The Fact Remains

No amount of misrepresentation by the peddlers of alum baking powders, no juggling with chemicals, or pretended analysis, or cooked-up certificates, or falsehoods of any kind, can change the fact that

Royal Baking Powder has been found by the official examinations to be of the highest leavening efficiency, free from alum, and of absolute purity and wholesomeness.

Royal Baking Powder is indispensable for making finest and most economical food.

COMMUNICATION OF W. H. HATTIE.

Halifax, N. S., April 7, 1914.
W. G. Clark, Esq., Warden,
Bear River, N. S.

Sir,—In answer to your favor of the 17th, I beg to say that the recent legislation relative to tuberculosis may be briefly summarized as follows:—

1. Provision is made for the establishment of at least one hospital for tuberculosis in the province to be divided into districts in each of which it is designed to establish a hospital, if the various municipalities and townships will cooperate in the other half. The province will contribute $2.00 per week per patient towards the cost of maintenance, and if it should be necessary to have the institution administered by a resident medical superintendent, the province will probably pay his salary also.

2. Each county is asked to establish a "Tuberculosis Clinic," to which poor people may apply for medical advice and medicine. The clinic is intended to be the headquarters for a tuberculosis nurse and for an expert diagnostician who will visit it at frequent intervals. The province will provide and support the tuberculosis nurse and the diagnostician. The nurse will assist at the clinic on days on which patients attend and will be available to go to the homes of tuberculous patients to instruct those in the homes in the nursing of patients and in the measures to be adopted in order to prevent the spread of the infection. The nurse will further be of assistance in locating cases of tuberculosis which are not under medical care and she will be able to acquire such information relative to the home condition of patients as will assist the diagnostician in determining whether patients should receive treatment in their homes or at an institution.

It is hoped that the various towns and municipalities will give their active and prompt support to this proposition, so that we may be able to effect an organization throughout the province which will very speedily reduce the death rate from the most common, most widespread and fatal of all diseases.

I beg, therefore, that you will lay this matter before your Council for full consideration and would further ask that you appoint a representative of the other towns and municipalities which will be grouped with you in the province.

I will contract to inform you when the bodies interested have elected their representatives so that a conference may be arranged for.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Your obedient servant,

W. H. HATTIE,
Provincial Health Officer.

TOURING IN ENGLAND

(By REV. R. O. ARMSTRONG, M. A.)

From Gloucester we took an excursion by steamer on the River Severn to Deerhurst and Tewkesbury. This was, as usual, a most interesting trip twenty-five miles or so up the river. Some Gloucester people went with us. One gentleman especially who holding the position of Government Analyst for Gloucestershire, proved a valuable travelling companion. He knew things from the bottom up and talked freely with us. (Since returning home I received a golden wedding souvenir photograph of this gentleman and his wife). The Severn forms one of England's inland waterways by which with the aid of canals, merchandise is carried from the coast to midland cities. For example on our way up the river we passed a tow boat loaded with grain.

"That is loaded with wheat, probably from your own county," said our Gloucester friend, "and it is being carried up to Manchester." The marvel of the whole thing is how after all this freightage they can manufacture flour and sell it cheaper than we can where the wheat is raised! The country all along here is very fertile and has been under cultivation for centuries. The river banks for the most part are too high to permit good sight seeing. Then again the atmosphere is generally more hazy than in Canada.

At no time did we see such deep rich blue skies as we so often see in Manitoba. Two characteristic features of old country life were pointed out. One was a "mark" or neutral band of land around some of the old villages. This carries us far back in the history of the "Angles." Green, the historian, speaks of such a custom among our forefathers before they came to England at all. Another thing was the "tithe barn."

Formerly, the church tithes were brought in kind and stored in a barn by the parish church and rectory. But in the course of time this proved cumbersome and inconvenient, so the Tithe Commutation Act, about 1836, made it possible to pay a cash value for the tithe. A "tithe barn" is therefore getting quite rare.

Deerhurst is a very old village. We stopped off to see the church, which seems to be the representative point of interest in many places. The Deerhurst Church has a history reaching back to pre-Norman days. It was once an Abbey. There is a font in it which has a unique history. The pedestal is supposed to be Roman and the bowl, as large as a tub, is of Anglo-Saxon workmanship. In the meke of the ages these became separated. The bowl was found on a farm serving as a watering trough, and later the stem was found near the banks of the Severn. About forty years ago these were brought together again and placed in this old church. Near by is another building called Odda's Chapel, the identity of which was lost for centuries. In 1885 its true history was brought to light. It is the remains of a private chapel which was dedicated April 12, 1056. The stone containing the dedication inscription was dug up in 1675 and is in a museum at Oxford. It was not known till the above date still standing. It had been used for generations as a dwelling house. The inscription is this:—"Earl Odda had this royal hall built and dedicated in honor of the Holy Trinity for the good of the soul of his brother Elric which in this place quitted the body. Bishop Ealdred dedicated it on the 12th of April in the 14th year of the reign of Edward, King of England." (Original in Latin.)

