Crossing Bridges.

No doubt that bridge will be safe and strong.

When you reach it, do not fear, for half life's troubles and grief and loss is in crossing the bridge we never cross.

So keep your eyes on the shining way.

And give just a word of cheer.

And enjoy the trees and the flowers.

For the thought will come with a bit of time.

That we may not pass this way again.

But stop if you meet with a hindrance.

While looking above to the goal you see.

Help others to reach it, my dear.

And who can tell that 'bridge' may be a bridgehead.

A bridgehead built for you and me.

THE PHOTOGRAPH.

Iris Cheatham was dispensing afternoon tea in the drawing room when the news of her fiancé's party was broken to her.

"Iris!" said Mrs. Hanbury, suddenly, reaching for her second "salet of honor" and seeking some verbal cover for the act, "how did Mr. Newton enjoy his motor ride on Monday?"

Miss Cheatham was too much surprised to be discreet. Had she been on her guard, she would have smiled pleasantly, replied nonchalantly, "Oh, very much, I believe," and passed on to inquire affectionately after Mrs. Hanbury's baby. Taken completely aback, she merely exclaimed, with wonder:

"Motor ride? I never knew—"

"Ah, then, perhaps I shouldn't have said anything about it. But Mr. Newton seemed to be enjoying himself so much that I made sure he would have told you."

"It was useless to pass the matter off now. Four pairs of eyes—and all female—were closely watching her."

"Where did you see him?"

"He was in a motor coming up Highgate Hill. I was going down in a team; of course, he didn't see me. It was the Dodson's car. There were only Miss Dodson and Mr. Newton in it."

"No chauffeur?" inquired one horrified listener.

"Oh, of course there was the chauffeur, but he sat in front. I didn't reckon him."

"Highgate Hill," said Iris, shortly, "is not the kind of hill one likes to see a motor on."

But that did not settle the matter—at least, not for her. Two questions were still unanswered. Why was Alfred Newton in the neighborhood of Highgate Hill at all? Also, why was he ascending it in the Dodson's motor car, let alone with the undeniably pretty Miss Dodson?

The Alameda road, where the Dodson's and Cheatham's both reside, is a select suburban thoroughfare. No one in it keeps less than two servants, probably half a dozen (at the most) rise to three. The Dodson's are the only people that attain to the dignity and luxury of owning a motor car. That car, kept at a local garage, is at once the pride and envy of all other inhabitants of the road; to the Cheatham's, indeed, it is a veritable thorn in the flesh. The Cheatham girls—there is a younger one than Iris at College—have publicly given out that their father, Major Cheatham, is too devoted to horses ever to take to motoring. To his intense personal discomfort the Major is made to hire a horse about once every two months in order to give artistic verisimilitude to the statement.

Now, that explanation is long, but every word of it is necessary. You understand, perfectly, now how Iris Cheatham felt when she learnt that her lover had been seen with the Dodson girl in the obnoxious motor.

"That night Alfred Newton came, as usual, to the Cheatham's house. Iris received him coldly. After drumming a little with his fingers on the elbow of the sofa he asked bluntly what was wrong.

"I don't think, Alfred," she pointed, "that there ought to be any secrets between us."

"My dear girl, I have none."

"Oh, yes you have. You never told me about your ride in the Dodson's motor car."

He laughed.

"Never mind! You have seen, that's quite sufficient, and there's a dread of gossip about it. I must go. I do think it fast."

"Fast! Why their chauffeur drives the thing at the pace of a horse. But there, you're not in the mood for being teased. What else did you hear?"

"Only—who was the other occupant of the car?"

"O, I say don't be jealous! There was really no cause. Shall I tell you how it all came about?"

"If you promise to tell me the absolute truth."

"Of course! There's nothing to keep back. Well, Miss Dodson drove into town to bring her father out. She often does that I believe, on the days Dodson's office is next door to mine in Ladsenhill Street."

"Indeed?"

"I can't help it, of course, but it is next door; there's no getting over that. I had knocked off business for the day and came out of the building on my

For the railway station.

There was the Dodson's car standing by the side of the curb, Milly Dodson in it, and her father on the pavement talking to her. I bowed and was passing on, when he caught me by the arm. "Newton," he said, "how would you like to drive home in our car? Milly has come to fetch me, but I've an important board meeting on, and can't possibly leave for an hour and a half at the earliest. Do jump in—there's a good fellow—and take my place."

