CHAPTER XXXII.
LIKE AN INQUISITOR.

It was an hour after the opera, and Hastley Derrick stood leaning against the mantelshelf in his chambers, in Gratton Street.

Of those said chambers it was not every one of his friends who had the entrée—very few, indeed, knew exactly where Hastley Derrick abode. He lived so much at his club and at the Heatherdene mansion, in Grosvenor Square, that there was a general opinion abroad that Hastley Derrick slept at a hotel. But that astute gentleman was too wise to put up with discomfort when comfort and luxury could be obtained with so little trouble; so his chambers were an admirable suite, in one of the best localities, and replete with every modern luxury. There was a living room, a parlor elegantly furnished in the medieval style, with embroidered curtains of neutral tint; curiously carved furniture, some of it of Indian workmanship; a carpet of Turkestan, showing a border of inlaid wood. On the walls, where they were not covered with Persian hangings, were specimens of the ancient and modern schools, and by no means indifferent specimens. Rare and costly china and bronzes, collected from all parts of the globe by their owner himself, stood upon pedestals of Parian marble. A heavy hanging near one corner of the room only half concealed a doorway leading to an inner room, in which was considerable wealth, and was lined with bookcases. It was noticeable that, beside the many valuable copies of rare editions and specimens of bindings, there was a small collection of busts, both statuesque and phrenological. They had served as helps to Hastley Derrick's study of his fellow creatures. In one corner of the room stood a small, ornamental easel, and upon a table were painting materials.

The canvas on the easel was covered by a mahogany case, which effectually prevented the curious from criticizing Hastley Derrick's artistic efforts. Add a piano and a chamber organ—both of the finest description compatible with size—a rafter and a case of dueling pistols, both of which weapons had seen service on Indian sands, and the inventory of furniture and effects is almost complete. The bedroom and dressing room adjoined, his valet sleeping in a room on the upper floor.

So much for the furniture and effects; but there were two persons in the room, the one, Hastley Derrick, tall and aristocratic in his perfectly fitting evening dress, standing against the mantelshelf looking down on the second, a bent, prematurely aged man, who sat in a low chair, against the purple satin of which his dark, pale face, worn with dissipation and privation, showed with ghastly incisiveness, vainly trying to assume an appearance of composure, but visibly shrinking and quailing under the keen scrutiny of the hawklike eyes looking down at him.

It was Stephen Rawdon. He was miserably dressed, and, notwithstanding the season, and that, as usual, there was a fire in the room, he shivered occasionally, and drew his threadbare coat round him with a convulsive, irritable movement.

Hastley Derrick looked down at him with the criticizing scrutiny that would have done honor to a professor examining a new specimen, or an old one under a new phase. Then he motioned to a chair nearer the fire, and said:

"You are cold; go and sit there."

The tone was polite, but as commanding as if it had been used to a dog.

With a moment of hesitation, the miserable man moved to the chair and sank into it, holding his hands to the fire.

Hastley Derrick walked to a bureau and took out a couple of flasks of rare Venetian workmanship, with glasses to match.

"You are also thirsty, no doubt," he said, with a curve of the thin lip. "There is some Liebfraumilch and some brandy. Help yourself."

Stephen Rawdon robe.

"Which is the brandy?" he asked.

"The farther flask; you prefer brandy to German wine?"

"Yes, I do," answered the other curtly.

"Perhaps you would like something to eat?"

"No; I don't want anything to eat. I never do now. Give me brandy and I am content."

Hastley Derrick watched him as he poured out the brandy—a full glass, and drained it at a draft.

"When a man learns the habit of drinking brandy, and forgets the habit of eating, he is in a bad way, my friend."

Stephen Rawdon looked up with a sullen grin.

"I know all about that," he said. "It's easy to talk, and it does no good. Brandy is the only thing that keeps me going, and I must have it."

He stretched out his hand as he spoke toward the flask, but Hastley Derrick's white hand fell upon the trembling arm with a grasp of iron.

"Not yet," he said. "I did not bring you here to get you drunk; you can do that later on. I want to talk to you."

Stephen Rawdon leaned back, with an angry scowl at the calm face—a scowl which waxed resolute and transferred itself to the fire, as he answered:

"Well, go on. I'm listening."

"Pardon me," said Hastley; "it is I who wish—and intend to listen. First, what are you doing here in England?"

"What am I doing?" repeated Stephen Rawdon, with an attempt at resentment. "What are you doing? What is any man doing? I suppose I have a right to be in England or anywhere else, for that matter?"

"I am glad you put it in the form of a question, because the right is questionable," said Hastley Derrick, with the same imperturbable smile of power.

"Well, if you must know, I am doing nothing, except starve."

"So I suspected; you might do worse," said Hastley Derrick significantly.

Stephen Rawdon looked up suspiciously from under his dark eyebrows.

"Did you bring me here to insult me?" he demanded.

Hastley Derrick let the question pass unnoticed.

"How long have you been in England?" he asked.

"How long? I don't know what you mean. I've never been out of England."

He stopped short, warned by the scar which showed upon Hastley Derrick's face.

"Will you answer one question promptly, I wonder?" he said. "Now, then, why did you ask me the name of the lady who came out of the opera, on my arm?"

Stephen Rawdon glanced up at the keen eyes, then fixed his own on the fire.

"Curiosity," he said. "Hungry men are amused at trifles. I—"

"That will do," said Hastley Derrick, interrupting him with a motion of the white hand.

"You had a reason for the question—what was it?"

Stephen Rawdon hesitated, then he answered sullenly:

"What business is it of yours? Then he looked up with a sudden ferocity on his face, and added, with an oath:

"What are you aiming at? What do you mean by badgering me in this manner? You know well enough why I asked the question. Could I do anything else but ask it? Curse me if I didn't think that I had lost my senses, that I had gone mad in real earnest—gone mad by hunger, and cold, and weariness, and brandy; then I saw her come out—and she wasn't leaning on your arm, you are wrong there! I tell you when I saw her all ablaze with diamonds, and looking like a queen, I thought that I had got another attack of D. T., and that the dream I had had so often at night, when I have dropped off into a hungry sleep, I thought that the dream was going to seize me out there in the streets."

He rose from his chair, and stood upright—as upright as his bent figure would allow him—and extended his emaciated hands, clawlike, to Hastley Derrick. "Yes," he repeated, almost as if he were speaking to himself, "I couldn't believe it for the moment. I had often seen her, asleep and waking, but she always looked as she did that night when—" He stopped, and sank into the chair again.

"Very different to what she looked to-night. But—God! altered as she was, I knew her."

He clasped his hands, and bent over the fire, murmuring: "I knew her—I knew her," as if he had forgotten the presence of the silent inquirer above him.

Hastley Derrick turned the diamond ring on his finger, still keeping his eyes fixed on the bent figure.

"Of whom are you speaking?" he

KEEP YOUR HOLIDAY HEALTH

Make it your business to always look and feel as well as you do at the end of your vacation. Sunshine, fresh air and exercise are nature's great restorers and the health gained during a holiday should carry you well along the next vacation.

It is most important that the blood be kept cleared of impurities. This is the business of the Kidneys. One hour's incapacity on the part of the Kidneys and the blood begins to get clogged with poisons which are carried to all parts of the body—giving rise to one or more of the following symptoms:—

Rheumatism follows the crystallizing of uric acid in the muscle tissues and joints. Uric acid poisons should be eliminated by the Kidneys.

Swollen joints and ankles indicate the immediate need for Gin Pills. Pains in the sides and back and through the groin, constant headaches, restless nights, derangements of the urinary system, stone and gravel, painless under the eyes and frequent chills—all these should be taken as warnings and a treatment with Gin Pills taken at once.

asked, with a pure affectation of polite interest; "of the lady whom you saw me escort to her carriage?"

"Yes," replied Stephen Rawdon, with a strange, upward glance. "What—what is her name?"

Hastley Derrick smiled.

"The tall lady, with the dark eyes and eyebrows—rather pale—beautiful—"

"Yes, yes—you know," broke in the other.

