

net imagine why the Canadian Government announced that such a despatch had been received. The Montreal Transcript says: "It is very unfortunate that the Minister of Militia should have left before this intelligence reached, though probably in Col. Macdonald's hands the preparations for defence will be as fully handled."

Other papers regard the position as most serious and full of danger.

The St. John, N. B. Freeman, of the 27th says: "Mr. A. Howard, a gentleman from Montreal, who took a prominent part in the agitation which culminated in the destruction of the Parliament buildings in that City, died suddenly at the Waverley Hotel on Monday morning. He arrived on Saturday from Windsor, and was preparing to leave in the steamer for Portland, and his luggage had actually gone when he complained of feeling unwell, and sat on the parlor sofa. A few minutes after he was found lying on the hearth rug. Dr. Berryman was at once called in, but medical aid was useless, and he died about noon of what is said to have been a combined attack of epilepsy and apoplexy. He leaves a wife and five children."

Hampden's Price-Current of St. John, N. B., markets, for November 25, has been received. Island oats are quoted at 50c; Potatoes, 25c to 40c; Butter 35c; Oatmeal, per 50 lbs, 95c; Oysters, $1.50 to $2 per box. In Halifax Oats are quoted at 44c to 46c; Barley 75c; Potatoes 28c to 34c.

The London Quarterly Review for October contains the following articles:—Ancient Literature of France; 2. Dr. Bachman and the Dutch School of Colonialism; 3. Homes without Halls; 4. Life of our Lord; 5. History of Architecture; 6. Central Asia; 7. Operations of Modern Warfare; 8. England and her Institutions.

The running drill has been added to the discipline of the British Army. A general order, just issued from the Horse Guards, directs that the Infantry Regiments shall be exercised in this drill once a day. Soldiers who have served over fifteen years, or are excused by medical certificate, are exempted. For the first fortnight the distance is not to exceed 300 yards a day; for the second it may be increased to 600 yards; for the third 900 yards, and after that to 1000 yards daily with arms and accoutrements carried on alternate days. The pace, on all occasions, is to be at the rate of 6 miles an hour. The introduction into the service of the Sudder breach loader and the running drill form an important event in the history of the British Army.—Pat.

WILLIAM ANHARD, Esq., M. P. E., for the East Riding of Halifax, and one of the Anti-Confederate Delegates to England, has published an able reply to the Editor's Letter to the Earl of Cardigan. The venerable Judge Marshall has also favored the people of Nova Scotia with a communication on the same subject. We shall lay some of the arguments of these gentlemen before our readers at our earliest convenience.—Pat.

It affords us much pleasure to learn that Mr. Leander G. McNeill, favorably known to many of our readers, has been successful in winning a Scholarship in Edinburgh. It is one of the "Miller Scholarship" worth £40 sterling a year, for two years, and is regarded as among the best Scholarships in the University. What renders this victory the more creditable, is the fact, that it was gained after keen competition. There were some twenty competitors, among whom were the senior medallist in Latin, in the Glasgow University, and high prizeman in the Edinburgh University. We congratulate our young friend on his success, and hope, that he may yet win laurels, and wear them gracefully.—Pat.

We regret to learn that a fatal accident occurred at Waverley on Friday last, among a party of men who were blasting at the German Company's works. A spark was struck while tamping the charge with a steel rod, when an explosion took place, by which three men were seriously injured. One man, named Livingston, died in two hours after. Another named Smith, whose head was fatally bruised by the tamping rod, expired on Friday night. Wilson, the third party, will likely survive. It is said that Wilson belongs to Colchester County, and the other two are reported as from P. E. Island.—Ms. Express.

We understand that a requisition is in course of signature for James Muirhead, Esq., to offer himself as a candidate to represent the Scotch District of Pictou County in the Legislative Council. Mr. Muirhead has had large experience in the public service, and is eminently qualified for the position. We shall have more to say about him, along with others next week.—S. Prop.

