Mr. SAM. BARKER. I wish to say a few words upon one or two of the clauses of Bill No. 132, and to repeat what I said on a former occasion with regard to the first section. The Minister of Justice will recollect that on a previous occasion I objected to the words in the fifth line giving the Privy Council power to rescind old orders made by the Railway Committee, and stating that in my opinion it would be proper, under the circumstances, to give the Privy Council power to validate orders that had been left in suspense, hung up between the two general railway Acts, but that I thought there was an objection to continuing in the Privy Council the power of varying and rescinding those old orders. The hon. gentleman said that the government had considered that question, and for some special reason they desired to continue in the Privy Council the power to deal with the old orders. Well, I could understand that there might be some reason perhaps why, under a particular order such as he referred to—I think that one relating to Yonge street in Toronto—they might want to deal with it. But it does seem to me that they are likely to create a dual jurisdiction which might cause confusion by taking power to vary or rescind old orders, in the Privy Council, because section 33 of the Bill of last year gives to the Railway Commissioners power to deal with such matters. I think this should be reconsidered by the government before the Bill passes the Senate.

Now with regard to what may be called the Sunday observance clauses, I do not want to discuss here the merits of Sunday observance, or whether it is right to prohibit the use of street cars or electric railways in the cities of Canada on the Lord's day. But I think I am justified in calling the attention of the Minister of Justice to the very peculiar methods that have been adopted here in dealing with the question. This section 6a professes to validate laws existing in the various provinces, and parliament is asked to endorse those laws. Well, I think the Minister of Justice will have great difficulty indeed in telling the House precisely what those laws are that he has asked us to validate. I think there have been many attempts made to find out what they are, and I am not sure but that the question is now before the Supreme Court. It does seem to me rather peculiar that parliament should be asked to validate laws the provisions of which it is impossible at present for us to know. Now I would like the hon. the minister to consider that question. The whole subject is one of very great difficulty, and I would point out to him the peculiar position this parliament will be placed in after it validates the laws of the provinces. Parliament might hereafter change its mind and wish to alter, or extend, or in some way change those laws after having confirmed them, and I presume we will have no power here even to repeal what we have done, we will have settled the question once for all. As I said before, I do not want to deal with the question of Sunday observance, because I do not think this Bill brings up sufficiently the merits of that question. But it seems to me that we are merely shuffling with the question, and we are putting both parties to the controversy, on the one hand those who are advoctes of the strictest observance of the Lord's Day, and on the other hand those who think there ought to be a little laxity for the convenience and accommodation of the people—we are putting them both, it appears to me, into a sea of litigation. After this Act is passed I doubt whether anybody will be one whit further advanced in his knowledge of what the law really is. I am told, I do not know whether it is true or not, that the question is now before the Supreme Court, or is about to be submitted there. It occurs to me that it is in the interest of both parties that the law should first be settled, and that legislation should then pass in this parliament, if need be, to supplement or improve the legislation of the provinces. In any case the course proposed to be pursued here is a most extraordinary one, especially as regards subclause 2, whereby apparently we give to the government of the day power by Order in Council to validate laws that may hereafter be passed. I think it is a very grave question whether that is a proper form of legislation. We have a duty to perform as representatives of the people. To say that we now shall give what I called on a previous occasion a power of attorney to the gentlemen who happen to be ministers at a given moment, to approve laws that may hereafter be passed by another legislative body, does seem to me a very extraordinary course. I call attention to this, as I said before, without entering into the merits of the question, but merely to ask whether it is a proper thing for this parliament to do, or whether it can do it with any regard at all to its own obligations and its duties. With regard to the other two clauses concerning the Grand Trunk Pacific matter, the hon. gentleman accepted two amendments I offered the other day; the third amendment that I proposed, that the Grand Trunk Railway Company having control of the Grand Trunk Pacific ought to be made to make good whatever loss the Grand Trunk Pacific might sustain by an improper apportionment of the rates, I think was a proper clause under the circumstances; but I do not think there is any use occupying the time of the House in discussing a section that has already been voted down by the hon. gentlemen opposite.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I think that before legislation such as this contemplated in section 2 is placed before the House, the provincial enactments which are referred to should be scheduled as part of the Act. I am not dealing with the question of Sunday observance. I do not know what the Acts are which we are validating. They may be very wise Acts, They may be Acts to which I would not object if they were presented to the House. They may be Acts that I would thoroughly approve of, but it does seem to me that they should be scheduled and that we ought to know what we are dealing with. The subject that it dealt with is a very important subject. It is one, no doubt, upon which this parliament may be called upon to act, but it seems to me that the proper way to act is by legislation of our own. If we do not see fit to adopt that course, but rather to act in relation to the legislation of the provinces I am unhesitatingly of opinion that that legislation should be scheduled as part of the Act.

Subsection 2 of section 2 raises a question from the constitutional standpoint. It is a question which is not free from difficulty. It seems to be conclusively established by the judgments of the Supreme Court of Canada and of the Privy Council that a legislature, or parliament, can delegate only a matter over which it has jurisdiction, but I would think that under the constitution there must be some limit to that. For example, I do not think that the parliament of Canada can alter the constitution which has been conferred upon us by saying that in respect to nineteen or twenty subjects which are within the exclusive jurisdiction of parliament they shall be dealt with by the provincial legislatures in the respective provinces and that any legislation in respect to these subjects enacted by the provincial legislatures shall have the same force and effect as if enacted by this parliament. We cannot go that far; we cannot destroy the constitution. Short of going that far it is a very serious question as to how far we can go. Under this legislation we seem to be going very far because we are authorizing the Governor in Council to ratify, as if passed by this parliament, legislation to be passed in the future by the different provinces of Canada. We are doing that in respect to a matter which has been held to be one of criminal jurisdiction. If we can do this why can we not say that the whole criminal law of Canada shall in future be delegated to the different provinces, shall be administered under laws to be passed by each of the legislatures within the respective provinces over which the legislatures have control? I do not see at present that the principle of the legislation which we have before us would be extended under an Act of that kind. We are taking one branch of what is held to be criminal law and we are saying that any law which is in the future passed by any of the provincial legislatures in regard to this subject shall be a good law upon one condition, namely, that it is ratified by the Governor in Council. It is a matter of some interest as to how far we can go and also a matter of considerable interest as to how far we should go in respect to a matter of that kind.

Hon. CHARLES FITZPATRICK (Minister of Justice). The point which was made by my hon. friend from Hamilton (Mr. Barker) when he addressed the House before, did not strike me as clearly as it does now; that is as to the right to rescind old orders. I did not catch this point at the time he put it before the House as clearly as I do now, but it is a question that deserves immediate attention on the part of the government in order to meet the difficulty which he has stated and which is a real difficulty I admit. The question in respect to Sunday legislation is not free from difficulty. I do not pretend for a moment that it is but I would like to put the question as it appears to me, as I think it may be fairly put before the House, and in a light in which I think it will meet with the approval of the House. We have taken out of the control of the provinces railways and works of that description which of their nature are merely local works and which, if they had remained, as they were intended to be, local in their character, would have been subject to provincial legislation in respect to the observance of Sunday. By virtue of the power which is conferred upon us by the British North America Act we have declared these works, which are of their essence local works, to be works for the general advantage of Canada and as a result of that declaration they have passed from out the jurisdiction of the provinces to the jurisdiction of the federal authorities, so that while two railways may be in existence in a province operating side by side, both originally authorized under provincial charters, because one of them happens to have been declared a work for the general advantage of Canada it passes from out the jurisdiction of the provincial legislature, and the other one that has been created by the same authority continues on under the jurisdiction of the province. It seems to me that there is nothing illegal or unconstitutional in our declaring that while we are taking a work over for the general purposes of its administration and making it subject to our laws we desire that that work, in so far as its local operations are concerned and in so far as Sunday observance is concerned, shall remain under the jurisdiction of the legislature which created it. I do not think that there is anything in that which is improper. I would like to say that this legislation is not at all novel in its character. It is the same legislation that we have adopted in respect to our Franchise Act. We take the Act of the local legislature in respect to the franchise. We allow the legislature to determine the conditions under which the lists shall be made and we declare that those lists shall avail in so far as we are concerned, to that extent adopting the legislation of the provinces. It may be said very properly that this is legislation for which this government are responsible and that therefore we cannot appeal to a precedent created by ourselves. But, that was a precedent created immediately after confederation, because, up to 1885 when the Franchise Bill was passed, we adopted the provincial laws in respect to the making of the provincial lists and which provincial lists we made federal lists for the purposes of our federal parliament; not only the lists as they stood at the time but we practically gave what my hon. friend from Hamilton (Mr. Barker) described as a blanket power of attorney to alter, change, and make the provincial lists and we contented ourselves with adopting anything that the legislatures of the provinces did in that respect. So this legislation proceeds upon the principle that was laid down at the time the Franchise Act was adopted.

Mr. BARKER. Were the conditions not different in the case to which the hon. gentleman refers? There we found ourselves in regard to our own franchises while here the hon. gentleman is binding the citizens of the provinces.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The members of a corporation.

Mr. BARKER. The members of the corporation as citizens.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. As citizens of the provinces, but it seems to me that in respect of the Franchise Act by allowing each province to prepare the lists in the manner described we bound all those who were to avail themselves of those lists. We bound the voters of this Dominion.

Mr. SPROULE. That was only a tentative matter to provide for an emergency until we adopted some other principle, or 'until such time as the parliament of Canada otherwise decides.'

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Well, parliament held to that principle a long time or until the change was made in 1885. In respect to subsection 2 of section 2 to which my hon. friend the leader of the opposition refers it is constantly the case that this parliament delegates to the Governor in Council power to make regulations and in connection with these regulations to enact penal legislation for the violation of these regulations. There has not been a session probably since confederation during which it has not been left open to the Governor in Council to make regulations which were more far reaching in their results than the action which would be taken by the Governor in Council on provincial laws with respect to Sunday observance. My hon. friends seem to be somewhat in error when they speak of Sunday observance as being a matter of criminal legislation. It is not a matter of criminal legislation. It is quite true that the Privy Council held that the Ontario Act was invalid because it affected to create a criminal offence, but the Privy Council did not decide that that Act was bad in toto. The Privy Council did not decide that the Act is bad in toto; what they held was that the Act was bad in so far as it pretended to deal with criminal legislation. The questions to be referred to the Supreme Court are settled on, and I think it will be found that the judgment of the Privy Council is susceptible of an entirely different construction from that which has been put upon it up to the present time. That judgment has been construed as taking from the provinces, powers which they are undoubtedly endowed with. I do not think the judgment ever was intended to take these powers from the provinces and confer them on the Dominion parliament. When the judgment is carefully examined, it will be found, I think, that all the Privy Council decided was, that with respect to these offences which are criminal in their nature, the provinces have no power to alter or amend the law with regard to them, nor have the provinces power to create an offence criminal in its nature. The Privy Council has not said that the provinces have not the right to determine the character of Sunday observance; they have not determined that the provinces have not the right to say that a man shall work or shall not work on Sunday.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. If the provinces have that right; how is their right affected by the fact that certain property within the province is subject to the jurisdiction of this parliament?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The impression exists that in so far as works of a federal character are concerned, these works fall under the operation of Dominion legislation, and that the province has not the power to deal with them except in relation to contracts made within the province. But with respect to the control of these works which are of their nature provincial, it seems to me it is quite proper that while we take them over for federal purposes and declare them to be works for the general advantage of Canada, yet in so far as Sunday observance is concerned, they remain within the control of the provinces. I see no reason why they should not.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Suppose this parliament should incorporate a company to carry on a great industry in all the provinces, would the mere fact that we incorporated that company prevent the provincial laws from affecting persons employed by that company?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. It has been well settled that the provinces have practically no control over the operation of railways, and the Sunday observance law is almost exclusively applicable to the operation of railways. If a railway becomes a federal railway under the operation of the federal law, it takes it from the control of the provinces. It is in that view that this legislation is introduced.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. If you incorporate a great smelting company or something of that kind, the fact that we incorporated it would not prevent the provincial laws affecting it.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Quite so.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. And it is on the ground that the operation of a railway is under the jurisdiction of this parliament?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Yes.

Motion agreed to; Bill read the third time and passed.

Mr. FITZPATRICK.

SUPPLY.

House in Committee of Supply.

Fisheries—salaries and disbursements for fishery inspectors, overseers and guardians, $85,000.

Mr. SPROULE. This is an opportune time for the minister to explain in what condition the question is with regard to the division of authority between the Dominion and the provinces with respect to the fisheries.

Hon. RAYMOND PREFONTAINE (Minister of Marine and Fisheries). No progress has yet been made except with regard to negotiations as to the basis of the submission of a case to the Supreme Court. I have already explained the matter this session. We have discussed the question with the representatives of British Columbia, Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick. The offer was that the federal government would take possession of the fisheries of the different provinces, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and British Columbia, under certain conditions. These conditions were discussed informally and the result as I stated at the time was that we agreed that if we did not come to any agreement a case would be submitted to the Supreme Court. Mr. Pugsley and the premier of Prince Edward Island had to leave for England to be present at the argument of a case before the Privy Council a few days ago as regards the representation of these two provinces.

Mr. CLARKE. Would the minister give us some information about the contemplated establishment of a naval militia?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. In the supplementary estimates for 1904-5 there is a special item for that and in addition it will be considered when the Bill now on the order paper is submitted for second reading.

Mr. CLARKE. The minister will make a statement then in respect to the establishment.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. Within a few days I presume.

Mr. OSLER. In connection with the large amount of money which is being appropriated for the protection of the fisheries and for fish hatcheries, I think that any one who goes to the rivers in Quebec and New Brunswick will find a general complaint that the regulations as to the taking up of nets for certain periods are not carried out and that the fishing in these rivers is decreasing in volume and extent each year. The money that is expended on fish hatcheries is a mere bagatelle compared to the damage done because the regulations are not properly carried out. I speak as an inland man, but as one having gone for many years down to the fishing sections and I believe that there are very few people who have any idea of the value of these fisheries and of the importance of preserving the streams. In years to come this is going to be one of the most valuable assets of the province, and I can show the minister from my own experience and the experience of all those who fish on the rivers, both the Restigouche and other rivers, that three out of four of the fish caught in these rivers in many years are net marked, showing that they had had to struggle through the nets. Because the regulations as to taking up the nets are not enforced, the fishing on these streams as I have said, is decreasing in value year by year. I am not saying that the government are not doing as well as has been done in the past, but I think there should be some new regulation and some more stringent enforcement of the present laws or in a few years the salmon fishing will be destroyed. Americans go there and spend a large amount of money and the different districts of these rivers are enormously enriched.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. I can tell my hon. friend that this question is not at all new to the department and is not new to me, as Minister of Fisheries. Last year I was somewhat of a novice in the question and had to get the necessary information, and I discovered that there was a good deal of friction between those who hold leases in these rivers and those who engage in the pursuit of fishing for a living. I tried to apply the rules and regulations. I knew that there was some complaint by some clubs that we were not severe and strict enough towards the fishermen and license holders. This year we took all the necessary precautions in advance and I think there is no ground whatever for complaint. We have done all that was necessary to be done without going too far in order to protect these provincial rights, because, after all, they are provincial rights and do not interest us in such a degree as the rights of fishermen themselves, or those who have engaged in the industry. Of course we know perfectly well our obligations and know that we are obliged to have rules to protect these people who have leased these privileges from the different provinces for which some of them have paid very heavily, having considered that they were of great value. I know for instance of a special case, the case of Mr. Hill, who has rented a river and who had reasons to believe that at the estuary of the river there was more fishing than was necessary. In order to protect his rights—for he had paid for the property $50,000 and I think is paying about $10,000 a year rental to the provincial government—and in order to give him all the advantages to which he was entitled instead of renewing the licenses at the estuary of the River St. John to the people who had enjoyed them for 50 years we put them up by tender, and I may say to the committee that we had a good deal of difficulty in renewing the licenses at a satisfactory rental. I had a great deal of complaint from those especially interested in the fishing for the last fifty years but we succeeded in selling that license at such a price as was advantageous to the department and would satisfy those interested in the fishing of the St. John river so that there can be no complaint this year. As regards the Restigouche, we have a special launch patrolling the estuary to protect the rights of those who have rented that river. Of course I realize that at the beginning of the season the people interested in the lease were rather nervous and I received complaints that the launch had not arrived. As every one is aware the season was late this year, and the launch had not only to look after the fishermen and those with licenses along the estuary, but also those with licenses in the neighbouring waters. The launch took a few days more than usual to reach the river Restigouche, but as soon as she did reach the Restigouche all doubt, I think, disappeared and there has been no neglect whatever. As soon as she did reach it, all grounds of complaint disappeared. It was not due at all to the neglect of the department.

