CHAPTER XIII.

"WHO IS ST ANGE?"

My dear Amber, you are in a very critical position. From just where you stand you can either make yourself a happy and honoured woman or you can wreck two lives.

I think it is a shame! For once you must listen to me. It is your vanity as much as your love that is wounded. You know when you married Robert how devoted he was to the science of medicine. You said that you were proud of his reputation and loved him for it. He believed you and has acted upon your words.

People say things before they are married they do not really mean. Every one does. I thought I could make Robert devote himself entirely to me.

And give up his professional altogether? No—not exactly that. I do not mind him attending to his patients. They pay him for his time.

I am afraid you are selfish, Amber. Suppose he said to you: "I am quite willing you should have a splendid home and even occasionally entertain your friends in it, but I am not willing to have you go to the houses and entertainments of other people. You are my wife, and you ought to be satisfied with my society."

That is a different thing. Not at all. The private pleasure of your home does not satisfy you. You wish also to exhibit your husband, your beauty and your rich costumes in other houses. The doctor's patients do not satisfy his thirst for medical knowledge. He wishes to investigate, to learn, to show himself in unknown departments of his profession. You ought to give as well as take a certain amount of freedom. If you will keep a man at your side, give him full liberty to room. He will not go to your influence. 'Tis so easy to give good advice. And then there is this Doctor St. Ange? 'Yes—I see. Who is Doctor St. Ange? 'He says he comes from New Orleans. He is Robert's assistant in surgical and laboratory work. Do you like him? 'I think not. Why is he here? 'He comes to see if I require anything; to escort me to any entertainment; to drive or sail with me; to take Will's place, as Robert says. He is not always here, but a three weeks' vacation in Newport is promised him, so I thought it best to have you at my side. The man is undoubtedly handsome; and people imagine things and then tell their own imaginations. 'Charity think not evil, Amber. 'The world thinks nothing else but evil. And we have to live in the world. One thing I notice about St. Ange—he gets such queer-looking letters. I mean unkind, careless letters, on poor paper. I wonder who his friends are. 'They may be dunning letters. I believe it is considered vulgar not to be in debt. 'Yes—and no. They are in a woman's writing. Robert says we have nothing to do with his letters; but I am sure that the letters a man receives are quite as significant of his real character as those he writes. However, he is very handsome and elegant and a great favourite wherever he has been introduced. 'It is nearly midnight, also; and the day being finished, there is no medicine for it. To-morrow will bring it own opportunities.

CHAPTER XIV. "If Will Were Only Here!"

To love and at the same time to be wise, is scarcely granted even to a god. —Dante's Divine Comedy. Live, thou knowest, is full of jealousy. —Shakespeare. How poor are they that have not patience! —Shakespeare. Everything has a good and a bad side, and Clara's visit was no exception to this general rule. It was a good thing, inasmuch as it placed the shield of impenetrable propriety between Ambrosia and a world which is nothing if not vigilantly censorious. It was a bad thing, inasmuch as it gave Robert's conscience a comfortable excuse for longer delays in New York than he might otherwise have taken.

In the meantime, St. Ange was making for himself an enviable position. "Doctor Carter's assistant," he began with a professional respect, which naturally implied a certain social standing, and made an irrefragable foundation for the personal influence of the young man. This was soon very pronounced. The girls adored his beauty and grace, his skill in all games, in music and in dancing. And he had the faculty of making each separate girl believe herself to be the sole object of his adoration. Certainly Dr. St. Ange was "the favourite" of the season; and Amber watched his tactics and his successes with an interest singularly compounded of complaisance and contempt.

She could no longer complain of the character of his letters, which were now a numerous assortment of well-timed notes, delicately monogrammed and sealed with pretty devices. It was a slight to watch the reception of these perfumed precursors of dances, dinners and flirtations, to watch his ruthless-looking brows slowly cutting open the dainty envelopes with a silver paper-knife; his smiles full of the false conceit; his little shrugs and deprecations; his soft sighs of relief and the air of superior satisfaction with which he returned to his breakfast when the trial was over.

But, in spite of his many triumphs, he knew that he had aided in interesting Ambrosia, and for this reason they were paltry in his sight. Sometimes he thought she actually detested him. At other times, his vanity led him to believe that her heart was really his, that she was enduring a great struggle, but would finally lose the battle. This idea, nursed by his inordinate self-estimation and his daily little unavoidable circumstance toward possession of him. He permitted it, consciously enough, to color all his actions; and in this undefined way Newport society receives the impression that Doctor Carter and his wife were not sympathetic if Clara had not been so constant, with her step-daughter, it would probably have received the next impression that Doctor St. Ange and Mrs. Carter were sympathetic.

There could have been no falsehood. But Ambrosia was not happy and she daily grew more weary of the monotony of a life of so-called "pleasure." If her husband had been constantly with her, she might have disagreed with him and felt him often to be tiresome and unkind; but life would have had a zest and saved it from being a mere waiting for a god. One morning, a feeling of awe when she remembered how seldom and how short had been his late visits.

And society, even in its best phase had not turned out to be the satisfactory thing she had anticipated. There were many women in it willing to sacrifice far more than she was, and consequently she gave too much and got hardly any of the returns desired. She thought of her own handsome house and the delightful days and evenings she had spent in it. She thought of her husband's nobility of person and mind, and set over against his image that of St. Ange, as she had just seen him, sighing and sipping his coffee and speaking softly with a delicious self-content of "my own fatal beauty."

Suddenly she resolved to return to New York. She wanted to see her husband. "And I will tell Robert," she thought, "that Clara wants to go back to Mayberry, and that I will tell him that I want my home—yes, that I want to be with him. After all there is no company like Robert's. Even when he is thinking and silent what quick, loving glances, he has given me!" Clara approved her resolution. "You must resign this house in two weeks," she said, "and two weeks may be of the greatest importance. So much can be lost or gained in two weeks. Go back to New York, and I will attend to all that is to be packed and put in order." So Ambrosia kissed her friend and left Newport, being more willing to do so than she had been glad and happy to come to it. She was delighted to see her own house, but its desolate appearance reproached her. It was September, and the housekeeper ought to have had it opened and at least partially in order. She rang the bell with some anger, and was soon confronted with her belated servant. She fancied she was "insolently indifferent." She was made to feel that her unlooked-for return before the time specified was an intrusion. And though Robert was delighted at this intrusion, she thought he was not angry enough in her anger, that he deprecated any great displeasure and was a trifle annoyed at Ambrosia's complaints. "Mrs. Ryan did not expect you for two weeks, my dear," he said. "You must make some allowance. Let us forget Mrs. Ryan and the neglected house. You must have some new songs or some news that I should like to hear. What are they doing now in Newport?" "Chiefly admiring your favourite St. Ange."

"Is that really so? And how does he take the adulation?" "He laments with a delightful conceit his unintentional fascination and his 'too fatal beauty.'"

The EVENING TELEGRAM.

The advertiser who puts his Advt. in the EVENING TELEGRAM never complains of results. It is read and believed by the people who buy goods. That is one reason why the TELEGRAM'S advertising columns Carry More Advertising Than Any Other Newspaper in Newfoundland.

That fact "speaks for itself," and it is not our intention just now to emphasize it further. What we want to do is to bring home to the business men (if there are any who have not availed of our columns in the past) the advantage to be gained through a liberal use of the TELEGRAM, in bringing before the people what they want the public—the great buying public—most to know:

The Kind of Goods They Have To Sell, the Quality of the Goods, Prices, &c.

If that is what the shopkeeper wants the public to learn, the TELEGRAM is the right medium through which it can be conveyed, because—

1st. It has the largest circulation, and

2nd. Consequently it is the most widely-read newspaper in Newfoundland;

3rd. Naturally, then, it must be THE BEST ADVERTISING MEDIUM in Newfoundland;

4th. Therefore, the advertiser has everything to gain, and nothing to lose, by availing of the services of the EVENING TELEGRAM during 1911.

