged in recruiting for the cause. This duplicity leads those with a knowledge of things Chinese to the belief that the native officers here, who are unquestionably suppressing the news, are endeavoring to prepare the way, with the least harm to themselves, for the reception of the news of the greatest crime of the century.

'HOBSON' RECEPTIONS.

Despatches to the Canadian dailies, last week, from one or two Ontario towns told of the arrival home of members of the Canadian contingent, and of how they were accorded a "Hobson" welcome. Enough! Two years ago the maidens of the United States made Hobson the laughing stock of the world, and now Canada's fair daughters are following the example of their Yankee cousins—an example which was ridiculed two years ago in Canada from Halifax to Vancouver. Hobson and Dewey are lessons which Canada should profit by.

STEADY THERE!

No wonder Mr. Foster feels blue and speaks acrimoniously. Down in New Brunswick his chances have been steadily diminishing, and the party seems to be disintegrating. Hon. Mr. Tweedie has announced that he will support the Liberals; the Chatham Advance has come out for Laurier and good government, and the Newcastle Advocate hints strongly at a similar change of heart. Mr. Foster has good reason for apprehension as he gazes New Brunswickward.—Hamilton Times.

Say, girls, do you wear the new pompadour nightcap? Its the latest. It is neither more nor less than a lace kerchief tied under the chin; but as it is the "dernier cri" in Paris, you'll have to pretend you like it. With these coquetish head coverings must be worn the irresistible robe de chambre made of the softest silks, and whose ideal charm is copyrighted by the Parisian maker. More anon.

A Chicago paper says of one of the young girl singers of its city, who is now abroad: "It took five women and her own maid to get Fanchon Thomson into a dress in which she sung to Queen Victoria at Windsor. Which suggests that she must have had on a great deal more clothing than most singers affect in the high notes."

St. George Rathburne, in his latest book, "A Goddess of Africa," says that as surely as the world continues to exist, that restless, colonizing Anglo-Saxon race is bound to dominate Africa even as it does North America, Australia and many other quarters of the globe.

A DAY TO THINK.

[From the Baltimore Sun, July 4.] It is most fitting that, amid the tumult and din of today's celebration, much of it meaningless, the thoughtful citizen should earnestly ask himself whether there will be any real liberty or independence, such as the men of 1776 meant to establish on this continent, if we go on in the dates of national extravagance, monopolistic legislation, foreign aggression and entanglement, militarism and imperialism, in which the present administration is leading us.

THE FUTURE OF FRANCE.

(Boston Herald.) Foreign correspondents foresee a speedy return to the empire in France, where they say the people are heartily weary of the political strifes and changes in the republican government. One thing seems almost certain; it is never a king who will rule France, but an emperor with some of Napoleon Bonaparte's blood in his veins? Yes. The experiment of a republic has proved that the nation needs one head capable of wearing the crown, not a Hydra, always making faces at itself. France is disappointed at the effect of the exhibition. It has not cut the ice expected, owing, of course, to the turmoil besetting the powers, and the unrest of Europe generally. Nineteen hundred arrived inopportunely, but the exhibition has served to hold the wearing spirits in leash and give the enemies of the government time to prepare their coup. The middle into which China has thrown all the governments of Europe may delay the change in France, for the powers are too deeply engaged wondering what shall be done next to think of a possible empire nearer home.

Mr. Alfred Austin, the poet laureate has thrown himself open to opprobrium through the appearance of a poem on the relief of Mafeking. The critics on this side of the water have pounced upon the poem with great glee and it has afforded lots of amusement to the Bro Boer Press. Harper's Weekly in criticising Mr. Austin's Pegasus says:—"We imagine that Baden-Powell himself will feel sorry that Mafeking has been relieved, when he reads Mr. Austin's lines about his achievement.

The verses, as originally telegraphed to the American press were as follows:

Lo! yelled the bullet's ping,
Sharp flashed the sabre's sting,
As on to Mafeking
Sped we with force meet,
While the brave garrison,
Steady by trench and gun,
Faltered not, no not one,
Living on horse-meat!

Oh! when they saw us come,
Drubbed well was every drum,
And shrill the life's tum-tum
Poured till the ear split!

Grimly the foe retired;
Nathless he frequent fired,
Till heated, moody, mired,
His van and rear split!

As pressed the foe more near,
Only with naked spear,
N'er knowing what to fear,
Parley or blench meant;
Forward through shot and shell,
While still the foremost fell,
They with resistless yell,
Stormed his intrenchment.

Then when hope dawned at last,
And fled the foe aghast,
At the relieving blast,
Hard in the molly;
Oh! our stout, stubborn kith,
Kimberley, Ladysmith,
Mafeking wedded with
Lucknow and Delhi.

It is McKinley and sound money, pro-British and expansion. It is Bryan and 16 to 1—pro-Boer and anti trust.

Although 16 to 1 has been specially declared for the platform of the Democrats, it is to be relegated to the rear.

They are betting 6 to 4 on McKinley against Bryan in New York.

CAPT. SANTIAGO

The World's Highest and Longest Diver.

This astonishing individual, Captain Santiago, uses no parachute, like ordinary, everyday aeronauts; he leaps into no river's open bosom, like your tiresome bridge jumpers; he carries no let-me-down-easy balloon paraphernalia, but simply ascends the towering structure, the climbing of which alone is a feat few men would undertake, and reaches the summit of the very topmost pinnacle, appearing to those far below him no larger than an eagle on a mountain's crest. He shouts gaily, throws out his arms, bends forward slowly over the great, frightful, yawning, gaping space between him and the earth, ever so far below him; plunges down, down, down, falling swiftly as the swallow darts; coming rushing, sweeping trackless through the awful void, heels top, head down—surely, every frightened observer thinks, to instant death. Suddenly he turns; swift as lightning is the turn made, and as swiftly made back again, and for many yards this fearless, fighting fireman turns somersaults—He suddenly makes his body rigid, and seems to stop his fight momentarily by doing so. Now he loosens again and descends slower, and with an agility scarcely to be believed, even when seen, he lands safe and sound. Capt. Santiago can be seen by all, free as the air you breathe, doing this twice—once in the morning, once in the evening—on the circus grounds at Newcastle on July 17th with Lemen Brothers' World's Monster Shows.

LOVE FINDS A WAY.

Continued from 3rd page. Her father's surrender was sudden, but complete. "Then so is mine," he said almost violently, lifting her sweet face near enough to kiss her on both cheeks. "So it is settled. We will have our garden party over at Broxton Hall, and I will stop there this evening as I drive home from Rosecliff to give orders about having the house opened and properly aired. A good deal of weed chopping will be needed."

"Oh, I forgot court was in session! You mustn't papa! You ought to have been in Rosecliff half an hour ago. I am going to send Reuben over with the ponies for Miss Malvin. I am dying to talk with her all about the affair." And she dismissed him with a shower of kisses and the injunction: "Don't be late in getting back, papa. There is so much to see about."

The day held more than its full quota of trials for the iron-winded man who never yielded a point to anything living but the soft dimpled child who held his very heartstrings in her careless grasp.

Night had fallen before he mounted his horse and turned its head toward seven lonely miles stretched between him and Mandeville. He gladly would have foregone the stop at Broxton Hall on his way home, but he had promised Olivia, and that was enough. When he reached the outer gate to the gloomy old mansion, he dismounted and, flinging his bridle rein over the horse rack, made his way on foot up the crumbling brick walk, slimy now from the dense shading of the untrimmed cedars.

There would be much to do in order to make Olivia's birthday a success, but it should be done. The cedars must be trimmed up tomorrow and the brick walls all scraped clean.

Reaching the house, he made a circuit around it. In a remote corner of the large back yard he knew he should find the care-taker and his wife. He would give them general directions for opening the house, sunning the rooms and clipping the cedars. That must do for tonight, just by way of keeping his promise to Olivia.

He was tired, harassed, unhappy; but, whatever befell, the shadows that sometimes crowded thick and fast about his own resolute head should not in fold here. To make Olivia happy was the law of his life, the mainspring of his every action, his one earthly desire.

The care-taker and his wife had closed their cottage for the night and were preparing to retire when his knock startled them. He heard them draw the bolt with reluctant caution to answer his summons.

"What! Not abed thus early, Simon?" "Not just abed, sir, but since the master's been gone Jess and me are jus' as willin' as not to lock up early and shut things out. It be awful lonesome and gloomsome here now. Mr. Matthews, and unless things brighten up when Mr. Tom gets through school in I doubt if Jess and me can hold on at this gate."

And then Mr. Matthews told Simon how he was going to break the gloom spell by a garden party on his daughter's birthday, and Simon espoused his cause gladly. Broxton Hall used to be a happy and a gay house.

"Anything to bring back the old gladness, sir?" Mr. Matthews gave his orders about opening the house, clipping the cedars, etc. When he turned away, he heard the old man promptly bolt the door again, and as the wooden shutters were of solid boards the little cottage immediately offered but a dark, square bulk for observation. He returned as he had come. Making the circuit of the house from rear to front, by the side on which Colonel Broxton's study was located, involuntarily he glanced upward at the closed shutters, then started and stood still, wondering. A faint light, so faint that it might have been a phosphorescent glimmer, shone through the slats of the dark green shutters.

Whatever else his shortcomings, physical cowardice was not among them. Some one was in the Broxton house and in the colonel's study. To go back for Simon would be useless. He would not come. He must depend upon his own address and his own nerve.

Stealing noiselessly to the front of the house, the lawyer mounted the low front steps and tried the front door handle softly. It was locked. With a strong grip he next seized one of the shutters of the long French windows that opened from the parlor to the ve-

A Victim of Piles

For 20 Years—A Constant Sufferer From Bleeding and Protruding Piles—Cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment. In vain did Mrs. Jas. Brown, of Hintonburg, near Ottawa, search for a cure for piles. In Europe and America she tried every remedy available, but it remained for Dr. Chase's Ointment to effect a cure.

Mrs. Brown writes:—"I have been a constant sufferer from nearly every form of piles for the last twenty years, and during that time both here and in the Old Country have tried most every remedy. I am only doing justice to Dr. Chase's Ointment when I say that I believe it to be the best remedy obtainable for bleeding and protruding piles. I strongly recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to mothers, or indeed to any person suffering from that dread torment—piles. Physicians and druggists recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment as the one preparation that will never fail to cure piles. It is guaranteed to positively cure piles, whether itching, bleeding, or protruding. 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates and Co., Toronto.

Dizzy Spells and Headache

Weak, Nervous, and Run Down, would Shake with Nervousness—A Terrible Case—A Remarkable Cure.

Mrs. Chas. H. Jones, Pierceton, Que., writes:—"For years I have been a great sufferer with my heart and nerves. I would take shaking spells and a dizzy, swimming feeling would come over me. Night after night I would never close my eyes, and my head would ache as though it would burst. At last I had to keep to my bed, and though my doctor attended me from fall until spring, his medicine did not help me."

"I have now taken five boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and it has done me more good than I ever believed a medicine could do. Words fail to express my gratitude for the wonderful cure brought about by this treatment."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food makes pale, weak, nervous men, women, and children strong, healthy, and happy. In pill form, 50 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

many idlers. Miss Greenfield, whose dressmaking had been found good enough for Mrs. Colonel Broxton and for this very Miss Matthews' mother, didn't see where the good of the town was being consulted when nobody this side of New York could make a good enough dress for the coming out heiress. That was what they called her, "the heiress," and Lawyer Matthews' reckless expenditure of money on the coming fete warranted any amount of wildness in the matter of nomenclature and conjecture.