"Well, of course, it isn't every day you get the chance of a spin in a motor. I jumped in and that's all."

"I looked stolidly in front of her without speaking a word."

"'Haven't you anything to say?' he asked."

"Only this: Suppose the chauffeur had been alone in the car, would you have got in?"

"Certainly! Look here, Iris, you are most absurdly jealous. There's not the slightest ground for it. I can't think how you can possibly be so small."

"Small!"

"He was really angry now."

"Yes, small and petty in the extreme."

"There was no reply from Iris, save a faint smile."

"They were still falling when, half an hour earlier than usual, Alfred took his unhappy leave."

Subsequently, in the privacy of her room, Iris dried her eyes and proceeded to the concoction of a scheme of revenge.

He had accused her of selfishness and pettiness. From any man, the scolding would have been insulting, from a lover, who ought to say nothing but what was pleasant, it was positively hateful. Was Alfred's own nature so big and generous that he could afford to launch these untrue charges at her? Had he not a talent at his rate, of the jealousy which he had declared was devouring her?

Ah, that was it. She must make him jealous. Not only make him jealous but make him admit his jealousy. These people would be re-established between them, and the sun would shine once more. Now, how was the thing to be worked?

"The idea came with exquisite clarity. It was to be a surprise. To be a surprise to Alfred, there had been another occupant of the car, a distant cousin of hers, Ned Morris by name. Ned, although a nice boy, had one of those hopeless artistic temperaments that fall short of artistic fulfillment; he never succeeded in anything, was usually in debt, and of course, wholly impossible as a husband. Alfred, a practical business man without any artistic leanings, naturally despised him utterly."

To have brought Ned now himself upon the field would have been lovely, but that was impossible; he was in a distant part of the world, and had not been heard of for months. However, she could not see how to do the next best thing, to a drawer upstairs full of odds and ends there was a large photograph of Ned, taken in costume on an occasion when he and she were setting in some amateur theatricals. Once Alfred had expressed a dislike to the photograph she hated to see it, she made an absolute copy of himself, and she—these were the early days of the engagement, of course—promptly handed it to obscurity."

Now she would resurrect it. She would place it in the very center of the drawing room mantelpiece, where Alfred would be sure to see it at once. She pictured his disgust as his eyes fell on it. She would let him think that since last evening's strange moment he had been tearing food from Ned's sudden resurrection. Iris, of course, his jealousy would show forth. She would accuse him of selfishness and pettiness. After the first shock of surprise he would surrender and plead her forgiveness. There would be tender words of reconciliation, sealed by kisses, and all would be as of old. The kisses that had broken the secret being packed up again like a disgraced child.

"Yes, I knew that."

"Alfred told me himself an hour or two ago. We met each other in the city and had a cup of coffee together. I was only joking just now. The idea came when I saw that beastly photograph up there. Did I ever look such a fool as that picture represents me? Oh, by the way, Alfred gave me a post for you. He was going to post it, but thought it would save time if I brought it, as I was coming here. Better read it. Don't mind me! Iris did read it—promptly! Her face beamed. A darling note! Alfred must have ransacked the dictionary for words of coquetry. The storm was over, the sun shone again."

"It's all right, Iris. I'll give you another likeness of me—a recent one. I'm going to put this in the fire. I shouldn't like my wife to see it."

"Your wife?"

"Yes, she's waiting in a hansom at the corner. May I bring her in?"

The advertising merchant is the one who does the business in these days of push and enterprise. There are more newspaper readers to-day than ever before in the history of the world. The newspaper places your business under the eyes of the buyer. He sees what he wants, and, knowing where to find it, looks up the wide-wake merchant who asks him to come and see him. Success in these days of sharp competition calls for eternal vigilance. You can't keep a hush down.

By 10 a. m. Ned's photograph cleaned with breadcrumbs, occupied the premier position on the drawing room mantel-shelf.

It was 3 o'clock the same afternoon.

"A gentleman has called to see you, miss."

"Not Mr. Newton?" Her thoughts hurried to the other string.

"No, Miss! A gentleman I've never seen before. I've asked him into the drawing room."

"But didn't he give you his name?"

"No, miss, he wouldn't. But he looked quite a gentleman, pale, and shouldn't of course, have let him in."

Iris flew to her room to tidy her hair. Persons who gave no names were usually after subscriptions, but whoever the mysterious visitor might be, nothing was to be gained by appearing dowdy in his presence. She had, in her slight suspicion, too, that it might be a friend of Alfred's with an olive branch.

