CHRISTMAS.

Draw up the chair about the logs That sparkle bright and gay; That in quaint flowers on the wall In madcap frolic play. Oh, toss all sorrows to the winds, For this is Christmas day.

What of the chilly winds without About the chimney blow And high against the frosted panes Makes minarets of snow When Christmas cheer this cozy nest With comfort sets aglow!

A CHRISTMAS CAROL.

From a window of a crowded apartment house situated in the business district of a great city a woman with a pale, wistful face was looking down into the street below.

In spite of her shabby black dress, there was an aristocratic air about the tall figure which impressed one that she was a lady born, and in the face now worn with years of sorrow could be detected traces of what must once have been a radiant beauty.

It was Christmas eve, and the street was filled with persons hurrying to and fro, and the old man trembled like a palsied person as he rang the bell for a servant. "Tell John," he said when the domestic appeared, "to have the carriage ready immediately." Then turning to the child in his arms, he said, "Little one, your mother was the little girl who used to sing for me years ago. Will you take me to her, for I want to go tonight?"

It was years before that his daughter had come up to him on a cold winter evening, and putting her arms about his neck told him with an unwonted shyness that she had that day promised to be Anthony Girvin's wife, and he, enraged that his idol should be willing to marry a poor musician, who, though good and talented, was guilty of being in moderate circumstances—he, the fond affectionate father—had broken from the self embrace and commanded her—yes he had used that very word—to break her promise or to leave his house forever. And how Wilton also had covered her in her tall beauty as she utterly refused to comply with his commands, because—and the words were galling to the father—because she loved Anthony Girvin more than she loved her father.

A CHRISTMAS STOCKING.

"Dear Santa Claus," wrote little Will, in letters truly shocking, "I've been a good boy, So please fill a-heapin this stocking. I want a drum to make me sick And drive my mamma crazy. I want a doggie, I can kick, So he will not get lazy. I want a powder gun to shoot my Right at my sister Annie, And a big trumpet I can toot. Just awful loud at granny. I want a duffle big false face, To scare in fits our baby. I want a pony I can race Round the parlor maybe. I want a little hatchet, too, So I can do some chopping Upon our grand piano. When mamma goes a-hoppin, I want a nice hard rubber ball, To smash all into flinders. The great big mirror in the hall And lots and lots of winders. And candy that'll make me sick, So all night long will hold me. And make me get the doctor quick And never try to eold me. And, Santa Claus, if papa says, I'm naughty, it's a story, Just say if he whips me, I'll die and go to kingdom glory."

JOCLAR CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

It will increase the joy and jollity of Christmas morning exceedingly if the children find that their elders have entered into the spirit of the time to such a degree that stockings of all conceivable sizes and shapes bulge with strange contents over the fire place. The more amusing the gifts tucked away in toe and heel the more uproarious will be the night before breakfast. The old trick of wrapping a pair of cuff buttons in multi-colored papers until they form a bundle as big as a potato will never fail to excite interest and enthusiasm. A jack in the box put in the stocking of a satisfied father will be a big success. The old-fashioned chuckles of gold through a whole day, and the most amusing thing that Mark Twain ever said would jibe in effect before the amusement caused by the mother's drawing a cream whip from her stocking.

CHARGED WITH MURDER.

Annie Maud Brewer Formerly of Fredericton

Under Arrest at Lynn, Mass., For the Murder of Gideon W. Lattimer.

Details of the Crime.

Many people in Fredericton will recall the Brewer girls, two notorious persons who in the last years of their residence here were popularly known as the "bull-dogs." They disappeared about twelve or thirteen years ago, but are now located at Lynn, Mass., where one of them, Annie Maud Brewer, is under arrest charged with the crime of murder. The Evening Item of Lynn, Dec. 15th gives the following particulars of the affair:

Gideon W. Lattimer, Jr., the man who was shot in this city Thursday, died at the hospital last night. Annie Maud Brewer, the girl who did the shooting, is locked up in Salem jail to appear in the local court Wednesday. Her bail has been fixed at $15,000.