Mr. GANONG. Did that refer to Mr. Hill's privilege ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. He is paying $10,000 a year.

Mr. OSLER. I am not speaking in the interests of Mr. Hill, but in the general interest of preserving the fishery. It is being destroyed every year steadily I speak from my own experience, when I say that five out of six of the fish caught in certain seasons show that they have come through the net and were scarred by it. I was at Matane a day or two this year. The men I employed told me without hesitation that the nets are not taken up according to regulations on Saturday night at six o'clock and kept up until Monday morning, but are left a long time in the water beyond the regulations. That is stated by the river men, and evidently there is too much netting, or there would be more free fish coming to the river than there have been the last two years. There is hardly a fish sometimes in the season not marked, which shows that the nets are not taken up.

Mr. BOYD. I would like to draw attention to a question which I had on the paper three or four days regarding fishing licenses given to fish in the Lake Winnipeg and tributaries of the Nelson river. My information is that the exclusive rights to fish in the water of all the lakes north of Lake Winnipeg and tributary to the Nelson river have been given for a very small sum.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. This question was answered the other day when first called, but by error the answer was not entered in the proceedings. The answer is that no exclusive privilege was given. I can bring down the lease. It is an ordinary lease.

Mr. BOYD. What is the lease ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. I would rather bring it down, because that would be more satisfactory than speaking from recollection, and I will bring it down to-morrow. Some privilege for fishing in a special way has been granted, but no exclusive privilege.

Mr. SPROULE. What about the lease for the fishing on James' bay ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. It is there yet.

Mr. SPROULE. Does not that lease give the company exclusive rights ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. Nothing has been done whatever under the lease given Mr. McNee.

Mr. SPROULE. Has the lease been cancelled, or is it the intention of the government to cancel it ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. It has not been cancelled, and no demand has been made to cancel it. The lease is yet in existence, but no fishing is going on.

Mr. SPROULE. Does the hon. minister think that giving fishing leases in that way is the proper thing ? In my opinion, it is very improper and unwise. We are giving a lease for many years of what belongs to the public, and are giving it, through political influence, for practically no consideration whatever. Surely the government must have by this time made up their mind whether they intend to cancel the lease or allow it to remain, and let the company take advantage of the privileges.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. I will look into the lease and see whether it is possible to cancel it. I must state that all leases passed since I have been Minister of Marine and Fisheries contain the provision that if the privileges are not taken advantage of within a certain delay the lease becomes null and void.

Mr. BOYD. I am informed that certain friends of the government have received the rights of exclusive fishing in the rivers I have mentioned for the sum of $10 per year.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. I do not remember the figure, but if it be $10, they must have obliged themselves to spend a certain amount of money within a certain delay. Sometimes the lease is given at $400 or $1,000 per year without any special condition attached as to the amount of money to be spent, but in other cases leases are granted on condition that a certain amount shall be spent within a certain delay. A sum as high as $50,000 has been stipulated in some cases as the amount to be spent by the company which undertakes to exploit the fishing. In this case I do not know exactly the amount.

Mr. BOYD. Would it not be better to let the item stand until the lease is brought down ? I understand that the right to fish has been also leased to another friend of the government on Lake Winnipegosis. That lease should be brought down at the same time. The hon. gentleman should explain the policy of the department, so that the public may understand what it really is. The public should know if it is the policy of the government to favour its friends by giving leases of that kind for the paltry sum of $10 a year, and then allowing them to sell their privilege to a fishing company. If the hon. minister will look into the matter, he will find that what I am telling him comes pretty near the mark. In all these leases the men who get them have no intention of doing any fishing, but intend disposing of their rights.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. As regards the two leases which the hon. gentleman has mentioned, I shall have them put on the table as soon as possible.

Mr. BOYD. What benefit are those leases to the fishing interests of the district ? Are they in the interests of the fisheries or of the department ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. Of course, the leases will explain themselves. For myself I must say that I have never considered any other interest than that of the department and the public interest in granting these licenses and leases. Of course, I have always considered the fostering and development of the industry as important. If parties come to the government and say : We are ready to develop the fishery industry in such and such a section, and will bind ourselves to such and such conditions, then we consider whether the conditions are favourable in the public interest and on that basis the lease is granted or refused. There is a fixed regulation with regard to licenses issued every year, but when it comes to granting licenses for a longer period than one year, the conditions vary ; the questions are settled on their merits, we using our best judgment in the interests of the industry.

Mr. BOYD. I have no desire to press this matter now, so long as it is understood that an opportunity will be afforded for its discussion at a later time. Meantime I would like the leases of Mr. Arch. McNee, of James' Bay, Mr. Merritt, of Lake Winnipegosis, and the other lessee whose name I do not know to the north end of lake Winnipeg, to be brought down.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. I promised the hon. gentleman (Mr. Boyd) that he will have an opportunity to discuss the matter with the papers on the table.

Mr. SPROULE. Before this subject is dropped, I wish to say one word on the principle. It seems to me it is a bad principle to give leases to foreigners to take all the fish they like.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. We have not granted leases to foreigners.

Mr. SPROULE. Whatever the form may be, these are practically leases to foreigners. The law happens to be that an American who catches fish in Canada can take them in to his own country free of duty, a privilege that is denied to a Canadian. But, on the other hand the American cannot get the fish here unless he associates himself with Canadians. The result is that the Canadians catch the fish, but when the fish go across the line they belong to the Buffalo Fish Company or some other concern who say they have the right to take them across the line free of duty, because they were caught by themselves. And so they can get a better market than Canadians can get. That should not be allowed. If they were giving a good consideration for it, it would not matter so much. The minister says: But we develop the industry. But, what use is the development of the industry if there is no royalty ? And the royalty now is a mere nothing. We keep up the Fishery Department and establish fish hatcheries, and these Americans use our fisheries for their own purpose, giving us very little for the privilege. In connection with this fishery question we ought to have a general statement as to the policy of the government, and a statement as to whether they intend to give exclusive rights in any part of Canada which are practically monopolized by foreigners.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule) must be under a false impression. There is only one company at all in the position he refers to. The fact is, this privilege granted to some Americans on the Pacific Coast was granted under very peculiar circumstances. It is not a license from the department, but simply an Order in Council authorizing an American Company—I think it is the New England Fish Company—to buy supplies and land their fish on the coast of British Columbia, and to ship fish in bond to their destination. The fish are caught in American waters.

Mr. SPROULE. I think the minister is not directing attention to the lease I refer to—the lease on James' Bay.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. That has not been exploited.

Mr. SPROULE. But what I contend is that the principle of granting such leases is an unsound one. And we want him to bring down the lease so that we may see the provisions of it.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. I promise to do that. I was going to explain the privileges given to the New England Fish Company on the Pacific Coast. I believe that the granting of these privileges of buying provisions and landing and shipping fish is a good move. The halibut fishery had not been developed at all. There were large quantities of these fish in international waters, but they were not used because they were too far from American waters. Under the present arrangement this fishery can be developed. The advantage to Canadians is obvious. The company employ Canadian labour, buy their provisions from Canadian merchants, and pay large amounts in freight. I understand that the first year the company paid over $100,000 to the Canadian Pacific Railway for freights. The second year, they paid $200,000, and last year no less than $300,000. All this trade would have been lost to Canada if we had not consented to the arrangement. If Canadians would be as enterprising as to do the same thing, though they could not have the privilege of the American market as the citizens of that country have, they might be able to develop a market on our own side.

Mr. MACLEAN. Would the minister say whether there is any fishery or other patrol belonging to the government now in the waters of Hudson Bay ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. None, except the 'Neptune,' which has been cruising there for the last year looking after Canadian interests and visiting the different posts so as to report to the Department of the Interior what means should be adopted to protect Canadian rights.

Mr. OSLER. Has this government control over the fishery in Lake Winnipeg and Lake Winnipegosis ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. Yes.

Mr. OSLER. These are entirely controlled by American companies. When you go to Winnipeg, you find considerable apprehension expressed among the public that these lakes will be overfished—in fact that all the fish are being taken away.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. That is not the information we have in the department. I think the business is not decreasing at all, but is maintaining itself.

Mr. OSLER. The leases are entirely controlled by American companies.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. Some of these companies, both Canadian and American are not fishing at all, but are buying from Canadian fishermen in the locality who hold licenses. This fact was brought to my attention by some members from the Northwest Territories.

Mr. OSLER. I think the minister is mistaken. To my own knowledge American companies fish there largely, they have a supply of boats and a supply of men to an enormous extent, and have a large capital engaged.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. The licenses are given to British subjects or Canadians, sometimes organized into joint stock companies. It sometimes happens that American capitalists put their money into these companies and, obtaining control of the stock, they become American companies. But I do not see how we can help that by legislation or by regulations.

Mr. OSLER. It is not so much that I complain of, but in some places the fishing has practically ceased now, the whole industry has gone. When I was in Winnipeg I heard the subject discussed and heard it stated several times that the wholesale catch of fish was practically destroying the fishing in those lakes, just as the sturgeon fisheries have been destroyed.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. Whether these fish are caught by Canadians or Americans does not make much difference. If they had been caught by Canadians the depletion of which the hon. gentleman complains would have resulted in the same way. But that is not the case. The information of the department is that these lakes are not being depleted. Of course we can understand that in lakes with shallow water where a good deal of fishing is going on, the fish are driven away into more remote places. The same thing has happened in the St. Lawrence. I remember when, twenty or twenty-five years ago, a good deal of fish of all sorts was caught around the island of Montreal, but now you can scarcely catch fish there of any consequence. It is the same everywhere. As settlements are established about the lakes, especially those with shallow water, the fish seek new haunts where they are less disturbed. But the regulations are duly followed, and all precautions are taken in order to preserve the fisheries.

Mr. OSLER. How many inspectors are there on these two lakes to protect the fisheries ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. I think there are four in the west. They are Henry McKay, Cedar Lake ; A. J. McPherson, Dauphin, Man.; James Silverthorne, Lumsden, Assa., and J. F. Healson, Prince Albert.

Mr. OSLER. One at Dawson and one at Cedar Lake have all this enormous stretch of waters to look after north of Lake Winnipegosis.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. I am asking this year for more money to have a better inspection made. Early this spring I sent one of my officers to report how many are required and what methods are adopted.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. What is the object of having a fishery officer at Cedar Lake or within two hundred miles of it ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. They were put there before I came into the department because, I suppose, that was the proper place to put them.

Mr. GANONG. The minister says it is immaterial whether these fish are caught by Americans or by Canadians. Is that a fact ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. So far as the depletion goes.

Mr. GANONG. But does it not make some difference with regard to getting the fish into the American market ? If Americans catch the fish they take them into the American market free of duty.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. I do not see why they should go into the American market free of duty.

Mr. GANONG. Americans of easy conscience are fishing along the eastern seaboard who carry their fish into the United States market free of duty, and I thought perhaps there were some up west afflicted in the same way. I can correct the minister in regard to one thing ; I think Mr. Hill's fishing territory is not on the river St. John, it is on some of the northern waters.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. It is in the seigniory of Mingan.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. What are the duties of the fishery overseer at Lumsden, and what fish does he look after there ? There is but very little fish there.

Mr. SPROULE. It is a fact, whether the minister knows it or not, that fish caught by Americans are going into the United States market free. I know that the Buffalo Fish Company was organized for the purpose of fishing in Georgian bay, and they have been getting their fish into the American market free of duty. If Americans fish in Candian waters the catch can be taken into the American market free of duty, but if Canadians catch the fish and endeavour to get them in United States they have to pay duty on them. Therefore, though Canadians may supply the boats, if the fish are caught under the name of an American firm, they go into the American market free of duty. I think that is a wrong to Canadians because there are many Canadians fishing in the Georgian bay who have to compete with Americans, and they cannot send their product over the line without paying duty. They are denied that right, while Americans fishing alongside of them get the benefit of the United States market. The same principle I am told is being exercised by this American company that is fishing in Hudsons bay and several other places. The same question arose in Newfoundland a short time ago where a firm of Americans are storing ice, or are about to establish an industry there, and it appears that there is a provision in the American customs law which allows them access to the United States market free of duty. I have no doubt that the Americans who are fishing in Lake Winnipegosis are doing the same thing, and their fish are going free to Minneapolis and St. Paul, while Canadians fishing in the same waters are denied that right.

Mr. J. D. REID. I know that American fishing companies operating on the north shore of Lake Superior get their fish free into the American Sault.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. On page 197 of the fisheries report of 1903, you will find the report of Mr. Young, inspector of fisheries for that district.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Have you reports from your officers in different districts ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. Yes, from different places where there is fishing going on.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. In the Northwest Territories ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. In the Northwest Territories. The fisheries in the Northwest are covered by the report of Mr. Miller.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. These are officers for the whole country ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. We have the reports of these officers and we have reports from their sub-officers. The reports from the Northwest Territories commence at page 202 of the Annual Report of the Department of Marine and Fisheries. Beginning at that page will be found a synopsis of reports received from the different districts.

Mr. OSLER. What is the report from the Lumsden man ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. Mr. Miller the inspector reports as follows :

In Long lake the fishing was about the same as in former years. Overseer Silverthorne reports that large catches of whitefish were made just before the commencement of the close season, the fish seeming to come into the shallow waters rather early. It may become necessary to close this portion of the lake to prevent the destruction of spawning fish. This lake too has gained during the year though still much below its one time level.

In the Qu'Appelle river and the smaller streams the long continued high water afforded small opportunity for the illegal trapping of fish during the spring close season and though some fish weirs were discovered and destroyed by guardians, as a rule they are now only met with in the vicinity of new foreign settlers unacquainted with the law.

Mr. HAGGART. If I understood the hon. minister correctly he stated that fish caught on the Pacific coast could be entered in Victoria and shipped in bond to the United States. Am I correct ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. I am afriad I have not made myself understood. I did not state anything of the sort. I stated that fish caught in international waters, on the high sea, by this New England Fish Company, to whom the privilege was granted of buying their provisions and landing on Canadian soil could, according to certain arrangements made with the American government, be shipped in bond and delivered in Boston. The fish are not Canadian fish. They are caught in international waters.

