Anticipating the Home Coming.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir--It seems fitting that the Star should have a few pointers as to how to handle The Premier's return, so I venture the following account of the home-coming.

THE PRODIGIOUS PRODIGAL'S RETURN.

"The Prime Minister's reception on his home-coming after such a prolonged absence was a remarkable demonstration or rather a series of them. On the arrival of the Kyle, which was bedecked with flags and bunting, The Premier held an "At Home" on THE BRIDGE just the same as they do it in London.

"A few hundred of the leading citizens of Port aux Basques and Chandler had the honor of being present after the last of the guests had shaken hands with The Prime Minister, preparations were made for the landing in Newfoundland of her favorite son.

"A carpet of Labrador Slop had been tastefully laid down on the wharf and the steps and platform were beautifully arranged in a mosaic pattern with "White Nap", "Canopies and festoons of kippered, sea-sick and split herrings had been gracefully hung, and were lipped up here and there with a boiled lobster peeping cunningly out.

"As The Prime Minister's party walked down the gang plank the "massed hands struck up The Banks of Newfoundland," at which the "guest of honor raised his Bond Street hat and smiled graciously.

"An address of welcome was then read by the Joint Mayors of Port aux Basques and Chandler, to which The Premier made a suitable and curt reply.

"The Prime Minister then made a "critical inspection of the guard of honor and the new railway terminal which he had cosseted and "antiated prior to his departure, and although he expressed satisfaction at the great improvements which had been made during his long and very regrettable absence, one was left with the idea that the work would have been on a more elaborate scale had he been here personally to attend to things.

"The journey by rail was then started and resulted in a series of demonstrations as each centre of population was reached.

"The leather lunged coal miners of St. George's, South Branch and Howey--particularly the latter--went to their delight in their own peculiar way.

"Thoroughly tired of hand shaking and rear-end platform speeches, The Premier, as night drew on, retired to his drawing room, and as the shades of darkness closed round the Special, the centres of Kitty's "Brook, Quarry, and Badger fitted by.

"Towards dawn the city of Grand Falls was passed and the horny-handed paper makers on the night shift were coming of work and in the silver grey light of a winter day's birth they lined the track and greeted the on-coming Special with their native yell, and as the wheels ground round the far-distant curve their peevish wall could still be heard.

"On passing Come-By-Chance the Special drew up for an hour to give The Premier and his suite an opportunity to meet a few of the more influential citizens as it was the "first town of importance on the Peninsula of Avalon.

"The last stage of the journey was commenced but any demonstration which had taken place en route "paled before what transpired at "Holyrood and Kelligrewa.

"Many of The Premier's political supporters in St. John's had, owing to the hurried passage of an Order-in-Council guaranteeing gasoline and expenses, motored out to meet The Premier's Special. Words fall to depict the scene, but The Star will contain full details of the triumphal entry into St. John's the day "after!"

Hope that some of the above suggestions are not out of place, and that they may prove helpful to the Star.

Yours truly, TWO-IN-ONE. Nov. 29, 1920.

What She Had Seen.

(From the Houston Post.) An English tourist was on visit to Arran and decided to have a day's fishing. He made inquiries of local experts, and on being told that the cleg, or house-fly, would suit his purpose for lure, he sought the highland servant girl at his inn.

"I say, my girl, can you get me some horseflies?" he asked. The girl looked at him stupidly. He repeated his question, and added: "Why, girl, did you never see a horsefly?" "Naa, sir," replied the girl, shaking her head, "but wance I saw a coo jump over a cliff."

"But why should I be interested in Dr. Chase's Nerve Food?"

BECAUSE it will make a better human being of you mentally, physically--everyway.

Are you living a full and successful life? Or are you lacking in energy and vigor?

Perhaps you find that you are losing grip on life and beginning to slump physically. Then it is time to give some attention to the nerves.

When the nerves give out there's sure to be a slowing up of all bodily functions, both mental and physical.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is admirably suited to overcome this condition and thereby prevent a serious nervous breakdown. For this reason it is of interest to everybody--young, old or in middle age.

Because it restores in Nature's way by forming new, rich blood, and by feeding the starved nerves back to health and strength it appeals to every reasoning person.

Try it when you feel worried and tired out. Try it for sleeplessness and irritability. Try it for nervous headaches and indigestion. For these are the indications that the nerves are becoming exhausted. It is not a mere relief for these symptoms, and for this reason you must persevere in its use until lost vigor is restored to the nerves.

We know that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food possesses exceptional restorative properties. We have seen it tested in many thousands of cases. Many of your friends and neighbors can vouch for its merits from their own personal experience.

But how are you going to prove this to your own satisfaction unless you give it a trial? You are the one to be benefited. So it remains for you to make the test.

It is well worth your while, for health is your biggest asset, no matter what the size of your bank account may be.

Rest and plenty of wholesome, nutritious food will help. But your system has failed to supply to the nerves the nourishment they require. So you must look to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to establish the upbuilding process which is necessary for your complete restoration to perfect health and vigor.

Naval Prize Money.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir--The enclosed cutting taken from the Montreal Star of Nov. 4th regarding prize money being paid R.N.C.V.R., who also have drawn gratuity money, should be of interest to all ex-R.N.R. men in Newfoundland, as I believe the prize money has been handed over to the Government.

Now, Mr. Editor, I often wonder that the ex-Naval men do not get someone to take their case up and see who is making all the graft, for surely someone is making it, and at the expense of those who risked their lives for four years or more in patrolling the Seven Seas. Hoping you will kindly publish this cutting in your esteemed paper, so that something may be done in this matter.

I remain, L. F. COBBETT, Ex-R.N.R. and C.E.F. Verdun, P.Q., Nov. 21, 1920.

"OTTAWA. -- (Canadian Press)--The department of the naval service is now distributing cheques for naval prize money to men having served with the R.C.N. and R.N.C. V.R. A large number of claims have been paid out, but a great many cheques are still held, as the addresses of the recipients are not known and the department would be glad of advice as to the address of any man entitled to prize money who has not been paid.

The claims of members of the R.N. C.V.R. (overseas division) cannot be dealt with at the present time, as their records have not been received from the Admiralty. The minimum service required to qualify for naval prize money is one month's service in an offensively armed seagoing ship of war between August 4th, 1914, and November 11th, 1918. Service in harbor vessels does not qualify for prize money."

A Defence of England's Attitude in Ireland.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir—So many mis-statements and so much false information have appeared in the papers of late, that I feel compelled to write this refutation. With the exception of a brief article by Rev. Dr. Jones and a little more lengthy one by Rev. T. B. Darby, no attempt has been made to deny the many inaccuracies that have appeared in print or spoken on the platform. Miss Hughes speaking in the Methodist College Hall on Oct. 5th, drawing a parallel between Ireland and some of the other small nations, said:—"Ireland though as large as some and with a revenue much larger, was governed against her wishes, her development was neglected and her education grant per capita reduced to the minimum."

Let us first take the subject of development. In 1882 in order to get out of difficulties, an Act of Areas was passed, which made the Irish tenants a free gift of one year's rent up to the sum of £20. Finally from 1887 onwards, the insolvent tenant could remain on his holding for six months after the decree of eviction, with the option of selling or buying his holding during the interval. The landlords received no compensation for all these encroachments upon common law. By the Land Acts of 1885, known as the Ashbourne Acts, the Exchequer advanced to the tenants £5,000,000 to acquire the land of those landlords who were anxious to sell; the purchaser to repay the State in forty-nine yearly instalments. The subsidy, doubled in 1888, was exhausted in 1891, but had given 25,000 former tenants possession of their holdings.