She was arrested at between 4 and 5 o'clock this morning by the police, who found her in the room of Chas. H. Spiny, at 66 Central avenue. She had been there since 5 o'clock Thursday evening, at which time she had left the room of "Dr. Daniel Wilkinson at Mrs. Breed's. Charles H. Spiny was arrested at the same time that Annie was, for harboring her and being an accessory after the fact, and Wilkinson and Mrs. Breed were detained at the station nearly all night, in momentary expectation of an arrest on the same charge, and which act may follow.

As might be expected, the girl's narration of the events which led to the shooting is very different from that of the man who was shot. She claims that the first shot, at least, was fired in self-defense, and that she took the revolver from the pocket of Lattimer, whose fingers were clutching her throat at the time.

The story of her movements since the shot was fired is a very plain one, as is now known by the police, and it would have been materially simpler still had it not been for the fact that she had been the people by whose aid she was enabled to remain in hiding as long as she did.

The officers were searching high and low for her all the afternoon, and as there were a number of men on the force who knew her well and places where she would be most likely to go, it was not thought there would be much difficulty in apprehending her. As a precautionary measure, however, word was sent to the police of all the neighboring towns and villages, and the search was continued until 5 o'clock officers went into the lodging house where the girl was secreted, but as was natural under the circumstances, they did not go into the private office of Wilkinson. Both the girl and the landlady, however, were thoroughly frightened, and the fact that the girl was wanted and the landlady knew that the girl was in the house.

About five o'clock Wilkinson appeared at the station and told the Marshal that the girl had been in his room all the afternoon, but that she had fled immediately after the shooting. He said that she had left about 15 minutes before to go to the station and give herself up. Wilkinson was detained in the Marshal's office and questioned as to further particulars, and "his devotion to this paper" was proved, for she had left her father's house. The torturing remorse that followed almost drove him insane, and when he was convinced that all search for his daughter's whereabouts was vain he had devoted himself to an almost entirely new life, which was in its very nature a living death.

Tony always persists that they owe their present happy life to Kathie's fondness for discussing family matters, but Kathie herself and Kathie's idolizing grandfather lay it all to the old Christmas card.

been sent for, arrived late in the evening and the bullets were located, one inches under the skin, and the other in the back between the tenth and eleventh ribs. The course of the bullet had been such that operation was rendered necessary, which was successfully performed, and one kidney removed, after which the bullets were extracted about three o'clock. Dr. Richardson performed the operation, assisted by the hospital staff. Although he rallied successfully after the extraction, he soon commenced to sink again and death occurred in a few hours.

A BAD RECORD.

That Maud Brewer is not without previous record is certain. In 1889 she was arrested with her sister, Emma, by Police Officer Thomas L. McKenney, who was on duty searching for her last night, with State Officer George C. Neal, who also remembers the occurrence, as it was during his service as deputy marshal.

Officer McKenney found them after midnight one night, fighting on the grounds of St. Stephen's church for the affection of a young grocery clerk, who was present in a very much muddled condition. The three had been out for the evening, and had failed to agree on which one was most favored by the young man, and so took to fighting to decide. The party was arrested by McKenney, but Maud slipped from her grasp and started to run. J. W. Young appeared at that time most opportunely and caught her. They were both fined for drunkenness, and also was the object of their violent affection.

The police have since had frequent occasion to look up the two sisters, on suspicion of larceny, and again at times on suspicion that they were keeping a disorderly house. Since the two girls came to Lynn, with their brother, they have been classed as speedy about town, and have managed to become very well known indeed.

The police are inclined to look upon the information granted by the sister with some little doubt. She told them that her sister wore a black hat. The hat is white. She further said that she did not know of her whereabouts. As a matter of fact she knew where the girl was, for "Dr. Daniel Wilkinson took a letter to her during the afternoon, while Annie was in his room. Then, too, they have reason to believe that she has the revolver with which the shooting was done. They will doubtless have MORE TO SAY WITH MISS EMMA before the case is ended. Charles H. Spiny, in whose room the girl was found, was released without complaint, this morning, the police believing that he didn't know of the girl's presence in his apartment until his return, and that he was then in no condition to realize that she ought not to be there.