"That," said Hastley Derrick, watching his victim keenly, "is the Viscountess Heatherdene."

Stephen Rawdon looked up, with a startled stare on his haggard face.

"The—the Viscountess Heatherdene?" he echoed, as if he could not trust his ears.

Hastley Derrick inclined his head.

"Yes, Lady Heatherdene, the future Countess of Livermore. For one who has never left his native land, you are strangely ignorant of the best-known woman in society, my friend."

But the taunt passed Stephen Rawdon unnoticed.

"She—Lady Heatherdene—Countess of Livermore?" he repeated, staring at the fire.

Then he looked up suddenly.

"Who was the man she was with?"

"Who, but her husband!" replied Hastley Derrick leisurely. "Lord Charles, Viscount Heatherdene; her husband, my friend."

Stephen Rawdon raised his white face, and stared at Hastley Derrick; then he smiled curiously and rubbed his hands together in an aimless kind of manner.

"Oh!" he said sullenly.

"Have you got all the information you require?" asked Hastley Derrick, with comical politeness. "Is there anything else—her ladyship's address, perhaps?"

"Yes," added Stephen Rawdon.

"Where does she live?"

"At present, at the Heatherdene mansion, in Grosvenor Square. Anything else?"

Stephen Rawdon shook his head.

"No," he said. Then he added suddenly: "Yes; are there any children?"

"No," said Hastley Derrick calmly.

"There are no children."

Lansdowne's Perturbing Letters.

(Toronto Globe.)
 Lord Lansdowne's utterances are having a disquieting effect in Allied countries. The Globe has reason to know that in Canada they have not only been widely resented, but have raised in many minds the fear that the realities of the situation may correspond more nearly to Lansdowne's pessimism than to official optimism.
 Before the echoes of his first letter have died away, Lord Lansdowne writes a second one in a strain equally humiliating to British pride, and equally calculated to undermine public confidence in British diplomacy and statesmanship. The recent speech of Count Von Hertling, the German chancellor, was characterized by Mr. Balfour a few days ago as "completely unsatisfactory," but Lord Lansdowne professes to find in it a "permissible advance." He favors the chancellor's suggestion of an intimate meeting of representatives of all the belligerent nations, and the relegation of all territorial questions to a final peace conference.
 What inferences are the British people to draw from the contradiction of the foreign secretary by one who has held that great office who belongs to the same party, and who was until lately a member of the same government? This confusion of counsel among the elder statesmen of the country must be reflected in the public mind. Lord Lansdowne's course is tending to shake the morale of his countrymen, and unless it is based on special information and the most unselfish patriotic motives he should be crushed by the obloquy of all parties and classes.

A noted Englishman has been unkind enough to say that Lord Lansdowne prefers national dishonor to a social revolution. It may be that he thinks the revolutionary spirit will sweep over Europe if the war be prolonged, and will destroy the old order of which his class is the chief pillar. His public career has never been marked by enthusiasm for democracy or social progress. It is significant that though born and bred a Whig, he broke with Gladstone, before the Home Rule issue arose, on an Irish land question which touched his pockets as a great Irish landlord. If he had not been so consistently a champion of privilege and so identified with the interests of property throughout his public life he would not now be suspected of taking a selfish class view of the issues of the war. Britons who believe that the German ruling caste is impervious to considerations of humanity and justice and to any argument but the sword naturally are filled with anger at the spectacle of a British statesman on his knees to the enemy, almost praying for peace, and trying to read an answer to his prayer in Von Hertling's speech delivered while Germany was tearing up her first peace proposals to Russia and dismembering that helpless country.

British cabinet ministers and Unionist members of the House of Commons repudiated Lord Lansdowne's first letter. As he is continuing to signal to Germany with the white flag in direct opposition to official opinion and policy, the government should formally and decisively dissociate itself from him, and from the proposal to hold peace parliaments while Germany, triumphant in the East, continues to organize her strength to check or defeat the Allies in the West.

Daylight Saving.

(New York Times.)
 It will be time within a few weeks for us all to set our clocks ahead an hour, if we are to take full advantage, this year, of the "daylight saving plan." As practically the whole of Europe for several seasons past has found the innovation beneficial, it seems proper that congress should be asked in a loud voice why it does not pass the law, already before it, that would give to the United States the economies and the satisfactions thus to be obtained.

Against this simple and easy change in the hours of going to bed and of getting up there is not, so far as is known, a single argument. Nobody is opposed to it, except possibly a few people who are opposed on principle to any alteration of established habits, and even these folks, if they exist, have had the grace to remain silent. Everybody else who has given the subject any attention or thought is either eager or willing that America should join the long procession of nations that have exchanged an hour of darkness for an hour of daylight throughout the summer months.

To make the change would not cost a single man, woman, or child in the whole country a single penny. It would disarrange no present arrangements in any business or amusement. It wouldn't even evolve a reprinting of the railway time tables! As a matter of fact, within a day or two after the clocks were readjusted, there would be nothing to remind anybody of what had been done except a subconscious feeling that daylight lasted longer than formerly.

This is probably the only "reform" ever proposed that did not involve expenditures by somebody for somebody. But it is also the only one that didn't involve the making of money by somebody out of somebody, and that, just possibly, is why the proposal has so few vigorous advocates. The actual economy in coal alone that is to be effected by carrying out this plan of well demonstrated excellence is figured by the statisticians at millions and millions of tons. That in itself would make it worth while, but coal saving is only the beginning of the long list of benefits to be derived from following the good example we are so mysteriously slow to heed.

Standard Teuton Blouses.

After the standard boot the standard blouse is to be introduced in Berlin. Of late woolen and cotton blouses have become extremely dear in the German capital, so the municipal authority has gone into the dressmaking line.

The new standard blouses will be of four kinds, varying in price from ten to fourteen shillings. They are certainly not beautiful, says the Berliner Tageblatt, being made of coarse lasting material. The taste of buyers is catered for regarding colors, which range from black to various loud hues. The Tageblatt wonders why they have been made in the shape of a shirt and with high, stiff collars, but says the reason remains a secret of the masculine municipal authority. After the standard stocking will come paper, the standard stocking will make its appearance. The great trouble in Germany in these days with regard to stockings and socks is the entire absence of wool with which to mend them.

SUNLIGHT SOAP

THE Sunlight enterprise and organization for production, manufacture, and distribution were made complete long before the war. But during the war the difficulties and costs of transport have been multiplied. Therefore, Lever Brothers have purchased a fleet of steamships to convey raw materials direct from their plantations to Port Sunlight.

The Housewife is given the full benefit of this enterprise, and thus, in spite of the difficulties caused in England by the war, Sunlight Soap remains the best soap throughout the world, and gives the fullest value for the housewife's money.

THE SUNLIGHT SERVICE IS THE MOST COMPLETE SOAP SERVICE IN THE WORLD. SUNLIGHT SOAP IS MADE FOR THE HOUSEWIFE'S PROFIT, FOR ONLY THEREBY CAN THE MAKERS HOPE TO PROFIT BY SUNLIGHT SOAP.

Guillotines in Public Places.

(By H. H. Windsor, in the April Popular Mechanics Magazine.)

There is a steadily increasing impatience throughout the country at the lack of severity on the part of the Government toward those who are here as spies and traitors and who are scheming and working in every way, chiefly underground, to harm our soldiers and our country. Almost every day we read of incendiary fires, costing in dollars from a few hundred thousand to a million or more. Yesterday it was a shipyard, to-day it's a warehouse filled with food supplies; to-morrow it will be an ammunition works; and the enemy in our midst and at Berlin laughs in devilish glee and the sound of his mirth is like that of Nero. Some are caught with incriminating documents; others in the act of sedition and conspiracy.

