LADY IRIS' MISTAKE; Hero of 'Surata'

CHAPTER XXIII.

"Who will ever understand women?" he said to himself, for she came down to dinner in a beautiful dress of rich white silk, with a suite of opals that a queen might envy, and wonder of wonders—with an iris in her bodice. It was the one he had sent her! What did this mean? She had accepted his token, she would not hear his message, yet she wore his flower. Could anything be more unintelligible?

"I wish I was not so senseless," he said to himself. "Any other man would know if this were a good sign or not, and I know nothing. If she did not care for me, she would not wear the flower—at least, I should think not; but if she did care for me, she would have seen me after my message."

And she, seeing her lover's face clouded over and sad, after doing all she could to bring the clouds there began to wonder how she could best dispense them. What could she do that would make him happier?

The guests had returned to the drawing-room, which was brilliantly lighted. Every one seemed happy and busily engaged. Some were occupied with music, chess and cards, others were flirting and conversing, while a few had wandered into the grounds.

"What can I do?" Lady Iris wondered. Captain Osburn was sitting alone, apparently looking over a book full of engravings, but she saw that he never turned a page, and that his dark, handsome face was sadder than she had ever seen it before. As mistress of the house she could not allow any guest to sit alone and look unhappy—that would indeed show a lack of courtesy and hospitality. She would see if she could rouse him.

A shadow fell over his book and he raised his eyes. She stood before him in all the pride of her fresh young beauty, looking in her white silk and trailing laces so fair that it was no wonder he sighed.

"Captain Osburn," she said, "I want you to do me a favor; will you?"

"You have but to speak, Lady Iris; my pleasure will be to obey."

"I heard Lady Alice say the other evening that you had a very fine tenor voice. Is it true?"

"So people tell me, Lady Iris," he replied.

"I do not understand you," he continued. "You are so kind, yet so cruel. You almost break my heart by refusing to hear my message, and yet you wear the flower I send you. How am I to understand your conduct?"

"I do not know," she answered; "but I think I should understand it if I were in your place."

"Why did you not inform me?" She asked. "I did not think of it—that was one reason; and another is—"

"Is what?" she asked, with a smile, finding that he paused.

"Why, I always think that I ought to have a bass voice. Here am I, six feet high and powerfully built, with a voice that seems rather effeminate, so I seldom sing."

"I do not like bass voices," said Lady Iris—"at least, not in songs; they seem to me far too heavy. I like them in oratorios, but not in songs."

"That reconciles me to my fate," he replied.

"I want you to sing for me, Captain Osburn," she continued.

"I am afraid I shall not please you, but I will sing one, every word of which, mind, shall be for you."

He went to the piano, and in a few moments the whole room was hushed.

The voice of which he had spoken so contemptuously was a magnificent rich tenor, one which had been well cultivated, and was full of music. People looked with admiration at the man who was so unconscious of a great gift. He sang the English ballad, 'Good-by, sweetheart, good-by,' with passionate sweetness and sadness.

"Their eyes met as he sang the words—"

"I cannot leave thee, though I said 'Good-by, sweetheart—good-by,'" and a sudden sharp pain went through her heart. What if he meant that?

He had sung them to her with design. What if he were really going? The thought of it made her grow pale and her eyes lost their light. If he went, what would go with him? She knew—none better; her life might as well end at once. "Good-by," rung out the beautiful voice—"good-by, sweetheart, good-by."

Their eyes met again, and this time in his there was a gleam of triumph. He saw that he had touched her, and now his victory seemed more sure. She was a step nearer to him.

"How cruel not to let us know that you had such a fine voice, Captain Osburn!" she said. "For punishment you must sing again and again."

"I will sing whenever you wish," he answered, "if it will give you pleasure. Will you do something for me in return?"

"I must say 'Yes,' I suppose; it is only fair," she said. "But that is taking advantage of my good nature, Captain Osburn."

"Nay, the favor I ask is very small. I want you to give me five minutes to-night—I could not wait until another sunrise; will you promise?"

She trembled so that she could hardly speak. She was afraid her voice would fall her.

"I do not understand you," he continued. "You are so kind, yet so cruel. You almost break my heart by refusing to hear my message, and yet you wear the flower I send you. How am I to understand your conduct?"

"I do not know," she answered; "but I think I should understand it if I were in your place."

"Ah, you are far more clever than I!" I do not understand it. Sometimes I am in Paradise, and again I am in despair. Will you give me five minutes to-night? Why are you so cruel, Lady Iris? If the rector there, Doctor Seymour, asked you for five minutes, you would give him your sweetest, smile and say to him, "With the greatest pleasure." You seem to find happiness in torturing me."

"Do I? You look far too big and too strong to be tortured by a woman."

"You have not answered my question, Lady Iris, and my patience is so nearly worn out that I am afraid I shall very soon say all I have to say, to the utter confusion of the whole room."

"No, you will not do that, Captain Osburn," she laughed. "You want to speak to me, say, for five minutes. I give you full permission to do so the first time you find me alone. I am at your service for the time you name, but not a moment longer."

"We shall see," he murmured.

He waited for his opportunity. He watched her closely, and whenever he saw him her face flushed even as she smiled. At length the opportunity came. It was toward the end of the evening, when the room was growing warm and the moon was shining very bright. Laura Seymour had gone out with Lady Iris to see her favorite spot, the lime grove, by moonlight, and then, meeting the very gentleman with whom she was getting up a flirtation, she left Lady Iris under the lime trees alone.

"If Allan only knew!" she thought, with a smile, a blush, and a sigh; and before the smile had faded he stood before her.

"I have watched you closely," he cried, "and this is the first chance I have had of seeing you alone. You must be kind to me and listen to me with patience, for I am a desperate man. I have risked all on one great stake, and if I lose it I shall not care to live. Will you come with me to the lake-side? I have something to say which even the lime-trees may not hear."

"She was conquered now. The very force of his will seemed to compel her to follow him. The night wind whispered faintly, the waters of the lake were hushed and still. It was, perhaps, one of the fairest pictures the stars ever shone down upon—the dark handsome soldier, his face lighted with love, and the fair queenly woman by his side.

They reached the lake; they could hear the music in the drawing-room, and at times the sweet ripple of a woman's laughter or a snatch of song. By the lake-side stood a marble statue—a fawn pouring water from an urn—and near it a garden chair had been placed.

"Sit down here," he said; and without a word she obeyed him.

How still the waters of the lake were, with the white lilies sleeping on its bosom and great tree-boughs overhanging it! She gave a shudder of mingled pleasure and pain; for the happiest hour of her life was come, of the joy and bliss of which she had had such sweet forebodings. The moment in which her life was to undergo a change had arrived; for he whom she loved with her whole heart was kneeling by her side and telling her his love-story with passionate words—how he loved her, how he would give his life for her, how unworthy he was of her—but always with the same refrain, that he loved her as no woman had ever been loved.

At his words gained in force and eloquence, her coyness and shyness died away. She was face to face with her own heart, and she knew that she loved him with her whole soul. Everything in that hour was lost to her, except the fact that she loved him. Few women could have resisted him as she knelt there, with his eyes full of passion and tenderness, and his dark face radiant with love; she could not do so. He drew her fair head upon his breast, and she lay there as happy as a child who had found its true resting-place.

"My love, my love," he murmured, "you will be my wife."