Our next stopping place was Tewkesbury. This is another old city. Some parts show this plainly. One wonders that it so well kept. The old is crumbling, the new is slowly rising. On our way from the boat to our hotel we cross "King John's bridge." We luncheon at "Bell Inn." This is the house connected with a story that seems to be perennial in popularity—"John Halifax, Gentleman." It played the part of Abel Fletcher's residence in that story and "Nortonburg" was Tewkesburg itself. The bowling green referred to by the same story is in the rear and open to visitors. The cathedral near by contains a medalion memorial to Mrs. Craik, the author. Both Gloucester and Tewkesbury Cathedrals are noted for their many massive Norman pillars—about nineteen feet in circumference and over thirty high. A christening was taking place while we were visiting the Cathedral, four or five mothers with babes were in waiting, the fathers not being there. The ladies of our party indulged in little nurse-ery exercise and carried the babies around for a while. One of the organs in the Cathedral is known as Milton's as it is supposed to have been used by him in Hampton Court, thence removed here. Interesting memorials stand out or look down on all sides. "The Clarence Vault" contains the remains of George, Duke of Clarence, brother of Edward IV. He was the man we read about in our histories long ago who was drowned in a butt of wine. Another sight rather gruesome for perpetual exposure to public view is the "Wakeman Cenotaph" containing a representation of the corpse of a monk undergoing the process of decay—lizards, worms, snails, etc., devouring the body.

Tewkesbury furnishes some rare examples of Tudor architecture, high timbered houses with the higher stories overhanging the lower. We had permission to inspect one of these, and very quaint it was within. "The Hop Pole Inn" on one of the main streets has an inscription by the doorway which is a quotation from "Pickwick Papers," recounting the story of a visit from Mr. Pickwick, Ben Allen and Mr. Weller, and how they had indulged themselves in drinks. A walk to the South of the town on our way back to the Severn took us across the battlefield of Tewkesbury. The day was beautiful, nature looked her best and we took our steamer again near where the Avon—immortalized by Shakespeare—joins the Severn. A few hours brought us again to Gloucester where we prepared to spend our last social evening together as one party.

For about seven weeks we had been banded together touring first across the Atlantic, then in Scotland, England, Channel Islands and back again to England. Our last night as a whole party had come. Words of appreciation for our leader and organizer Mr. Fred J. Nery, were spoken. The benefits of the trip in general were commented upon, and plans were considered whereby the benefits of these trips and imperial sentiments in general might be conserved and cherished. So warm and sincere had been our welcome everywhere, there arose in my heart a feeling similar to that which I used to experience on other days when I visited my old home and was on the eve of departure for an indefinite time. England is our motherland!

The following morning—August 20—we entrained early, and through fog and under dull skies started for Chester via Birmingham and Crewe. Chester was the last place we formally visited in our tour. Had we not been so surfeited with sights and well nigh stupefied with thrills, not to mention the physical exertion of six weeks' constant travel, we might have appreciated this ancient and modern city more fully. Our time in any case was brief. It resembles Gloucester in architecture. It, too, has a wonderful old cathedral, especially noted for its vast display of carved work—there seemed to be no end to it. While visiting the cathedral we were treated to a musical recital by the organist, which very strikingly suggested Gray's lines,—

"Where through the long drawn aisle and fretted vaults,
The pealing anthem swells the note of praise."

A very valuable relic here is the regimental standard of the Cheshire regiment which was wrapped around Wolfe when he fell at Quebec in 1759. The Cheshires were with him at that time and, of course, Cheshire is proud of that.

Chester was a Roman town and was surrounded by a wall as a protection against Celts on the West and Picts and Scots on the North. The wall is still in sight, at least what is called the "Roman wall," but no one seems prepared to assess it as the original thing. Strange to say a large number of relics found here and at Bath which we visited earlier, are parts of Roman temples. Yes, the Romans were religious; all men are, but they worshipped the human more often than the divine and could not endure. We visited King Charles' tower on the old Roman wall, so called because Charles I here watched a battle (Rowton Moor 1645) between his troops and Parliamentarians. The former were defeated. Hawarden, Gladstone's home, is six miles west of Chester.

At 3.30 p.m. orders came for us to proceed to Liverpool to take steamer for Canada. Again we rode through a fertile country, crossing two rivers—Dee and Mersey—and the Manchester ship canal. The country suggested a term we frequently see in menu cards, "Cheshire cheese."

Nearing Liverpool we passed many bare looking suburban towns, homes of working men very likely. How is it these towns are so bare of foliage while the surrounding country is so luxuriant? It must be explained. I think, by the maxim that "God made the country and man made the town." The scenery along the Mersey is deeply interesting. We did not see much of Liverpool proper. Our train took a dip underground and came out on the wharf, from which we hurried aboard ship and took our part in handkerchief waving and cheering. Hundreds were farewelling friends—some eyes were wet with tears. Only a portion of our party took this boat. Others came a week later, others remained in England for study and travel.

Shocking Murder in Yarmouth County

Early on Wednesday morning last the citizens of Yarmouth were horrified to hear reports of a supposed murder at Ohio, about six miles from town. It was stated that Mr. Ebenezer Hilton, during a quarrel with his wife, had thrown a lighted lamp at her, which broke, setting her clothes on fire and fatally burning her, besides cutting deep gashes in her face and nose. Hilton was in trouble some years ago, and served a term in the county jail for brutally beating and indirectly causing the death of his aged mother. In the latter case, after beating the old lady he refused to allow her in the house and she was forced to sleep in the pig pen, bringing on an attack of pneumonia, which resulted fatally.