In 1891 Mr. Balfour, realizing the good results of the Ashbourne Act, conceived a vaster application; he obtained from Parliament a credit of £30,000,000. The number of evictions fell from 5,200 in 1881 to 670 in 1895. Any other country but Ireland would have been profuse in its thanks. It only made the Irish more greedy and more threatening; in spite of receiving their due, they made more exacting demands. As all landlords did not despoil themselves at the same moment, and as they had to wait for opportunities to purchase, some countries and some tenants got satisfaction quicker than the others. And the latter became jealous and got tired of waiting. In 1896 there appeared the most recent of the agrarian leagues, the "United Irish League"; soon every self-respecting patriot belonged to it. It demanded two things—the suppression of pasture lands, and compulsory purchase—the radical expropriation of property of recalcitrant landlords. "Force the landlords to sell us their land." It had recourse to all the violent methods of earlier leagues, boycotting, refusal to pay rent, and so on. The landlords, weary of these continual fights, summoned the leaders of the League to confer with them, promised them that they would be only too glad to sell if they were only better compensated, and they agreed to submit to the Government proposals emanating from both parties; the result of this was the last great agrarian law, the Wyndham Land Act, or Irish Land Purchase Act of 1903. This heroic measure opened an enormous credit, first of all estimated at a total of £100,000,000 and later at £180,000,000, raised by annual loans of £5,000,000 on London. The landlords who sold and tenants who bought could debate their price freely and have it ratified by three Estates Commissioners. Of about 650,000 occupiers, 74,000 had already become owners under Acts passed before 1903. It is calculated that 240,000 others will profit by Wyndham's Act. Does that look as if Ireland's development is being neglected? If the development shows signs of neglect, let the Irish work more and complain, and riot and destroy less.

Regarding education, Miss Hughes' statement is an unmitigated falsehood. England's total appropriation for education was around £36,000,000; that words out at about $2.80 per head of the United Kingdom. Yet Ireland received over $3.00 per head, thus she does not receive the minimum but the maximum, and $3.00 is more than Newfoundland receives from her Government. Ireland has 2 Universities, 3 Colleges, and between 8000 and 9000 schools. If, then, her people are illiterate, shame to her, for doesn't Mr. Crawford point out that she is a wealthy nation? Then what is Miss Hughes complaining about? Miss Hughes also asserts that "Last current year, Ireland's revenues, according to British statistics, amounted to $136,000,000. Out of this Ireland was given back $2,000,000 for civil purposes. The balance $134,000,000 there was no accounting for." There she is wrong again for "under the Union, which the Irish are so anxious to abolish, Ireland costs the Imperial Treasury more than she brings in; the annual deficit is about $2,000,000 and increasing every year as a result of land purchased, social legislation, workman's insurance, etc." The Irish refuse to accept the debts of their inheritance. Mr. Asquith agrees, and even gives the new Irish Government a free gift of £500,000 a year for the expenses of establishment." And now under the pretext that she has paid too many taxes in the past, she is to be exonerated from all share in the National Debt, including the debt of the Great War, which has, however, protected Ireland as well as the rest of the Empire. "Have we have finances marvellously simplified; the Bolsheviks have made disciples!"

Mr. Lindsay Crawford says, "The fight is neither racial nor religious in its origin," and then goes on to quote history. But Crawford's deductions, like those of Miss Hughes, won't bear analyzing.

As in 1641 and 1798 so in 1916 the cry is "England's difficulty is Ireland's opportunity." "A dangerous phrase, and fallacious precept. All Irish modern history can be dated back to that; everything else can be traced to it, a series of links in the chain of circumstances." Yet Crawford has the effrontery to say that "the fight is neither racial nor religious in its origin." And in spite of Mr. Crawford's assertions to the contrary, statistics show that "Ulster has contrived to grow prosperous, more prosperous than the whole of the rest of Ireland put together," and that too under the same political, fiscal, and customs regime which her unproductive fellow-countrymen abuse at every turn.

Nowadays the oppression of Ireland by England is a myth, and a feeble one at that. "Ireland is in distress out of habit." To substantiate this assertion, what evidence can be better than John Redmond, speaking in 1915 in his town of Waterford to Irishmen from Australia. Speaking of his visit to Australia, he said: "Only thirty-three or thirty-four years have passed since then, but what a revolution has occurred in the interval! Today the people, bravely speaking, own the soil; today the laborers live in decent habitations; to-day there is absolute freedom in the local government and the local taxation of the country; to-day we have the widest Parliament in the municipal franchise; to-day we know that evicted tenants who are the wounded soldiers of the land war, have been restored to homes as good as those from which they had been originally driven. We know that the congested districts, the scenes of some of the most awful horrors of the old famine days, have been transformed, that the farms have been enlarged, decent dwellings have been provided, and a new spirit of hope and independence is to-day amongst the people. We know that the towns' legislation has been passed facilitating the housing of the working classes. So far as the town tenants are concerned we have this consolation, that we have passed for Ireland an Act whereby they are protected against arbitrary eviction, and are given compensation not only for disturbance from their homes, but for the good will of the business they had created—a piece of legislation far in advance of anything obtained for the town tenants of England. I may add far in advance of any legislation obtained for the town tenant of any other country."

"We know that we have at last won educational freedom in university education for most of the youth of Ireland, and we know that in primary and standard education the thirty-four years that have passed have witnessed an enormous advance in efficiency and in the means provided for bringing efficiency about. To-day we have a system of old age pensions in Ireland whereby every old man or woman over seventy is saved from the workhouse, free to spend their last days in comparative comfort. We have a system of national industrial insurance which provides for the health of the people, and makes it impossible for the poor, hard-working man or woman, when sickness comes to the door, to be carried away to the workhouse hospital, and makes it certain that they will receive decent Christian treatment during their illness."

day, the Admiralty published a brief communication:

"During the period between p.m. April 20th, and p.m. April 21st, an attempt to land arms (20,000 rifles captured in Russia) and ammunition in Ireland was made by a vessel under the guise of a neutral merchant-ship, but in reality a German auxiliary, in conjunction with a German submarine. The auxiliary sank and a number of prisoners were made, amongst them was Sir Roger Casement."

That same evening there were other surprises; "the German cruisers came out, the east coast of England was bombarded, an armed rebellion in Dublin, the General Post Office seized by rioters, etc." We can all remember these events as they were described in the newspapers. The coincidences were conclusive; the "Germans have been at work, and the Irish too. Ireland has given herself away." This rebellion in Dublin lasted till Saturday, 20th. "The sum total of the adventure was 124 soldiers killed, 400 wounded, 216 civilians killed, 514 wounded. The finest streets in Dublin were destroyed and the damage amounted to £4,000,000. The losses of the Sinn Feiners could never be estimated."

Then, according to the ancient formula, Ireland's martyrdom began. The prisoners were taken before courts martial. "Bloody courts," howled the Irish. Good Gracious! they are not set up to award good conduct prizes. All the signatories of the proclamation were shot. Altogether there were fifteen executions; sixty-nine others condemned to death, including Countess Markievicz, were reprieved by General Maxwell, who had plenary powers of life and death. The Irish called this a butchery. It is the same old cry of all riotings and all rebellions; preventive measures are odious repressions and retaliation are criminal!

The rebellion of 1916? Pah!—a small matter when all was said and done; was it not almost justified by the horrors of its suppression? You will often find these a posteriori arguments in Irish polemic. This is how the history of this martyred race is written; one could laugh at it if one did not know that in twenty years' time earnest men will take these fables, so solemnly stated, as true facts.

But when peace takes place in Ireland, it won't be Ireland that we have to thank, in spite of the fact that "she tried to stab us in the back."—John Redmond's words.

Yours truly,
L. CULLEN.

Returning to Newfoundland.

The closing down of the steel plants at Sydney mines and Sydney, together with the general slump in labour circles in Cape Breton and the unsettled conditions at present in the collieries, is one reason for so many people returning to Newfoundland. Last night the steamer Kyle had nearly 200 second-class passengers list, nearly every one of the 136 people on board being labourers thrown suddenly out of employment as a result of the sudden ultimatum from the railwaymen Monday last. A large force of local men are also idle, and it is safe to say there was not a time since pre-war days that so many men in the industrial centres of Cape Breton were idle. And happening as it does, on the very eve of a long winter, the outlook is indeed serious.—North Sydney Herald, Nov 26.