It is stated that Sutton or Dutton, the agent of James Stevens in Ireland, has given full information to the British Government, and that they know the name of every Fenian in the kingdom. The number of teachers of national schools in the South and West who are implicated, is very great. The 24th of December is spoken of as the day of "the rising."

Thirty-nine of the persons imprisoned at Toronto as Fenians were discharged some days ago, because there was no evidence to convict them. They were sent to the United States frontier by special train, under charge of a detachment of the 17th Regiment, and each got a $5 greenback.

Mr. Wallace, a Nova Scotia Barrister, suspended and forbidden to practice by the Supreme Court of that Province, because he accused the Chief Justice of improper conduct, of prejudging cases in which he was interested, and advising some parties to bring an action against him, appealed to the Privy Council, who reversed the decision of the Nova Scotia Court.

We have received by mail a pamphlet on Confederation written by the Hon. Mr. Anshand. It is a reply to Dr. Tupper's Speech at the Taveru Dinner, and to his pamphlet. It is a very able production. It puts some of the arguments against Confederation very powerfully and pointedly, exposes the contradictions of the delegates, and shows what very different results the friends of Confederation in the Provinces, and those who favor the scheme in England expect from it.

Our news despatches are again becoming sensational. Reports of a Fenian rising in Ireland and of trouble between England and the United States are rife enough, but what share of truth they may contain, we are not prepared to say. The latest and most reliable despatches will be found in our columns.

To-morrow has been set aside by the Governor in Council as a General Thanksgiving Day for the late successful harvest.

"Editorial Reminders" and other matter laid over next week.

We urgently request all our subscribers who are in arrears for one year or more to pay up before the New Year.

The ship Mary Ellen, Capt. Smith, from P. E. Island, arrived at Bermuda on the 21st Nov.

MRS. WINSLOW'S
An experienced Nurse and Female Physician, presents to the attention of mothers, her Soothing Syrup,
For Children Teething.
which greatly facilitates the process of teething, by softening the gums, reducing all inflammation—will allay all pain and spasmodic action, and is SURE TO REGULATE THE BOWELS.
Depend upon it, mother, it will give rest to yourself, and RELIEF AND HEALTH TO YOUR INFANT.
We have put up and sold this article for over thirty years, and can say with confidence and truth of it, which we have never been able to say of any other medicine—never has it failed, in a single instance, to effect a cure, when timely used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations, and speak in terms of highest commendation of its magical effects and moral virtues. We speak in this manner "what we do know," after thirty years' experience, and pledge our reputation for the fulfillment of what we here declare. In almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in three or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered. This valuable preparation is the preservation of one of the most experienced and skillful nurses in New England, and has been used with never failing success in
THOUSANDS OF CASES.
It not only relieves the child from pain but fortifies the stomach and bowels, corrects acidity, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. It will almost instantly relieve and overcome convulsions, which, if not speedily remedied, lead to death. We believe it the best and most certain remedy in the world, in all cases of Dysentery and Diarrhoea in children, whether it arises from teething, or from any other cause. We would say to every mother who has a child suffering from any of the foregoing complaints—do not let your prejudices, nor the persuasions of others, stand between your suffering child and the relief that will be sure—yes, absolutely sure—to follow the use of this medicine, if timely used. Full directions for using will accompany each bottle. None genuine unless the fac-simile of CUTLER'S PEARLINE, New York, is on the outside wrapper.
CRICKING IN THE BOWELS, AND WIND COLIC
Sold by druggists throughout the world.

Price, only 25 cents per Bottle.

GRACE WELDON.

FREDERICA, THE BONNET-GIRL.

THE DEVELOPMENT.

"But how, then, came you to suspect it to be a forgery?" asked Mr. Weldon, with impatience.