Miss Malvina had been retained as general superintendent of the whole magnificent business. She was to act as Miss Matthews' chaperon on the occasion. She had been privileged to select the very sample the gown had been made from, all of which invested her with an importance she could never otherwise have achieved.

The Spillman cottage became the most popular resort in the neighborhood. The few who had been bidden and the many who only expected to enjoy the fete through the medium of their ears all found urgent call to the cottage.

"Mother" Spillman's cottage was virtually on the Broxton grounds. It had originally been built for the porter's lodge to Broxton Hall by a wealthy Englishman, who, having invested largely in some tile factories on this side, fancied he should like to live in close proximity to them.

It was a fancy that died in its early infancy, and the lodge, with all that appertained thereto, passed into the ownership of the late Colonel Broxton's father, a stockholder in the same company. The Englishman returned to the country where porters and porters' lodges were a general necessity, and the little lodge was closed up.

When the Rev. Isham Spillman was called to preach and to teach in the neighborhood of Mandeville, the porter's lodge had been donated by Tom's grandfather for a parsonage. When the Rev. Isham died, full of years and honor, it was decided that his venerable widow should live on in the pretty cottage and call it hers.

The womankind of the Broxton family and of the Spillman had always been the best of friends, and now that there was no womankind left in the Broxton family Miss Malvina and her mother felt a hovering sort of interest in the lonely boy representative of what had once been the most important family in the county. It was natural that Miss Malvina should have a hand in things connected with Broxton Hall.

Mrs. Spillman held that nothing short of Tom's own marriage would have warranted such a turning upside down of things, adding indignantly, "I suppose all Mrs. Broxton's silver and china will be used just like it was their own."

Miss Malvina sounded a placating note. "Oh, that's all right, mother. Olive wrote to Tom that she wanted to have her birthday celebration on his grounds, and he wrote back he would be only too glad to have her chase the shadows out of the old house, to use everything as freely as if it was her own."

"Trust them for doing that; but, as for her chasing the shadows out, that's more she can do, Malvina—more anybody can do. They are gathering thicker and blacker and heavier, and the storm will burst over that poor boy's head without one friendly voice to give him warning."

"Dear me, mother, how do you worry over Tom! He's all right. His father trusted Mr. Matthews if you don't. Give him warning of what?" Miss Malvina performed as many of her daily duties within reach of her mother's ear trumpet as was practicable. It saved time and steps. Just then she was hurriedly buttoning up her stoniest pair of boots. They would be waiting for her up at the Hall. There was no end of things still to be done.

The stand for the band was to be decorated, and Jess would be wanting to know how many turkeys were to be dressed, and all that cut glass was to be washed. Glancing up from her low stool, she saw something that made her stare curiously—marks of damp yellow clay on the soles of her mother's ample Oxford ties, which were crossed conspicuously on the hassock in front of the chair. She fired an indignant protest through the old lady's ear trumpet.

"Mother, you have been walking about out of doors without your rubbers." "Rubbers! Out of doors! Walking about! Who says so? Who saw me? What are you talking about, Malvina Spillman?" Her voice was so shrill and her manner so excited that Miss Malvina looked at her in growing alarm. "Mother is certainly turning queer."

Aloud she said soothingly: "Well, you've got a right to growl around if you feel like it, mummer. I only don't like you to go out without overshoes. Good old ladies are getting scarce, and I want to keep mine a great many years to come."

"Oh, I'm all right, child! What made you think I had been out of the house?" "Clay on the soles of your shoes, and your white flannel wrapper is all bedraggled about the hem, mother."

A look of intense cunning came into the faded eyes. The old woman chuckled audibly. "Well, you are one for finding a body out. I thought I heard somebody at the chicken coop last night, Malvina."

"You heard, mother?" "Oh, I'm not as deaf as you think I am nor as blind neither! Why, I could go from here up to the Hall the darkest night that ever came and go all over the house without stumping a toe, if I wanted to."

"I hope you won't want to, mother." "Just then, with a swish of starched petticoats and a catching of hurried breath, Mrs. Deb Lyons presented herself in the cottage doorway. She had a roll of cloth in her hands.

"I just thought I would stop over Miss Malvina, and ask you if I might run up Johnny's breeches on your machine. Mine's got the very old mischief in it, and the child'll dis'outright or go plum crazy if he don't have a pair of new breeches to wear to the coming out party."

"Is your Johnny invited to the party?" asked "Mother" Spillman, with a slight infusion of sarcastic incredulity in her voice. "Not that he ain't good enough."

Mrs. Deb laughed frankly. "After a fashion, he's invited. Miss Olive told him if he would fix up real nice he might pass lemonade around among the folks. He is in her Sunday school class, you know. She is a real sweet young lady. My, but what an affair it is going to be! They say Miss Olive's dress is going to outshine anything Miss Jeanne Westover's fetched over from Paris."

"I'd be rather glad," said Malvina in consequence, "to have you sit with mother while I'm gone." Then, with lowered tones: "She's been so restless lately. I don't know what she'll be up to when she's alone. I have put the machine in the back room so that I can sew when mother's asleep. Sometimes I think she hears the buzz."

"I'll watch her. Thanks for the machine. I guess you'll be on hand before I have to get back home to see about Deb's dinner."

"Oh, yes, long before then." And Johnny's mother passed into the shed room, closing the door between.

"I'm going now, mother. I won't stay any longer than I'm obliged to," said Malvina. She bent a few moments later and kissed the withered forehead. She omitted to announce Mrs. Lyons' occupancy of the shed room. Nothing irritated the old woman more than to be put under surveillance, and after that recent outburst discretion was advisable. To Mrs. Lyons Malvina spoke a final word of caution.

"She can't hear the machine in here nor see it neither unless she was to come across the room and look into the shed room for something. She ain't likely to do that. Sometimes her eyes do her a good turn. It might vex her if she thought you were watching her."

"All right," said Mrs. Lyons, dropping into a husky whisper. "I'll be as still as a mouse." Left to herself, as she imagined, "Mother" Spillman developed an activity that made Mrs. Lyons forget all about her Johnny's breeches as she sat with her hand on the wheel and her eyes stretched wide with astonishment. Presently she stole from the machine and glued her eyes to a crevice in the wall.

Rising from her chair, the old woman began feebly shaking its cushions about with quick, impatient motions. Getting down on her knees, with outspread hands she felt over the entire surface of the chair. Evidently keen disappointment was the only result. Whatever she was looking for she did not find. With a sigh of discouragement she finally rose to her feet, a tall, gaunt, masculine figure, and stood with folded hands gazing down upon the vacant chair, muttering audibly:

"Lost, lost, lost! And it is my fault. Somebody has stolen it. Poor Tom, poor liddle, I'm the only friend you've got left! I'll find it, Tom, trust me. I promised your mother I'd be a friend to you, and I will be. I'll find it, Tom. I'll never give over till I do."

A fluttering sigh, and the tall form dropped back upon the cushions, the white head drooped upon the breast, and "Mother" Spillman was soon lapped in sudden slumber, so profound and so prolonged that Miss Malvina had been home half an hour before she was aware of it.

Mrs. Lyons considered it her duty to report the strange episode of the cushion-heating and the dreamy monologue to Miss Malvina, who looked anxious and perplexed.

"Mother has been acting so queer lately that I think I'll have the doctor up to see her after all this excitement is over."

"I surely would if she was my mother," said Mrs. Lyons, "and the sooner the better," having ministered which dubious comfort she folded Johnny's completed breeches in a tight little bundle and trotted briskly home to see about Deb's dinner.

Miss Malvina was glad to think the excitement would all be over in two days from that time. She was neglecting her mother and leaving her too much time to brood in. Then she tried on her new gown again.

TO BE CONTINUED. B.B.B. Cures Ringworm. "I had ringworm on my head for nearly a year. I consulted three doctors but derived little or no benefit from their treatment. I then commenced to use Burdock Blood Bitters. Besides taking it internally I washed the affected parts with it and when the bottle was finished I was completely cured." NEWCASTLE. CHATHAM.

was constructed on the... it was an impossibility... these so completely as to... the milk intended for... from churning owing to the... of the train or boat and... which has so detrimental an effect... on the milk, making it "buttery" or sour, according to the season of the year. To obviate these grave disadvantages milk dealers have resorted to chemicals or "preservatives" which rob the fluid of its natural flavor and nutritious qualities and are also detrimental to the health of the consumers. As a consequence such great dissatisfaction has arisen that the sanitary authorities have taken the matter up, and prosecutions have followed in many of the large cities, and heavy penalties have been imposed.

The main feature of this new invention consists of an arrangement whereby after the can is full in the ordinary sense an airtight lid is compressed by means of a cross bar and thumbscrew, which causes the milk to represent a perfectly solid body and therefore will not "swilker," to use the common term of the farmer. Thus the necessity of resorting to preservatives is obviated.

Effie Brown, writing in The American Agriculturist, says; "Many families who keep but from one to three cows to furnish milk and butter for their own use only would find it very convenient to be able to keep the surplus butter of June and July till the following January and February and still have it good. Of course dairymen with all their conveniences can do this easily, but the amount of "cooking butter" always in the market testifies a lack of knowledge somewhere. Butter that will keep so good you can't tell it from that freshly made can be made without ice, a separator or creamery cans. I will tell you how to do it.

"I suppose it is unnecessary to mention cleanliness, but there will be no harm in reminding butter makers that it is about the most important thing about the work. The very heart of the secret of making butter that will keep a long time is the age of the cream and its temperature. Set in common tin pans in an ordinary cool cellar, the cream should be skimmed 36 hours from the time it was set and then kept not longer than four days in cool weather and two in hot.

"If a pan of milk is missed and the cream gets old, do not skim it for butter, use it in cooking. If it goes into the churn, it will spoil that churning for keeping and if packed with other butter will spoil that also. When the burning is delayed, use the butter at once, even if it does taste and look all right. There's no use in trying--it won't keep. Have the cream cool enough so that the butter will come in granules. When about the size of peas, draw off the butter-milk and wash well, salt well and pack in crocks. If the butter becomes soft and frothy, the quicker you can get it out of sight the better. Not the least bit of use to try to fix that up to pack.

"In packing fill your jars to within two inches of the top with butter, then put in a layer of salt one inch thick and pour on enough water to just cover the salt. This will make it practically airtight. Cover with a cloth, then paper and a board and weight. Examine packed butter once each month and pour in more water if there has been much evaporation."

MINARD'S LINIMENT Cures Diphtheria.

Twice the dowager empress of Russia has saved her husband's life. One day when in the emperor's dressing room she observed that on his dressing table lay a curious looking jewel case. Something about its appearance aroused her curiosity, and taking it up she became aware that it was extremely heavy. Without saying a word she went into her room and placed it carefully in a basin of water. Then sending for the perfect of police, whose duties kept him much about the palace, she begged him to have it examined, and it was discovered to be one of the most marvelous infernal machines ever invented by the ingenuity of man.

The second occasion on which the empress was directly instrumental in stopping murder occurred in the Winter palace, when she heard a slight noise, which indicated the presence of some stranger in the czar's study. Without betraying the slightest anxiety she begged her husband to come and speak to one of the children. He did so. She locked the door and only gave up the keys to a party of soldiers, who found that some one had just escaped through the window.