Dominion Housing Scheme, Etc.
SUCCESSFULLY CONCLUDED.

The new houses built under the Dominion Housing Scheme will be declared open by H. E. the Governor and Lady Harris on Thursday next at 3 o'clock. We learn from Hon. John Anderson, who inaugurated and carried through the scheme, that the houses are now practically finished, and will be ready for occupation in a few weeks. Anyone who has seen the houses will admit that they are models which other builders might copy to advantage. The designs of Architect McCarter are attractive and the "packing-case" effect which is so common in St. John's gives way to a gabled, not-too-uniform row of houses which are a pleasure to the eye. They are as comfortable inside as they are good-looking outside. Each house, which contains five rooms, spacious halls, cupboards, etc. has a well appointed bath room, with all modern conveniences. A large measure of credit is due to Mr. Badcock, the well-known foreman, who, with characteristic thoroughness and speed, carried through the work of building so satisfactorily. After the ceremony the houses will be open for public inspection.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

"WE CAN FORGIVE MISTAKES BUT NOT EVERY GOD CAN FORGIVE THE HANGER-BACK."—Stevenson.

RUTH CAMERON

At a club meeting last week the plan of having the club pledge a monthly payment to a certain philanthropy was talked over (for the fourth time, more or less) and was just on the verge of being settled affirmatively, when one of the members got up and said she thought it would be better to go in for something nearer home, anyhow.

The discussion thus precipitated was a lively one and, needless to say, the meeting adjourned with the whole matter still in the air.

Don't you recognize that type of obstructor and objector? And don't you hate her, or him?

I remember one member of this class who during the war could not say enough of "the silly way women go round knitting all the time. In the cars and at lectures and even in church. If I were a minister and they did it at my church I'd have them turned out. It's nothing at all but a pose. If it wasn't, they would do it just at home and not always be at it in public. I'll bet they waste and spoil so much yarn that they do more harm than good. Why don't they find something real to do?"

You might fancy by that she herself was doing something real. On the contrary she was doing nothing at all. And I have a feeling that she sprang her desire to justify herself by crying down what other women were doing.

Another example of this type is a correspondent who wrote me saying he wished I would write an article against the Boy Scouts. There are few things he could have selected that I would be less likely to write against. I forget what his objections were—it seems to me one of them was that there was no "religious clause to the oath of membership."

It seems impossible that anyone could see only some minor flaw in all the wonderful work of the Boy Scout movement, all the miracles of boy power turned from harm to good. But alas, it is true.

H. G. Wells says in one of his books that in every gathering that is seriously considering how to go about some good work in the wisest day, there is always some one who gets up and says "For God's sake, let's do something!" Then, he says, the committee goes ahead and does something foolish in a hurry. He calls these people the "Godsakers," and is very bitter against them.

I suppose they do do harm. And yet I think we need some "Godsakers" to balance the other type who are always ready to obstruct and criticize any attempt to do good. The women who knitted and Hooversized and rolled bandages were "Godsakers." They felt they must do something. Who dares say whether we would stand where we do to-day if it had not been for them?

Personally, I have more use for "Godsakers" than I have for the eternal hanger-back. We may need them to keep the old earth in a state of balance, but I don't think we need very many of them, do you?

An Ungrateful Nation.

The defeat of Venizelos in the Greek elections is an amazing act of national ingratitude. The Greeks are to blame if other peoples infer that they are not worthy of so great a leader. Venizelos has been twice the savior of his country. He rescued it many years ago from a wild turmoil of faction which was plunging it into anarchy. During the world war he prevented it from becoming the pawn of Germany, and from sharing the ignominy and downfall of the Central Powers. His courage and decision drove the Kaiser's henchman from the Throne and established for Greece a claim upon the Allies which they recognized handsomely in the Peace Treaty. Its territory has been nearly doubled, and it has become the possessor of the principal ports of the Eastern Mediterranean.

By Europe Venizelos has been regarded as one of the ablest statesmen of the age, and his reputation by his own countrymen comes at the height of his international prestige. His domestic enemies are mainly sympathizers with the deposed King Constantine. They are much like the Legitimists of revolutionary France or the Jacobites of eighteenth century England in placing Royalty above every interest of their country. Such a party would attract every element of reaction, including the army officers, in whom the spirit of caste has always been powerful. Apart from these influences, Venizelos has made opponents because he is a strong man who has used strong methods in enforcing his policies. But his patriotism cannot be impugned, and his country has so leaned on him that if he now withdraws it may become the prey of civil war. In any event it is incredible that Great Britain and France will permit the return of Constantine after his base betrayal of the cause of liberty in the crisis of the war. They will help to save Greece from reaction.—Toronto Globe.

Mt. Allison Memorial Service.

The Sackville Post, of Nov. 12th said:

A largely attended and very impressive service in memory of the Mt. Allison boys who "never returned" from the Great War was held last evening in the Methodist Church. All the student body turned out, the boys occupying seats facing the speakers. Col. F. B. Black acted as chairman. After prayer by Prof. Des Barres and scripture reading by Dr. Borden, Col. Black introduced the speaker of the evening, Rev. H. E. Clark of St. John. The chairman said he felt like commending those who were responsible for arranging this service. It was undoubtedly the least the college could do to keep the memory of those who gave their lives for the great cause. The speaker said the understood that something like 500 Mt. Allison men had gone overseas, and out of this number more than 60 had failed to return. Col. Black said he understood this service was to be held annually; if so, he would suggest that the returned men of Sackville and vicinity be invited to attend in the future. He was sure the invitation would be well received.

Rev. Mr. Clark, who served overseas himself, delivered an eloquent address, speaking particularly of the heroism of the Canadian troops, how they sprang to arms at the call of duty, how they sacrificed themselves for what they believed to be right, and how 60,000 of these men were now sleeping in the fields of France and Flanders in order that Canada might enjoy political and religious freedom. The memories of those lads who sleep over yonder will ever be grateful countrymen, the speaker declared in the hearts of their claret.

At the conclusion of Mr. Clark's address Dr. Cohoon read a list of Mt. Allison boys who lost their lives in the great struggle. There are 67, including one who is still reported as missing. The audience stood as the names were being read and as Dr. Cohoon finished, a college bugler sounded "The Last Post." This was followed by "The Dead March" by the organist. During the evening a college quartette rendered appropriate music.

THE CONSUMER.

MR. MUD

I'm the Ultimate Consumer, and my eyes are full of tears, for I've carried all the burdens of the world, a thousand years, and I'm doomed to pack those burdens till this planet is no more, so my eyes are full of sorrow, and my heart is sick and sore. I've a right to groan and grumble and deplore my many ills, for I'm paying all the taxes, and I'm footing all the bills; to defray the world's expenses I am always sweating blood; I'm the Ultimate Consumer, and my name is Mud. Oh, the farmer gets a rake-off when he sells a load of wheat, and the miller, white and dusty, gets a rake-off and repeat, and the jobber gets a rake-off when he sells a sack of flour, and the dealer gets a rake-off, or you'll see him looking sour; and the Ultimate Consumer, when he buys a dinky sack, has to pay these divers rake-offs, while pink pains run up his back. And they tax the woolen maker, who in commerce cuts a swath, and he hands along the taxes to the gent who buys his cloth, and this gent just hands the taxes to the fellow lower down, till they reach the busy tailor in our little country town. And the Ultimate Consumer pays the taxes in the end, when he buys a suit of raiment with a stylish Grecian Bend. I'm the Ultimate Consumer, and I sound a plaintive note; I'm the guy who pays the fiddler, I'm the universal goat.

"IN FREEDOM'S CAUSE."

Evening Telegram

W. J. HERDER, Proprietor
C. T. JAMES, Editor

Tuesday, November 30, 1920.

