EYE-WITNESS' DESCRIBES SURRENDER OF TOWNSEND.

LONDON, May 10. A despatch from the British "Eye-Witness" with the Mesopotamia forces, gives a description of General Townshend's holding out against the Turks at Kut-el-Amara, while on the verge of starvation. The men subsisted during the last fortnight on four ounces of flour daily and a certain ration of horse-flesh. One of General Townshend's last wireless despatches before he capitulated said: "Have destroyed guns and am destroying munitions. Officers have gone to Khalil Bey to say that we are ready to surrender. We must have some food, and officers have gone to bring some from the Turks." The last message sent by Townshend said: "We have hoisted the white flag, and a Turkish regiment is approaching." One of the chief difficulties was the fact that the civil population had to remain in Kut-el-Amara. A few who tried to leave were shot by the Turks who made it clear that they would execute any persons who tried to escape. Thus the garrison was burdened with six thousand additional mouths to feed.

FOOD BY AEROPLANE.

LONDON, May 10. British aeroplanes dropped 15,000 pounds of food, in addition to mail, military and other stores, in Kut-el-Amara, between April 14th and 29th. This effort to relieve the hunger of the besieged garrison, which surrendered to the Turks, was told of in the Commons to-day by Harold J. Tennant, Parliamentary Under-Secretary for War. During the whole siege, Tennant said, only one British aeroplane was brought down by the Turks. Its pilot was killed and the observer wounded. The Turks reported that a number of aeroplanes which attempted to drop food supplies had been shot down.

AROUND VERDUN.

PARIS, May 10. Activity on the Verdun front has decreased, according to a statement given out by the War Office this afternoon. Artillery action west of the Meuse was less pronounced, and east of the river only intermittent. An attack on the French trenches between the Oise and the Aisne was repulsed.

HERBERT SAMUEL AND THE SINN FEIN REBELLION.

LONDON, May 10. Replying to protests which have

For keeping the mental and physical forces fit, right food is necessary. It must supply certain mineral elements stored by Nature in the field grains, but lacking in much of the food of the usual dietary.

submarines in the North Sea. The steamer Zeeta was stopped and her papers examined three times.

GERMAN CASUALTIES.

LONDON, May 10. An official British estimate of German casualties in April was issued to-day. It places the total at 91,162. The number of German casualties since the beginning of the war is given as 2,322,076. These figures include all German nationalities, Prussians, Bavarians, Saxons and Wurtembergers. They do not include naval or colonial troops.

MEXICANS PLANNING FOR UPRISING.

WASHINGTON, May 10. Virtually the last American troops in the United States are being mobilized for the Mexican border service. The national guard of three states is under orders to hasten to reinforce Funston's army. Unofficial reports received state that the Mexicans along the entire border had planned for a day for a concerted uprising.

Yesterday the volunteers were engaged at various indoor drills and the following enrolled at C. L. B. Armoury:—

Pte. Hurley "Shocked."

The following message was received yesterday from Ottawa by Mrs. Johanna Lannigan, 150 Duckworth Street:—

"Sincerely regret to inform you Pte. William Hurley, April 22nd—shock; will send further particulars when received."

Hurley joined the First Nfd. Contingent, withdrew after a year and enlisted with the Canadians. He had spent seven years in the States from whence he returned to enlist with "Ours."

NOTE OF THANKS—Mr. and Mrs. John Williams, of Spencer Street, desire to express their gratitude to Miss Duncan (Matron) and Nurses O'Reilly, Cooper, Carey and Ellis of the Fever Hospital for their unremitting care and attention to their daughter Joan Frances Williams during her stay there.—adv

Visit of Assembly Commission and Grand Jury TO THE PENITENTIARY.

Last week, on the day before the closing of the Legislature, the Hon. John R. Bennett, Colonial Secretary, Dr. W. F. Lloyd, Leader of the Opposition; Hon. John C. Crosbie and R. J. Devereaux, Esq., members of the Commission, appointed by the House of Assembly to enquire into affairs at the Penitentiary, visited that institution and thoroughly inspected the interior and grounds outside. They were glad to find that almost all the improvements suggested by them, on the occasion of their visit last year, had been carried out. On the 5th ultimo the members of the Grand Inquest, at the suggestion of His Lordship the Chief Justice, also paid an official visit to the Penitentiary and spent the greater part of two hours there, inspecting and inquiring into everything for which they made the annexed entry in the Visitors' Book:—

THE PENITENTIARY.
St. John's, Nfd., April 5th, 1916.
The following members of the Grand Jury to-day visited the various departments of His Majesty's Penitentiary and, after asking many questions of Superintendent Parsons and the Wardens, are thoroughly satisfied that the institution is being properly looked after as far as the facilities are available—the prison being clean and well kept.