A public execution by the guillotine is a revolting, repulsive sight, but if nothing else will serve to stop the work of the treacherous thousands with which this country is honeycombed, we might better set up the gleaming blade in our public places, and having set it up, put it to use. While our young men are heroically offering to make, and already daily are making, the supreme sacrifice, we permit the work of spies whose noble effort is to bring disaster and death to our men. The German is in deadly fear of the bayonet thrust in battle; of the dignified, solemn, irresistible guillotine he would have even greater horror. Perhaps a few public examples might be sufficient; it would at least greatly reduce the number of those most openly offensive. The very sight of a ghastly guillotine, by day and night, would impress its latent possibilities upon even the most hardened Hun. Nor will there be those wanting to pull the cord when once the proof of guilt has been established. But desperate diseases require unusual treatment, and the firing squad or even the hangman's knot are too good for some people who will walk our streets to-day and smile at our credulity while they sneer at our nerve.

Keeper of Minots Light

SAVED SPECTACULARLY.
 Once a terror to mariners, Minots Light, which stands on a reef off Boston Harbor, has another thrilling story added to its history, says the March Popular Mechanics Magazine. Three days before Christmas—Captain Octavius Reamey, the keeper, approached the tower in his motor boat, which was loaded with provisions and fuel obtained on the mainland. As the craft drew up, it was overturned by the waves that were breaking over the base of the structure, leaving the captain battling alone in a tossing maelstrom of icy water. The assistant keeper was lowered on a rope from the doot fifty feet above. He managed to seize the drowning man before it was too late, and both men were pulled from the water by their companions to the doorway high in the tower.

Newspaper Cost in War Times.

(Ottawa Citizen.)

Niagara Falls has joined the newspaper merger class in the union of the Evening Review and the Daily Record, the Review absorbing its rival. The reasons for this merger are the same as have prompted numerous other such combinations during the war, viz., the impossibility of two papers making a success of their undertakings under modern conditions in circumscribed fields. The expense of newspaper publishers have reached such heights that only the fittest now survive and only in union is there safety from financial disaster for the others.

You Can't Find Any Dandruff, and Hair Stops Coming Out.

Save your hair! Make it thick, wavy, glossy and beautiful at once.

Try as you will, after an application of Danderine, you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair, and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use when you see new hair, fine and downy a thist—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is immediate and amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health. Get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment. A small trial bottle will double the beauty of your hair.

There are some very clever little motor hats made of oilcloth. The new hats are worn so low that the hair does not show.

"Chalk" is the newest white. Some new hats begin and end their lives as mere crowns.

Preventing Poultry Diseases.

Poultry diseases seem to be getting a pretty good hold in the farm flocks of this country. The conditions under which so many of the flocks are kept is the chief reason for the prevalence of disease. Lack of light in the poultry house, together with dampness and coldness, are sure to have an effect on the flock. With this, many houses have an enormous accumulation of droppings, and are otherwise filthy and foul smelling. Such conditions can result only in disease breaking out in the flock. Coupled with these conditions, there is often a lack of feed and a poor method of feeding it. Chickens that are huddled together in a damp, cold, filthy poultry house, and that get only half enough to eat, are sure to contract disease of some sort. Chickens that are in thin, half starved condition cannot throw off disease in the same way as strong, vigorous and well-fed chickens.

Liberal use of air-slaked lime, especially below the roosts over the droppings, will help to keep the flock healthy. Clean out the droppings at least once a week. Keep plenty of clean, dry straw on the floor for the hens to scratch in. Throw all the hard grain in this litter, and make the hens work for what they get. Exercise and yet more exercise will do wonders in keeping a flock in good, healthy condition. One-half the work of controlling and combatting disease lies in making conditions what they should be. Bring the flock back to normal conditions by feed and care, and one-half the work of prevention and cure will be accomplished.—M. C. Hermer.

SATURDAY, March 30, 1918.

A Public Scandal.

It is very rarely that a clergyman protests against any neglect of public service and when one does so, there is added force behind it, because no minister would make a statement of such a nature without having good and substantial reasons upon which to base his charge. For this reason then, if for no other, the protest made by the Reverend H. J. Read, Rector of Channel Parish and Rural Dean of the Deanery of St. George's, which is published in another column, and which we take the liberty of using here also, is a proof that there is or has been a dereliction of duty on the part of the official whose work it is to compile the news matter sent to the outside. That for the past two days this has not been sent, at least to Channel, is striking proof that some one is to blame. The message received by the Telegram runs:

"No news for two days. Government line working. Great indignation here over neglect of public service at present crisis. Kindly send collect one hundred words latest news."

We do not for a moment imagine that the people of Channel would be otherwise than indignant. This is not the first occasion, nor yet the second, and others could be multiplied, when at periods, the towns of Channel and Port aux Basques have suffered from lack of news, but at the present moment when all eyes are turned to the great battle raging in the Western theatre and every man is saying to his neighbor "what is the news?" it seems cruel and heartless to use no stronger terms, to withhold such meagre intelligence as usually makes up the output dispatch from them. No excuse can be given that telegraphic communication is interrupted for the message states that the Postal Telegraph line is working. That this is so, the evidence of having received the message from Channel is offered. There is room for improvement somewhere. Of course we shall be doled with the usual excuses for this reprehensible failure to send out the daily message, but having the evidence in our possession no amount of bluff will create any diversion from the main issue. It is time that the Government take action. Their fuglemen keep blowing the horn, but it is empty sound. Nero fides, while Rome was burning, and the Government appear to be emulating that imbecile monarch. Action front gentlemen!

Sun Life of Canada Had Prosperous Year

The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada closed 1917 with another record statement for the year's operations.

The Company again maintained its position of leadership among Canadian life companies in amount of new assurance issued, total assets in force, assets, surplus and income. Assets are over $90,000,000, an increase of over $7,000,000 for the year. It is to be noted that the Sun Life's assets have more than doubled in the past six years and more than tripled in the past nine years, a record of growth little short of phenomenal, and one clearly indicative of financial stability. Assurances issued and paid for during the year totalled over $47,800,000, the largest amount ever secured by any Canadian life assurance company. Assurances in force now total over $311,800,000.

Cash income for the year amounted to over $19,200,000. Surplus over all liabilities and capital now stands at over $5,560,000. Payments to policyholders totalled $8,840,246, bringing total payments to shareholders since organization to over $69,000,000.

MARGINAL NOTES

By Commentator.

THE WAR. One who seeks to write intelligently of the war as a whole like the present has a most difficult task before him, for any hour may bring news of entirely fresh developments which will give the situation a very different aspect and falsify all his predictions. It is impossible for the moment to take any but the most general survey of what has happened in the week that has just passed—the most tremendous of the war. While it should warn us against over-confidence or the belief that the position does not contain very real and critical dangers, on the other hand the last feeling it should induce is one of pessimism.

Now as to the facts. Some weeks ago the Advocate boldly printed the announcement that the F.P.U. would buy any of the men's seals for $12.00, and that it guaranteed that price. This figure was based on the slight knowledge of the market, or of the real value of the fat, but was merely fixed by certain unscrupulous political designs of the Government. I am sorry that none of the sealers have taken the F.P.U. at its word and offered their seals to it. If the advice is of any value to them, I can tell them that if they do this and the F.P.U. refuses to buy, they can compel it by law to do so. Now lately—at what date I do not know—the Government received a request from the British Government that no seal oil be sent elsewhere than to Britain, where it was needed for edible purposes, from which it could be inferred that the British Government was prepared to buy the whole output. The manufacturers had figures from which the market price in England could be deduced as about £80 a ton. On that estimate they decided that they could not offer more than $10 a quintal. The Executive, who had in reality no concern in the whole matter, and whose interference to start with was pure officiousness, insisted upon $12. The owners refusing, and rightly, the Government announced its intention of buying the men's seals (about ascendant) as a measure of public money as can be imagined, and demanded that the manufacturers undertake the manufacture of it at a reasonable profit, to be fixed, presumably, by the Government themselves. This demand was made expressly under the War Measures Act. Now not only was such a proceeding a prostitution of that Act, but it was not even justified by it—it was a direct violation of the principle underlying it, and would never have been countenanced by the Court. As in the suggestion that the ships should prosecute a second voyage, the Executive were simply arrogating a power which they did not possess.