"While I was wondering at the departure of the boy, and had made up my mind to communicate with you, a ragged negro man came in, and inquired for me. I approached the desk, and spoke to him. He handed me a note, and left. Here is the note, which will explain itself, Mr. Weldon," added the cashier, handing to him the letter. The merchant read as follows:

"To Mr. Morley, Sir.—I feel it my duty to caution you against paying any checks offered you, professing to be drawn by Mr. Weldon, merchant, of Central Wharf, as in all likelihood such checks will prove to be forged, if offered to you by Mr. Weldon's hand clerk, or by a lad with light hair and blue eyes, who has been selected to present them, and resembling Mr. Weldon's son. My motive in warning you proceeds from the dictates of a troubled conscience, for I have been a guilty participator in the crime of deceiving you, with Mr. Daily, the clerk allied to, but can no longer go on, and be happy. James Daily began his operations by employing the lad you have so often seen, and who will present you a forged check, this morning, for twenty-five hundred dollars, which I hope you will not have paid on this caution reaches you. He began, I say, about three weeks ago, by engaging a shrewd youth to act for him, and present the checks. The reason why, after overchecking, he paid back again the overplus, was to deprive the bank into security, and blind you."

"This was done twice. In both cases it was the picking of a subtle plot, deeply laid by Daily, for reaping by-and-by, a rich harvest. Of the last draft for eleven hundred, which this upright clerk forged, and the lad presented, only one thousand were re-deposited, as you will recollect, one hundred being kept back by him. This was only the first picking of Daily's harvest, which he promised to himself. He had now got you familiar with his clerk's face, (the blue-eyed lad), and had lulled your fears, by promptly depositing when over-checking. It now remained for him to pursue the play in his own way. All he would have to do was to wait until his private purposes, to pay gambling debts, &c., was to draw a check on your bank, and it by the youth, receive the money, and then so manage that Mr. Weldon would be kept in ignorance of the destination of his funds. This was, and is his plan. And, as the draft of $11,000 has this morning showed me a draft (forged) for twenty-five hundred dollars, every dollar of which he intends to defraud the bank of, and as I know his next checks will be much larger, and as I tremble for the consequences to myself and brother, (for the lad he has begun is my brother), I have thought it best to inform the bank in season, hoping, that should any steps be taken against James Daily, and he should implicate my brother, that he, as well as I, may be passed over, by reason of his youth, and my present voluntary information given to the bank."

"Now, sir, you have in your hand the proofs on which I so boldly charged James Daily with forgery, said Mr. Morley, fixing his eyes upon the merchant. Mr. Weldon made no answer. He stood still, looking upon the last sentence of the letter, with a face pale but thoughtful. All along in reading, he seemed to be passing judgment, as he progressed, upon the statement. At length he lifted his eyes to those of the cashier, and said calmly:

"This letter proves too much. It is impossible for me to believe anything he has charged against Mr. Daily; therefore I can believe nothing."

"Do not believe it, sir! Is it possible that your predilections for this young man can lead you to throw aside such testimony of his guilt?"

"It is incredible, sir. It would render it best to inform the bank in season, hoping, that should any steps be taken against James Daily, and he should implicate my brother, that he, as well as I, may be passed over, by reason of his youth, and my present voluntary information given to the bank."

"I cannot, cannot believe that this is true," said the merchant, with strong emotion, visible in his countenance. "The letter is written by some enemy. If he has a woman who is his enemy, this fact is enough to show he has not kept the pure society he should have done. Besides, Mr. Weldon, who should know all these occurrences which look alike, unless it was one intimately associated with him? How should he know he was about to offer me a check for twenty-five hundred dollars?"

"If it is true, this is a most unaccountable affair. I cannot, cannot believe that this is true," said the merchant, with strong emotion, visible in his countenance. "The letter is written by some enemy. If he has a woman who is his enemy, this fact is enough to show he has not kept the pure society he should have done. Besides, Mr. Weldon, who should know all these occurrences which look alike, unless it was one intimately associated with him? How should he know he was about to offer me a check for twenty-five hundred dollars?"

"This is honest, if anything is a proof of honesty; for if the check had been paid, doubtless the world have been the sharer of the spoils, as she has been, in all probability, she is or has been his mistress?"

"Impossible! Such finished depravity I cannot countenance!"