She turned the drawing-room door handle and entered. A man was standing on the hearth-rug, with his back to her, keenly contemplating Ned's photograph on the mantel-piece. The figure swerved round, and she faced—Ned Morris himself.

In her surprise she stood like a statue. He came forward, both hands—big, browned hands outstretched.

"'Ned!' she cried. 'Come back!'

"Yes, I'm back. Don't look so startled. I'm far too much sunburnt to be a ghost."

"But—you—never—wrote."

"Not to a living soul. I wanted to take you all by surprise. Iris, how you've grown!"

"Nonsense!"

"Oh, but you're inches higher, or is it the heels? It's good to be home again—good to come back and find such a welcome awaiting me. All the way here I was thinking—how would Iris receive me. How would she look upon one, who five years back, dated to love her? Then I was shown into this room, and there staring me in the face, was that old photograph of mine. I almost went out on my knees with gratitude; the relief was so tremendous."

WOLFVILLE, N. S., JUNE 5, 1908.

Town Council Meeting.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Council on Wednesday evening Mayor Black and Councillors Hales, Ford and Abbott, with the Recorder, were present.

Reports were presented by Streets, Poor and Finance Committees.

The Streets Committee reported on work done during the month, and recommended the appointment of a special committee on electric lighting.

The Finance Committee reported receipts during the month $677.84, with expenditures $419.62.

The following bills were passed:

A. J. Woodman	..... $ 9.00
Rebecca Goodfellow	..... 10.00
Acadia Electric Light Co.	..... 43.32
Valley Telephone Co.	..... .95
Town Clerk	..... 1.65
Hatchinson's Express	..... 1.50
Robert Sutherland	..... 10.00

Rev. J. W. Brown addressed the Council on behalf of the extension of Central avenue. It was decided that the street be taken over by the town when it shall have been properly graded, ditched and laid out.

The following resolution was adopted:

Whereas the Council has been unable to acquire for the town the electric light plant at the Acadia Electric Light Co. at a reasonable price; it is therefore

Resolved that the Council, in pursuance of the desire of the rate-payers as expressed at the several public meetings heretofore held, and under authority and powers conferred upon the Council by chapter 122 of the acts of 1907, take immediate steps to acquire elsewhere, for the town, an electric light and power plant and system suitable and sufficient for the purposes mentioned and authorized by the said act; and it is Further resolved, that the Streets and Public Property Committee, or an Electric Light Committee if such be appointed by the Council, be requested to make enquiries forthwith as to the best terms upon which the necessary loan can be negotiated and the lowest price obtainable for a suitable plant, and make a report thereon to this Council at or before its next regular monthly meeting.

The Mayor and Councillors Ford and Hales were appointed a special committee to enquire into and report on the best measure for carrying into effect the act enabling the town to acquire an electric light plant.

It was resolved that the Council take immediate steps to prevent baseball and other ball games from being played on the school grounds by any person except school children, and these only during recess and noon hours.

Dr. DeWitt, as Health Officer, presented a comprehensive report on the attention of the Council to a number of matters which required looking after.

Death of Rev. Geo. E. Tufts.

After a short illness, which was not at first thought to be of a serious nature, one of the best known and most highly respected Baptist divines, Rev. George E. Tufts, of Islesboro, Maine, passed peacefully away on Thursday evening, age, sixty-eight years. Mr. Tufts, who was the only brother of Professor J. P. Tufts, of Acadia, had recently spent his winters here, to be near his brother and family, and by his kindly disposition and pleasing personality, endeared himself to all with whom he came in contact, and his unexpected death will be heard with deep regret, not only in New England, where he labored so many years as a faithful pastor, but in this his native province, which he so dearly loved. He was born in Albany, Annapolis, in 1841, and was graduated from Acadia College in the class of 1866. After teaching for a time at Baddeck Academy, and at the Baptist Institute at Fredericton, he took a theological course at Newton, graduating in 1877. He was ordained at Waterville, Me., and his succeeding pastorates have been in that state—Brunswick, Belfast and Islesboro. At Belfast he was the esteemed and beloved pastor for over twenty-five years and was only released from his charge of this prominent church at his own earnest solicitation. Since that he has been supplying the Islesboro church during the summer and spending his winters here. He was a most successful pastor and had rare ability as a sympathetic friend and preacher. He loved to proclaim the Gospel, and even while resting here, supplied most willingly for neighboring pastors. His last sermon was preached at Halifax, only a few days before he was taken ill. He was married in 1868 to Miss Augusta Davis, daughter of the late Rev. Mr. Davis. She died at Bridgetown in 1878.