THURSDAY, May 11th, 1916.

The Methodist School Report.

We thank the Rev. Dr. Curtis for a copy of his report on Methodist Schools for the year ending December 31st, 1915.

The showing of the year is very favorable, denoting progress all round. On the basis of examination success, the showing is noteworthy. Out of 1,974 passes at the C. H. E. Examinations last year, 834 stand to the credit of the Methodist Schools. This is 42.2 per cent of the whole. The Superintendent drawing from his long experience connected with schools, partly as school-master, partly as chairman of school board, but mainly from eighteen years as Superintendent of Methodist Schools, during which time he has been travelling around the island, noting conditions, circumstances and school work offers some timely observations on education. He points out that education includes home life with all its varied and multitudinous influences; social life with its companionships, its ideals, its environment, and church life with its inspiration, its instruction, its quickening. Give them the right kind of home life, proper social environment, good training, and the teacher's work is more than half done before he begins. Let these be lacking in their best elements, or let the influences be injurious or detrimental rather than helpful, and the school has to undertake an impossible task. In the appraisal of merit or bringing about for all the system, therefore, many factors must be considered which are not and cannot be controlled by either the teacher or the school. The considerations complicate the problem of appraisal enormously.

Presumably the proper aim of education should be to prepare, so far as possible, for the successful performance of the highest functions in life. This implies such development of the body as to produce health and ductility; the formation of right habits; the sharpening of the intelligence; the cultivation of good taste; the creation of interest in and love for work; the forming of the understanding and the upbuilding of moral character. Now wherever this process is being successfully conducted the work of education is being performed.

Dr. Curtis has a word of praise for the Domestic Science School, which is being conducted by Miss Ethel Dickinson, under the joint management of the Superintendents of Education. He recognizes its promise of far-reaching influence. He details part of the work being done. The curriculum includes:—What constitutes a wholesome breakfast, dinner and supper, and how each should be prepared; how to clean and cook fish and vegetables; how to get the most out of meats of various kinds; how to cook bread, rolls, puddings and pies, and like foods of every day use, from a large part of the weekly tasks. It is hoped that in this way a knowledge of healthy foods and proper cooking will in time become widely disseminated throughout the country and produce results beneficial and enduring.

BIG PRICES FOR SCHOONERS.—A schooner Canadian built, about 100 tons net, was offered for sale during the past week, the price being fixed at $12,000. A local merchant who intended making the purchase, was given a few hours to consider, and after thinking the matter over, he returned to the agents with the intention of closing the deal, but to his surprise found that schooner rates had advanced and it would be necessary to plank down $13,500 to become owner of the schooner in question which now floats at anchor off in the stream of this port.

bring. The selection of the Church of this Gospel age, who must prove their loyalty to Christ, in the furnace of trial, and who were promised a share in the blessings resulting from Christ's death for all would begin to be realized. Their share being a full restoration to all the willing and obedient, of what was forfeited through Adam's sin.

Then came, as the closing feature, the concluding portion of the "Shunnamite" film—the restoration to life, suggesting Resurrection hope.

Those who have not seen the Photo-Drama will have further opportunities as Part II will be shown again Friday and successive parts will follow, as will be announced.

A Great War Worker.

LADY COWDRAY'S REMARKABLE RECORD.

A short time ago Queen Mary expressed the wish that the historic Star and Garter Hotel, at the top of Richmond Hill, should be purchased for the use of the Red Cross. Lady Cowdray, one of society's most famous hostesses, at once set to work to help in the task of collecting the money required, although she was already strenuously working in connection with five other big war-charity schemes, the aggregate appeal of which was for close upon a million pounds.

Thanks to the strenuous efforts of enthusiastic war workers like Lady Cowdray, hundreds of our brave soldiers and sailors, whose constitutions have been badly wrecked by the war, will be able to spend the remainder of their lives in the Star and Garter home.

A clever, practical-minded woman, Lady Cowdray is a fitting wife for the man who is regarded as the greatest contractor in the world. Raised to the peerage eight years ago, Lord Cowdray, formerly Sir Westman Pearson, is president of the firm of S. Pearson and Son, the great firm of contractors, which employs something like 30,000 hands. Engineer, dock, tunnel, railway and bridge builder, his lordship has carried out some gigantic contracts. Indeed, it has been said that he seldom undertakes anything less than a million-pound job.

