NEWCASTLE'S RAPID STRIDES ELICIT FAVORABLE COMMENT.

Town Has Advantages Possessed By Like Towns.

NOW SPARKLES IN ITS UP-TO-DATENESS.

Many Improvements Made Here During The Past Year or Two.

While other towns are boasting of their progress it might be well to point out some of the strides made by Newcastle during the past year or two. There is probably not a town of a like size in Canada which can boast of the modern advantages which Newcastle possesses. The town has become almost as thoroughly modernized as pretentious cities and sparkles in its up-to-dateness.

To begin with Newcastle has water and sewerage and electric light systems equal to any in the country and superior to the majority. Its abundant flow of excellent water and its well lighted streets, stores and dwellings elicit very favorable comment from all visitors. During the past season, Newcastle's energetic Council undertook the work of laying permanent sidewalks. Granolithic was the material selected and the principal business street of the town is now able to boast of a sidewalk equal to any in the country. The work will likely be resumed next season and in time all the principal streets of the town will be able to boast of excellent walks. Besides one or two of the principal roadways have been macadamized and put in excellent shape for driving purposes.

Several months ago a substantial Opera House was completed by an energetic lodge of Orangemen. The building and its equipment have since been pronounced by visiting theatrical men as superior to any in the Lower Provinces outside of St. John and Halifax. The stage is large and well equipped with excellent scenery and mechanical appliances which go to make an attractive effect.

There is now nearing completion a hotel building which is generally regarded as superior to any in the province outside of St. John. It is a four story structure and many of its rooms contain private bath while all are fitted with telephones. This fine institution will probably have an auspicious

LOGGIE'S VICTORY SURPRISED MANY

Liberals In This County Score Once More After Years of Defeat.

RAILWAY TRANSFER DID IT

Mr. Robinson: Not Discouraged—Mr. Crockett's Victory In York.

For the first time in a dozen years the liberal-conservative party of the County of Northumberland has faced defeat. Mr. James Robinson, the candidate of that party, the hero of three successful campaigns is compelled to record one unsuccessful one. He was defeated here on Thursday last by the liberal candidate, Mr. W. S. Loggie, whose majority was 284.

It was a fair fight and the most powerful influences won. Chatham, the home town of Mr. Loggie, gave him a substantial majority although one not as great as his supporters expected. The down river parishes also naturally gave Mr. Loggie a majority.

The chief canvass used against Mr. Robinson was the purchase by the government of the Canada Eastern Railway and the employment of men on that road for a few years before election. Although Mr. Robinson was largely instrumental in consummating the deal his efforts were not recognized and the vote of Nelson, Blackville, Ludlow and Blenheim—the principal parishes along the line of the Canada Eastern—seemed to ignore the efforts of Mr. Robinson and to give the credit of the transfer entirely to the government.

Mr. Robinson has been defeated after waging a gallant fight on behalf of the Conservative interests for the past ten years and he will doubtless be heard from when another election comes around. In the meantime it is up to Mr. Loggie to do something.

Perhaps one of the greatest surprises of the campaign was the victory of Mr. Crockett in York. Mr. Crockett had every possible influence that could possibly be brought to bear to bring about his defeat, notwithstanding he secured a substantial majority over the hitherto invincible Mr. Gibson.

The Family Signature of

He assured the electors of the county that he could not adequately express his feelings to them for the magnificent work done for him in this county and for the handsome way that they stood by him.

He was very pleased to state that the campaign just ended was a clean one and that the candidates and their supporters acted in a very gentlemanly way and he had much pleasure to bear tribute to the fair fight put up by his opponent. Mr. Robinson had been a successful candidate for many elections and it was only natural that he should fail some time.

He assured all that he would do his best to merit the confidence placed in him. He was indeed glad that the grand old county had been redeemed from the Conservatives to the government though it was to the best interests of the Miramichi.

He did not think it necessary to make a political speech as the issues were well threshed out during the election campaign. He again thanked the electors and trusted that he would merit a continuance of that confidence placed in him.—Applause.

Mr. Robinson then took the platform. He thanked all his friends for the noble manner in which they had worked for him and although he had been defeated he would take his defeat as a man. During his political life he had been very successful in the seven campaigns in which he had run this was his first defeat, but he took it kindly and felt sure it was better so as now he would have time to devote to his private business.

