The examination was very satisfactory and showed me that the members of the class had carefully assimilated the instruction given to them. They displayed a great deal of enthusiasm and if the same result is obtained in the 12 months to follow before the school comes to an end, it should be a most satisfactory one.

JOHNSON ALL THE WAY, REPORTS MORRISON

By C. L. MORRISON. SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 18.—Jack Johnson failed the prediction of the Johnson writers and other close followers of the fistic game when he knocked Stanley Ketchel, the middleweight and light-heavy weight champion cold in the twelfth round of their battle for the heavyweight championship of the world, at Cohan's arena at Colma. It was a good fight from a spectator's standpoint, although it was Johnson all the way.

DISGRACEFUL ROW OVER LACROSSE GAME

NEW WESTMINSTER, Oct. 18.—While Jack Johnson and Stanley Ketchel were battling in San Francisco Saturday, a far more disgraceful fight was in progress between the rival lacrosse players of New Westminster and Vancouver. Twenty-four husky lacrosse players of New Westminster and Vancouver, armed with heavy sticks and using them in hot blood on each other, the police, and the spectators together, finally in an awe-inspiring sight, and the fans who had the sense to hide in the grand stand were treated to such a battle royal as has never before been seen on a lacrosse field.

Display Extraordinary In Evening And Reception Gowns—Opera And Restaurant Cloaks

Never before have we been able to make such a beautiful display in these charming and most exclusive garments, imported from the leading European centers—they are beautiful in the extreme.

In Evening and Reception Gowns delightful creations are shown, made up in broche silks, soft moires and other delicate materials. The Parisian styles this season are taken from the time of Charlemagne, 1,100 years ago (graceful and beautiful).

In our new show rooms we are prominently displaying a number of gowns from Paris costumiers, especially selected to aptly illustrate the most marked features of the fashion, which though moderate in price are typical examples of how the extreme fashions can be modified to suit refined English ideas.

In many of the new gowns the garniture is the most important feature. Yokes, corsages with panels attached. Jet and metal embroideries are used chiefly on a net foundation.

Jet is universally fashionable both in form of garnitures and as a straight trimming.

Princess Evening Gowns are very popular. The ornamentation on all our gowns are particularly noteworthy.

In Evening and Opera Cloaks the assortment is both wide and, as usual with us, exclusive.

A great deal of attention has been paid to evening cloaks and wraps and very reasonable prices quoted.

ST. YVES BREAKS ALL RECORDS IN SEATTLE MARATHON

(Continued from Page 1.) seventeenth Marsh was forced to stop. He had every appearance of having run himself out, while St. Yves was running apparently just as easily and as strong as when he started. When he passed Marsh a mighty cheer went up all over the grounds. In the twentieth mile St. Yves again lapped the field in spite of the persistent spurts made by Marsh to keep his opponent's lead under two laps. He was unsuccessful, for St. Yves pegged along at his heels, with him and passing him without any trouble. All down the line St. Yves records the twenty mile record being lowered from 1 hour, 57 minutes, 25 4-5 seconds to 1 hour, 52 minutes and 6 2-5 seconds.

GREAT INTEREST TAKEN LOCALLY

Great interest was taken in the big Seattle Marathon locally. Many Victorians went to the Sound city on Saturday to witness the contest. Yesterday the local telegraph offices were besieged by inquirers and today the telephones of The Evening Post were kept busy with calls from sport fans anxious to hear the details of the event.

Through a mistake in transmission the rumor got about yesterday that John D. Marsh had won the race and admirers of the speedy English-Caradair runner were jubilant. Today the Post received the definite news of St. Yves' wonderful record-smashing feat, and although this removed Johnny's from first place it detracted only slightly from his glory inasmuch as his performance stands alone, considering his age. He ran a slashing race and the fact that he left Johnny Hayes, the much-lauded victor of first place in the Olympic Marathon, in the dust is a tribute to his ability as one of the foremost distance runners of the world.

The news that Fitzgerald, the Calgary man, finished fourth in this, his first Marathon, was welcomed. Fitzgerald deserves great credit for finding a place in the money in a race that went the pace Sunday's race went.

The references to Rowan's alleged interference with Johnny Hayes will be taken with a grain of salt, pending more details.

St. Yves' Staying Power.

St. Yves beat Marsh by four laps and Hayes by eleven laps. Marsh's time was 2 hours 33 minutes 4 3-5 seconds and Hayes completed the course in 2 hours 44 minutes 5 1-5 seconds.