Mr. HAGGART. That is still more extraordinary. This American company can come into British waters on the Pacific coast, catch all the fish they like, ship them over a British railway to the United States and sell them there. I knew the law was against them if the fish were caught in American waters or in waters other than British waters, because then they would have no right to come into the port of Victoria or ship the fish over a British railway to the United States. If they had that right what would be the use of our fisheries on the Atlantic coast ? American fishermen could go on the banks off the coast of Nova Scotia or Prince Edward Island, catch fish, ship them by the same means as those employed by our own fishermen and send them free of duty to the United States when our own fishermen would have to pay duty going into the United States ? It would transfer our whole fishing trade from Canadian fishermen to United States fishermen. But, they get around it on the Pacific coast. You can form a company of Americans and they can come and fish in our own waters.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. I beg the hon. gentleman's pardon.

Mr. HAGGART. Well, I did not clearly understand the minister.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. I do not know how it is that I have not made myself understood because I have repeated it twice. I said that the fish are not caught in Canadian waters at all. They are caught outside of the three-mile limit in international waters.

Mr. HAGGART. I understand perfectly now. They are caught in waters which are not Canadian waters. Then, the fisherman of Nova Scotia, when he catches fish outside of the three-mile limit, can come into Halifax and ship them into the United States ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. He has not applied for that privilege yet.

Mr. HAGGART. I beg the hon. gentleman's pardon ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. No fisherman in Nova Scotia has applied for that privilege yet probably because the fishermen in Nova Scotia have not to back them such a large company as the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Mr. HAGGART. I have listened to the debates in this House long enough to know that the Nova Scotia fisherman has no right to do it.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. Everybody knows that.

Mr. HAGGART. Perhaps it is because of some denseness on my part that I do not understand the hon. minister. He says that these fish are caught outside of Canadian waters, that they are caught in waters in which the fishermen of the whole world can fish and that these fish are then brought into Victoria. Why does not the same principle apply to Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island? We have only control over three miles from the coast line. If fish are caught outside of the coast line why cannot they be brought into Halifax or Sydney, shipped over the railway and entered at a United States port free of duty?

Mr. MACPHERSON. I do not wish to keep the committee back but I would like to say a word or two in connection with the New England Fish Company operating on the Pacific coast. Prior to their coming into our waters there was no halibut caught and there was no halibut industry. The New England Fish Company which control about 300 retail stores throughout the New England states came into the Pacific waters and asked to have the privilege of shipping through a Canadian port, the port of Vancouver, to their market in Boston and the New England states. They received that privilege upon one consideration and that consideration was that they were to employ entirely Canadian workmen, they were to buy entirely Canadian goods, and to operate the industry as far as the catching of the fish was concerned entirely in our interest.

Mr. HAGGART. Who had the authority to make any such arrangement with them?

Mr. MACPHERSON. Why, our government.

Mr. HAGGART. They have no power to do that.

Mr. MACPHERSON. Well, they are doing it.

Mr. HAGGART. That is what we want to find out.

Mr. MACPHERSON. They are doing it and it is a proper thing to do.

Mr. HAGGART. That is another question.

Mr. MACPHERSON. Does the hon. gentleman object to the industry which is being conducted upon our coast? I do not think he does.

Mr. HAGGART. I do not know anything about it but I do not know where the government get the authority under the law to do it.

Mr. PREFONTAINE.

Mr. MACPHERSON. I am not speaking of the authority under the law. It is the fact that I am speaking of.

Mr. HAGGART. I have heard of this arrangement for the first time this evening.

Mr. MACPHERSON. If these Americans had not come in we would not have had the halibut fishery developed as we have. I want to give an illustration to show how government interference can do a great deal of harm. The hon. member for West Toronto (Mr. Osler) spoke of the sturgeon fisheries of the northern lakes. In 1892 an American company came over to the Fraser river and prepared to develop the sturgeon fisheries. They had a large market for these fish in the city of Chicago, they employed two steamers, they had forty or fifty men working for them, and they employed entirely white labour. They were catching sturgeon and shipping them out. The industry had never been started before in our waters. They were taking the sturgeon from the mud banks of the Fraser. In one night a breath came from Ottawa that they must stop fishing sturgeon because they would deplete the fish. The result is that there has been no sturgeon industry in those waters from that time to this so that this important industry was knocked on the head. It does not matter whether it is an American company or Canadian firms who are doing the fishing. We want the fishing industry developed and if Americans choose to take advantage of the opportunities by engaging in the industry and if they take the fish that are caught by our fishermen and which are hauled over our railway, I do not see why we should object. There must be two sides to every question and the Americans must have some advantage. I would like to see our own money invested in this industry but our people do not seem to be alive to the fact that we have such an immense industry in Canada and that there is a possibility of making a lot of money out of the fisheries. Our people do not seem to be so thoroughly alive to the fact as the Americans are. I am strongly of the impression that the government acted wisely and well when they gave to the New England Fish Company these advantages.

Mr. MACLEAN. It follows that the whole Canadian fishing industry could pass from Canadian into American hands.

Mr. MACPHERSON. Not at all.

Mr. MACLEAN. Yes, because if you can do it on the Pacific coast you can do the same thing on the Atlantic coast.

Mr. MACPHERSON. Canadians are getting the benefit.

Mr. MACLEAN. The net result is that the whole of our fishing industry will pass into American hands, and their fish can go into the United States free of duty while ours will have to pay duty.

Mr. GANONG. Has the fish commissioner made any report in regard to licenses along the eastern sea-board ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. Their work is not yet finished and they have not made a final report.

Mr. GANONG. It is remarkable that one lawyer, one colonel of militia, one editor, and, I think one fisherman, should be appointed by this government to inquire into the fishing industry worth $15,000,000 a year. It is also remarkable that when an election was expected the commission should be sent out hurriedly, and that when the Grand Trunk Pacific failed to put up the money they were called off again. In the east this fishery commission is looked upon as nothing but a farce.

Mr. SPROULE. Will the minister bring us down the Order in Council permitting this American company to land and cure their fish in Canada ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. This is a special arrangement with the New England Fish Company renewable yearly by an Order in Council on the report of the Minister of Customs allowing the fish to pass through Canada in bond. The order has always been issued with the approval of the Department of Fisheries. I never saw the American company or their representative in connection with the matter, but those who asked for a renewal were Canadians, and the authorities of the Canadian Pacific Railway who were specially interested. I believed it was in the public interest to continue this privilege as long as they were the only ones in the field.

Mr. MACLEAN. Did you consult the Minister of Justice as to your power to pass this Order in Council ; when was it first passed ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. In 1896 when Sir Louis Davies was minister.

Mr. SPROULE. You are doing by Order in Council what you are only empowered to do by treaty.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. I do not think the Minister of Customs will have any objection to bring down the Order in Council.

Mr. MACLEAN. I ask the Minister of Justice whether this government has power to pass such an Order in Council ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I have not seen the Order in Council and I cannot answer as to its validity.

Mr. MACLEAN. This thing is illegal, and I believe it is contrary to the national interest.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. There is nothing contrary to the national interest in allowing fish to be landed on our shore, and carried through to the United States in bond.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. This is not a Canadian industry in the first place. If Canadians went outside the three-mile limit and caught halibut they would do so in Canadian bottoms ; and the Americans would take good care that fish so caught would have to pay duty. The Americans catch these fish on the high seas in American bottoms, and so they escape the American duty, but they employ Canadian labour and buy their supplies in Canada.

Mr. MACLEAN. That could be done on the Atlantic coast.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. It could, but only under modus vivendi licenses.

Mr. PATERSON. I will not set myself up as a constitutional authority, but I do not think the order would have passed Council if it were illegal. Canadians could not engage in this business under equal conditions. By permitting this Order in Council to be renewed from year to year we give away none of our rights, and this fishing company trades with the merchants of Vancouver and ships their freight over the Canadian Pacific Railway. The Order in Council is passed in the interests of Canada and Canada alone. We could repeal the Order in Council any day, but we would lose a great deal of business in consequence.

Mr. SPROULE. We are giving these people a right which otherwise they would not enjoy, and by doing the same thing on the Atlantic coast you could give the Atlantic fisheries over to the Americans.

Mr. PATERSON. That is regulated by treaty.

Mr. SPROULE. We have never attempted to give away such rights unless by treaty, and I believe this Order in Council is passed without authority.

Mr. PATERSON. I have never heard any objection from a Canadian source. If this Order in Council were not renewed, Canadians would not be employed ; the merchants of Vancouver would not be traded with, and the Canadian Pacific Railway would not receive the earnings it does. I am sure that there will be no objection to placing the Order in Council upon the table and that when the subject is fully considered no hon. gentleman opposite would take the responsibility of saying that we should not do what we have done.

Building and maintenance of fish-breeding establishments and lobster hatcheries, including the salary of F. H. Cunningham, $2,000, superintendent of fish culture, whose transfer from inside division without prejudice to his status under the Civil Service Superannuation Act is hereby ratified, $110,000.

Mr. SPROULE. I understood the minister to say last year that he had decided to establish a fish hatchery on the Beaver river, close to the Georgian Bay. That is in every way a suitable location, and I would ask the minister if anything has been done or will be done in this matter ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. The department intended to establish a hatchery somewhere around the Beaver river, but last year the session was so long and there were such diverse interests as regards the site of this hatchery that the matter was suspended for further consideration. I intended either going myself or having some of my officials go to visit these localities and decide what would be the best place for this and many other hatcheries. I intend to adopt this course in regard to the maritime provinces, and I shall leave next week for British Columbia for a similar purpose. In this case, I think we will be in a position to decide within a few weeks.

Mr. GANONG. Is it intended to establish a lobster hatchery on the Bay of Fundy coast of New Brunswick ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. The matter has been represented to the department, and New Brunswick will certainly be considered.

Mr. GANONG. It should certainly receive the attention of the minister. There is no location in Canada that is so well situated, in relation to the live lobster market, as the west coast of the Bay of Fundy. It is contiguous to the American market, and I believe that a hatchery there would add 50 per cent more to the value of the fisheries than in any other locality of the maritime provinces, on account of the convenience of the American market for the shipping of live lobsters. Besides that, these waters in days gone by teemed with lobsters, giving ample evidence of the suitability of the ground for lobsters.

Mr. KAULBACH. How many fish breeding establishments and lobster hatcheries are there in the maritime provinces ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. The hatcheries there are :

Hatchery.	Number of Fry distributed.	Species.
Bedford, N.S.	710,000	Atlantic salmon.
Bay View, N.S.....	164,000,000	Lobsters.
Margaree, N.S.....	600,000	Atlantic salmon.
St. John River, N.B.	648,000	" "
Miramichi, N.B.....	1,000,000	" "
Restigouche, N.B....	1,935,000	" "
" "	117,000	Salmon trout.
Shemogue, N.B.....	17,000,000	Lobsters.

Mr. KAULBACH. The fishing industry in the county which I have the honour to represent is very large and important. A great number of persons are employed in it, and I would ask how it is that the Minister of Marine has overlooked that important county and given us no fish hatcheries at all ? I think we are entitled to one at least. We represent the largest amount of capital of any county in the way of exports, and I think we are entitled certainly to some recognition. I would ask the minister to carefully consider that. I am not asking for favours ; I am asking for rights.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. As I have explained in relation to the establishment of hatcheries in western Ontario, as well as in other parts of the Dominion, the reason for the delay is the fact that the session last year was so late that the only little trip I could take to the maritime provinces was one to Prince Edward Island in order to settle if possible the difficult question of the ferry to the mainland. I had no time at my disposal to go into the sites for hatcheries. I intend to do so as soon as the time is available for me, and I promise the hon. gentleman that I shall not fail to visit his locality.

Mr. KAULBACH. I think if the minister will carry out his promise and visit my county, my statement will be fully verified, and he will have a very favourable impression of the county. I hope that in the future it will receive the benefits it so richly deserves.

Mr. CLANCY. Is this extra $30,000 in the supplementary estimates to be expended on the hatcheries already established, or is it proposed to open new fish hatcheries during the year ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. It is to provide for new ones.

Mr. CLANCY. Where ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. When the item of $30,000 is up I shall be in a position to give the information.

Mr. GANONG. What proportion of this $110,000 goes to the new ones ?

Fisheries—oyster culture, $7,000.

Mr. GANONG. Would the hon minister give us a little explanation ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. The annual report for 1903 gives much better explanation than I possibly could.

Mr. GANONG. In what location is this money to be expended ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. In Caraquet Bay, N.B., at Malpeque, Prince Edward Island, at the Shediac oyster reserve.

Mr. GANONG. Is any of this money to be devoted towards planting new beds in any other locality ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. We are waiting for a report from Mr. Kent, who is in charge of this culture, before deciding at what other places we will plant.

Mr. KAULBACH. Is oyster culture encouraged on the Bay of Fundy shore and the Atlantic shore ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. We have no oyster beds there. There are some in Annapolis, but they are small.

Fisheries—to assist in the establishment, maintenance and inspection of cold storage for bait for deep sea fishermen, under conditions to be fixed by the Department of Marine and Fisheries, $25,000.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. I would move to have this item amended so that it may read as follows :

To assist in the establishment, maintenance and inspection of cold storage for deep sea fishermen, including assistance in the conservation and development of deep sea fisheries, under conditions to be fixed by the department.

The idea is not only to contribute a sum of money for the establishment of cold storage for bait for the deep-sea fishermen, but also to assist in preparing the fish by providing driers. The said amount of $25,000 has never been entirely spent in aiding cold storage for bait, and the department has come to the conclusion that by giving driers for fish at certain places, where there is a good market, that would help the deep-sea fishermen very materially. The driers would cost about $1,800. We are installing one at Souris in Prince Edward Island.

Mr. GANONG. What class of drier is the hon. gentleman putting in ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. It is the drier manufactured by Collas, Whitman & Company. They hold the patent.

Mr. HAGGART. Is there any acetylene gas used in this cold storage ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. I do not think so.

Mr. HAGGART. Is there an item on which we could discuss that ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. Yes, the increased vote for lighthouses.

Mr. KAULBACH. Is the system carried on and receiving aid from the government under a chemical process or the ordinary ice storage ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. Real ice is employed.

Mr. KAULBACH. Has the minister recognized and thought favourably of the method of Eaton, which I detailed the other evening at some length ? The party is now in the city, and if the government would interview him, they would be able to receive very much useful information which may lead up to an improvement in the present system.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. I have no objection at all. If the hon. gentleman will present to me the person in question, he will be well received and I will listen to any explanation he can give.

Mr. CLANCY. How much of the $25,000 voted for cold storage for bait for deep sea fishermen is to be diverted to the new service of building the drier ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. About $1,800 per drier.

Mr. CLANCY. How many driers ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. We will have them at places where we think they will be required. The first place where a drier will be installed is Souris, P.E.I.

Mr. CLANCY. Is that intended to take the place of the $25,000 the hon. minister has voted ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. No ; as I have explained this $25,000 though available on certain conditions has not been spent year after year. Only about half of it has been spent—$12,000 or $13,000. The boards of trade and the representatives of the fishermen have made representations that a certain amount of this vote could be diverted to the building of fish driers. It is somewhat in the same line and is intended to help the deep sea fishermen. After considering the matter we came to the conclusion that it would be a good idea, so we decided that at certain places where they bring their fish to be cured we would establish driers. These driers provide a mechanical means of effecting the curing of the fish which was formerly done by the sun and wind.

Mr. CLANCY. In fact, the hon. minister has been exercising his ingenuity to find means of spending this $25,000.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. Exactly—in the interests of the fishermen.