Sad Case at Berwick

Berwick, N. S., April 21—Old, forsaken by his family and destitute of means, Wesley Bent, a well known character throughout the Valley, was found lying on the track by the D. A. R. train hands on Thursday afternoon, between Berwick and Waterville. The train was brought to a standstill, and he was picked up. He said he was tired of life and wanted to die (as he was in his ninety-ninth year) and no one would give him any work to do, as he was too old. He is a native of Annapolis County. A few years ago he was sent to the poor house in Bridgetown, but would not stay there. He walked around the country begging and asking for assistance.

N. H. Phinney & Co's block in Halifax was gutted by fire last week. We understand that the contents of the lower floor were gotten out safely, but that the goods stored in the upper rooms were destroyed. The loss was covered by insurance.
North Williamston is "going up," so to speak. At least there is an "uprising" or a "raising." R. J. Messenger's house started upward, then Mr. Stevenson raised his, and now Mr. Moore has gone up a storey. This is no story—and Mr. Hiltz is adding to his. It would be interesting to drive up that road in a few weeks. Some one has suggested a summer residence on a farm on that road on which there is no buildings.

About one-fourth of the pages are given to current events and the articles are frequently illustrated, curious as the suggestion of pictures for the blind may seem. "BLACK KNIGHT"
The Rev. J. N. Hector, popularly known as the "Black Knight" and well known in Canada and the United States as a leader in the cause of temperance reform died recently in the United States. Mr. Hector was a negro, the son of slaves and had practically no education in his youth. He in turn was a volunteer in the Civil War, a railroad engineer driver and a minister of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church. He had spoken many times in Montreal and was well known in Canada. He was nearly seventy years old.
BUILDING ON FIELD OF WATER-LOO.
(Glasgow Herald)
When the centenary of the battle of Waterloo is celebrated next year visitors to the famous field will find that it has largely lost its rural appearance, as it has become a favorite site for building of country villas. There are no fewer than fifty now on the field where Napoleon met his doom, and many of them are built on the very spots that were occupied by the combatants. The field is an ideal situation for country retreats. The completion of good motor roads from Nivelles and Charleroi has done much to stimulate villa building.

Slavery in Nova Scotia

The following interesting reference to Slavery in Nova Scotia is taken from the Acadia Recorder of the 11th inst.—

A large number of negro slaves reached Shelburne from the revolted colonies. They appeared on the rolls as "servants," but their number, as ordinary servants, was suspiciously large. Stephen Shakespeare was accompanied by twenty, and Charles Oliver Bruff, a goldsmith, by fifteen of them. Isaac Wilkins is also said to have brought a good many. With Captain Andrew Barclay's company of fifty-five men and women and forty nine children, were no less than fifty-seven "servants," thirty-six of whom however, were owned by four families. There is little reason to doubt that nearly all were real slaves. The terms "slave," and "the property of," appear almost as frequently in the official records of early Shelburne as one would expect to see them in those of a southern slave-holding city. A certificate in my possession, bearing date as late as 1850, has reference to the hiring of a slave. In fact slavery near the close of the last century, had a certain legal recognition in this province. It is not more than a hundred years since a Presbyterian divine in Nova Scotia held a slave and defended his conduct in a long series of letters, based for the most part on the teaching of Scripture. It was in 1786 that the excellent Dr. MacGregor, of the same church, agreed to pay fifty pounds for the freedom of a colored girl held in slavery by a member of his congregation, and that he actually paid twenty pounds according to that agreement out of an exceedingly meagre salary.

An interesting trial, having relation to slavery, took place at Shelburne during the following year. One Jesse Gray, of Argyle, had sold to William Mangham, of Shelburne, a colored woman called Mary Postill, for one hundred bushels of potatoes. Gray was charged with "misdeemeanor," it being alleged that he was not the real owner of the woman in question. Proof having, however, been given that Gray had been her owner in the Southern States, the court at once acquitted him, and the woman became as much the property of Mangham for a hundred bushels of potatoes as would a horse or a wagon for the same consideration. One restriction the law provided—that no one could dispose of a slave outside the province, but on more occasions than one slaves were taken from Shelburne and were sold in the West Indies. It was the harsh treatment of a slave by a Loyalist master, who had carried him to London, that elicited the decision of Lord Mansfield that no master was at liberty to send his negro-servant from England to a foreign country, or even to any British colony. The result of this decision was a movement to abolish the slave trade, and the union of Clarkson, and Wilberforce with Granville Sharpe to effect that purpose.

A large number of free negroes also arrived in 1783. About two thousand who had fled to the British lines, and had been set at work on the southern fortifications, were taken thence to New York. Only one negro corps was enrolled for regular military service—that known as the "Black Pioneers," which served faithfully to the close of the war. At the conclusion of peace the colored people saw with terror their former masters arriving at New York from Virginia and the Carolinas, and seizing their living "property" on the streets, or dragging them from their beds, to carry them back to the South, Sir Guy Carleton, refusing to understand that article that Laurens had had inserted in the treaty, prohibiting the carrying away of slaves or other property, as stipulating the surrender of any slaves who had taken refuge under the British flag—a surrender he thought in the highest degree dishonorable to Great Britain, soon relieved the distress of the colored people by a proclamation that all negroes who had sought refuge from rebel masters within the British lines were free, and by a certificate to that effect given to each former slave. Having caused an accurate list to be taken in view of any demand for indemnity, vessels were soon fitted out, in which they were sent to Burchtown, near Shelburne, where a few weeks later, they were joined by others who had sailed from St. Augustine for Halifax. About eighty men of the Black Pioneer Corps reached Halifax in the Spring fleet. Captains were appointed to attend to the division of the lands and the distribution of the rations, and over the whole Colonel Stephen Black, a mulatto, by appointment exercised a certain supervision. Black, in 1788, entertained Prince William Henry, afterwards William IV., at dinner, at his house, on the Burchtown road. He was about that time schoolmaster to the colored settlement. F. W. business men at the present day affix as fine a signature to a document as he did to one in my possession. What became of him has not been clearly ascertained. Tradition states that an accusation of misappropriation of funds, entrusted to him for the benefit of the colored public, led him to leave home, and make his way toward the Bay of Fundy, and that a fragment of his clothing, picked up some time after, led to the belief that he had been destroyed by some wild animal. In this colored settlement at Burchtown, John Wesley took a deep interest. In one of his earliest letters to Robert Barry he promised to send them some reading matter, and added: "They shall never want books while I live." In subsequent letters he scarcely ever failed to make inquiries about the same settlement.