He trusted that Mr. Loggie would be able to carry out the policy laid down by him on Nomination Day. No doubt the Canada (Continued on page 8) that we lead in this present generation, wear out many a heart in comparatively short time. Hence that we use for racing purposes we treat with care and concern, machinery and other mechanical devices that we use continually we oil and keep in good condition, but the heart that must pump a whole lifetime, we neglect, overwork and misuse and only give it thought when it becomes weak and irregular and can no longer properly distribute our blood to all parts of our body. If you are living a fast life—drinking or working hard, you must give your heart some nutrient so that it can stand the strain.

DR. AGNEW'S HEART CURE is the best heart food. It will make your heart strong and healthy. It builds up the walls and tissues of the heart and enables it to distribute pure, clear blood to all parts of the body.

Mrs. J. Calcott, Strathroy, Ont. says "I have used Dr. Agnew's Heart Cure with the best possible results. Before I secured it I suffered greatly with chronic heart disease and from nervousness and sleeplessness which it had induced. This remedy gave relief in 3 minutes and has brought back my usual health."

Dr. Agnew's Ointment and Liver Pills will relieve any case of piles in two or three nights.

Laurier is Sustained By a Majority of 75.

It is generally thought that Laurier will have a majority of about 75 in the next House. On Thursday the Opposition was signally defeated, its leader R. L. Borden going down with his comrades. Every constituency in Nova Scotia returned a liberal. The following are nearly all the returns:—

H.B.K. BRAND BIG SHIRT

Made big enough for a big man to work in with comfort. Has more material in it than any other brand of shirt in Canada. Made on the H.B.K. scale it requires 30 1/2 to 42 yards per dozen, whereas common shirts have only 32 to 33 yards.

That's the reason why the H.B.K. "Big" Shirt never chafes the armpits, is never tight at the neck or wristbands, is always loose, full and comfortable and wears well.

Each shirt bears a tiny book that tells the whole history of the "Big" Shirt, and also contains a notarial declaration that the H.B.K. "Big" Shirt contains 39 1/2 to 42 yards of material per dozen.

Sold at all dealers but only with this brand:—

and pain had left him dull, except when he thought of returning to Plattville; then he felt physical horror. The place did not need him, nor he the place. Fiske had found a young relative to run the Herald, who signed his typewritten business letters "H. Fiske" in a strapping hand that suggested six feet of muscle spattering ink on his shirt sleeves.

John wondered idly where old Fiske had raked up a relative, and he thought it probable that H. Fiske was a Yankee cousin of the old man, but he did not care much for that or for anything except to keep away from Carlow for the rest of his life, since he was to live. And there was no longer need to go there. He was glad to know that H. Fiske had written him before the oil bubbled in Eph's wells that to buy stock in Mr. Watts' company might be profitable, especially as the stock was then so low that it was almost imperceptible, and Harkless had a little money he had saved. He let Meredith arrange it for him, and a few days later the stock landed cloudward.

However, his modest riches interested him as little as did everything else. He left his bed less and less, took no more drives, and his lethargy deepened.

The only thing in which he showed interest was the congressional campaign of the district. It was far advanced before the Herald spoke of it at all, and Harkless saw that McCune had lifted his head.

One day Tom came in and found him writing on a pad on his knee.

Rosen, Sept. 2. —
Dear Mr. Fiske:—Yours of the 1st is at hand. I enclose all arrangements you have made. I thank you very much for your letter. You are the editor of the Herald and have the sole responsibility for everything, including policy, until after proper warning, I relieve you in person. If that ever happens, let me know. I do not fear that you will make any mistakes. You have done very much for me in all matters that I could have done myself.