Friendship between young men and young women beset with difficulties and perils and unions destined to inevitable shipwrecks are entered into between two sexes who know nothing more of one another's point of view, virtues and vices than can be obtained by the most superficial conversation of the drawing room. But a young man who has the privilege of knowing an experienced yet smiling woman of middle age, who will temper his roughness, comprehend his frailties and encourage and console him, while perennially revealing her own springs of conduct will give him an education for the married life into which he will ultimately embark that can never be achieved by clubroom philosophy or travel or books or any other of the instruments that act as conscious or unconscious influences upon our action. The candor and directness that young men and women are incapable of exercising in their intercourse with one another become possible when one party to the friendship has reached that stage of life wherein knowledge is no longer obscured by passion, and if there were no other justification for middle age it ought to be found in its capacity for supplying young people with a knowledge of the divergencies and resemblances between the sexes that are unattainable by any other kind of teaching.

All filigree work in paper, a favorite pastime of our great-grandmothers, still tempts a few skilled adepts, who send to most women's work-exhibition charming specimens of their handicraft. The difference between filigree work obtained with either gold or silver wire and paper is not clear to many who fail to understand the real meaning of the term filigree. It is an Italian word, which designates first a thread or wire (fil) and then a grain or bead (grano) or grano. Now, the delicate wire employed in the making of lace like jewels and trinkets of Genoa and Malta fame was in due time supplemented by a more substantial decoration for home items by a stiff baby ribbon or strip of paper in several shades and with gift or silver edges, plain or serrated, which is likewise deftly twisted into spirals, almond lozenges and other convoluted forms, but applied edgewise on relief on some firm foundation, generally protected by glass. The idea originated no doubt from the well known watermarks formerly stamped on paper by means of some wire device, which explains the vermicelli or wavy background in which are imbedded most of the detached sprigs and geometrical designs conspicuous on many of the old and modern examples of paper filigree. In this wise are decorated the tops of occasional tables, entire jewel caskets, lace boxes, vases, etc. A small but lovely circular mahogany frame for miniature or photo was recently made.

A woman should keep in mind the following rules:

Business letters must be concise and clear, because business people are supposed to be busy.

No letter is complete without the date.

In writing to solicit employment of any kind on no account should personal perplexities or needs be mentioned. The world is full of unfortunate persons, and to a stranger the troubles of one are no more than those of a host of others.

Elaborately ornamented note paper and highly perfumed notes are vulgar.

When answering letters, remember:

That written words stand as everlasting witnesses.

That an ambiguous sentence is likely to be misinterpreted.

That friendly words never harm.

That a written word of sympathy can sometimes do much good.

That a letter written in a kindly spirit should be answered in the same way, even though the message is disliked.

That business letters and invitations must be answered at once.

That one should acknowledge any friendly offer of hospitality, even if it be not by acceptance.

Years of Agony.

RESULTING FROM SCIATICA IN AGGRAVATED FORM.

Many Nights the Sufferer Could Not Lie in Bed, and His Leg was frequently Swollen to Twice Its Natural Size.

From the Journal, S., Catharine.

Mr. John T. Benson, stationary engineer at the Ridley College, St. Catherine's, is known by most of the residents of the city. For years Mr. Benson suffered acute agony from sciatica, and not withstanding numerous forms of treatment, found little or no relief, until he began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills speedily restored his health, as they have done that of thousands of others who have given them a fair trial. To the reporter who interviewed him Mr. Benson said: "I certainly owe a debt of gratitude to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, for they have released me from a form of torture that had afflicted me almost continuously for twenty years. The pain began first in my back, then shifted to my hip, and thence down my leg. It became so severe that it seemed as though the very marrow in my bones was being scalded, and at times I could scarcely repress a cry aloud from the agony I suffered. I tried all sorts of liniments and lotions, but got no relief. I doctored with several physicians, even going to Buffalo for treatment by a specialist there, but in no case did I ever receive more than temporary relief. It may be easily imagined that the pain I endured told upon me in other ways and I became almost a physical wreck. At times my right leg would swell to nearly twice its normal size. Then the pain and swelling would shift to my left leg, and the agony was something awful. I suppose that I was afflicted I have hundreds of times laid on my back on the floor with my foot and leg elevated on a chair in order to obtain slight ease from the pain I endured. The muscles and sinews in my leg looked as though they had twisted and tied in knots. The trouble went on in this way until finally nothing but opiates would deaden the pain. A few years ago I read of a cure in a similar case through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and decided to try them. For some time after I began their use, I could not see that they were helping me, but I decided that I would give them a fair trial. By the time I had used half a dozen boxes, there was a decided improvement in my case, and I continued the use of the pills until I had taken twelve boxes, when I felt my cure was complete. Several years have since passed and I have had no return of the trouble, so that I feel safe in saying that the cure has been permanent. I may also add that my wife has used the pills for indigestion, headaches and dizziness, and has found great benefit in them. Words cannot express the great benefit Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been to me, and I hope similar sufferers will profit by my experience."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure by going to the root of the disease. They renew and build up the blood, and strengthen the nerves, thus driving disease from the system. If your dealer does not keep them they will be sent postpaid at 50c a box, or six boxes for $2.50, by addressing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

As a good deal of modern dairymen is becoming specialized it may be said that we will soon have special breeds for certain lines of dairymen, says E. P. Smith in the American Cultivator. In a sense the Jersey breed represents just such a specialty, and she can do her best only when in her proper place. It is a mistake to think that the Jersey is the fancy dairymen's cow and for the wealthy farmer who goes into the business largely for the pleasure of it likewise it is far from the truth to say that the Jersey is suited to any dairy. The animal is a practical and useful one on every dairy where good food, good care and scientific treatment are observed. This presupposes an intelligent knowledge and the needs of this particular breed. The animal is not a hardy or rough one, and it will not stand neglect and abuse. Take a fine record breaking Jersey milker and turn her out to find a living on rough pasturage, and she will soon grow thin and cadaverous and gradually decrease her rich milk. She is not adapted to such a life. Neither will she stand exposure to a rough climate in any kind of weather. She needs more protection and care. We have cows that will endure any kind of usage, food and weather and still seem to thrive. They are suited to the prairie life, to farms where little attention is paid to modern careful methods of dairymen. But if a man has only enough stock to occupy his time so that he can give all the attention needed to each animal the Jersey will probably give him better returns than any other breed.

The strenuous measures adopted and under consideration in many of the cities of Europe and America to prevent the sale of milk in which preservatives have been used to keep it from souring in transit have set the wits of British inventors to work to devise some plan to obviate the necessity of resorting to such means, and a newly patented milk can is the result.

It was Capt. Sargeant and not Capt. Lawlor who assisted Major Matby in the parade last week. The other gentlemen who assisted were Lieut. Aitken, Sergt-Maj. Toncnie and Sergt. Jones.

His Excellency, Mgr. Djonede Falconio, the highest dignitary in the Catholic Church in Canada has been warmly welcomed to St. John by clergymen and laity. Since Saturday evening he has been the guest of His Lordship Bishop Sweeney at the palace and Sunday took prominent place in the service at the cathedral.

A correspondent writes that the passenger steam boat service on the Miramichi this summer is giving every satisfaction. The steamer Miramichi runs daily between Newcastle and Point Escominac under command of Capt. A. R. Goodfellow, who is a popular officer. Purser George Thompson supplies an excellent table and passengers receive every attention.—Telegraph.

The presbytery of St. John on Tuesday last with closed doors, dismissed Rev. J. S. Mullin, of Stanley, York Co., from the ministry. Mullin has defied the presbytery for years and is said to be backed by the greater part of his flock. He ignored the summons to attend the meeting and was not present. His offence consisted in defying the presbytery in regard to the ownership of church property in the town.

An interesting event took place in the R. C. Church, St. Jean Evangelist, by the Rev. Father Drapen, last week, when Miss Mary Connors of Miguasha, was married to Mr. Thos. Hayes, of Miramichi. The happy couple drove to Carleton and from there took the Steamer Admiral for Gaspe. They returned home Thursday to Miguasha where they will make their future home.—Telegraph.

The ladies of the Methodist Church intend holding a Social on their Church grounds on Thursday, 19th inst. Full particulars next week.

Rava's, "Humpty Dumpty," company occupied the stage of the Masonic Hall Monday evening. The performance is made up of pantomime and vaudeville and is full of side splitting acts and situations. A person would be a churl indeed, who would not laugh at the funny sayings and ludicrous situations. The acrobatic work and the buck and wing dancing were features of the show.

The new woman has found a new vocation. The "bike" is too tame for her, the saddle altogether too tame for her. She is surely ahead of her time, and any one who doubts it and wishes to be convinced can have proof positive when Lemen Brothers, World's Monster Shows, Great Three Ring Circus, 30-Cage Menagerie, Roman Hippodrome, Monster Museum, Oceanic Aquarium and Congress of Living Phenomena will exhibit.

The checks for the payment of the Masonic hall arrived here on Monday. The building will be at once converted into a drill hall, so our chances of seeing a show here for sometime are slight. It is to be hoped some enterprising citizen will erect a suitable play house. Newcastle is a good show town, and a hall would, unquestionably, prove a paying investment. A rink on the first floor and a theatre up stairs would insure the financial success of such an institution. Let some of our wealthy citizens take hold of the matter at once.

A brilliant Jewish wedding took place in Chatham Sunday afternoon. The contracting parties were Mr. M. Tarter and Miss Freds Schachter. The ceremony which was performed by Rabbi Rabinowitz of St. John was held at the residence of Mr. Charles Schachter. A large number of friends of the contracting parties were present, and after the ceremony an elaborate supper was served. The house was tastefully decorated with lovely plants and exotic flowers. The happy couple will spend their honeymoon in New York and vicinity. Many useful and costly presents were received.

Mgr. Falconio, Delegate Apostolic to Canada, will arrive here next Wednesday from St. John. He will be met at the station by St. Michael's band and a committee, and escorted to the Bishop's residence. At 7 o'clock in the church, a joint address from the clergy and laity will be presented to him, to be followed by benediction. His Excellency will hold a reception in the Bishop's parlor later in the evening. He goes from here to Bathurst on Friday. Mgr. Falconio comes as the direct and personal representative of the Pope. He is an Italian, but speaks English fluently.—World.

The Weekly Commercial published in Chatham printed a scurrilous article last week about the purser on the Newcastle ferry boat. The item, which was headed "A Miserable Purser," insinuated that the collector of fares on this boat had stolen 75 cents from a lady passenger. Mr. Russell has been engaged in steamboating on the Miramichi for thirty-seven years and bears a reputation for honesty, which the Commercial man, might copy with beneficial results. The article was ridiculous to say the least but at the same time it is extremely irritating to be talked about in such a manner, even by an unprincipled and unreliable scribbler. It is understood Mr. Russell has retained Mr. E. P. Williston and that proceedings will be immediately instituted against the Commercial's editor.

I had a dream the other night
When everything was still,
I dreamt that every subscriber
Came in to pay his bill.
Each wore a look of honesty,
Sweet smiles were in each eye,
And as they handed over the stamps,
They yelled, 'How is that for high'—Ex.

THE FORCE OF HABIT.
The Filipino soldier fell upon his knees. "Oh, senor!" he cried, "have you no mercy?" Private Smith of the Pennsylvania volunteers, who had been a drug clerk at home, looked down upon him coldly. "No," he replied from sheer force of habit, "but I have something just as good." Thereupon he gave it to him.—Philadelphia Press.

FAREWELL SERMON

Mr. Fisher Occupies the Pulpit of the METHODIST CHURCH

In Newcastle for the Last Time as its Pastor--An Able Discourse.

Rev. George Fisher preached his farewell sermon in the Methodist church, on Sunday evening. Mr. Fisher took as his text St. Matthew xxvi chapt. and 40th and 45th, verses--And he cometh unto the disciples and findeth them asleep, and saith unto Peter, What! could ye not watch with me one hour? Then cometh he to his disciples and saith unto them, sleep on now, and take your rest: behold, the hour is at hand, and the son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners.

