CHAPTER XXIV.

IN THE HOUR OF NEED.

"You have answered," he said, in a low voice, and the officer, after a moment's hesitation, nodded ruefully and went out.

Lord Cecil paced up and down the room with the discharge in his hand. The excitement of the last twenty-four hours, the suspense respecting Doris, the arrest, and now this sudden release, added to his physical exhaustion, told upon him fearfully.

That he owed his escape from the disgrace of imprisonment to Lady Grace he could not doubt. Doris, on whose truth he would have staked his life, had lifted him; his uncle, the marquis, had, in his hour of trouble, disdainfully deserted him and cast him aside, and this woman, whom he had regarded as a perfect type of worldliness, had come to his aid and freed him.

She had done more than that, for she had risked her reputation in her desire to show him her sympathy with him. She had done that which only one woman in a thousand would have dared to do: come to his room alone and unprotected.

A man is never so tender as regards his heart as in the moment when he has been betrayed by one woman and succored by another; and Lord Cecil's heart throbbed with a painful sense of admiration and gratitude towards this woman of the world, the girl whom he had always regarded as just a society beauty, who had, at such a fearful risk to her own name, come to his side in his dark hour.

"May Heaven forget me if ever I forget it!" he said to himself, not once or twice only. "What shall I say to her? What am I to do to show her how I feel about it? And where shall I get the money to repay her? I can't let her be the loser; I must pay her; but how—how?"

Meanwhile, Lady Grace had reached her house in Grosvenor Square, and, going to the drawing-room, found Mr. Spencer Churchill seated in an easy-chair, reading the last annual report of the Sweeps' Orphan Home.

"Well!" he said, looking up with a bland smile.

She sank into a chair, and began pulling off her gloves, her eyes downcast, her face pale and thoughtful.

"It is done," she said.

"Ah!" he said, with a nod of satisfaction. "You have seen him, then?"

"Yes, I have seen him," she said, in a low voice. "I was only just in time."

He smiled, with an air of complacency.

"Oh, I think I timed it carefully," he said. "I knew he would be at the office the moment they opened it; I calculated that he would be arrested shortly after, and that he would go to his rooms and telegraph to the marquis, allowing a little over an hour—say two—for the answer, a refusal, as the dear marquis and I arranged; and there you are, you see!" and he laughed, softly.

"Yes," she said; "you arranged it very well."

"Yes—! And the news at the office. Is he satisfied?"

"Yes, he is satisfied. He saw her name. It did not occur to him to ascertain if she had really sailed; if it had—"

She paused, significantly.

The philanthropist laughed with unctuous enjoyment.

"But he didn't, you see, my dear young lady. That is just the little risk. Why should he suspect that anyone should go to the trouble and expense of booking a passage for Miss Marlowe? And you found him in bonds—just starting for prison?" And he rubbed his hands together with renewed enjoyment. "Poor Cecil! Really, it is very sad that one should be compelled to take such strong measures. And yet, after all, will not the lesson be a salutary one? Pride must have a fall, dear lady; pride must have a fall! And our dear Cecil!—his small eyes glistened maliciously for a moment—'was very, very proud! And you paid the money?'"

She looked up with a little start.

"Yes, I paid the money. In fact, I have carried out your instructions to the letter."

"Yes, yes; you are a courageous girl, dear lady. It is not everyone so well known as you who so far brave the consequences as to go to a gentleman's rooms—"

She looked at him, with a flash in her eyes and with a tight compression of the lips, but he pretended not to notice the warning signs.

"Our dear Cecil ought to be very grateful to you—very! And, if I know his generous nature—and I fancy I do—I think he must be. Oh, yes, he will never forget it—never! Why, bless me, if it were known—if, for instance, any acquaintance had seen you going or departing—what would not be said?"

And he held up his fat hands.

She sprang to her feet and stood with her hand pressed against the chair, her bosom heaving, her magnificent eyes fixed upon him with supposed fury.

"A word, a hint, just a whisper, is enough nowadays for the scandal-loving world; and I can just fancy how delighted the society papers would be with such a dainty morsel as the incident of a visit to Lord C—N— from Lady G—P—n. They never print in full; oh, no; but everybody understands—"

"Take care!" she breathed. "Do not drive me too far!"

"Oh, yes, yes; we must take care!" he assented, feigning to misunderstand her. "We must not breathe a word of it, of course; must flatly contradict it, if we hear a hint dropped. But there, dear Cecil would rather die than admit it!"

"Yes," she said, between her teeth; "yes, you speak the truth there: he would rather die than harm should come to me—to anyone—for his sake!"

"Y—e-s, he is so high-minded, isn't he? And how does the dear fellow bear this blow? It isn't pleasant to be jilted, is it? Is he resigned? I am curious now to hear how he takes it!"

"Go to him and ask him!" she said, with fine scorn. "Take care, Spencer Churchill! Up to the present your schemes have succeeded. You know best how far they will carry on. To me it seems that you—and I are walking on a volcano. What if he should find this—this girl?"

"Miss Marlowe, do you mean?" he said. "My dear lady, you forget; she is in Australia!" he said.

"Is she in London?" she asked, in a lower voice, and looking away from him. "If so, and he finds her—"

She stopped, significantly.

He smiled blandly.

"Let me beg of you not to be uneasy, dear lady," he said, seriously. "The young lady in question left England nearly a week ago, and there is no chance of our friend Cecil meeting her until it is too late."

"Too late?" she echoed, raising her eyes to his face.

"Yes," he smiled. "Until he is married."

She let her hand fall from the mantel-shelf, and a warm crimson flooded her face, and he chuckled unctuously.

"I am quite sure it is time dear Cecil 'rang himself,' as the French say; it really is time he was married and settled down. Don't you agree with me? Ah! I see it is too delicate a subject. Well, good-morning, dear lady. Accept my profound homage and admiration for your courage and generosity in our dear young friend's behalf," and with another chuckle he smiled himself out of the room.

CHAPTER XXV.

AS IN A DREAM.

"There is no place like Florence," said Lady Despard, in her soft, languorous voice. "One gets tired of London and Paris, and as for Venice, I always fancy, when I'm there, that I'm living somewhere in Regent's Park, near the canal, you know; and, as for the country in England, you either got burnt up by the heat or drowned by the rain. But Florence"—she paused, and sighed contentedly—"Oh, it's always delicious!"

She was lying in a hammock, between two laburnums, on the lawn in front of the Villa Rimini, and she addressed Doris, who sat on the ground, with an open book in her lap, but with her eyes fixed dreamily on the exquisite view, which stretched out in an endless vista of grassy plains and violet-tinted hills, over which the full moon was shedding its silvery light.

The soft, evening breeze came to the two women, laden with flowers, as with an offering; there were flowers everywhere; in the long beds, starting the velvety lawns; on the banks, which ran along the limits of the garden; in huge jardinières, on the terraces and balconies; on the plains, which lay like embroidered cloths beneath them, and over the hills, to which they lent colour and perfume.

It was a land of fairies, a land of beauty, in which every breath of wind that blew carried with it the memory of music, song and laughter and joyfulness. In a word, it was Florence in the height of her loveliness, crowned as a bride for her bridegroom the summer, and rejoicing in her splendour.

The Villa Rimini, with its numerous windows twinkling with the recently lit candles, was one of the most beautiful of the many palatial residences in the "City of Flowers." It had been a home of one of the ancient princes, and when Lady Despard had first seen, fancied, and bought it, was nearly in ruins; but, with the immense wealth at her command, she had restored it, if not to quite its ancient splendour, at least to a semblance which came very near the original reality.

Marble corridors, vast saloons, with rare hangings and costly frescoes, statues which the Louvre would gladly have bidden for; antique fountains and priceless mosaics were all here, as in the days when the princely owners were, indeed, a name and a power in the land.