The Evening Chit-Chat

Ruth Cameron

Scene, a lawyer's office. This four in the afternoon. Overworked young lawyer sits at his desk, leaning his head on his hand, his eyes closed. Everybody else gone home. Phone rings. Overworked young lawyer reaches out, draws phone toward him and takes off the receiver.

O. Y. L.: "Hello."
Voice at phone: "Hello, is this 1255?"
O. Y. L.: "Yes, who is it?"
V. A. P.: "Don't you recognize my voice?"
O. Y. L.: "No, I don't. Hold on, is it Weeks? No? Then I'm afraid I don't get you."
V. A. P.: "Well, it's no wonder. You never heard me speak before. But you've heard of me. This is St. Valentine."
O. Y. L.: "Is that so? Howdido, St. Valentine. I'm very much honored to hear from you. It's your birthday today, isn't it? Congratulations, old man. Anything special I can do for you?"
V. A. P.: "Yes, there is. That's why I called you up. You haven't done a thing to celebrate my birthday and I want you to."
O. Y. L.: "Now that's too bad. I'll sure do something right off. Just what would you suggest?"
V. A. P.: "I want you to go out and buy a valentine for some youngster. You haven't done that for some years, you know."
O. Y. L.: "Say, St. Valentine, that's a great idea. I'll do it at once. I wish I'd thought of it myself, but I've been so darned busy—you know how it is."
V. A. P.: "Yes, I know. I've been some busy myself rounding up people like you and reminding them that it's my birthday. Kind of embarrassing work, too. And say, if it's just as convenient to you, young man, I wish you'd send that valentine to some child who won't get a dozen others. I've heard a great deal of talk lately about my old friend Santa's getting to be a respecter of persons. Someone said that he was getting so tony that he'd leave a dozen toys for baby in the brown stone house, and just because the chimney didn't look stylish enough, he'd leave the little girl in the tenement to cry her eyes out Christmas morning because there wasn't anything but holes in her stockings. Now I don't want anything like that said about me."

O. Y. L.: "That's right, St. Valentine. I'll remember. Let me see. How would the little girl that brings my wash back to me do?"
V. A. P.: "Fine, young man, fine. I see Bradcourt was more than right."
O. Y. L.: "Who's Bradcourt? Never heard of him."
V. A. P.: "Oh, don't you know about him? Why, Bradcourt's where your rating is kept—what asset of kindness and good will and so forth you have. I consulted him before I started telephoning. I didn't want to waste time calling up anyone who was insolvent, you know. And I found you stood well. A good deal of thoughtfulness was your only heavy liability. Well, so long. I have spent about three times as long as I should with you, but it's such a pleasure to talk to anyone who gets my ideas so readily. What's that? Where did I say I was calling from? I didn't."
Click, bzzzzz—phone goes crazy.
O. Y. L.: "Hello, hello—what's the trouble? Jiggles the phone up and down wildly."
Operator's Voice: "Number?"
O. Y. L.: "I don't want any number. I want the man I was talking with."
Operator's Voice (in sweet singsong): "There is no one on the line now. I will call you if anybody waits you."
O. Y. L. thoughtfully hangs up the receiver rubs his eyes, smiles sheepishly and then gets up and and puts on his hat and coat and goes down the street.

Women's Secrets

There is one man in the United States who has perhaps heard more women's secrets than any other man in the country. These secrets are not secrets of guilt or shame, but the secrets of suffering, and they have been confided to Dr. R. V. Pierce in the hope and expectation of advice and help. That few of these women have been disappointed in their expectations is proved by the fact that ninety-eight per cent. of all women treated by Dr. Pierce have been absolutely and altogether cured. Such a record would be remarkable if the cases treated were numbered by hundreds only. But when that record applies to the treatment of more than half-a-million women, in a practice of over 40 years, it is phenomenal, and entitles Dr. Pierce to the gratitude accorded him by women, as the first of specialists in the treatment of women's diseases.

Every sick woman may consult Dr. Pierce by letter, absolutely without charge. All replies are mailed, sealed in perfectly plain envelopes, without any printing or advertising whatever, upon them. Write without fear as without fee, to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, Frest, Buffalo, N. Y.

DR. PIERCE'S FAVORITE PRESCRIPTION
Makes Weak Women Strong,
Sick Women Well.

Household Notes.

- An old toothbrush or nailbrush is excellent for cleaning silver, but the final polishing should be done with chamolis skin.
- Meat loaf of chopped veal or beef can be made more moist if three or four tablespoonsful of cream are added just before baking.
- Washing soda should not be used upon china, as it will take off the gilt. Try clear hot water, but not hot enough to crack the china.
- Ten stale macaroons, mixed with stiffly whipped cream and sprinkled with pistachio nuts, makes an easily improvised dessert.
- Combs will soon warp and break if washed with water. They should be cleaned with a good, stiff, dry tooth-brush or nailbrush.
- A few drops of paraffin added to the shoe blacking will impart a good polish to damp shoes and also help to preserve the leather.
- Few skins can stand glycerine, and it should never be used without being diluted. Otherwise the skin will become dry and parched.
- A variety may be secured by baking potatoes with a slice of bacon inside. The bacon is put into a hole made by an apple corer.
- A French dainty possible from canned goods is sliced French goose liver, served on lettuce, with either French dressing or mayonnaise.
- When running dates, figs or raisins through the food chopper add a few drops of lemon juice to prevent the fruit from clogging the chopper.
- To make a tough steak tender, rub it on both sides with vinegar and olive oil, thoroughly mixed, and allow it to stand for two hours before cooking.
- If table silver is placed in hot soapsuds immediately after being used, and dried with a soft, clean cloth, much of the work of polishing will be saved.

Glasgow Engines for French Railway

Glasgow, Feb. 4.—An order for tenders for the French State Railways has been secured by the North British Locomotive Company, Glasgow. The engines are to be constructed after the type of those in use on the Highland Railway, and are to be erected at the Hyde Park and Atlas Works of the Company. This is the first order for locomotives that has come to Scotland for many years for the French railways. Late-ly the locomotive works have been scarce of orders, but now they will go on full time.

For Men Ayer's Hair Vigor is for men, too. It is a splendid hair-dressing. It is refreshing, cooling; and it keeps the scalp clean and healthy. It never changes the color of the hair, not in the least. Ask your doctor. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Seats of Sovereigns.

The Coronation Chair at Westminster is the Most Interesting.

We often hear people talk about "the King upon his throne," but does it ever occur to us to ask "Which throne?" There are five in London alone; so this question is not so unnecessary as might at first appear.

The most magnificent throne of the British Sovereigns is that at Windsor Castle. This throne was presented to Queen Victoria by an Indian maharajah, and is of carved ivory inlaid with various jewels.

The throne from which the King opens, prorogues, and dissolves Parliament, is made of oak, and has a gilded canopy. It occupies a raised position in the House of Lords.

There are three thrones in the London palaces, that in Buckingham Palace being especially remarkable for the sumptuous dais on which it stands.

But of all the thrones, or coronation chair, in Westminster Abbey, is by far the most interesting. It is solidly put together, and is made of oak. Placed under the seat is the famous Coronation Stone of Stone, at which town generations upon generations of Scottish kings were crowned before the union of Scotland and England on the accession of James I. This is a large slab of sandstone and, according to the old Scottish legend it is the identical stone upon which Jacob laid his head when he dreamed of the angels and the ladder to heaven at Bethel, and which he afterwards anointed with oil.

In striking contrast to the costly throne at Windsor Castle is the throne of the Dutch kings at the Hague. It is a comparatively simple piece of furniture—a kind of glorified armchair with drapery. The throne in Amsterdam is more majestic. Over the seat is a crown, supported by ornamental lions studded with jewels. The canopy of this throne is exceptionally fine.

The Czar of Russia and the Sultan of Turkey each have a large number of thrones. But it is doubtful if there exists in the whole world one superior to the silver throne of the German Emperor in Berlin. This magnificent piece of workmanship has an enormous shield, also of silver, over the seat, and the canopy is profusely decorated with eagles and crowns.