The night was dark and stormy. The wind had lulled to a calm, and we stood around an open fire. As quiet as a lamb. I think I remember the foolish virgins, for lamps we had, but not a drop of oil. However the dreary night went away and in the morning 12 willing hands set to work building our camp, which in a few days was completed, but not soon enough to escape a blizzard from the northwest, which came near leaving our tent poles bare. Some of the boys by the aid of a lantern, and the cautious neighboring camp, while the rest stood firm to the wreck.

But now we are nicely located in a snug warm camp on the bank of McLean brook, two miles from the main tent West, and through the cautious efforts of our foreman, Jim, we are handling lumber at a lively rate and are doing splendid work.

We can boast of having the best cook on the waters. Our friend, A. Morehouse, is here, better known as the popular Taxidermist of Keewick. He is collecting heads of large game which he intends mounting himself in the spring. He has already secured a very fine specimen of a bull moose and a moose head on a good trade, that line of business as this place abounds with moose, deer and caribou. Smith brothers from Deyen Ridge, furnish music; the way they handle the harmonica is hard to beat.

And our friend William acts the part of H. Vennor, when he predicts a storm by his peculiar method, what he calls goat hair in the sky, the boys prepare for a big one, which is sure to come. Later on, Mr. Editor, I will furnish you with a few more notes concerning this little crew.

THE WEEKLY GLOBE.

For fifty years The Weekly Globe of Toronto has had an enviable reputation as the one great Liberal weekly of the Dominion. It has always been a high-class journal, and a weekly paper in Canada that gives such full and fair reports of parliamentary proceedings, great church meetings, and other similar occurrences of provincial and national interest. Among leading features of recent years, may be mentioned speeches by Mr. Laurier, Sir John Thompson, Sir Richard Cartwright, Mr. Marter, Mr. Haycock, members of the Ontario cabinet, and others; letters from members of The Globe's editorial staff, who traveled through the province of Quebec and over the route of the Trent Valley Canal, interviews and letters on that most important question, the reform of the law system, long and important reports from the scene of the Jessie Keith murder, the McPherson trial and other sensational events. The aim of The Globe is to be trustworthy. The Globe has the best cable and telegraphic service obtainable; its foreign, American and Canadian despatches are unexcelled, and every week the whole world is brought under review. The agricultural department is right up to the times; the crop and market reports are full and reliable. Reasonable space is given each week to lighter reading, and good stories is one of The Globe's attractions. Another popular feature are the weekly contributions from the Khan's poetical pen. As a family newspaper The Weekly Globe is unrivalled.

It is not in the least classic and her face had an interesting, her nose small and tilted a bit, and her eyes small, crafty and slightly bleared. Her face shows unmistakable marks of dissipation.

An Item reporter had a short conversation with her, but she was disinclined to talk and did not add anything to the statement made to the police.

CHRISTMAS BELLS.

Ring out the merry Christmas chime, Proclaim the message far and near, Peace and good will in every clime, To rich and poor sweet Christmas cheer.

Loudly proclaim o'er land and sea, What love divine for men did plan, The setting of the captive free, The nobler brotherhood of man.

Success of grief to those that mourn, Rest to the weary, heaven to win, A fuller life beyond death's bourne To such as seek to enter in.

Peal forth with no uncertain tone, That love leaves none beneath the ban, And they alone are blessed that own Their duty to their fellow man.

Proclaim as loudly as ye can, The tidings glad to old and young, Peace on earth, good will to man, First by the angel choirs sung.

McLEAN'S BROOK.

Dec. 11.—Thinking that some of the readers of your valuable paper might like to know how the Keawick boys are getting along in the Miramichi lumber woods, I drop you a few lines. We left that fair valley the 13th of November, with just enough snow for good sledding. We sped along lively through Birdtown and the far famed Carleton region, arriving at the nice little village of Stanley in good time. We proceeded 15 miles further on to our friend Donnelly's, where we were hospitably entertained. Next morning we started on our way 20 miles over a rough road, arriving at our camping ground a little after dark.