Before the war Lady Cowdray took great interest in the Women's Suffrage movement, speaking occasionally at meetings. She is a delightful speaker, and always very frank in expressing her views. The writer remembers some interesting remarks which she made a short time ago on business men as lovers.

"A man with a great business," she said, "entails large responsibilities, may not have much time for demonstrating affection. An idle man, with no ambitions, has. But the affection of such a man would in time become somewhat tedious, whereas the less monotonous affection of the strong, hard-working man of business would remain one of the things to be treasured in a woman's life. After all," she concluded, "love-making is not the only interest in life."

A charming romance was that of her youngest son, the Hon. Geoffrey Pearson, who in 1909 married that singer and actress, Miss Ethel Lewis, who made quite a name for herself with the D'Oyly Carte Company. But the war has left her a widow, for her young husband was killed in the early days of the war. He was "a very gallant gentleman."

A Word to the Police.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—In the interest of Justice and Fair Play I think it is time that policemen like Constable Forsey should be given the same rights which citizens have certain rights which must be protected. The case that was tried by His Honor Judge Morris on Wednesday, in which a young man of the West End was charged with drunkenness and disorderly conduct is one that clearly proved that Constable Forsey overstepped his duty and went as far as to assault the prisoner and knock him down. Three witnesses appeared for the prisoner and gave evidence of the fact, and so convincing was their testimony that the Judge dismissed the accused.

Now, Mr. Editor, the young man in question is the son of respectable parents, and though he may be unfortunate in being more or less addicted to drink, still he is entitled to British fair play, and the treatment accorded him in this instance by Constable Forsey merits the condemnation of all fair-minded people. It is time in my opinion that some of the policemen should be taught their duty. Some of the younger men in the force appear to be lacking in judgement, and as Mr. Higgins said of Forsey, seem to lose their head. One fact stands out very prominently and that is that there is plenty room for improvement in the force, and the sooner this is effected the better it will be for the dignity of the Police Force. Cases of this kind that I refer to have the tendency of making the public lose confidence in the police, and I trust that the lesson dealt out to Constable Forsey will have the effect of making the police more humane towards their fellow men. Nothing is gained by inhuman treatment, a little kindness often accomplishes a great deal more than harshness in cases of this nature.

Yours, etc.,

An English Estimate of the German Army and its Generals.

In an article in the May Atlantic Monthly, Mr. Alfred G. Gardiner, editor of the London Daily News, has undertaken to analyze German tactics and generalship in the great war. As the author of "The Great Lords," an intimate study of the statesmen and soldiers who are playing leading parts in the conflict, Mr. Gardiner qualified for this task of estimating and appraising the enemy's military capacity. In comparison that of the Allies often suffers, for impartiality and a love of truth are characteristic of this writer.

Bismarck, we are told, had a small opinion of German commanders, Moltke and "good old Roon" excepted. However, the Chancellor thought less of French generalship, which he held as beneath contempt in the Franco-Prussian war, a judgment that not even the countrymen of MacMahon and Bazaine will dispute to-day. The German victory in 1871 was really won in advance by Bismarck's skill in uniting the German states under the banner of Prussia. In entering upon the present war Germany was handicapped by her diplomacy, and she had to rely for victory upon the preparedness of her General Staff, the ability of her commanders in the field, and the working of her military machine. Mr. Gardiner cannot say enough in praise of German mastery of the science of war. He declared that "if we judge German generalship by strictly military considerations as distinct from the political and imaginative factors, we are bound to admit that its success has been complete."

The Allies "had no common strategy, no body of agreed doctrine." In fact, "they had little to offer but improvised methods." If France was better prepared for war than the France of Napoleon III, there had been dissensions in her military councils, and while she could put a large army in the field she had no war machine in the German sense of the term. The Russian military system was still corrupt and at the best experimental. Great Britain's little wars had not taught her organization; her methods were generally antiquated. Mr. Hal-dane alone did anything to modernize the army; he gave it a General Staff "in a modest form," and his War Book helped Sir John French's expeditionary force to obstruct the German "drive" on the right in the early days of the war and thus gain breathing time for France. The German plan in scope and detail was admirable, says Mr. Gardiner. Why, then, did the Germans fall, if confidence in their military machine was not misplaced? He answers:

"On the spiritual side they were universally wrong. They miscalculated Belgium, they misread England, they woefully underrated France, they blundered in their estimate of the ability of Austria to hold Russia in check while France was being crushed."