Mr. Fisher discoursed chiefly on the necessity of doing something for Christ. He began by reminding the congregation that Christ was human as well as divine. He wanted sympathy. His human heart yearned for human sympathy. Christ picked out three of his disciples to sympathize with him in his great sorrow, to be near him in his great sorrow. But instead his three chosen disciples slept when he wanted their comfort. Christ visits them and finds them sleeping. He says to them: "What could you not watch with me one hour?" He comes the second time and finds them sleeping, but says nothing; the third time he visits them and finds them sleeping. He says--"Sleep on and take your rest."

Mr. Fisher then told of the different constructions which had been put on these words of Christ's. But whatever exigencies had been placed on the passage, it was clear an opportunity had been afforded and lost to the disciples to do something for Christ. We condemned the disciples in this position, but after all this was a very sleepy world. Generation after generation was found treading in the footsteps of the apostles. Our opportunities for serving the Master might not be of as precise a nature, but nevertheless there were opportunities. Life was rich with them. There were needy and sorrowful hearts all around us, calling us for aid, to watch with them, and if we accepted we would be serving Christ as much as if we had been in the disciples' place. The helping of man was the best way of serving God. "What are we doing in this world of suffering humanity?" asked the preacher. There were Christ's helpless and needy ones all around us calling today as loudly as Christ called to his disciples. "How many opportunities there are for us?" That to wait for a special opportunity was to wait for it when it came. It was for us to do our duty when it came, and then we would be ready for a special opportunity when it came. If we all looked out for and prayed for opportunities, how many there would be awaiting us! How few Christians there were, who threw themselves wholly into the service of Christ. Helping and sympathizing with struggling humanity was Christ's constant vocation. Mr. Fisher then took up the other phase of the text. Not only did opportunities for service present themselves, but opportunities would soon be past. How pathetic was the position of the disciples as we found it. They had no longer the opportunity. The same would soon come to us all. "There is no more awful punishment that can come to man, when he looks back upon the lost opportunities of his life. Let us awake and put on our strength in the work for the Master. To lose our venture in the higher service of the Master, means much to us and much to others. Let us not be found sleeping with the door of opportunity open for us. Let us remember that that door may be closed, and the opportunities may never again be offered. You and I are passing day by day golden opportunities for doing and receiving good. We neglect them, pass them by, never to meet them again."

It was an able discourse and held the close attention of the congregation throughout. Mr. Fisher said his removal came as unexpected to him as it did to the congregation. He had left himself entirely in the hands of the stationing committee of the conference. He realized that he was going to a more arduous and responsible position and his resignation in God. Mr. Fisher, his voice of the past, was heard in the words of the good

Bright Letters From Advocate Readers.

' IDEES VARIEES '

On Recent Events on the Miramichi and Vicinity.

EDITOR UNION ADVOCATE:-- DEAR SIR:--The "Moniteur Acadian," a French paper edited at Shediac, N. B., publishes a list of the revisors appointed by the provincial government and makes the remark that in the parish of Alnwick and Rogersville, English speaking officers were appointed to the exclusion of French speaking ones.

It is important that all family and christian names should be spelled and written properly and according to the dialect of each nationality. In those two parishes, especially in Rogersville, all the electors with very few exceptions are of French origin and they are entitled to their right of preserving their family names. If revisors and census takers are not competent to give the French people that privilege and right, it is a wrong inflicted on those loyal citizens by the government, in appointing officers unable to spell and write their names as they should be. It often happens that the electoral lists are absurdly and shamefully made up; the spelling of French names is ridiculously made, showing great ignorance on the part of the officers in charge and a gross insult to deserving citizens. Many a time French electors, entitled to exercise electoral franchise are debarred from voting on account of their names not being properly written. Proper names and family names should never be translated in a foreign tongue. The French people never change English names, and English people should not impose on French people names which are not only ridiculous and nonsensical, but offensive and absurd.

The suffrages of the French element of Northumberland county is worth having. It should be respected--surely in these two parishes, officers can be found who could give this small gratification to the French people of the county of Northumberland. The next premier of N. B., may yet be in need of French votes in Northumberland county and his colleagues as well. Proulx garde--as late Mick Adams would say--elector.

ROGERSVILLE ELECTOR. July 9th, 1900. Red Bank, July 9th.

MR. EDITOR:-- In looking over the events of Dominion Day in your valuable paper, I noticed that the speakers of the day, with the exception of Mr. Samuel Thomson, failed to notice the late Senator Adams. And by the way the late Mr. Adams' friends will not forget Mr. Thomson for his thoughtfulness. Whether the omission on the part of the others had any significance or not, I cannot say, but it seems to me, a reprehensible procedure on such an occasion, to laud one of Northumberland's noble sons and ignore another. While the Hon. M. Adams will never be seen on earth again, yet the memory of his noble character still exists in the minds of many, and will continue to exist as long as one of his fellow citizens remains alive.

Yours, etc. A FRIEND.

MR. EDITOR:-- Can you tell me when the sidewalks are to be repaired?--CITIZEN. The Town Council ordered the lumber for the sidewalks sometime ago from a Rogersville man, but it arrived here only a few days ago, and at a time when the council was busily engaged on the streets. The sidewalks will be attended to as soon as possible,--probably within a week. It is not the intention of the council, however, to encourage wooden sidewalk building, as the board is in favor of asphalt sidewalks, and will probably have one laid along Castle street before long.--Ed.

MR. EDITOR:-- Permit me to congratulate you and your readers on the pronounced improvement in your paper, within the last few weeks, and more particularly in that of last week. The article "Gossip about Women" must be of interest to every mother and sister and lover of home, which is the real foundation of society. Mrs. Julia Ward Howe's contribution, prognosticating the future, shows that she is really the American Queen and is of inestimable worth to the literature of the times. Your report and

OVER THE WIRES.

The Origin of the Trouble in China.

SAYS HO YOW

Is Interference With the Religion of China.--- The Situation.

LONDON, July 9.--Admiral Bruce has sent a telegram to the Admiralty department from Taku, under date of July 7, to the effect that there are grounds for hoping that Prince Ching with his army is at Peking protecting the legations against Prince Tuan's army and the Boxers.

CHICAGO, July 9.--A special to the Times-Herald from San Francisco says: In regard to the present situation in China, Ho Yow, the Chinese consul general in San Francisco, a diplomat only second in importance to the Chinese minister in Washington says: "The origin of the whole trouble is interference with our religion in China. I do not question the worthy intentions of the missionaries who have gone there, but they have made the mistake of trying to convert the people who are not educated as a race even to the point of religious toleration. Good missionaries merely waste their energies and incense the people. There is another cause for the present uprising aside from the religious work of the missionaries proselytizing China. It has so happened that whenever a missionary has been injured or killed in the country, the nation which he represented has made the tragedy the occasion for asking grants of lands from the Chinese government. This course, in the eyes of many of our people who are extremely suspicious, has been misconstrued and misrepresented. From a political point of view, it seems to have been a fatal mistake on the part of the powers to have bombarded the Taku forts before they had landed sufficient forces to be able to support that step or follow it up. Instead of relieving the legations in Peking, they aggravated the situation, stirring up an ignorant and maddened people to frenzy. In my opinion, the powers would need an army of about 250,000 men to subdue this one northern province by force. Should there be a general uprising throughout China before they could do any sort of policing for that great territory, with its four hundred million people, or bring them under subjection, they would require not less than 1,000,000 soldiers, and many millions of dollars would be wasted and many lives be lost before the entire country could be brought under subjection. The zealous are not open to reason, as they are possessed of strange superstitions. Very many of the Boxers, probably by far the larger number, have never in their lives seen a European face and believe implicitly in the horrible things told about foreigners. The Chinamen are well armed, and they are well supplied with weapons of the latest pattern, many of them supplied from our own great arsenals. Shan Tung province is notable for its men of fine physique and stature. This province could probably place in the field 10,000,000 men closely approaching six feet in height. Whatever China may have been in the past, she is no insignificant enemy to cope with to-day. Her strength is formidable, and if it is expended upon invaders the result will be a terrible slaughter. If the members of the legations have been murdered, it cannot bring them back to life by killing in turn. A peaceful adjustment of the difference might be had and compensation secured. Such a policy would save many lives and enormous expenditures on the part of injured nations."

COMMITTEES REPORT.

Street will Probably be Opened From McCullum Street.

The regular monthly meeting of the Town Council was held last Wednesday evening.

The absentees were Ald. Ritchie and Phinney. Minutes were read and approved.

A communication from R. J. Parke, Toronto, asking about electrical plant was on motion of Ald. Hickson laid on the table.

A number of accounts were referred to their respective committees. The assessors bill was on motion laid over until the next meeting.

A largely signed petition was read asking the council to examine into the necessity and convenience of having a street opened from the east of the gas house to Pleasant street.

Referred to Board of Works Ald. Hickson read the following report from the Finance Committee:--

Acting on the instructions contained in the By-law passed at last meeting in reference to the issue of debentures your committee advertised for tenders and received offers from the following:--

Slimson & Co., D. B. Laird, E. P. Williston, Amaluis Jarvis & Co. The tenders of E. P. Williston [for $8,000] and D. R. Laird [for 10,000] being the highest, were accepted. We think there will be no difficulty in placing the other $2,000 on the terms of one of the above tenders.

On motion the report was received and adopted. Ald. Lounsbury read the following report from the Board of Works:--

A petition has been handed us signed by a large number of ratepayers, asking that a street be opened up from McCullum street to Pleasant street.

Your committee has examined same and think it necessary to open up said street and have taken steps to ascertain cost of land.

On motion the report was received and adopted. Ald. Hickson drew the attention of the council to the absence of glasses for lamps.

Ald. Hennessy presented to the council a copy of the first plan of town received from Mr. Fish.

On motion, a vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Fish.

ST. JOHN DRY DOCK

An English Writer Endeavors to Discourage the idea.

THE PROMOTERS

Will Doubtless Draw Substantial Salaries--Halifax the only Winter Port.

The following letter appeared in the London, England, "Financier and Bullionist," in its issue of June 25:

To the Editor of The Financier and Bullionist:--

Sir,--A dry dock proposition has come to my notice, to which I feel sure should be given publicity in the interest of the British investor.

Some promoters in St. John, New Brunswick, have obtained a charter for the construction of a dry dock at the Port of St. John, and have been promised subsidies for a term of twenty years by the city of St. John, the Provincial Government of New Brunswick and the Government of the Dominion, aggregating some £5,000; and an effort is now being made to obtain a substantial subsidy from the British Government for a term of years. Under these subsidies the promoters propose to make an issue of bonds to build a dry dock at the Port of St. John, which is not now required, and which the trade of the port does not warrant.

One can understand the British Government aiding the construction of a dry dock at a naval station such as Halifax, but one cannot understand why the British Government should be asked to grant a large subsidy to assist in building and equipping a commercial dry dock at the Port of St. John in opposition to the other docks and wharves now constructed there.

If the British Government grant a subsidy for this proposed dry dock at St. John, New Brunswick--which can only be used for commercial vessels, as St. John can never be a naval station or base--it is establishing a very wide principle of giving aid to Colonial commercial ports, and if it is done in one case, in justice it cannot be refused in others. The door for such subsidies, once having been opened, will be found hard to close.

The subsidy given by the City of St. John--a city of 60,000 people--amounts I believe, to the paltry sum of £500 for twenty years, when the city expects some millions of other people's money to be spent in its midst. This shows the lukewarm local feeling in regard to a dry dock.