At present I have only one suggestion: I believe that your editorials concerning Harkless' nomination are something lukewarm. It is very important that he be nominated, not so much on account of assuring his return to Washington (for he is no Madison, I fear), but the fellow McCune must be beaten, and we have to send him to the penitentiary on an old issue to do it. The man is corrupt to the bone. He has been bought and sold, and I am glad the people of it are in your hands, as you tell me you found them, as directed, in my desk. The papers you hold drove him out of politics once by the mere threat of publication. You should have printed them last week, as I suggested. Do so at once, the time is short. The Herald is a little paper, not so little nowadays, after all, thanks to you, but it is on honor, and it isn't afraid of Rod McCune and his friends. Please let me see as hearty a word as you can give the Harkless cause. You can write with courage. Please let me have come in this matter. I am, very truly yours,

JOHN HARKLESS.

When the letter was concluded, he handed it to Meredith. "Please address it, Tom, to a special on it and send it, Tom. It should go at once, so as to reach him tonight."

"H. Fiske?"

"Yes—H. Fiske."

"I believe it does you good to write about," said the other as he bent over him. "You look much cheeryer than you have for several days."

"It's that Harkless. This young Fiske is rather queer about it. I felt stirred up as I went along. But even before the sentence was finished the favor of age and under weariness returned, and the dark lids closed over his eyes. They opened again slowly, and he took the other's hand and looked up at him mournfully, but as it were, his soul shone forth in dumb and eloquent thanks.

"I'm giving you a jolly summer, Tom," he said, with a quivering effort to smile. "Don't you think I am? I don't. I don't know what I should have done."

"You old Indian!" said Meredith tenderly.

Three days later Tom was rejoiced by symptoms of intoxication in his patient.

A telegram came for Harkless, and Meredith, bringing it into the sick room, was surprised to find the occupant sitting straight up on his couch without the prop of pillows. He was reading the day's copy of the Herald, and his face was flushed and his brow stern.

"What's the matter, boy?" said the other in a strange voice, worse, perhaps. It's this young Fiske. I can't think what's come over the fellow. He thought he was a treasure beyond dreams, and he's turning out bad. I'll swear it looks like they'd been well, I won't say that yet, but he hasn't printed that McCune business I told you of, and he's had two days. There is less than a week before the convention, and—" He broke off, seeing the yellow envelope in Meredith's hand. "Is that a telegram for me?" His companion gave it to him. He tore it open and read the contents. They were brief and unhappy.

"Can't you do something? Can't you come down? It begins to look the other way."

"Tom, give me that pad and pencil," said the sick man. He rapidly dashed off a note to H. Fiske.

Sept. 5. —
Dear Sir:—You have not acknowledged my letter of the 21st, September by a note (which should have reached me the following morning) or by the alteration in the tone of my columns which I requested, or by the publication of the McCune papers which I directed. In this I hold you grossly at fault. If you have a conscientious reason for refusing to carry out my request it should have been communicated to me at once, as should the fact if such be the case, that you are a personal or impersonal, if you like, friend of Mr. Rodney McCune. Whatever the motive which prompts your silence, it is a matter of fact that I should have been informed of it. This is a matter vital to the interests of our community, and you have hitherto shown yourself as utterly incapable of accepting my slightest suggestion for me to control this future, as negligence.

You will receive this letter by 7 o'clock evening by special delivery. You will print the facts concerning McCune in the morning morning's issue.

I am well aware of the obligation under which your extreme efficiency as your thoughtfulness in many matters have placed me. It is to you I owe my unearned profits from the transaction in all, and it is to you I owe the Herald's extraordinary present circulation, growth of power and influence. That power is mine, and it is yours, and is an absolute responsibility which shall not be misapplied.

"Are you sorry for McCune?" I warn him long ago that the papers you hold would be published if he ever tried to return to political life, and he is deliberately turning on my kindness, and I am sorry for him. Let him rely upon it—I am not so weak as he thinks. I am sorry for him, but I am not sorry for the Herald is not.

You need not reply by letter. Tomorrow, if you wish, send me a copy of the Herald, and I will withhold my judgment."

JOHN HARKLESS.

Tomorrow's issue—that fateful print on which depended John Harkless' opinion of H. Fiske's integrity—contained an editorial addressed to the delegates of the convention, warning them to act for the vital interest of the community and declaring that the opportunity to be given them in the present convention was a rare one, a singular piece of good fortune, and that they were to have a chance to vote for a man who had won the love and respect of every person in the district, one who had suffered for his championship of righteousness, one whom every honest man who had been the inspiration of a new era, one whose life had been hopefulness, whose hand had reached out to every struggler and unfortunate, one who had not and faced danger for the sake of others; one who lived under a threat for years, and who had been almost overcome in the fulfillment of that threat, but who would live to see the sun shine on his triumph, the tribute the convention would bring him as a gift from a community that loved him. His name needed not to be told. It was on every lip that morning and in every heart.