And she, the proud beautiful Lady Iris, put her arms round his neck, and in a faint whisper, answered—

"Yes."

New York territory couldn't help being "milk land"

It had to be the "milk land" of the Union. Iowa could raise corn. Main had her potatoes. Georgia says "cotton," and Texas spells "cattle." But New York's soil, rainfall, seasons, and climate generally made it the "Dairy State."

There are approximately 70,000 picked farmers in the New York State territory who belong to the Dairy Men's League Co-operative Association, Inc., farmers who have clean, regularly inspected barns and clean, healthy cows. They are the Dairy Men's League. Instead of 70,000 ideas regarding the production and distribution of milk and dairy products, they decided to have a single standard of purity and quality—the highest that human endeavor could make. When they put their collective name on anything, it is good.

So you can buy Dairy Men's League Evaporated or Condensed Milk knowing that it is rich, "creamy milk," that it is pure and good and comes from the "dairy territory."

It is good to-day. It will be good to-morrow and next year, for the life-work of these 70,000 farmers is to see that the dairy products of the Dairy Men's League are kept up to the standard that has been set.

Churchill Stands by Lloyd George.

Issues Election Manifesto From Bed of Sickness — International Race Committee Award Cup and Prize to Bluenose — One of Victor's Crew Drowned in Gloucester Dock.

CHURCHILL BACKS LLOYD GEORGE.
LONDON, Oct. 27. — Concluding an election manifesto from his sick bed, Winston Churchill says, "I take my stand by Mr. Lloyd George. I was his friend before he was famous, was with him when all were at his feet, and now, to-day when the men who fawned upon him, who praised even his errors, who climbed into place and Parliament upon his shoulders, have cast him aside, when the free fanatics (meaning Asquithian Liberals) think the time has come to pay off old scores; when McKenna, the postal banker, emerges from his opulent seclusion to administer what he doubtlessly calculates is the finishing kick, I am still his friend and lieutenant."

PROTESTS DISALLOWED—BLUENOSE WINNER.
GLOUCESTER, Oct. 27. — The International Committee in charge of the Fishermen's Races late to-day awarded the cup and first prize to the Bluenose. All protests made against the Bluenose were disallowed unanimously.

TRAGEDY FOLLOWS RACE.
GLOUCESTER, Oct. 27. — Tragedy was added to-day to the lists of sensational incidents which marked the progress of the races for the International Fishermen's trophy, when the dead body of Capt. Bertie Demone, 35, married, of Lunenburg, a member of the Bluenose's crew, was found in a dock back of the Olympia Theatre. Medical authorities said death was due to drowning. Captain Walters, uncle of the dead man, will return to Nova Scotia with the body. Instead of about the Bluenose. If there was any doubt about more racing by the Bluenose this year this settles it, the skipper said plainly, overcome by the loss. In view of the protest filed this morning against the Bluenose, Captain Walters and Arthur Zwicker, managing owner, had telegraphed the owners of the Boston schooner Mayflower, that no further races would be sailed by the Bluenose in American waters this year. The telegram said if mutually satisfactory arrangements could be made, Capt. Walters was prepared

FOLDING IRONING TABLE

A New and Better Ironing Board

The Rid-Jid Ironing Table is as steady as a bridge. It will not wobble, sway, bend nor creep when you iron. You can sit on the end and it will not even tilt. No more cropping an old board up on two chair-backs and having to lift it each time you wish to iron a skirt or petticoat. The Rid-Jid stands firmly on its own foundation, and is so constructed that a full-length skirt may be slipped on over the end.

In spite of its marvelous rigidity, the Rid-Jid is lighter than any other folding board made. It closes as compactly as a pocket knife. We would be glad to have you stop in and see it.

The Manuels Tragedy.

MICHAEL FITZGERALD, SWORN.

—I live at Portugal Cove Road and am a widower and am fifty years old. My occupation is carpenter work. I remember August 19th. I was working in Portugal Cove that day. I remember it was a fine day, sun shining and blowing a light breeze from about the S.S.W. The boats were out from Portugal Cove that day. Late in the evening there was a little thunder and something after midnight I was looking through the window of the house I was employed at that day when I noticed a boat coming in from the direction of Bell Island. On account of it being Saturday evening I said to myself it was some of the men who were working at Bell Island, going home. As this was a sail boat the thought struck me that the men from Bell Island usually came over in a motor boat. There was scarcely any wind at the time and the boat I saw appeared to be a fishing boat with sails. I do not know how many sails she had. I am not able to say what color the boat was as I did not pay much attention. I am not able to say what colour the sails were and could not say whether they were black or white. The boat was about a half a mile away from Bell Island, and coming from the direction of Bell Island towards Portugal Cove. I did not pay much attention to the boat after seeing her first and I cannot say in what direction she went. She may have gone into Broad Cove or some other place along the shore. At that time of the season it was not strange to see a boat off from Bell Island. I saw the little boat that was picked up in Portugal Cove on August 20th, about two weeks later. I did not examine it but someone said that was the little boat that was picked up. I could not say whether the little boat was the one I sighted near Bell Island on the evening of August 19th or not. I have done very little fishing myself and do not know much about the water. I am not able to give any description of the little boat which was picked up in Portugal Cove. I have often crossed back and forth to Bell Island in a fishing boat with as much wind and lull as there was that day. Motor boats sometimes after leaving Bell Island, hoist their sails when the engines give out. It might have been a motor boat with a sail up that I saw on August 19th. I never saw Mr. Anderson or Mr. Bouttigate in my life. There was a search made in the waters of Portugal Cove for the bodies, so I have been informed, but there was no sign of them found.

Harbor Grace Notes.

Schooner "Ruby and Dorothy" arrived in port on Saturday last from Sydney, with a load of Coal for Mr. G. E. Stevenson, and is being discharged at the Government Wharf.

Mrs. Browning, wife of the late Rev. W. H. Browning, came to town from Britannia Cove by Monday night's train to attend to her affairs at the Parsonage, and will remain for a week.

At the Star Movie on Tuesday night, Miss Barbara Langmead of St. John's, who is in town the guest of Miss Stella LeDrew, sang during the interval, which was well rendered and highly applauded. The special feature for the evening was a seven act picture, entitled "The Greatest Truth."

Miss Elizabeth Joy, who had been visiting New York for the last month or so returned by the last trip of the Silvia to St. John's, and is now back to town again.

On Saturday was found the first appearance of winter, but the ground has since lost its mantle of white, and the weather becomes a little milder, which we trust will continue for some time yet.

Hot supper and teas were served at the S. A. Citadel last night. The affair which was under the supervision of the local officer, Lieut. Rideout, proved very successful.

Our Boy Scouts are busily engaged making preparation for a Jumble Sale

Mr. Henry Heanessey, Sub-collector of Customs at West St. Modeste, Straths of Belle Isle, during the past summer arrived home last week.

International Fishing Schooner Races.

The Story of the 1922 Series Sailed Off Gloucester.

(Reprinted from Staff Correspondence of Morning Chronicle, Halifax.)

Gloucester, Mass., Oct. 23.—Joy reigned among the people of this city to-night. Bluenose, Lunenburg fishing schooner and International Champion, went down to defeat in perfect yachting weather before the Henry Ford, salt fish banker out of Gloucester. It was a race of thrills with the challenger, but the Yankee scored a well earned victory, having a margin of two minutes and twenty-six seconds to spare at the end of the forty mile course. She required 5 hours one minute and 24 seconds to cover it. This marks score one for the Ford and she needs but another to hold the International trophy for a year.