And here she and Doris had been living a dreamy existence, a period of lotus-eating for nearly a month.

There was the usual colony of English in Florence, of which the Villa Rimini was, by right of its splendour and the rank and wealth of Lady Despard, the centre.

Her hospitality was limitless, and the Salon of the Princes, as the vast reception-room was, almost resembled a royal levee; while the widely extending grounds were open to those fortunate individuals who had procured an introduction to the wealthy owner.

To the Villa Rimini came also the Florentine nobility; tall, grave-looking Italians, with their high-bred voices and polished manners, men whom Doris always pictured as wearing the silken hose and brocaded tunics of their forefathers in the old Florentine days, when men wore shoes almost as pointed as the swords which were always ready to leap from their scabbards with—or without—the slightest provocation.

Amidst these surroundings, Lady Despard held what might, with little exaggeration, be termed a court; but it might be said, to her credit, the admiration, the adoration she received did not turn her head, probably because she recognised the obvious fact that she shared her throne with the quiet-looking, soft-voiced girl who had come to her as a companion, and whom she had grown to regard and love as a friend.

Once, when the reception was over and the two women were alone, as they were this evening, she looked at Doris, laughingly, and said:

"Well, dear, tired of all the adulation and worship, or are you looking forward to to-morrow's repitition? Seriously, my dear, I am beginning to be a little jealous; more than half the pretty speeches this afternoon were addressed to Miss Marlowe, and your bouquets were quite as numerous as mine. Beware of vanity, Doris!"

And Doris had looked up at her with the quiet smile, beneath which always lay an undercurrent of sadness, and shook her head, as she replied:

"The danger is all on your side, Lady Despard. You are the sun, I am merely the shadow. Some day someone will pluck the sun from its place, and the shadow will be desolate!"

But Lady Despard had laughed placidly.

New Relief For Constipation, "LES FRUITS"

Physicians agree that with the modern habits of living, constipation is likely to be always with us. They also agree that the constant use of any drug for the relief of constipation is exceedingly unwise—unwise for two reasons. First, a drug constantly used loses its effect and requires a constantly increased dose. Second, because the constant use of any drug is bad anyway.

So the cry is constantly going up from the constipated, "What can we do?" It will be interesting to a great many to know that an answer has been found in the re-discovery of a method which was used with great success by our Forefathers, and in Arabia far back in the twelfth century. The food is called "Les Fruits" because it is composed entirely of figs, dates, prunes, raisins and the leaves of each with the substitution of the Alexandra leaf for the raisin leaf. The taste is pleasant, if not to say delicious, and the effect is exceedingly satisfactory. Try it and be convinced.

HELPING PERSIA.

LONDON, Aug. 19.
(Reuter's)—In the House of Commons to-day at question time Mr. Cecil Harmsworth explained that it was proposed to lend Persia 2,000,000 pounds sterling at 7 per cent per annum, security being given upon the national revenues of Persia, with a view of enabling Persia to initiate contemplated reforms. The government was pledged to assist Persia to re-establish herself on a sound basis. There was not the slightest foundation, he said, for any suspicion that the government had proposed or that Persia would consent to the creation of anything in the nature of a British protectorate. The attitude of the Persian cabinet in negotiating the present agreement, and the impending visit of the Shah to Great Britain, was sufficient answer to any insinuations reflecting on the agreement and the loan.

Obituary.

Mr. John O'Neill, Bay-de-Verde.
(H. F. SHORTIS.)

On Tuesday last a message was received in town announcing the death of Mr. John O'Neill, merchant and planter of Bay-de-Verde, which occurred on Monday after a long illness, fortified by the rites of the Catholic Church of which he was a most consistent and exemplary member, at the age of 78 years.

For about a century the O'Neills of Bay-de-Verde were known over the whole country, as amongst the most enterprising, extensive and successful fish-killers in Newfoundland. His father came to this country about the year 1820 from Ireland, and was one of those fine old-school business men and planters; sturdy with decades of pioneering, strong in faith, rock-ribbed in his moral code, he suggested as he stood before you the immutable solidity of some great institution. To the writer's remembrance he had several beautiful schooners of his own, notably the Native Lass, engaged in the fisheries of our country, and at his demise the business was taken up by his son John, who has just passed from amongst us, who also conducted it with energy, ability and success.

Mr. John O'Neill was a man combining in an eminent degree business sagacity and integrity with strength of character and pleasing social qualities. His quiet, unassuming manner, his readiness to offer a helping hand to all, his sympathetic heart, coupled with an exceptionally bright intellect won for him innumerable friends and admirers in the whole country. He was one of those big-hearted, good-natured men whom to meet meant that one made a friend for ever, and by one who visited his home received a most hearty welcome, while his hospitality was unbounded. He seemed to possess all those qualities of heart and mind, so that his memory will not soon be forgotten. Vicissitudes came to him, as they do to all in this life, but he faced them with indomitable courage and in a spirit that overcame all obstacles. He was a Catholic who not only faithfully practised his religion, but most zealously championed it, and was a man who, after a long and eventful life, was able to say at the hour of death that he had never wilfully or knowingly wronged any one. For many years he conducted large business transactions formerly with Ridley & Sons, Harbor Grace, and many years past with the great firms in St. John's, and was noted for his sterling character and honesty in his dealings with his fellowman. And now he is no more, but his deeds live after him as a guiding example to us all. He has finished his course and has entered into rest, leaving three sons and one daughter, a very large number of relatives and hosts of friends to mourn their sad loss. Requiescat in pace.

AT THE BALSAM.—The following are guests at the Balsam Place:—Madame Joseph Gautier and child, Madame de la Villefroy and child, Cape Broyle; Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Parsons, Mr. St. Clair Manson, Halifax; Mr. L. A. Fleming, Hr. Grace; Rev. W. Cole, Trinity; Mr. C. A. Gord, Toronto.

In the Central District Court.

The King Against William Campbell, MANSLAUGHTER.

This is an inquiry held before me to the charge made by the Crown against William Campbell of St. John's, for that the accused at St. John's on the 11th day of August instant feloniously did kill and slay one John Moyst, a boy of fourteen years of age.

There were eight witnesses called for the Crown. The accident occurred just East of Butler's Bridge on Hamilton Street. The accused in his motor car with four others left his residence, Albany, for the city a little before two o'clock p.m. About thirty yards East of Butler's Bridge a country man's cart was stopped off the road on the South Side, and two barrels, one on top of the other, stood somewhat further up, on the North Side of the road. As the accused was passing between the cart and the barrels, the deceased John Moyst, who had been standing somewhere between the country man's horse's head and the tail of the cart, (the evidence is conflicting on this point, some of the witnesses say he came from the rear of the cart, whilst others believe he came from further up towards the horse's head) started at a quick rate to cross the road diagonally, facing eastwardly. The man in the cart and the men in the motor car shouted to the boy, but he, being deaf, did not hear or heed the warning cries, and continued on.

Some part of the front of the cart struck him, and both wheels on the right hand side, passed over his body, killing him almost instantly. The cart was stopped within its own length. One of the principal witnesses for the Crown, who was in the car at the time, and who shouted a warning to the boy, when he saw him start to run across the road, stated the car could not have been stopped from the time the boy was seen until he was struck, and that the accident was unavoidable.

The accused in his statement swore, as he approached Butler's Bridge, he blew his motor horn, which is an electric siren, and the car was going at the time at the rate of about seven or eight miles an hour. When the motor car got opposite the country man's cart, a boy came out quickly, as the accused believed from behind the cart, and started crossing the road diagonally, facing East. As he caught sight of the boy, he applied both brakes, hand and foot which acted at once, and shouted to the boy, but the front wheel on the right hand side of the car struck the boy, and the car passed over his body. From the time he saw the boy first, there was no opportunity to swerve the car.

All the witnesses swear the car was going at a medium or moderate rate of speed, and the majority of them heard the horn blowing near the bridge. Their statements contain no evidence of negligence or recklessness on the part of the accused.