The most disreputable part of the affair remains. The reason underlying the Government's action was their conviction that the British Government could be induced to raise its price from $10 to £100 a ton, in other words that the British public could be made to pay another £20 a

The Erik struck the hoods on the 19th, about 40 miles N.E. of the Funks. The patch in which most of the ships were working was soon cut up, the Erik securing 2,000 old and young. On the 22nd she struck the harps and secured on that day and the 23rd about 8,000. Sunday intervened and the ship steamed northward to another patch from which the Erik captured between four and five thousand. On Wednesday about 100 whitecoats were killed. The Thule and Seal being among them. Capt. Parsons would have taken more had he decided to bear up for home. Captain Parsons and crew are enjoying the best of health.

WHAT MRS. MCKAY SAYS OF DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Gives the Real Reason Why Dodd's Kidney Pills Continue to Grow in Popularity as a Kidney Remedy.

Salt Springs, N.S., March 29th. (Special.)—"I have found satisfaction in using Dodd's Kidney Pills, and I recommend them to all who suffer."

This is the statement of Mrs. Howard P. McKay, a well-known resident of this place. That statement goes straight to the point, even as Dodd's Kidney Pills go straight to the kidneys.

For Dodd's Kidney Pills are long past the experimental stage in Nova Scotia. For more than a quarter of a century they have been in use as a household remedy for kidney disease and those other ills that come from sick kidneys.

Dodd's Kidney Pills have done just what Mrs. McKay says. They have given "satisfaction."

They have been used to treat rheumatism, sciatica, diabetes, dropsy, men back gravel, and other similar ills. That they continue to give satisfaction is evidenced by their ever-growing popularity.

If you haven't used Dodd's Kidney Pills, ask your neighbors about them.

MORE HEAVY FIGHTING.

LONDON, To-day. Heavy fighting has taken place south of the Somme in which the British have been pressed back to a line running west of Hamel, Maroilles and Gemun. Says this evening announcement: North of the Somme all the British positions were maintained. The French say the announcement are continuing their offensive on the southern front between Mont Didier and Massey, and French troops are arriving in this region.

GERMAN PERFDIDY.

LONDON (N.Y. Mail), To-day. Kurdish tribesmen have been used repeatedly by the Turks in their campaign against the Armenians, and are being urged to take advantage of the armistice to make an attack on the withdrawing Russian forces. In documents which have come in possession of the British War Office is an order from Major Druffel, a German staff officer with the Turkish forces in Mesopotamia, to the Turkish commanders of the Prussian front, and is as follows: "Communicate discreetly to the Kurdish chiefs that, according to the order received by me, they are to accelerate the Russian withdrawal by continuing their robberies and ambushes. In spite of the armistice, the withdrawal of the Russians is to be made as difficult to them as possible. Explain to the tribes the precarious position of the Russians and tell them how easy their success will be. Their withdrawal from Persia is imminent, and whilst it is in progress the greatest possible loss must be inflicted on them. In fact the armistice should make no difference whatever to their actions."

FRENCH CANADIANS AID GERMAN.

QUEBEC, To-day. An anti-conscription riot broke out last night and an angry mob destroyed the newspaper offices and wrecked the premises of the local registrar under the Military Service Act. The buildings in which offices are located are adjacent to the auditorium of the theatre, and it caught fire. The intention of the crowd, it is believed, was to destroy all records of cases which have been heard in the exemption courts. Thousands of records were torn up and thrown out of windows. Firemen got the fire in the auditorium under control before it had gone far. Mayor Lavigneur read the Riot Act amidst jeers and called on the militia. The appearance of the militia had a pacifying effect upon the crowd, but up to midnight no arrests had been made at police headquarters.

ENEMY NOT PRESSING ATTACK.

LONDON, To-day. Apart from local fighting on the Somme front, the enemy has not pressed his attack to-day north of the Somme. According to an official report issued by the War Office to-night, we gained ground at certain places. South of the Somme heavy hostile attacks developed in the neighbourhood of Messines and Demuin. Fighting is still going on in this sector.

WASHINGTON TALKS ENCOURAGINGLY.

WASHINGTON, To-day. Late to-day the War Department is publishing without a word from General Pershing about the placing of the American Army in France at the disposal of the Allies.

of the Allied Chief of Staff, General March said, if General Pershing has called on the French Chief of Staff, for that is the position General Foch holds there, and put the American Army at his disposal, as reported in the press despatches, General Pershing has notified us. Our last despatch from either Pershing or Bliss on the battle situation lead us to believe that the French counter attack yesterday was one of the most encouraging things in the battle thus far. The picture of the German army driving through there, and being struck and hurled back three miles by a brilliant French attack, is inspiring.

QUEBEC PRO-GERMANS ON THE RAMPAGE.

QUEBEC, To-day. Quebecers passed another wild evening last night when a mob of young men, evidently the same gang which attacked the military police yesterday, raided the offices of the government in the auditorium building and, following this, attacked the offices of Levenement and Chronicle, two Government newspapers. These offices were wrecked completely, but so far as the Chronicle is concerned the presses were not badly damaged and the paper will likely come out as usual. The interior of the office was torn to pieces, plate glass windows, etc., were broken into pieces and furniture turned over. The Mayor advised the editor of the Chronicle a few minutes before that the attack was being made, but this was of little use. The police were present merely as spectators, but so far as can be learned not a single miscreant was captured, though they took away a magnificent moose head, the property of Major General Sir David Watson, which was in the outer office, and paraded with it at the head of the procession. They also took the time to smash a couple of typewriters and snatching off electric wires, etc. The Mayor entered the office after the crowd had gone out on its way to do more damage to the Levenement building, and he wanted the signatures of two Justices of the Peace in order that he could read the Riot Act, as he had only one at the time and was obliged to defer the reading until he found another. The crowd next proceeded to the Auditorium Theatre and again commenced an attack, the building suddenly taking fire in the midst of the demonstration. The fire brigade was quickly on the scene and worked hard to save the magnificent structure. Evidently the Mayor read the Riot Act, as a detachment of troops hearing rifles marched to the Auditorium dispersing most of the crowd. Things are very quiet now, but the crowd is watching the fire while a cordon of troops were lined up in the square. It is thought that the flames may be confined to the offices of the Government and the theatre itself may be saved. The editors are all scattered around trying to get accommodation. Will cover the latest details such as possible.

GENERAL FOCH IN SUPREME COMMAND.

WASHINGTON, To-day. Information has reached here that General Foch has been appointed Commander of all the Allied and American forces in France. This means the unification of all the armies opposing the Germans and is a step which has long been urged, and which apparently has been brought about by the recognition of imperative demand for concentrated effort to hurl back the gigantic thrust of the enemy in France.

DIMINUTION IN ATTACK.

PARIS, To-day. Along the battle front of the Oise, there has been a notable diminution in the fighting to-day, according to a War Office statement to-night. During the course of to-day, offensive activity of the enemy was manifested only in local attacks against a few points along the front. The statement says: Along the front of the Oise there has been a notable diminution in the fighting to-day the offensive activity of the enemy was manifested only by local attack on a few points. Along our front we are being strengthened every day by the constant arrival of reinforcements and all these attacks are being stopped by our troops with losses for the assailants. Raids over positions in the region of Baden Viller forest were completely broken down.

NOT QUITE CLEAR.

OTTAWA, To-day. Responding to a demand from the military authorities, the Military Service Council has decided to call up for service men in the Medical Category. Under the Military Service Act, Category B men are liable for overseas, but not for combatant service, and they are being called out because of the necessity for securing more men for railway construction and similar work which has arisen, and it has therefore become necessary to draft all men in medical category B in respect of whom no other grounds for exemption exist. The Military Service Council is, therefore, issuing instructions to registrars to take immediate steps to call up such men under the procedure heretofore adopted.

REVIEW IN BRIEF.