Mr. WILLIAM ROSS (Victoria). The experience has been that fish driers, if used to dry fish as they come out of the pickle or out of the pile ready to be put on the flake, have not been successful, but that driers used to dry fish that are already partially dried by the sun, are most successful. They have been tried in Halifax both ways by drying what we call green fish—which has not proven a success—and by drying fish already partially dried in the sun, which has been very successful.

Mr. GANONG. Some hon. members present may not understand the conditions of the fish market. While I am not a fisherman, I know something about the matter.

It is solely in the interest of the export trade and these fish driers are built to prepare fish properly to go to the West India market, where the atmospheric conditions are very trying. From time to time, fish that are sun-dried and sent to that market turn out badly from sweating and mildewing. But, as I understand, the process suggested by the minister, by the use of what is known as the Whitman drier, has been an immense success, and a large business has been built up with the West Indies in fish cured by this process.

Mr. KAULBACH. I am sure the minister will recognize the fact that my county, Lunenburg, has the largest fishing industry in the export trade, not excepting Halifax, Halifax exports fish, but the greater portion of it is fish from outside counties, particularly from Lunenburg. If there is any aid given to fish driers, evidently the county of Lunenburg is entitled to some of that aid. As the hon. member for Victoria (Hon. William Ross) has just explained, this is simply a process to carry the drying of fish further than it can be carried by means of the wind and sun. To take the fish green, as we call it, and put them through the drier would be rather to injure them for the market, because it would deprive them to a certain extent of their flavour. But when fish already partly dried in the sun are put through the mechanical drier, they can be sent in marketable shape to any part of the world. I think that, under the circumstances, the hon. minister will see that what I say is reasonable, and is in the interest of the fishermen as a whole, and that, as my county exports more largely than any other, he should recognize that fact and act accordingly.

Mr. J. J. HUGHES. In conversation with Mr. Whitman, who was here some few weeks ago, I got from him some information which does not accord with the statements made by the hon. gentleman (Mr. Kaulbach) who has just taken his seat. Mr. Whitman gave me to understand that it was possible to take the fish green, take them just as they come out of the water, and cure them completely by his method; and that you could very successfully cure them by taking them out of kench and putting them into the drier. Of course, the better way would be to partially cure them in the sun and wind and then complete the work in the drier. But, if the conditions would not allow that to be done, it was possible, as he had proven by practical experience, to cure them completely by putting them in the drier on taking them out of kench—the conditions to which my hon. friend from Victoria refers—or even by taking them green altogether. All along the coast of the maritime provinces, particularly, I know so far as Prince Edward Island is concerned, we can get fish in the fall of the year, even in October and November when it it not possible to dry them outside, the weather conditions not being suitable for curing them. It is then that the drier would be very useful. The fish caught at that season of the year can be cured by this means. But the drier would be useful also at other seasons when the fishermen are so busy, particularly if the catches were so good that they would not have time to complete the cure of the fish on the flakes. They could then be placed in the drier and finished. And as the hon. member for Charlotte (Mr. Ganong) has said, this method has proven very successful for curing fish for the West Indian market where the climatic conditions are very trying. The curing of fish intended for that market has to be carried further than can be done under natural conditions of sun and wind. The fish have to be made harder, firmer, to stand the West Indian climate. In preparing fish for that market the driers have been very successful and as my hon. friend (Mr. Ganong) has stated a very successful trade has been built up by the Whitmans in curing their fish in this way. So far as I can obtain information on the subject, the driers, wherever they have been used, are very successful, and their operation will be a great assistance in the development of the fisheries.

Mr. KAULBACH. I understand that the information given by the hon. gentleman (Mr. J. J. Hughes) was received from Mr. Whitman. While that statement might have be made to my hon. friend, at the same time Mr. Whitman is wrong. There have been cases in which the fish have been taken right from the catch after being salted and pressed, and put through this drying process and shipped. But it has been shown that they have to be put under such pressure—in order to get the moisture out of them and fit them for the drier—that a large portion of the nutritive properties of the fish is extracted, and it deteriorates the value of the fish, and lessens its price in the foreign market. I make this statement on the authority of shippers, and believe it to be true. Mr. Whitman, the originator and owner of the patent, would naturally be inclined to place all the advantages of his patent before the public. I am advised that the fish lose their virtue to a certain extent in the patent process of drying, if they are put under pressure sufficient to prevent the elimination of the moisture.

Mr. WM. ROSS (Victoria). A large drying establishment based on the Whitman process was put up in Halifax, and they had to abandon the drying of green fish altogether. There is no green fish dried in that drier now. The drier is used to harden fish that have already been dried by the sun, in that case the system is successful. This process may be used in drying fish for the West Indies or for South American trade when they are received by the merchants partially dried. But there is no process in the world equal to the sun drying to make good fish, and my hon. friend from Lunenburg (Mr. Kaulbach) will bear out that testimony.

Fisheries—to provide for the maintenance of the Georgian Bay laboratory, $1,500.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. This is a station for a commission devoted to the study of the fishing industry. It is no invention of mine.

Mr. SPROULE. Has this commission a headquarters or station where they meet to discuss matters, or is it a kind of roving commission ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. They meet twice a year to study and discuss these matters in the interests of fishermen, and they publish every two years a report of their work. In the summer they are stationed on the Georgian Bay. This money is to pay their expenses, to provide a boat house in which they live on the Georgian Bay. Their station is on the Richmond Bay, above Midland. There is also a station in Prince Edward Island.

Mr. KAULBACH. I observe an item here for the fishing bounty.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. That is by statute.

Mr. KAULBACH. I referred to that item the other day, and I would like to ask the minister now if he is prepared to give an increased amount of fishing bounties this year. I think it would be reasonable to do so in view of the fact that the number of fishermen is considerably larger than it was when this amount was first granted. I think they are entitled to a larger amount for general distribution.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. This amount is fixed by statute, and when the government considered this matter they came to the conclusion that without more consideration it was not opportune to increase this year the amount for bounties by statute.

Mr. KAULBACH. The hon. gentleman will see that the amount at first was $150,000, and it was increased to $160,000. The additional amount being also made a statutory allowance. I think in view of the increased number of men engaged in fisheries the minister might well provide an additional amount this year.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. We have not seen our way clear to make an increase.

Ocean and river service—further amount required for Dominion steamers, owing to repairs to the 'Lady Laurier,' $30,000.

Mr. J. D. REID. Could not the minister succeed in getting the steamer 'Alert' on his list ? It is a good steamer for that service.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. The suggestion is worth consideration. Instead of leasing a boat as we have been in the habit of doing to supply the lighthousees in the upper St. Lawrence we might use that boat for the purpose.

Mr. J. D. REID. The boat is a large one, and suitable for the purpose. Now that all the other works have been completed and the hon. minister has taken over some of the vessels that are used by the Department of Railways and Canals, there is no reason why he should not take over the 'Alert.'

Mr. PREFONTAINE. I have taken over those that were employed in the hydrographic surveys, the 'Scout' and some scows.

Mr. J. D. REID. Yes, I know ; but it was connected with the same department, the Department of Railways and Canals.

Ocean and river service—to pay amount of damages awarded merchants and shippers for losses sustained on perishable goods, owing to the detention of the 'Minto' and 'Stanley' by ice, $9,562.18,

Mr. J. D. REID. Where was that ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. That happened during the winter of 1902-3.

Mr. J. D. REID. Between the mainland and Prince Edward Island ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. Between the mainland and Prince Edward Island. The two boats were caught in the ice. Although we did not consider the claimants entitled in law to the amounts which have been allotted to them, we thought that these were fair and reasonable claims for the actual losses suffered by reason of the fact that these boats were caught in the ice. We sent a special officer to examine into these claims and he has reported. We were disposed to pay the amount without coming before parliament, but after due consideration we thought it would be better to lay the whole matter before the House, so that any explanation that might be required could be given.

Mr. J. D. REID. The hon. minister, of course, knows that when you ship goods the dangers of navigation are accepted, so that in that case the government are not liable.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. In law we are not liable, but this is a moral claim.

Mr. J. D. REID. In this case the government can see their way clear to paying these claims, but the right hon. Prime Minister is not able to see his way clear to paying the claim of the clergyman which I brought to his attention the other evening.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The clergyman did not apply to me ; he applied to the court. If he had applied to me, it would have been different.

Mr. J. D. REID. He did apply to the Exchequer Court, and he got judgment. In this case had the parties applied to the court the court would not have given judgment in their favour, but in the case to which I refer the Exchequer Court has given judgment, and yet the right hon. Prime Minister cannot see his way clear to asking the House to vote a sum sufficient to cover this amount, $1,200. If it were put in the estimates, there is no question about it that it would pass, and I think the Prime Minister should adopt that course.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I am quite willing to consider it favourably, but I must say that the cases are not the same. The reverend gentleman went to the Exchequer Court and got judgment, but the judgment was reversed by the Supreme Court. We are asked to pay a claim which the court has told us we should not pay. The circumstances are different.

Mr. BLAIN. I would like to ask the hon. minister how these damages were arrived at ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. When the claims had all been put in we sent a special officer from the department to investigate every case. Although this was done last winter, we have not up to the present moment received any complaints in respect to the settlement of the claims, except that we have received a few claims that were not put in at the time.

Mr. BLAIN. What proportion of the value was paid ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. The claims were reduced in such proportion as the facts investigated by our officer warranted. I may state, for the information of the hon. gentleman, that hon. members on both sides of the House from Prince Edward Island are perfectly satisfied.

Mr. BLAIN. I am not objecting. Did the hon. gentleman pay the invoice price of the goods ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. No ; we paid the actual loss on perishable goods only.

Mr. J. D. REID. This, I suppose, establishes the precedent that in all similar cases claims for damages will be paid. I am not objecting to the amount.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. We will do justice.

Ocean and river service—further amount required for investigations into wrecks, $2,000.

Mr. PREFONTAINE moved that the item be struck out.

Motion agreed to.

Ocean and river service—Further amount required for examination of masters and mates, $1,000.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER.

Mr. KAULBACH. Mr. Chairman, I desire to draw the attention of the hon. minister to the fact that in the county I have the honour to represent there is a larger number of young men than in any other part of the province engaged in the merchant marine service, and whilst a number of these young men are employed in the summer time in the prosecution of the industry of fishing, they are employed in the later autumn and winter in foreign service. There is a large amount of material that can be utilized were there a school established in the county, and I would ask the hon. minister if he would kindly look into that matter seriously. I spoke of it before, and I think it is a reasonable request that a school be opened in the town of Lunenburg, where there are experienced ship masters who would be a credit to the service, and who would give valuable aid in advancing these young men to the positions of masters and mates, but who are now kept in the background for the want of a local school. I would ask the hon. minister in all seriousness to give his careful attention to the subject and to have a school opened in the county. There is another matter to which I would like to call the attention of the hon. minister. For some years the coast service was extended down to the West Indies, while now it has its limit at Cape Hatteras. Although these young men have not the authority to sail foreign as well as coastwise, they go out boldly as well as those who are possessed of the natural qualities of seamen and who are authorized to cross the Atlantic. In a measure they have the experience, because they have been sailing to the West Indies. Their calling is to the West Indies, because a large portion of the fish caught in the summer time are carried in the winter time to the West Indies for a market. I feel satisfied that if the hon. minister would extend the limit of the coast service to the West Indies, as it was in the past, it would be an advantage.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. That question is receiving the special attention of the chairman of the Board of Masters and Mates, and we hope to be able to remedy the existing state of affairs. As regards an examiner at Lunenburg, I may state that there is one at Yarmouth and one at Halifax. The distance is not very great, but, all the same, I will have a report made upon the subject.

Mr. KAULBACH. These men desirous of qualifying are of a class who are hardly able to bear the expense of going to Yarmouth, which is a long way off, or even going to Halifax in the adjoining county.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. In certain cases, where there are three or four together, we send the examiner to the place so that they many be examined.

Mr. KAULBACH. I am aware of the fact that they are examined at the present time, but still there is no school. Were there a school they would be able to acquire knowledge of the details to an extent which would advance them much more rapidly than by adopting the rude process that they have at the present time ; that is, going up for examination before the parties who are appointed by the board.

Lighthouse and coast service — further amount required for the construction and completion of the Lurcher and East Point Anticosti lightships, $15,000.

Mr. COCHRANE. Explain.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. This will settle the account for the construction of these two light ships. They were contracted for by my predecessor, built by the Polson Iron works and are the most modern lightships in the world.

Lighthouse and coast service—maintenance and repairs to lighthouses, $35,000.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. Last year's vote of $345,000 was exhausted on the first of June. A great number of these lighthouses were built before confederation and needed extensive repairs. A large number received new apparatus ; the severe winter entailed extra expense ; at the request of the shipping interests of Montreal the buoys were left in the channel later than usual and some of them were lost, and had to be replaced ; this spring a number of the buoys were carried away.

Mr. J. D. REID. Will acetylene be put in all the lighthouses between Montreal and Kingston and the lighthouse-keepers done away with.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. This vote is to supplement the expenditure between Montreal and Quebec.

Mr. HAGGART. I will require the reports of your officers as to the use of acetylene gas in these lighthouses. I refer especially to the reports of Mr. Anderson.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. I will bring all the documents down on the supplementary estimates.

Lighthouse and coast service—further amount required for construction of lighthouses and aids to navigation, $50,000.

Mr. J. D. REID. There have been some statements made regarding the purchase of the property for the establishment of a lighthouse depot at Prescott, and I wish to say that I consider that property was bought very reasonably and cheaply, and the purchase of it was all right. There is another lot adjoining that property and if the government do not purchase it the whole look of the property they have will be spoiled. I hope the minister will see his way to purchase that lot and make the property square. I hope he will secure the adjoining lot.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. This matter is under consideration. I have never been to Prescott, but I hope to visit it soon, and I will look into this matter. I think $1,000 was asked for the adjoining lot, and I offered $500 and the owner is ready to sell for $750.

Mr. J. D. REID. I think myself the lot is worth $1,000, and the government is not paying any too much for it even at that price. It is a corner lot and it will help to make the government lot more uniform, and the minister should not hesitate to buy it and make their lot complete.

Lighthouse and coast service—to provide for the purchase of a wharf for steamers and lighthouse service at Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, $13,000.

Mr. CLANCY. Explain.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. When I visited Charlottetown last fall, I found that the ferry boats and government steamers had no proper wharf accommodation. The wharfs which our steamers used were really a disgrace. It was pointed out that we might buy the Poole property, and I was told that the price would be $16,000 or $18,000, I said we were not disposed to pay so high a price, and after a good deal of bargaining $13,000 was settled on, which is considered by everyone as reasonable and fair. It is without exception the best wharf in Charlottetown and besides we save $500 a year.

Mr. CLANCY. Did the government steamers land at that wharf before ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. No ; it was private property.

Mr. CLANCY. Has the government the exclusive right now ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. Yes.

Fisheries—further amount required for salaries and disbursements of fishery inspectors, overseers and guardians, $20,000.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. The actual expenditure of the department is $105,000, and we have always overlapped to the extent of $20,000. To cover this deficiency we have to vote this $20,000.

Mr. HAGGART. I do not understand that system of bookkeeping. Here is $20,000 additional required for salaries and disbursements. How has the minister made the mistake ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. I have not made a mistake. I found when I came into the department that the expenditure for the year previous had exceeded the estimate and the appropriation, so last year I asked for $20,000 to cover the expenditure of 1902-3. This year I am asking for the same amount of $20,000 to cover the amount which I am short for 1903-4.

Mr. HAGGART. Some one must have expended $20,000 more than he had a right to. Who was the minister who did that ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. I can give the hon. gentleman the information as to how far back it was done.