Tom was eagerly watching his companion as he read. Harkless felt back on the pillows with a drawn face, and a moment he laid his thin hand on his eyes in a gesture of intense pain.

"What is it?" Meredith said quickly, "give me the pad, please?"

"What is it, boy?"

"The other's teeth snapped together. 'What is it?' he cried. 'What is it?' It's treachery, and the worst I ever knew. Not a word of the accusation I founded—lying praises instead. Read that editorial—there, there!" He struck the page with the back of his hand and threw the paper to Meredith. "Read that miserable lie! 'One who has won the love and respect of every person in the district!' 'One who has suffered for his championship of righteousness!' Righteousness! Save the mark!"

"What does it mean?"

"Mean! It means McCune, Rod McCune, who has lived under a threat for years—my threat. I swore I would shoot him out of Indiana if he ever turned his head again, and he knew I could. 'Almost overcome in the fulfillment of that threat'—almost! It's a snaky scheme, and I see it now. This man came to Plattville and went on the Herald for nothing in the world, but this H. Fiske's hand all along. He doesn't name him even now, the coward! The trick lies between McCune and young Fiske—the old man is innocent. Give me the pad. Not almost overcome. There are three good days to work in, and if Rod McCune sees congress it will be in his next incarnation."

He rapidly scribbled a few lines on the pad and threw the sheets to Meredith. "Get those telegrams to the Western Union office in a rush, please. Read them first."

With wide eyes Tom read them. One was to Warren Smith.

Take possession of the Herald. This is your authority. Publish McCune's papers, as labeled which H. Fiske will hand you. Tell McCune. JOHN HARKLESS.

The second was addressed to H. Fiske.

You are relieved from the care of editorship. You will turn over the management of the Herald to Warren Smith. If you do not or if you desert them, you cannot hide where I shall not find you. JOHN HARKLESS.

CHAPTER XIII.

VERY early in the morning a messenger boy stumbled up the front steps of Meredith's house and handed the colored servant four yellow envelopes, night messages. The man carried them upstairs, left three with his master's guests, then knocked on Meredith's door till a response assured him that the occupant was awake and slid the fourth envelope under the door. Meredith lay quite without motion for several minutes, deeply watching the yellow rhomboid on the crevice. It was a hateful looking thing to mix itself with a pleasant dream and insist on being read, but after a while he climbed groggily out of bed and perused the message with heavy eyes, still half asleep. He read it twice before it penetrated.

Suppose all newspapers today, convention meets at 11. If we succeed, a delegation will come to Rosen this afternoon. They will come.

HELEN.

Tom rubbed his sticky eyelids and shook his head violently in a Spartan effort to rouse himself, but what more effectively performed the task for him were certain sounds that issued from Harkless' room across the hall. For some minutes Meredith had been dully conscious of a rustle and stir in the invalid's chamber, and he began to realize that he were tossing upon a bed would account for a noise that reached him across a wide hall and through the closed doors of thick wainscot. Suddenly he heard a quick, heavy tread, slow, in Harkless' room, and a resounding bang as some heavy object struck the floor. The door was not to come till evening. The servant had gone downstairs. Who in the sick man's room were shoes? He rushed across the hall in his pajamas and threw open the unlocked door.

The bed was disarranged and vacant. Harkless, fully dressed, was standing in the middle of the floor, hurling garments at a small trunk. The horrified Meredith stood for a second, bleached and speechless; then he rushed upon his friend and seized him with both hands.

"Mad, by heaven! Mad!"

"Let go of me, Tom!"

"Lunatic! Lunatic!"

"Don't stop me one instant!"

Meredith tried to force him toward the bed. "No; get back to bed. You're delirious, boy!"

"Delirious nothing! I'm a well man."

"Go to bed! Go to bed!"