The Germans were right about the use of modern big guns in the field and the French wrong in pinning their faith to the 75 mm. The Germans were right about the futility of the modern fortress; and they were right again about the high explosive shell and the massing of machine guns. "When the Germans," a British staff officer said, "do something in a different way from ours the chances are that it is a better way than ours." The Germans were also right in posting regimental officers behind the charging line, for the French and British practice of leading has resulted in a disproportionate loss of officers. Only in the air have the allies proved their superiority, but it has counted for a good deal. The Zeppelin is generally admitted to be a costly failure.

While he grants that the initiative is still in the hands of the Germans, Mr. Gardiner says that the Allies have been apt pupils in learning scientific warfare as the enemy practices it, and now they have the men, the guns and the ammunition for the second stage of the struggle. The German war machine has met every test but in the first stage the wrong men were in command. "Moltke" we are told, "was never more than the shadow of a great name." He is held responsible for the futile and costly attempts to break through on the coast, at Arras, at Antwerp and Ypres. The Crown Prince of Bavaria and the Duke of Wurttemberg are named and "nothing more." Von Kluck eliminated himself by his rash march to the southeast in front of Paris. But Germany has procured three great soldiers in this war.

To the new chief of Staff, General Falkenhayn, is given the credit of "the renaissance of the German cause" after the battle of the Marne. Young, ambitious, thorough and inflexible, Falkenhayn at the age of 54 is not only the major strategist of the teutonic armies, but he has established an ascendancy over the Kaiser himself. Mackensen is rated as a greater commander than Hindenburg, in spite of the latter's tremendous victory in the Masurian Lakes district. More subtle, more alert and more ruthless in attack, Mackensen is the perfect type of Prussian militarism. But both are old men picked up from the discard. For the military genius on the German side we are bidden to behold Falkenhayn, who has become the most powerful figure in the nation.

The Western Line.

(Verses Written in an Artillery Observation Post During a Relief: Flanders, May, 1915. By Xanthus, in Ottawa Journal.)

Thor draws a cord invisible
Across the shaking sky;
I hear the tearing of the shell,
The bullets sing and cry,
As charging through the flames of hell
The batteries go by.

The gunners laugh about the task
That man to man has given;
Like Titans now the guns unmask
And fire the veils of heaven.
Above the cloud what lights are gleaming?
God's batteries are those,
Or souls of soldiers homeward streaming.

To banquet with their foes?
The floods of battle ebb and flow,
The soldiers to Valhalla go!

They say that, when the day awoke
And the dying night was wan,
Harry of England rode the smoke
And led the English van;
And bowmen in the battle-charge
Rose from the ghostly dew:
The cloth-yard sang upon the air
And the gray goose-neck flew!
Harry of England is awake,
His archers mind not trench or stake!

Beyond the thunder of the guns,
Beyond the flaming line,
Far from this sky of echoing bronze,
The English valleys shine,
The gardens moated in the woods
By wind and water kissed.
And dainty girls that England folds
In sunshine and in mist.
The floods of battle ebb and flow,
The soldiers to Valhalla go!

The soldier has his girls to love,
And he has his run to drink,
But when the lines of battle move
He has little time to think;
Sometimes he wins a victory,
Sometimes the battle ends,
And there the paths of glory lie
Where lie the soldier's friends.
The floods of battle ebb and flow,
The soldiers to Valhalla go!

The fighting men go charging past
With the battle in their eyes,
The fighting men go reeling past
Like gods in poor disguise.
The glorious men whom none will see,
No wife or mother more,
Winged with the wings of Victory
And helmeted by Thor!
Above the cloud what lights are gleaming?
God's batteries are those,
Or souls of soldiers homeward streaming.

To banquet with their foes?
The floods of battle ebb and flow,
The soldiers to Valhalla go!

The fighting men go charging past
With the battle in their eyes,
The fighting men go reeling past
Like gods in poor disguise.
The glorious men whom none will see,
No wife or mother more,
Winged with the wings of Victory
And helmeted by Thor!
Above the cloud what lights are gleaming?
God's batteries are those,
Or souls of soldiers homeward streaming.

To banquet with their foes?
The floods of battle ebb and flow,
The soldiers to Valhalla go!

Barred From The Feast.