Mr. CLANCY. Does it mean that the hon. gentleman had $85,000 voted and expended $20,000 more ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. We expended $20,000 more than was voted last year or the year before.

Mr. CLANCY. Where did the hon. gentleman get the money ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. We did not get it, we are trying to get it now.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. gentleman says he expended it.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. The obligation is contracted.

Mr. HAGGART. Have you provided for the $20,000 this year ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. No, I have not provided for it.

Mr. HAGGART. That is an extraordinary state of affairs.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. gentleman has not explained why it was necessary to expend $20,000 more than was expended in the former year. I see that the vote for the year prior to that was $85,000.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. In years gone by the expenditure of the department for this service has always exceeded by $20,000 the expenditure of the year previous and it was always voted on the supplementary estimates for the year which had passed. I am doing exactly the same thing as was done last year and as my predecessors did years before.

River St. Lawrence ship channel, $588,000.

Mr. HAGGART. We want an explanation of all this.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. In order to explain this matter fully, I shall read the Order in Council which was adopted 11th of March, 1904:

On a report dated 7th February, 1904, from the Right Honourable the President of the Privy Council, submitting that an Act passed at the last session of parliament, respecting the management and control of public and other works (3 Edward VII., c. 53) provides for the transfer by the Governor in Council of the management, charge and direction of any public works or any power, duty or function with respect to any work or class of works, whether public or private which is assigned to or vested by statute in any minister or department to any other minister or department.

1. With a view to systematizing and facilitating the work in connection with hydrographic surveys, the administration of which branch of the public service is assigned to the Department of Marine and Fisheries under the provisions of 55-56 Vic., c. 17, and the work whereof has been continuously performed by that department for many years past, that all hydrographic work of the Department of Public Works and of Railways and Canals be transferred to the Department of Marine and Fisheries and that that department alone be charged in future with the management and control of such surveys.

I may state that there appears in the supplementary estimates of 1904-5 an item of $10,500 which was formerly in the estimate of the Department of Railways and Canals. That item the Department of Railways and Canals dropped and it has been transferred to the supplementaries of the Department of Marine for 1905.

That from and after the first of July next (1904) the management and control of the St. Lawrence ship channel, together with the dredging and sweeping plant, steamers and all other appliances now used by the Department of Public Works in connection with that work, be transferred to the Department of Marine and Fisheries, so as to place the supervision of the improvements to navigation on the St. Lawrence route under the jurisdiction of the department which is directly responsible for the aids to navigation on that route.

3. That all the duties, powers and functions with respect to any work or class of works conferred upon the Minister of Public Works by any of the Acts relating to harbour commissioners, be transferred to and hereafter exercised by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries.

4. That any records and plans in the possession of the Department of Public Works or of Railways and Canals, which refer to any of the above-mentioned works and which may be required by the Department of Marine and Fisheries for its information and guidance upon assuming control of the said works be transferred to the last named department, upon its making application therefor.

5. That all moneys voted by parliament to either the Department of Public Works or that of Railways and Canals for the purpose of carrying out any of the works under the control of either department and now transferred to the Department of Marine and Fisheries, be placed to the credit of the last named department.

6. That the changes as recommended above take effect from this date except as hereinabove otherwise provided.

Mr. MONK. Has that been laid on the table already ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. Yes. This amount of $588,000 is the ordinary amount which has been voted from year to year since 1896 for the work proper of the ship channel and basin, and of course all work of construction and repairs of the fleet necessary to carry on the dredging of the channel. This vote provides :

1. For the working expenses of six elevator dredges and one hydraulic or suction dredge, with their accessory plants, which it is proposed to keep at work at various points on the St. Lawrence below Montreal, deepening and otherwise improving the ship channel.

2. Maintenance of Sorel ship establishment, inclusive of supplies, charges of management and superintendence of dredging operations, &c.

3. Towards construction of additional dredging plant at Sorel, improvement of shipyard facilities, including wharf and dock accommodation.

4. Carrying on the hydrographic survey of the River St. Lawrence, now in progress, and the operations of sweeping and supervision of the dredge channel.

The following is a detailed estimate of requirements for 1904-5 :

1. Dredging operations—
Working expenses of six elevators dredges, operating day and night, with their accessory plants of tugs, scows, &c., including fuel, wages, board, stores, repairs and supervision and office expenses ; for a season of about eight months—six elevator dredges at $40,000 each..		$240,000

Last year and the year previous the expenditure was from $30,000 to $37,000 per dredge :

Working expenses of one hydraulic dredge, operating day and night ; including plant and superintendence ; for a season of about six months..		60,000
Working expenses of 2 stone lifters		10,000
2. Shipyard, supplies and new plant—
Coal for shipyard, 2,000 tons at $4.50..	$ 9,900
Smith's coal, 500 tons at $6...	3,000
Drying kiln and other new buildings	5,000
New blacksmith shop and brass foundry..	10,000
Removing wreck of old railway wharf..	2,000
Rebuilding old railway wharf.	12,000
Rebuilding wharf, upper end of shipyard	5,000
New electric plant..	25,000
New plant and machinery.. ..	10,000
		81,900
3. New dredging plat, yard facilities and improvements—
New dredging plant and completion of two spare scows, 200 yards each..	$20,000
Reconstruction of upper part of hull of dredge 'Laurier.'.	12,000
Winch scow with boiler and winch..	8,000
Flat scow with derrick	6,000
New set powerful buckets for dredge 'Lafontaine'..	10,000
Additional upper works 'Cartier' and other tugs..	8,000
Purchase of tug 'Carmelia'..	13,000
4. Hydrographic surveys, sweeping and supervision, including commencement of sweeping tug—
For the continuation of the hydrographic surveys of the River St. Lawrence, now in progress..	$ 40,000
For the sweeping and supervision of the dredged channel..	19,100
On account of the construction of a new, powerful ice-breaking and sweeping tug, designed for prolonging navigation, sweeping above and below Quebec, and general towing of dredging plant, especially for Cap à la Roche..	60,000
		119,100
Total..		$588,000

Now, I am ready to give information in detail about the work.

Mr. HAGGART. What depth does this give you in both places—in lake St. Peter and below ? And what remains to be completed ? and when do you expect to have it completed ?

At six o'clock, Committee took recess.

After Recess.

Committee resumed at Eight o'clock.

Mr. MONK. When the committee rose at six o'clock the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Mr. Préfontaine) had just read the Order in Council, which, under the statute passed last session, attributes certain of the duties of the Department of Railways and Canals and of the Department of Public Works to the Department of Marine and Fisheries. It reminds me of the campaign of the hon. minister in the division of Maisonneuve, when he presented himself for re-election after his acceptance of his present portfolio. I merely wish to call my hon. friend's attention to this and to ask for a word or two of explanation which, no doubt, he will give. At that time, my hon. friend will remember, it was charged by those opposed to his re-election that the important Department of Public Works had been taken away from the province of Quebec to which it had been allotted at the time of the distribution of portfolios in 1896, and that the department given to the province as represented by my hon. friend (Mr. Préfontaine) was a department of minor importance. I think that was a legitimate objection to raise in an election when all questions of public interest can be discussed, particularly an election which took place after a ministerial reconstruction. My hon. friend made a very good defence—so good that he was elected by a large majority. Amongst other things, he stated as he will remember, that the department which he was called upon to preside over, if he were elected, will undergo a very large development. That department, he said, would be entrusted with the superintendence of all navigation of every kind—to use his own language—from the Yukon to the Atlantic ocean. What was understood by that was that there was going to be introduced a very important modification of the system that had obtained since confederation in the organization of the administrative work of the Dominion. We understood that the Department of Marine and Fisheries was going to take from the Department of Public Works everything which concerned navigation, the construction of wharfs, the deepening of rivers, canal navigation—I believe that was specified at the time by my hon. friend and by his organs,—everything that concerned navigation, including the construction, repairs and labour of every kind. That was a new principle, that is, a new principle here, though not new as applied to other nations. The system which prevails here as hon. members of the committee know, is that the Department of Public Works is entrusted with all work of material construction throughout the Dominion, with whatever department it may be concerned. If the Department of Militia desires to have a drill hall erected, it is the work of the Public Works Department to construct it; if a post office is to be erected, or a customs house built, or a building provided in connection with the Department of Justice or the Department of Trade and Commerce, —any building of whatever kind—it is supposed to be the work of the Public Works Department which is manned by a minister and a sufficient number of officials to carry out all the public works of the Dominion. And that it was which made that department in the eyes of the electors of Maisonneuve such an important department; and that was why they, or at least a certain number of them, could not see why that department should be taken from the province of Quebec.

But the point to which I wish to draw the attention of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries is this: After my hon. friend had become a minister, he endeavoured to carry out the pledges he had made to his electors, I will give him credit for that. He made a noble effort to draw into his department everything that he said he would include in it. That he failed to realize his promises there is no doubt, and that is the point upon which I would like an explanation from him. There has evidently been a struggle, there has evidently been a conflict, and the Order in Council which my hon. friend read to us a short time ago is the outcome of that conflict. By the terms of the Order in Council the Department of Marine and Fisheries is charged with the St. Lawrence ship channel, it has charge of the localities that are under the control of harbour boards. Why is the attribution so restricted? That is what I would like my hon. friend to explain. Take for instance, the navigation between Montreal and Quebec. My hon. friend, under the terms of this Order in Council, has charge of the ship channel from Montreal to Quebec where important works are going on; he has charge of the construction of piers and of public works to be executed within the harbour of Montreal, in that particularly restricted locality where the Harbour Commissioners have jurisdiction; he has also charge of works to be executed at Three Rivers, if there is a harbour board there, and I think there is. There is a harbour board at Quebec, and therefore within the jurisdiction of the Quebec Harbour Commissioners his department has charge of the public expenditure. But if wharfs are to be built between Quebec and Montreal outside the very limited jurisdiction of the harbour commissioners, they are not to be attributed to my hon. friend's department, but they fall under the Department of Public Works. Lighthouses to be constructed above Montreal—and there is no subject which it seems to me comes more properly under the jurisdiction of the Department of Marine and Fisheries—those lighthouses, so far as their construction is concerned, belong to the Department of Public Works. The canal navigation remains where it was under the control of the Department of Railways and Canals. All wharfs or improvements to be constructed above Montreal, although intimately connected with navigation, unless they are to be constructed within the jurisdiction of the harbour commissioners, are completely outside the attribution of the department of my hon. friend We are, I believe this year, to execute very important and commendable improvements at Port Colborne which are very important to the inland navigation of this country. Unless there are harbour commissioners at Port Colborne, and I am not aware that there are any, all those improvements will be constructed outside the control of the department of my hon. friend. That is the way I understand it. I do not think there are as yet harbour commissioners appointed for the ports of Port Arthur and Fort William. Any improvements we make there in the way of construction work would therefore be under the Department of Public Works and not under the department of my hon. friend. In other words, there has been a creation to the department of my hon. friend, but it is limited as indicated in the Order in Council read by him.

What I would like to ask my hon. friend is this: Upon what principle did the government proceed in that division, in that attribution to his department of works which previously were under the control of the Department of Public Works? What was the guiding principle? Was it, as everything leads us to believe, a mere compromise between my hon. friend and the head of the Department of Public Works by which the latter relinquished some of his patronage, if I may use such an expression, a certain part of the subject previously attributed to it, in order to satisfy my hon. friend? Was it that, or was there some principle which guided the government in making that attribution? Of course once we depart from the principle that all works of construction performed by the government, in whatever department they may belong, belong of right to the Department of Public Works, the moment, I say, we depart from the principle as we have upon the present occasion I do not see why that department, which used to be the most important, should not gradually be shorn of all its attributes. In England undoubtedly, in France, I believe, and in the United States there is no Department of Public Works. In those countries I understand, the departments have to construct themselves the works that they need; there is no special department of state to which the work of public construction is confided as has been the case in this country since confederation. That is also, I think, the system adopted in several provinces of the Dominion. I say once we depart from that principle I see no reason in reality why each department should not have charge of its own construction, and why the Department of Public Works should not be replaced by some new department which might supply all the many wants of a rapidly growing country like our own. I would like to know from my hon. friend what is the principle which guided the government in the division of the public works, and the attribution to his own department of those specially indicated in the Order in Council?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. The Order in Council explains itself very well, and is easy to understand. The government of this country thought proper to delegate to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries certain functions which before had been performed by the Minister of Public Works. These are duly set forth in the Order in Council. Take for instance, the business of hydrographic surveys, which constituted an extraordinary anomaly in the administration of that branch of the public service. Part of those surveys were made by the Department of Railways and Canals, a part by the Department of Public Works, and still another part by the Department of Marine and Fisheries, although by statute constituting the Department of Marine and Fisheries, all the hydrographic surveys should have been conducted by it and were attributed to the Department of Marine and Fisheries. The Order in Council has settled that point and this work is now entirely confided to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries. Certain works which belonged entirely, according to the opinion of the government, to the control and supervision of the Department of Public Works were attributed to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries. These include the most important national works of this country, the ship channel between Montreal and Quebec, and the equipment of the St. Lawrence. The ship channel between Montreal and Quebec is an essential part of our national highway. It is a work of the greatest importance and there would be really no national highway if the ship channel between Montreal and Quebec were not equipped and put in such a condition as to offer all the security and facilities that the trade and commerce of this country require. If I understand well my hon. friend from Jacques Cartier he would have liked if the whole of the work connected with minor improvements upon the route of the St. Lawrence, the construction of wharfs on the River Richelieu or on Lake St. Louis in his own county or in remote places in Canada, had been confided to me. There are thousands of small wharfs, some of them important, which are not really connected with what is known as the national route of the St. Lawrence and which are not therefore confided to the Department of Marine and Fisheries. In our judgment we thought that everything that was constructed in the general sense of the word should remain properly under the control of the Department of Public Works. What is the difference after all? I would have liked probably, if I had consulted my own ambition, that everything should have been placed under my control, but after considering my capacity and realizing my position I came to the conclusion that my department could not embrace the construction of all these different works. I ask what is the difference after all whether these wharfs are constructed by the Department of Public Works or by the Department of Marine and Fisheries because after being constructed they are handed over to the Department of Marine and Fisheries to look after and administer. It makes no difference after all. It does not make very much difference whether the Department of Marine and Fisheries or the Department of Public Works controls the expenditure of the money. There is a higher and more important question than that. My hon. friend seems to be under a misapprehension when he says that the wharfs and piers remain under the control of the Department of Public Works. That is not the case according to the law. The law provides that after these wharfs and piers are constructed they shall be handed over to the Department of Marine and Fisheries and the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to administer. My hon. friend is also under a misapprehension about the construction of lighthouses. The construction of lighthouses, the establishment of aids to navigation, and the furnishing of whatever is necessary for the safe navigation of the St. Lawrence route have been since 1872 under the control of the Department of Marine and Fisheries and they continue to be under the control of the Department of Marine and Fisheries.