The schooners are expected to race again on Wednesday. The postponement of a day is made necessary by the fact that the Bluenose's shoe has been damaged by grounding at her dock here and will haul out on the slip tomorrow for examination. If the wind holds light the Ford will keep the cup. If it is fresh, Bluenose will compel a rubber. Even Gloucester, flushed with the rapids of success in to-day's contest is almost willing to admit that.

We were on the James K. Paulding, the U.S. destroyer, detailed as committee boat. Once again to-day we almost missed the craft because of the excitement ashore before the race began. The crew of the Ford, incensed because the two committees, handling the series' persisted in calling contest "no race," went on board their vessel this morning, collected their dunnage and conducted an indignation meeting on Gloucester's main street. They vowed the night before that if they were not officially credited with Saturday's victory, when they trimmed the down-homer in extremely gentle weather with some twelve minutes to spare, after both vessels had made false starts, they would not race to-day.

THEY SAVED THE DAY.
They meant it, but this morning Edwin S. Denby, Secretary of the United States Navy, and Mrs. Jonathan Raymond, the pretty little wife of a part owner of the Ford, saved the day. Mrs. Raymond coaxed the International skipper and crew outside the Master Mariner's office, induced them to return to their ship, and after Mr. Denby had harangued them and pleaded that they race for the honor of the United States, talked to them in language as forceful as their own. "You're not afraid to race," said she. "We're not," said the crew. "Well, then, go out and trim the Canadian. Do you talking afterwards?" The men returned to the Dory, so did Mrs. Raymond. Then Capt. Clayton Mortensen, whose record since Saturday's fiasco is considered by many as open to criticism, at last made up his mind and played the game. "Come on boys," said he. "Send your main-sail, we're going out."

If "Captain" Clayt. was going, so were the pressmen. A motor boat from the faithful "Trypan," Canada's agable ship, that had been much admired by local salts for her trim rig and generally seaworthy appearance, was at the dock. We commandeered it and caught the Paulding. This was after nine o'clock. The race was scheduled to begin at ten. Bluenose, hauled off the mud and rocks of Gloucester's low tide waterfront, was already at the starting point. We thought it was only another illustration of the early bird out for the worm, but when the destroyer sped for the starting line we learned otherwise.

The Sailing Committee, wise after Saturday's muddle, was holding aloof from the newspaper guys. Information as to their plans was meagre, but ere we reached the line we were told the race had been postponed for an hour. There was no question, but the Ford had been there well before ten o'clock, yet the only statement given out was that the postponement was made in order to allow her time to get ready for the start.

Signals were virtually done away with, and the skippers of the racers were notified in writing of the postponement. As the Paulding lay at anchor we noted the red ensign flying in the Bluenose rigging. The tug Marine, coming from the defender, hailed the Paulding. "Captain Walters, of the Bluenose wants the committee to send two of their number, one from each side, aboard his vessel," megaphoned the tug boat's skipper. "He suggests Mr. Davidson and Capt. Peoples." We wondered what would happen next.

Would Angus cap the climax by refusing for some reason to race? The two committees boarded the Canadian and in five minutes were back on board with a letter from Bluenose's skipper, saying that he would sail unless protest, because his schooner's shoe had been damaged by too much contact with the bottom of Gloucester's harbor.

The times at the start: Ford, 11.00.04; Bluenose, 11.00.04.
Old man wind began to show some life and the schooners romped on a fairly close race for the first mark off Thatcher's Island, five miles east by north. "The Ford, towing a scow, could beat the herring choker," said a local enthusiast, but for all our dismal predictions of a half hour back, we began to hearten. The Bluenose, left behind at the start, now appeared to be holding her own. Angus drove her up to weather hoping soon to take his rival's wild. By this time it was Raymond's turn to be in the puffs and both vessels were showing haycocks at their bows.

SLOW ROUNDING FIRST MARK.
Ford, short handed because four or five of her men had refused to sail, despite the pleading of the Demy, buoy, ten miles dead weather southwest. If the wind would, only hold true, the heavier Canadian might find her straits and then we felt sure the race would end in victory for Lunenburg. The schooners, after passing the mark went about and were on the port tack, headed for Marblehead, fifteen miles away. Bluenose, profiting by Ford's slowness in stays, was now only a few lengths behind, but the buoy was against the Canadian. The breeze seemed to soften as soon as they went on the wind. Once again it was an oily sea.

UPSET ALL THE DOPE.
The Gloucester boat, hitherto, regarded as Bluenose's inferior in a beat to windward, even in light weather, was upsetting the dope. She pointed just as high and footed faster steadily opening the gap. Her agility in mid winds enabled her to slip through the soft spots while the Canadian wearily lifted her bow to the little top that suddenly came from the sea. The wind was less than seven knots in the lulls and not more than eight at its best.

After sailing about eight miles on the port tack, Clayton brought his ship about and tried to shape her for the mark six miles to the south, the location of which was plainly visible by the black smoke screen from the Patriot's funnels. Angus, believing that his vessel could point higher than the other, did not hold so long on the tack. Ford had come about at 12.58.01 official time and Bluenose followed at 12.57.07. Both boats were now on the starboard tack but could not make the mark. Ford still reaping the benefit of her speed in light weather, was about fifteen minutes in the lead, she was a quarter mile to weather and a quarter mile further advanced on the tack.

THE BREEZE INCREASED.
Bluenose's eyes appeared to be done to a turn for the day, but we reckoned without the wind, the controlling factor in these schooner races. At 1.15 a tiny white cap was noticed here and there. Angus made no attempt to punch his vessel and Bluenose began to move. Ten minutes later Ford came about and was on the port tack for the buoy. Clayton left his stay-sail flapping to leeward. He thought it was better there, all ready for the long reach on the next leg. The breeze had increased to twelve knots. Bluenose held so far on her tack that we thought she would overstand. At 1.29 she came about and was seen to have cut down the gap materially. She was travelling fast with a good hull, while Clayton was close to the wind, heading well to leeward of the mark. At 1.34 he came about and made for it. Bluenose had cut a lead of fifteen minutes down to one of less than three. The times, Ford, 1.37.05; Bluenose, 1.40.00. Then the fun began. The wind

Should Our Fisheries be Developed?