It is pertinent to inquire how much capital has been in St. John (a place of considerable wealth) for this purely local enterprise, and how many merchants and shipowners will invest £1 in such a scheme. It is a good thing for the promoters, who will doubtless draw substantial salaries during the life of the subsidies--providing the dock is built; and when the subsidies end they will be too old to trouble themselves much about the money of their investors.

Halifax is the only winter port of Canada and the terminus of an all Canadian line of railway, as opposed to St. John, a terminus of the Canadian Pacific, running partly through United States territory, whose bonding privileges may be stopped at any time, as, indeed, has often been threatened. The British Government aided the construction of the dock at Halifax with a substantial subsidy, as it is a naval base; but even with the handsome subsidies from different sources, and a large amount of work done for the navy, I doubt if the Halifax dock has ever declared a dividend.

If the people of St. John and Canada are earnestly desirous of making St. John a great port and meriting the assistance of the British Government in the establishment of shipping facilities, they should reduce the port charges and expenses to vessels--that is, if they ever expect to successfully compete with Halifax and Portland.

Canada as a field for investment of British capital merits the attention of the British public; but a dry dock scheme, such as the one proposed at St. John, New Brunswick, should be received with the greatest caution.--Your obedient servant,

June 21st. J. K. L.

MR. TARTE SPEAKS

Canada Treated Unfairly at the Exposition.

PRESIDENT LOUBET

Wanted to Enter Canada's Pavilion Through a Side door.

London (England) Outlook.)

The British and Canadian press have made various comments upon Canada's demand for national recognition, as put forward the other day through the Canadian Commissioner at the Paris Exhibition, the Hon. J. Israel Tarte, who is also, of course, the Minister of Public Works in the Dominion Cabinet and one of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's chief colleagues among French-Canadian statesmen. The question is one of so much public interest in view of the larger place Canada is now taking in Imperial life, that we asked Mr. Tarte to favor us with his views. This he does in the following terms:

"For the thorough understanding of the case to which you allude, it is necessary to give you a short history of what has happened here in connection with the Exhibition.

When I came to Paris as Chief Commissioner for Canada, I found out that our country was not recognized as a self-governing country. We were not accredited directly with the French authorities. There was a widespread discontent among our exhibitors and among the members of the staff. Delays and annoyances of all kinds had made the position very difficult. I immediately remonstrated with the Royal Commission, and through Lord Strathcona I called the attention of Mr. Chamberlain to the unfairness with which we were treated. The Secretary of State for the Colonies understood the position at a glance and through his good will and speedy intervention I was accredited directly with the French authorities.

I am afraid that some of the English officials in Paris did not see my action with much satisfaction. I do not include in this category Colonel Jekyll, whom I always found a perfect gentleman. In the morning I read in Le Matin, a newspaper, that Mr. President Loubet was going to visit the Trocadero. I had not been notified by the French authorities, who I may say immediately together in the wrong. His preparations to receive the President of the Republic. While he was visiting some other pavilion he did not see me and he would not go to the main door, but would go to the side door of the Trocadero. I would continue his visit through the side doors of the Trocadero. I need not tell you that this was not suitable, but we had paid 90 per cent of the building, and our exhibitors would have failed in their attempt to receive the President with every possible honor. I was not in the habit of going to the kitchen door. I had Colonel Jekyll, who was the President's valet, invited to receive Mr. Loubet. He did.

In other words, to inflict an indignity on the President of the Republic, and to do so in the country; and a business which was our duty, to do so.

I hope that the scandalized by the incident will be played. It was the Queen, I think, who only myself, and the English and English as it was our duty.

You are interested in the question of good in domestic matters. I am sure that a country like Canada, with six million people, should be able to do better than this.

Mr. Chamberlain's attitude was tantamount to a refusal to receive the President of the Republic.

Model Bride of Gotham.

The Girl who Hurried up Her Wedding to a Bankrupt.

(From our special correspondent.)

New York, July 4.—

The prolongation of the period officially known as "the season" may be considered entirely due to the ever unexpected and yet never surprising vagaries of our climate. That weather should revert to coolness after tropical manifestations is an annual excuse for superfluous manifestations of astonishment.

Once more, therefore, the world of the metropolis finds itself without opera (transferred to London), without more than a dozen theatres where plays and comic operas are given in contradistinction to polite vaudeville, and without other resources for the extermination of an evening than those afforded by the restaurants.

"All New York" is supposed to be settled in the suburbs, but in reality remains in town, clinging to the cold comfort of thrice told theatrical tales before the footlights, and such social changes as may be rung on the kaleidoscopic palm gardens.

A certain contingent of the fashionable world possesses the resource of polo at Meadowbrook, another that of golf at Ardsley and other country clubs, the glory of Tuxedo is great. There is, in fact, a study of contrasts in weddings, and the pages of romance would need to be ransacked to furnish a greater one than that provided by the actual marriages of the moment.

The brides of the day are wedded under different conditions. Had Balzoo and De Mille, the old purveyors of what was known as the Mother Goose series of plays at the Lyceum Theatre, been in search of a model for a heroine they could scarcely have found a better one than the young lady who advanced her happy day for her union with her senior partner in the cotton market for the neat little fortune of fifteen millions at such an early moment.

Had she called this ceremony place within a stone's throw of the Church of St. Thomas' marriage of practical difficulties that followed, business could only be arranged for the wedding and the moon. The elaborate arrangements for the wedding and which was a smaller specimen of the Clark-Morris as a "diamond" before, as promptly had been the case.

In the cotton there illustration of related to encourage the lie of the land. The 1900 seldom derived from the use of Catarrhozone. I am in my eightieth year now and from youth up I have been troubled with Asthma, and not until I used Catarrhozone did I get relief. It has cured my Asthma in an incredibly short time, and I heartily recommend it to all. Catarrhozone is sold by all druggists. Trial outfit sent for 10c in stamps by N. C. POLSON & CO., Kingston, Ont., Proprietors.

brated quietly and prematurely but far more interesting than if it had taken place as announced under conventional conditions, business and political difficulties supply a background of stern reality. When, in one case, the bridegroom is a cotton broker in a crash to the tune of millions and, in the other the father who giveth the woman to be married to this man is an unseated and disputed senator, it is quite impossible to consider the marriage per se.

Those who are sensitive as to the manner in which the Clark-Morris nuptials are treated are apparently, unaware of the fact that a wedding in St. Thomas' Church presupposes the widest publicity, and that thousands of people are interested in an event celebrated under such conditions.

Had there been any desire or reason for privacy, a house wedding in the spacious apartment near Central Park could easily have been arranged, but the senator from Montana is not in public life to hide the light of either office or establishment, silver and gold and jewels, paintings and equipage, under a bushel.

He proposed that the wedding of his only unmarried daughter should be celebrated under the most auspicious conditions in the most fashionable of Protestant Episcopal churches the length and breadth of Fifth avenue, quite irrespective of the gathering clouds on the political horizon, and what may be considered the senatorial eclipse.

The little bride is accustomed to being personally conducted by her enterprising sister, Mrs. Culver, the maid of honor of the occasion, and is, therefore, happy to find her actively in evidence.

The blue-blooded connections of the bridegroom responded to the occasion, and old family pride was almost, as much in evidence at St. Thomas' Church as a great deal of "new" money. The happy man himself is, however, entirely eclipsed, for the present, by the bride's father and the bride's sister, this being the Golden Age.

The July brides who will succeed to this procession of June brides are to be rather in evidence "out of town" than in New York. Both Tuxedo and Washington, not to speak of the famous little village of Pomfret, will lend themselves to interesting ceremonies, concerning with various sections of "society" are on the alert.

The Passion Play

The Decennial Performance

Takes Place This Summer.

Many of the visitors to the Paris Exposition will make it a point to witness also the Passion Play at Ober Ammergau, the decennial performance of which takes place this summer. Our modern and western notions make it difficult for us to conceive of the sufferings of the Redeemer being portrayed in this way without irreverence or grotesqueness. There is no doubt, however, that the people are actuated by a spirit of earnestness and simplicity. "The villagers regard the Passion Play as a solemn act of religious worship, and the performances are characterized by the greatest reverence. The principal parts are usually hereditary in certain families, and are assigned with regard to moral character as well as dramatic ability. It is considered a disgrace not to be allowed to take part in the play, and the part of Christ is looked upon as one of the greatest of earthly honors." The players are known locally by the names of their roles. Josef Mayr, the Christ of 1871, 1880 and 1890, is now too old for the work of the part; his long black hair and beard are silvered, and a fair-haired man, Anton Lang, is to take his place. The correspondent of The London Times says:—

"The play is in sense a survival of the old miracle plays or mysteries in which our own drama and that of Spain had to some extent their origin. In the case of Ober Ammergau the survival is said to be due to a vow taken by the inhabitants in 1633, when the black death ravaged the village. They resolved that they would revive and repeat their then half-forgotten Passion Play every ten years in order to appease Heaven and prevent a recurrence of the calamity. The original play was, doubtless, entirely on the model of the old miracle plays, so many of the English specimens of which have been preserved and rendered accessible in modern texts to English readers. Like the English miracle plays, the Ober Ammergau Passion Play was performed originally in the church, and subsequently in the churchyard, and furnished the people with low comedy as well as with sublime tragedy. The parts of Judas and of the Devil, for example, were essentially comic, and in the case of the former the manner of his death was associated with a display of the favorite food of the Bavarian peasantry, the sausage—whence, doubtless, the origin of the German term Hanswurst, or cown. Even as recently as 1880 I observed that the peasant part of the audience retained something of the traditional conception of Judas as a comic personage, and tittered at his final discomfiture. In the course of the present century the Ammergau play has been revised in accordance with more modern conceptions of taste, this work having been performed by a monk of the neighboring monastery of Ettal. A further version, essentially that which is now given was the composition of Dr. Daisenberger, the parish priest of Ober Ammergau, who died in his 84th year, in 1885. The simple music of the hymns and choruses is by a former village schoolmaster, Rochus Dedler (1799-1822). In spite of repeated but ephemeral prohibitions at the beginning of the present century, the play has been regularly enacted for nearly three centuries at interval of ten years. In 1870 the Franco-German war called away many of the performers, and the play was postponed till 1871, when among those who witnessed it was the Crown Prince of Germany, afterwards the Emperor Frederick.

"The theatre used from 1830 to 1890 was a wooden edifice on the northern outskirts of the village. It consisted of tiers of wooden seats capable of accommodating 5,000 spectators, who had no protection from the weather except a kind of awning over the highest or back seats. The greater part of the stage, too, was roofless, and, indeed, remains so till this day. Only the palaces of Pilate and of streets in Jerusalem. But above and around the whole stage towers the incomparable background of the Ober Ammergau mountains, so that, like the old Anhenians in the Stadion, or in the Theatre of Dionysos, the spectators may ever turn their eyes from the engrossing spectacle on the stage and rest them on scenes of natural grandeur and beauty."

The drama consists of three parts, which together occupy eight hours in the acting, from 8 in the morning until 5.30 in the evening, with an intermission for a meal. Part I, represents the Gospel narrative from the triumphal entry of Christ into Jerusalem to his betrayal in the garden of Gethsemane. Part II, is occupied with the trial of Christ before Caiaphas, Herod and Pilate, including the scourging and final condemnation by Pilate. Part III, embraces the crucifixion, the resurrection and final tableau representing the ascension.

The three parts of the play are divided into eighteen acts, each of which, as well as the final tableau representing the ascension, is preceded by a prologue in verse, sung by the chorus, consisting of twenty female and thirteen male voices. The members of one chorus are robed in white draperies, over which they wear mantles of various hues, cinctured and fringed with gold. The chorus leader wears a bright scarlet robe with gold embroidery. Before each of the acts there are tableaux vivants, representing Old Testament history, which are typical of the events about to be enacted. During the tableau the song of the chorus interprets the scene, explains its connection with what is to follow and comments on the impending action of the Passion Play.