Mr. MONK. Does my hon. friend say that the construction of lighthouses belongs to his department ?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. By all means. It has been so since 1872 and I would not come before parliament and ask the large vote that I am asking for during the present session if all these works were not entirely under the control of the Department of Marine and Fisheries and its officers. Everybody who is familiar with the history of our national route, everybody who is familiar with what has taken place in the city of Montreal, and with what the business men of Montreal have done since 1850 is perfectly aware that the ship channel as a national question forty or fifty years ago did not exist at all and that it did not become a question of importance until two men of brains, two business men of Montreal, took the matter in hand. I refer to the late Hon. John Young and to Sir Hugh Allan. At that time there was on the flats of Lake St. Peter only nine feet of water. These gentlemen contributed to organize the harbour commission of Montreal and with the aid of those interested in the question they started this immense work of making the route of the St. Lawrence what it is intended to be. Starting with the channel between Quebec and Montreal having a depth of nine feet we have the gratification of knowing that at the present time there is a depth of thirty feet during nearly the whole season between Montreal and Quebec, that there will be a depth absolutely of thirty feet within the next two years and that the width of the channel will be from 350 to 450 and at certain points 500 feet. This result has not been attained without a great deal of work and a great deal of expenditure. The trade of Montreal for years and years was taxed to pay the expense incurred in carrying on this work which was considered a national work. It was only in 1892 or 1893 that the government of Canada were convinced that it was really a national work and being convinced of that the government assumed part of the debt of the harbour commissioners of Montreal. Since that time part of that work was confided to the Department of Public Works. What do we find as regards the carrying on of that work ? It was established beyond doubt that there were misunderstandings between the Department of Public Works and the Department of Marine and Fisheries. The Department of Marine and Fisheries had the powers and functions of establishing lighthouses and providing aids to navigation. In order to place the buoys and establish these lighthouses they had to confer with the Department of Public Works as the work was progressing and I may here say that it has progressed very rapidly during the last five or six years. But, it came to the point where it was not in the interest of navigation or conductive to the safety of transportation between Montreal and Quebec that the control should be divided. That is the reason why it was put under the sole control of the Department of Marine and Fisheries and there are no other reasons. This work, of course, is of the greatest importance When we have a ship channel 450 feet wide and 30 feet deep we will be face to face with improvements of navigation, with the enlargements of ships and there is no doubt that in five years or sooner we will be face to face with the problem of having a channel not only 30 feet deep but 600 feet wide.

These improvements are needed and they must be undertaken unless this country wants to remain in statu quo or to go backwards. We must keep pace not only with the development of our own country, but we must keep pace as well with the progress of other countries, and especially the United States. If we desire that the St. Lawrence route should be enabled to compete advantageously with the American waterways ; if we want to have the ports of Montreal, Quebec, St. John, and Halifax in a position to compete to advantage with Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Newport News and other ports on the Atlantic coast, we must do our duty towards our national water route. I believe Sir, that everyone who understands the position approves of the departmental changes which have taken place. If my hon. friend (Mr. Monk) would consult the business men and the shipping interests of Montreal, I think he would find that they unanimously endorse the action of the government in making these departmental changes. I intend to carry out in its integrity the plan adopted by the government for the improvement of the St. Lawrence route, and of course I shall be glad to receive and to rely upon the suggestions of the business community interested and especially of those connected with shipping and transportation interests. I may say that last November we were able to see what never had been seen before, namely : steamers drawing 26 and 27 feet of water steaming into the port of Montreal during the nighttime. That has been a common occurrence this spring, and it is highly important to our shipping trade, inasmuch as it means a saving of from 6 hours to 10 hours on the voyage. This shows that the government has been trying to carry on the work in such a way as to make it most beneficial to the shipping interests, and to the business men of Canada in general, because when we improve our national route it means not only facility for shipping, but it means advantage to the producers, to the consumers and to the commercial world generally. I may say, and I know what I am speaking of, that such is the improvement in the St. Lawrence route, that we have in sight an important reduction in the rates of insurance. That being so, I believe the people of Canada without distinction of party will cordially approve of what we have done and what we are doing. After all it is not a question of politics. During the elections of 1902, it was claimed by the friends of the Conservative party, that I should be whipped out of my division, and that I was a renegade to the province of Quebec, because I had accepted a less important portfolio in the cabinet. It was charged against me that instead of going into the cabinet by the front door, I was satisfied with climbing in through the window or through the chimney. I did not doubt for a moment that the portfolio of Marine and Fisheries was an important one, and I knew that it had been held in the past by men who were the mainstay of the Conservative party, such as Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper, the Hon. George Foster, Sir Albert Smith and many others. When the Conservatives were accusing me of having disgraced myself by accepting the portfolio of Marine and Fisheries, I thought they were paying a very poor compliment indeed to these leaders of theirs.

Mr. CLANCY. And all were satisfied to administer the department as they found it.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. Well, of course every one has his own tastes. I do not reproach them for not having thought well to improve the national route of the St. Lawrence, but I will point out that this government has taken the matter in hand, and it is going to show the people of Canada and the people of the United States, as well, that the St. Lawrence route is the great national highway for this part of the North American continent, and that it can compete with any other route in the United States. As I said, I do not reproach the Conservative Ministers of Marine and Fisheries for not having dealt with the St. Lawrence route, but I point out to the people of Canada that the improvements are now going on, and I do not think they will be disposed to blame the government for having made certain departmental changes. The question for us to consider is: is this work well carried on; are the plans well matured; is the execution of the work in the best interests of the country? If these questions can be answered in the affirmative, then the people of Canada will take very little stock in minor considerations as to what minister is in charge of the execution of the policy of the government in this regard. My hon. friend seems much concerned that I have not the administration of the canals. Well, I am a new minister and have quite a good deal to look after now, and I am not ashamed to confess, a good deal to learn. I do not pretend to be perfect, but at the same time I am doing my best to administer the affairs which I have under my control at the present time. I may say that I am perhaps not as well posted as I would like to be in the fishery branch of my department, because I have not had the advantage of visiting the different parts of the Dominion to ascertain for myself the requirements of the people. I can say, however, without fear of contradiction, that as regards the port of Montreal and the channel between Montreal and Quebec, I have some knowledge of the needs of the situation, and I trust I may be able to apply that knowledge to the best advantage of the people of Canada. As to the lighting of the St. Lawrence route, we are trying to do the best we can. We are adopting the most modern apparatus so that we may give satisfaction, not only to the shipping trade entering Montreal from the east, but also to the transportation business coming to that port from the west. I think our efforts are directed in the proper way. If my hon. friend is not satisfied with what has been done, I must tell him I am perfectly satisfied. My friends are perfectly satisfied also and he is welcome as he was in 1902 in my division of Maisonneuve, to come and preach the same doctrine as he has preached to-night. I am perfectly willing to have my friends judge me by my acts and what I am doing.

Mr. MONK. My hon. friend has displayed a great deal of irritation unnecessarily. I do not know that there is any electricity in the atmosphere that would contribute to irritate my hon. friend, but he has given us a political harangue unnecessarily and has refrained from answering a very plain question. What I asked my hon. friend was this: There has been a redistribution of the work of the departments. I mildly, gently, mellifluously asked what principle had guided the government in that work of division, and the minister gets up and says he has made great improvements in the St. Lawrence, that this government is responsible for those improvements, and that people threw insults at him in his election. I never did anything of that kind myself, and I do not know that anybody else did. I never met my hon. friend during that election. I thought we had a right in that election to say that the Department of Public Works had been, in our opinion, unnecessarily taken from our province. We may have been wrong, but I think that was a legitimate question to discuss, and my hon. friend thought it so important that he said that the department of which he was taking charge was to be a new department altogether, and that everything that concerned navigation throughout the country, to use his own words, from the extreme west to the east, from the coast of the Pacific down to Nova Scotia, on the coast of the Atlantic, any construction work with reference to piers, lighthouses, or any work of construction in connection with navigation, which belong to the Department of Public Works, would be transferred to him. He was elected upon that new programme which he defined in that election. I stated a moment ago that the system which has prevailed in Canada has been that all construction of this and every kind whatever, for post offices, for military use, for any department, was performed in this country by the Department of Public Works. In England, where there are forty-five ministers, every minister controls the construction work of his own department. We have a different principle. My hon. friend preached through his election that that principle was going to be changed. He has changed it in part. He has taken a part out of the Public Works Department. A man cannot get up in this House and ask my hon. friend the principle and the line of conduct laid down in that division without getting from him a refusal to answer and an appeal to popular passion. I find that strange, and I repeat that I am sorry the minister refused to explain to me and to this committee why it is that if a wharf is to be built at St. Lambert, opposite Montreal, he has nothing to do with that construction, and if it is to be built at Hochelaga, within the limits of the jurisdiction of the harbour commissioners, it belongs to him entirely. My hon. friend will not answer that question, and I will let it rest there. This is a very important item, and I wish to ask my hon. friend to give the committee a general idea as to how he proposes to spend this large sum. What are specifically the improvements that are going to be carried out this year in that ship channel, which interests the business and trading community of this country in such a large degree? There is a very good report by Mr. Lafleur, acting Chief Engineer of the Department of Public Works, in the report of the Minister of Public Works last year, which gives a great deal of information. I find, amongst other things, not quite a justification of the proud boast which is made by the minister that he had inaugurated, and his government had carried out, under him, very important improvements. I find that what has been done for the past ten years in the ship channel is but the carrying out of a plan laid down in 1844, I think before my hon. friend was born, certainly before I was born. We are carrying out that programme of deepening and improving the channel between Quebec and Montreal, and no doubt my hon. friend will contribute his part, as other ministers have done, to the carrying out of that plan first enunciated by the Hon. John Young, and which we have been carrying out ever since. The channel between Montreal and Quebec is 160 miles long. Sixty-five per cent of that channel requires no improvements, it is deep enough and wide enough to admit of the passage of vessels. The only improvement to be made there is the proper lighting of the channel. I find in Mr. Lafleur's report that the plan is to give the channel a depth of 30 feet from Montreal to Quebec, a width of at least 450 feet, which is the least that is safe, and where there are curves a width of at least 650 or 700 feet, or even more. No doubt it would be desirable that that channel should be wider, a depth of 30 feet and a width of 450 feet is barely enough, and the object we have in view is to give it a width which would avoid some of the accidents that have occurred and which have damaged the reputation of the channel. We have excavated over 36,000,000 cubic yards. We have expended for plant, shops, surveys, &c., $2,331,527.23, and we have expended for dredging $4,910,155.62. We have seven dredges. My hon. friend told the committee before six o'clock that we are going to have an eighth dredge. I would like to know whether it is contemplated continuing the work of improvement during the present season. what parts of the channel he is going to dredge, and what other improvements he is going to make, besides dredging, in the way of lighting, and generally in the way of carrying out the suggestions so ably made to the government two years ago by the shipping interests of Montreal, who carried on an investigation at their own expense and laid the result of that investigation before the government, from whom they obtained the promise that their suggestions would be carried out. Where are we going to increase the depth and the width of the channel, and what improvements are we going to carry out in the way of lighting the channel? Are any new buoys going to be added in order to secure safe navigation? Can my hon. friend give us any valid reason for the unfortunate number of accidents which have occurred in that channel since the beginning of the season? I find in Mr. Lafleur's report that last year we had eight accidents in the River St. Lawrence. The accidents which have occurred this year appear to be due in a large proportion to negligence on the part of somebody; but whatever may be the cause, they have inflicted serious injury on our channel and make people skeptical as regards the accomplishment of the very excellent object which my hon. friend has in view, namely, of having the navigation of the St. Lawrence just as safe and free from risk as is the ocean navigation to the great American ports. My hon. friend has stated that under his administration, and that of the past few years, the insurance rates have greatly diminished. Is that the case, and what is the diminution?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. My hon. friend is mistaken. What I said was that we had in sight the diminution of the rates of insurance.

Mr. MONK. Then I misunderstood my hon. friend. But as I understand it—and I see my hon. friend from St. Lawrence division (Mr. Bickerdike) is in his seat, who is conversant with this subject—we are handicapped in the way of rates. The St. Lawrence route is mulcted in heavier rates than the American ports. That is a very serious disability for which I am told is no cause. There is no reason for it except the ipse dixit of the English underwriters, and it is most desirable that that inequality should disappear. My hon. friend has a large sum at his disposal. He contemplates important improvements, and he states to the committee that he is certain that after those improvements have been carried out, the disability I refer to will either disappear or be seriously diminished. What guarantee can my hon. friend offer as to that? I would be prepared to vote an additional sum if my hon. friend can state to this committee that he has conferred with the underwriters and that the improvements he contemplates will result in a removal of that grave disability from which we suffer of being burdened with heavier rates of insurance than the American ports. Since my hon. friend, in a moment of irritation, which I cannot very well explain, has judged fit not to answer my first question, this one I beg him to believe is in no way connected with politics. The ship channel is to me a question apart from politics. It is a business matter which interests the whole Dominion and the city of Montreal in particular, and if my hon. friend will give me a little enlightenment on the points I have mentioned, I shall be very much obliged to him.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. My hon. friend is under a misapprehension. Because I thought proper to explain as clearly as my control of the English language would permit, a few of the points which he thought proper to charge against the government, he feels that there was electricity in the air. My hon. friend may have felt it, but I did not and there was no cause for it. Now he says that the plan we are executing is one which was begun in 1844. Sir, the plan now being carried out was never begun in 1844. What was begun in 1844 was an attempt to dredge the channel through the Lake St. Peter flats, and whatever information the hon. gentleman has taken upon himself to give to the committee, he has taken from the reports of the Public Works Department for 1903 under the heading 'History of the ship channel.'

The actual improvements were commenced in 1844, and continued by the government as a public work until 1846, and abandoned the following year owing to opposition to the location of the channel.

Legislation was passed in 1850 transferring the plant and authorizing the Montreal Harbour Commissioners to borrow money and proceed with the works as they should deem best.

From 1851 to 1888 all operations for the improvement of the St. Lawrence between Montreal and Quebec were carried on by the Montreal Harbour Commissioners, the interest on the cost of the work being defrayed by a tonnage tax on all vessels drawing 10 feet and upwards.

In 1888 the channel from Montreal to Cap à la Roche was completed to 27½ feet at ordinary low water, and from there to Quebec 27½ feet at half tide.

The government decided in 1888 to re-adopt the River St. Lawrence ship channel as a public work.

Under the Public Works Department, from 1888 to 1898, the work begun by the Harbour Commissioners was continued.

The difficult rock work at Cap à la Roche and Cap Charles was completed, as designed.

Almost all of the dredged portions of the river, except the channel in Lake St. Peter, were cleaned up or deepened, and many curves and narrow places were widened.

Surveys were made, and between Cap Charles and Quebec, to avoid the necessity of waiting for the tide, channels were dredged through several shoals.

The extraordinary low water of 1895 and 1897, and the increase in the size of vessels, urgently called for a wider and deeper channel.

In 1897 it was decided to construct new plant consisting of large and powerful dredges, tugs, barges, &c., suitable for channel improvement on a large scale.

It was only in 1899 that the present plans were fairly started and the new plant acquired. My hon. friend asked me what was going to be done, and before six o'clock I gave him the details of what we expected to accomplish with this sum of $588,000. We propose to complete the channel as planned in 1899 and to make it a thirty feet channel the whole length between Montreal and Quebec and from 450 feet to 750 feet wide as required. From the report I have from the engineer in charge of the channel, I take the following:

In view of the improvements already completed, and those expected to be completed in the near future, I have to-day forwarded to you a report recommending for the consideration of the lighthouse board, a number of improvements and additions to the lighting and buoy service on the River St. Lawrence ship channel, between Longue Pointe and Batiscan.

The list calls for some 20 new piers, most of them ice-breaking concrete structures, 27 new lighthouses, and some 12 to 15 gas buoys.

These piers and permanent lights will be necessary in view of the proposal to prolong navigation in the autumn and spring, and to operate ice-breaking steamers.