The answer to the above question is a great deal more difficult, in a measure, than its propounding. At the present time with fish practically unsalable, it would seem that there is no good reason for any development in the industries of the sea, but to approach the question with that point of view uppermost, and basing the answer on that same argument, would not be giving the query the full and mature consideration that it deserves. We might, in this connection, ask another. Shall our fisheries be permitted to depreciate in volume of catch? If not then development must begin at once. Other countries, competitors of ours in sea fisheries, are taking up this very important matter, and by scientific research doing everything possible to increase the value and quantity of their catches of fish. Home consumption, too, is helping toward this end, if it stands to reason, however, that Newfoundland could not can, ever do much toward the desired end in the way of local consumption. Our population is not sufficiently large to use up any extra portion of the fish voyage. According to the statistics of the Marine and Fisheries Department, the approximate value of home consumption of fish products of all kinds, is about four million dollars, or about fifteen dollars per head of population. Countries of larger populations, reckoned in millions, United States, Canada, France, Norway, for instance, offer a vast field for the disposal of their own fish products, hence the carrying out of the idea of greater development, in those countries, of the fishing industry. Newfoundland's problem today is marketing. The total catch of codfish for the year 1921 was considerably less than that of the previous year, which was disposed of finally, as was last year's catch. The figures for the current year have not yet been calculated, but from rough returns made it will about approach those of last year, though the value will not be so great. Taken proportionately, and comparing its population with other fish producing countries, Newfoundland certainly catches more fish per capita than any. In value, this colony in codfish alone, produces fifty-two dollars worth per head, against Canada's four dollars, and it must be remembered that the neighboring dominion has the waters of two oceans from which to draw its supplies. In point of value volume Canada ranks third in the fisheries of the world. Therefore with its ever increasing population, and a consequent increase in the consumption of fish foods, there is every reason why the Canadians should make greater efforts in developing their fisheries on both the Atlantic and Pacific sides of the dominion. The same applies to United States. The subject then narrows down to the question we have asked with regard to Newfoundland's future fisheries. If we are producing more fish than we can dispose of abroad, it would be of more service to the people of the colony to cut down the catch. But if, on the other hand, we can still hold such markets as we have, and enter new ones, with an ever increasing demand for our fish, development must come. We have, at the present time, and may have for years to come, but the one main industry upon which all have to depend for maintenance. Whether in the near or distant future there will be any great interior development is problematical. Until such time as that comes to pass the wealth of this colony must be drawn from the sea. If it is then worth while to begin the development of the fisheries, the time to commence is now. The following tables show the catch and value of Codfish in Newfoundland and Canada for a period of ten years. In the case of the latter country only the value can be given. Any comparisons may be based on population. Newfoundland having some 260,000 people and Canada approximately 8,000,000.

Who's Who in Canada.

AN INVALUABLE REFERENCE WORK. The 16th edition of that invaluable work of reference, 'Who's Who in Canada,' has just been received from the International Press Ltd., of Toronto. Containing as it does, detailed biographies of more than 3,500 people prominent in the political, commercial and social life of Canada, Newfoundland and the West Indies, it has become a volume of reference for the editors of papers in the North American continent. In a work of such magnitude, one would naturally expect to find many discrepancies, but a careful perusal of the biographies of the many Newfoundlanders which are to be found in it, has revealed no errors, a tribute alike to the thoroughness and care of the compilers, and the general excellence of the book. The new edition has 1598 pages, and is copiously illustrated.

Ladies! Our time is all yours, this is no mad rush sale but Evangeline's to fit your feet correctly for $6.99 at SMALLWOOD'S.

Italian Revolution Affects Exchange.

117 LIRE TO 1 STERLING. To-day's despatch stating that the Fascist are masters of some of the chief towns of Italy and that communications between North, South and Central Italy have been interrupted, shows that a revolution of some proportions is taking place in that country. The cities captured by the revolutionists are central, between Leshore and Genoa, and no doubt the disturbances will have some effect on our fish sales at these ports. Yesterday a prominent exporter received a message from an Italian house stating that exchange had jumped from 105 to 117 and no remittance was to be had. At normal rates 25 lire is the exchange for the 2 sterling. Today's rates are 117 to the sterling.

Pertinent Questions for the Advocate to Answer.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir:—Enclosed is a copy of a letter sent by me to-day to the Advocate. (The Editor has promised to publish it.) As the matter is dealt with in it of public importance, I ask publication by you, and urge your readers to consider the Advocate's reply.

Yours truly, ALFRED B. MORINE. Oct. 27, 1922.

Dear Sir:—In the Advocate, yesterday, editorially referring to my expressed desire to "eliminate the F.P.U. from politics," make this assertion: "The fulfillment of Mr. Morine's desire would mean (1) the smashing of the Union Companies; (2) the loss of the shareholders' money. (3) The closing up of the premises at Port Union."

You would enlighten me, Sir, and greatly interest the public. I am sure, if you would explain why these things would happen if the F.P.U. withdrew from party politics. What financial assistance do the Union Companies get out of politics now which enables them to continue business? Or, to put the same thing in another way, if Union Companies were disconnected from politics, why should they have to cease operations?

I believe I am correct, Sir, in saying that the Union Companies have paid no dividends during recent years. If I am right in this belief, then I presume to suggest that if the efforts of their manager had been confined to business, and separated from party politics, the shareholders would have fared better. You say, Sir, that I am spiteful against every member of the F.P.U. That, emphatically, is not true! I sincerely sympathize with the poor deluded fellows, and would like to help every one of them individually; some I have already helped. Some months ago I explained my reasons for advocating a return to every shareholder of the money he invested, and if I had power in the Government of this Colony, I should labor for that end. The Union Trading Co., has, perhaps, done some good to the members of the F.P.U. generally. The Union Export Co., in its comparatively unsuccessful attempts to make money for its shareholders, has been a great injury to non-shareholding fishermen. Its president, once an agent of the fishermen for selling their fish, has become an agent of shareholders for buying their fish, and he has no more interest in keeping up the price of fish than any other buyer. That is one reason at least why Mr. Coaker is not now helping his constituents of Bonavista Bay to honest prices, but through the Advocate, and in other ways, is doing his utmost to defeat them.

The Board of Trade was notified this week by Mr. Tolson of Ottawa that the Canadian Commission which has charge of the Empire Exhibition which takes place in 1924, will be leaving Sydney, C.B., for Newfoundland on November 5th and will arrive here via Port aux Basques November 7th. Humber Agreement Reached.

NO PARTICULARS AVAILABLE — PRIME MINISTER LEAVES ENGLAND TO-DAY.

The agreement in connection with the Humber proposition has been completed and operations will start at an early date. Hon. George Shea, Acting Prime Minister, told a Telegram reporter to-day. Further information, he said, was not yet available. What the agreement is and if it includes the railway operation, could not be learned, nor if the Prime Minister has promised the guarantees. Asked by our reporter, another Cabinet Minister stated that the Trade Facilities Board had recommended the Humber Proposition as a sound investment to the British Government, and he said there is no reason why it would not be the same for Newfoundland. Already the Employment Bureau has set to work to arrange for the employment of a number of men on preliminary work. Some operating machines have recently arrived at Botwood and will be forwarded across country next week. As far as can be learned, the Prime Minister, Minister of Justice and a number of engineers and other officials of the Armstrong-Whitworth Company are leaving England to-day for here.

Caribou Home Discovered.

AERIAL PHOTO OF TRACKS. Mr. F. S. Cotton believes that he has discovered the home of a very large herd of caribou, and he bases this belief on the strength of an aerial photograph, which he has of a section of the interior showing what appear to be many caribou tracks. The picture is now on exhibition in Dick's & Co.'s window. The photograph was taken from a height of 9000 feet, and clearly shows several tracks in the snow covered ground which Mr. Cotton says are about two feet wide and two feet deep. They seem to converge on the centre and look very much like a great spider's web. If these are caribou tracks, the theory that the animals are rapidly becoming extinct, is disproved. There is a general impression among local hunters and others conversant with the habits of the caribou, however, that their numbers have been greatly depleted through hunting for furs, traps, wanton destruction and slaughter for sale and for use as fox bait. The season is now open and will remain so until January. The close season will be from Feb. 1st to July 31st. The next close season is from October 1st to 20th.