Inquiries of this nature, the character of the evidence necessary to be submitted by the Prosecution in order to obtain a commitment of the accused, is well defined.

"Manslaughter by negligence occurs when a person is doing anything dangerous in itself, or has charge of anything dangerous in it."

"Where death results in consequence of a negligent act, to create responsibility, the charge of negligence must be so gross as to amount to recklessness: Mere inadvertence would not suffice to create criminal liability."

The questions I have here to decide are: Does the evidence submitted raise a strong and probable presumption of guilt? Has the Crown evidence of negligence amounting to recklessness? Has the prosecution made out a prima facie case against the accused?

No evidence of negligence or recklessness has been submitted by the Crown in this inquiry. The mere happening of the accident is not sufficient evidence of neglect on the part of the accused. The Prosecution must produce some affirmative evidence of negligence on the part of the accused before I can commit him for trial. The prosecution has not made out a prima facie case against the accused. I therefore dismiss the charge and release the accused.

Mr. Summers, K.C., Deputy Minister of Justice, appeared for the Crown. Mr. L. E. Emerson, B.L., appeared for the accused.

Dated at St. John's, this 21st, day of August, A.D. 1919.

A pretty wedding was solemnized on the 14th inst. at the Chapel of Our Lady of Good Counsel, Presentation Convent, Cathedral Square, when Miss Maud Cochrane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cochrane, Barter's Hill, and Mr. Ronald J. Kent, of Placentia were united in the bonds of matrimony by Rev. Dr. Green. The bride who was given away by her father, was prettily attired in a travelling costume of fawn broad cloth, with fox furs and georgette hat, and carried a bouquet of carnations, lilies of the valley and maiden hair fern. She was attended by her sister, Miss Vic. Cochrane, who wore a wine colored costume. Miss Mary Cochrane, niece of the bride, acted as flower girl and Mr. Leo O'Reilly supported the groom. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the residence of the bride's brother, Mr. John Cochrane, Pennywell Road, and the usual toasts duly honored, after which the party drove to Waterford Bridge where the happy couple joined the train for Holyrood where the honeymoon will be spent. The groom's present to the bride was a pendant, and to the bridesmaid a cameo brooch, and to the best man a stick pin. A splendid collection of presents testified to the popularity of the bride. On return to town Mr. and Mrs. Kent will take up residence at 53 Prescott St.

New Dock.

A splendid site has been secured by the Company lately organized to build a marine dock at Ship Cove, Burin, one of the safest harbors and best anchorage localities in the Island. In those days Spurrer had large wharves, numerous stores, etc., along the water-front, and were the owners of some of the largest and best built vessels in the country. AVOIDING ONE BIG MISTAKE.

Do you find it difficult to make decisions? If you do, look out. Or perhaps I had better say, "Look in."

For there is no surer sign of a mind not properly in command of itself, a nervous system not in just the right condition, than the inability to make decisions without hesitating and backing and filling and making and unmaking them and suffering agonies of regret after the thing has finally become inevitable.

Four Hours Spent Over a Simple Decision.

One of the most painful symptoms of a complete nervous breakdown is the absolute inability to make even the simplest decision. A friend of mine dropped in to see me one day in a state of utter weariness. "It seems he (being a good "Saramitan") had spent the whole morning walking with a friend who was the victim of a nervous breakdown. "I've been walking with him four hours," he said, "and every bit of that time I've been trying to help him make a decision as to whether he will go and spend next week with his sister or stay at the Inn another week—and I didn't succeed!"

"Why didn't you decide for him?" I asked.

He would not decide for him.

"That's just what I was determined not to do," he said. "He wanted me to but I wouldn't. That would not do him any good. I wanted to help him decide for himself because this time would make it stronger for next time, and that's the only way he will ever get out of this state he is in."

"Suppose he did decide and choose the thing that wasn't good for him?" I suggested.

"That wouldn't matter half as much as if he gave up the effort and got someone else to decide for him," he said.

Better Risk A Mistake Than Funk Your Decisions.

We all hate to make mistakes. There's something perfectly maddening about losing happiness needlessly through your own mistakes. But it is better to risk a few mistakes than to get into the habit of fudging decisions.

You doubtless remember my favorite quotation from Stevenson, "We can forgive mistakes, but not even God can forgive the hanger back."

Go ahead and make a mistake sometimes if you must. Very likely it won't be half so much a mistake as you think it. And, anyhow, if you have done your best, faced the problem squarely, computed the advantages and disadvantages as accurately as you knew how. And then gone calmly ahead without fretting or worrying, you have avoided one big mistake. And that's something to be thankful for.

Scotland's Oldest Newspaper.

(From the Detroit News)

A recent issue of "The Aberdeen Journal" was the 20,000th number of that venerable newspaper—now the oldest in Scotland. The first issue of "The Journal" was published on April 18, 1746, and contained an account, by an eyewitness, of the battle of Culloden, fought two days previously. This narrative, however, offended the Jacobites, and James Chalmers, the editor, narrowly escaped falling a victim to their wrath. He was a fellow apprentice of Benjamin Franklin. Another notable incident in "The Journal's" history was its being publicly burned at the hands of the common hangman in October, 1753—"an excellent advertisement," we are told.

But perhaps the outstanding event in the career of the newspaper was in 1787, when "The Aberdeen Journal" was visited by Robert Burns during his northern tour. In the office, on this occasion, Burns met Bishop Skinner, son of the author of "Tullachgorman" and "The Yowie w' the Crookit Horn," masterpieces of literature, which evoked the admiration of the Ayrshire poet. Afterward Burns and Chalmers (son of the founder) adjourned to the New Inn, where Dr. Johnson also stayed on his way north.

CHEER A BROTHER ON HIS WAY.

Cheer a brother on his way. Have a kindly word to say. Many a day he'll look behind An' remember all you've said. An' he'll bravely march ahead He'll fight on with courage grim Knowin' you have faith in him.

Strength by man is seldom shown When he has to stand alone; None so weak, who'er he be, As the man who cannot see Friendly faces in the throng Gladly cheering him along. He is prey to quick despair Who has nobody to care.

Cheer a brother on his way. Have a kindly word to say. He'll go whistlin' down the road Heedless of the heavy load That he's bearin' if he knows You are with him in his woes He'll fight hard in troubled days To be worthy of your praise.

Curiosity.

(Chef and Boy.)

A boy went to work for a chef in a city hotel as a cook's apprentice. Being a curious young man, spying a large steaming kettle in a corner, he asked the old chef the following:

"What's that large kettle?"

The chef replied, "That's the stock pot where we make the stock for soups and gravies."

"Who puts the ingredients in it to make the soup?" asked the boy.

"Everybody," shot back the chef. "What do they put in it?"

"Everything," said the chef.

"Where do they get it?" asked the fast learning youth.

"Anywhere," replied the catchised chef.

"Who don't put anything in it?" "Nobody," roared the chef, as the boy dodged a hot baked potato on its way to "celery cream soup."

THE COMMON PEOPLE.

The common people round me troop, the Toms and Dicks and Harrys; one builds himself a nice new coop, one dies, another marries. The banker's clad in gaudy rags, his bank has marble portals; the hostler carries down his nags, and both are common mortals. The tinsmith makes our motor cars, the blacksmith works his bellows, the poet soars among the stars, and all are common fellows. We all are equal at our birth, one kid's just like another; and when we tumble off the earth, what man's above another? I walk along the churchyard aisles, and, pensive, muse and ponder; the granite's reared in costly piles above that grave o'er yonder; and there a poor man sleeps alone, a friendless wight and daffy, above his head a simple stone, devoid of epitaphy. And both are sleeping just the same, the poor man and the Croesus; on earth they played the common game, and now they're gone to pieces; in youth we all are gay and vain, in middle age we're sober; and all of us have ache and pain when life has reached October. The king, who has God given right to be a nation's master, must leave his downy couch at night to hunt a porous plaster. It makes me tired to hear the talk of strata and of classes; we're just the plain old human flock, we're just the common masses.