Anti-Fashion League.

An anti-fashion league has just been started in New York with the highly praiseworthy object of combating the spread of the ridiculous fashions and crazes adopted by the very rich among less well-to-do people, says M. A. P.

There is certainly plenty of work for such an organization to do here. Women who can with difficulty afford to spend as much on their dress, but yet insist on wearing hobble skirts, yards of hat, gloves up to their shoulders, and similar absurdities—made fashionable for a moment by women who can afford to spend a thousand a year with their modest and milliners—ought to be objects of fashion league.

Then there are various fashionable cuts, the spread of which an anti-fashion league would be doing good work by combating. For example, the cut of expensive pets in the way of cats, dogs, mice, and lizards of rare type and breed is all very well for women who can afford to pay five hundred pounds for such a pet without missing the money, but when Mrs. Brown of Balham starts imitating their example by spending twenty or thirty pounds on some wretched animal probably not worth as many shillings, she badly needs some plain words of advice from an anti-fashion league.

Indigestion & Dyspepsia

In all its Forms can be Cured.

It is quite a daily occurrence to hear persons say: "Oh, what a feeling of distress I have after meals, fullness of the stomach, heaviness and headache, I feel too tired to do anything, I have no heart to exert myself and at times I care for nothing. I often have a pain in the pit of my stomach, no appetite, my heart beats rapidly on the slightest exertion. I feel just as tired when rising in the morning as when retiring to bed. My sleep is often disturbed, and I often awake with a sense of suffocation and a difficulty of again going to sleep. I have to be careful of what I eat, and my life seems a veritable burden.

Now, it seems a shame and a pity for persons to be suffering like that when it is in their power to get cured by taking a Bottle of Dr. Stafford's Prescription A. A sure cure for persons afflicted with stomach troubles. It can be obtained at

LUCKY.

"I'm certainly a lucky man."

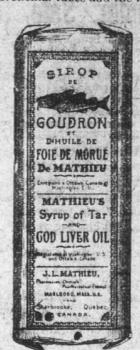

"How so?"

"I had on my good clothes yesterday morning when my wife made her collection for the rummage sale. She couldn't give any but old stuff away."

CHRONIC BRONCHITIS

Cannot be cured by ordinary soothing syrups. The disease must be attacked at the root to eradicate the irritation of the lungs, heal the wounds and strengthen the respiratory organs. The composition of MATHIEU'S SYRUP of Tar and Cod Liver Oil and other Medicinal Extracts marks it amongst all other remedies as the true specific for the diseases of the throat, the bronchial tubes and the lungs. Here are a few conclusive proofs:

A Remarkable Test!

Locally Made By Messrs. W. & G. RENDELL.

To test Solignum as a preservative for Wood against the attacks of Worms, we tried a piece of 2 x 4 Spruce about two feet in length, by painting one-third with Solignum, leaving the balance clear wood, this was suspended by a wire through the centre, in the water about one foot from the bottom, immediately over a pile of stones the remains of a sunken wharf (which is the place where our Wharf Shores are eaten off first) for Three Months. On taking it up at the end of that time we found some half-dozen small holes only a very short distance in the clear part of the wood, which shows the liquid had penetrated through the whole piece and the worms had hardly begun boring before coming in contact with it.

Last year as a test of some brands of Copper Paint we handle, we had a similar piece of wood treated at both ends, leaving the centre third clear; this was in exactly the same place as the piece for the Solignum test for Three Months and Three Days, when taken up the painted ends were perfect but the centre was riddled with worm holes.

Both these pieces of wood are to be seen at our Office by those interested in the preservation of Wharf Piles or any other wood work.

The Government's Fishery Agreement.

In another column of this paper will be found a synopsis of Sir Robert Bond's scathing criticism, in the House of Assembly yesterday, of the Agreement entered into by the Premier, Sir Edward Morris, with two fish merchants of Portland, Maine, and which has been brought down to the House for ratification. The Government organ, the Evening Chronicle, is our authority for saying that Sir Edward arranged this Agreement. As Sir Robert Bond said, and abundantly demonstrated, the agreement is a very remarkable one, and it is difficult to believe that an intelligent body of men will approve and ratify it. The Agreement destroys the effect of the Bait Act and annuls in a large degree the Hague Award. It creates practically a monopoly in the company of the herring fishery, bait traffic, fish canning business, and cold storage for the next fifteen years by subvention and remuneration of duties. It grants a subsidy of one and a half per cent. annually, makes the Colony liable to an unlimited amount for any loss the company may sustain, and guarantees five per cent. on capital invested in the cold storage plant. It gives the American company enormous advantages over every man connected with fish industries in this country. It is time for the public to awaken out of their sleep of indifference and look to the conduct of public affairs.

St. Andrew's Concert.

The following programme was rendered at the concert held in the Presbyterian Hall last night under the auspices of the Ladies' Guild: Piano solo, Miss Tait; vocal solo, Miss Gibb; violin solo, Mrs. A. Hall; vocal solo, Mr. Foster; recitation, Miss Ayre; vocal solo, Miss Strang. The guessing competition that followed was won by Miss Blair. The poetry contest afforded much amusement. Miss E. Templeton was the winner. Another concert will be given in March.

Feldians Win.

The Feldians beat St. Bon's by a score of 8 to 1 at the inter-collegiate match yesterday. Four goals were scored by them in the first half. Winter sending in 3 and Jerrett 1, while the one goal of the St. Bon's team was got by Knight. In the second half Knight was wounded over the eye and had to leave the ice. The Feldians dropped Rendell to make the sides equal. Towards the close of the full time Maxwell got two goals and Winter and Shaw one each, making a total of 8 for the Feldians.

Damages Cost $200.

The fire which occurred at Mr. T. Godden's residence, yesterday afternoon, caused damage to the house and furniture to the extent of $200. The fire ate its way up between the plastering from the basement to the dining and drawing rooms and parlor, and the furniture was damaged by smoke and water. Had the outbreak occurred late at night when the family slumbered it might have been attended with fatal results.

Squandered the Money.

Yesterday a poor woman who has a heavy family, and whose husband recently went to sea, sent her son, 11 years old, with his father's allowance note to get a quarter ton of coal which was badly needed at home. The lad did so, but returning later said he had lost the money which he had received after paying for the fuel. This amounted to over $10. Later it was discovered that the boy had lied, and that he had not lost the money but had spent it foolishly in cab driving, buying candy, etc. It is believed that the lad still retains some of the cash, and the police will try to get it from him. His mother has a heavy family and needed the money badly for household expenses.

Wanderers May Come.

The gentlemen who are trying to get a Provincial team of hockeyists to come here and play St. John's have been unable to induce the Crescents to come along, and they will not be on the Florida as expected. An effort will now be made to get the Halifax Wanderers here, and should they come a series of interesting hockey matches will result.

The Bruce is still jammed 2 1/2 miles off Low Point.

"An Achievement."

The s.s. Bruce is within three miles of Low Point. The wind is blowing a gale on the land the past three or four days and the ice is packed tight in on the Sydney shore, some of it over 10 feet thick. Capt. Barbour and three of his crew left the Bruce yesterday and walked ashore. The Daily News says of the incident this morning:

"The achievement of Capt. Barbour and his men is only another instance of what the sealer can do, who feels as much at home on the ice as he does on the land."

Stole Money and Watch

A few days ago at Carbonara, a young girl who was in the service of Mr. Murphy, of that place, left him and took a ticket for St. John's where her friends reside. After she had left the house the man found that the sum of $10 had been stolen from him, and the case was reported to the police, the outcome being that the girl was arrested at the railway station. She admitted then taking the $10 and also said she had stolen a gold watch owned by Mrs. Murphy and some other property which she found in her master's household. She was tried at Harbor Grace before Magistrate Penney, and sentenced to 6 weeks imprisonment.