The Canadian Order of Foresters.

The Canadian Order of Foresters is a society that has become more favorably and widely known in our Dominion than any other Friendly Insurance Society doing business in this country.

In order to secure the attention of those who have not yet considered the superior merits of this society, the following facts are submitted. It is:

1. Purely Canadian.
2. National in its character.
3. Age limits 18 to 45 years.
4. Fixed premium. No death assessment.
5. Gives $5000 $1000 $1500 or $2000 insurance.
6. Over two million dollars paid to members of and their dependents since organization of 1879.
7. Careful medical selection. Death rate for the 20th year of its history, only 4.56 per 1000.
8. Has a larger surplus on hand for each $1000 risk than other society of its kind in Canada.
9. Security of investments. Not a dollar of the surplus invested outside of Canada.
10. Premiums and interest accruing therefrom used only for the payment of death claims.

The rates for life insurance in this society, payable in advance, are as follows:

Between the	On	On	On	On

The High Court sick and funeral benefits are much appreciated, and are $3 per week for the first two weeks, and $5 per week for the following ten weeks in any one year, and $20 towards funeral expenses.

A strong feature of the business is the handsome surplus fund, which continues to increase in the insurance department. At the end of November there was $823,149.79 to the credit of the fund. The surplus is now growing at the rate of between $11,000 and $12,000 per month. The membership is increasing at the rate of over 600 per

LOVE FINDS A WAY.

BY JEANNETTE H. WALWORTH.

Copyright, 1899, by Jeannette H. Walworth.

As he stood there alone on the broad steps of the house, overlooking the beautiful expanse of the Broxton lawn, so he stood alone in all the wide world, not one creature to call kindred. Small wonder that he clung with ravening tenderness to the silent sleeper in the house behind his back.

He retraced his steps and re-entered the room where his father lay. He fung open the windows and moved resolutely toward the casket. The utter peacefulness, the majestic repose of the sleeper filled his soul with a strange quietness.

At that moment he remembered the seal ring which his father had always impressed upon the wax of his letters. It was on his finger when he died. He should like it for his very own. He drew the white draperies from the broad chest to secure the ring. In the pallid clasped hands a single white cosmos flower had drooped to its death. The seal ring was not upon his father's hand. The flower had not been in his quiet clasp when they laid him in the casket.

Who would unravel the knot of this twofold mystery?

CHAPTER IV. THE FIGURE IN WHITE.

Having nearly arrived at the mature age of 18, Miss Olivia Matthews considered herself qualified to give her father advice on all matters of importance.

Tom Broxton was a matter of importance, one which came up with increasing frequency and growing importance as his term at college rounded to its end.

On the subject of what was or what was not best for Tom the small monitor assumed large airs of gravity and decorum which tempted one to smile into her dimpled face. Not that she would have countenanced such levity for an instant. She took herself in her relation as semiguardian to the last of the Broxtons quite seriously. Ever since that dismal day on which they had laid the dear colonel to rest under the weeping willows of the Mandeville churchyard and brought Tom to stay temporarily at the Matthews cottage while "arrangements for his future" were perfected she had come to look upon him as in some sense her personal charge.

That had been four years ago. The years have healing properties for the young which they lose in later years. A correspondence had been one of the inevitable consequences of Ollie's self elected guardianship and Tom's craving for friendship.

His 11 months of seniority, which counted for little on the calendar, were entirely reversed in their social relations. In their letters he figured as quite 11 years her junior. She never forgot his birthday. It was always remembered by a gift chosen with a view to a man's ever recurring demand for neckties, gloves or the like and always sent accompanied by a neat little homily on the approaching years of responsibility, prettily indited on her best society stationery.

Fresh from the perusal of an effusive letter of thanks for the latest donation of gloves and advice, Olivia sagely wrinkled her brows and looked across the breakfast table at her father.

"Just to think, papa, the dear boy is 18 years old! I suppose he will be putting on all the airs of a grown man when he gets back. I can hear the beating of restless wings in each letter more distinctly. That is as it should be. If I were a man, I know I should strain at the leash violently long before the college doors closed upon me."

Her metaphors were somewhat mixed, but as she was preparing her father's second cup of coffee with just so much sugar plus so much cream metaphor had to look out for itself.

The lawyer, deep in his own matter, glanced up quickly, showing a dark, unsmiling face.

"Who is straining at the leash, my dear?"

"Oh, that was just a figure of speech! I was talking about Tom. I've got an absurdly grateful letter from him, thanking me for his gloves. If I had sent a shoestring, he would have waxed just as eloquent over it. Tom is a wee bit sophomoric. I must admit, but time will tone all that down."

She was conscious of a very abstracted auditor.

Her father's head had been lifted just so long as his hand had been extended for the cup of coffee. He was once more poring over his morning's mail with knitted brows. Her maltese cat, always discreetly observant of the progress of the meal, gently reminded her by a velvet pawed caress that he was waiting to be served. Her canary bird, swinging in its gilded cage in the sunny bow window, shrilly monopolized the realm of sound.

Her father's absorption in letters which properly belonged to his office work was an infringement of her most cherished household regulation. She interfered despotically.

"Papa, you know I regard the breakfast hour as my exclusive property. You are breaking my rules."

The dark face opposite her was lifted. The light of a mighty love illumined his gloomy eyes. Lawyer Matthews pushed his letters from him in a heap and smiled.

"You are right, my queen of hearts, as you always are. I beg your pardon for my rude inattention. I am all yours. You were saying?"

"Nothing very profound." She smiled with restored good humor. "I have been wondering what we are going to do with Tom Broxton when he comes back to Mandeville for good. He can't live alone in that great barn of a house. He would meet a ghost at every turn. And he could not live here with us. Every old woman's tongue in Mandeville would chorus 'improper.' What on earth can we do with the poor boy?"

Twice during her remarks her father had taken off his glasses, wiped them abstractedly and replaced them on his nose with nervous energy. Instead of the direct answer her direct question invited, he looked straight over her head through the vine clothed bow window, frowning incidentally at the shrilling canary.

"Is there no way of silencing that noise?"

"Dick's yodeling? Certainly. I did not know it annoyed you."

She left the table long enough to insert a lump of sugar between the bars of the birdcage. Returning, she perched on the arm of her father's chair, retaining her precarious vantage ground by clutching his coat lapels firmly with one hand.

"Father, you must be working too hard. You are horribly nervous of late. I shall have to take you in hand." She passed a caressing hand over the lawyer's troubled forehead. "There are at least a dozen new worry lines here. This will never, never do. But about Tom."

"What about Thomas?" Her caressing failed of soothing. He drew her hands down with almost a petulant gesture.

"What are you going to do with him when he leaves college and comes home to live? You know we must plan for it."

"There is no immediate call for agitating that point, my love. Thomas is to go abroad for two years after leaving college."

"Does he want to go?"

"I want him to go."

"Of course, papa, as his guardian you may advise him to go, and I think every boy ought to travel. But has Tom expressed any wishes of his own on the subject?"

"I have not broached it to him as yet. I anticipate no objections on his part. His father was a great traveler in his day. Indeed, I may say he was passionately fond of it."

"Then you have not consulted him about it yet?"

The lawyer rose from the table with his hands full of letters. A slight frown contracted his forehead, bringing his bushy gray brows almost into contact with each other. He loved this breakfast hour above all the hours of the day. It was full of peace and pleasantness. It was pleasant to look across the table into his child's beautiful, spirited face, a face which always brimmed over with intelligence and with love for him; it was pleasant to look beyond her, out through the vine encircled bay window into the tangle of beauty and perfume which Ollie called her garden; it was pleasant to contemplate the fact that this dear

Grandma Mrs. Thos. I got a bottle and gave it to my child, and after the third dose she began to get better and slept well that night. She improved right along and was soon completely cured."

lawyer of Mandeville ever had before him. It was pleasant to prolong this communion time.

Presently he would go off to his office, and the sweet music of his darling's voice would be swallowed up in the harsher tones of angry men chaffering for their rights. But just now Olivia was growing a trifle inquisitorial, and it was that which sent him away from the table somewhat abruptly.

"No," he said, standing on the hearth rug; "I have not written to him yet. I don't want the pleasant anticipation of travel to get between him and the closing exercises of his college. I am somewhat apprehensive that Thomas may be lacking in energy."

"I don't know why you say that, papa. His reports from the very beginning have been just splendid. He stands first in all of his classes and—"

"Oh, as a student Thomas has made a fair record, but I should prefer more fire, more vim, more fervor of anti-

"You stupid papa—to want a fretful, puny baby always under your wing!"

Olivia championed the absent with warmth and decision.

"I think you are altogether mistaken, father, and inclined to underrate Tom. His letters to you, I suppose, are more restrained and formal. I see abundant evidence of ambition and of purpose. Tom is essentially well balanced. I have seen plentiful signs of restlessness."

"I hope I have molded him fittingly," said the lawyer, with pious self gratulation. "Yes, I think he may be called essentially well balanced."

"He is just what I fancy Colonel Broxton was at his age," Ollie resumed, with unconscious point. "He is not one of those tiresome boys who bore you to distraction with wordy vapourings about what they are going to do and be, winding up by doing and being nothing. Moreover, the fact of his being so rich would incline him to deliberation. The spur of necessity is not pricking him to select a career in wild haste. Tom is very rich indeed, is not he, papa?"

Some of his letters slipped from the lawyer's grasp. He stooped to recover them. His sallow face was deeply flushed when he straightened himself almost defiantly. He did not look at Olivia as he answered curtly:

"By no manner of means. That is one of the current local fallacies, a great mistake. Thomas' personal expenses have been heavy, and some of his dear father's investments turned out very badly."

Ollie soared superior.

"I am rather glad to hear that. Rich young men are so apt to wax conceited and worthless on the strength of their father's hoarding. They lose the incentive to personal endeavor."

Her father rewarded this flight with a somewhat acid smile.

"Your worldly wisdom becomes startling, my love. I think I shall have to get you a new doll to dress."

"Doll, indeed!" She mimicked his gravity. "Your capacity for insulting a helpless female becomes startling, my love. I think I shall have to get you a new pair of eyes the better to see, my dear."

She came toward him, a riant, sparkling creature, and stood before him with crest uplifted. "Observe the

if you please, and be measuring your strength with mine, demanding your place at my side rather than under my wing. It frightens me."

She laughed musically up into the furrowed face.

"And it delights me. You stupid papa—to want a fretful, puny baby always under your wing in place of a wise young woman by your side! And you naughty papa, to let my eighteenth birthday almost dawn without a breath touching appropriate celebrations!"

"Celebrations?" He repeated the word perplexedly.

"Don't you even know, father, that a girl comes of age when she is 18? She doesn't come into a vote and all that sort of nonsense, but she comes out, and I propose to do that appropriately."

"Appropriately! Why, bless my soul, yes, of course! What shall we do, Ollie?"

"I should like a fete champetre," said Ollie grandly. "such a fete as the people of the country shall date back to and from for generations to come. I shan't come of age but once in my lifetime, you know, papa."

Her father looked overhead out of the bay window into her garden and upon the grassy terraces intervening between it and the cobblestone street.

The Matthews cottage, perched upon its well kept terraces, was one of the show places of Mandeville, but its dimensions were by no means imposing. In land it was conspicuously cramped.

"A garden party, my love? I believe that is your idea done in English. Do you think our modest little yard?"