Fitzgerald Game.

Fitzgerald gamely finished in fourth place, collapsing at the finish line. He won fourth prize. It was his first Marathon, but last night he suffered no ill effects from his hard grind. Marsh, it is said, ran a lap too many at the finish, and Rowan is said to have run a couple too many.

St. Yves wins the $500 bonus put up by the backers of the race, Mr. Robert Guggenheim, in addition to first prize of $200 for making a new track record for the Marathon distance. The second prize, $100, is awarded to Marsh, the third prize of $50 to Hayes and the fourth prize of $25 to Fitzgerald.

HIGH HONORS FOR DR. COOK

Freedom of City of New York Conferred by Board of Aldermen

Medal Presented BY ARCTIC CLUB

Explorer Declares That Barrill's Statements Are Falsehoods

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Dr. Frederick A. Cook, of Brooklyn, came back to New York today as calm and as smiling as ever, received the freedom of the city, as conferred by the board of aldermen, branded as a lie the affidavit of Edward N. Barrill, the guide, who says he did not attain the summit of Mount McKinley, and finally fired the shot which started a 24-hour automobile race at Brighton Beach.

The conferring of the freedom of the city upon the explorer was a formal affair, conducted jointly by the board of aldermen and the Arctic Club of America, in which the club presented to him a gold medal in recognition of his discovery of the north pole, which the aldermen took occasion to recognize him officially for the first time since his arrival on the home shores.

Before the honor was bestowed, President McGowan, of the board, announced that "I deem it fair to Dr. Cook to say that he wanted this action by the board of aldermen postponed until after all his proof had been presented, but we decided that it was the sentiment of the board that it has belief in Dr. Cook, and that New York believes in him."

In his speech Dr. Cook said in part: "This is the proudest moment of my life, and to feel that you have confidence in me in the face of unfounded statements and against the false affidavits published during the last few days creates a feeling of pride in me that my countrymen believe my word, and will substantiate every claim I have made with every proof within the power of man."

Barrill came here quietly two days ago and informed General Thomas H. Hubbard, president of the Peary Arctic club, that everything in the affidavit was true, and after talking to the members of the Explorers' club departed with his wife, and returned to Westport. While in the city Barrill talked with General G. M. Ashton of Tacoma, who obtained the affidavits from Fred Printz, a packer on the Mount McKinley expedition, Samuel Beecher, the cook, and Walter Miller, the photographer, all members of the Cook party.

General Ashton, speaking of the manner in which the affidavits were taken, said: "I received word from General Hubbard to ascertain the exact truth concerning Dr. Cook's climb of Mount McKinley, and had not the remotest idea what side I was on or would be on."

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 15.—The affidavit of Edward E. Barrill saying that Dr. Frederick A. Cook did not reach the summit of Mount McKinley, and what is considered here as a vague reply to the affidavit by Dr. Cook, are believed to have weakened somewhat the American explorer's position that he ascended the mountain to its apex.

CARRUTHERS FOUND GUILTY

Result of Libel Trial Based on Sir Frederick Borden's Complaint

Defendant Gets LIGHT SENTENCE

Minister in Querulous Mood Insults Counsel for Defendant

KENTVILLE, N. S., Oct. 15.—After being out four hours and a half, the jury in the case of the King vs. Carruthers returned a verdict of guilty of libel on every count against Carruthers for distributing the famous "Eyespener," which published Mrs. Allison's letters charging Sir Frederick Borden with enticing a girl away from home for immoral purposes and with separating Mrs. McParland from her husband.

The legal fight in this case was between Carruthers, Messrs. Ritchie and Roscoe, who were both advocates for their clients, and it was their pertinacity which made the trial interesting. Judge Drysdale perpetuated the best traditions of the bench in a dignified manner.

The defendant Carruthers is defeated, but not beaten. He has lost none of his nerve, and he reserves the announcement of the verdict as unconcerned as if it were an invitation to have a cigar.

SHUTS PORTS OF NICARAGUA

Decree Issued by President Zelaya Will Block Mails and Cargoes

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—Late advices received today at the State Department show that martial law has been declared in Managua, the capital of Nicaragua, and that President Zelaya has decreed the Atlantic coast ports closed as ports of entry.

