North Wellington Election Protest.
We stated yesterday that the Speaker had overruled all objections in reference to the petition against the return of Col. Higinbotham, and has decided to hand it over to a Committee. Whatever opinion there might be with regard to these objections, there is now no appeal from the ruling of the Speaker, and the friends of Col. Higinbotham in the North Riding will now have to prepare themselves to fight Drew and his friends to the bitter end. It is his friends to the bitter end. It is not likely the committee to try this case will be struck this session. Sixteen clear days must elapse from the time the Speaker gives his decision before the Committee can be appointed. Before this number of days elapse the session will, in all probability, be at an end, and the matter will have to lie over until next session.

ANNABEL

THE TEMPTATION.

CHAPTER XVII.

CHAPTER XVII.

THE DRAFH OF ELLEN MATTOCK.

While all this elaborate plotting and deception was being carried forward, the two young girls, through whom and against whom it was being conducted, were not only profoundly ignorant regarding it, but were east —mind and spirit—into a region far removed from those worldly feelings and motives while engender such wickedness. Ellen was all the while slowly but surely going down into the valley of the shadow of death, and Annabel was accompanying her as far within the verge of its solemn gloom as loving triend can go. The change from England to France had been to the invalid productive of no good. The expected mildness of climate had not been experienced, as indeed how could it, high up on the exposed side of the mountains, open to the cold winds, the evening chills, and floating vapours; especially as autumn drew on, these trying variations of temperature increased, and Ellen's cough grew worse, her weakness became greater, and all the symptoms of the disease were aggravated, till it was only too evident that the end was approaching.

The poor girl suffered no disappointment on this account. No hepe had approaching.

The poor girl suffered no disappointment on this account. No hope had ever been raised in her breast by removal to France. She believed from the first that she was dying, and had patiently made up her mind to meet that fatal issue. Therefore, when the time passed and she felt herself get no better but only worse, the conviction brought no bitterness to her soul, but only a sweeter patience and a deeper peace. She was full of gratitude and contentment. All her wants were supplied, all her cares were removed; she was being tended and ministered to night and day with a tenderness and devotion which filled her with unbounded thankfulness, and as consciously she glided on into the deepening shadow of the dread and awful valley, she felt no fear or forebolding, but cherished a lively faith and a humble but assured hope, knowing in whom she believed and to whom in penitence and trust she had committed her eternal all. Annabel was not at first under the believed and to whom in penitence and trust she had committed her eternal all. Annabel was not at first under the believed and to whom in penitence and trust she had committed her eternal all. Annabel was not at first under the believed and to whom in penitence and trust she had committed her eternal all. Annabel was not at first under the believed and to whom in penitence and trust she had committed her eternal all. Annabel was not at first under the believed and to whom in penitence and trust she had committed her eternal all. Annabel was not at first under the believed and to whom in penitence and trust she had committed her eternal all. Annabel was not at first under the believed and to whom he penitence and trust she had committed her eternal all. Annabel with admitted his penitence and trust she had committed her eternal all. Annabel was not at first under the believed and to whom he penitence and trust she had committed her eternal all. An at the step of the high the hi mental experience—close even to the gate of heaven.

But at length the end came, and that too was peace. Annabel only was with Ellen when she died. Dick was wandering somewhere on the mountain, and Mrs. Langton, in breathless suspense, was waiting in another room, wildly eager to learn that this, the chief and of her calculations and the basis of her farther proceedings, was realised.

The dying one had become very weak now, her voice was gone, her hands were motionless, her breathing was low and faint—her open and expressive yees alone, as these were fixed on hannel's face, showed intelligence and love, and by these the spiritual communion of the two was still kept up.

Ellen was so far within the yalley now that Annabel had no power to follow her with sisterly service. She was alike beyond earthly want and earthly help, but, her face bent closely over her. Annabel repeated in her hearing some of the sweetest and most inspiring passages of Holy Writ, particularly this one, which she whispered again and again—

"Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death I will fear no evil, for thou art with me: thy rod and thy staff, they comfort me."

Once when she had finished the utterance of these divinely comforting words, a strange new light shone suddenly in Ellen's countenance, her cycs beamed with surpassing lustre, and her lips parted under a' seraphic—smile. It was a glory shed upon her mortal part from the heaven which had opened to receive the immortal spirit, for at that moment one long, tranquil sigh escaped her, and without struggle or groan, her young life was ended.

In the glazing eye over which the death film had gathered, in the fixed feath film had gathere without struggle or groan, her young life was ended.

In the glazing eye over which the death film had gathered, in the fixed features, in the awful paleness, and the more awful stillness, Annabel understood that Ellen was gone, and kneeling down she thanked God for the victory that the ransomed soul had obtained over the power of the king of terrors.

Had she know of the dark plot which had been hatched against herself, and which Ellen's death now rendered practicable, her words of thanksgiving would have ended in a prayer for protection against the terrible evil which was about to be done to her. But, alas, she knew it not, and was thus unsuspectingly to become the easy victim of those who were plotting againt her.

Music at Home. — What shall the amusement of the home be? When there is the ability and taste, I regard music as combining in happiest proportions instruction and pleasure, as standing at the head of the home evening enjoyments. What a never-failing resource have those homes which God hath blessed with this gift? How many pleasant family ericles gather nightly about the piano? how many a home is vocal with the voice of song or psaim? In other days, in how many village homes the father's violin led the domestic harmony, and sons with clariynet or flute, or manly voice, and daughters sweetly and clearly filling in the Intervals of sound, made a joyful noise! There was then no piano, to the homes of this generation the great, the universal boon and comforter. One pauses and blesses it as he hears it through the open farm-house window, or detects its sweetness stealing out amid the jargons of the city—an angel's ben ison upon a wilderness of discord, soothing the weary brain, lifting the troubled spirit, pouring fresh strength into the tired body, waking to worship, luling to rest. Touched by the hand we love, an mother, sister, wife—say, is it not a ministrant of love to child, to man—a house hold deity, now meeting our moods, answering to our needs, sinking to depths we cannot reach, leading, guiding, great and grand and good, and now stooping to our lover wants, the frolic of our souls reverberating from its keys! The home that has a piano, what capacity for evening pleasure and profit has it! Alas, that so many wives and mothers should spack of their ability to play as a mere accomplishment of the past, and that children should grow up looking on the piano as a thing unwisely kept for company and show.

which can be cured by a timely resort to this standard preparation, as has been proved by the hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors. It is acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most reliable preparation ever introduced for the relief and cure of all Lung complaints, and is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years. When resorted to in season it seldom fails to effect a speedy cure in the most severe cases of Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup, Whooping Gough, Induenza, Asthma, Colds, Sore Throat, Pains or Soreness in the Chest and Side, Liver Complaint, Bleeding at the Lungs, &c. Wistar's Balsam does not dry up a Cough, and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs, and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.