General Foch, the great French strategist to whom has been attributed much of the credit for the victory of the Marne, in September, 1914, is being hailed as Generalissimo of the Allied forces in France. The basis of this report comes in an unofficial despatch from London, but a message of congratulation, sent to General Foch, by President Wilson on Friday, apparently indicates that the forces of the Entente are fighting under a co-ordinated control for the first time during the war. As indicative of this, General Pershing has gone to General Foch and placed at his command all American soldiers, now on French soil. General Foch thus have, in addition to the men on the actual battle lines, a strategic reserve force, the size and location of which is not known, but from recent reports probably is very large. This force, all along, has been expected to strike a blow which may deliver a knock-out to the enemy offensive. After eight days, in which has swept forward over the rolling hills of Picardy, at times like a tidal wave, the German offensive has slowed down and instead of a sweeping advance, its progress has been checked at all but one sector of front, and there it has been merely creeping for the past two days. This fact is even admitted by the German war office, which usually concedes nothing. From Arras, north of Arras, to Albert on the Somme, the British lines have been holding stubbornly and have thrust back the Germans at a number of points.

TO THE POINT.

LONDON, To-day. Lloyd George puts it, as he puts most things, with the most satisfying succinctness, when he says: "It is impossible to exaggerate the importance of getting American reinforcements across the Atlantic in the shortest possible space of time." These words might well be displayed over every Government office, every shipyard, and every training camp in the United States, as they contain the kernel of the whole problem.

MUST THEY LEARN GERMAN?

LONDON, To-day. The beginning by the Germans on Wednesday of an offensive in the direction of Kursk, 300 miles south of Moscow, is reported in Petrograd, according to a Russian despatch from that city, and German advance guards are reported to have been seen 12 miles from this town. The provisional Ukrainian Government has prohibited the use of Russian language.

SITUATION NOW CLEARER; ENEMY OFFENSIVE ARRESTED.
LONDON, March 29. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—Telegraphing from French Army Headquarters this evening, Reuter's correspondent says: The situation is now clearer than at any time since the beginning of the offensive. The enemy arrested in mid course has abandoned marching straight upon objectives and breaking down resistance by overwhelming numbers. He is now striking at estimated weak spots in order to drive us back as far as possible before he himself is brought to a standstill. Thus the enemy drive down the Oise Valley is finally arrested. Attempts to cross the Oise farther north failed and the bridges are now destroyed. The village of Font Evreque below Noyon has been recaptured and the enemy driven from the heights above Susey. Northwest of Noyon the enemy's capture of Mont Didier was just too late for him to profit by it as French forces were able to engage the Germans to a standstill, thus nullifying their efforts to pierce the junction of the Anglo-French armies. The hinge between the English and French ar-

Thinking Aloud.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

"I'd like her first rate," a man said to me the other day, in regard to a pleasant middle aged lady who boarded one summer where we did. "If she would do some of her thinking to herself; but she seems to feel she's got to share every thought that comes into her head. He exaggerated, as we usually do when we try to characterize. But I knew well enough what he meant.

The lady in question is one of that large class of people who seem to like to put the simplest processes of thought into speech.

For instance, she would be sitting at the breakfast table finishing her coffee and she would break into speech thus:

Her Plans For The Day.

"Well, I think I'll go upstairs and make my bed and then put on my sweater and get my knitting and go down on the beach and see what kind of a day it is."

Now there was absolutely nothing in that thought to interest the breakfast table. But she didn't expect to interest any one. She was simply following her habit of thinking aloud instead of to herself.

His Processes Of Thought.

A stenographer told me that the hardest man she ever worked for was one who insisted on doing all the thinking by which he arrived at his conclusions aloud, instead of simply announcing the conclusions. That is, if he were telling her how he wanted a piece of work done, he would say, "Of course you might do it so and so (long explanation) but that would be bad because, etc. So perhaps it would be better to do it thus and thus (long explanation) unless, etc." When he finished, she usually had to ask him to start again and tell her what he had decided he wanted.

One Thought in a Hundred Worth Uttering.

Of a hundred thoughts that pass through one's head, surely not more than one has any justification for utterance. It is a sign of a childlike mind to increase this ratio. The inhibitions that make us stop and select from our thoughts those which need to be communicated or which we have reason to think would interest others, instead of tumbling them out helter skelter, are a sign of growth and development. The adult who thinks aloud, is a throwback to the child learning to read who has to pronounce the words as he masters them. It is not for nothing that the Lord made thought and speech two quite distinct processes.

THE LIVER AND BEAUTY.

If you have a yellow or muddy skin or dark rings beneath the eyes, you have let your liver fall into lazy ways. Use a bleach, if you wish for temporary improvement, but lose no time in prodding that important organ into activity and your skin will soon whiten. A good way to accomplish this result is by means of percussion.

Holding the hands four or five inches from the body below the right bust, slap the body vigorously with the hands alternately. The arms should be held motionless and the hands swung from the wrists with a vigorous movement, one hand succeeding the other as rapidly as the beat of a drum. Practice this for five minutes night and morning.

Another excellent exercise is taken with the feet about eighteen inches apart with the arms extended. Keep the arms stiff, bend the right knee and the waist, and then, with a swinging movement, come as close as possible to touching the floor at the right side with the finger tips of the right

Babies should go barefoot until they begin to walk and should then walk course under suitable conditions. Sandals are always better for them than shoes and shoes, when worn, should always be laced, never buttoned. The toe out walk is bad because it puts the weight on the heel and tends to produce bad posture and flat feet. So by all means teach the baby to walk straight footed.

Some deformities of the feet exist from birth and others are due to infantile paralysis, high heels, improper shoes and inherited weakness. The most common deformity is flat feet. It is the duty of every mother to give her afflicted child the benefit of a physician's advice, and by all means in her power to remove the handicap which deformed feet always are.

A mother should never allow her baby to be awakened by a sudden noise or unless absolutely necessary. It makes a child tend to nervousness. A baby's first business in life is to sleep and eat and grow. If it must be awakened, do it by rustling a paper or by a gentle touch.

WASTELESS MEALS.

WALT MASON

My table sees no wanton waste. I do as Hoover tells; I eat my eggs with eager haste, and then consume the shells. Three times a day I drop my harp, and I hush its golden tones, and eat my share of kippered carp, and then I eat the bones.

But casting levity aside, since it's in rotten taste, I take a patriotic pride in cutting out the waste. We used to have a garbage can—fornish the barn it stood—and there the hired girl often ran, to dump all kinds of food. Big chunks of steak we failed to eat, she'd throw therein, kersplash; but now we take such hunks of meat, and make uplifting hash. For things in bulk, in days of old, I used to blow my pay, and when they grew a crop of mold, we threw the lot away. But now I'm careful of the dime, I buy just what we'll eat, say two molasses at a time, one egg, one grain of wheat. I always save the coffee grounds, and boil them o'er and o'er; no wasted provender abounds, back of my kitchen door. The village dogs that once waded fat on what I threw away, now through their skins show every splot, and they must live on hay. The grocer's bills have shorter grown, the butcher feels an ache, when he wraps up a cheap soupbone, where once I bought a steak. It is no fadist's path I tread, no scheme of fiftal

Our Daily Story.

THE KNITTER.

Clementine Woodbine had never knitted before, so, to start, she thought she had better begin with something small—say a necktie.

So she knitted a necktie. By the time she's got to the last stitches she was so fascinated with knitting that she couldn't bear to stop, even for an instant.

So she enlarged the necktie into a muffler to gladden the heart and warm the neck of some unknown soldier boy. By this time she was a past mistress of purring, under-pinning and the short jab with the left, and she refused to stop knitting even to prepare the meals. The neighbors, out of pity, fed the children.

When the muffler was finished she enlarged it into a sweater. Meanwhile the price of wool rose higher and higher, and her husband, when she informed him that she was going to enlarge the sweater into a blanket, had a serious heart attack from which he never fully recovered.