Judging a Man's Character.

A Georgia editor claims to be able to judge a man's character by the way he drives a motor-car—or words to that effect. He says that when he sees a gentleman coming toward him in a motor car he gives him half the road; when he sees a fool coming he gives him all of it and when he sees a darn fool coming he takes to the woods or climbs a telephone pole. Every man in this country who drives a car knows that he has to look out for two cars—his own and the other fellows. He is not afraid of an accident from his own driving; that is, he is not afraid of his own car. It is the other fellow's car that causes him the most anxiety. And here, as in Georgia, it is the fool and the darn fool that is most to be feared.

THURSDAY, August 21, 1919.

American Pro-gressiveness.

The news, contained in today's messages, that the American Senate yesterday vetoed the President's veto in the matter of the repeal of the Daylight Saving Bill is worth noticing. There being, we presume, no other body vested by their extraordinary and quite unintelligible constitution with the power of vetoing the Senate's veto, it must stand as final, and the American people return to the good old system of wasting all the precious daylight they can.

Our purpose in referring to this matter here is to use it as a text and excuse to "get back," in the space of a few paragraphs at least, at our American friends for the gratuitous criticism to which we are treated whenever one of their number with a taste for scribbling in the newspapers (which is to say, seven out of every ten) is unfortunate enough to get stranded on our benighted shores and has time, before his escape, to look about him. Fortunately, few of us ever read more than a fraction of what he says about us on such occasions, but even that fraction is sufficient to leave the impression on our minds that he considers us a little behind the times. His self-imposed task is quite unnecessary, as far as we are concerned, for the impression was there already; it is the one impression we insist on making on ourselves. But if we take the trouble to examine into the matter, we will find that a good deal of our alleged backwardness is nothing more or less than our being different from the Americans and doing things in a different way. Looking at the particular matter we have mentioned above, and a few others we shall mention, we can take comfort to ourselves that this is not always such a deplorable state of things after all.

In the past six months or so the legislators of the great and glorious republic have made a proud record for themselves. For one thing, they made the country dry. We cannot criticize them for that, for, theoretically at least, we did the same thing. But we did it properly. We asked the people if they wanted prohibition, and a majority of the people, perhaps without considering the gravity of the action, said they did. But in the States the people weren't asked at all. Very few of them wanted prohibition, and very many of them said so. Under the American constitution, however, it did not matter in the least what the people said or wanted. In order to save a man from the temptations of bars and cocktails, an ordinary Act, as in other countries, would not be effective: the constitution established by the great Washington had to be amended. Accordingly, some forty States, including some of the hardest drinking communities, amended it. No one has been able to explain satisfactorily just why they did it; but if they should ever repent their repentance can only be effective through another amendment of the constitution back to its old form.

While this dire work was going on there was much talk about the league of nations. No country concerned except America, which had perhaps the greatest responsibility and interest in the idea, had the slightest objection to it. But her objection was great and very loudly urged. Members of the House of Representatives and of the Senate, particularly the Senate, put themselves on record as objectors. They made long speeches and wrote long letters to the papers which proved nothing but their complete ignorance of the whole scheme. In spite of the U-53 and modern navies they insisted on the Monroe doctrine, leaving its practical enforcement, as in the past, apparently to Great Britain. Fortunately, they had a President with a little more intelligence than themselves and America was saved from disgracing herself. The insistence, however, of these adept statesmen upon the inviolability of every country's sovereignty, that is to say, her right to manage her own affairs in her own way, did not prevent them from passing a resolution, in solemn session assembled, pointing out to Great Britain how badly she was bungling her Irish affairs. As an instance of stupidity and international impropriety, and the resolution was perhaps a record.

And now they have repealed the Daylight Saving Bill. Though the reasons urged for the step by its champions have been sarcastically published, they were not needed to exhibit their mental deficiency: the act is sufficient of itself. It does not concern us here, but it provides us with a comforting reflection when we ponder on our own lawmakers' shortcomings. After all, all the blockheads in the world are not to be found in Newfoundland.

St. Andrew's Outing.

The St. Andrew's Association held an outing at Bay Bulls yesterday afternoon, leaving by special train at 2 o'clock. On arrival there a programme of sports was taken up, followed by dinner and at night with dancing. The C. C. C. band and the Newfoundland Highlanders supplied the music. The train left for town at 11.30 p.m., a most enjoyable time having been spent.

To Visit Gallipoli.

Rev. (Capt.) T. Nangle, who left here some time ago to represent Newfoundland on the Imperial War Graves Commission, besides visiting the Western front will also go to Gallipoli to care for the graves of the first men of "Ours" to fall in action, and to erect a monument to their memory on Caribou Hill.

Hawker's Book.

Story of Atlantic Flight With Grieve. The stirring story of their pioneering attempt to cross the Atlantic and win the third Daily Mail £10,000 prize is told by Mr. Hawker and Lieut-Commander Grieve in their little book "Our Atlantic Attempt," published to-day (Methuen, 3s. 6d. net). They failed in that attempt, as all the world knows, but it was a most gallant effort, and it was followed very speedily by a triumph to which they directly contributed by their example.

Major-General Seeley in the preface he contributes passes what certainly will be the verdict of posterity: "To set out on a voyage of 2,000 miles over a stormy sea, in a craft, which, however good for air travel, was not designed to live on the water, demanded courage of the highest order from Hawker and Grieve. In days to come, when the crossing of the Atlantic by air is an everyday occurrence, these dauntless pioneers who dared all for the honor of their country will not be forgotten."

Silver Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Peters will celebrate their silver wedding on Friday next, 22nd instant. Mr. Peters is a well known member of the firm of Bishops Sons and Company and his connection with Corchreane Street Church and Sunday School has brought him a host of friends. The Telegram joins with others in offering congratulations.

MINARD'S LINIMENT CURES DIPHTHERIA.

Races Were Well Contested.

Excitement and Interest Was at Fever Heat --- Crews in Several Instances Evenly Matched--Lady Harris Presents Medals.

The continued boat races of yesterday's Supplementary Regatta were better contested and proved much more interesting than those of last week. A larger number of people were present. The water conditions were almost perfect and each race was excitedly and well fought. Some of the rowers were not able to be present, being refused leave by their employers. This was hard luck after putting in so much conscientious practice. There was no band present, and thus much of the enthusiasm that would otherwise have been in evidence was now missing. The races, in the order in which they were run off, were:

Nelle R. (Army) — L.C. A. Snow (cox); Lieut. B. Forsey, (stroke); Pte. H. Pitcher, Pte. M. Walsh, C.S.M. A. Hammond, L.C. S. Skiffington, Pte. J. A. Hennebury. Time: 10.05 3-5.

Cadet, (Naval Reserve) — S. G. Goudie, (cox); G. Bonnell, (stroke); W. Clance, C. Stanley, M. Whelan, W. Abbott, W. Ryan.

The second contest was the fishermen's, three boats competing; Flat Rock, Logy Bay, and Torbay. The Logy Bay crew in the Cadet came in a few inches ahead of the Flatrock crew in 9.32 1-5 making the best time for the day. The crews were:

Cadet — St. Francis — J. Nugent, (cox); P. O'Donnell, (stroke); J. Carrigan, M. Carrigan, P. Malone, J. Devereaux, J. Dyer. Time: 9.32 1-5.

Guard — Flat Rock — P. Brown, (cox); J. Cochrane, (stroke); W. Bulger, P. Carey, E. Everson, P. Hickey, W. Everson.

Nelle R. — Torbay — (cox); T. Bradbury, (stroke); J. Bradbury, J. Whitty, T. Reddy, D. Gosse, G. Gosse.