"You see how natural her delusions for her brother! This is natural. She informs the bank, and she may save this from the ignominious truth which she foresees would sooner or later overtake Daily and those associated with him! You see the same hand—the feminine tone! If it is written by an enemy, having such a female an enemy shows what his private habits have been."

"I will say no more. Let him answer for himself. Shall I call him in? Or shall I at once call the officer, and surrender him to the laws?"

"Mr. Weldon speaks in a voice powerful and stern. The lines of his face were rigid. The expression of his eye severe, yet full of pity."

"I know your regard for this unhappy young man. I was aware of his intimacy in your domestic circle. Mr. Weldon. I therefore resolved to keep the matter in my own breast until I should see you upon the subject."

"Sir, you were infinitely kind to think of my feelings."

"I therefore took the check, note, and letter, put them in my pocket, called on Clapp, the police captain, got him to follow me, and describing Daily's appearance, bade him stop him if he should see him pass out! for I did not know but that, on seeing me here, he would suspect my business, and try to effect his escape."

"That he did not?"

"No! He sat very coolly, as if trying to face me; though I observed he colored deeply as I came in."

"That was owing to a remark of my own, which I made to him just as you happened to come in; for I saw the blue overspread his face."

"You are still disposed to hope he is innocent?"

"I do hope he is innocent, sir. But let him speak for himself."

"As I was about to say, Mr. Weldon, I have kept the matter secret so far; and if you desire it, so long as the Bank has lost nothing—at least but one hundred dollars—I am willing that he should be examined privately."

"You are very thoughtful and very kind, sir. I should prefer this course for many reasons. He may prove innocent."

"The cashier drew the corners of his eye-brows down, and then arched them, slightly twisted his mouth awry, and smiled ironically."

"I have not such faith. Adam was a better man than James Daily, and yet he fell! None of us are infallible till we are nailed fairly up in our coffins."

"Mr. Weldon could not do otherwise than smile at these queer allusions, but it was but a transient emotion: His features instantly resumed a sterner gravity."

"If you please, Mr. Morley, I will examine James alone, at my house. I do not feel able to do it now. There, sir," he added, taking a one hundred dollar note from his pocket-book, and laying it before the cashier, "there is the amount unexpended which was checked for. As the forged name was my own, and the bank is, happily, no loser, if you will allow the affair to be in my hands, you will do me a favor, sir."

"Certainly, most certainly, sir," answered Mr. Morley, delicately folding up the bank-note, and handing it to Mr. Weldon. "Be assured I shall investigate the painful business as closely as you could wish. If the accused is guilty, I shall not fail to surrender him to the law; for if he is as guilty as these papers would make him, he deserves hanging! I will retain the two written notes, and the check, until you are satisfied."

"They are yours, Mr. Weldon."

"You will oblige me by keeping this unhappy affair secret for the present."

"I have no wish to speak of it. You are aware I should not be sustained in my full payments of over-drawn checks by the directors, if the affair should come out. I would rather it should be kept as quiet as possible. Besides, even if he is guilty, he is a young man, and may yet be saved."

"If he is guilty," answered Mr. Weldon, "with severe emphasis, "it would be an imposition upon society to let him loose upon it; if he is guilty, I shall prosecute him for forgery, sir, were he my own son!"

"Mr. Morley looked in the firm countenance of the merchant with a stare of surprise at the impressive decision in his tones, and then bade him good morning, and departed, forgetting his bill of lading, as soon as he saw that the cashier was admitted into Mr. Weldon's private room."

"CHAPTER XIX. THE TRIAL AND THE JUDGMENT."

JAMES SAW AS EARLY as he entered that the countenance of Mr. Weldon was changed, and wore a look he had never seen upon it. He looked at once that some heavy loss had befallen him, the intelligence of which Mr. Morley had just conveyed to him; and he wished to ask; but there was a sternness in his benefactor's manner that restrained the impulse. Grieved that anything should have happened to produce such an air of unchastity in him, James resumed his seat at the table, expecting each moment when Mr. Weldon would make known to him what it was that had disturbed him.