The blanket finished, she conceived the idea of enlarging it into a stage curtain for one of the camp theatres. Her husband had now gone bankrupt, buying wool, and the children were all in a home for destitutes. In order to get wool and still more wool for the theatre curtain, Clementine began to pawn all the household furnishings.

Finally, with the house stripped bare and only twenty square feet of the curtain finished, (the doctor having warned against the danger of removing her in her superexcited state) they simply built an asylum right around her.

Everyday Etiquette.

"Should a girl write a note of thanks to her escort for flowers which he has sent her to wear to a party, or will verbal thanks be sufficient?" asked Gladys. "And, should the man go first when entering a theatre or church?"

"Thank your escort for the flowers in person, that will be sufficient. A man enters the public place first to open the doors and make the way clear for his companion. The lady should follow the usher first down the aisle," answered her friend.

Doctors Use This for Eczema

If you are afflicted with skin disease, the kind that seems to baffie medical treatment, and leaves you wild with itch, do not fail to investigate a prescription that is now recommended by one of the best skin specialists, even in preference to their own prescriptions. This is the simple, soothing, liquid external remedy, D. D. D. Prescription. This liquid stops the itch instantly, and effects a cure that is permanent. In fact, it took thousands of cures, case after case, before the best doctors were convinced of the absolute merit of this remedy.

It is now thoroughly established among medical authorities that eczema is purely a skin disease, due to a germ, and curable only through the skin. It is not a blood disease at all. The effect of D. D. D. Prescription is to penetrate the pores, kill the disease germs and to soothe and heal the skin, restoring it to its healthy condition.

D. D. D. has been found to be especially effective in all forms of Eczema, Bad Leg, Pimples, Dandruff, Ulcers and other skin diseases.

British Hold the German Advance

With French Troops Cooperating. No False Optimism, But a Steady Confidence in Victory. Stubborn Fighting Continues.

SITUATION NOW CLEARER; ENEMY OFFENSIVE ARRESTED.

LONDON, March 29. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—Telegraphing from French Army Headquarters this evening, Reuter's correspondent says: The situation is now clearer than at anytime since the beginning of the offensive. The enemy arrested in mid course has abandoned marching straight upon objectives and breaking down resistance by overwhelming numbers. He is now striking at estimated weak spots in order to drive us back as far as possible before he himself is brought to a standstill. Thus the enemy drive down the Oise Valley is finally arrested. Attempts to cross the Oise farther north failed and the villages of Pontil Eveque below Noyon has been recaptured and the enemy driven from the heights above Supey. Northwest of Noyon the enemy's capture of Mont Didier was just too late for him to profit by it as French forces were able to engage the Germans to the west and bring the advance to a standstill, thus nullifying their efforts to pierce the junction of the Anglo-French armies. The hinge between the English and French armies will never be broken as the junction is now covered by French forces strong enough to meet all eventualities. Eighty-seven enemy divisions have been identified on fifty miles of the battle front comprising the pick of the German troops. The French steadily engaged three guards divisions, the famous Brandenburgers and some of the best Bavarian divisions. Before the offensive the Germans had 109 divisions in line on the British front and 76 divisions in reserve; the enemy therefore has already engaged more than the whole of the reserves in France in the present battle and has also denuded certain sectors of his best troops. To replace the wastage the enemy possesses about 20 divisions and conceivably 40 of inferior material useful for filling gaps, but not for winning battles. Describing the fierce fighting at the Anglo-French junction the correspondent says French troops were brought upon the 22nd in motor lorries and thrown in without artillery support. Successive enemy thrusts necessitated fresh reinforcements and troops were thrown northwards on the 23rd in order to maintain the liaison with the British right. French cavalry were also thrown in on the 25th for that purpose and there were moments when the French were hard put to it to foil the German thrusts. A French officer paying tribute to the British troops described how the Germans crossed the Canal at Jussey at the 17th attempt, the Canal being then choked with German dead.

ment. The ground near Dernancourt has been cleared of the enemy, who was repulsed in an attack towards Buire. We are still holding on a line passing near Mercuriot and Saffly Lesec. Fresh enemy guns are arriving slowly, the night's rain delaying this operation. Airmen continue to report enemy concentrations behind the lines, which it is expected foreshadow further heavy thrusts.

ers the British and French are offering firm resistance. Infantry fighting has begun to give place to artillery battles and in the next few days the guns may be expected to speak loudly. In this respect the British and French have advantage inasmuch as the Germans have been unable to drag much artillery with them. They are engaged in establishing themselves in positions to which they have advanced but have not had time to thoroughly organize their defences. The main position of to-day's fighting was around the northern sector of the battlefield where both French and British had a successful day, counter attacking with great vigour where the Germans threatened to push through most deeply into their lines. At present the front is most uneven. During the first rush the Germans succeeded at some places in extending the lines, so that here and there were formed pockets which sooner or later must be straightened out. Further details concerning the first part of the battle show that no fewer than 38 German divisions were thrown simultaneously against a front held by only eight British divisions. The troops fought valiantly and delayed the German advance for a considerable time. Since then about 49 further German divisions have been led into the battle. Not only the army of the Bavarian Crown Prince, but also that of the German Crown Prince is now engaged. The German general and general immediately commanding them from the north to the south of the front attacked are Von Buelow, Von Marwitz and Von Suttler. The army of General Von Suttler faces the French along the Oise. It's very quiet to-day after the bloody feats of its attempt to cross the river. Most of the bridges have now been blown up. Owing to the casualties among his aviators the enemy is compelled to feel almost blindly for weak spots in the Allied lines which he has been seeking constantly so as to throw against them some of his dense masses. When it is remembered that the enemy has more than a division for every thousand yards of the front over which he attacks, an idea may be gained of the difficulties with which the Allies have been contending. The German advance has been more rapid at some points, and the Allies have scarcely had time to get away their cannon as no horses were near. One French battery of 76s was dragged five miles with ropes by the gunners who succeeded in saving it. A German prisoner who was captured to-day said the Germans were greatly surprised at the small numbers of British found. They had been told that the British in front of them had been annihilated. The same prisoner said the Germans had formed a special corps whose duties were to advance behind the fighting troops and strip all clothing from the dead. The bodies, he said, were buried without any covering and the clothing thus obtained was served out again. Reports from other parts of the front say the German line is being held by mediocre divisions brought from the Russian front, the best troops having been withdrawn to participate in the battle. Every one of the divisions which has been identified since the offensive began had already been classified. Among them are three of the famous Guard divisions and some of the Bavarians. Whether they will hurl more divisions in the furnace is of course unknown; it is considered possible that they still have approximately 40 divisions which may be used to replace those that have suffered the most heavily.

WHERE THE LINES JOIN.

With the French Armies in France, March 28.—Fresh German troops were thrown to-day against the French army maintaining the junction between the British and French, and despite the determined stand made by the French they were forced to retire towards the west, the Germans breaking through at Mont Didier and occupying that place. Further south the French held well, resisting all German efforts. In the rear of the French army movements were so intense that it was impossible to approach the firing line. Notwithstanding the continued advance of the Germans the battle has become more or less established the past two days. The French are pushing north in order to keep in close touch with the British who have been forced back by overwhelming forces. The French have relieved part of the British line. Nothing as yet has been allowed to develop regarding the intentions of the Allied commanders, but it is certain that at an opportune moment they will make a counter stroke. The general idea of the battle as far as it has gone shows the Germans chose to make their principal attack against the British. At the same time they made a demonstration just where the two armies, French and British join. The Germans succeeded in making a breach in the British line which the French forces closed, but first sending cavalry to fill the gap. The Germans had carefully prepared for this offensive, rehearsing the parts they were to play when the moment came. Just before the assault the British short period and with projectiles charged with noxious gas. Then came thick waves of infantry closely following one another. The first wave or what remained of it, reached the objectives and held on till further waves came and cleaned up the islets of British who were holding on with obstinacy, using for that purpose jets of liquid flame.