It is reported that the entire east coast of Nicaragua is in the possession of the revolutionists, and that the revolt has extended to the western part of the country. The closing of these Nicaraguan ports is proving an embarrassment to the steamship lines which have received goods for shipment there, and the State Department has also asked what course should be pursued with respect to these shipments, and also with respect to mails destined to eastern ports as well as to interior points.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—President Zelaya, of Nicaragua, has called the attention of the press concerning the extent of the revolution in that republic as follows: "Managua, Nicaragua, Oct. 15.—General Estrada, governor of the Department of Zelaya, revolted, proclaiming himself President. The revolutionists have in their possession Bluefields, Rama, Cape Gracias and San Juan Del Morote. (Signed) Zelaya."

Nearing Cape Horn

We were homeward bound from San Francisco to "the Channel for orders" in a fine eighteen-hundred-ton ship. We had passed through "the Golden Gates" forty-eight days before, and were now nearing "the Horn," as Cape Horn is known amongst sailormen. We had been running for nearly thirty-six hours before a strong northwest gale which was rapidly getting worse, and the vessel, under the three lower topsails, upper main-topsail, and foresail, was ploughing along at a good twelve knots an hour. It was nearing four bells in the first dog watch, which means that in shore time it was nearly six o'clock in the afternoon, and the dusk was gathering fast. I was standing "my trick" at the lee wheel, while Old Dave, the finest helmsman in the ship, was at the weather side. Behind us stood the mate closely watching our every move of the wheel, for on our efforts depended the safety of the ship, which was labouring heavily and taking a great deal of water aboard. In spite of the bitter cold the sweat was oozing from every pore in my body, for she was steering badly, and it was practically impossible to keep her steady on her course for any length of time, and as often as not we were climbing round the wheel like monkeys, while the mate, with an anxious eye on the following seas, jerked out an occasional "Meet her boys, meet her," or, springing forward, helped us to grind the wheel up or down.

The seas were terrific, real Cape Horn rollers, which came swinging up out of the waste astern, towering above us until it seemed certain we should be pooped; but our stout ship rose gallantly each time, and their great roaring crests would burst along her sides in a cauldron of foaming water, and, falling in aboard at the break of the poop, would sweep along the deck, carrying all before them, until with a final clang from the waterports they disappeared overboard, what time some hapless individual who had been caught by the sea would crawl, battered and half drowned, from the scuppers, thankful if he escaped with nothing worse than a few bruises and the ducking which is inevitable, in spite of oilskins and seaboots.

Old Dave was getting anxious, as I could gather from his manner, and when the mate suddenly left us and descended the companion, he broke out:

"He's gone to call the old man," he said, referring to the captain, who, whatever his age, is always known by that title aboard ship. "And it's not before it's time. If he don't heave her to soon he'll never do it. It'll be a bad enough job as it is."

Hardly had he spoken when the captain himself appeared up the companion, followed by the mate, who turned to close the slide. He took two or three steps towards us and then stopped as if transfixed, staring past us out at the wild seas astern.

"My God!" I heard him say under his breath, and then again, quietly, "My God!" For two or three seconds he stood, and then suddenly sprang into life and sent his great voice bellowing out into the thunder of the gale.

"Hang on, men," he shouted. "Hang on for your lives!"

Startled, I turned my head and saw a sight to daunt the stoutest heart. A tremendous sea was approaching us, tall and grim and steep and terrible. I can liken it to nothing so much as a great grey moving hill which, fringed with a foaming crest, came steadily after us with a relentlessness that was appalling. On it came. The sea preceding it caught us, and we poised giddily for a moment on its crest and then dropped slowly back into the trough, while the monster towered higher and higher above us.

Would she never rise to it? I gave myself up for lost as I tore my eyes from the awful scene astern, and as I clung mechanically to the spokes of the wheel a peculiar shivering seemed to run up and down my spine while I waited for what I fully expected to be the end and which seemed so long in coming. At last I felt the vessel begin to rise. Slowly at first and then more quickly, while the wet decks sloped even more sharply from me, until I was looking down into a great valley of water. Up and up we went, so that for a moment I had hopes that we were going to surmount the sea in safety, but it was only for a moment, for presently I could feel the lifting movement cease, and we hung in horrible suspense for what to me seemed an eternity, though it could not have been more than a few seconds. Then with a roar like a thousand cataracts the sea pooped us.