MINARD'S LINIMENT Co., Limited.
Some time ago I had a bad attack of Quinsy which laid me up for two weeks and cost a lot of money.

Finding the lump again forming in my throat, I bathed freely with MINARD'S LINIMENT, and saturating a cloth with the liniment left it on all night.

Next morning the swelling was gone and I attributed the warding off of an attack of Quinsy to the free use of MINARD'S LINIMENT.

Took Fourteen Spoons from Stomach.

Removed by operation and patient is well again.

Vienna, Feb. 4.—A surgical operation by which 2 1/2 pounds of metal were taken from the patient, was performed here at the Franz Joseph Hospital by Professor Latham on a man, of 40, named Tacha. He had been confined in a public lunatic asylum, where, about three months ago, he secretly abstracted about fourteen iron spoons and swallowed them. This strange nourishment at first caused him no annoyance. The spoons were missed, but nobody suspected their whereabouts.

Although Tacha had sound lungs, he began spitting blood, and was cross-questioned, until at last he confessed that he had swallowed the iron spoons. He was taken to hospital and an application of the Roentgen rays soon showed the truth of his assertion. An operation was unavoidable, and the three surgeons who carried it through were completely successful. A small opening was made in the stomach, where the intestine was laid bare for the purpose, and one by one the large spoons were extracted. They weighed altogether 2 1/2 pounds. The patient's condition is satisfactory, and he will soon be able to be discharged from the hospital.

A dry shampoo of cornmeal is very cleansing if properly done. The head should not be allowed to get too close to the scalp, and should be brushed out with a gentle, lifting stroke.

So I said to straight away.

"First thing, then," said "we must get all that fat off our case. You're nothing but a big mass of flesh" for Jimson that."

Training in water tonight was in this respect Harbottle was a thing in diabolical severity. He was round the next day and had me out of bed and bath with the maximum of joy. While I was rubbing my ing form he made himself a hot coffee and two rounds of toast.

He only wished he was going the glory and prizes that was to my share. At that moment I wished myself, glory is all very well at six o'clock in the morning, but buttered toast for preference.

We did a bit of double-bait when we got back. That is, I did it while Jimson sat in the chair and smoked my cigars.

That I bore up, I thought that ter of all the prizes in water would win me back to my future.

After a hearty breakfast, enough for a child of one's stairs, intending to take a steam dream of gargantuan proportions, he had me out of it. The bit of rowing to be done. Nothing like rowing for me.

Richard of Dulham Gets Rid of His Superfluity of Area.

"There's only one way of winning prizes," Jimson said, when I mentioned the forthcoming Dulham Sports. "You must train properly. Now, if you'd like me to get you into condition, Harbottle, say the word, and we'll simply sweep the board. All you have to do is to put yourself into my hands."

I was not averse to this. Jimson's hands are not beautiful, but if well washed they are no worse than other people's. And I do hanker after a few of these silver cups and goblets. Now, last season, I very nearly carried off a set of salt spoons. If only an earthquake, or some pestilence had wiped out the six men in front of me, I should have romped home an easy winner. So I said the word straight away.

"First thing then," said Jimson, "we must get all that fat off your carcass. You're nothing but a quivering mass of flesh! But I'll soon alter that."

"This struck me as being a trifle exaggerated, seeing that I turn the scale at eight stone, and cast a shadow like a bean stick. But I suppose the trainer knows. At any rate, Jimson put me on toast and water at once, and told Miriam to clear the sideboard ready for the prizes.

Training is rather tough work. And in this respect Jimson is the last thing in diabolical severity. He was round the next morning, and had me out of bed and into a cold bath with the maximum of savage force. While I was robbing my shivering form he made himself a pot of hot coffee and two rounds of buttered toast.

"Haven't touch this stuff yourself, old man!" he said. "But you can have a cup of warm water before we get off for that five mile walk." I raised a feeble query as to whether it was proper training to go out on an empty stomach. He said I wasn't going on my stomach, but on my feet, and it was his method of training. Most other trainers were fools.

He only wished he was going to get the glory and prizes that would fall to my share.

At that moment I wished he was myself. Glory is all very well, but at six o'clock in the morning give me buttered toast for preference.

We did a bit of dumb-bell exercise when we got back. That is to say, I did it while Jimson sat in the armchair and smoked my cigars.

The great thing in training is to get rid of all superfluous flesh. I looked like doing this easily. When the main deck or central platform of your breakfast is one bloater's roe, you aren't going to pile up fatty tissue in any great hurry. Jimson said that before he had finished he would have me in the pink of condition, with muscles like whipcord. My own opinion was that long before then he'd have me in the pale blueeness of emaciation, and the local hospital.

But I bore up. Doubtless the glitter of all the prizes in our front room would win me back to a robust future.

After a hearty breakfast, just big enough for a child of four, I crept upstairs, intending to take a snooze, and dream of gargantuan banquets. But he had me out of it. There was a bit of rowing to be done, he said. Nothing like rowing for toughening the muscles. We should only do a sharp spurt of a couple of miles or so at a time.

This turned out to be quite correct, as the riverside hotels Dulham way are just about two miles apart. I did the sharp spurt, Jimson reclining on the cushions, and waking up just in time to prevent our being run down by various craft. At each stop a nip of soda and a water biscuit would find its way into my hands, while my friend partook of a foaming flagon and miscellaneous wads of meat pie and sandwich.

"I'm not a hearty eater, as a rule, Harbottle," he would say, as he polished off a pie in two bites. "By nature I'm abstemious. But I must keep up my strength if I'm to see you through. And I mean to do it, too, it's you I'm thinking of, not myself."

I begged him to go home early that evening and get a good night's rest, so that he didn't fall in for brain fever on my account. He said he couldn't do that as he'd arranged with the Mugford middle-weight champion to come over and box me a few rounds.

"Three rounds with a man who knows where to 'hit you,'" he said, "will do more good than all the rest of the training put together."

He didn't say whom it was going to do good to. But the Mugford "m.w." knew where to hit all right. I was there every time. I think I tapped him once. But you don't get the same hapetus from the shoulder with toast and water as you do with beef-steak. If I'd been in my usual vigorous condition, I'd have sent him home in a sack. Instead of which he left me a quivering heap of contusion on the hearthrug.

Jimson said he was quite satisfied. If ever he goes in training for sports himself, he says the first thing he'll do will be to get the Mugford "m.w." over for a few rounds. All I hope is that I'm present at the time, so that I can put a horse-shoe in his opponent's glove for luck!

He brought another friend over on the next day to give me a little exercise in wrestling. This person was about my own weight, and I privately decided to twist his vertebrae into a few knots, and let him sue Jimson for damages. It happened, however, that the fellow had an Eastern strain in his blood, and after he'd tied me up like a Chinese puzzle, and forgotten the answer for half an hour, I began to have more respect for him.

This increased as he went on. He was helping Jimson to get me in training all right. So earnest he was about it, too, that I hadn't the heart to put a three-quarter Clubb lock on him and break his back. Only he wasn't so considerate himself. It was as plain as a curran bun to me that he was trying to bring about my Waterloo. So after a couple more half-peltons I determined to get Trafalgar square with him, and I hopped over to that bazaar of mine, and yanked out a little bulldog barker I kept there, I gave him two minutes to get out of the front gate.

Jimson was hurt. Not bodily, but morally. "I'm sorry you take it like that, old man," he said coldly. "I thought you were a sportsman."

"Delighted to hear it, old friend," I murmured. "For the moment I imagined you took my name to be Muggins. As an all-round athlete I am anxious to shine in our local fete; but if I've got to have my diaphragm trepanned in order to win a nickel-plated toast-rack, I would fair decline the honour. So sorry! You can put me down as a non-starter."

Miriam was disappointed. She had been down to view the prizes, and she found they'd just match the silver fringe on our glass globes. "Of course, I couldn't resist that. Any reference to Geoffrey de Harbottle and his mail-clad associates always puts me on my mettle. cold baths and more dumb-bells, and more boxing and more wrestling. The only thing there wasn't more of was something to eat. But this didn't worry Jimson. The more my shadow whittled down the better he liked it. I could see what it was. By-and-by he would work off that old joke on a local reporter, and say an empty cab drove up, and Richard Harbottle got out, thus securing a reputation for wit at my expense.