Harkless sent him out of the way with one arm. "To bed!" he cried. "I'm going to Plattville!"

Meredith wrung his hands. "The doctor?"

"Doctor be hanged!"

"What in the name of all that's terrible is the matter, John?"

His companion sling a light overcoat, unfolded, on the overflowing, misshapen bundle of clothes that lay in the trunk, then he jumped on the lid with both feet and kicked the hump into the lock, while a very elegantly languid cut and shirt sleeve dangled out from under the fastened lid. "I haven't a second to talk, Tom; I have eight minutes to catch the express. It's more than a mile to the station, and the train leaves here at 10:02. I get there at 10:17. Telephone a cab for me, please, or tell me the number. I don't want to stop to hunt it up."

Meredith looked him in the eyes. In the light. His cheeks were reddened with an angry, healthy glow, and his teeth were clinched till the line of his jaw stood out like that of an embattled athlete. His brow was dark, his chest was thrown out, and he took deep, quick breaths. His shoulders were squared, and in spite of his thinness they looked massy. Lethargy or malady, or both—whatever his ailment—it was gone. He was six feet of hot wrath and cold resolution, and he was Tom said, "You are going?"

"Yes," he answered quietly, "I am going."

"Then I will go with you."

"Thank you, Tom," said Harkless simply.

Meredith ran into his room, pressed an electric button and began to dive into his clothes with a panting rapidity, astonishedly foreign to his dress.

The colored man appeared in the doorway. "The cart, Jim!" shouted his master.

"We want it like lightning. Tell the cook to give Mr. Harkless his breakfast in a hurry. Set a cup of coffee on the table by the front door for me. Run! We've got to catch a train. That will be quicker than any cab," he explained to Harkless. "We'll break the ordinance against fast driving getting down there."

Ten minutes later the cart swept away from the house at a gait that pained the respectable neighborhood. The big horse plunged through the air, his ears laid flat toward his tail. The cart careened sickeningly, and the face of the servant clutching at the rail in the rear was smeared with pallor as they plumed around curves on one wheel. To him it seemed they skirted the corners and down simultaneously, and the speed of their going made a strong wind in their faces.

Harkless leaned forward. "Can you

One Million Dollars

Have Been Spent to Give Liquezone Free to the Sick.

When we purchased the rights to Liquezone, we decided to give it free to every sick person who asked for it. We published the offer in every newspaper in America. In one year it cost us one million dollars to answer the requests. And that is all we ask for a disease germ that it cannot kill. The reason is that germs are vegetable, and Liquezone—like an excess of oxygen—is deadly to vegetable matter.

There lies the great value of Liquezone. It is the only way known to kill germs in the body without killing the tissues, too. Any drug that kills germs is a poison, and it cannot be taken internally. Medicine is almost helpless in any germ disease. It is this fact that gives Liquezone its worth to humanity. And that worth is so great that, after testing the product for two years, through physicians and hospitals, we paid $100,000 for the American rights.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help Nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquezone attacks the germs, wherever they are. And when the germs which cause a disease are destroyed, the disease must end, and forever. That is inevitable.

Mills Inside Germs.

Liquezone is not made by compounding drugs, nor is there alcohol in it. Its virtues are derived solely from gas—largely oxygen gas—by a process requiring thousands of apparatuses and 11 months of time. For more than 20 years, the chemical analysis of Liquezone and chemical reagents have shown that it does what it is made to do. It is a most good and useful tool—the most helpful thing in the world to you. Its effects are extraordinary, purifying. Yet it is a simple, unobtrusive fact that we publish in every bottle an order of $1.00 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. The reason is that germs are vegetable, and Liquezone—like an excess of oxygen—is deadly to vegetable matter.

THE FARMER'S REALM.

Practical Suggestions For The Improvement of The Farm.

POTATO BLIGHT AND ROT.

Reports from many districts indicate that potato blight and rot are again this season causing serious loss to the farmers of Canada. This disease has been quite prevalent in many parts of Ontario and Quebec, and although a good preventive is known in Bordeaux mixture few growers seem to have sprayed their potatoes. Mr. N. H. Newman of the Seed Division, who visited nearly every county in Ontario during the summer, confirms this statement and reports that in many cases he found growers sadly wanting in knowledge of the disease and methods of preventing it.