Just as it Happened.

The Harbor Grace Standard, in its current issue, discussing editorially the press reports of the meetings held in St. John's recently under the auspices of the Fishermen and Mr. Coaker, respectively, states that these were—as expected—highly colored, and that "the Opposition papers painted the meeting presided over by Capt. Kean, as a very successful gathering, and depicted that held by Mr. Coaker the following night as a complete failure. Unfortunately for the cause of the Opposition, the accounts given by its papers savored too much of ridicule for the Coaker meeting and went the full length in praise of the first gathering. Reading all reports we can only conclude that the Coaker meeting was all that the Government papers said of it, and this opinion must throw distrust upon the statements given by the Opposition press of its meeting." The Standard is true to type. It had no representative at either of the meetings, the reports of which it criticises so strongly, hence its opinion is formed on a biased basis. The complete reports of both meetings as published in the three dailies opposed to the Government were such as actually took place. So far as the Telegram is concerned its representatives had specific instructions to take down, without comment, all that transpired, and give as near as possible, under the circumstances, a verbatim report of the speeches.

This was done in both cases, and the Telegram is prepared to stand by every word of descriptive matter as published. In fact the public generally was very much pleased with the manner in which our reporters handled those meetings and complimented them on their very excellent and accurate write-up. Not so in the case of the Advocate, which the Standard holds up as a pattern. That paper so foully libelled the fishermen who organized the great meeting of November 17th, that on the following day a deputation of the promoters called upon the editor of the Coaker organ and demanded a retraction, denouncing in emphatic language the deliberately falsified report which that paper had given. There is one proof that the Telegram reported the proceedings fairly and squarely, while the Government organs did not. The Standard can easily verify this by instituting enquiries among fishermen from Conception Bay who were in St. John's at the time. The attitude of this paper touching the Coaker meeting of November 18, did not vary one iota. Far from ridiculing the proceedings, they were reported straightforwardly, and if the speakers made themselves ridiculous in the eyes of those present, that could not reasonably be blamed on the Opposition press, though Heaven knows that to it has been attributed all the crimes mentionable. The greatest factor in favor of our contention that the Telegram gave a purely correct account of the Coaker gathering is that not one of the Government papers contradicted our published report, nor did any of Mr. Coaker's supporters accuse us of cooking it up for opposition consumption. Our case rests on that fact, which is sufficient proof of our bona fides. Had the editor of our weekly contemporary been present at Mr. Coaker's meeting, doubtless he would have been the only newspaper man who would have comprehended the mystery of Mr. Coaker's checker board diagram, though that gentleman in explaining it declared that there was not an editor in the country who would understand it—his own included.

The Patron Saint of Scotland.

St. Andrew, the Patron Saint of Scotland, whose "Day" is the 30th November, was one of the Twelve Apostles. From the few fragmentary notices in Scripture, the impression is gathered of a modest and kindly soul who signalized his conversion by bringing his brother, Simon Peter, into the Infant Church. When the Church began to be organized, this man, who previously had steered a fishing boat, was summoned to direct important expansions of Christian enterprise. Tradition tells us that he laboured in Scythia, Thrace, and Macedonia, suffering martyrdom at Patrae about 69 A.D. The mode of his execution was by scourging and crucifixion, and the date of his death has always been believed to be November 30, which therefore became his "Day." It is said that Andrew stoutly refused to hang upon the same sort of cross as that of his Master, thinking himself unworthy, for which reason he was placed on a cross shaped like the letter X. Hence arose St. Andrew's Cross. Bound and left to die in hunger, thirst, and exposure, Andrew continued to preach until he expired after two days of suffering. His corpse was embalmed and buried by Maximala, a lady of high rank and an adherent to the new faith. The bones of St. Andrew rested in peace until the beginning of the fourth century, when the Emperor Constantine removed and placed them in a church erected to the honor of the twelve Apostles at Constantinople. But even here the body was not permitted to remain undisturbed. Shortly after the death of Constantine, a Greek monk named Regulus—or Rule—was hidden in a night vision to take the sacred bones, of which he was custodian, and sail with them to an unknown land, whither he would be guided. The monk obeyed and with sixteen brethren set forth upon his mission. For two years the devoted band were tossed about, especially in the Bay of Biscay. Eventually they were shipwrecked on what is now the promontory of St. Andrew's. Getting safely to shore with the precious bones, they found the country covered with forests and swarming with wild boars and wilder Fictis. The Fictis King, however, won by the holy lives of the monks, received them hospitably, and was himself baptised. Such is the traditional story. From early days, St. Andrew has been a cherished name in Scotland. There is a tradition that an ancient Scots army was being worsted, when St. Andrew on his cross suddenly appeared in the sky, blinding the enemy by dazzling rays of light and enabling the Scots to gain an easy and decisive triumph. The Scottish Knights of the Order of the Thistle are also called Knights of St. Andrew's, and the insignia of the Order are a gold collar of thistles, a jewelled figure of St. Andrew, suspended by a green ribbon from the collar, and the central thistle surrounded by a band bearing the motto, "Nemo me impune necessit." Many Scottish churches are named after the Apostle; and the city of St. Andrew's—the ancient capital of Scotland—is full of his memorials.

St. Andrew's New Pastor
St. Andrew's congregation met last night to decide upon a successor to Rev. Gordon Dickie, M.A., their former pastor, who recently resigned. Rev. Mr. Coffin of Hr. Grace, presided. It was unanimously decided to offer the pastorate to Rev. R. J. Power, M.A., B.D., of Toronto. A committee to finalize matters and acquaint the Presbyteries of Halifax and Ontario was appointed and the offer will be made by Rev. Mr. Power forthwith. The Rev. gentleman is well known by St. Andrew's congregation having supplied St. Andrew's pulpit during the interval between Rev. Dr. Robertson's resignation and the appointment of Rev. Mr. Sutherland. Rev. Mr. Power is quite a young man, and has been very popular amongst his Halifax and Toronto congregations.

Still Buying Fish.

The Editor of the Advocate would learn something of fish purchases if he would take a walk as far as Hickman & Co.'s premises. There he would see many schooners discharging cargoes of fish. In the stores he would see thousands of quintals bulked and in packages, and incidentally he would learn something about sugar. Since July last this firm has sent to the different foreign markets over 75,000 qds. of fish, probably the largest export made by any one firm in the colony during the same period.

Bishop-Elect Renouf.

BIDS CONGREGATION FAREWELL.
At last Mass in St. Patrick's Church Sunday morning, Bishop-elect Renouf took the opportunity of bidding farewell to the congregation. He thanked them for the whole-hearted support that they had given him whilst in charge of the Parish, and hoped that the same support would be given the new Pastor, Rev. Dr. Kitchener of St. Joseph's, Holytown, who was well known in St. Patrick's being stationed in the diocese one time for a period of six years.

Addition to Fleet.

Schr. Netheron, which arrived in port yesterday with a cargo of coal, is another addition to our foreign going shipping. The vessel was built for the firm of Job Bros. & Co., Ltd., at Job's shipyards, Machias, Maine, U.S.A. The ship is constructed of oak and has a net tonnage of 275 tons. She has all the latest accommodations for master and crew and on the voyage from Sydney demonstrated her sailing qualities.

Can Meet Obligations.

The creditors of J. E. Lake of Fortune, met in the Board of Trade Rooms yesterday afternoon, when the matter of the firm's financial condition was discussed. The statements submitted showed that the business is in fairly sound financial condition and its five branches well stocked. It was decided to allow the business to continue, the opinion of the meeting being that the concern is able to meet all its obligations.

Not So Successful as Represented.