CONFIDENT OF VICTORY.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, March 28.—While there is no false optimism regarding events in northern France in the American Expeditionary force, all ranks, although realizing that the situation is tense, are confident that allied arms eventually will be victorious. Not the slightest doubt is expressed, but that the British and French will not only halt the enemy but defeat them.

FOCH MADE GENERALISSIMO.

LONDON, March 29. (Official)—North of the Somme we maintained all our positions, and no serious enemy attacks have been launched to-day. South of the Somme there has been heavy fighting, and our troops have been pressed back to a line running west of Hamel, Marcel, cave and Demun. On the French front south of Damun the French line runs through Meudres, Le Neuville, Sirey, Bernard and Gratibus to just west of Mont Didier. There has been further heavy fighting to-day on this line. Between Mont Didier and Lassigny, the French counter offensive continues. Fresh French troops are arriving. East of Lassigny there is no change in the French line. A captured German order shows that on March 21st the objective of an enemy division, which attacked near St. Quentin, was to be the Somme-Hain, a distance of at least 11 miles. Actually the division in question penetrated rather less than three miles.

ITALY CONFIDENT OF ALLIES SUCCESS.

WASHINGTON, Mar. 29. Supreme confidence in the ability of the French and British armies to hold the Germans in check is freely expressed in Italy, both in political circles and by newspapers, the Italian Embassy was advised to-day by cable from Rome. The entire Italian press, said the message, contain warm brotherly comment for the brave English and French troops. The opinion prevails that the present retirement will be followed at the right moment by a powerful counter-attack. The parliamentary group for national defense has telegraphed to the British Ambassador its sentiment of highest admiration for the British army. All political circles expressed solidarity of the Italian peoples with the Allied nations and armies, and also firm confidence in the energy of the Allies.

indeed described as not causing the slightest anxiety at headquarters, where the gravest crisis is considered over. Fresh troops of artillery are coming up steadily and the army is growing in confidence as in strength. Troops in many parts of the line have not moved their position for days except to throw back the masses. With the exception of Mont Didier where the enemy gained a little there is still no sign of an offensive on any other sector, the battle retaining its general character of a huge attack on a wide front. It is evidently an attempt to widen the area of advance that the enemy continues the desperate efforts on the north. Enemy losses are not diminished and correspondents now estimate these at 50 per cent. They also mention the appearance of the naval division which the Germans had hitherto only employed in extreme necessity. A significant German communique received last evening contained an apologetic statement of German losses and evidently intended to allay the anxiety. The German newspapers give great prominence to the valour of the British and warn their readers not to expect any swift successes declaring that hard protracted fighting will be necessary to overcome a most determined and very strong enemy, General Ludendorff is quoted as warning the correspondents that railways are torn up and horses are exhausted but, every effort will be made to maintain the impetus of the attack. In the meanwhile British opinion is favoring the more drastic steps to be taken to reinforce the armies. Although it is expected that the American troops will be sent over as quickly as possible, yet it is recognized that the main duty of filling the gap devolves upon Britain.

Instant relief for aching, puffed-up, calloused feet and corns. "Happy! Happy! Use 'TIZ'!" Why go limping around with aching, puffed-up feet—feet so tired, chafed, sore and swollen you can hardly get your shoes on or off? Why don't you get a 25-cent box of "Tiz" from the drug store now and gladden your tortured feet? "Tiz" makes your feet glow with comfort; takes down swellings and draws the soreness and misery right out of feet that chafe, smart and burn. "Tiz" instantly stops pain in corns, callouses and bunions. "Tiz" is glorious for tired, aching, sore feet. No more shoe tightness—no more foot troubles.

ADDITIONAL DANGER.

THE HAGUE, March 29. It is officially announced that a note has been received from the German Government that neutral shipping in the area of Heligoland Bight, which has already been declared dangerous by the British Government, will henceforth be exposed to additional danger in consequence of the measures taken by the German Government.

PERSHING OFFERS FORCES.

PARIS, March 29. General Pershing called on General Foch at headquarters yesterday, according to information, and placed at his disposal the whole resources of the American army for employment in the battle now in progress.

DESPERATE AERIAL FIGHTING.

LONDON, March 29. The continuance of fierce fighting on the battle area, is shown by the report of aerial operations issued last night, which says that on Wednesday twenty-four German machines were brought down in air fighting and seven were driven down out of control. Nineteen British machines are missing. (Continued on 9th page.)

LINE MAGNIFICENTLY HELD.

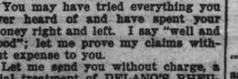

LONDON, March 29. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—Late this evening Reuter's correspondent at British headquarters telegraphed: On the whole British front from Albert on the Ancre on the Somme at Saffly Lesec and thence southward to where we join the French above Mont Didier our line has held magnificently throughout the day. At one point only, where the Germans got across the river in force about Croisy, thus taking our troops in the rear in the neighborhood of Provart Mercuriot, we fell back, but the retirement was a gallant and conspicuously well conducted operation. Our men were taken in the rear before they knew it and in the threatened area there were guns to be withdrawn. Both infantry and guns faced aroid and for a time the field guns were fired with open sights while the infantry charging in the most dashing manner succeeded in driving back an enemy far outnumbering themselves to the river bank till all the guns were withdrawn. Then this section of the line swung back to new positions by Hamell Camotta. This occurred last evening, and there has been sharp fighting at Camotte since. It was proceeding this afternoon west of Guilancourt where the Germans are reported in great strength. As an evidence of the spirit of the British troops some of the most tired of them after terrific fighting for three days were ordered to make a new attack which was a serious job for fresh troops twice their number. They attacked stinging Tipperary and scored a splendid success.

ATTACKS ON ARRAS FAIL.

LONDON, March 29. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—Reuter's correspondent at British headquarters telegraphs this evening: The enemy's attacks yesterday on Arras failed. He succeeded only in advancing his line south of the Scarpe to the ruins of the old reserve trenches from which the Germans were ejected a year ago. North of the river the enemy penetrated Rouex after prolonged fighting, in which an English battalion resisted heroically until surrounded, and the line was withdrawn some hundred yards to the vicinity of Bailleul. Prisoners say that the objective was Arras, which must be captured at all costs. The enemy employed shock troops, specially trained, to attack in this particular region. The severest fighting south of the Scarpe, where the main thrust against Arras occurred, was for two spurs, Orange Hill and Greenland Hill, which the enemy secured only after successive waves had been mowed down. After that the enemy, exhausted, did not attempt a further advance the following night or this morning. The intention to try and take Arras has probably not been abandoned, but the losses inflicted yesterday were so great that the enemy must bring up still more fresh divisions before renewing the effort.

"THE LINE HOLDS."

LONDON, March 29. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—"The line holds" is an essential factor as regards the situation, despite the considerable German advance on the south marked by Mont Didier, and the extension of the attack in the direction of Arras. The stroke at Mont Didier is probably aiming at the separation of the allied armies is admittedly serious because the Paris railway is endangered, but the general disposition of experts is to reserve judgment of the ultimate consequences pending the intervention of the allied reserves. It is considered unlikely that these are employed merely to prevent the enemy gaining ground, which the latter have been doing at such terrific costs. Correspondents at the front emphasize that the results of the British fighting in the open, has wholly shaken of the cramped feeling of trench warfare. The situation is

The Country Store

IN the evening, when the day's work is done, men like to stroll over to the village store to discuss the war, politics, or whatever may be of local interest.

It is under these circumstances that the health of the family is referred to and experiences are interchanged in regard to medicines that have proven particularly effective.

After Dr. Chase had introduced his medicines to the druggists he found that many who wrote to him for treatment lived many miles from doctor or country store for their medicines. Thus it came about that Dr. Chase's medicines were placed in general stores, and you can now obtain them wherever medicines are sold.