Stag Bay Gold Field.

"I have quite an open mind as to the discovery of gold in Labrador, but I intend to satisfy myself definitely, one way or the other this winter by flying to Stag Bay with a geologist and securing samples of the soil," said Mr. F. Sidney Cotton to a Telegram reporter who interviewed him this morning. He further said that aerial photographs of the area would be taken. Asked if it were true that the Aerial Survey Company is interested in the companies that are reported to be in course of formation in Canada, for the purpose of exploiting the rumoured gold find, Mr. Cotton replied in the negative. He admitted that his company had been approached by one interested for an aerial survey next spring, but nothing definite has yet been settled. "The Aerial Survey Company," he concluded, "and some of its members have taken out claims in the same way as the general public, so that they can be in at the start if it is definitely proved that gold exists."

Editor Evening Telegram

Dear Sir—I can only believe that it was a careless printer who made Rev. John Reay of Whitbourne, say in his letter in to-day's "News," when referring to a mistake made by the Editor of "My Magazine," in connection with our history, that Sir "Henry" Gilbert took formal possession of Newfoundland for England, "120 years before 1610."

Surely the proof reader might have seen that possession could not have been taken of our island seven years before its discovery, even if he did not know that the gentleman who performed the commission was Sir Humphrey Gilbert.

Yours faithfully,
HISTORICUS.

Orphanaid Club.

APPRECIATE PRACTICAL HELP.

Hon. Dr. Mosdel, the president, and the other members of the Orphanaid Club have asked the Telegram to express their sincere thanks to all who patronized the smoker and concert at the C.C.C. Hall on Thursday night. That the affair was such a tremendous financial success was due to the many business men along Water St., who readily contributed to the Club numerous valuable articles, and to the enthusiastic gentlemen who bid these articles in at fancy prices when Councillor Dowden conducted the auction with his usual skill and geniality. The members of the Club feel that the programme could not have been in better hands than those of Mr. Ernest Fox, who as a pastmaster of the arrangement of such concerts, while in Mr. Gordon Christian the Club had the services of one of the best and most experienced musicians in the city. It is rather a pity that the auction proceedings took so long that some of the musical items on the programme had to be abandoned, but the Club feels sure that those who did not perform will appreciate the fact that these omissions were due only to the anxiety of the members to make the most of their financial opportunities to realize on the sale all that was possible in the interests of the orphans. The speech of W. J. Higgins was a great encouragement to the Club who also felt highly honored by the presence throughout the proceedings of Hon. Dr. Campbell, as representative of the Executive Government. The Orphanaid Club is meeting with hearty co-operation in its efforts on behalf of the orphans, and is being so encouraged in every undertaking that it intends to resubmit its endeavours to make life easier and more enjoyable to those who lack parents and homes of their own. The Club members heartily thank one and all who patronized their affair on Thursday night and feel confident that such events in the future will, if possible, receive even better patronage.

Helen Jean Total Loss.

SINK AT TURK'S ISLAND.

The Helen Jean, owned by the late John E. Lake, Fortune, has declared a total loss at Turk's Island where she sank at her moorings on Oct. 24th. The vessel, it will be remembered, was on her way from a load of salt, but became holed when she was picked up by an ice cruiser and towed back to St. John's. It was hoped that repairs could be effected, but the vessel was damaged at the moorings and only one of the rigging and sails were saved. The crew have since been landed, but at Halifax joined another vessel which is now on the passage to St. John's.

Ship Carrier Damaged.

NORWEGIAN STEAMER ENCOUNTERED STORM.

The Norwegian steamer Haaland, which had been at Battle Hill, for the steaming market, reports a very rough passage across. The ship received considerable deck damage, the trouble also developed in the cabin. On arrival at Leshorn Haaland was surveyed and repairs ordered.

THE SCOTTISH TONGUE.
 No man, it is well known, had ever more command of the native vernacular than Robert Burns. In a letter written at Carlisle, in June, 1787, to his friend William Nicol, Minister of the High School, Edinburgh, he has a curious testimony as to the possibilities of the language and his own skill in it. "Kind, honest-hearted Willie," he writes, "I'm sitten doon here, after seven-and-forty miler's ridin', e'en as forjeskit and forniaw'd as a forfoughten cock, to gie you some notion o' my land-lower-like stravain' sin' the sorrowfu' hour that I shenk hantle an' parted, wi' Auld Rookie. My auld ga'd slyerde o' a meero has huchyall'd up hill and down brae in Scotland and England, as tetch and birlie as a vera deevil wi' me. It's true, she's as puir's a sang-maker, an' as hard's a Kirk, and tipper talpers when she tak's the gate. Jist like a lady's gentlewoman in a minnow, or a hen on a het gir-die; but she's a yanld, poutherie girran for a' that, and has a stomach like Willie Stalker's meere, that wad ha digested tumber-wheels, for she'll whip me off her five stimparts o' the best aits at a doon-sitten, and ne'er fash her throum. When once her ring-banes and sparies, her cramps and cramps are fairly soupl'd, she beats to, beats to, and aye the hindmost hour the tightest. I could wagger her price to a threety pennies, that for twa or three weeks, ridin' at fifty miles a day, the deil-stickit a five galloper's acquessh Clyde and Whithorn could cast saun on her tail. I ha' ha' ha' ha' ha' ha' the country frae Dunbar to Selcraig, and ha'e forgather'd wi' mony a gude fallow, and mony a weel-faur'd hizzie. I met wi' twa dink queynes in particular. Ane o' them, a sossie, fine, fodelg lass, baith brav and bonnie, the other was a clean-shankit, straight, tight, weel-faur'd wench, as blythe's a linwhite on a flowerie thorn, and as sweet and modest's a new blawn plum—rose in a hazel shaw. They were baith bred to mainers by the beuk and ony ane o' them had as muckle smeddum and rumbie gumption as the half o' some Presbyteries that you and I baith ken. They played me sic a dell o' a shavie, that I daur say if my hairgals were turn'd out ye wad see twa nicks i' the heart o' me like the mark o' a kail-whittle in a castock. I was gawn to write you a lang pyste, but, gude forgi'e me, I zat myself sae noutourously bitchy'd the day, after kail-time, than I can hardly stoiter but and ben. My respects to the guld wife and a' our common frinds, especially Mr. and Mrs. Cruickshank, and the honest guidman o' Jock's Lodge. I'll be in Dumfries the morn gif the beast be to the fore, and the branks bidde haae. "Gude be wi' you, Willie! Amen!"

That letter might fairly be made the shibboleth in any case of doubt regarding one's ability to read Scotch. It would shiver the front teeth of some of your counterloper gentry. Yet it is not an overdone example of Scotch Doric as it was spoken in Edinburgh drawing-rooms a hundred years ago—Vide Henry Cockburn's Memorials. Between it and the "braid Scotch" of half a century earlier there is a marked difference.