From letters received in the city, it is learned that the 12th P.P.H. convention at Port Union, instead of being the best on record as the Advocate would have it, was one of the poorest so far as accredited delegates were concerned. During former conventions a special committee had all they could do to find accommodation at Catalina, for the delegates, but strange to say not more than six stayed there this time. Another point is that in other years the convention lasted a week; this time 3 days sufficed. Mr. Coaker, being a busy man, probably had his censures, and other "important" documents ready for signature. This may account for the despatch of business. There are people spiteful enough to say that he became impatient because the committee did not sign up the Address in Reply with the customary promptitude, being embarrassed at the Wordy President's resignation and "unanimous" intention to retain the office. At any rate, accounts agree (excepting the Advocate's) that but for the officials of the Union Stores, Government members and invited guests, the 1920 convention was poorly attended. It is apparent that the fishermen have taken Mr. Coaker's advice, "Think A lot."

Interview with Mr. Coaker.

TELEGRAM ADMITTED TO THE PRESENCE.

The subpoenaed letter was received by the Telegram yesterday, and accordingly a representative was sent to make explanation to Mr. Coaker. Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir—In your issue of Saturday last, the following item appeared:—"DEFICIT REPORTED.—It is reported that current revenue has fallen off nearly 2½ million dollars, and that money to pay interest on the New York loan is not yet in sight." Will you be good enough to give me the source from which you received this, if not you will please be good enough to make the honorable amends.
I have the honor to be, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
W. F. COAKER,
Acting Prime Minister.

The reporter first asked the party from which the information came if the article was correctly reported, and was informed that the statement was exaggerated, in that it was not explicit and should have read: "It is reported that the current revenue has fallen off nearly $750,000 dollars, and by the end of the fiscal year, June next, would be nearly 2½ millions." However, being desirous to have the truth, the representative called next on the Minister of Marine and Fisheries. That gentleman was very talkative, but during a lull the first question put by the representative was, "Is it not true that there is a big deficit?"

Answer—"Any sane person should expect a deficit, but it is not near as big as is imagined."
Reporter—"Is it not over $750,000?"
Answer—"Well, that is nothing to be frightened about. This talking blue ruin will have a frightful effect and no one will lend us any money. Do you know the Telegram is widely read and is on file in all important places. In the House of Commons in England it is filed and these damaging statements which you people make are there for reference. The Convention has passed resolutions recommending that the Assembly authorize censorship over all matters pertaining to fisheries, prices, exportation, etc."

Reporter—"But don't you already exercise censorship by threatening libel suits at everything that displeases?"
Ans—"I have not time to go through all these articles that you publish and make objections."
The next question asked was: "Has all the fish now gone to market been disposed of?"
A direct reply was not given, but a board on which was painted a map of Portugal, and numerous little blocks representing ships, was pointed out. These as far as could be seen were all heading the one way, but before the astonished Telegram man could say a word, he was given to understand that nobody but the Minister of Marine and Fisheries or one like him could comprehend it.

Turning to the Chairman of the Advisory Board the representative relieved his mind of the problem by asking was there any agreement between the merchants who bought all the Labrador fish, and the Government. He was told for an answer that Governments don't make agreements, and that the only persons that knew what was done in the matter were Mr. Coaker and the Colonial Secretary, who might also know, but it was not likely that either of them would tell.

A warning that little matters may do big damage, with a request that the letter be published with a corrected statement that the rumor was not true, ended the interview.

Persian Hospitality. The Persian hospitality to the European is graceful, says a correspondent. When you enter the house they tell you that your presence has brought happiness to your slave; or if they are sufficiently Europeanized not to use the oriental hyperbole, still they make you feel that your arrival has brought happiness. If you comment on the sweetness of a child, they reply, "She kisses your hand." If you do any service for the poorer people they are likely to say, "May your hand never pain you." And—suggestive, this, of the famine manna. "May your shadow never grow less" "May your nose grow fat." The rich and well to do give you many sops of tea, generally followed by coffee, and the more sugar they put in the more polite they are trying to be. The more you eat the happier they are. Even the poor wish you to drink tea. When at a roadside cafe you buy your tea the cafe keeper serves it to you with the air of a host. The Persians have that truest essence of hospitality, that which makes you feel it has given them pleasure for you to stop beneath their roof-tree. They are said to be greedy for money and hard at a bargain, but these traits they never show their guests.

Leonard-Kelly Bout. Whether Jack Skelly, who acted as referee of the Benny Leonard-Eddie Kelly bout at the Commonwealth S. C. on Wednesday night, meant what he said when he declared he stopped the contest because he thought "Kelly was looking for a soft spot" was not officially known at the office of the Boxing Commission yesterday.

Skelly was quoted as saying, immediately after leaving the ring, that he "had disqualified Kelly." No official announcement of such action was made from the ring at the time. The Commonwealth S. C. has paid Kelly his share of the purse. Charles White, secretary of the Commission, said that up to date no report had been received from Skelly, or from Thomas Shortell and Harry Ward, who acted as the judges. Joseph Johnson and Walter Hooker, members of the Boxing Commission, saw the fight.

Skelly's unfortunate post-battle remark was unfair to Kelly, who certainly fought gamely and aggressively until he was rendered helpless by Leonard's blows. The referee's action was taken when Kelly hung limply on the ropes in a neutral corner, the top strand, caught under his armpits, holding him in a semi-upright position. He was absolutely helpless and another punch from Leonard might have had disastrous results.

Chinese Had Not "Cribbed."

In Chinese schools everything is subordinated to memory. Knowledge, as we understand it, is quite a secondary thing in the course that the Chinese schools give. A god example of the surprising extent to which they cultivate the memory occurred at one of the examinations for the diploma of the college of medicine. All the students answered the questions correctly, but on comparing the papers, it was found that the papers were identical. Words, paragraphs, sentences, full stops and commas were precisely alike. The examiners, new to Chinese methods of instruction, insisted on setting another paper, for they believed that the students had somehow copied from one another. They drew up five more questions, and kept a careful watch during the examination. Again the answers were correct and identical in every point. It was only when the examiners looked at the text-book that the class used that the explanation appeared. The students knew the book of five hundred pages literally by heart, and they could answer any question word for word from the book.

Revival of Sunday Games Favored by Church.

Southend-On-Sea.—A return to the Sunday games that made England "merry" was advocated at the Church Congress here.

The Bishop of Sheffield, spoke on the Christian ethics of amusement. There has been, he said, a great change with regard to the theatre, dancing, cards, billiards and the cinema. He believed the drama to be one of the highest forms of recreation. No self-respecting person would frequent some dances, he said, but that there was more ugliness than wickedness in some of the fantastic dances so popular after the war. He believed, however, that these were gradually disappearing, except among the inherently vulgar. The Christian who was a kill-joy was a caricature of Christianity, he said.

The Rev. Canon J. H. Adderley, told how the Basque, Bay of Biscay people danced the fandango on Sunday evening, and said: "I should like to see that at Convent Garden, but I shall have to wait for a 'blue moon' before it is done. I should like to see the cowly fathers go to the theatre and to see the Archbishop of Canterbury organizing and playing in a cricket match at Lambeth."

Canon Pierce, Vicar and Rural Dean of Brighton, said he saw nothing incongruous in men, women and children going straight from Church to the recreation ground or proceeding from a round of golf to Evensong. The Church had no quarrel with Sunday games; but was it not possible to ask the nation seriously whether we wanted the Sunday to disappear in an orgy of lorries and motor-coaches. The scenes on Sunday on the roads from London to certain south coast holiday resorts were sometimes deplorable, he said.

Miss Sybil Thordike, the actress, received a great reception. She pleaded for a better understanding of the stage by the Church. "How few there are in this workaday world," she said, "who have told the truth to a clergyman."

"What we ask the Church to support is that the theatre should be in the hands of artists, that it should be free to present all aspects of life as the artist sincerely sees them. We want a theatre which speaks the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth."

The Rev. Dr. Percy Dearmer speaking on Sunday amusements said:

"Every man should have at least one day and a half for rest out of the seven. This involves the cessation of animal inactivity. Rest is not only repose but also recreation.