During these operations buoys will not be available, and shore marks must be relied upon exclusively. The number and character of the lights therein suggested, would give a system of lighting equal in type and protection to the general design of the improved thirty foot channel which is being dredged. With the exception of the widening in Lake St. Peter the dredging throughout the three divisions will be completed some time in 1905. The depth will also be completed in Lake St. Peter with the bends all enlarged, so that between Batiscan anchorage and Longue Pointe, the eastern limit of Montreal harbour, thirty foot navigation will be available at extreme low water. From Batiscan anchorage to Quebec, by taking advantage of the tide, vessels of the same draught may pass. The lighting from Quebec up to Batiscan is for the present channel about sufficient, as it is not advised that deep draught vessels should pass Cap à la Roche at night. The completion of the improvement by dredging and the placing of the lights as suggested will mark a further important step in the perfecting of navigation by the St. Lawrence route.

With the details that I gave before six o'clock I think there is sufficient information to enable the committee to form the opinion that the work which is proposed to be carried out under the control of the Department of Marine and Fisheries is purely and simply the execution of the plan which was adopted in 1899 and the carrying out of a system of lighting in such a perfect manner that the navigation between Montreal and Quebec will be made just as safe as it is in the best waters in the world. But, the department does not intend to stop there There are other improvements as regards aids to navigation in the Lower St. Lawrence which are being considered by the department, and as this work is in the same hands I think it will help in having it executed more rapidly and in a better condition than it was carried on before.

Mr. CLANCY. I do not know whether the hon. gentleman was affecting indignation or not when he made a rather heated reply to my hon. friend from Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk). The hon. gentleman sat down without giving a single reason why a portion of the Department of Public Works and a small portion of the Department of Railways and Canals should have been taken away from these departments or why he should have attempted, merely upon an election pledge, to dismantle other departments. I would like to ask him if it means a vote of want of confidence in the gentleman who presided over the Department of Public Works. Does the hon. gentleman mean to say by his action that the present hon. Minister of Public Works (Mr. Sutherland) was unable to perform the duties which were assigned to him? Was that the reason or was it because the hon. gentleman wanted more patronage? The hon. gentleman did not take the pains to tell the committee. He tells the committee very frankly that he has much to learn in respect to his own department. I am pretty well persuaded that this committee will conclude that the first thing that the hon. gentleman ought to do is to master every detail in his own department before he undertakes work belonging to other departments. He is a new minister, he has only been a short time in his department and yet after entering it, in fact before he had been fairly seated in his department, the first thing he did when he went to his constituents was to make the promise that he would make a raid upon other departments. I was expecting the hon member for London (Mr. Hyman) to pronounce a eulogium upon the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries for his having pirated largely other departments and taken over other work. Was it essential to his election that he should have made a pledge in the city of Montreal that he would take over portions of other departments? That was a part of the hon. gentleman's election pledge and he has been strong enough to redeem it. He has been strong enough to take other men by the throat, men who have retired from this House in consequence of it, men who are to-day absent from the House largely on the ground that the hon. gentleman took a portion of other departments in fulfilment of an election pledge and he is now pluming himself upon what he has done. I will leave it to the country to judge whether the hon. gentleman is discharging these duties better than they were discharged before. I have very grave doubts as to that part of it. I do not believe he is doing so. I believe they were as well discharged before as the hon. gentleman discharges them, and the country will expect some explanation from the hon. gentleman as well as from the right hon. Prime Minister as to the reasons why the hon. gentleman took from the Department of Public Works portions that could have been as well administered under the old order of things. There was no pretence that they could not have been and this change was only made to satisfy the greed of the hon. gentleman and to give him greater power.

Mr. TAYLOR. On this side of the House I do not think there sits an hon. gentleman who is not quite willing to vote $588,000 or any other sum which may be required for the purpose of improving the national highway, but I would like to inquire from the hon. gentleman why the money is frittered away as it is. I find in the Auditor General's Report of last year that large sums of money were expended upon articles that have nothing to do with aids to navigation. I find at page V—30 that $719.50 was paid to Wm. Robertson & Son, Halifax and charged to the ship channel and I want the hon. minister to explain what these expenditures have to do with the improvement of the ship channel. The following articles were purchased: Dominion ensigns, Blue, 4 yards, 14 at $8.70; red, 3 yards, 12 at $6.10; 6 yards, 2 at $18; stars and stripes, 3 yards, at $6.50; 6 yards, 2 at $18; blank ammunition, 200 shells, $70; brass cannon, 1 inch bore, 4 wheel carriage, rubber tires, 2 at $100; French flags, 3 yards, 12 at $3.50; 6 yards, 2 at $9.50; Union Jacks, 2 yards, 12 at $3.50; 6 yards, 1 at $10; blue pennants, 3 yards at $7; 4 yards, $10; and 6 yards, $13.50, making a total of $719.50. It appears to me that these articles would be required more for the naval militia that the hon. gentleman is talking about starting than for the ship channel. Why should these items be charged to the Montreal ship channel? I find further down, 'A. Rosenthal, vegetable dish, $19.75.' Surely that was for a wedding present for somebody. They would not require a $19.75 vegetable dish in connection with the St. Lawrence ship channel. We want the hon. minister to explain why he spent this large sum of money and charged it to the Montreal ship channel for a lot of bunting, brass cannon, Yankee and French flags. There was a Yankee flag and a French flag; I think one kind of flag is enough for Canada, the Union Jack. The hon. gentleman gets this vote of money, but he does not explain what he is going to do with it. Any person reading the Auditor General's Report for last year would be tempted to vote against this item. I ask the minister to give a detailed account of what he purposes doing with the money.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. The information I get from the officials of the department is that this expenditure was incurred for the reception of the Duke of York. It must be remembered that the ship channel fleet at that time made the best display that was made on the river. I am astonished at the criticism of the hon. member for Leeds who appears to think that the Duke of York was not entitled to a fitting reception by the ship channel authorities and by those who have charge of the fleet.

Mr. TAYLOR. My hon. friend need not criticise the member for Leeds as not being willing to spend money to give the Duke of York or any other notable person from England, or elsewhere, a fitting reception. The hon. gentleman has not put in the Auditor General's Report that this money was spent to receive the Duke of York; it is simply charged as an item of expenditure to the ship channel, so many French flags, so many Yankee flags. What do we want of a French flag or of a Yankee flag for the reception of the Duke of York? The $19.75 for a vegetable dish, was that to give the Duke of York a fitting reception by the fleet?

Mr. PREFONTAINE. Yes.

Mr. TAYLOR. I do not think the Duke of York ever went aboard one of the dredges.

Mr. PREFONTAINE. Everything that was proper was done for his reception. The 'Frontenac' was equipped especially to take him up from Quebec to Montreal.

Mr. TAYLOR. Then why did not the government ask for a special vote to pay for these things, and we would vote all the money that was needed for the reception of the Duke of York, or of Lord Dundonald. To present the accounts in this underhand way is misleading the public and misleading the House. When the hon. gentleman wants a sum of money for a specific purpose he should mention that purpose.

Northwest Mounted Police—required to complete the service of the year, $40,000.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Last year we asked for an appropriation of $400,000, but we find it was not possible to complete the year for that sum, and we ask for a further sum of $40,000 to complete the service of the year which has just lapsed. The reason for this increased expenditure is largely to be found in the enormous immigration, and the increased demand for police supervision from new settlements, and the extension of the police force north of the Mackenzie river.

Mr. INGRAM. Does that mean the additional one hundred men?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. No, the one hundred men are provided for in the estimates for next year. This is for current expenditure.

Northwest Mounted Police—to provide for gratuity and pension to the widow and children of the late Arthur Frederick Montford Brooke, staff-sergeant in the Northwest Mounted Police, who was drowned while on duty, $1,204.25.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Sergeant Brooke was drowned in crossing a river while on duty. I think he was out arresting a prisoner. There had been a freshet, which washed away the ford, and as a consequence the horses lost their footing and Sergeant Brooke was drowned. We give his family the same gratuity that we would have given if he had been killed in action. In 1885, we gave a pension to the families of those mounted policemen who had been killed in action, and this is calculated in exactly the same way, according to rules which have been in force for many years.

Northwest Mounted Police—to provide for a gratuity for the widow of the late J. A. Beaupré, interpreter in the Northwest Mounted Police, who was drowned while on duty, $420.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Mr. Beaupré was an interpreter who accompanied Sergeant Brooke on that occasion. He did not belong to the regular staff of the mounted police, but was employed from time to time, as occasion required; and we give his widow the sum that we have been giving others under similar circumstances.

Mr. INGRAM. I have no objection to this item. But it seems to me some similar provision should be made for men employed by the government on harbour works, for instance, who lose their lives by accident and through no fault of their own. As a rule these are poor men, and I think that something should be done for the families of those who lose their lives in the employment of the government. I am sorry the government draws the line so close.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. At this moment I will answer only for the department for which I am responsible, the Mounted Police. I am glad the hon. gentleman takes no exception to this vote. I think if he will examine these estimates he will see that wherever there is a case of hardship, if a man who has been working for the government has met with a casualty and lost his life, a gratuity is paid to his widow. I think he will find several items of that kind in the estimates of the present year.

Mr. INGRAM. I am very glad to hear that. I know instances, deserving cases where something should be done.

Northwest Mounted Police—required to complete the service of the year, $10,000.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. We asked for an appropriation of $500,000 and we require $10,000 more to complete the service for the year expiring 30th June.

To pay Inspector W. M. Walke for portion of loss caused by destruction by fire of Mounted Police barracks, Dalton Trail, Yukon Territory, $200.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Inspector Walke was in a post that we have on the Dalton trail. I may say that we have different stations in different parts of the territory at which we have one, two or three men according to the importance of the post. If I remember well, Inspector Walke was alone or had one man with him. The cabin which he had erected and in which he lived was burned by accident. Inspector Walke lost his uniform, accoutrements, &c., for which he put in a claim of $346. We thought we should allow him $200.

Public Works—chargeable to income—public buildings generally, $8,000.

Mr. SPROULE. What is the explanation of this ?

Hon. CHAS. HYMAN (Acting Minister of Public Works). This is the usual amount, and is used for public buildings throughout the Dominion.

Mr. EARLE. Was the $8,000 voted last year all spent ?

Mr. HYMAN. The expenditure for the year 1902-3 was $5,000; last fiscal year, from 1st July 1903 to 1st March 1904, the expenditure was $6,054.

Public buildings—construction of armouries, $30,000.

Mr. SPROULE. What is this ?

Mr. HYMAN. This is an item that has been in the estimates for two years. The intention of this item is to provide for the smaller armouries outside of the cities and towns. Last fiscal year up to March, 1904, the expenditure has been $15,000 on different armouries constructed in such places as Baddeck, Sussex, Dundas, Kaslo, Revelstoke and so on.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER.

Mr. SPROULE. Are these constructed by contract after tenders publicly called for ?

Mr. HYMAN. They are all constructed by contract in the regular way after tenders being received.

Mr. SPROULE. How are tenders invited ?

Mr. HYMAN. Publicly. That is the case with every item in this vote.

Mr. SPROULE. Is the lowest tender accepted in every case ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes, so long as the tender is regular.

Experimental farms—new buildings and renewals, improvements, repairs, &c., in connection with existing buildings, fences, &c., $10,000.

Mr. HYMAN. This is the usual item.

Mr. SPROULE. What new buildings are to be constructed ?

Mr. HYMAN. Any new buildings constructed will be only small. This is principally for renewals, improvements and repairs. The amount spent under this head in 1902-3 was about $9,900.

Public works—chargeable to income—Ottawa public buildings, including repairs, ventilation, lighting and furniture, &c., $125,000.

Mr. SPROULE. Is this for buildings in Ottawa only ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes.

Mr. MONK. Is there anything in this vote to improve the ventilation of this chamber ?

Mr. HYMAN. We have endeavoured to improve the ventilation. If my hon. friend (Mr. Monk) will look at the windows, he will see that a large amount of money has been spent on them.

Mr. WILSON. How much was spent on this account last year ?

Mr. HYMAN. In 1902-3 the whole appropriation was expended.

Mr. SPROULE. In this same vote there is an item—'Ottawa public buildings, gas and electric light,' and so on. And this item is for repairs, ventilation, lighting, &c. The item of light seems to be covered in two or three places.

Mr. HYMAN. The difference between the items is this : The word 'lighting' in the item now under discussion is intended to cover material, as gas piping, new fixtures, and so on. The other item is for the actual gas or electric light.

Mr. INGRAM. I have a suggestion to make which I have never heard made in this House before, though I have been many years a member. Hon. members on both side at times bring their wives and families to Ottawa. But when the wives or daughters of members visit this building accommodation for their reception is not at all adequate. It is really a shame when you think of it, that our wives and daughters are asked to come to Ottawa and if a member is doing his duty in this chamber, his wife or his daughter must remain in the room they may have down town. It seems to me that some action should be taken towards providing proper accommodation for the wives and daughters of members of this House. Those members who are ministers of the Crown have their comfortable homes in Ottawa, but the rest of us are here at a distance from our homes. I think it high time that some action should be taken towards providing better accommodation. I hope that in making this plea for the wives and daughters of hon. members on both sides I shall not be alone.

Mr. HYMAN. I believe that accommodation of the character referred to by the hon. member (Mr. Ingram) should be provided in this building. I am only acting minister, but I will give the matter every consideration possible.

Mr. SPROULE. It is my experience of the library that with the present system of electric lighting it is very difficult to read a book printed in even moderately small type. You first have an electric light of 16 candle power, and then you lower it to 8 or 9 candle power by putting an opaque globe over it. I could understand it if these globes extracted certain rays that are irritating to the eye, but their only effect appears to be to reduce all the rays of light. So far as I am concerned, I cannot with any comfort read a book in the library at night time. Years ago when we had gas it was much better. There was the same trouble in the reading room, but that has been improved until the light is fairly good now. I cannot understand why you put those opaque globes over the light. It is on the same principle that some people cut great large windows in order to let the light in, and then they cover them with some kind of black cloth to keep the light out. I have heard many complaints about the light in the library, and I hope the defect will be remedied.

Mr. HYMAN. I am informed that this is the first complaint made with regard to the library lighting, but I will look into the matter and see that an improvement is made.

Public Works, rentals—Dominion public buildings, $64,000.

Mr. EARLE. Might I inquire what rents of public buildings you pay out of this vote?

Mr. HYMAN. This is to cover the rents paid by the Department of Public Works, but in a great many instances the Post Office and other departments pay their own rents.

Mr. EARLE. Under that system you cannot tell what departments these rents belong to.

Mr. HYMAN. I presume the only way to get at that would be to move for a return so that the several departments could send statements.

Mr. EARLE. I wish to call to the attention of the government a matter in regard to a public building which is not rented to a public building which is not rented to government to other parties. This building was formerly used as the Post Office in Victoria, but since the new post office has been built the old building is rented out by the government. As I understand it, this building is not subject to municipal taxation. The municipality looks upon it as rather unfair that the government should be in the real estate business in competition with private real estate owners, and not be subject to municipal taxation. The government does not use this old building any longer for government purposes and they have not offered it for sale but have rented it.

Mr. HYMAN. I understand that at the present time this building is rented.

Mr. EARLE. Yes, and the complaint of the municipality is that it is not subject to municipal taxation although it is not used for government purposes. If it were used for the purposes of the government of course it should not be taxed.

Mr. HYMAN. What is it used for ?

Mr. EARLE. It is used for storage and offices.