Only Crosbie's and Tessier's men rowed in the laborers' race, the other entries not turning up. The crews were very evenly matched and it was a very exciting row. Crosbie's men won in the Guard by a matter of inches. Time: 10.21 4-5.

Guard — Crosbie & Co. — J. Cooper, (cox); R. Clance, (stroke), L. Power, J. Mallard, G. Williams, P. Johnson, H. Walsh.

Cadet — Tessier & Co. — P. Brown, (cox); T. Squires, (stroke), P. Roberts, J. Kelly, J. Thorne, N. Hanlan, W. Clance.

Out of three entries in the truckmen's race, two boats rowed, the east and central. The central won easily. Time: 9.35 1-4.

Cadet, (Central) — S. G. Goudie, (cox); W. Field, (stroke); J. Mercer, T. Kearsey, T. Picco, J. Malone, C. Donnelly.

Guard, (East End) — J. Nugent, (cox); P. Summers, (stroke); T. Kenney, G. Summers, W. Thomas, W. Day, A. Lowe.

The full number of entries rowed the factory race. This was a splendid race, the boats being fairly equal. The Imperial Tobacco Co. crew in the Cadet came in first.

Cadet, (Imperial) — S. Goudie, (cox); W. Parrell, (stroke), N. Fleming, J. Noseworthy, W. Drover, C. McKay, W. Bransfield. Time: 10.18 1-5.

Guard, (Harvey's Bakery) — J. Nugent, (cox); W. Arns, (stroke), P. Adams and Chafe; 2nd (C.L.B.), Bartlett, Shears, Rev. Fletcher.

Football Fives — Collegians vs. C. C. C. Won by C.C.C. by 1 goal and a corner to 0.

Road Race — 1st, H. Hooke; 2nd, R. Pike.

Pony Race — Won by Baird's pony Nellie.

Boat Race (C.L.B.) — Won by the Band.

Football Final — C.C.C. vs. C.E.I. Won by C.C.C. by 1 goal and a corner to a corner.

The most interesting and amusing of the events was the boat race. The boat was a longer, the crew spraddling over it and walking across the field backwards, steered by the coxswain. The road race was also interesting, being won by H. Hooke, who has lately competed in several road races. He was awarded a pretty silver cup. The winning footballers were Dr. Power, M. Maddigan, T. Duggan, C. Spurrell and Brown. The pony race was watched with interest and was well contested. At the conclusion of the sports Sir Edgar Bowring presented the prizes, after which the pipe presented by Sergeant T. R. Ricketts, V.C., was auctioned by Mr. Reg. Dow-

100 Yards (open) — 1st, J. Pierce; 2nd, G. R. Shears.

100 Yards (C.L.B. Juniors) — 1st, Cyril Press; 2nd, E. Pomeroy.

Football Fives — Star vs. C.E.I. Won by C.E.I. by 5 goals to 1.

Kit Race (C.L.B. Juniors) — 1st, C. Nicholl; 2nd, B. Burg.

¼ Mile (open) — 1st, J. Pierce; 2nd, H. Halley.

Football Fives — C.C.C. vs. B.I.S. Won by C.C.C. by 2 corners to 0.

Cavalry Tournament (C.L.B.) — 1st, Curnew and Press; 2nd, Adams and Burg.

Relay Race — 1st (C.E.I.), Churchill;

den, the handsome sum of $81 being realized. Teas and refreshments were served at the conclusion of the events and the dancing galleries were put into use. The C. L. B. Band provided excellent music. The total proceeds of the day are expected to amount to about $3,000.

Discharging Cargo.

The steamer Admiralen which put in here last week while on the way to Havre from New York with fire in her hold is now discharging her cargo at the Furness Witherby Pier. She will be ready to continue her voyage in about a week.

To-morrow night's football game will be between the B. I. S. and Star teams. On the 25th the former will compete with the Cadets and on the 29th with the Collegians, these two games having been deferred owing to the unfavorable weather. This will complete the series for the season.

Portia Arrives.

The S. S. Portia, Capt. T. Connors, arrived from western ports at 8 o'clock last evening. The steamer made every port of call going and returning. She brought the following passengers: Messrs. W. Martin, M. Martin, W. Chafe, J. Kiely, J. Parsons, Brother O'Regan, W. Ryall, Const. Hibbard, W. Dewling, Adjt. Stickland, J. Cosick, R. Paul, G. Veitch, Dr. Smith, M. Gough, W. Hibbs; Mesdames Baker, Patten, Strickland and children, Collins, Hoberg; Misses Fogarty, Thompson, Pratt, Keeping, Fulford, Dalton in saloon and 10 second class.

The Garland Cup.

The Harbor Gracians are making arrangements to run off the race for the Garland Cup, which was presented for competition about six years ago by Mr. Albert Garland, an old Harbor Gracian, but for many years a prominent citizen of Hartford, Connecticut, U.S.A. The race will take place on the harbor, probably on the 26th inst., or 3rd September. The cup has already been won by one of the Society crews, but, we understand, the same crew must win it three times to retain it. Our Harbor Grace friends purpose building four new boats for the Regatta next year, one each by Frank McRae, Archibald Bros., Dr. Goodwin and Wm. Warren. The citizens of the second city are determined to keep alive our great national sport.

C. C. C. Boys Leave for Camp.

About sixty members of the C. C. C. and twenty of the St. Bon's Boy Scouts left by to-day's one o'clock train for Manuels where they will encamp. Yesterday morning a party of 20 pioneers from the Brigade and Scouts, went out and prepared the camping ground, erecting the Marquee, and getting the sites for the tents ready. The C. L. B. has loaned them their tents, and because these were being used in yesterday's Garden Party, they could not be sent out until this morning, when they went by the nine o'clock train. For this reason the members of the Corps and the Scouts did not go out until one o'clock. A delightful time is anticipated by every member of the camping party.

Nfld. Scotch Cured Herring.

Although this market remains quiet and buyers continue to adhere to a policy of buying from hand-to-mouth, there are indications of improvement, which, considered in the light of present day conditions, are at least hopeful. It is noted that the domestic trade has been taking on small quantities of Newfoundland Scotch cured herring of late, and local importers report that New York buyers have been seeking quotations of more liberal quantities than have been selling. This new condition is at variance with the outlook of a few weeks ago when it was reported that some 25,000 barrels of Newfoundland Scotch herring were yet to be shipped from St. John's to New York. Moreover, it is reported from several points in Newfoundland that the pack of herring during the winter and spring was far and away superior to the pack of last fall. In explanation of this improvement in the quality of the Newfoundland herring of the spring and winter pack it is stated that the lesson of last fall "brought packers to their senses." According to inspectors for the Newfoundland Government who have lately completed inspections at Green Bay, the quality of the herring being shipped from there to-day is in every respect superior to that shipped last winter. New York importers doubtless will be glad to learn of the improved quality of the Newfoundland herring, for it is recognized that one of the most serious drawbacks this season has been the uncertain and general inferior quality of the offerings. So far as could be learned the prevailing prices in the market are unchanged. Holders are asking from $18 to $18 and even $20 for fancy large fulls, while small herring can be purchased from $12 and up, according to size and quality. The stock of winter and spring herring now in New York is variously priced at from $12 to $16, the greater quantity being held at the lower figure. Further shipments of new stocks will be coming forward from now on, and it may be expected that before cooler weather there will be a liberal stock on the spot in New York.—N.Y. Fishing Gazette, Aug. 9.

Express Passengers.