The night was dark and stormy. The wind had lulled to a calm, and we stood around an open fire. As quiet as a lamb. I think I remember the foolish virgins, for lamps we had, but not a drop of oil. However the dreary night went away and in the morning 12 willing hands set to work building our camp, which in a few days was completed, but not soon enough to escape a blizzard from the northwest, which came near leaving our tent poles bare. THE HERALD

EVERY SATURDAY,

GORNER QUEEN AND REGENT STREETS, BY THE HERALD PRINTING AND PUBLISHING CO. LTD.

THE HERALD.

FREDERICTON, DECEMBER 22, 1894.

THE HERALD extends its friends in town and country. It's best wishes for a Merry Christmas.

DEEPLY LAMENTED.

The death of Hon. David McLellan will be very sincerely regretted throughout this province, and especially in St. John and Fredericton, where the deceased was so well and favorably known.

A WEAK ADMINISTRATION.

An exchange very aptly summarizes the result of Hon. Mackenzie Bowell's cabinet making, with the remark that it is the same old government, without Sir John Thompson, and with Messrs. Dickey, Ferguson and Montague added, but all three new appointees combined, do not aggregate the ability of the deceased Premier.

These are the changes, and they do not go to strengthen the Cabinet before the people of Canada. We have referred in another article to the new Premier's weakness. The only man of ability he has around him, are Foster, Tupper and Haggart, but none of these three are personally popular.

THE NEW MINISTERS.

Arthur R. Dickey, Q. C., member for Cumberland County, Nova Scotia, and the new Secretary of State in the Dominion Cabinet, is a son of Senator Dickey, and was born at Amherst in 1854. He was educated at Windsor, N. S., and graduated a B. A. at the University of Toronto in 1874.

Richard Cartwright agrees with the verdict that Premier Bowell is really a very respectable man, but he is not deeply impressed with either Mr. Bowell's political honesty, or his ability to lead a government.

High Commissioner Tupper called that he was coming to Canada with the late Premier's remains, and the startling intelligence had a wonderful effect on the cabinet makers at Ottawa.

CANADA'S NEW PREMIER.

Hon. Mr. Bowell had fair claims on the premiership, but in qualification for the responsible post he is sadly lacking.

While he has had remarkable success in getting into parliament and staying in, while the peculiar circumstances in which he was placed forced him to the front and into a position in the cabinet in 1878, it has never been claimed for him that he possesses the equipment necessary for statesmanship.

Mr. Bowell no doubt owes his prominence more to the Orange order, of which he was for a long time the head, than to any signal ability he has ever displayed in his public career. He was a staunch follower of the late Sir John Macdonald, a party man in every sense, and on these grounds he had claims upon the Conservatives, but no doubt, he is as much surprised as anybody to find himself at the head of the Dominion Government.

His selection at the present time can only be regarded as in the nature of a makeshift, a compromise such as that which led to the election of Sir John A. Macdonald to the premiership.

There are half a dozen men in the cabinet who, no doubt, think they have greater claims than Mr. Bowell. Foster, Tupper, J. R. Haggart, and even the boodling Caron, would be willing to sacrifice themselves, but they have not so large a following as Bowell, and the selection of any one of them would have meant the Conservative party into a great many factions.

It is an awful descent from Sir John Thompson to Bowell, but the necessities of the case demanded the drop. However, Mr. Bowell will not long enjoy his honors. A general election is not far away, and when that is over there will be no further bickering among the Conservatives over the premiership.

The new premier started life as a newspaper man, having owned and edited for many years the Belleville Intelligencer, an obscure Ontario paper. He was first elected to parliament in 1867, and held a seat in the House of Commons until 1892, when he was called to the Senate.

The warship Dianthin, bearing the remains of the late Sir John Thompson, sailed from Portsmouth at noon to-day, and is expected to arrive at Halifax December 31st.

Mr. Bowell was born in England, but came with his father to Canada when ten years old. He is now seventy-one, a widower and a Methodist.