He urged outdoor games, including cricket, which he described as the laziest game on earth. They should be organized by the Church, he said, and churchmen must oppose Sunday theatres, not because theatres were wrong, but because they employ a large amount of labor. They must oppose the Parisian Sunday, but not tennis, or golf, or perhaps in Utopia there would be a chapel near the last hole, he said.

The Rev. G. H. Dymock, organizing secretary of the Church Pictorial Movement, read a paper upon the Church and the Cinema. "The screen," he said, "is now, and will rapidly become more so, the working-man's book, and just as Carleton and Tyndale gave the printing press and the Bible to the masses of their day, so it will fall to the lot of the film exhibitors to provide the toilers of our more artless times with treasures of ancient and modern literature."

Confirmation From Foreign Sources.

The following clipping is taken from the Toronto World dated November 23rd, 1920:

TO SAVE FISHERMEN FROM HEAVY LOSSES.

Nfld. Govt. Proposes to Guarantee Purchases of Codfish.

"St. John's, Nfld., Nov. 29.—The Newfoundland Government is taking active steps with a view to preventing serious loss to the fishermen of the Colony as a result of the prevailing low prices for fish. Sir Alexander Harris, Governor of Newfoundland, conferred to-day with William F. Coaker, Minister of Marine and Fisheries and Acting Premier, and James Arthur Paddon, Manager of the Bank of Montreal, regarding a proposition that the Government should guarantee purchases of codfish.

A great amount of fish caught off the Labrador Coast during last season and cured at Newfoundland fishing ports remain unsold. This is explained as largely due to the fact that because of differences in exchange rates and other abnormal conditions, there has been a very poor market in the Mediterranean ports, which ordinarily absorb most of the Labrador product."

This Morning's Fire.

A call from box 233 brought the Central and East End fire companies at 1:45 a.m. to Fleming Street. The men responded quickly and were confronted with a slight blaze, a shed owned by T. Pafford at the junction of Fleming and Belvedere Streets having ignited through live coals blowing out of an ash pail that had been put in the streets a few minutes earlier by one of the residents. The blaze was quenched by the efforts of the firemen before much damage was done. Driving to the fire, Driver Squires of the ladder truck, narrowly escaped serious injury. While passing at the top of Father Walsh's Hill, the wheels of the truck skidded and Squires was thrown to the street, barely escaping coming in contact with a telephone pole. He held the reins, however, and managed to bring up the horses and get back on the truck and continue to the fire. Although somewhat cut about the face and hands, and in spite of the severe shaking he had received, he was able to perform his duties in helping extinguish the blaze.

Elks' New Clubrooms.

The principal business before last night's meeting of Newfoundland, No. 1, Elks was the matter of club rooms. After some discussion it was decided to rent the rooms in the Smallwood building lately vacated by the St. Andrew's Society, and it is expected that they will be ready for use shortly. An enjoyable card tournament was held after the meeting, two splendid prizes being offered. The nomination of officers for 1921 will take place on the 13th of next month, and election will be held a week later. Membership in the Elks is rapidly on the increase and will be augmented still more when the new club rooms are taken over.

Buy N. F. Manufactures.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir.—I was very pleased a few days ago to read the resolutions passed at a meeting of the N.I.W.A. recommending to members to support local industry. It is now carried out by the whole population buying only goods made in Nfld., it would considerably alter present conditions. The purchases of only Nfld. made goods should be loyally observed by every man, woman and child in the country.

Let us make the slogan "Buy Only Goods Made in Nfld." and keep the factories running, which find employment for so many. Every dollar spent on an imported article only assists in building up a foreign factory. I remain, Yours truly, HALF TIMER.

King Dog Fancier.

King Henry III. of France loved dogs and had as many as two thousand of them in his palace, all of them of small breeds, and classed as lap dogs. They were divided into bands of six, with a keeper for each unit. Wherever the king had a palace there was a dog room next to the royal bed chamber, and this room was furnished with silk and satin-lined baskets. A courtier who invented a basket to be slung over the king's neck, like the tray of orange girls, and which would hold thirty of the pets at a time, was rewarded by the king and publicly praised. One of Henry's greatest trials each morning when he got up, was his inability to decide which dog or group of dogs would accompany him during the day. He never received a foreign minister without having two or three, or even a dozen of the dogs rolling about his feet or lolling on his lap. When the minister's words did not please him he would slyly pinch one of the pets, and in a minute it would be in an uproar so loud that it would be impossible for the visitor to proceed. His greatest expression of friendship consisted in bestowing a dog upon the man or woman who had pleased him.

The Lord Mayor's Show.

(From the Westminster Gazette.) In curtailing, although unwillingly, this year's "Show," the Lord Mayor is only reverting to the simplicity of the pageant's early days. In its beginnings the Lord Mayor's Show consisted merely of a procession of minstrels and banders on horseback, and its last ancient feature was the group of poor men of the Company to which the Lord Mayor belonged—one for every year of his age—wearing long gowns and close-fitting caps of the Company's colors, and carrying painted shields. It was estimated by a former member of the City Corporation that a modern "Show" and banquet cost £4,000, half of which sum is contributed by the Lord Mayor and half by the Sheriffs. There have been banquets alone at the Guildhall which cost much more than that. When George IV. was entertained there, as Regent, on June 18, 1814, with Alexander, Emperor of Russia, and Frederick III., King of Prussia, the bill ran up to £25,000, and the value of the plate used was £2,000,000. A banquet to Queen Victoria, on November 9, 1837, cost £6,870; and an evening entertainment to Her Majesty on July 9, 1851, to celebrate the Great Exhi-bitution, was kept to £5,120 14s. 9d. or £129 5s. 3d. less than the sum voted by the Corporation. Fresh Oysters at ELLIS'. nov17,11

Our Sporting Column.

(Conducted by Full Back.)

FOREWORD.

To conduct a sporting column in a Newfoundland paper, which is to keep its readers informed of all the latest events transpiring in the sporting world, is no very easy matter.

In the first place, one cannot receive outside results until a week or more after the events have taken place, and secondly, even then one can only get a bald account. We shall do our best, however, to keep this column up to date by publishing the very latest news as soon as it arrives. In the meantime, we shall welcome suggestions for improving this column, from readers.

CANADA.

Inter-collegiate Rugby.—The University of Toronto beat McGill at Kingston, on Nov. 20th by one touchdown, thus winning the Inter-collegiate Rugby Union Championship for 1920. The game was played before a huge crowd of spectators, which included over 3500 supporters of the two teams who travelled from Montreal and Toronto to witness the game. Although a hard fought game throughout, the exhibition was a very poor one, as though Toronto played spectacular Rugby, McGill made error after error, simply throwing away chances. During the game, Flanagan and Carroll, both McGill men, were seriously injured. This contributed towards McGill's defeat.

Dalhousie Beats Cape Bretonians.—Dalhousie University beat the Caledonian team of Cape Breton by a score of 9-3 in a poorly contested game.

Soccer in Canada.—The Pennsylvania Varsity "Soccer" team is going to play the Toronto Varsity team.

UNITED STATES.

Varsity Football.—Harvard University beat Yale by 9-0 before 80,000 spectators, on Nov. 20th. Harvard scored all its points by good kicking.

The Horse Shoe Murder.