The following passengers landed from the Kyle at Port aux Basques yesterday, and are on the incoming express: N. H. Saunders, G. McNutt, T. Waldo, C. C. Duley, G. Grimes, J. Smith, W. and Mrs. Anthony and daughter, T. E. and Mrs. Weed and 2 children, J. C. Curtis, J. S. Kemp, J. McDonald, J. J. and Mrs. Wakeley, M. Bailey, W. Skinner, Mrs. J. Roberts, M. Roberts, F. Garland, M. Smith, K. Crewe, J. Stapleton, C. Hulan, T. Tobin, C. Hawkins, L. Butler, D. Dibbin, A. Barrett, D. Benoit, J. and Mrs. Farrell, F. A. White, Mrs. A. Jensen, E. Fudge, Mrs. M. Moulton, Right Rev. Mons. Sears, S. Ellis, J. Murphy, Mrs. A. Brown, Mrs. A. Thompson.

Salt and Pickled Herring

The market being without feature and practically no demand in evidence, except for an occasional order for export, the salt and pickled herring situation has attracted little attention in the trade of late. There have been a few offerings of split in New York at the prevailing market quotations, and it is understood that sales have been effected on the basis of the prevailing prices in small lots, but there has been no outstanding development in this department. While there are holders who still continue to maintain their prices for splits at $8 and $9 per barrel for large, there are stocks of good quality to be had at $7 per barrel, and it is probable that most holders of Newfoundland splits would be willing to sell at this figure. Round herring, on the other hand, has so long been a "dead letter" in the market that there is practically no interest shown in it. Those who hold light stocks of this grade are free to state that they have not been able to move it at any prices, and many have expressed a willingness to sell at buyers' terms.—N. Y. Fishing Gazette, Aug. 9.

Got It All Wrong.

The little fellow who writes that space-filler, "The Dirgeful Drone," in the Star, spooled a whole column in Tuesday's issue in a weak attempt at answering an attack that never was made on him. He assumes that the editorial comment in the Telegram issue on Saturday was directed at himself. This is quite silly. Surely he doesn't think that the Telegram would throw away a column of editorial comment on such as he? If the dirgeful writer will look up the Star issue of August the 7th, he will see just what the editorial in the Telegram referred to. Of course, we know that he has not already read it. Even the men who work on the Star do not read it. We cannot blame them. And it looks, after all, as if it were the dirgeful fellow who is either doped or dreaming—and very probably both.

HIGH SHERIFFS OF THE SOUTH NOW CONVINCED

Sheriff Mangum of Atlanta, Ga., Sheriff Anderson of Houston, Texas, Sheriff Lewis of Marion, Ark., and Sheriff Kelley, of Odessa, Texas, Come Out With Strong Statements and Tell What Tanlac Has Done for Them.

FOUR leading Sheriffs of the South in widely separated states— have recently given their unqualified endorsements to Tanlac. The word of men whose records for honesty and uprightness has won and held for them the highest county office in the gift of the people of their own communities, cannot be doubted, for if there is any office that demands a man of unimpeachable integrity, it is the office of sheriff.

"Tanlac has certainly helped me and I recommend it for the good it has done in my case," said Hon. C. W. Mangum, ex-sheriff of Fulton County, Georgia, who resides in Atlanta and who has been one of the most popular officials in the state, having served three terms as sheriff. "I am seventy years old," he continued, "and have most always been a pretty healthy man until here lately. I have been in a nervous, worn-out run-down condition. Most always after eating I would have a full, uncomfortable feeling which would last several hours.

"After taking the second bottle of Tanlac the fullness and all the disagreeable symptoms disappeared, and my condition is now that of a well man. Tanlac seemed to be just what I needed to put my system in shape, and it has toned me right up. Naturally I would recommend it to my friends, and I know of fifteen or twenty families that are taking it now on my say-so."

Arkansas Official Testifies.

Hon. Chas. I. Lewis, ex-sheriff of Crittendon County, a merchant and a large plantation owner, of Marion, Arkansas, said: "I am convinced from the benefits that my wife and myself and many of our friends have received from Tanlac, that it is without an equal. Mrs. Lewis suffered for ten years. She couldn't digest anything and gas formed in her stomach caused severe pains and shortness of breath. We both started taking Tanlac at the same time and have had the most gratifying results. Mrs. Lewis can now eat and enjoy her food for the first time in many days. She is no longer nervous and her sleep is sound and refreshing and she is like a different woman.

"I suffered with biliousness and malaria and the two bottles of Tanlac have fixed me up in fine shape."

Ex-Sheriff Anderson's Statement.

"Money couldn't buy the good Tanlac has done me and I gladly recommend it to others for what it has done in my case," said Hon. Archie R. Anderson, ex-sheriff of Harris County, Texas, who was re-elected to this high office seven times and served the people of his county for fifteen years as sheriff. Mr. Anderson was Chief of Police of the city of Houston where he resides, for several years, and there is not a better known man in Harris County.

"I was continually belching up undigested food," he continued, "and I would bloat and swell up like I was poisoned and suffered from neuralgic pains of the worst sort and nothing relieved me. I began to feel better after taking the first bottle of Tanlac and have just started on my third and feel like a different man already. I sleep like a log now and can eat any and everything I want without the slightest discomfort afterwards."

Texas Sheriff's Endorsement.

"I needed a general all around building up for the last seven months and Tanlac has done that very thing for me," said Hon. S. A. Kelley, Sheriff of Ector County, Texas, and who is one of the most popular officials in that section of the state. "I'm mighty glad now that I took Tanlac, for I had been in a badly run-down condition for several months. I had no appetite and didn't enjoy what I did eat and at times I suffered terribly with rheumatic pains. My back ached all the time and my liver was so sluggish and out of shape that I had a dull headache continually.

"I have taken only two bottles, but I feel like a different man already. My appetite is fine and what I eat gives me nourishment and strength. The rheumatism is much better and my liver is in good condition. I am relieved of the headaches and feel more active and energetic than I have in months."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, under the personal direction of a special Tanlac Representative.

PLAGIARISED AND OTHERWISE.

TO-NIGHT'S CHAMPIONSHIP GAME

For seven long years Manager Hiltz and his crew of Red Lions have fought manfully and well for pennant honours, but Fate always seemed to have bestraddled their necks at some period of the season, and annually they have dropped in the League running with a dull thud and with monotonous regularity. To-night however, they face the Wanderers, which, if they succeed in vanquishing, will give them the Allen Cup and the City Championship for 1919. Although the Hartnett crew can hardly be regarded as dangerous as, say the Cubs, for this final game, yet ever since the inception of the League they seem to control some kind of a jinx on the Lions, and only on one or two occasions in all their many clashes were the Hiltz aggregation successful in overcoming it. It is hoped however that Old Man Gloom will be far away from St. George's Field to-night and that the fates will be propitious to the grey-and-maroon coterie. Manager Hartnett of the Wanderers is presenting his very strongest line-up, and although in no possible manner could a win give them even a chance for pennant honours, yet with the true instinctive spirit of amateur sport they will fight tooth and nail for victory. Should the Lions lose to-night it will not only give their young camp followers nervous prostration, but will necessitate a play-off with the doughty Cubs for the Cup who with tearful hearts have been practising Tosti's "Good Bye" since the time they last clashed.

Beating the Devil Fish.

A thrilling story of an encounter with a devil fish is told by Russel J. Coles.

Coles and his crew were in a motor-boat near Blind Pass, on the western coast of Florida, and in the midst of the devil fishing grounds, in 1915, when there came a terrific shock, and four of the party who were standing up looking for signs of the quarry were thrown violently down into the bottom of the vessel.

"The boat," to quote Mr. Coles, "which was running under full power had met the head of a manta rising to the surface and coming toward us at moderate speed. The shock of the collision was so great that it almost stopped the headway of the boat and her bow was lifted more than a foot out of water.

"Our speed carried the boat up over the high part of the back of the manta just as the two great black fins were flung madly into the air and almost meeting over our heads deluged us with many gallons of water. Then the two fins crashed down on the surface of the sea with a noise that could have been heard for miles, and the manta instantly repeated the performance as I yelled to the engineer, 'Keep her going!'