When I became picturesque enough I started a little sprinting in the streets. The get-up is nice and airy—a light woollen vest, a pair of running slippers, socks and shoes, are all you need. You plug through the town in this attire, just when the streets are nice and full, followed by a fat, overfed trainer on a bicycle, and a running chorus of ribald wit.

"'Allo, anuyer Marafon!" "There's legs!" "Hi, gov'nor, yer socks is comin' dahn!"

After a week of this Jimson threw up the sponge, and said I was fit. I was glad of this, because if he hadn't thrown it up I should have done so.

He said all I had to do was to enter for every item on the programme and romp home in the lot. A sort of walk-over, in fact. Only the romping wasn't for me, as it happened. I was a masterpiece until the evening before the sports, and instead of romping then, I went home in a cab, and Miriam telephoned for three doctors. My own opinion is that Jimson overtrained me. If it wasn't that, I must have caught cold between the railway station and the committee-rooms. My doctor said it was a case of covetus multifarvus, aggravated by brain strain and low company. He took me off toast and put me on tripe.

In one sense that breakdown was fortunate. Miriam's friend's hus-

Rescued Men Buried 13 Days in Pit.

The two men, Groult and Bellenger, who have been buried in a marble pit near Rouen for nearly thirteen days, have been rescued. The squad of engineer soldiers who had been working night and day, driving a shaft parallel to the one which collapsed, reached the imprisoned men at one o'clock in the morning.

Bellenger was taken out first and hurried on a stretcher to the main. Groult was then brought to the surface. They were both in fairly good health and spirits. Of the food let down to them they had still two ten-pound loaves of bread. Four candles remained, and they had never been in darkness. They had suffered chiefly from thirst and cold as the cider lowered down to them had given out some days ago. They had to quench their thirst with the few drops of water which trickled through the marble.

In order to keep themselves warm they had started to dig their way through the marble and had taken out thirty cubic metres. Unfortunately they had dug in the opposite direction to that from which assistance was coming, so that their efforts did not aid their rescuers. They had completely lost count of time. They were of opinion they had only been a week under ground while in reality it was nearly thirteen. — Temps, Paris.

How the Mormons Get Converts.

At the present time Liverpool is very much exercised at the activity of the Mormons in that city. They have made many converts, especially among women, but these ladies should be warned that the officials of the United States often refuse to admit Mormon converts.

It may not be generally known that the Mormons have been established in England for the past eighty years or so, and that they maintain a regular staff of missionaries over here. During that time they are said to have converted some 125,000 Britons to the faith.

Their headquarters in London are at Tottenham, where they acquired the Markfield Hotel some three years ago. There are pretty well a thousand of the sect in London alone.

There are about forty missionaries in London, working by house-to-house visitation, and as many as fifty converts have been baptised at one time. These baptisms have taken place in different towns, the public baths usually being called into use.

House to house visits are made, tracts being left at first, and afterwards interviews are solicited. A year or two ago it was announced that 27,856 of these calls were made in six months.

The gentleman who gave these figures also stated that there were 200 tract distributors in the United Kingdom, who disposed of 2,000,000 leaflets in the twelve months, and that one steamboat company received £12,000 in fares every year, thanks to the journeys of Mormon missionaries and converts.

The Elders at Utah and other places call for volunteers to work in God's Vineyard, and young men respond to the "call," maintaining themselves during their travels on their own private means.

Just Due.

The town of Waterloo and Berlin, Ont., are in much the same relative position as are the twin cities of North Alberta, Edmonton and Strathcona, or the twin ports at the head of Lake Superior, Port Arthur and Fort William.

There's some talk of Waterloo and Berlin amalgamating, and Charlie Mills, the well-known merchant and politician of Berlin, says that Waterloo's attitude concerning the proposed union is like that of a Scotch girl of whom he heard. A man whom she had known only a short time asked the Scotch girl to marry him, and she said: "I'll marry you, but I'll take a bit o' wooing first."

What Carlyle Wrote of Tennyson

Tennyson in his prime was thus described by Thomas Carlyle to Ralph Waldo Emerson on Aug. 5, 1844: "One of the finest looking men in the world. A great shock of rough, dusky dark hair; bright, laughing, hazel eyes; massive aquiline face—most massive; yet most delicate; of sallow brown complexion almost Indian looking; clothes cynically loose, free and easy; smokes infinite tobacco. His voice is musically metallic, fit for loud laughter and piercing wail and all that may lie between; speech and speculation free and plentiful. I do not meet in these late decades such company over a pipe."

Sir Robert Bond's Speech ON THE COLD STORAGE AGREEMENT.

HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY, Feb. 14. SIR ROBERT BOND—If reference is made to the Records of the House of Assembly, it will be found that I have ever been a most ardent advocate for the establishment of cold storage in this country, and my views in respect to the great value of the same have not undergone any change. The policy of which these Resolutions are in part an expression is not a new policy; the Legislature, both political parties, and the country, have long since committed themselves to the principle involved, which is the subsidizing of outside capitalists to enterprise the business. In the year 1898 a bill was introduced into the Legislature by Sir James Winter, then Premier, and became law, which provided that for one or more years, not exceeding five, the Government would guarantee the annual payment to any company engaged in the business of cold storage the sum by which the net profit of the company might be less than five per cent. on its paid up capital to an amount not exceeding thirty thousand pounds sterling, or one hundred and fifty thousand dollars. The Act was availed of by a number of shareholders residing in London, England, who established their business on the Southern Coast under the style of "The Newfoundland Fish Industries Company." The subsequent history of that company is a chapter of deplorable management, extravagance and failure. In the year 1904 I introduced a cold storage bill into this House which became law. The bill extended the guarantee provided by the 1898 Act from five years to twenty years, and upon an amount of five hundred thousand dollars, instead of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, as provided in 1898. The bill that I asked this House to approve guaranteed payment only on the express condition that the company should satisfy the Government of the expenditure of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars in plant, machinery and buildings, and a further sum of

Two Hundred Thousand Dollars Per Annum in the Purchase of Fresh Fish for Exportation, and which should have been exported in a fresh condition, and the manufacture of fish offal. The guarantee was also contingent upon the company erecting and operating 15 cold storage depots for providing and supplying bait fishes to the fishermen of this Colony alone. Foreign fishermen mark you, were not to be permitted to avail of bait supplies under the 1904 bill. Under the Agreement now before us no provision is made for supplying our fishermen with bait from cold storage, but on the other hand these subsidized cold storage plants may be used for supplying American fishermen. Further, while the Agreement before us subsidizes an American company, who may engage in the general fish business of the country, the bill of 1904 limited the guarantee to the export of fresh fish and offal.

Under and by virtue of the bill of 1904 certain residents of the United States and Canada, incorporated as "The Newfoundland Cold Storage and Reduction Company," engaged to carry out the cold storage scheme that I have briefly outlined, but failing in their engagement their charter became forfeited. I might add that the company required from the Government such a definition of their rights under charter as would have enabled them to export large quantities of fish for bait purposes; this the late Government declined to accede to, and the refusal was probably the primary cause of the withdrawal of the company. Now we are face to face with a new proposition. On this occasion the House is invited to confirm an Agreement entered into on the 27th December, 1910. In view of the majority at the back of the Government I fully appreciate a course that no matter how defective or oppressive to our established business houses, or to our fishermen this Agreement may be shown to be, because of the numerical weakness of the Opposition, it must pass in its present form unless the Government is open to conviction and amend it.