On November 30, 1878, some workmen on the Northern Railway of France were horrified to find the mutilated body of a man on the line a few miles from Paris. Half a dozen trains must have passed over it, for it was barely recognizable. But the clothing of the dead man was marked "H.H." and in his pocket were a number of letters addressed to Henri Hoyes. Subsequent inquiries, however, led the police and the insurance company to suspect that the dead man was not Hoyes at all, but that of a man named Baron, a friend of the former. The police made a search for Hoyes, found him, and arrested him, and at the trial it was shown that he was a clever scoundrel. It transpired that the murder of Baron was the second he had committed, the first victim being his own wife, who he murdered in a field, where they were a number of horses. The dead woman had apparently been kicked by the animals, for the marks of their shoes were to be seen on her body and head. But it appeared afterwards that Hoyes himself inflicted the injuries with his boot, on which he had fastened a horse-shoe. It was found that the career of Hoyes had been one of crime for the purpose of securing insurance monies. Baron was killed on the railway embankment, and then thrown over on to the line to be cut to pieces by passing trains. At the trial Hoyes was found guilty. "I am innocent," he shouted; "my my blood be upon the heads of all here." His life had been one long career of crime. He had been forced to leave Belgium, where he was born, because he had twice forged his father-in-law's name, and had also suggested to him that he should murder an uncle who had recently been left a legacy of some thousands of pounds. He had also tried to swindle insurance companies by insuring imaginary persons, but without success. He was guillotined a few weeks later.

Insects Not Prohibitionists.

There are no prohibitionists among the insects, says a correspondent. Hundreds of wasps were recently observed among the fir trees of Keston Lake crawling eagerly over sprindles and sucking at drops of turpentine which form at this time of year. A vast humming came from the trees, reminiscent of the midsummer ring over the heated hay fields. Large flies and blue-bottles were also seen. In many cases the insects consumed so much of the firewater that they fell to the ground in a drunken stupor, or clung, hazardly to the trees. The wolf-spider chasing its prey through the grass like a dog was having a rich harvest. Other insects came to the Bacchanalian repast. A species of aphid was much in evidence and also its keeper, the ant, busy milking it of its gathered liquor.

Popular Steamship Race

MEIGLE SHOWS HEELS TO SABLE I. ON 360 MILE RUN.

In an ocean race of 360 miles from St. John's, Nfld., to North Sydney, a race that was full of stirring scenes and thrills, the Newfoundland steamer Meigle showed her heels to the Sable I. beating the latter by two hours and 45 minutes.

At 12 o'clock noon sharp Tuesday the Sable I. cast off her lines and proceeded on her way direct to North Sydney. Exactly one hour later the Meigle, Capt. Cross, "let go" and started in pursuit. Both commanders cunning and competent, had the engine room crews tuned up to the highest pitch. Even the stokers, on learning of the race, needed no coaxing and worked like trojans that their ship might win. It was a ship's crew against a ship's crew, each prepared to go the limit of his endurance.

Slowly but surely the Meigle began to lessen the distance caused by an hour's advantage gained by her adversary in the start. Captain Murley was the first to notice this, and when he saw the Meigle was getting almost within speaking distance he appealed to the engine room. The result showed that the Sable I. had a little to spare and for many miles the contest showed both steamers were holding their own.

Finally, however, the Meigle began to again draw nearer and nearer till she was directly abreast of the Sable I. Then it was that the stokers and engine crew on both craft put forth herculean efforts, while for upwards of three hours, the two steamers raced through the raging Atlantic side by side. Not a foot could one gain on the other until darkness shut out from view the contenders.

But the struggle by no means ceased. Racing in the darkness on the stormy billows is the same to these intrepid commanders as if in a millpond. When the grey dawn of morn broke forth yesterday morning it was seen Capt. Cross had in some remarkable manner stole a march on Capt. Murley, as the Meigle was a considerable distance in the lead, and reached here at 11.15 last night, the Sable I. 2 hours and 45 minutes later—2 o'clock this morning.—North Sydney Herald, Nov. 25.

Search for Flags of French Army.

Paris.—Only one of the thirteen flags of 1870 which have been restored by Germany and carried in the procession on November 11, is crowned by the Imperial Eagle of Napoleon 3rd and, the fact has led to the question of whether Germany has not shown bad faith, even in this, and supplied "ersatz" flags. The Matin recently declared that the expert sent to Germany to recover the flags was cheated, and when he sought the flags was given stories about how they had been nearly all burned in the troubles after the armistice. A second expert, it is stated, has been sent to make a further inquiry and try to find in Berlin, Potsdam and Munich the flags which, it is thought, have been concealed.

At the Army Museum, however, it is stated that the flags, such as they are, are real and the fact that the eagles are not with them is because the flags were captured from the army of defence after the revolution. The museum authorities declare they know the history of all the restored flags and know where they were captured, and they refuse to believe they are "ersatz."

Bride-Cake Ships.

The Solent and English Channel will in future be guarded by the weirdest ships built for any navy.

Two of these ships have been constructed at a cost of £750,000 each, and one of them is now to be seen about three and a half miles from Portsmouth Harbor, near the Nab Lightship.

Imagine to yourself a bride-cake some 200 ft. high, built in tiers of steel and concrete, weighing 10,000 tons, and you will get some idea of these secret ships. Many were the surmises as to their

The Admiralty guarded the secret jealously, each workman taking an oath of secrecy, which is still binding.

One has been sunk at the spot mentioned and resting on the bed of the sea, rises sixty feet above sea level at high tide. It has a crew of about 100 men, and is equipped with a powerful searchlight and other apparatus. While the secret of the tower-ships is still being well kept, it is stated that the original intention was to build sixteen of these concrete ships and to sink them in position across the Straits of Dover in order to fasten submarine nets to them and thus protect the Channel from submarines. But that is only guesswork.

Irish History and Henry II.

Dear Sir—In a letter of Rev. T. B. Barry, recently published in our city papers, occurs the following, which shall prove to be an erroneous statement. "The first English invasion of Ireland was undertaken to carry out an arrangement by which the lordship of Ireland was given by Pope Adrian to Henry the Second for generations the English kings based their right to rule the island on the authority of the Papacy; that the right was maintained by his prelates." It is upon this claim, Henry, that Pope Adrian gave Henry the Bull authorizing him to invade Ireland and improve the religious state in that country, that many attempt to justify the English possession of Ireland. Thus taking for granted, they wonder why Irish people should be so unyielding as to resist the interference of a man, who with sword in one hand and a parchment in the other set out to the Mohammedans of old to return the foreign lands. Historians and commentators have since questioned not only the validity but also the actual granting of such a Bull; thorough investigation has proved that not only has the authority of the Bull been based upon falsehood but also upon forgery.

Such a thing as the original copy of the Bull does not exist. References have been made to it by a few temporary writers, who were more or less interested in Henry's affairs in Ireland, but beyond these they have done nothing of its existence. It was issued by Papal authority only natural to suppose that the record of it would be made at the Vatican. Research has proven that among the archives of Rome, where the important State papers are retained, there is no reference made to the Bull in the proper place and order. The fact that Henry the Second made use of this statement will come to light some seventeen years after his death and then at a time when the interests in Ireland appeared to be too favorable. Lingard, an English historian, with reference to the statement writes, "It had been gotten during almost forty years; it was drawn from obscurity, was entrusted to William Fitz Aldelm, Bishop of Exeter, and was read by him at a synod of Irish bishops." Prof. O. G. Thatcher, of Chicago, who gave great attention to the subject and who is considered an authority because of his great research work among the archives at Rome and elsewhere states, "Henry the Second got possession of Ireland by arms, and not as a brief but as an absolute possession. After he had taken possession of it he tried, but without success to persuade three successive Popes to acknowledge the absolute character of his title to it." The writer then examines the wording of the so-called Bull and notes its numerous and awkward repetitions, its harshness and its resemblance to a letter of Adrian from which several sentences are borrowed and badly adapted, concludes that it was never the work of Adrian.