There are two known blights which affect the potato in America the early blight Alternaria Solana and the late blight which causes the rot. Phytophthora Infestans. The early blight causes the spotting of the leaves early in July. These spots increase in size, unite and form large masses of diseased tissue. This blight does not attack the tubers and is not nearly as injurious as the other. If the leaves are punctured by beetles or from some other cause the disease gets a foothold easier.

The late blight is the one which causes by far the greater loss, both by lessening the crop and by causing rot. According to Mr. W. T. Macoun, Horticulturist of the Central Experimental Farm, this disease passes the winter in the tubers and in the spring when the vines begin to grow it starts to develop, growing up through the tissues of the potato stem. During the latter part of July it produces on the undersides of the leaves myriads of tiny spores, which in the mass have a frost-like appearance. These spores make the rust stage, which is caused by the leaf tissues drying up where the spores have been feeding on them and causing dark brown spots. It is from this stage of future infection takes place, as the spores are carried rapidly by the wind and alight on the foliage. They are also washed below the surface of the ground and reach the young tubers and cause the rot. The potato rot itself is a dry rot, the wet rot comes through leaching of the tubers. It is when the tubers begin to rot that the blight begins to appear. This is the time when the farmer has passed the point of no return stage the stage when if left alone it would be blossoming and producing seed. At this stage the concentration of the plant is such that which makes it impossible to save the crop. Because the blight is so prevalent in Canada it is important that it be kept under control. Why should it be kept under control? If the season is rainy, it is possible even the earliest blight may be kept growing right on into September by thorough cultivation and spraying. The important point is to get them past the period when they are in a weakened state

These results show the importance of spraying the potatoes for the prevention of blight and rot. The work must be thoroughly done. Spraying should be begun in the middle of July and the vines kept covered with the mixture until the close of the season.

It is generally recognized that some varieties of potatoes have greater power than others to resist this disease, and it is safer to cultivate only varieties which are sturdy in this respect. All diseased potatoes from an infected field must be burned. It is also advisable to avoid using the seed potatoes from a diseased crop, even though the tubers appear healthy.

Local and General News

Whirl of the Town.

The sale of the Y. M. C. A. furniture will take place on Friday evening.

There will be general surprise and regret over Mr. Robinson's defeat in Northumberland. A victory for him was very generally expected with confidence. — St. John Telegraph.

The Chatham World is responsible for the following:—It is whispered, softly, that he is to succeed Governor Snowball at the expiration of the present gubernatorial term.

Honorable Mr. Lemieux, the solicitor general already elected in Nicolet has been elected by acclamation in Gaspe where the polling was fixed for Dec. 5. It is reported that the solicitor general will sit for Nicolet and turn the Gaspe seat over to Mr. Aylsworth the new cabinet minister who was defeated in Durham, Ontario.

Supt. Waddell and his assistants are installing a new 125 K. W. generator direct connected to a 200 horse power Ideal engine. With this installation the town will have ample electric power for years and there will now be no such things as breakdowns in the service. The new generator is about twice the size of the one now in use. The installation will be completed this week.

Thomas Climo, who, while working on the wall of the new Roman Catholic Cathedral being erected at Chatham, was struck by a barrel which was being hoisted and knocked to the ground a distance of fifty-six feet, on Friday, died Sunday night at the Hotel Dieu hospital. He was thirty years old and leaves a widow who has been an invalid for some months. Deceased was highly esteemed and his sad death has caused much sorrow.

A hat belonging to James Kelly, a stevedore, was found on the Loggieville beach Saturday night and Sunday morning. His body was discovered near the mill wharf shore in about two feet of water. It is said that the unfortunate man was last seen about 1 o'clock the morning after the election when he tried to gain admittance into a house near the wharf, but walked away before the door was opened. It is supposed that on trying to get into a boat he lost his footing, fell into the water and was drowned. He was about 55 years old and leaves a grown up family at Loggieville.