"Just as the boat was sliding from the back of the manta another huge one rushed up from below, striking full on our port bow with sufficient force to spin the boat around until her direction was almost reversed. At one time all four of the great pectoral fins were towering above us and floods of water were being flung into our boat.

"First the stern and then the head of the craft was highest as she pitched from side to side. Then I heard the chug chug of the propeller blades as they gashed the tip of the fin of the first manta. The engineer kept the engine going at full speed, but the blades of the screw were not catching the water now and for a short distance we were carried upon the broad backs of the two monster devils of the sea.

"Scarcely a word was spoken until in the midst of a wild upheaval of the two madly frightened manta beneath us the boat was flung from their back and was turning over, when I shouted, 'High side!' which order was instantly obeyed. Two of the crew, except for an arm or a leg, threw themselves entirely out of the boat. The craft struck head first and shipped a lot of water over her bow, but we were now clear of the two manta, which raced together on the surface for a short distance.

"Almost in an instant the boat was cleared of surplus water and we were in pursuit of the two manta, when suddenly they went below. We saw them many times afterwards, for they were easily recognized, being always together. The first showed the bleeding fin tip which had been cut by the propeller, and its mate had lost about eight inches from the tip of one of its fins in some former encounter."

Derby Day Incident.

Romantic Incidents of England's Premier Racing Event.

People who never bet and who usually take no interest whatever in racehorses yet find themselves reading the sporting intelligence in the newspapers when Derby Day comes round, says Spare Moments. Even bishops have been known to enquire the name of the winner. This year the excitement was unusually great, as it was the first Derby Day since racing was banned in the early days of the war.

A volume could be filled with anecdotes about the Derby and Derby winners.

The Derby of 1867 was perhaps one of the most sensational and romantic on record. It was won by Mr. Chaplin's Hermit, a horse reported to be lame. The race was actually run in a snow-storm, and the winner started at the long odds of 66 to 1. The plunging Marquis of Hastings lost a fabulous sum in bets over this race, and was ruined.

The pliancy of the situation was increased by the fact that, some years previously, Mr. Chaplin and the Marquis of Hastings had been rivals in love, the marquis carrying off the lady.

The Derby was one of the greatest gambling Derbies ever known, a well-known duke losing in a single bet £180,000. Hermit's progeny won nearly £350,000 in stakes. Mr. Chaplin, who purchased him as a yearling for the modest sum of one thousand guineas, presented his skeleton when he died in 1890 to the Royal Veterinary College.

Two Derby winners have died at sea. Blue Gown, the hero of '68, was sold to a wealthy American for £4,000, and died on the voyage across the herring pond. As the horse was not insured, the Yankee lost heavily over the transaction. A similar fate was that of Kingcraft. By a strange fluke he won the Derby in 1870, but in nineteen succeeding races did not once get past the post first. He was sold for £530 in 1884, and also succumbed to the stormy seas on his voyage to the States.

Amato was another famous Derby winner. His year was 1838. Belonging to Sir G. Heathcote, the squire of Epsom, he only ran upon one occasion—that on which he won the Derby.

He is buried in the beautiful grounds of the Durdans, Lord Rosebery's charming country seat.

The grave is surrounded by iron railings, and the stone slab gives full particulars as to the horse's age, and so on. It is beautifully situated within a few hundred yards of the Derby winning post, and here surrounded by beautiful trees, daffodils and magnolias in full bloom, the classic hero's bones rest peacefully.

A well-known public house in Epsom is named after Amato.

In front of the inn is a well. From time immemorial someone—no one has yet discovered who—has chalked a tip for the Derby on the cover of the well. Racegoers are notoriously superstitious and ready to follow the slightest tips.

A few years ago a one-time wealthy man was on the verge of ruin through his unfortunate gambling propensities. He had about £500 left, and made up his mind, so the story runs, to risk his all upon whatever horse the well "gave" for the Derby. This decision proved particularly fortunate, as the horse selected won at long odds against, and the lucky winner resolved never to back a horse again—a resolution he kept.

DISEASED GUMS AND TEETH.

Of all the poison taken into the blood, the germs and pus contributed by the diseased gums and teeth are the most destructive to the human system. If every red blood cell is forced to fight against numbers of germs to the cell, the blood cannot attend to the building up of the body, and if allowed to continue the system is bound to break down and eventually you are an invalid. Kidney, stomach, heart trouble, rheumatism and many other diseases are brought on by diseased gums and teeth.

Welcome Home.

Lieut. Gerald Coughlan, of the Victoria Rifles, is now visiting this city with his parents. Mr. Coughlan is one of five soldier brothers who donned the khaki in response to the call. He enlisted at Montreal as a private in the 148th Battalion, and won his commission by distinguished conduct on the field. He took part in the storming of Vimy Ridge and the fierce battles in the Arras section, was twice wounded, and was gassed during the hurricane advance of the Canadians in far-famed Mons just before the armistice was signed. The young soldier has been decorated with the Military Medal, Cross and Bar. We trust Lieut. Coughlan's stay will be pleasant and that his native air will quickly restore his usual good health, which has been somewhat impaired from the effects of gas poisoning.

Demise of Mr. John O'Neill.

Bay-de-Verde to-day mourns the loss of one of her oldest and best citizens in the person of Mr. John O'Neill, Sr., who passed away this morning at the age of 76 years, after an illness of several weeks. Deceased was well known in the city and conducted business here for many years. He was a man of sterling honesty and the Bowings, the Jobs and many other St. John's firms always regarded the name of John O'Neill as a man of strictest integrity, whose word was his bond. His charity was well known to all and his assistance to his church most edifying. Few men had a larger circle of friends whose sympathy goes out to the family in their sad bereavement. He leaves three sons, M. J., J. F., and D. O'Neill, of this place, and one daughter, Mrs. Capt. Kennedy, St. John's.—R.I.P.

Bay-de-Verde, Aug. 19, 1919.

Collection for Widow.

A further collection was taken up yesterday at the Regatta for the widow and children of Mr. Peters who lost his life in the Regatta of last week. In the little time at their disposal the sum of $150.00 was collected. This will be given to Mrs. Peters by the Regatta Committee to-day.

America Leaving Us Behind.

BIG OUTPUT AND BIG WAGES.
Mr. Sam Turner, a typically keen and successful Lancashire manufacturer, has just returned from a thorough inspection of American industry. He tells our correspondent that he is "staggered" by the result: "I found that in hardly any industry are we able to compete with the United States."

While industry is hesitating and Labour striking in this country, Mr. Turner shows that American capital and labour, in alliance, are bounding forward to the commercial conquest of the world. American business men, utilising accumulated war-profits, are planning a campaign of unlimited commercial extension in foreign markets—formerly our markets. They are doing all the successful things which we ought to be doing too. Their coal, iron, and steel undersell ours. Their factory construction is cheaper and quicker. Machinery is installed quicker. Their railway rates are much lower. They have practically got rid of Government control, and their telephone system, which "went to pieces" in Government hands during the war, will once again be the "best in the world."

How is it done? By high wages and abundant, unlimited production. The two go together and cannot go separately. That is the lesson our workers ought to grasp and understand. The quality of our work is at least as good as the American, but our output is infinitely less. Wages in America are from 25 per cent. to 50 per cent. higher than in this country. But there is no artificial limitation on output in the United States. Labour in America fights for its own but stoutly enough, but it does not quarrel with its bread-and-butter.

In fact, Labour in America concentrates with intensity on high wages and good conditions of life. But in return it gives a strenuous day's work, "all out," all the time. It recognises that a certain amount of discipline and control are necessary to the success of continuous large-scale production on which Labour's own welfare depends.

While we are bickering American capital and labor had "got together" for a combined attack on the export markets of the world—markets in which British goods were once supreme. If we "get together" we shall get them back. But there is no time to lose.