She interrupted him with a gay laugh. "Oh, no, papa! That would be absurd, ridiculously so. Over at Tom's house is where I mean to hold my fete. We could give a lovely garden party among the grand old trees on Broxton lawn and such a delicious dance in the long, yellow parlor."

"But the people?"

"The Westovers are expected back from Europe on Monday. I should especially like them to see that one does not have to go abroad to know what to do on occasion. Oh, I want it to be very grand indeed, papa! Miss Malvina Spillman will help me to make it just perfectly lovely. She can act chaperon too. I can make out quite a splendid list of guests."

A strange hesitation seemed to blind her father's tongue. He, who was generally eager in his readiness to gratify her slightest wish, stood mute and frowning in face of her very dearest one.

"You have a guardian's right to use the house, papa, haven't you?"

"Yes, Oh, yes, of course!"

"And I know Tom would be only too glad. I shall write for his permission." Still that unfriendly silence. "My heart is quite set upon it, papa."

THE FUTURE OF SOUTH AFRICA.

As the close of the South African war draws nearer, speculation as to the future of the former republics increases. It seems to be a matter, however, that requires little thought. Under British rule the settlement and development of a country are assured. But the restarting of the gold mines and the reopening of the many businesses in Johannesburg, Pretoria and other towns, which were stopped by the outbreak of hostilities, must first claim attention. It may be accepted as a fact that the Boers have done little or no damage to the mines, and in most cases we believe that the plant and machinery are uninjured. The pumping out of the mines will not take long, and any machinery which may have been spoilt or damaged will be replaced from the reserve which nearly all the principal companies have formed during the war. With the hand in full swing the revival of business in Johannesburg and in Pretoria is merely a question of time. If both these towns could become fairly prosperous under the Boer regime they ought to develop to an extraordinary degree under the new government. Taxation of the mines under the new regime will be on such a scale that the shareholders will not be called upon to suffer any hardships through being required to pay their quota of the war. The abolition of a number of iniquitous monopolies, the regulation of native labor, and the imposition of equitable liquor laws will enable the companies to work low profits, and the revenue from this source alone will be more than equal to any other source of taxation which the government propose. The two Boer republics will unquestionably be governed straightforwardly. The irreconcilable element of the irreconcilable is doubtless be sharp. The Boers of Cape Colony have been taught that it is profitable to take up the authority of the British who fought for just cause and are entitled to command must have it, if in South Africa.

IN CHINA.

As to the trouble in China, it has assumed a serious character. The correspondent in London 'Daily News' states that the murder of the British officials in Peking, at the hands of the Chinese, is a known fact, and that the Chinese government is to state when it is known that the Chinese government has assumed a serious character.

The Rev. Dr. Joseph Parker of London says Beecher, Spurgeon and Moody were the three greatest preachers he had ever heard, ranking them in their order.

One of the new fads at Newport is the "codfishing party," at which the guests eat the fish they catch. This may tend to the making of a codfish aristocracy.

The Atlanta Convention is discussed in the Advocate. It has become with a knowledge of things Chinese to the belief that the native officers here, who are unquestionably suppressing the news, are endeavoring to prepare the way, with the least harm to themselves, for the reception of the news of the greatest crime of the century.

'HOBSON' RECEPTIONS.

Despatches to the Canadian dailies, last week, from one or two Ontario towns told of the arrival home of members of the Canadian contingent, and of how they were accorded a "Hobson" welcome. Enough! Two years ago the maidens of the United States made Hobson the laughing stock of the world, and now Canada's fair daughters are following the example of their Yankee cousins—an example which was ridiculed two years ago in Canada from Halifax to Vancouver. Hobson and Dewey are lessons which Canada should profit by.

STEADY THERE!

No wonder Mr. Foster feels blue and speaks acrimoniously. Down in New Brunswick his chances have been steadily diminishing, and the party seems to be disintegrating. Hon. Mr. Tweedie has announced that he will support the Liberals; the Chatham Advance has come out for Laurier and good government, and the Newcastle Advocate hints strongly at a similar change of heart. Mr. Foster has good reason for apprehension as he gazes New Brunswickward.—Hamilton Times.

Say, girls, do you wear the new pompadour nightcap? Its the latest. It is neither more nor less than a lace kerchief tied under the chin; but as it is the "dernier cris" in Paris, you'll have to pretend you like it. With these coquetteish head coverings must be worn the irresistible robe de chambre made of the softest silks, and whose ideal charm is copyrighted by the Parisian maker. More anon.

A Chicago paper says of one of the young girl singers of its city, who is now abroad: "It took five women and her own maid to get Fanchon Thomson into a dress in which she sung to Queen Victoria at Windsor. Which suggests that she must have had on a great deal more clothing than most singers affect in the high notes."

St. George Rathburne, in his latest book, "A Goddess of Africa," says that as surely as the world continues to exist, that restless, colonizing Anglo-Saxon race is bound to dominate Africa even as it does North America, Australia and many other quarters of the globe.

A DAY TO THINK.

[From the Baltimore Sun, July 4.] It is most fitting that, amid the tumult and din of today's celebration, much of it meaningless, the thoughtful citizen should earnestly ask himself whether there will be any real liberty or independence, such as the men of 1776 meant to establish on this continent, if we go on in the dates of national extravagance, monopolistic legislation, foreign aggression and entanglement, militarism and imperialism, in which the present administration is leading us.

THE FUTURE OF FRANCE.

(Boston Herald.) Foreign correspondents foresee a speedy return to the empire in France, where they say the people are heartily weary of the political strifes and changes in the republican government. One thing seems almost certain; it is never a king who will rule France, but an emperor with some of Napoleon Bonaparte's blood in his veins? Yes. The experiment of a republic has proved that the nation needs one head capable of wearing the crown, not a Hydra, always making faces at itself. France is disappointed at the effect of the exhibition. It has not cut the ice expected, owing, of course, to the turmoil besetting the powers, and the unrest of Europe generally. Nineteen hundred arrived inopportunistly, but the exhibition has served to hold the wearing spirits in leash and give the enemies of the government time to prepare their coup. The middle into which China has thrown all the governments of Europe may delay the change in France, for the powers are too deeply engaged wondering what shall be done next to think of a possible empire nearer home.

Mr. Alfred Austin, the poet laureate has thrown himself open to opprobrium through the appearance of a poem on the relief of Mafeking. The critics on this side of the water have pounced upon the poem with great glee and it has afforded lots of amusement to the Bro Boer Press. Harper's Weekly in criticising Mr. Austin's Pegasus says:—"We imagine that Baden-Powell himself will feel sorry that Mafeking has been relieved, when he reads Mr. Austin's lines about his achievement.

The verses, as originally telegraphed to the American press were as follows:

Loud yelled the bullet's ping,
Sharp flashed the sabre's sting,
As on to Mafeking
Sped we with force met,
While the brave garrison,
Steady by trench and gun,
Faltered not, no not one,
Living on horse-meat!

Oh! when they saw us come,
Drubbed well was every drum,
And shrill the fife's tum-tum
Poured till the ear split!

Grimly the foe retired;
Nathless he frequent fired,
Till beated, moody, mired,
His van and rear split!

As pressed the foe more near,
Only with naked spear,
Ne'er knowing what to fear,
Parley or blench meant;
Forward through shot and shell,
While still the foremost fell,
They with resistless yell,
Stormed his intrenchment.

Then when hope dawned at last,
And fled the foe aghast,
At the relieving blast,
Hard in the melly;
Oh! our stout, stubborn kith,
Kimberley, Ladysmith,
Mafeking wedded with
Lucknow and Delhi.

It is McKinley and sound money, pro-British and expansion. It is Bryan and 16 to 1—pro-Boer and anti trust.

Although 16 to 1 has been specially declared for the platform of the Democrats, it is to be relegated to the rear.

They are betting 6 to 4 on McKinley against Bryan in New York.

CAPT. SANTIAGO

The World's Highest and Longest Diver.

This astonishing individual, Captain Santiago, uses no parachute, like ordinary, everyday aeronauts; he leaps into no river's open bosom, like your tiresome bridge jumpers; he carries no let-me-down-easy balloon paraphernalia, but simply ascends the towering structure, the climbing of which alone is a feat few men would undertake, and reaches the summit of the very topmost pinnacle, appearing to those far below him no larger than an eagle on a mountain's crest. He shouts gaily, throws out his arms, bends forward slowly over the great, frightful, yawning, gaping space between him and the earth, ever so far below him; plunges down, down, down! falling swiftly as the swallow darts; coming rushing, sweeping trackless through the awful void, heels top, head down—surely, every frightened observer thinks, to instant death. Suddenly he turns; swift as lightning is the turn made, and as swiftly made back again, and for many yards this fearless, fighting freeman turns somersaults.—He suddenly makes his body rigid, and seems to stop his fight momentarily by doing so. Now he loosens again and descends slower, and with an agility scarcely to be believed, even when seen, he lands safe and sound. Capt. Santiago can be seen by all, free as the air you breathe, doing this twice—once in the morning, once in the evening—on the circus grounds at Newcastle on July 17th with Lemen Brothers' Worlds' Monster shows.

The Farm,

The Up-to-Date Farmer Must Read this Column

The superior court of Pennsylvania decided that what is known as the color clause of the oleo law is sound, says the Rural New Yorker. This means that oleo cannot legally be sold. Yellow is the standard color of butter, and it is illegal to counterfeit other fats by coloring them yellow. Instead of grieving over this the oleo men ought to rejoice, for it gives them a grand chance to prove that people are eager to buy oleo. Let them put it on the market for just what it is, uncolored and with no attempt to call it butter. Let them offer it for sale at the same per cent above cost of production that dairymen receive. That ought to satisfy any honest man.

A very satisfactory ration to supplement pasture may be made by mixing two parts by weight of bran or middlings one part each of corn, oats and cottonseed meal, to be fed in such quantities as the cow will make returns for at the pail. A young calf should have whole milk from the cow for the first two weeks, after that skimmed milk till 6 or 8 months old. As soon as it will eat dry food, which will be about 3 weeks old, it should have access to good early cut clover hay and bran and whole oats mixed and should be allowed to eat of these all it wants. After weaning pasture, hay or ensilage, according to the season, should be sufficient to keep it growing without grain food till it comes into service as a cow. If at any time grain seems to be needed, oats and bran, either alone or mixed, are as good as anything that can be used.—Country Gentleman.

As a good deal of modern dairying is becoming specialized it may be said that we will soon have special breeds for certain lines of dairying, says E. P. Smith in the American Cultivator. In a sense the Jersey breed represents just such a specialty, and she can do her best only when in her proper place. It is a mistake to think that the Jersey is the fancy dairyman's cow and for the wealthy farmer who goes into the business largely for the pleasure of it. Likewise it is far from the truth to say that the Jersey is suited to any dairy. The animal is a practical and useful one on every dairy where good food, good care and scientific treatment are observed. This presupposes an intelligent knowledge and the needs of this particular breed. The animal is not a hardy or rough one, and it will not stand neglect and abuse. Take a fine record breaking Jersey milk and turn her out to find a living on rough pasture, and she will soon grow thin and cadaverous and gradually decrease her rich milk. She is not adapted to such a life. Neither will she stand exposure to a rough climate in any kind of weather. She needs more protection and care. We have cows that will endure any kind of usage, food and weather and still seem to thrive. They are suited to the prairie life, to farms where little attention is paid to modern careful methods of dairying. But if a man has only enough stock to occupy his time so that he can give all the attention needed to each animal the Jersey will probably give him better returns than any other breed.

The strenuous measures adopted and under consideration in many of the cities of Europe and America to prevent the sale of milk in which preservatives have been used to keep it from souring in transit have set the wits of British inventors to work to devise some plan to obviate the necessity of resorting to such means, and a newly patented milk can is the result.