The funeral services were conducted by Rev. M. P. Freeman a life long friend of the deceased. Prayer was offered at the house by Rev. Dr. Chute and the burial service at the grave was read by the Rev. E. B. Moore. Impressive music was given by a select choir. Mr. Herman DeWitt sang "All is well." The order books were Professor Jones, Wottons, Hales and Moore; T. E. Oakes, C. R. Holt and A. B. Caldwell.

Woman's Troubles.

Many woman's troubles are of stomach origin and have been relieved by Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. One woman who had spent over two thousand dollars for medicine and treatment was cured by a few boxes of these Tablets.

Acadia's Anniversary.

Favorable weather, a large attendance of visitors and exercises that were marred in no way made the seventieth anniversary of Acadia College and affiliated schools a most delightful occasion. The exercises proper began on Saturday evening when an interpretative recital was given in College Hall by Miss Jessie Eldridge Southwick of the Emerson College of Oratory. As was confidently anticipated this was an attractive and highly appreciated performance.

The first distinctly Academic function was the Baccalaureate sermon on Sunday morning in College Hall, which was filled to its utmost capacity to listen to the eloquent speaker, the Rev. Robt. Macdonald, D. D., of Brooklyn, N. Y., pastor of Washington Avenue Baptist church. Mr. Macdonald was a former student of Acadia, and spoke of the great pleasure it gave him to revisit this classic town and to witness signs of progress in all directions, though he missed the old teachers of his student days.

He took for his text, John 13:3, subject "The Christian Ideal."

Mr. Macdonald is a forceful, convincing speaker, and his sermon made a deep impression upon the graduating class. The music under the direction of Prof. Ringwald was most inspiring. With a chorus of fifty voices selected from the Choral Society, in addition to the hymns, Schubert's "Omnipotence" was given and "Awake the Harp," from Handel's Creation.

The address on Sunday evening in College Hall before the College Y. M. C. A., by Rev. John MacNeil of Toronto, on "The Quest for Truth," was a most masterly presentation of a subject of eminent and abiding interest. The eloquent speaker took as his theme "Because Thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent and revealed them unto babes." He graphically gave the biblical setting of these words and exhibited the conditions under which the quest of truth must be sought. Excellent music was rendered by a choir, and at the close of the address Miss Knowles, of the Seminary sang "Nearer my God to Thee" in a most pleasing manner.

The annual closing of Horton Collegiate Academy took place on Monday evening in the College Hall, under the direction of Principal Mersereau, who leaves Wolfville this year to take an advanced course after four years of connection with the Academy; two years as House Master and two years as Principal. This is the 77th year of the Academy's history.

While the professional match "Tandem des Dragons" was being played by Miss Ida Rand and Miss Hazel Chute, the Academy teachers and pupils took their positions. Prayers were offered by the Rev. E. B. Moore, and a summary of the year's work given by Principal Mersereau, after which the secretary, Jennie I. McLeod, called the roll, which was occasion for some white noise.

A beautiful vocal duet was given by Misses Knowles and Knopson, which was followed by the class history by J. S. Bates. This was an interesting review of the victories and tribulations of '08 during the four years of its undergraduate career.

A violin solo by Miss Hilda Vaughn was a very attractive feature of the morning and a concert solo by Mr. Watson was much enjoyed.

L. G. just made a decided hit in the class prophecy modelled upon Hilarion, in which he traced the subsequent history of his class-mates in the happy hunting grounds of the future.

The valedictory, by Mildred W. Daniels, elicited great applause.

The class announced a donation to the College of $250 for scholarships to be given to the sophomores making the best average, $20 a year being added for six years.

On Tuesday evening long before the hour of beginning, Assembly Hall was packed to the doors by an expectant audience to witness the long procession of white-robed maidens march in to the music of Blake's Processional March, played by Misses Layton and Knowles.

After a vocal solo by Miss McKeen the following essays were given: "The Princess," Hattie Josephine Baker. "The first Americans," by Goldie Frances Sweet. "Canada's Debt to the Hudson's Bay Company," Louise Thompson.

Piano solos were given by Miss Evelyn Bishop and Miss Edith Woodman in their usual brilliant style, a violin solo by Margaret Evelyn Sherrin and a vocal duet by Misses Knopson and Knowles. It was a most enjoyable programme throughout.