Now let us examine this Agreement, not in any mere chipping or fault-finding spirit, but in the hope that we may be able to discover defects if they exist, and if it can be shown that they do exist, that the Government themselves without any formal motion from the Opposition may deem it expedient, in the interest of the Colony, to amend the contract before it is ratified by the House. In the first place I would observe that the contract before us differs very materially in its scope and object from that which the Legislature Approved in 1904. The main object of the contract of 1904 was to secure the exportation of fish in cold storage so as to relieve the congestion in foreign markets of salt fish, which ever militates to a greater or less degree, against the successful conduct of the codfishery, an industry which is so material to the well being of the whole community; to secure the reduction of fish offal to a merchantable commodity, as it now goes to waste; and also to secure the cold storage and distribution of bait fishes for the benefit, the sole benefit, of the fishermen of this Colony. These objects commended themselves to the Legislature as sufficient to warrant the payment by the Colony of the subsidy I have named. It is an entirely new departure from any existing business in the Colony, and in no way competed with branches of the fishery business established for years by the enterprise of our commercial men.

The contract that the House is now invited to confirm is one to subsidize for fifteen years an American company which is about to engage in the general fish trade of the Colony, provided they establish and operate 5 cold storage plants, 5 smoke houses, 2 glue factories and 2 fertilizer plants. This contract does not confine the company to the export of fresh fish, in fact fresh fish is not mentioned from first to last, but, on the other hand, from a perusal of Section 6 it is abundantly clear that salt fish and canned fish and smoked fish is to enter very largely into the business, and the preamble to the Agreement, or contract, leaves no room for doubt as to the intention of the company to handle other products. The main object which the Legislature has ever had in view in holding out a consideration for the establishment of cold storage was the export of codfish in a fresh condition, so as to relieve congestion in the salt fish markets. By this means it was hoped that we should obtain higher prices for our staple production. But under the Agreement now before the House the company need not place codfish in cold storage or send a single fresh codfish out of the Colony. The whole of the cold storage plant for which the Government have contracted may be used by this American company as an engine of destruction of our own fishery industry, inasmuch as it is competent for the company to use the whole of the cold storage plants in connection with the freezing and shipping of bait fishes for the supply of American and Canadian fishermen. There is nothing in this Agreement to prevent them from so doing, but on the contrary by Section 8 they are facilitated in carrying on such a business.

Now let me put my objections to this Agreement more clearly, if possible, and more succinctly.

Firstly—I contend there is nothing in this Agreement to prevent the company from using the whole of the cold storage plants exclusively for the freezing, storing and distribution of bait fishes for the use of American and other foreign fishermen, and from confining the distribution of such fishes to foreigners, thus leaving our own fishermen unprotected for. If this is admitted, and it must be admitted, then under this Agreement we shall be subsidizing a huge foreign instrument that may operate with disastrous effect to the interests of our fishing population and the trade of the Colony; or these cold storage plants may be used exclusively for the freezing of herrings for the American markets.

If this is Admitted, and it Must be Admitted, then we shall be subsidizing a foreign company to compete most unfairly with our own people, for the company will not only have the benefit of the guaranteed payments from the Government of the Colony, but they will also have the benefit of a free market in the United States, for under the recent United States Treasury Order or decision all fish caught by American crews shall enter the United States free of duty. There is no stipulation in this Agreement, as there was in the 1904 Agreement, that the company shall purchase supplies of fish from our people. They are left free to employ their own crews to fish for them, and by so doing they may claim and obtain a free market in the United States, while our people are barred from that market by a prohibitive duty.

Secondly, I contend that under this Agreement this subsidized American Company will compete most unfairly with our merchants and planters in the general fish business. The company's business as set forth in the Agreement is not alone the freezing of fish and the exportation of frozen fish, but includes "the handling, canning, smoking, packing, and marketing of fish and other products." They may handle salt cod in bulk, or in barrels, drums, casks, or cases. They may can lobsters, salmon, codfish, trout, and all other kinds of fish. While our merchants and planters have to pay the manufacturers price for fish casks, boxes, and drums, the Government have agreed under this contract to provide this American Company with free supplies of material to make such packages, and with free power to drive the machinery for making them, while our fishermen and merchants have to pay twenty-five per cent. duty on tin-smiths tools and ten per cent duty on tin and solder imported for the canning of lobsters, salmon, codfish and other produce. This American Company may import such supplies free of duty. While our fishermen and merchants have to pay fifty per cent duty on the printed labels imported for these fish, this American Company may import all they require free of duty. This is a great injustice, and it may mean driving the poor man out of the fish canning business, and it certainly will mean the curtailment of the business profit of the local supplier, exporter, and of the tinsmith.

Thirdly, I contend that this Agreement means the Removal of the Fishing Policy That Has Been Followed in This Colony Since the Passing of the Bait Act in 1887.

For as I have before said, it practically nullifies in part the operation of the Bait Act. Under and by virtue of the Bait Act we have excluded foreign fishermen from bait supplies at the hands of our people—I refer now to supplies outside the bounds of the Treaty Coast. Under this Agreement the American Company have to erect five cold storage plants, and they may erect them on any part of the Coasts of the Colony that they may choose. While the Agreement says they shall erect five, they may, if they feel disposed, erect twenty-five or more and thus have a complete chain of cold storage depots around the Island. Every one of such plants may be used exclusively in the freezing of bait fishes of all kinds; the company has specially authorized under this Agreement to employ Newfoundlanders in conducting the business. No restriction whatever is placed upon the company as to how they may dispose of such bait fishes, and we may suddenly awake to a realization of the fact that the whole banking fleets of New England and of Canada are drawing their supplies of bait from these cold storage plants all around our Coast. Thus, you will observe, we have practically an annulling of the Bait Act so far as this company is concerned, and a vesting in this company of the whole foreign bait supply, unless there shall follow this legislation a total repeal of the Bait Act. If this Agreement is approved by this House a total repeal of the Bait Act must follow, for this House could never permit the enforcement of that Act against our own people while it was suspended in respect to this company's business. It would be such a glaring outrage as no honest body of legislators could be guilty of.

Fourthly, I contend that this Agreement gives away the principal position in the fishery of the Colony to the Hague Tribunal. The award of that tribunal declared that American citizens had no right either under the Treaty of 1818 or under any other document to exercise the privilege of buying herring or other bait fishes; it declared that Newfoundlanders could not with impunity sell bait fishes to American citizens, or enter into their employ to catch fish for them while the laws of this country say "thou shalt not."

The Award of The Hague thus left the Government of the Colony masters of the situation. This Agreement reverses that order of things and makes this American Company Masters of the Whole Bait Supply of the Colony.

If they chance to exercise the full powers that it vests in them, Pass this Agreement, and all the expenditure of money and effort to maintain control of our bait supplies will be as much thrown to the winds of heaven.

Fifthly, I contend that while Section 3 of this Agreement limits the liability of the Colony to a payment to the American Company of the sum of Seven Thousand Five Hundred Dollars per annum for the next fifteen years, Section 5 leaves the Colony with an unlimited liability to face annually for the next fifteen years, if the company is successful and can show a net profit of five per cent. on its capital instead, say $500,000, we shall not be called upon to pay anything more than Seven Thousand Five Hundred Dollars per year to them.

But, suppose it is not successful, and instead of making a profit it sustains a loss of say One hundred thousand dollars, the Colony under this Agreement would then have to convert that loss into a net profit of Twenty-Five Thousand Dollars; in other words, the Colony would have to assume the loss and pay the company One hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars. I cannot suppose that this Agreement carries out the real intention of the Government. I don't know who drew it up, but it is the most remarkable document I have ever seen presented to this House, and I cannot possibly believe that the intelligence of this House will approve it as it now stands.

Taken Suddenly Ill.

Mr. A. F. Shirran was seized with a sudden attack of illness while attending the funeral of the late Mrs. Berrigan last evening. The procession was passing along Queen's Road, opposite St. Patrick's Hall, when he collapsed and fell near the street car tracks. He was taken in to Dr. W. Clouston's house where Dr. Keegan, who also was at the funeral, attended him. He rallied somewhat and was able to go home in a sleigh half an hour afterwards. He is now in his 79th year and the exertion in the cold, last evening proved too much for his energies. He is much improved to-day and no doubt will be out again.