With the cans constructed on the old principles it was an impossibility to fill these so completely as to prevent the milk intended for transit from churning owing to the oscillation of the train or boat and which has so detrimental an effect on the milk, making it "buttery" or sour, according to the season of the year. To obviate these grave disadvantages milk dealers have resorted to chemicals or "preservatives" which rob the fluid of its natural flavor and nutritious qualities and are also detrimental to the health of the consumers. As a consequence such great dissatisfaction has arisen that the sanitary authorities have taken the matter up, and prosecutions have followed in many of the large cities, and heavy penalties have been imposed.

The main feature of this new invention consists of an arrangement whereby after the can is full in the ordinary sense an airtight lid is compressed by means of a cross bar and thumbscrew, which causes the milk to represent a perfectly solid body and therefore will not "swilker," to use the common term of the farmer. Thus the necessity of resorting to preservatives is obviated.

Effie Brown, writing in The American Agriculturist, says; "Many families who keep but from one to three cows to furnish milk and butter for their own use only would find it very convenient to be able to keep the surplus butter of June and July till the following January and February and still have it good. Of course dairymen with all their conveniences can do this easily, but the amount of "cooking butter" always in the market testifies a lack of knowledge somewhere. Butter that will keep so good you can't tell it from that freshly made can be made without ice, a separator or creamery cans. I will tell you how to do it.

"I suppose it is unnecessary to mention cleanliness, but there will be no harm in reminding butter makers that it is about the most important thing, about the work. The very heart of the secret of making butter that will keep a long time is the age of the cream and its temperature. Set in common tin pans in an ordinary cool cellar, the cream should be skimmed 36 hours from the time it was set and then kept not longer than four days in cool weather and two in hot.

"If a pan of milk is missed and the cream gets old, do not skim it for butter, use it in cooking. If it goes into the churn, it will spoil that churning for keeping and if packed with other butter will spoil that also. When the burning is delayed, use the butter at once, even if it does taste and look all right. There's no use in trying—it won't keep. Have the cream cool enough so that the butter will come in granules. When about the size of peas, draw off the buttermilk and wash well, salt well and pack in crocks. If the butter becomes soft and frothy, the quicker you can get it out of sight the better. Not the least bit of use to try to fix that up to pack.

"In packing fill your jars to within two inches of the top with butter, then put in a layer of salt one inch thick and pour on enough water to just cover the salt. That will make it practically air tight. Cover with a cloth, then paper and a board and weight. Examine packed butter once each month and pour in more water if there has

Gossip

About Women, Their Children, and Their Home.

Twice the dowager empress of Russia has saved her husband's life. One day when in the emperor's dressing room she observed that on his dressing table lay a curious looking jewel case. Something about its appearance aroused her curiosity, and taking it up she became aware that it was extremely heavy. Without saying a word she went into her room and placed it carefully in a basin of water. Then sending for the perfect of police, whose duties kept him much about the palace, she begged him to have it examined, and it was discovered to be one of the most marvelous infernal machines ever invented by the ingenuity of man.

The second occasion on which the empress was directly instrumental in stopping murder occurred in the Winter palace, when she heard a slight noise, which indicated the presence of some stranger in the czar's study. Without betraying the slightest anxiety she begged her husband to come and speak to one of the children. He did so. She locked the door and only gave up the keys to a party of soldiers, who found that some one had just escaped through the window.

Friendship between young men and young women beset with difficulties and perils and unions destined to inevitable shipwrecks are entered into between two sexes who know nothing more of one another's point of view, virtues and vices than can be obtained by the most superficial conversation of the drawing room. But a young man who has the privilege of knowing an experienced yet smiling woman of middle age, who will temper his roughness, comprehend his frailties and encourage and console him, while perennially revealing her own springs of conduct will give him an education for the married life into which he will ultimately embark that can never be achieved by clubroom philosophy or travel or books or any other of the instruments that act as conscious or unconscious influences upon our action. The candor and directness that young men and women are incapable of exercising in their intercourse with one another become possible when one party to the friendship has reached that stage of life wherein knowledge is no longer obscured by passion, and if there were no other justification for middle age it ought to be found in its capacity for supplying young people with a knowledge of the divergencies and resemblances between the sexes that are unattainable by any other kind of teaching.

All filigree work in paper, a favorite pastime of our great-grandmothers, still tempts a few skilled adepts, who send to most women's work exhibition charming specimens of their handicraft. The difference between filigree work obtained with either gold or silver wire and paper is not clear to many who fail to understand the real meaning of the term filigree. It is an Italian word, which designates first a thread or wire (fill) and then a grain or bead (gree) or grano. Now, the delicate wire employed in the making of lace like jewels and trinkets of Genoa and Malta fame was in due time supplemented by a more substantial decoration for home items by a stiff baby ribbon or strip of paper in several shades and with gift or silver edges, plain or serrated, which is likewise deftly twisted into spirals, almond lozenges and other convoluted forms, but applied edgewise on relief on some firm foundation, generally protected by glass. The idea originated no doubt from the well known water marks formerly stamped on paper by means of some wire device, which explains the vernacular conspicuous on many of the old and modern examples of paper filigree. In this wise are decorated the tops of occasional tables, entire jewel caskets, lace boxes, vases, etc. A small but lovely circular mahogany frame for miniature or photograph was recently made.

A woman should keep in mind the following rules:

Business letters must be concise and clear, because business people are supposed to be busy.

No letter is complete without the date.

In writing to solicit employment of any kind on no account should personal perplexities or needs be mentioned. The world is full of unfortunate persons, and to a stranger the troubles of one are no more than those of a host of others.

Letters of introduction are left open when written.

Elaborately ornamented note paper and highly perfumed notes are vulgar.

When answering letters, remember:

That written words stand as everlasting witnesses.

That an ambiguous sentence is likely to be misinterpreted.

That friendly words never harm.

That a written word of sympathy can sometimes do much good.

That a letter written in a kindly spirit should be answered in the same way, even though the message is disliked.

That business letters and invitations must be answered at once.

That one should acknowledge any friendly offer of hospitality, even if be not by acceptance.

Years of Agony.

RESULTING FROM SCIATICA IN AGGRAVATED FORM.

Many Nights the Sufferer Could Not Lie in Bed, and His Leg was frequently Swollen to Twice Its Natural Size.

From the Journal, St. Catherine's.

Mr. John T. Benson, stationary engineer at the Bradley College, St. Catherine's, is known by most of the residents of the city. For years Mr. Benson suffered acute agony from sciatica, and not withstanding numerous forms of treatment, found little or no relief, until he began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills speedily restored his health, as they have done that of thousands of others who have given them a fair trial. To the reporter who interviewed him Mr. Benson said:—"I certainly owe a debt of gratitude to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, for they have released me from a form of torture that had afflicted me almost continuously for twenty years. The pain began first in my back, then shifted to my hip, and thence down my leg. It became so severe that it seemed as though the very marrow in my bones was being scalded, and at times I could scarcely repress crying aloud from the agony I endured. I tried all sorts of treatments and lotions, but got no relief. I doctored with several physicians, even going to Buffalo for treatment by a specialist there, but in no case did I ever receive more than temporary relief. It may be easily imagined that the pain I endured told upon me in other ways and I became almost a physical wreck. At times my right leg would swell to nearly twice its normal size. Then the pain and swelling would shift to my left leg, and the agony was something awful. I suppose that I was afflicted I have hundreds of times laid on my back on the floor with my foot and leg elevated on a chair in order to obtain slight ease from the pain I endured. The muscles and sinews in my leg looked as though they had twisted and tied in knots. The trouble went on in this way until finally nothing but opiates would deaden the pain. A few years ago I read of a cure in a similar case through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and decided to try them. For some time after I began their use, I could not see that they were helping me, but I decided that I would give them a fair trial. By the time I had used half a dozen boxes, there was a decided improvement in my case, and I continued the use of the pills until I had taken twelve boxes, when I felt my cure was complete. Several years have since passed and I have had no return of the trouble, so that I feel safe in saying that the cure has been permanent. I may also add that my wife has used the pills for indigestion, headaches and dizziness, and has found great benefit in them. Words cannot express the great benefit Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been to me, and I hope similar sufferers will profit by my experience." Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure by going to the root of the disease. They renew and build up the blood, and strengthen the nerves, thus driving disease from the system. If your dealer does not keep them they will be sent postpaid at 50c a box, or

The WHIRL of the TOWN

The Weekly Commercial published in Chatham printed a scurrilous article last week about the purser on the Newcastle ferry boat. The item, which was headed "A Miserable Purser," insinuated that the collector of fares on this boat had stolen 75 cents from a lady passenger. Mr. Russell has been engaged in steamboating on the Miramichi for thirty-seven years and bears a reputation for honesty, which the Commercial man, might copy with beneficial results. The article was ridiculous to say the least but at the same time it is extremely irritating to be talked about in such a manner, even by an unprincipled and unreliable scribbler. It is understood Mr. Russell has retained Mr. E. P. Williston and that proceedings will be immediately instituted against the Commercial's editor.

The concert to have been held in the hall at Millerton on the 11th has been postponed until August 1st.

Owing to the early hour of going to press we were unable to give a report of the proceedings of the Town Council last night.

Mr. J. M. Falconer, the enterprising carriage builder has erected an extension to his shop, 20x40.

The Ladies of the Methodist Church intend holding a Social on their Church grounds on Thursday, 19th inst. Full particulars next week.

Ravel's, "Humpty Dumpty," company occupied the stage of the Masonic Hall, Monday evening. The performance is made up of pantomime and vaudeville and is full of side splitting acts and situations. A person would be a cawl indeed, who would not laugh at the funny sayings and ludicrous situations. The acrobatic work and the buck and wing dancing were features of the show.

The new woman has found a new vocation. The "bike" is too tame for her, the saddle altogether too tame for her. She is surely ahead of her time, and any one who doubts it and wishes to be convinced can have proof positive when Lemen Brothers, World's Monster Shows, Great Three Ring Circus, 30-Cage Menagerie, Roman Hippodrome, Monster Museum, Oceanic Aquarium and Congress of Living Phenomena will exhibit.

The checks for the payment of the Masonic hall arrived here on Monday. The building will be at once converted into a drill hall, so our chances of seeing a show here for sometime are slight. It is to be hoped some enterprising citizen will erect a suitable play house. Newcastle is a good show town, and a hall would, unquestionably, prove a paying investment. A rink on the first floor and a theatre up stairs would insure the financial success of such an institution. Let some of our wealthy citizens take hold of the matter at once.

A brilliant Jewish wedding took place in Chatham Sunday afternoon. The contracting parties were Mr. M. Tarter and Miss Freda Schachter. The ceremony which was performed by Rabbi Rabinowitz of St. John was held at the residence of Mr. Charles Schachter. A large number of friends of the contracting parties were present, and after the ceremony an elaborate supper was served. The house was tastefully decorated with lovely plants and exotic flowers. The happy couple will spend their honeymoon in New York and vicinity. Many useful and costly presents were received.

Mgr. Falciano, Delegate Apostolic to Canada, will arrive here next Wednesday from St. John. He will be met at the station by St. Michael's band and a committee, and escorted to the Bishop's residence. At 7 o'clock in the church, a joint address from the clergy and laity will be presented to him, to be followed by benediction. His Excellency will hold a reception in the Bishop's parlor later in the evening. He goes from here to Bathurst on Friday. Mgr. Falciano counts as the direct and personal representative of the Pope. He is an Italian, but speaks English fluently.—World.