The men who saw it from the safety of the rigging told me afterwards that the sea did not break aboard, but simply surged over the stern, a solid wall of water that swept along the whole length of the ship. Buried beneath it, her hull disappeared entirely from their view as they clung to the rigging above, and many of them despaired of ever seeing her rise again.

For myself, when the wave fell on board I was overwhelmed. The wheel to which I held was torn from my grasp as though I had no more strength than a child, and I was carried away by the flood, in which I struggled helplessly, until I felt myself dashed against something rigid, and clutching it desperately, I waited, choking with salt water and almost bursting with holding my breath. At length my head came out, and gulping down great draughts of heaven-sent air, I was able to look round as the water drained off.

It was a fearful sight. The bulwarks were burst and gaping outwards, while the two after boats with the bridge—the platform, stanchions, and binnacle—had disappeared. The two forward boats were badly stove in, and the galley was completely gutted, the poor "doctor," as the cook is called, being badly scalded and half drowned. Save for myself, the poop was tenantless. The wheel, Old Dave, the captain, and the mate were nowhere to be seen; in fact, Old Dave and the wheel were never seen again; while the captain and the mate were picked up forward of the mainmast, where the sea had carried them. Both were unconscious, the captain having three broken ribs and the mate a terrible blow on the head which had almost torn away his ear. I had been saved from sharing Old Dave's fate by being washed against the miz-

The weather topsail sheets and maintopsail halyards were let go, and the men forward managed to save the foresail by hauling it up in the gear, while, as the ship gradually freed herself from the water, we braced the after yards up, leaving the fore yards square, and, lashing the tiller hard down, got the mizen staysail set.

We goosewinged the main and fore topsails, but the mizen topsail was split to ribbons, and the "clerk of the weather," apparently satisfied with the damage he had caused, hauled the wind two or three points to the westward, so that the vessel, bowing the sea, made better weather of it.

Even so our troubles were by no means over, for we now found that while broached to planted and the bed left very smooth and even. The flowers of both tulips and hyacinths embrace a good range of color and color designs can be made when planting. Suggestions for the same may be found in almost any bulb catalogue. It is important in planting tulips to plant the early-flowering kinds together and the late-flowering kinds by themselves, and not in the same bed. When a bed of tulips is in bloom, every flower should be open at the same time; also with both hyacinths and tulips, the flowers should all be of an even height, to secure which the bulbs must be as they never give the same satisfaction a second season. If one has not the heart to do this, and the beds are wanted for the summer bedding plants, the bulbs should be carefully lifted, the flower stalks cut off, and the bulbs planted again closely in shallow trenches in some shaded, secluded place where they may finish ripening their foliage and may rest until fall. They may then be lifted and planted in irregular shaped colonies in the mixed flower border, where they should remain permanently. Daffodils, crocuses and other bulbs do better if they can remain in the beds when once planted, but if the beds are wanted for summer flowering plants the bulbs may be treated the same as tulips and hyacinths.

Almost all bulb catalogues designate the kinds most suitable for bedding, together with the colors, single or double, early or late-flowering, and quotations per dozen, per hundred, and per thousand, and while the best prices will, of course, secure the best quality of bulbs, which will produce rather the largest flowers, yet I do not ever remember to have seen a poor variety of any of the fall bulbs.

FORCING BULBS

Any good forcing bulb can be grown successfully in cocoanut fibre. The Paper White and Van Slon narcissus, the Roman hyacinth and many kinds of tulips will always do well. For table decorations I flower the bulbs in jardinières; common earth-stained flower-pots do not look well on the dinner table. But I would not recommend raising all the winter bulbous roots in cocoanut fibre. It would be too expensive to buy the fibre and jardinières.

Cocoanut fibre may be had in its natural state as it is stripped from the cocoanut, or it may be had ground. In either case, put it into a pail or other dish and thoroughly wet it. If it has been ground, press the surplus water out with the hands before putting it about the bulbs in the jardinière. If the fibre comes in its natural state, it must be torn apart before using. Use a jardinière of a convenient size which has been glazed inside. In the bottom put enough charcoal or broken pottery to form an inch of drainage, cover it with the cocoanut fibre, place the bulbs on the fibre and finish filling the jardinière with fibre. See that the fibre is pressed gently around and between the bulbs. The bulbs should not be covered more than two inches deep, so if the jardinière be a deep one, enough material must be placed at the bottom to raise the bulbs up to the right position.