The merchant continued walking up and down the little room, his hands crossed behind him, his brow depressed and stern, and his whole manner indicative of painful thought. He had not raised his eyes to look at James, but as if unconscious that he had stared, he continued for at least three minutes pacing the apartment by the side of the table. In one of his hands he held firmly grasped the papers which the cashier had left with him. He cast his eyes upon them of sympathy and surprise. But he knew not yet how to speak. The proofs of his guilt were conclusive; yet to credit such depravity of one he had so long known; one so dear to him; one he had placed such confidence in as to trust for three years past all his essential concerns in his hands; one whom he was ready to take as a partner, into his home; nay, whom he was willing should, by-and-by, become the husband of his beloved daughter! He thought over all the past, and each incident that memory brought up only served to confirm him in his integrity and honor. He cast his eyes upon him now as he sat by the table, and asked himself if that calm, serene countenance was the mask to a depraved heart.

"No, it is impossible," he exclaimed, almost indignantly; "it is impossible, if he were guilty, and knowing Mr. Morley has been so long connected with me, that he could wear so calm an aspect; the only emotion I can discover in his face seems to be surprise and pain, as if in sympathy with me in some grief, the source of which he is ignorant of. Yet these papers! This forged check! The whole history of the drafts and deposits! This bill! This female! If he be guilty, he has the most important lock that ever Satan wears when he assumes the shape of an angel of light."

James, he said, seating himself by the table, and looking him firmly in the face.

"It seemed as frank and unassuming as a child's. But the evidence in his hand forced their strong proofs upon him, and he continued in the same grave tones."

"Have you any enemies?"

"None in particular that I am aware of, sir," he answered, with a sense of surprise; but his thoughts in running over those whom he had ever known, rested for an instant on Carlton Ellery, and then on Jack Briggs, as the only enemies he had. "There is the burglar, sir, whom I tried to arrest, three weeks ago, under the Franklin arch. Jack Briggs! He has always been an enemy to me."

ALL CURES MADE EASY! HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT. Bad Legs, Ulcerous Sores, Bad Breasts, and Old Wounds.

No description of wound, sore or ulcer can resist the healing properties of this excellent Ointment. The worst cases readily assume a healthy appearance whenever this medicine is applied; sound flesh springs up from the bottom of the wound, and the surrounding skin is so acted on and a complete and permanent cure quickly follows the use of the ointment.

Piles, Fistulas, and Internal Inflammation. This distressing and weakening disease may with certainty be cured by the use of Holloway's Ointment, and strictly attended to the printed instructions. It should be well rubbed upon the neighboring parts, when all the disease will be removed. A poultice, when all the disease will be removed. A poultice, when all the disease will be removed. A poultice, when all the disease will be removed.

Rheumatism, Gout and Neuralgia. Nothing has the power of reducing inflammation and subduing pain in these complaints in the same degree as Holloway's Ointment, and purifying Pills, which together simultaneously drive all inflammation and depravities from the system, and remove all enlargement of the joints, and leave the nerves and muscles in an unobscured state. A cure may always be effected, even under the worst circumstances, if the use of these medicines be persevered in.

Eruptions, Scald Head, Ringworm, and other Skin Diseases. After fermentation with warm water, the utmost relief and speediest cure can be readily obtained in all complaints affecting the skin and joints, if they will be applied as directed, and the skin and joints, if they will be applied as directed, and the skin and joints, if they will be applied as directed.

Sore Throats, Diphtheria, Quinsey, Mumps and all other Derangements of the Throat. On the appearance of any of these maladies the Ointment should be well rubbed at least three times a day upon the neck and upper part of the chest, so as to penetrate to the glands, as well as forced into the mouth, this course will at once yield to this treatment by following the printed directions.

Scrofula or King's Evil and Swelling of the Glands. This class of cases may be cured by Holloway's purifying Pills and Ointment, as their double action of purifying the blood and strengthening the system renders them more effective than any other remedy for all complaints of a scrofulous nature. As the blood is impure, liver, stomach, & bowels being much deranged, require purifying medicine to bring about a cure.