(From the Boston Transcript.)
The exchange of telegrams between King George and President Poincare about Shakespeare is a picturesque proof that even in the midst of the roar of the guns at Verdun and Dixmude, the French and British nations can turn aside to celebrate a "literary" event. The significance of Shakespeare to England is well known to all the world. What was his significance to France? President Poincare commends him because he has "made France familiar with the eternal soul of a friendly people." This is a fine phrase, and true, for Shakespeare is a searchlight upon the soul of his own nation. But it is probable that France has never derived very much from Shakespeare directly. He is not gay enough, and may be said to be too dreamy; too northern, for the French comprehension. That is not the case with the German people, who have, through Schlegel's amazing translation, probably the greatest success in all literature in the transference of an author's works from one language to another, made Shakespeare their own. It is a great matter for sorrow, the absence of the German people—and by this we mean the people, and not the German rulers or the fanatic professors who have made the war possible—from the honors that are now being paid to the name of Shakespeare. Under normal circumstances, and in a Europe unbedeviled by Hohenzollern ambition and divine right, the German nation would be side by side with England and America in laying its laurels on Shakespeare's tomb. Out of this privilege, as well as out of their life and joy for many years, the German people have been cheated by the Prussian military cabal. "Tis true, and pity 'tis 'tis true!

Why He Changed His Name.

In correcting the exercises of her class a teacher recently observed a new name inscribed on one of the papers—Will Evans. She looked round the class, but could see no new boy. Not a little puzzled she requested Will Evans to stand. Up jumped Will Jones, and the teacher got more puzzled still. "Your name's Jones," she said, "not Evans!" Will looked not a little abashed, and shifted uneasily from one foot to the other. "Please, ma'am," he said, "it's owing to family trouble. I didn't do it, please ma'am."

"But," she said, sternly, "I repeat your name is Jones." "Please, ma'am, said the boy, "it's changed now, Ma's married the lodger."

Not All Happy!

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

"Why do most married women take it for granted that all single women want to get married, and patronize and pity them because they haven't? Goodness knows, they aren't perfectly happy themselves. Why should they assume that everybody else wants to get in when plenty of them would like to get out, if they'd be honest enough to admit it?"

So writes a letter friend—presumably an unmarried woman.

She has my sympathy, not because she is unmarried—the gods of tact forbid—but because I recognize the type of woman she describes, and know how exasperating her pity and patronage can be.

That most married women are like that, I don't admit, but there are enough of them to justify her resentment.

"Why Don't You Get Married?"

Just the other day I heard a married woman say to a bachelor girl, "Why on earth don't you get married, Jane? You're pretty enough. What's the matter with you, anyway?"

The unmitigated smugness of that assumption that marriage is the only livable state and that lack of good looks is the only barrier that could keep a woman out of it, fairly took my breath away. Incidentally the woman who perpetrated it is not at all good-looking herself, and is one of the most discontented, restless women I know. She certainly is no advertisement for the married state, and yet she is always asking her bachelor girl friends that complacent question,

"Why don't you get married?"

"Yes, Mamma, Like You"

One is reminded of the retort of the future Madame Roland when her mother (whose marriage had been far from successful) urged her to marry, saying, "Tu seras heureuse, ma chere."

"Well, mamma," she replied, "come what will." Of course, in those days, when marriage was almost the only destiny for a woman, there was some reason for that urging, but to-day—well, one wonders how even a member of the great secret order of married women can have the smugness to assume that there is no happiness for a woman outside of marriage.

Mind you, I'm not crying down the married state. Far be it from me. I am not saying that it is not a happy state, but that it is not the only happy state and that all the women who are outside it are not outside simply because they can't find a man to let them in.

Some Bachelor Girls Have Had More. Many of them have had more opportunities to enter than the woman who flaunts her "Mrs." in their face, but have found so much happiness in work, have loved freedom so dearly, that none but the right man could tempt them inside.

There are women who can obtain a measure of happiness in a home, husband and children, even though they feel no deep love for the man. And there are other women so constituted that such a life would be unsatisfying.

Neither type has any right to criticize the other.

Last Night's Concert and Comedietta a Big Success.

A big success financially and from every other standpoint was the concert and comedietta held at Canon Wood Hall last night, under the auspices of St. Thomas's Women's Association. An overflowing audience attended, even standing room in the hall being taxed to a premium. The entire performance was of a very enjoyable and entertaining character, those who took part acquitting themselves faultlessly, and the promoters Miss LeMessurier and Mr. Fred Emerson are well deserving of the congratulations showered upon them. Following a concert to which Miss LeMessurier, Miss Johnson, Miss Rendell, Miss Gosling, Miss Mrs. Foster, Mrs. Outerbridge, Mr. O'Neill, Mr. Fox, Mr. Williams and Mr. Emerson contributed numbers and each of whom were loudly applauded and had to respond to encores, the laughable musical sketch "Around the World for 30 Bob in an Aeroplane," and the rollicking comedietta "Such is Fame" were presented. The artists were Miss LeMessurier, Miss Hayward, Miss Hammerstein, Madame Chauville, Mrs. MacFarsome, Mrs. Colville and Mrs. Gosling; Messrs. Emerson, Reid, Ford and Jones. During the evening the ladies did a brisk business selling candy. The whole proceeds will be devoted to church purposes. The united singing of the National Anthem brought a most enjoyable evening to an all too early termination.