After potting set the jardinières away in a cool place, but it is not necessary that they be kept in the dark, a subdued light is sufficient. When the growth appears above the fibre, bring the jardinière into the light and warmth for forcing.

For the best results a comparatively low temperature must be maintained, 65 degrees in the day time is high enough, and it may be allowed to drop to 45 degrees or 50 degrees at night. After the flowers begin to open, the plants may be brought into the living-room; but if you do not want the buds to blight, they must not be kept in a warm room.

Never allow the fibre to become dry, neither should there be a surplus of water in the jardinière. Turn the jardinière on the side for a minute or two each day, after watering, to allow the surplus water to run out.—Albert J. Perry.

OUTDOOR-INDOOR BULBS

Hyacinths, tulips, narcissi and crocus will make a gorgeous display in April and May. Plant them in October, in rich, sandy loam, a few inches apart, and six to three inches deep, according to size, and cover the ground with two or three inches of old manure, which should be taken off in the spring.

For indoor forcing, plant the bulbs three or four in a pot of a size to hold them. Put a little old manure in the bottom of the pot and make the soil about equal parts of leaf mold, sand and garden soil. Put the bulbs just below the surface and press the soil only slightly. Water them and set them in a dark, cool cellar or place them on a bed of coal ashes outdoors and cover with a six-inch layer of the ashes. In two months or less they will form good roots. Bring them to the light gradually. When the foliage turns green put them in the sunlight. Water well when they begin to bloom.

COMFORTING

It is claimed by the many admirers of a rising author that his tongue is as ready and clever as his pen.

During a conversation with a lady of uncertain age, she said, with a mock sigh:—"But you are young, while I can already count my gray hairs."

"But, dear lady," and the young man let his well-known genial smile play over his features, "surely you know that as long as gray hairs can be counted, they do not count!"

JUST IN TIME

A German shoemaker left the gas turned on in his shop one night, and upon arriving in the morning struck a match to light it. There was a terrific explosion, and the shoemaker was blown out through the door almost to the middle of the street.

A passerby rushed to his assistance, and after helping him to get up inquired if he was injured.

The little German gazed at his place of business, which was now burning quite briskly, and said—

"No, I ain't hurt. But I got out shust in time. Eh?"

zen rigging, and some idea of the depth of water on the poop may be gained from the fact that I found myself doubled up round the middle shroud of the rigging, five ratlines above the sheerpole, and at that height I had been submerged.

We were in a terrible plight, for, robbed of her helmsman and all means of steering her, the ship broached to, and lay wallowing in the trough of the sea almost on her beam ends and swept by every wave. We of the crew who were left on deck stood staring helplessly at one another, for, as the carpenter in telling the yarn afterwards expressed it, "We all thought our birthdays was come." But we did not stand idle long. The second mate, who at the time the sea pooped us was below having a hurried meal, came rushing up on deck, and, taking in the situation in one hasty glance around, started roaring orders right and left, and, spurred on by his example, we soon gathered our scattered wits and turned to with a will.

our cargo had shifted and the ship had a heavy list to starboard, so all hands who could be spared from the deck were sent below into the hold, where, stripped to the waist, we strained and sweated and cursed, working fiercely with the anger of despair and looking less like men than demons in the dim light of the guttering lamps, while the crash of the seas on the deck above sounded like a never-ending peal of thunder in our ears.

But there is an end to all things, and, some forty-eight hours later, haggard and worn, yet with the light of battle still burning, though maybe but faintly, in our eyes, we found ourselves making sail as the gale gradually took off and lost its strength and the seas grew less dangerous, while, far away, through a rent in the ragged curtain of grey mist which hung on our port quarter, a gaunt headland stood out clear against the evening sky.

Beds of jonquils and daffodils are also very effective, and the bulbs require to be planted the same distance apart and the same depth as hyacinths. Crocuses, scillas and other small bulbs are more suitable for narrow borders than formal flower beds. They should be planted three inches apart.

Although fall bulbs are quite hardy, yet sometimes during the winter we have sudden thaws sufficient to excite the bulbs to grow. To prevent this, when planted in beds it is better to give them a light covering of partially decayed leaves or light mulch about two inches deep, but it should not be put on till after the ground is frozen hard, for if placed on before this mice will often nest under it and take their meals out of the bulbs. When planted in wild or semi-wild situations the natural covering of leaves and grass is sufficient.

Many people discard their tulips and hyacinths after the season of flowering is past,