When is our real effort to begin?—London Daily Mail.

Film Feet.

The proper use of the feet is not the easiest task of the film artist. Anyone who has walked alone up to a crowd of people knows the self-conscious feeling it produces and the consequent awkwardness of trying to look "quite natural." It is much more difficult on the screen when numberless eyes are fixed on you, and you alone, with the minutest concentration, ready to notice any point which may strike them as "not natural."

The natural use of the feet is, indeed, a matter of long training and experience, and yet that is only the first step. In film work it is impossible to act with the face and hands alone. Many have tried it, yet they can never rise to the first rank with such partial accomplishments.

The whole body, including the feet, must express the feeling the actor or actress wishes to convey. That constitutes great film-acting. Mlle. Alla Nazimova, the whirlwind actress is one of the finest exponents of this method of calling the whole body into play to show a varied series of emotions, and to this, in large part, is due her rise in a year to the highest rank of film "stars."

But there is a still higher use for the feet, and that is to portray particular points in the character acted. Charlie Chaplin's feet are not only extravagant in size; any comedian could wear similar monstrosities and excite no laughter. Those amazing boots express part of the strange character which Chaplin has created on the screen that unique blend of farce and pathos which all the world loves.

Chaplin's feet and his walk are a very important part of his film success. The last scene in "Charlie the Tramp," wherein he is seen wandering away on a lonely country road, with his back to the audience, a pathetic figure which no one will take seriously, is all conveyed by the manner in which he walks.

Miss Mary Pickford, in her new film "Daddy Long Legs," shows all the ungraininess of a girl in her teens by the use of her feet. They are fearfully in the way, never knowing what to do next and always conspicuous by their disobedience to the wishes of their small possessor. If the feet only were shown in this part of the film none of the audience could fail to see that Miss Pickford was portraying an average schoolgirl.

One of the few great producers in the film world, Mr. D. W. Griffiths, has also emphasized the importance of feet in "The Great Love," his picture of England during the war. Miss Lilian Gish, as the heroine, has a queer trick of standing on her heels and then on her toes. She tries to conquer this habit, but it will assert itself when she is nervous. At one critical moment Mr. Griffith even shows a picture of these feet all to themselves, going up and down in their uneasy movements. And he gets his effect, for it would be difficult not to realise that at that moment Miss Gish is suffering from a very bad attack of "nerves."—London Mail.

Hints to Autoists.

To make a good portable water carrier, for refilling radiator on a trip, take a discarded inner tube, cut out a good section about three feet of one end of section together on the inside about an inch. Reinforce this closing of the end by a piece of inner tube patching, cemented around the end as a book is bound. Rubber strap for carrying can be cemented on other end in like manner.

This "bucket" can be rolled up and carried in your car with the reserve tubes, ready for time of need, and there is no reason why same could not be used for carrying drinking water after the talo has been washed off.

If you do not want to bother making this "bucket," a regular hot-water bottle carried in car will do the trick, and bear in mind that a Kantelek is a sure enough regular one.

A stout rope carried in the car may come in handy for other than tow purposes. If one rear wheel spins itself into a mud hole or snow bank, the rope can be used to pull car out by fastening one end to the spokes near the hub, taking a couple of turns around the hub in the opposite direction from the turning of the wheel, and then fastening other end of rope to a tree ahead. The hub of your spinning rear wheel would then act as a pulley, winding itself up on the rope and drawing your car out of the hole. Should a tree in the rear of the car make it more convenient to back out, wind the rope the other way around the hub. It is better to back out for the reason that the reverse gearing is greater in power and less in speed than low speed forward.

If your radiator gets boiling, do not continue running motor, for the generation of steam is very apt to leave you with a leaky radiator. Stop the motor and investigate the cause of the overheating: (1) Not sufficient water; (2) a stoppage in the water system (generally ice from freezing); (3) water pump not working;

(4) fan not operating or is slipping; (5) driving the car with the spark insufficiently advanced; (6) too rich a mixture. Use care in removing radiator cap so you will not scald your arm by steam going up your sleeve. (1) A glance through the radiator filling cap will tell you if low in water. (2) and (3) Start your motor after same has cooled somewhat, and a look in filler cap will tell you if the water is properly circulating. If it is, you can see it flowing into the top of the radiator from the pipe leading from the water jackets of the cylinders. If water is not flowing, look at water pump and see that same is operating. (4) A glance will tell you if fan is operating. Fan belt must not slip. (5) Move the spark plug advancing lever, and while doing so, see if the commutator or tuning device moves so the electrical contact is made earlier. (6) Make a note where the adjustment of carburetor when throttle is opened wide suddenly. Then unstrew slightly. A half-gallon sealed can of gasoline carried in the car does not take up much room, and may save you a long walk, time, and a inconvenience should you run gasoline on the road. On a another can of engine oil may be handy.

Nitrates.

South America is the Chief Source of Supply.

During the great war one often heard the alarming cry about the shortage of nitrates. What if it should be cut off from the nitrate fields of South America? was the question often raised.

For the time being, we receive practically all of our nitrate supply from the great lake in Chili. Sodium nitrate, also called Chili saltpetre, is found in natural deposits in desert regions along the west coast of South America, especially near the boundary lines between Peru, Chili, and Bolivia. The territory is now chiefly owned by Chili. The deposits extend about 220 miles in length, and the average width about two miles.

There is practically no rain in this nitrate district. Water and fuel are both very scarce; so much so, in fact, that they are employed as economically as possible in refining the crude ore. The sodium nitrate crystals are only partially pure when they are drained and dried in the sun, and then packed for shipment as crude nitrate.

The formation of the nitrate beds or lakes is attributed to the decomposition of sea plants under such conditions of temperature and humidity that the ammonia produced was converted into nitrate by the action of the nitrifying bacillus, an organism found in the soil. The region, being rainless, the sodium nitrate was not washed away.

The chief use of this material is in making gunpowder and explosives, matches, fireworks, and in certain metallurgical and analytical operations. It is even employed for curing meat. It can be prepared into excellent chemical fertilizer. Still nearer home to most of us city folk, it can be used in making "laughing" gas, which is what the dentist gives his patient to put him to sleep preparatory to pulling out a troublesome tooth.

Oversees Pets.

The Red Cross worker at the information booth in the Grand Central Terminal thought she was familiar with almost every one of the new splints and surgical appliances, but the like of that worn by the yellow-haired boy she had never seen before. It seemed to be a sort of brown stone jar firmly fastened to his left side. As she showed him the way to the rest room—the boy was tired and had a long wait between trains—she speculated as to whether it might be a new-method Dakin-Carrall treatment for walking patients or a strange system of draining wounds. To her great surprise the boy, as soon as he reached the rest room, set the apparatus upon a table; it was attached to his side by only a closely guarding left arm. The Red Cross worker's curiosity got the better of her and she asked what in the world it was.

"It's my gold fish," explained the boy, as if it were the most natural thing in the world. He took the cover off the jar and showed her. "A little French kid gave them to me when I was in hospital over there. I used to lie and watch 'em all the time. They were an awful lot of comfort to me. So I've kept 'em ever since I brought 'em back on the transport and I'm going to take 'em home and keep 'em always. They can stay like that shut up for five hours if they have to, but I guess they'll be glad of a little air." He set the cover on the table and settled back comfortably into a big chair to wait for his train.

Strange Recruits.

A non-commissioned officer was reading the names of a number of recruits.

"Your name!" he snapped to the first.

"Fox."

"Next!"

"Bear," was the reply.

The sergeant sniffed and glanced at the third.

"Wolf," said the recruit; and his interrogator gave him a sharp look.

"And what do you call yourself?" he asked a tall youth.

"Lion," the recruit responded; whereat the non-com threw down his pen and shouted with good-natured laughter.

"Go and order some cages to be built!" he roared to a private. "We've been recruiting from a menagerie!"