There were good men among these negroes, whose principles were tested at Shelburne, and still more severely at Sierra Leone, and were not found wanting; but the great majority were better known by the troubles they gave the magistrates, and the demands they made upon the overseers of the poor. Among the earliest ordinances passed by the sessions was one enacting "that fifty handbills be printed immediately, forbidding negro dances and frolics in this town of Shelburne."

To Prevent Potato Scab

The following recommendations for control of powdery scab have been made by the Minister of Agriculture, Ottawa:

- Use only "seed" from a crop free from the disease.
- Disinfect such "seed" to destroy any stray disease germs.
- Use land known to be free from the disease. In most areas this will have to be land not previously planted to potatoes.
- Do not plant potatoes again in land which has shown the disease. If possible, seed such land down to grass.
- Isolate the crop from any field showing the disease, and take all possible precautions to avoid the spores from this crop being scattered where they may infect other potatoes.
- Pay special attention to the cleaning, and, if necessary, disinfection of implements which may carry the disease.

WORK ON PANAMA CANAL IS SET BACK.

Panama, April 28.—It has just become known here that in the fresh slide at Cucharucha, an incalculable amount of earth entered the canal almost neutralizing the result of months of dredging. There is only nine feet depth of water in the canal at that spot. Canal officials deny that the condition caused by this latest slide is serious but notwithstanding this the number of dredges working there has been increased.

REPORT OF C. HAYES AND OTHERS ON BEACH ROAD

To the Warden and Councillors of the Municipality of Annapolis County:

Gentlemen—
 We your committee appointed to consider matters in connection with said piece of Road to be straightened in District No. 2, Ward No. 7, beg leave to report that we have examined and considered carefully the conditions of said road and find that a road is necessary as the old one is dangerous to traffic and we also find that there is a free right of way to said piece of road. We have, therefore, staked out the alteration required, there being no damage for right of way.

JOHN H. HAYES,
 JAMES S. MERRY,
 Committee

Victoria Beach, April 18, 1914.
 The resignation of the Treasurer being read by the Warden was regretfully accepted by motion. The following is the resignation as read—

RESIGNATION OF W. OUTHIT, TREASURER.

The Warden of the Municipality of Annapolis County.

Sir—
 I beg leave to tender hereby my resignation of the trusteeship of the Municipality of Annapolis County. This action is made necessary by my transfer to another province where it will be impossible to keep in as close touch with the County work as I should like to do.
 Thanking you and the councillors associated with you both in the past and present, for the invariable courtesy and consideration,
 I am, Sir,
 Your obedient servant,
 W. E. OUTHIT.

Ordered that F. R. Elliott and Jos I. Foster be a committee to convey to the Treasurer the regrets of this Council in appropriate language for record, which they did by the following resolution—

RESOLUTION EXPRESSING REGRETS OF COUNCIL ON RESIGNATION OF TREASURER OUTHIT.

To D. M. Outhit—
 Whereas by a resolution of Council we the undersigned were appointed a Committee to prepare and put in suitable language some expression of regret that other duties compelled you to resign the office of Treasurer in this Municipality.

On behalf of this honorable body we would say that in accepting your resignation we feel that this municipality suffers a severe loss.

The efficient manner in which you have always performed your duties and the kind and courteous treatment that the public have always received at your hands has made your services to this Municipality more than valuable.

We bespeak for you in your new sphere of action that same degree of success which has attended your efforts here and congratulate the institution in whatever Province it may be situated upon receiving the service of so valuable and competent an official.

F. R. ELLIOTT,
 JOSEPH I. FOSTER.

The office of Treasurer being vacant it was ordered that the Council proceed to the nomination of parties to fill the vacancy. The nominations having ceased it was found that Daniel M. Outhit who had tendered his resignation as councillor was the only nominee. A casting ballot having been on motion deposited in his favor he was declared elected by the Warden to fill the vacancy made by the resignation of his brother, William E. Outhit.

Ordered that Councillor Rawding be a member of the Finance Committee in the place of D. M. Outhit resigned.

Councillor Marshall gave notice that at the Annual Session 1915 he would move that legislation be enacted that would enable the Council to receive $5.00 per day for services rendered the Council instead of $3.00.

On motion the Council adjourned sine die.