Instead of trying to imagine what the man in the picture is saying about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, we shall publish a letter from Mr. James Carr, who attributes his good health and that of his large family to the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

18 Miles From Drug Store.
Mr. James Carr, Maynooth, Ont., writes: "About nineteen years ago I received an envelope containing two of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I was doctoring at the time with two doctors and, as they did me no good, I used the pills, and by the time I had finished one box I was cured of the pain in the back and shoulders. "We have great confidence in Dr. Chase's medicines. I have a family of ten children and have never had a doctor in the house for any of them. We live eighteen miles from a drug store and find that these pills cure nearly all the ordinary ills by regulating the liver, kidneys and bowels. That we are all well and sound I attribute to their use, and I have recommended them to hundreds and given away many a box because I believe there is no medicine so good."

"After long experience with Dr. Chase's Medicines we have found that people who try them are soon convinced of their exceptional merits. We have published thousands of letters to give you an idea of the benefits others have obtained by their use, but if you are still skeptical we shall be glad to send you our

'Florizel' Inquiry.

Thursday's Proceedings.

Hon. J. C. Crosbie, Minister of Shipping, sworn: On being examined by Mr. Dunfield told of the part he took in connection with the arranging of a ship to proceed to the rescue of those on board the doomed Florizel. The greater part of Mr. Crosbie's evidence was taken up in explaining what he knew of the delay in sending the whaler Hawk. Mr. Crosbie was quite satisfied that owing to the unavoidable circumstances the ship could not be dispatched any quicker.

"I drove to Bowring's premises. Captain Simonson and Mr. Tessier were having provisions put on board the tug. I knew Mr. Stone was arranging to go on the Home. I said to Captain Kean go over with Simonson and bring over the Hawk. I said to our man, McDonald, get our men to take out the coal out of the Hawk and never mind any one spoiling a suit of clothes. I then received a message from Cappahayden stating that the Florizel was submerged and all lost or words to that effect. I took Captain Kean aside and told him the message. He said it is no use sending the Hawk now as all is lost. Captain Kean then returned to his home. Later on Mr. Tessier received a message saying that there was life on board. In connection with what was done I can say this that Mr. Eric Bowring and myself did everything possible and if we had to do it over again we could not do it better. There was no delay at any time in connection with the Naval Reservists. After Mr. Bowring received the message about life being seen on board I did not pay much attention to the messages that followed as they were conflicting. I am perfectly satisfied in my mind that no steamer could leave for the scene of the wreck any quicker than those which left, did.

To Mr. Winter: I know these whalers are very good sea boats but in my judgment it was necessary to take some coal out of the Hawk before she would be fit for service.

To Mr. Dunfield: On behalf of the Government I worked jointly with Mr. Eric Bowring and did not care in what position I was acting. My main object was to save life. Mr. H. D. Reid was continually at his telephone, as everytime I phoned him throughout the day and night he answered immediately.

Luke Holmes sworn: I am from St. John's, N. B., and master of the Linnet. About a year ago I left Montreal in the Scottish Hero, partly loaded with about 1000 tons of manganese ore and made the passage to Sydney in 14 hours. I was there 2 or 3 days when the Turret Court arrived and docked astern of me. Her captain, McDonald, told me a blade was off my propeller, but my engineers did not know it. It was a four-bladed wheel. I don't know when we lost it. A few years ago while in the Cacouna I lost a blade between Charlottetown and Montreal and did not know it was off till I was leaving the wharf. It might not be possible to lose it without knowing it, as the counter on the engine is consulted every hour. Breaking a blade might happen more easily. I've been 18 years master and nearly all the time running here, and always making Cape Race. The normal current between here and Cape Race runs S. W. One time I noticed a peculiar drift. When the Cacouna was lost 4 years ago I left here on the Morwenna and set my course to pass Ferryland 15 miles off. I expected to pass Cape Race about the same distance, but made only 6 miles off. Another ship was lost this side of Cape Race. I've heard men say before a S. E. wind the tide sets in towards Ferryland. It blew a gale before she went ashore, but was not blowing when she struck. I've made better time coming this way from the Cape than going up. In the Morwenna I came down in 4 1/2 hours. She was a 12 knot boat. I never went up inside of 5 1/2 hours. I have an idea the current along the shore is largely governed by the wind. I have known the current to be reversed and to set in on the land. My courses from St. John's to Halifax would take me in clear weather about half a mile off Cape Spear and two or three miles off Ferryland Head. If thick I'd go about three miles off Cape Spear, and make 15 miles off Cape Race. I'd run an hour past Cape Race before hauling in. From Cape Pins to Low Point would be N. W. by N. & W. going to Sydney. I wouldn't try to sight Cape Race in thick weather. I wouldn't take soundings when keeping well off, unless I was coming in on the coast. If I felt sure of my ship's speed and position I don't think I'd sound. If I was going through ice and had a S. E. gale I'd try to get a sounding near Ferryland in order to make Cape Race. I've often gone around Cape Race without using the lead. With a faint sounder it would take about 7 minutes to get a reply. I wouldn't reduce speed unless I was coming in and feeling for the land. If I had any doubt of making a point I'd overrun it about half an hour to make sure. If in doubt I'd reduce speed. Soundings are not much use in finding your position, as the water is the same at various places, but they are a safeguard against danger. I've been up and down the coast about 900 times. (The courses and distances given by Capt. Martin from 4 a.m. to 4:50 a.m. were ticked off on the chart by Capt. Holmes from different assumed points of starting.)

To Mr. Warren: If I haven't my log out at night I judge speed by revolutions of the propeller. This is done in going across with a convoy. The loss of 6 revolutions a minute would make a difference of various distances according to the size of the propeller. My course of fifteen miles off Ferryland in fog would be only on my own judgment. Many others might take a different course. To start off from a short distance this side of Ferryland would have much the same result as starting at a good distance off from here. Sounding along the coast would hardly convey to you where you were unless you struck Ballard Bank, the depths being the same a considerable distance along. If I felt I was making the course planned for keeping off I wouldn't think it necessary to sound. Following the course planned to believe she was not working normally and going as reckoned, I would judge I was on Ballard Bank at 4:40 a.m. and would not slacken speed.

At 6 p.m. adjustment was taken till Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

STUBBORN FIGHTING.

LONDON, March 29. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—A despatch from British headquarters says that yesterday and last evening along an extended front the Germans obtained further gains to the south of the Somme and eight gains to the east and southeast of Arras; but our troops battling gallantly hurled back the invaders with heavy losses along the greater part of the line. The enemy have continued to make the gerat effort south of the Somme where the English and the French are fighting stubbornly side by side. Last night assaults in the extreme northern and southern parts of the battle zone were continuous. The German scheme to swing their lines into Albert and thereby possibly enable their attempt to envelop Amiens is obvious.

BIG VICTORY IN MESOPOTAMIA.

LONDON, March 28. (Official.)—A highly successful operation was carried out by our troops operating on the Euphrates, northwest of Hitt, which resulted in the capture or destruction of virtually the entire Turkish force in that area. Our columns advanced to take the Turkish positions about Kran Bagdad, 22 miles northwest of Hitt. Our cavalry made a wide movement round the Turkish position to Aleppo in the rear of the enemy. By nightfall the enemy's main positions north of Kran Bagdad had been carried by assault. The main body of the enemy attempting to break to the northwest was intercepted by our cavalry and repulsed with heavy losses. So far, it has been reported, about 3,000 prisoners have been taken, including the divisional commander, two regimental commanders, about two hundred Turk-

Thursday night's debate was very interesting and instructive the subject being:—

Resolved, "That Newfoundland, as an independent Colony, can offer to its present and future citizens opportunities for advancement equal to those of the neighbouring Dominion."

The affirmative side was led by Dr. H. M. Mosdell, supported by Messrs. S. Sparks and G. Moore. While the negative side was upheld by Mr. A. E. Parsons who was ably assisted by Messrs. F. Rabbitts and F. Peters. Other speakers were Messrs. R. Hoarder, Sursey, Hayward, Bowden, White and S. P. Whiteway. The affirmative arguments having proven the most popular was evident by the vote being in their favor. This debate concludes the 15th session of the Institute's history. The annual meeting takes place on April 4, when the election of officers will be held.

Admitted to Hospital.