THIS WORLD.

This world, after all, is a bully old place, it ranks with the best of the spheres, and he to his family was a disgrace, who called it a valley of tears. You see a man weeping for something he's lost, some chap who got hurt in the game; he says this old world is a snare and a frost, and you take his word for the same. But hundreds are happy while one makes his wail, while one views the world with a frown; and scores to the harbour of happiness sail, where one strikes a snag and goes down. A little of trouble we certainly have, but when some affliction annoys, just go to the drugstore and order some saline, and grin with the rest of the boys. A little of worry, a little of grief, to season our days as they fit; if there were no darkness, we'd soon beg relief from light that refuses to quit. This world we intend is a bully old sphere, no niftier worlds are about; add I am enjoying my residence here so much that I'll hate to get out.

CONCERT AND SALE OF WORK FOR W.P.A.

At the Presbyterian Hall yesterday afternoon the Sale of Work in aid of the W. P. A. Funds proved a great success. It was opened by Lady Horwood who spoke for some time and in an interesting manner explained the object of the Sale, complimenting the promoters, Mrs. Taylor and her sewing class, who worked so hard to make the event a success. The Sale which opened at 3.30 had everything disposed of by supper hour. The embroidery and plain work stalls were nicely decorated as was also the candy table. At 5 o'clock many who were not able to be present in the afternoon gathered around the tables and partook of the good things. After the inner man had been satisfied a concert, which was greatly enjoyed by all present, then followed, a goodly number of our local talent taking part and were as follows:—

Selection, H. M. S. Briton's Band; piano solo, Mr. R. Kendall; song, Miss M. Shea; horn solo, Mr. A. Bulley; recitation, Miss L. Hanlin; violin solo, Mr. F. Jago; song, Miss Langmead; solo, Mr. F. Seymour; selection, H. M. S. Briton's Band. During the evening, Mr. A. Crocker acted as accompanist.

The singing of the National Anthem brought to a close a very pleasant evening and successful sale of work.

GERMAN COMMENT ON AMERICAN ANSWER. BERLIN, To-day. The American answer to the German-American dispute is being received from the British Embassy by a despatch, commenting on the statement in the document that the United States could not accept a condition, affecting the protection of the lives of Americans, the Leitzinger says, President Wilson is molishing a man of straw with a statement. The German answer to the paper, contains no such conditions. It merely expresses the expectation and does not doubt the German-American dispute is being received from the American Government in Britain to the observance of the ties under international law. On newspapers refrain from comment with the exception of Die Welt, Tages Zeitung, in which later Count Von Reventlow expresses the implication the hope that German expectation really amounted to a condition.

THE SHOOTING OF SKEFFINGTON.

LONDON, To-day. The names of the Duke of Devonshire and Earl Derby are mentioned in the morning papers as most probable to succeed Wimborne as Lord Lieut. of Ireland. The Premier stated that Skeffington, Editor of the Irish Citizen had been taken arrested, and April 26th without the knowledge of the military authorities. This statement was made in reply to an inquiry yesterday whether Skeffington had been shot before the Proclamation of martial law. This matter is under investigation. Asquith added the officer concerned had been arrested, and would be court-martialed. Asquith gave an understanding to the House that no further executions would take place in Ireland before the time of the debate on the Irish question to-morrow. Regarding two other executions, reported to have taken place, at the same time as Skeffington was shot, Asquith stated an investigation would be made. He had no particulars regarding these cases, he said, but he was able to state that the military authorities not only had no responsibility for them but had no knowledge of the occurrences. The Premier informed the House that Sir Roger Casement, who was captured on attempting to land in Ireland to lead a rebellion, would be placed on trial on Monday. Dillon will present a motion to-morrow calling attention to executions in Ireland on the sanction of secret Military tribunals and to the apparent want of proper authority to control the proceedings military. All members of the Irish Party, many liberal and labor members supported the suggestion that a debate should be allowed. The debate in the Commons on the Irish situation which was to have been held to-night has been postponed until to-morrow.

Townsend of Kut.

There is a curious feature of General Townsend's position in Kut. Millions of his fellow-countrymen to whom is only a newly familiar name are thinking first of the peril and suffering of the man fighting like a badger in a barrel for his life. But the few who know and love the man for his happy disposition, his cheerful friendliness, his gay humor and hearty laugh, his handsome, thoroughbred looks and style, are thinking and speaking of him as a national asset, as a born and studied soldier whom England cannot afford to lose. There is something in this contradiction which helps to explain his personality.