Discussing D. W. Hoegge & Co's application to the city council for free water and remission of taxes for ten years, the Turo News says: It is the old question of bonuses over again, and whether right or wrong on the theoretical and general principles, there is the fact facing everyone that some of the most thriving and prosperous towns in Ontario, and hundreds of places throughout the United States, owe their present healthy financial state to the bonuses granted in their midst.

The Canadian public throughout the sad events of the past few days has had an interior view of Windsor Castle, the home of the Queen of England, and their regard for Her Majesty has not been lessened by the womanly sympathy she has shown to the mourners at the bier of Canada's departed premier.

YORK COUNTY INSTITUTE.

A Large Attendance of Teachers at the Annual Meeting. Over one hundred delegates attended the York County Teachers' Institute which was held at the York County Teachers' Institute at the Model School Thursday and Friday, President B. C. Foster in the chair.

After the financial statement had been read by the Secretary, Miss E. L. Thorne, the enrollment of members was proceeded with. The President's address dealt with personality and importance of the teachers in the public school system.

At yesterday's sessions Mr. Britain read a paper on nature lessons in the new course of instruction; Philip Cox discussed birds and fish, and Dr. Bailey, John Palmer, Inspector Bridges and others spoke of these topics.

The Late Major Odell. Major Odell, of the 2nd Oxfordshire Light Infantry (52nd), whose death at Rawal Pindi has already been briefly announced in THE HERALD, is favorably mentioned in the London, G. B., Standard.

Robert Louis Stevenson, the well known novelist, is dead.

THE WOODSTOCK BRIDGE

Formally Opened for Traffic.

Hon. Mr. Emmerson's Interesting Address on the Occasion.

As noted in THE HERALD last week, the Woodstock bridge was formally opened to traffic on the 13th inst., and there were some interesting features in connection with the affair. After Hon. Mr. Emmerson had accepted the structure, on behalf of the government, from the contractor, addressing those present he said he had great pleasure in congratulating the citizens of Woodstock and the County of Carleton upon the completion and opening for use of this important and imposing structure.

He was prepared to say, and challenged criticism, that in this bridge, as people secured a structure which was unchallenged by any of its class in Canada and, from his observation and the best information he could obtain, there was not a bridge of its kind in any of the Eastern or Middle States of the neighboring Republic, if by its equal upon the continent.

For himself, and on behalf of the government, he must say that the contractor for the superstructure, represented here by Mr. Came, had performed their work well, and faithfully carried out the terms of their contract. He also desired to make public recognition of the ability and faithful attention to his business, displayed by the government engineer, Mr. Wetmore, in designing and superintending the bridge in all its details.

He had never had anything to do with the bridge, he entertained no such wish now - He felt honored that his name was connected with the structure, and that he was alike to the County and Government - If his friends in Woodstock had waited long they had not waited in vain; they were amply rewarded in the character of the bridge. As to differences in any way had existed on the question of location, the people could all now afford to forget them and unite in feeling proud in the fact that they have a bridge which stands in the fore front superior to any other in the Province.

Again complimenting Woodstock, the County of Carleton, the Province and the Government and everyone in any way connected with the bridge he now declared it formally opened and dedicated to the use of the people of the Province.

The evening a public meeting was held in honor of the opening of the bridge, and there were addresses by Mr. W. H. Miller, M. P., Hon. Mr. Emmerson, Hon. Mr. White, Hon. Mr. Dunn and Hon. Mr. Tweedie, all the gentlemen giving a kindly reception. We are sorry we have not space for the full report at hand, but make room for the address of the Hon. Chief Commissioner.

Hon. Mr. Emmerson, on being introduced by chairman Watts, was received with great applause. He congratulated the people of Woodstock and Carleton County upon the historic event which was the occasion of this splendid gathering.