Hogg, in his "Shepherd's Calendar," referring to the religious character of the shepherds of Scotland in his day tells that "the antiquated but delightful exercise of family worship was never neglected," and "formality being a thing despised, there are no compositions I ever heard" he continues, "so truly original as those prayers occasionally were; sometimes for rude eloquence and pathos, at other times for an indescribable sort of pomp, and not infrequently, for a plain and somewhat unbecoming familiarity." He gives several illustrations, quite justifying his description, from some with which he had himself served and herded. One of the most notable men for this sort of family eloquence, he thought was a certain Adam Scott, in Upper Dalesh. Thus Scott prayed for a son who seemed thoughtful. "For thy mercy's sake—for the sake of thy puir, stufu' servants that are now addressing Thee in their ain shilly-shally way, and for the sake o' mair than we daur weel name to Thee, hae mercy on Rob. Ye ken fu' weel he's a wild, mischievous callant, and thinks nae mair o' committin' sin than a dog does o' lickin' a dish; but put thy hook in his nose, and thy bridle in his gab, and gar him come back to Thee wi' a jerk that he'll no forget the longest day that he has to live." For another son he prayed: "Dinna forget puir Jamie, wha's fur awa' frae us this night. Keep thy arm o' amedum to act for himself; for, if ye wad endow him wi' a little spunk and a little sin, he'll be but a bawchee i' this ward, and a back-sitter i' the neist." Again: "We're a' like hawks, we're a' like snails, we're a' like stogie riddies; like hawks to do evil, like snails to go good, and like stogie riddies to jet through a' the gude and keep o' the bad." When Napoleon I was filling Europe with alarm, he prayed: "Bring doon the tyrant and his lang neb, for he has done muckle ill this year, and gie him a cup o' Thy wrath, and gin he winna' tak' that, gie him kelty." (i.e. double, or two cups.) Very graphic, is it not? It reminds us of the prayer of one Jamie Hamilton, a celebrated poacher in the West Country. As Jamie was reconnoitring a lonely situation one morning, his mind more set on hares than on prayers, a woman approached him from the only house in the immediate district and requested that he should "come owre and pray for auld Eppie, for she's jist deadin'."

MOTHER!

Open Child's Bowels with "California Fig Syrup"

Hurry mother! Even a sick child loves the fruity taste of "California Fig Syrup" and it never fails to open the bowels. A teaspoonful to-day may prevent a sick child to-morrow. It constipates, bilious, feverish, fruitless, cold, colic, or if stomach is sour, tongue coated, breath bad, remember a good cleansing of the little bowels is often all that is necessary. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mothers do not say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

"Ye ken weel enough that I can pray name," replied Jamie.

"But we haena time to rin for ony ither, Jamie," urged the woman. "Eppie's jist slippin' awa', and oh! It wad be an awfu' like thing to lat the puir bodie dee wifout bein' prayer for."

"Weel, then," said Jamie, "an' I maun come, I maun come, but I'm sure I kenna right what to say."

The occasion has ever so much to do with the man. Approaching the bed, Jamie doffed his cap and proceeded: "O Lord, Thou kens best Thy name! how the case stands between Thee and auld Eppie, and sin' Ye haeb battin' the heaf and the blade in yer main hand, jist guide the gully as best suits her guld and yer name glory, Amen." It was a poacher's prayer in very truth, but a bishop could not have said more in as few words.

But if it is easy to be expressive in Scotch, for it is peculiar to the native

SUITABLE WORK.

How happy is the man whose task has all the charm he'd dare to ask! He spent the long hours chasing rats or pasting hair on wooden cats, all day he teeters to and fro, and when at eve the whistles blow, he sighs and says, "So help me, John, the happy day's already gone! How sad that one must quit his chores to sleep the night in useless snores! I grudge each hour that bids me rest, and leave the tasks that I love the best!" Oh, work is better far than play to any

SIDE TALKS.

By Ruth Cameron.

A SONG OF HATE.

I sang the other day a song of hate, that frightful smell that emanates from a dead cigar.

One's Own Is Different.

Other people's Victrolas endlessly grinding out poor jazz on the porch of a summer evening that would otherwise be exquisitely beautiful.

People who say "I'll tell the world so," (or any of its later variations.) People who persist in telling you the plots of stories and plays.

Red Necks And Derby Hats.

The backs of men's necks when they are red and have deep creases and bulge out over the collar, and especially when they are all this and in addition are flanked by ears that stick out, and topped by a Derby hat.

Brown Derby hats to distraction. Lines of half washed clothes. Prefrontal, whining voices, and all self-pitiers.

These are some of the things that help make life unbeautiful at times to me.

What's the use of talking about things you hate?

Just because I have a hunch you may hate some of them too. Reader, friend, and don't you think it's a lot of fun to hate together?

Curious Clocks.

The first pendulum clock ever made in England was constructed by a Dutchman named Frömantel, in 1622. It was not, however, until about 1676 that repeating clocks and watches came into use generally; before this date they were rare and valuable possessions, consequently being more artistically and elaborately made.

There are many historic and valuable old clocks which are Crown property, and an inventory of all the Royal clocks is kept at Windsor Castle. It contains a list of 230 clocks most of them of great interest.

For instance, there is the clock given by King Henry VIII. to Anne Boleyn on her wedding-day. It is only four inches deep and but ten inches high—a real pigmy clock; it later came into the possession of Horace Walpole, but when he died it was bought back for the Crown by Queen Victoria, for £2110. The weights are beautifully engraved, and have the initials "H. & A., for Henry" and "Anne," and a true lovers' knot beside.

There are also still some specimens of the old "Act of Parliament" clocks existing. There were so called because Pitt, when Prime Minister, placed a tax on watches, and consequently taverns and other places where people gathered had large clocks made, for the benefit of people who could not afford watches.

SIMONDS SAWS

6 1/2-in. in height, and is magnificently ornamented.

Another fine old clock at Buckingham Palace was made for George III, by Alexander Cumming, of Edinburgh. The lucky maker of this time-piece received £2,000 for his work, and a further £200 a year for looking after it.

Two larger clocks which are famous are the Abbey clock at Glastonbury, which ran for 500 years, making a record; and the complicated but beautiful great clock at Strasburg, which tells the seasons, the month, the day, and the hour, besides having a wonderful chime. Hampton Court has also a wonderful clock.

The three largest clocks in this country to-day are Big Ben at Westminster, the great clock in the Crystal Palace, and the clock on the Royal River Building at Liverpool, which is even larger than London's Big Ben.

The New World Begun.
MILLIONS NOW LIVING WILL NEVER DIE.

The birth pangs of this new order of things are shaking all nations, but the desire of all nations shall come. (Haggai 2:7) Every evil institution by the old order must give place to new and righteous institutions which God has promised for the blessing of all the families of the earth. (Gen. 12:3). The judgments of the Lord are even now bringing to light the hidden things of darkness. All the children of the day welcome the light. All who are of the new order should lift up their heads and rejoice, knowing that their deliverance draweth nigh. (Luke 22:28). The present time of trouble was predicted by Christ, the Apostles and Prophets to precede a day of rejoicing and general distribution of blessings.

The International Bible Students' Association have arranged for a discourse touching these subjects to be given in the main auditorium, Victoria Hall Sunday night at 7 o'clock, to which all are invited. The seats are all free and no collection will be taken.—oct28,11

Fire at Cupids.

TWO PROPERTIES DESTROYED.
Yesterday afternoon Inspector General Hutchings, received a message from acting-Serge. Bishop stating that on Thursday night, a fire at Cupids totally destroyed a house and shop, with their contents, the property of Abraham LeDrew and also the dwelling and its contents, owned by Frank Fowler.