As a soldier he has made no great figure in the public eye. Throughout his service he has always done his job, whatever it has happened to be, with quiet capacity and marked success. But he has worn his honors very modestly, and after each achievement has gone quietly on with his soldiering, so that the hero of the Citadel has never been a familiar figure in the public eye. Most people had forgotten who was the gallant and resourceful soldier who held the Chitral fort with such cheerful resolution until it was learned that the general who was plunged into the unfortunate Mesopotamian adventure bore the name of Townsend.

But Charles Townsend's friends know him first as a soldier. It is recognition of his soldierly qualities that is the foundation of their enthusiastic admiration for him. He has never had a wide circle of friends, for his interests have not been wide and diffused. He has no hobbies, outside soldiering. Politics have never appealed to him except so far as politics affect the Army. Society does not entangle him. He is neither a keen hunting man nor an enthusiast for any kind of sport. He just devotes himself first and last and all the time to his profession, and the friends in whose companionship he seeks relaxation outside working hours love to hear him talk about soldiering because that is the subject upon which he speaks with knowledge and insight that they find entrancing.

Here are some of the things they tell of him. Four years ago, when the possibility of war with Germany was derided as empty talk, he not only knew that it was inevitable but he predicted that it would break out suddenly in the autumn of 1914.

He spread out a map on the table in his rooms in Paris and traced out the course which the opening stages of the war would take. This was to his friend Mr. George Grossmith, who was in Paris playing with Rejane at the time, and Mr. Grossmith is an amazed witness to-day to the absolute accuracy of his forecast. He told how the Germans would pour over the Belgian and Luxembourg frontiers, how their heavy artillery would batter down the forts in their way, how with incredible swiftness they would spread a wide front across Belgium and sweep the fated country clear, making Antwerp and Brussels and Ostend, in their rapid southern descent, so as to strike a great blow at the French defences while the French preparations were yet incomplete. He even laid his finger upon the map and marked the region to which the British Expeditionary Force would be sent, and told how inevitably it would be outfanked and forced to retreat to escape annihilation.

He was exact also in his predictions that the first real trial of strength between the attackers and the defenders would occur in positions far behind those originally chosen, and that the British troops would fight their first pitched battles in defence of the French Channel ports.

Maybe there was nothing in these predictions of his that any other qualified and studied soldier might not and did not foresee, but there was something more than an expert's deductions from military and geographical conditions in another prediction that he made with confidence and conviction, and which he consistently maintained unshaken by all contrary opinions. "For he declared time and again that, in spite of all the German early successes, France would be saved, and saved by the new and wonderful spirit of the French people."

This was more than expert anticipation. It was the insight of a prophet. He knew and understood and loved the French nation and people. He speaks French like a Parisian, his devoted wife is a French lady; he had studied French military history with an enthusiast's application, had followed French Army manoeuvres, had reconstructed on the spot the battle-grounds of the past, and had examined with German thoroughness the positions in which the future battles that he foresaw would take place. He was aware—he served for a time as military attaché in Paris—of the weaknesses and difficulties of France and of French politics, but, for all that, with the eye of faith he foresaw the great and commanding fact that twenty months of war have proved—the spirit of the French people and the morale of the French soldiers that no German mechanical superiority could overcome.

His heart has been in France since war broke out. The knowledge adds bitterness in the minds of his friends to the pathos of his wastage in the unprofitable Mesopotamian desert. They tell sadly how he was eating out his heart to be fighting in France during the long months of waiting in India. He went to Mesopotamia with his little packet of troops bitterly regretting that it was not to France that he was going. It was not merely that he loved France, but he saw that England's first concern was in the fighting on the western front.

He hated the diffusion of energy, the waste of effort and strength on one side-show after another, on unproductive expeditions here and there. He was eating his heart out to be fighting to some effect, and he went to Mesopotamia knowing that it should have been France.

So to his friends the hope of his ex-traction from the rat-hole at Kut means the larger hope and ambition that his great endowments of leadership, knowledge and foresight may still have their chance of achievement in France. He has the great gift of inspiring the confidence and devotion of his men. Troops will follow him anywhere, for they know he knows. His cheerful temperament inspires cheerful confidence. His men know that he is master of the matter to which he has consecrated his life.