O. S. MILLER,
 Municipal Clerk.

—One of the most interesting places in London is the gallery filled with Mrs. Tussand's waxworks. Here you see Kings and Queens and distinguished men and women of the past as nearly like life in look and dress as art can make them. One new figure lately introduced is Charles Dickens, clothed in the same clothes and surrounded by the same furniture which he used in his study in Gad's Hill, where he composed some of his immortal books.

—Nova Scotia may well be congratulated for her Schools for the Deaf and the Blind located in Halifax. The School for the Deaf is the older and has just published its fifty-sixth Annual Report. This Institution like that for the Blind to which we referred last week, draws its financial support from the three Maritime Provinces and Newfoundland, and also from private benevolence.
On account of extra expenses, it has been obliged to close its account for the year with a deficit considerably increased. The Directors hope that the very commendable and needful work the Institution is accomplishing will lead to larger contributions from the sources to which reference has been made. There was a total attendance for the year of 113 pupils,
6 of whom are from Annapolis Co.
We observe in the list the name of one from Bermuda.

The Report contains an interesting article from the Toronto Globe, on Mary Jane Veinot, the deaf, dumb and blind girl from Berwick, to whom we referred in these columns some time since. Mr. J. Fearon continues as Principal of the Institution. "The Institution News," published by this School, makes a request for donations of simple books for the library. Any such donations will be thankfully received, and acknowledged.

—Reference is frequently made in conversation and print to the engineering difficulties encountered in the construction of the Panama Canal, now nearly completed. But, comparatively little has been said
about another class of difficulties, more insidious, more treacherous than those of sand and rock, viz: the yellow fever and malaria of which the Canal zone has been a breeding place.

When DeLesseps in 1881, began the work on which he spent $240,000,000, and yet accomplished little, the chief obstacle was the tremendous death rate. It has been estimated that the "yellow Jack" claimed as many as two out of every three Frenchmen engaged in the enterprise. The Consul of Panama with a surveying party of twenty-two persons went through the district on a tour of observation.
In one week all were dead, excepting the consul and a Russian. When they returned the Russian asked the consul to advance him until next pay day, sufficient money to buy a new suit of clothes. The consul granted the request and asked the Russian to dine with him next day. The Russian did not keep the engagement. He died at three o'clock in the morning and was buried before daylight.

Jules Dingles, the first Director-general of DeLesseps's work, built a $150,000 house on the southern slope of a high hill, with a view to sanitary safety. Before he could occupy it, his wife, son and daughter died, and he returned to France where he shortly died a broken-hearted man.
Had not medical science in the meantime, come to the rescue, and provided methods by which this great mortality could be avoided, it is not at all probable that the work in which DeLesseps failed would have been undertaken at this later day.

But in 1881, a physician of Havana, Carlos Finlay, broached the theory that yellow fever was caused by the bite of a certain breed of mosquitoes.
In 1891, an officer in the English army discovered that the malarial germ was planted in the body by another breed of mosquitoes. And, these are the discoveries which have made the mortality of the Canal zone during the recent operations less than that of New York City, which is held to be as low as that of any city or rural community.

This great work of making the Canal zone as possible for human life as ordinary districts was committed to Colonel Gorgas, of the army of the United States. The father of this now distinguished man lost his life in the army of Gen Lee of the Southern Confederacy. When Richmond was destroyed the house in which the family lived was burned down, and his wife and six small children went to Baltimore. Col.

Gorgas describes himself in his boy-hood as "a ragged, barefoot little rebel, with empty pocket and still more empty stomach." By pluck and perseverance the ragged boy made for himself a name and was chosen as the Director of the great sanitary work, in which with his band of chosen assistants, he has been so successful. As a recognition of his distinguished services President Wilson has advanced him to the position Surgeon General of the army of the United States, with the rank of Brigadier-General.

The Journal of the American Medical Association remarks:—"The work of the Sanitary Department under Colonel Gorgas has not only been the greatest task of sanitation which has ever been undertaken, but it is also unique and epoch-making.
For the first time in human history,
a region which, since the earliest traditions of civilization, has been regarded as a plague spot, in which it was impossible for civilized man to live and work, has been converted into a place fitted for enjoyable habitation and labor with a death rate below that of the most modern cities." Gen. Gorgas has lately been lecturing in England on his sanitary work, and Oxford University has honored him with the degree of Doctor of Science. The "Times" speaks of him as "indisputably the foremost sanitary officer in the world," and as having "perhaps done more than any other man to throw open the tropics, or to show how they can be thrown open to habitation by Caucasians."

Program of Music in Methodist Church, Lawrencetown

On Sunday evening, April 26th, the following excellent program was rendered in the Methodist Church, by the choir, assisted by some friends from the choir of the Baptist Church. The choir was under the skilful direction of Miss M. Robb of Windsor, who is a very popular teacher of many pupils in this neighborhood. The singing was of very high order, and reflected great credit on both choristers and leader. Worthy of special mention is the anthem, "In Heavenly Love Abiding," in which the solo,
"Abide with me" was well taken by Mr. John Moore, with a quartette obligato refrain. "I could not do without Thee." All the items were, however, well rendered, to the celestial of an audience of nearly four hundred people. Mention must be made of the fine work of Miss Winnie Feltus, organist who accompanied skilfully. The offering amounted to the splendid sum of $18.36.

Mrs. Isabelle Gove Dies at St. Andrews

St. Andrews, N. B., April 26.—Mrs.
Isabelle Gove, widow of Charles M.
Gove, formerly collector of customs at this port, passed away at her home here on Friday. Mrs. Gove was well known throughout the province.
She took a great interest in the social and religious work of this community and was generally loved and respected.