Both properties were insured, that of LeDrew with the Acadia Company, and that of Fowler with the Royal Insurance Company of Montreal.

Who Won the Battle of Jutland?
OFFICIAL RECORDS AT THE NICKEL MONDAY.

With the releasing of the official British Admiralty production of "The Battle of Jutland" all doubt, as to who won that much talked about battle, is ended. The picture of "The Battle of Jutland" which will be shown at the Nickel Theatre on Monday shows distinctly the movements of the British Fleet, under Beatty and Jellicoe, as well as those of the Germans. It turned men who were on the British ships and who are thoroughly familiar with the details of the fight, and loud in their praise of the picture, declaring it to be the best realistic and thrilling film of its kind yet known. Unlike some of the previous official pictures of the war which frequently showed a monotonous series of views of the front, "The Battle of Jutland" presents graphically the story of a great battle at sea.

DESCRIBES HIS DAUGHTER'S CURE FROM ECZEMA.
I am more grateful since using your wonderful D.D.D. for Eczema. My little girl was troubled with Weeping Eczema. I used everything but to no use and I thought D.D.D. would be of no use either. My girl's head became so bad I had to clip her hair off and keep her from school. She got sores all over her body. I used 8 bottles and I am proud to say she is cured. Not a pimple or rash and her skin is clear and white and all the itching is gone. I will recommend D.D.D. to anyone I know who is troubled with Eczema. I am ever so happy and thankful for your wonderful cure.

TOLERANCE
My neighbour wears a curious hat, I do not like him less for that.
Black coffee he declares is fine, Sugar and cream I choose in mine.
Each of us owns a plot of ground Whereon our choice of flowers is found.
Red roses make a lovely sight, But he is fonder of the white.
Although on this we can't agree, We stay as friendly as can be.
My neighbour is a Democrat, I do not hate him though for that.
We differ in our tastes and views, Pleasures he likes I'd never choose.
But I don't hold that he should eat My favourite dish of fish or meat.
I don't insist that he should wear A hat for which he doesn't care.
Why should I, then, insist that he Should come to worship God with me?
Why should I mention with a sneer My neighbour's church, however queer?
What matters now his form of prayer More than the hat he buys to wear?
Though different churches we attend, He is my neighbour and my friend.

Cove he passed through "Mock Baggar" in Bonavista Harbor; where, he says, a great peat bog is situated, and from which human skeletons at various periods, known to have been used by the Red Indians. It, he says, these bodies were those of Beothics, they must have been there a period of 200 years; as it is well known that human skeletons have been dug out of bogs after remaining there several hundred years. This is the same bog through which the canal is now being dug from the sea to the pond, and in which the human skeletons, and articles of clothing were found by Doctor Forbes, last year.

He refers to a very singular and most extraordinary sound that was heard at Bird Island Cove about 1830, and which for a while played havoc with the nerves of the people there. James Porter is mentioned as one who gave him an intelligent description of it. The real cause of the sound has not been discovered, though it probably had its origin in the atmosphere. The sound was referred to by the inhabitants of Bonavista and Bird Island Cove as "the thunder growl." He makes the authoritative statement that, at the time of the great earthquake at Lisbon in 1755, the effects were felt at Bonavista. The sea retired and left the bed of the harbor dry for ten minutes, when it again flowed in and rose to an unusual height, overflowing several meadows for about the same space of time as it had retired; and the waters on each side of Bonavista Cape were greatly agitated.

Mr. Tocque spent some time at Trinity in 1843. He was attracted by the number of dogberry trees and the profusion of berries on them. He says they are called by some people "pig berries." I don't think they have ever been known by that name in Trinity. During his stay at Trinity he attended service in old St. Paul's during the Christmas season, and was surprised, and pleased to find the tops of the pews ornamented with dogberries respectively, in the gimlet holes that were in the top moulding of each end, and in the middle of the front of the seat. It was Rev. H. Dunfield who changed the method of Christmas decoration, and who taught us to make wreathing of spruce and Gogberries. During this visit to Trinity, Mr. Tocque visited English Harbor, and took part in the first missionary meeting that was held there.

Whilst at Catalina, on his way to Trinity, Mr. Tocque spent the afternoon knocking out of the rocks along the shore some of what is called "Catalina Stone." This is iron pyrites, formed by a combination of iron and sulphur. This mineral is also found in other parts of Trinity Bay. It was the fire-stones of the Red Indians, from which they used to obtain fire by striking two pieces together like flint and steel. It is said, the early adventurers who visited Catalina supposed the radiated pyrites to have been gold, and that Sir Humphrey Gilbert loaded his vessel with it. On his way to Trinity, Mr. Tocque observed an aspen tree, the leaves of which were trembling incessantly. A legend is told, that of this tree, the wood was taken that formed the cross of the Saviour, and that since then its leaves can never rest. "Trembling like an aspen leaf" has always been a well known expression, to indicate one's physical condition when shivering with the cold, or in times of great emotion.

Mr. Tocque was always deeply interested in natural phenomena. In the summer of 1841 he was spending an evening with Mr. John Butler at Port de Grave. Mr. Butler said, "we shall soon have a gale of wind from the North East." When asked how he knew, he replied, "I saw the light." When asked, "what light?" he said, "previous to a gale of wind from the North East, a light is always seen moving about on the surface of the water." Mr. Tocque became so deeply interested in those remarks that he went out of the house, and looking sea-ward in the direction of Kelly's Island, about five miles away, he saw the light distinctly. It was a pale light, larger than that seen from a lantern, and moving slowly westward on the surface of the water. A week later Mr. Tocque saw it again, and within a few hours the wind was blowing a gale from the North East. The origin of such lights is owing to the presence of an innumerable multitude of small luminous insects, which, like the larger animals, have a pre-sensation of the change of weather, and sport in companies over the water. I should like to hear from some reliable person at Port de Grave, as to whether such a light is still seen as a presage of a North Easter. Mr. Tocque gives a rat story that I had not heard before. A friend of his told him that he saw a rat place a straw in the mouth of another rat that was blind from old age, and lead it to water close by, where, after having drunk, he conducted him back again to his hole. This book by Mr. Tocque is illustrated with a view of Trinity; a portrait of Mary March; the steamer "John McAdam" entering the Harbor of Trinity August 18th, 1842; a south view of St. John's; the Church of England and Roman Catholic Cathedrals; and St. Andrew's Kirk, St. John's.

They did that because it gave phonetically the correct name. It looks as though some names strangely and quickly departed from the original. For instance—On March 8th 1788 I find the following entry of baptism: "James, child of Jasper and Ann Hitchcock." Then three years later, November 16th, 1791, I find the following entry: "Baptized, 'Jasper, child of Jasper and Ann Hitchcock." The same persons with sur-

The Founder of England's Colonies.