If there is any personal end or ambition in Charles Townsend's devotion to his profession it is to restore its ancient military distinction to the name he bears. He is the heir-presumptive to the Marquisate of Townsend, and he is the great-great-grandson of the Townsend who fought gloriously with Wolfe at Quebec. If it is his fortune to succeed to the title it is his ambition to bring to it the qualification of achievement. It is a worthy ambition and the pride of race that animates it is the basis of a proud patriotism.—London Daily Mail.

A Great Quartette.

Four French Infantrymen Held Back for Several Minutes an Entire Regiment of Germans—Took Prisoners and Got Away Safely.

A special Paris cable to the New York World says: "Even in stories of individual gallantry at Verdun names are not permitted, so the four heroes of the latest anecdote being narrated in Paris cannot be identified except as infantrymen of the line. They were with their battalion in a specially hot corner of the Caillotte woods a few days ago, when, on a particularly dark night, after the usual frightful bombardment, they dimly perceived compact masses of Germans rising toward them from trenches forty yards away.

The command to fall back to the second line was unheard by the four soldiers, who, instead of ensconcing themselves in an observation post and first with two rifles each, then with a copious store of hand grenades, held back successfully for several minutes an entire regiment of Germans. Apparently amazed at such unexpected resistance, the German commander ordered his men to seek shelter while he dispatched two patrols of six men each to reconnoitre on either wing.

One of the patrols approached within a few feet of the hidden Frenchmen before the latter let fly a fusillade of bombs. Five of the six were slain instantly and the sixth begged for mercy. The other patrol, coming from another direction, saw the lone survivor standing with his hands above his head and promptly surrendered in their turn.

Unwounded and without great difficulty the four infantrymen marched their seven prisoners rearward and rejoined their unit in time to participate in a counter attack, which flung the Germans far backward from the positions they occupied before that astonishing quartette stopped the advance of a whole regiment.

Resolved,—That the qualifications for electors be freeholders or Government leaseholders to the value of £10 per annum, or tenants paying rent to the amount of £20 per annum.

Resolved,—That the qualifications for members of the Council be five times the amount of the qualifications for electors.

Resolved,—That no bye-laws shall have effect until approved of by His Excellency the Governor.

Resolved,—That the limits of the town shall be fixed as follows: The north head of Petty Harbor to be the southern boundary, thence to the west and of Windsor Lake, and thence a direct line to the south of Logy Bay, including all lands, harbors, creeks and rivers within the said space.

Resolved,—That all rates and assessments may be appealed against to the Supreme Court.

Resolved,—That in case of death or resignation, or in case of absence from this country for more than one year, of any of the members of the Council, the High Sheriff shall on the precept of the Governor assemble the qualified inhabitants at a fixed place on a certain day, to fill up any vacancy or vacancies in the Council.

Resolved,—That a detailed account of the expenditure of the Council be published in the public papers of the town, half yearly.

Now follows the address of the inhabitants of St. John's to His Excellency the Governor:

May Please Your Excellency. We the inhabitants of the town of St. John's, beg to express our most cordial thanks for the liberal and enlightening policy which has hitherto characterized Your Excellency's government, not only for this town but for the country generally.

We had such a demonstration of Your Excellency's sentiments in regard to us as a happy omen, that while you are anxious to improve our condition by the formation of useful institutions you are at the same time pleased to regard the wishes of the people from a policy which has not been explained to us. The privileges enjoyed by the neighboring colonies have not yet been extended to Newfoundland. Holding as we do in the highest estimation the present rapid progress of society, and the ambition will be gratified in the formation of a body politic chosen by the people, and we assure Your Excellency that we shall always be anxious to aid the views of the government for the improvement and amelioration of our condition.

An institution which will recognize such inestimable rights will form an important epoch which our history will record as highly honorable to the wisdom and liberality of Your Excellency, and is justly due to the merits and loyalty of that portion of His Majesty's subjects over whom you have been selected to govern.

With this moment we beg leave to present to Your Excellency a series of resolutions which we pray you will do us the favor to recommend to our Most Gracious Sovereign as the basis of a body politic.

After this followed the following report: At a meeting held this 10th day of May at Perkins Long Room and then adjourned to the Barrens in pursuance of public notice, for the purpose of receiving the report of the committee appointed at a town's meeting held March 2nd last to consider on the best plan to carry into effect certain bye-laws proposed for the regulation of the town. James Simms was called to the chair, when he, having stated to the meeting the purposes for which it was held, James Black, Chairman of the committee, addressed himself to the attention of the meeting, and read the report of the proceedings under which the committee had been constituted, and submitted to their consideration the report of the committee, as previously printed, which he read, when Mr. Patrick Morris rose and moved that the report be received, and adopted, and took a view of the articles therein contained and addressed the meeting in support of them.