She was eighty-two years of age,
and her whole life had been devoted to good works.

She is survived by four daughters,
Mrs. W. C. G. Grimmer, St. Stephens;
Mrs. E. M. Wood, Winnipeg; Mrs. Robert A. Brehn, St. John's, Newfoundland; and Mrs. F. H. Grimmer, St.
Andrews. One brother, Thomas Wheelock, late of Shanghai, China, but now of Boston, also survives.

(The deceased lady was a native of Annapolis Royal and a daughter of Welcome Wheelock, Esq., for many years the respected High Sheriff of the County of Annapolis, and a niece of the late Joseph Wheelock, Esq., of Bridgetown. In the days of her youth she was one of the most attractive young ladies of the ancient capital, which in those days could boast of a most refined, if not brilliant society. Those were days when many "gentlemen of the old school" survived and enjoyed a well deserved respect, and social and political influence. They had the opportunity of getting their daughters well educated and trained in the excellent boarding school for young ladies kept at Wilmot by the Misses Wiswall, granddaughters of the distinguished loyalist-clergyman, Rev. John Wiswall.
There were contemporary with her
the Misses Robinson, Leslie, Milledge Grassie, Cutler and others who graced their fathers' households and gave a peculiar charm and tone to society worthy of the venerable old town. Among them all there were none more accomplished, graceful and popular than the subject of this obituary. But the want of suitable employment for the young men at home impelled the latter to seek their fortunes abroad, and consequently there was a large preponderance of the fair sex in the society of the place; and so the large majority of the young ladies were wooed and won by young men from abroad and like Belle Wheelock (as she was familiarly called) went away to grace homes, rear worthy children and adorn society in distant scenes.

HAD TO STOP WORK FROM THE PAIN

Suffered Ten Years Until "Fruit-a-tives" Cured Him

ST. THOMAS, ONT., May 22nd, 1913.

"I was troubled for ten years with the most distressing Constipation and Indigestion of the worst form. No one could have been worse with these troubles than I was for this long time.

The pain from indigestion was so severe that many times, I have had to stop work and lie down until the acute spasms passed away.

I took a lot of medicine—in fact, I guess I took about everything that was advertised—and gave them all a fair test—but got no relief. About a year ago, however, I was advised to try "Fruit-a-tives". I am mighty glad I did so for they seem to be made exactly for me.

They gave results in a very short time and I am now free from these diseases and enjoying perfect health.

My wife also used "Fruit-a-tives" and we both think they are the best medicine ever made."

THE GIANT ANT-EATER IN COL. ROOSEVELT'S COLLECTION.

In the late afternoon we secured a more interesting creature than the jacaras. Kermit had charge of two hounds which we owed to the courtesy of one of our Argentine friends. They were big, nondescript animals, obviously good fighters, and speedily developed the utmost affection for all the members of the expedition, but especially for Kermit, who took care of them. One we named "Shenzi," the name given the wild bush natives by the Swahili, the semicivilized African porters. He was good-natured, rough, and stupid—hence his name. The other was called by a native name, "Trigueiro". The chance now came to try them.

We were steaming between long stretches of coarse grass, about three feet high, when we spied from the deck a black object, very conspicuous against the vivid green. It was a giant ant-eater, or Tanandua bandeira, one of the most extraordinary creatures of the latter-day world. It is about the size of a rather small black bear. It has a very long, narrow, toothless snout, with a tongue it can project a couple of feet; it is covered with coarse, black hair, save for a couple of white stripes; it has a long bushy tail and very powerful claws on its fore feet. It walks on the sides of its feet with three claws curved in under the foot. The claws are used in digging out ant-hills; but the beast has courage, and in a grapple is a rather unpleasant enemy in spite of its toothless mouth, for it can strike a formidable blow with these claws. It sometimes bugs a foe, gripping him tight; but its ordinary method of defending itself is to strike with its long, stout, curved claws, which, driven by its muscular forearm, can rip open man or beast. Several of our companions had had dogs killed by these ant-eaters; and we came across one man with a very ugly scar down his back, where he had been hit by one, which charged him when he came up to kill it at close quarters.—From "A Hunter-Naturalist in the Brazilian Wilderness," by Theodore Roosevelt, in the May Scribner.

THE CIGARETTE

A Parliamentary committee is inquiring into the cigarette evil. It is evidently assumed that there is a cigarette evil—that the cigarette is doing a great amount of harm. No one who knows anything about the subject but knows two things. One is that boys who come under the designation of cigarette fiends are physically, mentally and, worst of all, morally deficient, heart, brain and will being degraded. The other is that the quality of the work at school, at play, on the drill ground, or by any other test, of boys who use cigarettes at all is lower than that of boys who do not. At the time when the tobacco question was up in Parliament, Sir Wilfrid Laurier summed up public conviction on the subject of tobacco generally, by saying that its use was injurious to boys, but not necessarily to men. Judge Choquette, who gave evidence before the present committee, said ninety per cent of the boys who came before him used cigarettes and many of the girls, and he showed himself very solicitous on the subject.