There had been differences of opinion as to the location of the site, but after all that was a matter upon which men might honestly differ. The government had located the bridge where the engineer, in whom they had had reason to have confidence, reported was the only proper site.

people of Woodstock and Carleton County would be willing to give the government credit for having given them a good bridge. It was the finest in the Lower Provinces, (Applause) and there was probably no better bridge of the kind in America. (Great applause.) He had not held the office of Chief Commissioner of Public Works when the bridge was commenced, but he was in that office before and since the work on the superstructure had been commenced. He thought no reasonable person could complain of unnecessary delay in that part of the work. For the information of those present, as well as that of the general public, he

World Give Some Facts regarding the bridge as completed. The total length of the planking is 2025 feet. There are 12 spans, of which 8 average 183 feet, or a total of 1464; one span is 186 feet long; one 225 feet long; one 50 feet and one 100 feet - making the grand total, 2025 feet. The height of the centre of the long span is 31 feet, and at the centre of nine spans is 27 feet. The clear head room of all spans is 17 ft. 6 in., allowing the largest load, and a man standing on same to pass with ample clearance. The weight of the estimated material in the superstructure was 534 tons, while the actual weight was 537 tons. The cost of the superstructure was $42,000. That company's representatives at Montreal and Woodstock were W. H. Arnold and John Stulen. They had certainly done their work well - much, perhaps, to the regret of Mr. Came's company who, while they have done their work so well, why perhaps not make so much money out of the work as if the inspection had been less thorough. (Laughter.) The inspector of the timber and flooring was Albert Brewer. The price of the superstructure was $42,000 and he thought he was safe in saying that the extras on that account would not exceed one per cent of that amount. He must not forget to mention that a great deal of the credit in connection with the magnificent structure was due to the ability, skill and care of their own engineer, A. R. Wetmore. (Applause.)

Was Used in the Work. Owing to the arrangements made by the Government with W. G. Ferris & Co., professional bridge inspectors of Pittsburg, the inspection was the most thorough, perhaps, that was ever upon any bridge in America. That was a strong statement to make, but he believed it was a correct one. That company's representatives at Montreal and Woodstock were W. H. Arnold and John Stulen. They had certainly done their work well - much, perhaps, to the regret of Mr. Came's company who, while they have done their work so well, why perhaps not make so much money out of the work as if the inspection had been less thorough. (Laughter.) The inspector of the timber and flooring was Albert Brewer. The price of the superstructure was $42,000 and he thought he was safe in saying that the extras on that account would not exceed one per cent of that amount. He must not forget to mention that a great deal of the credit in connection with the magnificent structure was due to the ability, skill and care of their own engineer, A. R. Wetmore. (Applause.)

Ever Built in North America. This, too, notwithstanding some rather costly mistakes that had been made; and facts would bear him out in the declaration. As to mistakes made and errors of judgment, he could appeal to those who heard him as well as to his own experience, in connection with minor works, whether such errors and mistakes could be considered as such would occur in construction by contract or otherwise of the smallest as well as the largest erections.

For himself, and on behalf of the government, he must say that the contractor for the superstructure, represented here by Mr. Came, had performed their work well, and faithfully carried out the terms of their contract. He also desired to make public recognition of the ability and faithful attention to his business, displayed by the government engineer, Mr. Wetmore, in designing and superintending the bridge in all its details. However, it is not possible to view of circumstances that had occurred.

He had never had anything to do with the bridge, he entertained no such wish now - He felt honored that his name was connected with the structure, and that he was alike to the County and Government - If his friends in Woodstock had waited long they had not waited in vain; they were amply rewarded in the character of the bridge. As to differences in any way had existed on the question of location, the people could all now afford to forget them and unite in feeling proud in the fact that they have a bridge which stands in the fore front superior to any other in the Province.

Again complimenting Woodstock, the County of Carleton, the Province and the Government and everyone in any way connected with the bridge he now declared it formally opened and dedicated to the use of the people of the Province.

The evening a public meeting was held in honor of the opening of the bridge, and there were addresses by Mr. W. H. Miller, M. P., Hon. Mr. Emmerson, Hon. Mr. White, Hon. Mr. Dunn and Hon. Mr. Tweedie, all the gentlemen giving a kindly reception. We are sorry we have not space for the full report at hand, but make room for the address of the Hon. Chief Commissioner.