I have said that reference has been made to it by some contemporary writers. Of these only two are worthy of consideration, John of Salisbury, and Gerald de Barry. The more reliable of these two is John of Salisbury, and the only reference he gives is in a treatise on the study of metaphysics and logic. Strange to state in the last chapter of a book on metaphysics and logic we find the following insertion, quite at variance with its surroundings, "Pope Adrian had granted Ireland to Henry, at his request, it being patrimony of his holiness by hereditary right, in as much as all the islands belong to the Roman church by concession of Emperor Constantine the Great." It may be worthy of note that Ireland had never been subject to Roman rule. Therefore regarding this data it is of logical sequence to maintain that Constantine never had the right of placing Ireland under the dominion of the Pope's temporal power. Reverting once to the strangeness of this quotation, I may add, that so exotic to the study of metaphysics or logic is this assertion that it gives rise to the suspicion of interpolation; firstly, as Rev. L. J. Kenny, S.J., notes, because of the extraordinary nature of the petition; secondly the peculiar style of the chapter; and thirdly, the location of it is in this, rather than in a more appropriate writing. To bring forward the latter reason more strongly, I may state that John of Salisbury wrote two books wherein he gave minutely the details of his visit to the Pope, and the conversation held with him, but nowhere do we find anything to substantiate the interpolation in the concluding chapter of his book on metaphysics and logic.

The second contemporary authority to whom we refer is Gerald de Barry, in his writings are contained not only a copy of the Bull, but mention is also made of Alexander's confirmation of the gift of Ireland to Henry. Time has since proven the latter assertion to be false, and few, if any, place credence in this confirmation. De Barry himself, commenting on this, says, "While some deny that it was obtained, others deny that it was ever granted." According to his own words, De Barry employed his own time white-washing Henry's reputation, and that the aim of his work was the sounding of his praises. "Truth was not his main object." This is the insignia with which the editor of De Barry's works impresses upon them. It would not therefore be rational to accept the authenticity of a Bull comprehending within its consequences such an important issue, so dubious in its construction and purpose, and upon the remote authority of an isolated chapter in a book on metaphysics or the word of a contemporary writer, whose reputation does not savour much of veracity.

The sole pretext for which the concession was granted Henry was the reformation of morals. The Irish were to be deprived of the right to govern themselves without, according to Nubrigius, being able to raise a voice in their own defence, and that upon the specious pretext of moral reform. It is customary to adapt the means to the end, a bad man seldom makes a good reformer. The life of Henry the Second will not bear scrutiny. This apostle of Ireland, later the murderer of Thomas Becket, not only forgot the duties of religion, but often those of nature. An enemy of the Pope's he did all in his power to curtail the privileges of the church, and showed contempt for their legates. Yet in view of all this, some would have us believe that such a man would be chosen as instrumental in the reformation of Irish morals.

This brings another aspect of the question before us. Had the state of religion in Ireland sunk so low that the Irish race needed the guiding hand of Henry the Second? Doubtless religion and education had suffered somewhat during the wars of the Danes which lasted nearly three hundred years. Such evil effects always follow in the wake of a long and protracted war. But after the Battle of Clontarf a great movement was set afoot to rebuild the churches which had been demolished by the Danes and to make Ireland once more the Isle of the Saints and Scholars. Synods were called at different intervals and so effectual was the work of reconstruction that Haverly writes, "The extraordinary energy displayed at this period by the hierarchy and clergy of Ireland produced prelates of the highest celebrity for their virtue and doctrine." Seeing that such is the state of the church in Ireland, and even granting that there were abuses, one wonders why the Pope should have overlooked them of such ability as St. Malachy, St. Lawrence, and resorted to foreigners to complete a reformation then going on within its boundaries.

Such is the result of investigation! Let the obstinate hold what views they will. Who is so blind as he who will not see? These are facts and facts carry conviction, thus you may conclude for yourself regarding the authenticity of the Bull.

Yours truly,
J. A. GIBBS.

Unhappy Ending to Love's Dream.

A young English woman who arrived here yesterday morning on the steamer Kyle, giving her name as Mrs. Avery, was detained in the immigration shed by immigration officer J. J. Dooley. Mrs. Avery, who had $187 on her person told the above official that she was a munition worker in England during the war when she met her husband, who was engaged at naval work under the British Admiralty. A short acquaintance ripened into love and courtship. But as neither were quite ready to be united in the holy bonds, the happy event was deferred. Some time later he returned to his home in St. John's, and the following summer the English munition worker came out to America to give it the "once over." After a brief stay, she returned to her home in England not fully persuaded she could live the rest of her days here. However a constant correspondence was kept up resulting in another trip across the Atlantic by the female munition worker. There was no delay this time and about the first part of October the pair were joined together in wedlock at Sydney Mines. Since taking up her residence at the home of her husband in St. John's, Mrs. Avery says her life was one continual round of regret, dejection and dissatisfaction. Driven almost to despair, she finally induced her husband to leave for Canada. They both left St. John's the first part of the week, but when they got as far as Grand Falls Mrs. Avery declared she could not bear her husband's company any longer. On her suggestion he returned to St. John's, while she continued on her journey westward, her destination being Montreal, where she hoped to earn her own living. Before allowing her to pass thro', Mr. Dooley got in communication with Ottawa. In the meantime, however, Mrs. Avery experienced a change of heart, and last night she left on the return trip of the Kyle "to give," as she said in the immigration shed, "my Herald, Nov. 24," "him one chance more." North Sydney Herald—Nov. 24.

Well, I'm Jiggered!

There is a painful reality behind this common expression of surprise. It owes its origin to men who have returned to Britain from Africa and the West Indies, where the jigger flea flourishes.

The "jigger" or, to give the pest its right name, "chigoe," makes its home in the sand, and woe betide the unwary white man who crosses the floor of his hut barefooted, or who walks abroad in leaky boots!

It is the female of the species who is responsible for "jiggering" the white man. It is her custom to choose the hard flesh beside the toe-nails, into which she burrows, and thereafter lays her eggs.

At first one feels no inconvenience, but after a few days there is a sensation as if the boot has chafed one's toe; a few days later a little white "blob," not unlike a mistletoe berry, appears beside the toe-nail. This is the jigger flea's egg-bag. The attentions of the jigger are not confined to the feet alone.

There was one man in Africa who elected to sleep upon the ground. During the night a number of jiggers effected a lodgment in his spine, and it was the hardest matter on earth to save his life.

Blackheads are a confession

Blackheads are caused by excessive oil collecting dirt in the pores of the skin. Their presence is a confession that you are using the wrong method of cleansing for your type of skin.

To cleanse thoroughly skins liable to this disgusting trouble, use the following special treatment. Apply hot cloths to the face until the skin is reddened. Then with a rough washcloth work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap and rub it into the pores thoroughly, always with an upward and outward motion. Rinse with clear hot water, then with cold—the colder the better. If possible, rub your face for thirty seconds with a piece of ice. Dry carefully.

To remove blackheads already formed, substitute a flesh brush for the washcloth in the treatment above. Then protect the fingers with a handkerchief and press out the blackheads.

Keep your skin free of blackheads by the above treatment and gain the clear attractive skin that the regular use of Woodbury's brings.

Get a cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap and begin tonight the treatment your skin needs. You will find Woodbury's on sale at any drug store or toilet goods counter in the United States or Canada. A 25 cent cake will last a month or six weeks.

I'M COMING, Says Cheery Joe

There's been too much grumblin' and bickerin' the last ten months. Too much beating about hard times. People need my bright smile, my cheery greeting that rings so happily across the snow on Christmas morning. And so I've been sent—the advance agent of the great giver. I have been the follower of the sled, pushing it over high banks, digging it out of hollows for many Christmases, but this Christmas I have been sent on ahead—a precursor of joy to make your hearts warm.

With my fund of joy I also pack a great deal of wisdom—a marvellous amount of knowledge on Christmas Gift choosing, gathered from many centuries following the Trail of the Sled. I know ALL about gifts, where to buy them, and how to buy them.

But I know more about men than about women—a great deal more than most women. I'm going to criticize, analyze, suggest and urge. And before Christmas has passed I hope to gain the love of every woman in this good old burg by making every man exclaim on Christmas morning, "How did she know that that was just what I wanted?" So much so that they'll want me to come again—next Christmas and for many Christmases after, so long as this old world continues making Christmas Merry.

I'll be back again!

Yours for Joy,