But what aroused a keener interest than even the decay of the boys, which has become an old story, was the spread of the usage among women. The testimony of an Ottawa gentleman was that it was now common among women of the class in that city. He thought it would not be adopted by what he spoke of as the middle and lower classes, who had too much practical sense. This last assurance does not carry conviction. No human phenomenon is more obvious to all than the fact that women follow the fashion. There may once have been a class barrier that forbade fashions to descend, but now the new abuses reach the factory almost as soon as they reach the park. No matter where the fashion originates—generally among the questionable upper classes of Paris—it is immediately perfectly charming in the eyes of the feminine world. It would take an expert in such things to define the borders of good society at Ottawa, a place which has a peculiar attraction for women who aspire to social recognition. But what is certain is that what the smart women do the bright girls will do. The daughters of staid and careful mothers, if they enter society at all, will take their joy in being in the van of its ways and those who only would like to be on the list will follow them.

As for boys, Judge Choquette proposed a number of changes that might secure a better enforcement of the law, which, as it is, it seemed to him the police do not even try to enforce. He said that some parents would even give their children money to buy cigarettes. In these two facts we see the importance of law in the matter. A law may have good effect in educating the public conscience, but until the public conscience is enlisted the law will be almost helpless, and we learn from this evidence that, in some quarters, the public conscience has not even reached the point enunciated by Sir Wilfrid Laurier that the use of tobacco is injurious to boys. But even if all the world were convinced of this, and if the country in good earnest set to work to put a stop to such

Halibut Fishing in The Northern Pacific

(Bonnycastle Dale in "Rod and Gun")

We had long wanted to take our Fraser River fishing boat out to the halibut beds but the weather gods had not been propitious. Heavy winds, mighty seas, hail, rain and sleet had succeeded one another until like the old poem—

"First it rained and then it snowed, Then it hailed and rained and blowed, Then some snow and hail and rain And then it did it all again."

No wonder we did not want to stick the nose of our twenty-five footer out in that sort of weather. Finally the clouds seemed to run dry and the good old sun came out and all Nature smiled again and we went off and bought twelve dozen more halibut hooks. So, with a fair tide and a light following breeze, behold us leaving the harbor headed oceanwards.

Fritz seemed bound to let that old jibe. Every time we ran into a tide-rip, and there were plenty of big strong ones bubbling and rolling and roaring like a herd of young bulls, up shot the "Diver" into the wind—we christened her "The Diver" because of the abrupt way she had of entering a wave evidently intent on going right down to the bottom, then changing her mind, giving her counter a lift and throwing the incumbering water back into the sea. Oh, she was a real nice boat for a calm sea. I always thought her mainsail would stand a bit of shrinking; when she got it good and full, so hard you could beat on the belly of it as on a drum, she had a way of lifting, a sort of premature flight that, if your heart was not well anchored, made you close your teeth suddenly in case that fluttering member should escape. To make matters worse our anchor had conceived a violent affection for the last bar we had thrown it on, and there it remained, and all we had was a native anchor, fairly good, but a bit clumsy to ship in a heavy sea.

PLANS FOR WESTERN VISIT

His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, Governor-General, will spend several weeks in the prairie and Pacific Coast provinces this summer, definite announcement to this effect having been made on Saturday before the Royal party returned to Ottawa. Their Royal Highnesses the Duchess and Princess Patricia will accompany the Governor-General.

The trip, according to present plans, will begin the middle of July and terminate in September. Beginning June 4th, His Royal Highness will spend a month in Quebec and thence ten days in Halifax. Thence, he and his party will leave for the trip to the west. The cities to be visited have not been definitely arranged as yet, but Winnipeg, Calgary, Edmonton and Vancouver have already been chosen, and it is likely that Regina, Moose Jaw, Saskatoon, New Westminster, Victoria and others will be honored as well.—Montreal Witness.

ROYAL YEAST

baited, and set it some half mile off the first line. Then we ate a bit—not any herring, thank you—smoked, or pretended to—we do not want you to run away with the idea that we were really sea sick, we simply ask you did you ever meet anybody that admitted he had been sea sick, so how could we have been? As the wind was getting up a bit we 'hauled' with the Diver, by rowing her to the buoy and hauling in the line hand over hand. We caught dozens of dogfish; every bally herring had been miraculously replaced by one of these pests of the fishing banks, these miniature sharks, the salt water dogfish. There was not a single good fish on the first line. The second had first of all the head of a chicken halibut (a young fish), the body had been nipped off by a hungry sea lion. These big voracious fish eaters often follow the line right up to the boat and snatch the halibut almost out of the fisherman's hands. The next few hooks were bare, but we got two fair halibut on the next couple, one about fifteen pounds and one of some ten pounds—these dogfish, dogfish, dogfish until Fritz suddenly called out: "What ever is this coming up?"

Well might we ask, for a long, grizzly pinkish purplish thing was hanging below the next hook. It was an Octopus and the first one we had ever seen caught on a hand line. It was really hooked by accident we think, although the hook was deep in the fatty folds about the tiny mouth. The long soft thing fell in a heap as soon as we hauled it aboard and Fritz ran for the tub and lifted it in, one might almost say poured it in, so soft and useless is this so-called Devil-Fish of the magazine fakirs when out of the water. We have often taken them at the lowest low tide line and dissected them. We know they are perfectly harmless to man. Here was one that weighed sixty or seventy pounds, with arms six feet long—the fakirs open, the arms and measure them extended, so this would be a twelve foot "terror of the sea" by their account. It lay in the tub swaying with every roll of the lively boat like so much jelly.