Burn Caused Open Sore

Zam Buk Worked a Wonderful Cure. Sometimes a bad burn, a deep cut, or some similar injury, sets up a more permanent injury, in the form of an open discharging sore. In such cases Zam-Buk will be found of unequalled value.

Mr. J. Nixon, of 901 William Ave., Winnipeg, a blacksmith at the C. P. R. shops, had his foot badly burned by some molten metal falling upon it. He says: "The burn was a very bad one, and after the first few days it left an open sore, which showed marked signs of blood-poisoning. It discharged freely and caused me terrible agony. For three weeks I suffered acutely and could get no ease. At last I obtained a preparation from the doctor, which seemed to stop the discharging and made me quite hopeful, but finally the wound became as bad as ever."

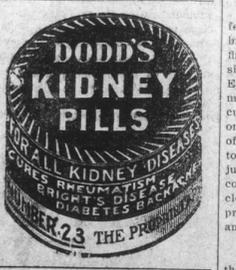

"I was then advised to use Zam-Buk, and from the first application the pain gave me relief. The inflammation was thoroughly checked, and the poisonous matter cleared away in a very short time after beginning with Zam-Buk. Healing then began, and in less than two weeks the wound was thoroughly healed."

One of the main lessons of this case lies right here—try Zam-Buk first for any injury, sore, skin-disease or wound. It is equally good for p. l. e. s., blood-poisoning, festering wounds, chaps, cold sores, varicose ulcers, chilblains, etc. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box or post free from Zam-Buk Co., St. John's, Nfld., upon receipt of price. You are warned against harmful substitutes and inferior preparations, which yield a bigger margin of profit and are sometimes peddled as being "just as good." Nothing is just as good.

Building Sand Scarce

Building sand, which heretofore was a very plentiful commodity in the city, is now very scarce, and contractors and builders find it very difficult to procure it for their work. Ninety per cent. of the more substantial kind of buildings now being erected are built of concrete and there is a great demand for sand which is an important constituent of concrete. Heretofore the supply was principally secured from vessels coming here from foreign ports with it in ballast, but now this cannot supply the local demand. There are large deposits of sand on the beaches along the Southern Shore and in Placentia Bay and no doubt this will be largely availed of in future for building purposes.

Clipping Britain's British Shipown

At the present moment most British shipowners and merchants are in arms at the prospect of the coming into law of the Declaration of London. Many naval authorities are of the opinion that this treaty would upset our naval supremacy, and make it possible for an enemy to starve us into surrender during time of war, almost without firing a shot.

As the international treaty which governs naval warfare, there is a dreadful middle, the last of which, the conference discussed the possibility of certain proposals put forward by Britain were not accepted by the other powers. In not accepting the difficulty the British Government invited a congress of the maritime powers in 1908.

This congress eventually drew up the code called the Declaration of London, which was signed early in 1908, but as it altered the law of the sea, it must first of all pass Parliament.

Although it is supported by most prominent members of both parties, the various chambers of commerce are dead against it as a restriction which alters the rules of international law, and which England has strenuously fought.

Here are a couple of instances. Everyone remembers that during the Russo-Japanese War two Russian trading steamers—the Sushko and Petersburg—were captured by Japanese ships on the high seas. The Japanese began to seize British vessels during the contraband of war to Japan.

When the P. and O. steamer was seized in the Red Sea and taken through the Suez Canal with a crew on board, British vessels were such strong representations to the Admiralty to send British vessels to find the captured steamer, and tell them to return home.

By the Declaration of London acts would be lawful in the future. Now, if we allow an enemy to take to ship guns in mid-sea, and to come a proper warship, our navy would be taken at a disadvantage. Our mercantile marine is sometimes bigger than those of other nations, and hundreds of ships would Clipping Britain's Wings.

British Shipowners Up in Arms.

At the present moment most British shipowners and merchants are up in arms at the prospect of the coming into law of the Declaration of London. Many naval authorities are of the opinion that this treaty would assist our naval supremacy, and make it possible for an enemy to starve us into surrender during time of war almost without firing a shot.

As the international rules which govern naval warfare were in a dreadful muddle, the last Hague Conference discussed the matter, but certain proposals put forward by Britain were not accepted by the other powers. In order to overcome the difficulty the British Government invited a congress of the maritime powers in 1908.

This congress eventually drew up a code called the Declaration of London, which was signed early in 1909, but as it altered the law of Britain it must first of all pass Parliament.

Although it is supported by many prominent members of both parties, most naval men and shipowners and the various Chambers of Commerce are dead against it, as it completely alters the rules of international warfare for which England has strenuously fought.

Here are a couple of instances. Everyone remembers that during the Russo-Japanese War two Russian trading steamers—the Smolensk and Petersburg—were converted into warships on the high seas. They at once began to seize British vessels for taking contraband of war to Japan.

When the P. and O. Malacca was seized in the Red Sea and sent back through the Suez Canal with a prize crew on board, Britain seethed with indignation, and the Government made such strong representations to Russia that she at once released the Malacca, made suitable reparations, and asked the Admiralty to send British cruisers to find the converted traders and bring them to return home.

By the Declaration of London such acts would be lawful in the future. Now, if we allow any peaceful trader to ship guns in mid-ocean and become a proper warship, our immense navy would be taken at a disadvantage. Our mercantile marine is many times bigger than those of other nations, and hundreds of ships would be on the high seas when war broke out.

Foreign nations could kill our overseas trade without possessing a single warship, as any of their steamers could be turned into warships in all parts of the world at a moment's notice.

Then, during the same war the Russian cruisers sunk one or two British steamers because they were said to have contraband of war on board. Britain has always contended that no vessel can be sunk in this manner unless it is taken to one of the naval ports belonging to the capturing nation, and then condemned by a properly constituted Prize Court.

A Prize Court is a naval tribunal especially authorized to consider such matters.

The Declaration of London would do away with Prize Courts belonging to the separate nations and constitute one International Court at The Hague. This court would consist of only fifteen members, one each being appointed by fifteen different nations, Britain, with her immense preponderance, having no more weight than Turkey, who possesses hardly any shipping worth speaking about.

Up to the present Britain has maintained that no foodstuffs can be considered contraband of war unless they are directly consigned to a hostile fleet or fortress. But by the Declaration of London, food being conveyed to a trader in the enemy's country by a ship belonging to a friendly nation not taking part in the war can be seized.

Think what this means. If Britain were at war she would require food from the United States or the Argentine, but if it were directed to a merchant in London an enemy's cruiser could seize it, even though it were being brought in a ship belonging to Belgium or France who had nothing to do with the war.

The new declaration also modifies the powers of blockade possessed by a hostile fleet, and as Britain possesses the biggest fleet in the world, it would damage us more than any other power.

In the word of a famous admiral, the new declaration is worth a fleet of "dreadnoughts" to many other nations.—P. W.

The Festival of Empire.

PREPARING THE GREAT IMPERIAL EXHIBITION.

Elaborate preparations are now being made to ensure the complete success of the Festival of Empire, which, as already announced, is to be the great Imperial feature of the Coronation year. This mighty undertaking, in which all the Colonies are playing a prominent part, opens at the Crystal Palace in May and will continue until October, with the patronage and support of His Majesty's Government, and the various governments of the Overseas Dominions.

All Red Route.

An exceedingly interesting feature of the Festival will be the "All Red Route" which will consist of a railway and steamboat service running through the Empire City in the extensive grounds of the Palace, where the Government buildings of the various Dominions of the Empire are located. The work of construction has now been commenced. A trip on the "All Red Route" will enable the visitor to the Festival to obtain a glimpse of our vast Empire, the beauty and industrial and productive wealth of the various Colonies. The railway line, one and a half miles in length, and the passenger is for the greater part under cover, yet seeing open scenes.