Acadia Seminary has just closed a most prosperous year, the number of pupils on the register amounting to 292, 108 in regular course, 184 in special course, 157 in music, 149 in art, 84 in general, 22 in domestic science, 46 in stenography and typewriting. 113 have been in residence.

The Rev. W. S. Hutchins, of Truro, Nova Scotia, addressed the class on the coronation of Christ and in all countries where His kingdom is not yet established women is uncrowned, unhonored and unseeing. The royal diadem of a queenly womanhood was the splendid gift of His coming. We see in His the slayer of woman's sin; we glory in her high moral nature and sterling qualities of heart and life, and with the passing of the centuries the revive of woman in Christ-ian countries has become increasingly varied and efficient.

The G. F. Pappant prizes were then announced by Principal DeWitt: English Prize—Beatrice Shand, Windsor. French Prize—Beatrice Shand, Windsor.

3 Piano Prize—Edith Woodman, Grand Pre. 4 The St. Clair Paint Scholarship—Beatrice Shand and Alice Harrington, Sydney. Governor General's Medal for English—Louisa Thompson, Chatham Harbor, St. John. Rodman Pratt Prize, highest rank, 40.00—Louisa Thompson, Chatham Harbor, St. John. Pearl Price, Brooklyn. Special Book Prize—Alice Harrington, Sydney.

Wednesday, the great day of the anniversary exercises, saw the people early astir. Besides the large number in town, hundreds drove in and the grounds were thronged long before access could be had to the Hall. The morning train from Halifax brought quite an accession of visitors to participate in the closing exercises, among them being Governor Fraser, Governor McKittrick, President Wood, Principal Peterson, Judge Langley and others.

At 10:30 the procession of Governors, 51 men, Faculty and Students in Academic costume, formed and marched to their place in College Hall, while the processional was being played.

The following programme was splendidly carried out. Address—An educated Man, Rev. Nathan E. Wood, D. D., President of Newton Theological Institution. Address—University Problems, Wm. Peterson, M. A., LL. D., C. M. G., Principal of McGill University. (Continued on page 2)

WOLFVILLE, N. S.

merald; George Lewis, Peter John Grant, Ningpo, China. Tuesday morning College Hall was again crowded for the class day exercises of the Acadia graduates for 1908. Prof. Ringwald played the entrance march and the class president, John H. Geldart, gave a very appropriate address, after which the secretary, Jennie I. McLeod, called the roll, which was occasion for some white noise. A beautiful vocal duet was given by Misses Knowles and Knopson, which was followed by the class history by J. S. Bates. This was an interesting review of the victories and tribulations of '08 during the four years of its undergraduate career. A violin solo by Miss Hilda Vaughn was a very attractive feature of the morning and a concert solo by Mr. Watson was much enjoyed. L. G. just made a decided hit in the class prophecy modelled upon Hilarion, in which he traced the subsequent history of his class-mates in the happy hunting grounds of the future. The valedictory, by Mildred W. Daniels, elicited great applause. The class announced a donation to the College of $250 for scholarships to be given to the sophomores making the best average, $20 a year being added for six years. On Tuesday evening long before the hour of beginning, Assembly Hall was packed to the doors by an expectant audience to witness the long procession of white-robed maidens march in to the music of Blake's Processional March, played by Misses Layton and Knowles. After a vocal solo by Miss McKeen the following essays were given: "The Princess," Hattie Josephine Baker. "The first Americans," by Goldie Frances Sweet. "Canada's Debt to the Hudson's Bay Company," Louise Thompson. Piano solos were given by Miss Evelyn Bishop and Miss Edith Woodman in their usual brilliant style, a violin solo by Margaret Evelyn Sherrin and a vocal duet by Misses Knopson and Knowles. It was a most enjoyable programme throughout. Acadia Seminary has just closed a most prosperous year, the number of pupils on the register amounting to 292, 108 in regular course, 184 in special course, 157 in music, 149 in art, 84 in general, 22 in domestic science, 46 in stenography and typewriting. 113 have been in residence. The Rev. W. S. Hutchins, of Truro, Nova Scotia, addressed the class on the coronation of Christ and in all countries where His kingdom is not yet established women is uncrowned, unhonored and unseeing. The royal diadem of a queenly womanhood was the splendid gift of His coming. We see in His the slayer of woman's sin; we glory in her high moral nature and sterling qualities of heart and life, and with the passing of the centuries the revive of woman in Christian countries has become increasingly varied and efficient. The G. F. Pappant prizes were then announced by Principal DeWitt: English Prize—Beatrice Shand, Windsor. French Prize—Beatrice Shand, Windsor. 3 Piano Prize—Edith Woodman, Grand Pre. 4 The St. Clair Paint Scholarship—Beatrice Shand and Alice Harrington, Sydney. Governor General's Medal for English—Louisa Thompson, Chatham Harbor, St. John. Rodman Pratt Prize, highest rank, 40.00—Louisa Thompson, Chatham Harbor, St. John. Pearl Price, Brooklyn. Special Book Prize—Alice Harrington, Sydney. Wednesday, the great day of the anniversary exercises, saw the people early astir. Besides the large number in town, hundreds drove in and the grounds were thronged long before access could be had to the Hall. The morning train from Halifax brought quite an accession of visitors to participate in the closing exercises, among them being Governor Fraser, Governor McKittrick, President Wood, Principal Peterson, Judge Langley and others. At 10:30 the procession of Governors, 51 men, Faculty and Students in Academic costume, formed and marched to their place in College Hall, while the processional was being played. The following programme was splendidly carried out. Address—An educated Man, Rev. Nathan E. Wood, D. D., President of Newton Theological Institution. Address—University Problems, Wm. Peterson, M. A., LL. D., C. M. G., Principal of McGill University. (Continued on page 2)