Sir Walter Raleigh, the founder of England's colonial empire, was born at Hayes, near Budeleigh in Devonshire in 1552. He soon developed a love for adventure and when a young man sailed with Sir Humphrey Gilbert on a voyage across the Atlantic. In 1582 he appeared at Queen Elizabeth's Court as a protégé of the Earl of Leicester, where his handsome person, splendid dress and witty conversation, combined with bravery, learning and ability, soon made him prime favourite with the Queen. This, of course, excited the envy and jealousy of the other courtiers, which was not lessened by his proud and haughty bearing. He assisted in raising an army to protect England from invasion at the time of the Spanish Armada. In 1585 he and others fitted out a squadron to capture the Spanish plate fleet. He invested £24,000 of his own money, but the expedition was a failure. After his return the Queen imprisoned him in the Tower for having a love affair with one of her maids of honor, Elizabeth Throgmorton. In three months he was set at liberty, married the lady and retired to the country. He next turned his attention to the golden city of Manoa, said to be somewhere on the Orinoco in South America. He raised an expedition of five ships, and sailed in 1595 to find it, but got more fighting than gold, and lost most of his money. He then attempted to colonize the land of Virginia and spared neither pains nor money in endeavours to make the new colony a success. One result was the introduction of the potato and tobacco in England. When Elizabeth died, Raleigh's enemies took good care he should be no favourite with James. They had him tried for high treason, on manifestly false charges, and he was imprisoned in the Tower. Here he resided twelve years and wrote his "History of the World." At last he induced James to let him go on one more voyage as he was confident he could find a gold mine. James who had promised the King of Spain he would execute Raleigh, let him go, but treacherously warned the Spaniards of his coming so that the expedition was a failure. When he returned he was beheaded in Old Palace yard on Oct. 29, 1618. Thus perished one of the greatest of Englishmen, whose real glory was his long, costly and persistent efforts to establish the colony of Virginia, and so began Britain's Empire beyond the seas.

Fisherman Carpenter.

Georges Carpentier, the former French idol of the ring, who was so effectively deposed from the pugilistic throne by Senegalese Siki, is going into the fishing game. If he is looking for a rest after the terrible punishment from the hands of the negro, he's making a beautiful mistake. If he intimates to any fisherman the world over that there is rest to be had in the fishing game he may expect a dose similar to the one Siki handed out. To use classic language, there ain't no such thing in the fishing game as soft berth. A professional pugilist's job is a joke to a fisherman's.

However, Carpentier has bought two new trawlers, according to a Paris report to the London Daily Chronicle. One he has christened, Jacques-Hinc—the name of his daughter, and the other, Denise—the name of his manager's daughter. Carpentier had intended to engage in a few more battles for the sake of satisfying his many admirers, and incidentally acquiring a few more "roots of all evil." Then it was his scheme to retire an undefeated light heavyweight champion of the world and squander his copious francs in an endeavor to squeeze money out of fish. Siki rudely upset the programme so that Carpentier can start right in spending his money. We hope he succeeds and, frankly, we admire his courage. On this side of the Atlantic opportunities in the fishing industry are princely as compared with those in France and it is about as easy to pry capital from our moneyed men in Canada for investment in fishery enterprises as it is to light a match on wet seaweed.—Canadian Fisherman.

Successful Men Smile.

The Chinese have a proverb which says, "A man without a smiling face should not open a shop."

Faces are a real factor in business success. It is not that beauty is required—although a pretty waitress is a business asset to her employer—but just the smiling face.

It exercises a subtle influence on a customer. It welcomes. It recommends the goods. Can you picture a grabber, or a profiteer, with a smiling face? No!

The smiling face involves, almost of necessity, the pleasant manner. The combination gets custom, holds it and increases it.

A hundred and one hints on "how to succeed" have been given to the world, but one of the best is that wrapped up in the Chinese proverb, "A man without a smiling face should not open a shop."

Forty-Three Years in the Public Service—The Evening Telegram

Criticism Directed at Lloyd George.

NEAR EAST POLICY ASSAILED. English papers to hand by Thursday's mail show that, during the week-end preceding the resignation of Mr. Lloyd George, there was an extraordinary outburst of criticism of the Prime Minister—extraordinary on account of the quarters from which it came and of its personal character. The Government's Near-East policy was assailed, but the censure was directed entirely to one member of the Government—the Prime Minister. It was the more stinging where it contrasted, as in the case of the Observer, with a hitherto warm support of Mr. Lloyd George.

The domestic application of Mr. Bonar Law's letter to the Times was much discussed. It was said in Unionist quarters that if Parliament had been meeting and Mr. Bonar Law had spoken in the House in the sense in which he wrote in the Times he would certainly have carried the Unionist Party with him—and have made impossible the prosecution of individual action by England in the Near East. Mr. Bonar Law's letter was of a character which might almost oblige him in certain circumstances to assume a position of political leadership.

The leading article in the Observer was outspoken even to bluntness. "The Prime Minister's position has become quite untenable with any credit to himself or advantage to the country."

The Observer suggested the formation of a New Government to carry on until the General Election, "held the sooner the better." The speaker the Premier stands aside, the more easily will the nation be able to extricate itself from its immediate difficulties, and the better it will be for his own credit and future.

Lord Rothermere, in an article in the Sunday Pictorial, was also emphatic upon the need for the Prime Minister relinquishing office.

The Spectator contained an article entitled "A Plea for a Reconstructed Ministry," from which we quote the following passages:—"If the negotiations of the peace with Turkey are to be in the hands of Mr. Lloyd George we shall have no guarantee whatever that we shall emerge either with safety or credit. What is needed, above all things, is a Government which will insist upon 'safety first' as the rule. We suggest the idea of a remaking of the Government for the very earnest consideration of the nation. We appreciate the risks perfectly well. Nevertheless, in our judgment there are sometimes risks which should be accepted. We prefer smaller risks to larger risks."

While not suggesting an instant reconstruction of the Government, the writer urges that when a satisfactory start along the road to peace has been made there should be changes which would remove from Mr. Lloyd George's hands the negotiation of the final Peace Treaty. He proceeds:—"What we suggest is that there should be a reconstruction of the Cabinet; that Mr. Lloyd George should disappear and should be replaced by Mr. Bonar Law or by somebody else—but preferably, we think, by Mr. Bonar Law. Lord Derby or the Duke of Devonshire—and we would suggest other names—might be trusted by the nation as Prime Minister if for some reason Mr. Bonar Law were not available, and either would be eminently what may be described as a 'safety first' man. The tendency, however, to insist nowadays that the Prime Minister should be a member of the House of Commons might be too strong. There need not be many other changes. Mr. Churchill, if he did not temporarily disappear, would be safer in some department where he could not, as he can now, say that he is acting with special authority when he beats a war drum for the Dominions to hear. Again, if the Lord Chamberlain remained he would, we fear, be under too great a temptation to carry on the Lloyd George tradition. For that reason, we consider, he ought to go, though, from a legal point of view, he has been an exceptionally good Lord Chancellor."

"Could not some of those responsible politicians who recognize that we have not exaggerated the dangers of Mr. Lloyd George's continuance in office 'get together' and convey to him that he can best serve the country by resigning? We absolutely refuse to believe that Mr. Lloyd George would place his own political fortunes or even those of his party, above the interests of the nation if a very strongly supported appeal were made to him. France and Turkey are the principal States with which we shall have to deal in arranging the peace. Both (France in the person of M. Poincare, Turkey in that of Kemal) have expressed their strong distrust of Mr. Lloyd George. Even if they were entirely wrong, the fact that they have no confidence in Mr. Lloyd George would show that he is the wrong man to make the peace. We simply must proceed on safe lines, and Mr. Lloyd George's guidance, if only because he is compromised by his past, is not safe."