Hon. Mr. Emmerson, on being introduced by chairman Watts, was received with great applause. He congratulated the people of Woodstock and Carleton County upon the historic event which was the occasion of this splendid gathering.

There had been differences of opinion as to the location of the site, but after all that was a matter upon which men might honestly differ. The government had located the bridge where the engineer, in whom they had had reason to have confidence, reported was the only proper site.

"You must meet me at the old place on Thursday night at nine o'clock? I am yearning for another glimpse of your dear face...

"There is no proper signature, yet for a second dose Olive doubt the identity of the writer; and the letter, with its caressing words and the exciting break which it makes in the monotony of her life...

CHAPTER IX.

POSSIBLY the past month had not proved much more agreeable to Lord Rixon than it has to the girl over whose bright young life he has brought so heavy a cloud.

With a light heart and a gay mind, a man may find in a bachelor party in the wilds of Scotland all that there is of pure delight, but by the time that July takes its departure and August begins, Lord Rixon has quarrelled with every one of his fellow guests...

For Buckhurst is the earl's next-of-kin, the heir—until Lord Rixon shall become possessed of a son—of all the entailed estates, as well as of the ancient title, and the young man, who is not very wealthy, may quite possibly have a hope that in any case, whether or not he ever inherits the land and the earldom, some few of the many thousands of pounds, which Rollo can will as he pleases, may fall to his share.

But on almost the last day of that unfortunate visit, in spite of poor Algernon's prudence and care, the fatal break comes. An interview takes place in which much strong language is used on both sides, for the host is roused at last, and the cousins part not so much as a good bye being exchanged...

"But how could we be married? There would not be time," the girl answers, seizing on the first objection which occurs to her.

"Married?" he repeats. "Oh, we could manage that quite easily. Run into port anywhere, and the thing is done. That need not stand in the way."

"The lady will be wealthy," remarks Mr. McGregor. "Greatly to her own astonishment, for she has not the slightest claim on me. However, I only chose her name because I could think of nobody else, and all," with a laugh, "because, if she's like all the other women I've known, that fortune and the condition attached will prevent her from marrying a man to whom I owe a grudge, and for whom I fancy she care not a farthing."

"I thought it would do the best good to get your hands upon the reins again," the baronet tells him, as they stand by the side of the stream, admiring the beautiful creature.

"When I am settling down to the life of a country landlord, I shall sell my yacht and go in for just such a team as that," the earl declares. "At present it would be rather a bore to me than otherwise, as I'm not out for that sort of thing yet. I've only been on dry land for some six or eight weeks; but already I'm longing to have the haunts of civilization behind me and be off for a frolic with the Fairy. Wish I'd done it instead of going to that idiotic Dalgleith Lodge. By the way, what time do you dine?"

"Half-past seven. Don't dress if you feel disinclined. I'm very lax now that I've no one to keep me in order, with a tremble in the familiar voice.

Three hours later two people, a man attired in faultless evening costume, over the last scarlet beams are resting languidly upon Olive's fair, pale face as though they loved it, lighting up the wistful eyes to greater beauty, and showing the pensiveness droop that the past few weeks had given to the soft, rosy mouth.

"How can you be so cruel? she wails. "Why don't you go without me? Ah! with a sudden, wild flash of hope—"go! go! If you love me, go, go, go away! For my sake, save him."

"A very fine notion; and pray, why should I do that which would give you and your charming sweetheart to each other? No, no, Miss Maudie, it is your own decision. It is in your hands, not mine, that this fellow's fate rests."

"My poor pretty Olive," he exclaims, caressingly. "What is the matter with you, little one? What have they been doing to you?"

"Talking," is the brief reply. At which the earl laughs sarcastically. For how can Rixon gossip matter to him? "Hard words break no bones," he says more lightly.

"That is true. But they may break hearts," she responds, gravely. "Come out of the way of such a danger, dear. Do not stay to be cruelly treated. Olive, let me take you from them all. Be my companion, the star of my lonely life."

"Certainly she has never heard any other man talk as this one does. Even as she listens she thinks that Bert never asked her to be his star. His requests were couched in much more prosaic language. "I could not leave them all at home," she falters. "It would give them so."