NYAL'S SPRING TONIC

A Pleasant Bitter. Purely Vegetable. An Energizer & Stimulant.
Composed of those vegetable Tonics, Bi-tonics, etc., which supply the system with material that has been benumbed during the winter. At the spring season the body craves just these elements which are combined in the proper proportions to produce the greatest human energy.
An Excellent Tonic for every season, but particularly necessary in the Spring. Banishes that tired, lazy feeling that comes as a result of the too close confinement of the winter months. Gives a snap and spring to the indolent muscles, braces up the tired nerves, and stimulates the appetite. Makes work a pleasure. Gives a zest to the daily tasks and supplies that comfortable feeling of confidence and ability that comes when the whole human mechanism is working in a normal healthy condition.

Electric Light Matters.

A special meeting of the town council was held on Tuesday last week, at which the following notice was drafted and ordered to be sent to the Acadia Electric Light Co.:

To the Acadia Electric Light Company, Wolfville, N. S.

In the matter of chapter 122 of the Acts of 1907, and in the matter of the arbitration, recently had under said Act between the town of Wolfville and the said Company:

You are hereby notified that the amount awarded by the arbitrators in their award made herein dated the 26th day of May, A. D. 1907, appears to the town Council of the town of Wolfville excessive when compared with the benefits that will ensue to the town by the said Act or with the work proposed to be done thereunder, and the Council have therefore adjourned operations under section 21 to said Act, and under the said Act so far as the same is effected by such award, and do hereby give notice of such abandonment, and that the town Council have decided not to proceed with such operations.

By order,
ALBERT E. COLDWELL,
Town Clerk of the Town of Wolfville, Wolfville, June 3, 1908.

This notice at first glance would appear decisive enough as far as the abandonment of electric light operations by the town goes, but a more careful scrutiny of its wording shows that it refers only to such abandonment as is effected by the award of the arbitrators, and as this award has been rejected by the town the only operations which it is really called upon to abandon are the negotiations with the company. The notice carefully follows the wording of the electric light act.

At the regular meeting on Wednesday evening, notice of such abandonment having been given, the council by unanimous vote appointed an electric light committee, which has already taken steps to proceed with the sale of bonds, employment of an engineer and purchase of a plant.

The council, in compliance with the act, has approached the electric light company with terms of purchase and secured an arbitration, but as this is all that is required of the town under the act, and so the taking or leaving of the award is optional with the town, it proceeds now, unhampered by any further conditions, to acquire a plant of its own.

The town is to be congratulated on the fortunate position in which it finds itself in consequence of the careful wording of the act. Kentville, it will be remembered, secured an electric light act at the same session, but the construction and operation of a plant under its act is carefully conditioned on the purchase of the company's plant. This clause in the Kentville act reads—

"The town shall not have or operate any electric light or power plant or system until the council shall have acquired the electric light and power plant, and property of the company, under the provisions of this act."

There is no such clause in the Wolfville act, and since it confers every power necessary for the construction and operation of a plant and the sale of electricity the council is now able to avail itself of its privileges and has already commenced proceedings along this line.
