Dear Sir Arthur,

We had an unpleasant experience yesterday at our house when a couple of detectives, without consulting anybody at our house, took our boy of eleven away in a car. The general belief around the house was that they had been kidnapped. For what they did the Westmount Police have since apologized.

Apparently some boys had done some damage up at a shack on the top of the mountain owned by McGill University. The Detective Sergeant said that my boy told him everything that happened while he was there, and he is satisfied that all he did was to break a small window about 14 in. by 20 in., for which, of course, I wish to pay.

It seems there is trouble every winter. My youngsters told me they thought it was an old abandoned shack. Do you not think that in future it might be well to have a warning notice put on the shack that it is the property of McGill University and that trespassers will be prosecuted? Perhaps you would not mind giving instructions to the caretaker, one Duggan, to have the window pane replaced and I will settle the account.

The detectives are still trying to trace the other boys and my youngster is going up to help them this afternoon, although he does not know who did the damage. Apparently, however, they carved their initials on the building, so it may be possible to trace them. I'll tell you more about the matter when I see you to-day.

Yours sincerely,

Jackson Dada

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRINCIPAL RE MR. JACKSON DODDS

Mr. MacFarlane has visited the Westmount Mountain property in company with Duggan, the occupant of the house thereon.

I have authorized MacFarlane to supply Duggan with the glass necessary to replace that broken. MacFarlane informs me that in addition to the broken windows a good part of the balcony has been destroyed. Duggan will repair that and also, at his own expense, paint the house this summer.

MacFarlane has instructed Duggan to pull down two sheds which are in a very dilapidated condition and are falling apart.

Signs will be erected at four places on the boundary of the property, stating that this belongs to the University and that trespassers will be prosecuted.

Dear General Currie:

My daughter (Eleanor Croysdale Doherty) is now attending Radcliffe College (Harvard University), having been awarded a Bartol Fellowship there. She is taking up Ph.D. work in Comparative Literature and her Professors advise her to teach for a year or two to gain experience. Would there be an opening at McGill next September?

She is qualified to teach English, French and German. On graduation at Western in Honour Moderns she was awarded the Gold Medal in French; then she spent a year at Toronto University where she obtained her M.A. degree in English.

President Fox and Dean Neville of the University of Western Ontario, and Principal Wallace of Toronto University have very kindly given their names as references.

Believe me to be,

Yours very truly,

WJD/HTP.

My dear Archdeacon,

I have just received your letter of the 11th instant addressed to the Principal, and now wish to reply that I doubt if there is at present any position in McGill which would meet your daughter's requirements. All appointments to the French Department are made from candidates who speak French natively or are natively bi-lingual. We have not, in recent years, appointed any person to a position in this Department who has acquired this language late in life and in an English-speaking community.

There are a number of assistantships open every autumn in the Department of English, but these are intended for part time students who are taking graduate work for an advanced degree and the salaries are, therefore, very small, ranging from $350 to $800 per annum. I imagine that your daughter would expect a better position than any of these, but if she should care to consider one of them I should be pleased to hear from you again at some later date.

Yours very truly,