"Not and yet they have not been kind lately?" she shrugs her shoulders. "They meant to be. Only they were vexed at what others said of me. Oh!—with an outbreak of passionate yearning for the peace of long ago—"I wish I had never seen Lord Rixon."

"And I, Olive, if that would have meant greater happiness for you," he answers, quietly. "She looks up, surprised. "Don't you believe it, dear? Don't you understand that I love you? And love is not altogether selfish, child."

"Tell me about Bert," she implores suddenly. And he notices, although she does not, whether her thoughts have flown directly to him is mentioned. The earl frowns. He understands this untoward mind better than does Olive herself. But he is all the more determined to bend it to his will.

SHE WAS A SMART GIRL.

A very bright young man in a neighboring town received at a hotel a roasting which he merited and which very properly subdued him. He was at dinner, and, wishing to let everyone know how smart he was, commenced to gush the waiter girl. He succeeded in driving several half crazy, but finally made the error of joking the wrong one. "Drive in the cow," he said, looking around for the milk picher. Taking the man by the ear the girl convulsed the guests and at the same time paralyzed the stranger by loudly remarking: "Come along, Aleck; it is easier to trot the calf to the cow than to drive the cow in."

"Practical Helen is eight years old. She came into the house with a thoughtful face and the question, "Mamma, dear, what is a stepmother?" Her mamma explained that when God took little children's mamma's to be with Him He often permitted the papa to marry other mamma's, who would take their places and be kind to the little children.

"Well, mamma, if God were to take you from me, I should like to marry Aunt Sally and save us children the trouble of getting acquainted with a stranger."

"FOR OVER FIFTY YEARS." Mrs. WISLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used by millions of mothers for their children when teething. It disturbs at night and broken of your rest by a sick child crying with pain of Cutting Teeth, sends it out and gets a bottle of "Mrs. Wislow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething. It will relieve the poor little sufferer. Be sure and get the genuine. There is no mistake about it. It cures Diarrhoea, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, soothes Wind Colic, softens the Gums and reduces Inflammation. It is pleasant to the taste. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Wislow's Soothing Syrup."

"ATE ITS MATE." She—Is this a tender turkey? Dealer—Yes. She—How do you know? You have never eaten it. Dealer—That's so. That's so. But I ate the mate to him five or six years ago, and that was his end.

"A BOON TO HORSEMEN.—One bottle of English Spavin Liniment completely removed a curb from my horse. I take pleasure in recommending the remedy, as it acts with mysterious promptness in the removal of hores of hard, soft or caloused lumps, blood spavin, splints, curbs, swellings, stifles and sprains. GEORGE ROBB, Farmer, Markham, Ont. Sold by W. Carten and Alonzo Staples.

"AT THE THEATRE." She—Would you not like to go out and see a play? He—Why, no; I would not think of it. She—But, really, I shan't object in the least. He—How absurd! How can I want to see a play? She—Well, to tell the truth, I want to see a man myself, and I know he won't come over while you are here.

If too rapid eating causes dyspepsia, and with many a pang, until they are able to get to the bottom of the matter, which has, in other days, furnished them with a seat. Twilight is falling so fast, that the two people towards whom the earl has directed her attention, have hitherto quite escaped her notice. As she glances at them, Olive recognizes in one, the first step in effecting a cure is to eat slowly. The second and most important is to take a course of Hawker's nerve and stomachic tonic, which aids the process of digestion, invigorates the stomach, relieves the acidity of the blood, relieves brain fatigue, and makes weak nerves strong.

"Rheumatism Cured in a Day.—South American Rheumatism Cure for Rheumatism and Neuralgia radically cures in 1 to 3 days. Its action upon the system is remarkable and mysterious. It cures at once the cause, and the disease immediately disappears. The first dose greatly benefits, 75 cents. For sale by W. Carten and Alonzo Staples.

"ENOUGH SAID." Woman Lawyer—What is your age? Woman Witness—I was born in the same year as yourself. Woman Lawyer—Witness excused.