Boarding the electric train at the Pageant station the passenger is taken on a complete trip round the Empire, so to speak, the first stopping place being Newfoundland. Through a covered way the exhibition building of our Oldest Colony is entered. Here a complete paper-making plant will be one of the chief features of interest. From Newfoundland the train proceeds to Canada, and the first view of this great Dominion is a vast stretch of forest land, with groups of men busily engaged in felling and clearing timber. Then the train is transferred, with its full complement of passengers, to an ocean ferry and thence to Jamaica.

The next sight is a Malay village, followed by India, with its historic temples; thence we traverse jungles, palaces, bazaars and other scenes typical of the East. Australia and New Zealand follow next with a host of interesting features illustrative of the marvellous development of Australasia.

The homeward journey is made by way of the Cape, where realistic representations are given of scenes on the veldt, natives engaged in various pursuits, and gold mines in full operation.

The "round the Empire" trip by the "All Red Route" occupies about twenty minutes.

A huge model of the exhibition grounds with its various Colonial Government buildings and a working model of the "All Red Route" is on view to the public in a special building in the Strand, which has become one of the sights of London, as many as 10,000 persons having viewed it daily during the past fortnight. London, Feb. 3rd, 1911.

The Round Robin.

No One Seems to Know the Origin of the Strange Term.

A "round robin" is one of those documents of which the name is familiar to most people, but which uncommonly few have ever seen or signed. Every one knows that the thing which bears so singular a name is a communication—letter, remonstrance, warning or the like—the signatures of which are written around the circumference of the circle which incloses the body of the epistle or radiating therefrom like the spokes of a wheel from a hub, so that the responsibility of signing is equally shared. No one signatory can be accused of being either the first or the last to sign, of being the leader or the whipper in.

The most famous example on record probably is the remonstrance which was sent to Dr. Johnson in connection with the epitaph on Oliver Goldsmith. The doctor had prepared an epitaph in Latin, but some of his friends, who had also been friends of Goldsmith, took exception to it on two grounds, the first being that it did not quote to justice the author of the "Traveller" as a writer, and particularly as a poet, and the second that it should be written in English. The party of friends were gathered around Sir Joshua Reynolds' hospitable if somewhat ill served table, and though they found themselves in general agreement on these two points no one had the courage to be willing to "bell the cat," or, in other words, to take the lead in tackling the formidable Johnson on these two rather delicate matters. "At last," says Sir William Forbes, "it was hinted that there could be no way so good as that of a round robin, as the sailors call it, which they make use of when they enter into a conspiracy so as not to let it be known who puts his name first or last to the paper."

The idea was at once accepted, the address to Dr. Johnson was prepared, and all signed it in the form proposed. This very interesting paper is still extant and is preserved among other valuable manuscripts in the library of High Hall, near Wigan, the seat of the Earl of Crawford. It begins, "We, the circumscribers," and the signatures written around the circle which incloses the address, include those of Gibbon, Burke, Jos. Warton, Sheridan, Sir Joshua Reynolds, Geo. Colman and half a dozen others who are nowadays but little known. Johnson took the remonstrance in good part, but as to not writing the epitaph in Latin declared that he would never consent to disgorge the walls of Westminster Abbey with an English inscription. The whole story is eminently characteristic of both Johnson and his times.

No one has yet been able to give a satisfactory explanation of the strange term "round robin."—London Globe.

Pictures by Wire.

Wonderful New Invention Just Perfected by Frenchman.

Paris, Feb. 2.—A French invention by which a series of photographs can be telegraphed instantaneously, and faithfully reproduced miles away, makes possible in the near future "news theatres," supplied with tele-photographs taken the same day many miles distant.

M. Bellin, the inventor, uses a paper photograph of an ordinary type. The picture to be transmitted consists of numerous dots of various sizes. A paper "recorder" is laid on a metal base and is drawn along under a set of metal brushes and thus the electric impulses sent to the receiving station are varied, and these constantly changing currents are employed to illuminate small portions of the "viewing screen."

As the result of using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills I am now entirely cured and can eat any kind of food. Kills Self to Escape Fire Death.

Man Pinned Under Wreckage of Train Uses Revolver.

Paris, Ont., Feb. 5.—Rather than be roasted alive, John Whitelaw, an express messenger, shot himself dead while pinned under the wreckage of a Grand Trunk passenger train near here late Saturday night.

Four others met death by the accident.

As express messenger, John Whitelaw always carried a revolver, and although crushed under the wreckage of his car, he remained conscious and urged rescuers to extricate him.

The wreck was burning, however, and the workers were driven back, leaving the express messenger to face death in the flames.

"If you can't help me soon, I'll end it all," he was heard to say.

The flames were rapidly nearing the spot where Whitelaw lay. There was the sound of a revolver shot, after which his voice was heard no more.

Farmer as an Incubator

Pennsylvanian Discovers in His Bed of Straw a Hatched Chicken.

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 4.—Oscar Heinze, a farmer of Clifton, near Pittsburg, has found that he is not a bad incubator himself, with the aid of a matting of straw. The other day he went into his barn and filled his bedtick with straw, which contained a hen's egg.

Mr. Heinze did not know that the egg was there, so it was with great astonishment that he heard "Chick, chick, chick," in his bed a few nights ago. He lighted a lamp and searched in his room, but the baby fowl was not found. The sound finally convinced him that he must open his bedtick, which he did, and discovered the little creature.—New York Herald.

When Sleep Fails You

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD will bring rest, comfort and vitality by building up the nerves.

Mr. Jas. Wesley Weaver, a veteran of the Fenian Raid, Port Dalhousie, Ont., writes: "For years I was afflicted with nervousness and dreaded insomnia, so that I never knew for three years what a full hour's sleep was, never more than dozing for a few minutes at a time. Heart pain and headaches almost drove me wild. I had spells of weakness and cramps in stomach and limbs.

"Though I tried several doctors, it was money uselessly spent. Finally Dr. Chase's Nerve Food was brought to me and eight boxes cured me. It is simply wonderful what benefit I have obtained from this treatment."

Sleeplessness and headaches are warnings of approaching nervous collapse. You can positively remove these symptoms and prevent prostration or paralysis by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. 50 cents a box, $2.50 at all dealers or Edmans, Bates & Co., Toronto. To prevent, which is now to successfully obstruct, meant in its Latin original to anticipate.

A girl was anciently a young person of either sex.

Mountebank was the term applied to old to the patent medicine vendor who mounted a bench to proclaim his wares. It is from the Italian.

Paradise in Oriental tongues meant only a royal ark.

Astonished means literally thunder-struck, coming from "attoneare."

A knave was once merely a lad and a villain only a peasant.

To be silly was in its ancient sense to be blessed.

To be officious was to be courteously ready to do kindly office.

An idiot was a private citizen as distinguished from an office-holder.

Shamefaced comes from a good Anglo-Saxon term which means not one exhibiting shame, but one protected by shame, being therefore innocent and modest.

Family Eats Its Food Raw.

Pittsfield Boy Eats Six Raw Potatoes For Luncheon.

Pittsfield, Mass., Feb. 5.—An extraordinary family of vegetarians has been discovered in that of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Tyler, who live in the North woods, three miles from Pittsfield. They have three children who eat raw vegetables and never drink anything but milk or water.

The food for the table is prepared raw, and they eat cereals, potatoes, turnips, parsnips, onions and cabbage without cooking. Apples form a large part of their diet. Mr. Tyler, who is a Second Adventist, believes all meals unclean, and that cooking makes vegetables unhealthy.

Their son, O. B. Joyful Tyler, a boy of 6, is a pupil at the Russell school of this city, and eats six raw potatoes for his luncheon.

Mr. Tyler owns a small farm.

Keep Your Display Windows Free From Frost

By Using This Little Preventer

For preventing the frosting of Display Windows in Winter time, there is nothing simpler or more effective than the air blast of an directed against the glass.

The Philosophy of the thing is plain.

The evaporative effect of the air current simply prevents condensation of moisture upon the window, and affords relief from an annoyance which generally is sought but only imperfectly attained through various awkward means.