We had rather a tough fight with a sturgeon on the line once that day. He was a big chap, over a hundred and fifty pounds and, with his snaky looking body and his green armour patches and his wicked looking head he was really more to be dreaded, harmless though he is, than the r-insanamed grisly thing, the Devil Fish.

That night, before the moon arose, all the plankton came to the surface, and illuminated all the sea. We threw a rope out with a single hook baited with a herring and when it struck all the disturbed surface blazed with phosphorescence. There was a herd of sea lions swimming on the banks and the sight of one of the savage fish feeders chasing a fish up a dark green billow—every fin movement of the fish a weird, blue flame—accompanied fight. The great plunging mammal behind rolled and dived in a very sea of fire, every downward throw of its flappers sent up fountains and columns of phosphorescence until the whole scene was awful in its weird beauty. We stood for an hour climbing to the swaying mast watching this wonderful display of Nature's fireworks. Once, some huge thing, possibly a Killer whale or a big "Black fish" rose in a surging mass of living flame right beside us. Involuntarily I clutched the lad's arm and we both ejaculated "Oh!" out into the immensity of black space that enveloped us. Just before we turned in a school of porpoises, evidently chasing their midnight supper, gambolled along past us, each and every one outlined, encircled, framed in wavering, glowing undulating lines and splashes of clear blue flame. To watch the circling, fiery whirlpools left by each descending "sea pig" made one dizzy. I pointed out to the young man next day the suspicious imprints on the wood of the mast. It looked as if some one—I shall not say who—had been clinging on for dear life, even to the point of digging his finger nails in. It was no use Fritz trying to lay it on the Devil Fish, for I pointed out how weak on finger nails the Octopus really was. When Fritz dared to suggest that perhaps there were other people on board that had finger nails as well as he I became really angry and sought my stateroom.

We had very fair fishing. As the skinks went down, the fish box went up, until we had over fifty good fish in it. Of course this was not really fishing for market. Some of the gasoline boats about us, ones that ran many dories, would have from one to twenty thousand pounds for a two or three days' fishing. Then off the Seattle fleet would race. Wireless had told of a good market and the first one in gets the best price. One hundred and ninety miles away lay that market and off the heavily engined boats started, plunging their blunt bows into the big smooth green hills, staggering down the other slope, butting into the calm water in the trough, zigzagging their noisy way up the next watery mountain—off—off for the market. We have known the first boat to get as high as eight to nine cents a pound and the last to receive as low as three. But these beds are nearly fished out. If you want real fishing go up near the Queen Charlotte's or farther up into Alaskan waters where the halibut and the cod and the alki mackerel exist in enormous schools, almost unfished for.

Three days later we were walking down the little village street—Fritz still had his legs wide apart and his feet turned out—I admit the road did roll a bit—giving away our sweet eating fish and I heard Fritz tell a certain young lady that shall be nameless: "Oh, we had a capfull of wind, but I never get seasick."

FLORA'S VISIT TO THE ZOO.

Flora was visiting her aunt in a large city very near her home. The old aunt and uncle took great pleasure in showing the child all the sights and noting her wonder and surprise at all she saw and heard. A circus was tenting on the outskirts of the city, and thither they took her to show her the animals. Flora took so much interest in the long neck of the giraffe that the other cages around held little of her attention.

"I never saw such a long neck," said Flora. "He must suffer awful when he gets a cold in his throat."

"That is a disadvantage," answered the keeper, smiling at Flora; "but having a long neck has its good results. He can browse the tops of small trees in his native land."

"Will he hurt anyone if you let him out of his cage?" asked Flora.

"That I can't say, but I'll show you some perfectly harmless animals. Come!"

"Oh, these are puppies!" exclaimed the child. "I love dogs. May I hold them?"

"Sit down, and I'll bring you two to hold a bit."

Then he went to another part of the tent and brought two tawny, plump little fellows to her.

She began to fondle them. One got her finger in its mouth and sucked it. Flora admitted them.

"I have never seen any puppies just like these," she said. "Is their mother a big dog?"

"Come this way and I'll show her to you. She came all the way from Africa."

He carried the little beasts, and the child followed him into a place where there was a large cage. In the cage stood a large lioness with fiery eyes, roaring at them with all her might. She was calling for her young pups. When Flora realized that she had been fondling young lions her flesh grew creepy, and she was glad to leave the circus tent for the fresh air.

"Of course," said her uncle on their homeward drive, "it seemed like a very brave thing to put your fingers in a lion's mouth, but you must remember that baby lions have no teeth."—Philadelphia "Ledger".

Dunvegan, Inverness Co.

I am perfectly cured of Kidney complaint after using Gin Pills. Six hours after taking the first Pill I obtained relief, and now after three months I feel as well as ever.

I suffered ten months and the Physician attending me advised me to go to the Victoria Hospital at Halifax, as he could do nothing more for me. I may add that I used a great deal of medicine, and strictly followed my physician's directions regarding diet, etc., but without avail, until provisionally I learned of your most excellent remedy. I am recommending Gin Pills.

Don't neglect your barn, which is the most important building on the place.

Of course you use paint on your house and out-buildings, and for the same reason you should use paint on your barn. Paint is not only meant to make buildings look better but its most important use is on account of the protection it affords against the attacks of the weather.

A well painted barn will keep in good repair for a century while an unpainted, neglected building will go to pieces in a quarter of that time. Come and see us today about special barn paints.