Mr. Emerson is understood to have left $5000 behind him when he departed by special train in his palace car after his Masonic Hall speech, and that was only one of the items that helped to swell the Loggieville committee's treasury. But all of this cash would not have carried the county for any other candidate than Mr. Loggie. A truly good man like him, sternly refusing to give a drop of liquor or a dime to anyone, and aided by a lot of thoroughly unscrupulous canvassers who stick at nothing to influence a vote and are well supplied with cash, is a mighty hard man to beat in an election. Elections are not won by prayers, but prayers help to win.

The Maritime Sulphite Fibre Company Properties have been purchased by the Bank of Montreal by a Massachusetts Company, The Nassau Paper and Pulp Co., formed by George Keyes, a large paper manufacturer, of East Pepperell, Mass. Negotiations for the purchase have been under way for some months. The town of Chatham has done its duty by the purchasers of the mill in granting them exemption from taxation for a number of years. The news of the sale and speedy operation of this pulp mill will be hailed with acclaim, as during the past two months many small lumber operators who during the former operation of the pulp mill made money out of the cutting of pulp wood, have anxiously been enquiring of the possibility of this mill being sold. To these and the woodmen who will receive employment from these operators, this news will be a source of gladness. The starting of the mill certainly means increased prosperity for Northumberland and an era of success for Chatham, which will make up for the years of depression. Supplies such as limestone, etc., have already been ordered and work of fitting up the mill will be started at once.

Invitations are out for the marriage of Mr. Peter S. Martin to Miss Maria Benedetta Anna daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Sheenan of Grand River T. Q.

George Kerr, son of Mr. Wm. Kerr, was found dead in bed, Thursday morning at his father's residence on Chatham Hill. He was 27 years of age, and had been up town in his usual good health, Monday evening. His death is attributed to heart failure.

Rev. J. B. Ganong of Sussex, now Field Secretary for the N. B. Sunday School Association, is expected to visit the Sunday Schools on the North Shore in the near future and will devote ten days to Sunday School work in Northumberland county.

Although his opponent has large and important business interests in the county and was already a member of the legislature, the defeat of Mr. Robinson in Northumberland was a general surprise. — St. John Times.

Notwithstanding the disagreeable night and the excitement of the election, a large number gathered at Division on Thursday evening. A very pleasant time was spent. This week the program calls for humorous selections the members to bring the most laughable selections they can find.

Like the brook you have doubtless heard about, "Uncle Tom's Cabin" seems destined to go on forever. Several generations of playgoers have wept over the troubles of Little Eva and Eliza and George Harris and Uncle Tom; they have sailed at and with Harris and Topay and Phineas Fletcher and Campion Cate; they have shuddered at the ferocious (more or less) bloodhounds, and shivered at the cake of ice. How another generation is doing, all this again.

It is doubtful if any locomotive in the world has so many accidents to its credit as No. 239 of the I. C. R. It was while at the throttle of this engine that Driver Trinder went to his death in the collision at Belmont, N. S., about two years ago. It was on the same engine that Driver Billy Wall met his death at Windsor Jet, six months later. In that collision No. 239 seemed to be pretty well demolished but she was hauled out of the wreck and put together. About two months ago she was off the track at Humphreys and was badly damaged. She was again taken to the shops and repaired. Tuesday she made her first trip after coming out of the shops. And what was the result? She collided with a freight at Oxford Junction. Better cut No. 239 out.

Mr. David Burk, a young man about 28 years old, residing four miles above Blackville, was found dead on Monday near Forks siding. The young man started to meet the Fredericton express Saturday evening, on which his sister was expected, and it being dark he took a lantern with him. As he did not return home that night or Sunday, a search party started to look for him, and found him dead about 4 o'clock Monday afternoon lying by the railroad fence with the lantern on his arm. The coroner was summoned and an examination showed heart failure to be the cause of death. The deceased leaves a widowed mother, four sisters and one brother. He was highly respected and the family have the heartfelt sympathy of the community. The funeral on Tuesday was largely attended.

The meeting called by the Mitchell Memorial Committee was to have taken place yesterday (Declaration Day) at 3 p. m. A number of County people who were in town waited to attend the meeting but there was an insufficient number present to make it worth while to hold a meeting. This is to be regretted. But as the Advocate pointed out some time ago the direct charge of the affair should be placed in the hands of some live, hustling man who would receive a substantial remuneration for his services. The Advocate does not propose to allow this matter to drop. It will again receive attention.

Rev. W. C. Gaynor, president of New Brunswick Historical Society, has received a parchment representing that he has been elected a corresponding member of the Wisconsin Historical Society. This is a famous organization and one which has done much valuable work. Its most notable achievement is the edition of the Jesuit Relations, with translations and notes, a set of which is in the Free Public Library St. John. This monumental work with which the name of Rueben Gold Thwaites is associated has brought the society into close association with Canadian historical scholars. Mr. Thwaites was in St. John and at Annapolis and St. Croix at the time of the tercentenary and took a leading part in the celebration. At that time he had associated with Father Gaynor, and the honor done the president of the local historical society has probably grown out of that acquaintance.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" never grows old. There runs through it a vein of pathos peculiarly touching and sweet. It speaks the universal language of the heart. It is like the prism the innermost phases of the human emotion. It is more than a play. It is a moral classic. It argues for two of the greatest themes that can engage the mind, human liberty and immortality of the soul. Notwithstanding its frequent productions, it is seldom one sees the play as it is now presented by Mr. Stetson, Colossal, Spectacular. It is refreshing to see the old play in its natural habitat once more. It is like meeting an old friend after many years. The manager doubtless believes in the maxim, "What is worth doing is worth doing well." They have brought together in this production all the requisites that go to make up a first class entertainment. Stetson's colossal, spectacular "Uncle Tom's Cabin" will appear at the Opera House on Saturday evening.

EDITORIAL DE LUXE.

The Grand Trunk World's Fair folder which is the finest specimen of railway literature yet issued on the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, is in great demand. A good supply has been issued, and any one sending four cents in stamps to J. Quinlan, District Passenger Agent, Bonaventure Station Montreal, can secure a copy.

Editor's Mail.

A NORTHEAST TRIBUTE.

To the Editor of the Advocate.
It is a long saying that no one can please everybody, but if there is anyone dissatisfied in the manner in which our number is edited under the direction of our present boon master we have yet to hear from them, and in a matter of such general importance, and where everybody along our river is more or less interested we feel we can congratulate ourselves on getting the right man in the right place. It appears that Mr. Bryenton by attentive practice and long experience has made himself perfectly master of the business. He is an energetic worker and always at his place to see that everyone big or small gets due satisfaction. Added to this he is courteous and obliging, our only hope is that Mr. Bryenton may retain his position and long remain in that capacity to serve the general public as honestly and faithfully in the future as he has in the past.

RESOLUTION OF THANKS

The members of M. O. L. No. 47 held their first regular meeting in their new lodge room on Monday evening last. There were two visitors from Moncton present and a pleasant time was spent.
Referring to the supper and dedication ceremony held last month, and which proved so successful, several members expressed their great appreciation of the way in which the public in general had responded to the request for donations and assistance in carrying out this project. After some discussion the following resolution was passed.

Resolved:—that the thanks of this Lodge be herewith presented to the citizens of Newcastle and country friends who so generously contributed toward the supper held in this hall on Oct. 18th to the ladies in particular who so nobly came to our assistance and without whose help success could not have crowned our efforts. We hereby tender our sincere and heartfelt thanks to all who in any way helped either by donation or by their presence the sincere thanks of this Lodge is due and is gratefully tendered.

Signed for and on behalf of the Lodge by WILLIAM CONNERT, W. M.
L. B. McMELEN, Secretary.

DECLARATION DAY.

Eastern would be so improved that trains could run from Loggieville to Fredericton in three hours, that the Chatham station would be built in town. That the Indian town branch would be extended to Blackville and that the eastern terminus would be moved further down to Hardwicke. That the drooping commenced through his exertions would be continued and other needed public works constructed. He had no doubt that if the newly elected member worked as hard as he had these would all be completed in a very short time.

He again thanked all for the support given him.
Mr. Robinson moved a vote of thanks to the Sheriff for the fair and impartial manner in which the election had been conducted. Mr. Loggie seconded the motion which was carried unanimously.

Portland wins! There was a great demonstration there on election night. Lucky Portland. Poor St. John.