Mr. HYMAN. This is the first I have heard of the matter. I believe that the hon. gentleman (Mr. Earle) is perfectly right in his contention. If the Dominion government own a building and rent it in competition with the buildings of private owners, it is only fair and right that some one should pay the taxation. In the present instance, I presume that the leases are made, but I think it is only fair that when the opportunity arises it should be assessed for municipal taxation in the regular way.

Mr. WILSON. I think it would be well for the minister to read out a list of the rents paid for all the departments.

Mr. HYMAN. I would be glad to give the committee a list of the buildings rented that come under this item. The following is an estimate of what is required for 1904-5 :

Mr. WILSON. Did you say you rented a building in Picton for some purpose ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes ; for a custom-house, $175.

Mr. WILSON. I do not understand that ; it is not long since a new building was erected there.

Mr. HYMAN. That item, of course, will disappear as soon as the new building is occupied.

Mr. WILSON. Has it not been occupied for about two years ? The postmaster was a member of this House in the last parliament, and I am under the impression that he has had the appointment for three years, and that the building must have been finished two or three years ago.

Mr. HYMAN. Of course, the hon. gentleman will see that this is an estimate. It may be that the officers of the department made a mistake in including that $175. If the hon. gentleman will allow me, I will have it investigated.

Mr. MACLEAN. The minister might pay some attention to the fact that, as I am told, there are quite a number of properties owned by the Dominion in various portions of the country, and even in Ottawa, that have been rented on long leases to parties at very small rentals. I believe that here in Ottawa, while we are paying exorbitant rentals for buildings for the use of the public services, there is property owned by the Dominion, but rented to different persons at very small rentals. There should be an investigation and a change in policy in that respect.

Mr. HYMAN. Will the hon. gentleman give me any instance ?

Mr. MACLEAN. I believe there are some instances in Ottawa.

Mr. HYMAN. I could hardly look into the matter on that information.

Mr. MACLEAN. There are instances down on the Rideau canal ; I cannot give the exact buildings.

Mr. WILSON. There seems to be a very large amount for the office of the Railway Commission.

Mr. HYMAN. The item for the Railway Commission offices is $5,300.

Mr. WILSON. Is that the rent alone ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes.

Mr. WILSON. Where is it ?

Mr. HYMAN. On Queen street.

Mr. EARLE. Will they occupy the whole building ?

Mr. HYMAN. Except some portions of the building occupied by the custom-house since the fire.

Mr. EARLE. What rent is paid for that ?

Mr. HYMAN. This is the rent for the whole building, which is occupied by the Railway Commission, and part of which is temporarily occupied by the custom-house.

Mr. EARLE. I understood a rent was paid by the Customs Department ?

Mr. HYMAN. No, it is all the same rent ; it covers the whole building.

Mr. SPROULE. We had this question up last year, and some were of the opinion it would be the part of wisdom on the part of the government to endeavour to acquire land and put up public buildings, because the rent we are paying, in some instances, as far as I have any information on it, is very exorbitant. The minister told us last year that he would look into it and see if ground could not be secured somewhere in convenient places and buildings erected for the use of the government. Does the minister know whether anything was done in that direction, or has he any information to give to the House ?

Mr. HYMAN. I may say that so far as I am personally concerned, I entirely agree with the hon. member for East Grey, that the time has come when the question of all these rented buildings should be taken up, and accommodation provided by building for all the departmental offices. Of course, it is a very large question, and there is considerable difference of opinion as to where the site ought to be chosen. My hon. colleague, the Minister of Public Works, has given the matter a considerable amount of thought, but has not been able to reach any definite conclusion up to the present. Only a short time before he left the department he discussed the matter with me, and I hope that before very long some action will be taken.

Mr. SPROULE. We have had that hope expressed every year for the last three or four years. We are living in hope and likely to die in despair if no greater effort be made than has been made hitherto. The minister says it is a large question. No doubt it is, but large men are supposed to be capable of dealing with large questions. The hon. gentleman has at his command engineers and others, and there ought to be sufficient of them to make some kind of calculation as to what the aggregate amount is that we now pay in rents and how much capital that would represent, and then ascertain if it is not possible to secure land and erect buildings sufficient for the needs of the government which will cost a smaller sum than the capital of the rents we are now paying.

Mr. HYMAN. The aggregate is $64,000 a year rents which we are paying now.

Mr. SPROULE. In the city of Ottawa ?

Mr. HYMAN. No.

Mr. SPROULE. We are speaking of the city of Ottawa, which is the place we know more about. There may be places where it is cheaper to pay rent than to build, but in Ottawa rents are very high and rapidly increasing, and the government should ascertain whether we could not do better by buying land and erecting buildings.

Mr. HYMAN. The amount of rent paid in Ottawa is $43,096.

Mr. WILSON. I think the rent paid for the Railway Commission office was altogether too high. How many clerks are on the staff ? We are paying $5,000 a year rent, which is out of all proportion to the size of the commission and the staff it employs.

Mr. HYMAN. The hon. gentleman ought to take into consideration the size of the building and staff.

Mr. WILSON. Why do they want so much room ?

Mr. HYMAN. It is not only space to house the commission that is required, but there is also the public to be considered. The rent of the building is 51 cents per square foot for the space it occupies, which

I do not think extravagant. The floor space is 10,000 square feet.

Mr. WILSON. That is a very large amount to pay. The hon. gentleman says it is a very large building, but why should you rent more room than you require? If the building is occupied by other departments, he should say so. If you go to the Auditor General's office, you will find Mr. Hayter there in a room about as big as four of these desks, and he is doing an immense amount of work. You are providing very elaborate accommodation for this commission.

Mr. SPROULE. Does the minister consider 51 cents per foot cheap?

Mr. HYMAN. I consider it a fair rent.

Mr. SPROULE. Would he be surprised to learn that a building could be put up for about 30 cents a cubic foot? The Langevin block only cost 29 cents per cubic foot, and we are paying 51 cents a square foot in rent for this building.

Mr. WILSON. What is the number of the building on Queen street, so that we may go and see it?

Mr. HYMAN. It is near the Grand Union hotel, between Elgin and Metcalfe streets.

Mr. INGRAM. It is the building the customs are in.

Mr. EARLE. The building, a portion of which is occupied by the Militia Department and the other portion by the Woods Limited, is a still worse case. We are paying $11,000 a year rental for that building. Half of it is occupied by the Militia Department and half by the Woods Company. The amount paid by the government for rental would, at the rate they borrow money, represent a capital of $400,000.

Mr. HYMAN. The rental for that building is 48½ cents a square foot, which is somewhat less than the other.

Mr. SPROULE. Who are these buildings rented from?

Mr. HYMAN. There are two buildings rented from Mr. Woods. One is used for the Railway Commission and the other for Militia and Defence.

Mr. SPROULE. What other parties rent us buildings?

Mr. HYMAN. We rent a building from Bate & Company, on 12 Albert street, for the Railway Mail Service, at $600. There are the translators' offices rented from D. N. Ranger at $180. We rent the exhibition branch of the Agricultural Department from the Ottawa Investment Company at $1,000, on the corner of Metcalfe and Queen streets.

Mr. SPROULE. Are those all the buildings rented in Ottawa?

Mr. HYMAN. These are all the new buildings rented inside the year.

Mr. HYMAN.

Mr. SPROULE. I want to get the names of the parties from whom the buildings are rented and the amounts that are paid them.

Mr. HYMAN. The list is as follows:—

Rideau Hall, allowance for fuel and light, $8,000.

Mr. HYMAN. This is the usual allowance.

Mr. SPROULE. Does this cover the whole expenditure?

Mr. HYMAN. That is the total vote.

Ottawa public buildings—heating, including salaries of engineers, firemen and watchmen, $87,000.

Mr. HYMAN. This is the same vote as last year.

Mr. SPROULE. I take it that this includes coal. How is the coal bought ?

Mr. HYMAN. By public tender.

Mr. SPROULE. What price is paid ?

Mr. HYMAN. The prices paid last year were : Furnace coal, $6.90 ; egg coal, $6.94 ; stove coal, $6.90.

Ottawa public buildings—grounds, $10,000.

Mr. WILSON. There is an increase here of $2,000.

Mr. HYMAN. There are certain small increases in salaries, and besides, the department is paying more attention to the grounds. No more will be spent on this account than is necessary.

Mr. SPROULE. How are the grounds kept ?

Mr. HYMAN. There is a superintendent of the grounds and the men are hired under him.

Mr. WILSON. But what is the explanation of the $2,000 increase ?

Mr. HYMAN. Besides the reasons I have given, there is the fact that the expenditure has been overrunning the appropriation for some years past, and each vote has been required to pay something on account of the previous year. This is a small item but it has been $1,000 or $1,200 short at the end of the year.

Mr. WILSON. I suppose, then, the minister does not expect any overrunning in the coming year.

Mr. HYMAN. I hope not.

Ottawa public buildings—Major's Hill Park, $7,000.

Mr. WILSON. There is the same trouble here ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes, the same thing happened in this case. For the last two or three years the vote has hardly been sufficient for the purpose, and out of each year's vote we have had to pay for a month or two of the previous year.

Mr. SPROULE. Do these votes cover the whole expense of these grounds, or are we to be called on to vote another item in the supplementary estimates ?

Mr. HYMAN. For maintenance these are the total votes.

Mr. INGRAM. The summer house in Major's Hill park has been boarded up. What is the reason for that ?

Mr. HYMAN. That is the first that the officers of the department have heard of it. Mr. Ogilvie is the engineer in charge of the buildings and I will bring the fact mentioned by my hon. friend (Mr. Ingram) to his attention.

Ottawa public buildings—removal of snow, including Rideau Hall, $3,000.

Mr. WILSON. Why should Rideau Hall be included ? The vote for Rideau Hall has been increased by $5,000, and the snow cleaning is included in this item. Why is not that given separately ?

Mr HYMAN. It is one of these things that have gone from year to year in the Public Works Department ; the vote taken for the removal of snow includes both these buildings and Rideau Hall.

Mr. EARLE. I suppose there was an over-expenditure last year ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes, a large one.

Mr. WILSON. But this is an increase of $500 for the coming year.

Mr. HYMAN. Yes, we are expecting a hard winter.

Public Works—salaries of engineers, firemen, caretakers, &c., Dominion public buildings, $110,000.

Mr. HYMAN. The vote of $99,000 for last year is now increased to $110,000, the reason being that there are a number of new buildings that have come under the care of the department.

Public Works—heating Dominion public buildings, fuel, &c., $75,000.

Mr. WILSON. There is an increase of $15,000.

Mr. HYMAN. The hon. gentleman will remember that the price of coal went up very largely on account of the strike two years ago. The appropriation taken that year was not sufficient, and the consequence was that several items on this account had to be paid out of the appropriation for the year following. That is the reason this vote is larger.

Mr. SPROULE. This is for the ensuing year, and has nothing to do with that vote whatever.

Mr. HYMAN. The shortage of last year was paid out of last year's vote, and then this year we have a shortage that we have to pay out of this vote.

Mr. SPROULE. Why have you a shortage on account of the strike of two years ago ? You are contracting for the coming year. In what way can the strike of two years ago increase the price of fuel for the current year ?

Mr. HYMAN. Certain accounts which were unpaid for 1903-4 have to be paid out of this appropriation.

Mr. SPROULE. But you have supplementary estimates for that already, this is for the coming year 1904-5.

Mr. HYMAN. The hon. gentleman must remember that coal is not always delivered within the year it is contracted for. A certain amount may be delivered in June and July that goes into the next year. The accounts get mixed in that way.

Mr. SPROULE. That explanation could not apply to this vote, because this vote commences to run from the 30th of June of the current year. Whenever there is a shortage we always have a vote in the supplementaries to meet that shortage, but here we are providing for the future. I venture to say there is not a pound of coal bought out of this money, we have not voted the money yet.

Mr. HYMAN. Nevertheless the coal is being delivered as I have explained. I may say in addition, that in the supplementaries of this year we have to ask for an extra amount. The officials of the department tell me that we have to ask for a supplementary estimate for another year.

Mr. WILSON. This cannot possibly be intended for any shortage of last year because this is for the coming year.

Mr. HYMAN. There is an item in the supplementary estimates of the coming year to pay for the shortage of this year. This vote of $75,000 will cover the total expenditure of the present year. In the supplementaries there is an item of something like $28,000. Last year was an extremely cold year, we are not taking a vote in anticipation that next year will be as cold.

Mr. BLAIN. What was the total amount last year for coal in public buildings ?

Mr. HYMAN. $60,000 in the main estimates and $28,000 in the supplementaries.

Public Works—water, Dominion public buildings, $20,000.

Mr. HYMAN. There is quite a number of new buildings which are included in this item which largely accounts for the increase. The accounts coming in from the different places where these buildings are situated, come at different times in the year. Last year there was a small shortage of some $2,000 in this account.

Mr. GANONG. We have found accounts in two different departments for furnishing wine. Is this minister also furnishing wine?

Mr. HYMAN. I do not see anything in the estimates for it.

Public Works—electric and other power for running elevators, stamp cancelling machines, &c., Dominion public buildings, $8,000.

Mr. SPROULE. What do you pay per horse-power for electric power for running these machines ?

Mr. HYMAN. This item is spread all over Canada. I have the total amounts here, but I have not the separate item the hon. gentleman speaks of.

Mr. HYMAN.

Mr. SPROULE. I want to know what you pay in different places for your horse-power for this purpose.

Mr. HYMAN. I will have that information to-morrow.

Public Works—Yukon public buildings—repairs, fuel, lighting, water service and caretakers' salaries, $37,500.

Mr. SPROULE. This is the same amount as last year, though we have had the assurance over and over again that times will get better and this item will come down. We never seem to be able to make a reduction. We have been paying extravagant figures, as we understand values down here.

Mr. HYMAN. The department have an officer there supposed to be a very careful man, who closely scrutinizes these accounts, and the department has to depend on that officer. That is the explanation given to me.

Mr. SPROULE. I have looked over several accounts, and some parties out there have informed me that there was the greatest extravagance that I ever heard of.

In fact, it seemed to me that it could not be accounted for in any other way in the world except by the fact that an election was being run and that money had to be poured out like water so as to secure the government candidate's election. I have not heard a word about it from the hon. gentleman who represents the Yukon in this House since he came in. It goes to show that there was the greatest saturnalia of corruption or at least the most profligate expenditure that one could imagine, and that this has been the order of things out there with everything that the government has done. I am not saying that it goes to the same extent in connection with the use of this money, but when we get the particulars it always seems to me that we are paying a very high figure for everything we do out there, much more than private individuals pay and I cannot understand why that should be the case.

Mr. BLAIN. I would like to know if the hon. minister has at hand the different amounts to be appropriated for fuel, lighting, and the services of caretakers.

Mr. HYMAN. The estimate for 1904-5 prepared for this vote is as follows : Government House, one caretaker, one charwoman, one furnace man and one gardener $5,640, lighting $3,000, fuel $2,000, repairs $3,000, water and ice $600, improvement of the grounds $3,000. Dawson post office, one janitor, one night watchman and one charwoman, $5,640 ; lighting $3,000, fuel $2,500, repairs $3,000, scavenging $120, water and ice $200. Whitehorse post office, caretaker $1,400, fuel $1,000, repairs $2,000, water $150, scavenging $120, lighting $1,330, salary and living allowance of superintendent, contingencies, &c., $6,000. The total estimated amount required for 1904-5 is $43,700, of which we are asking for a vote for $37,500.

Mr. SPROULE. Do you ask $6,000 for the superintendent and his contingencies ?

Mr. EARLE. What is the gardener occupied at ?

Mr. HYMAN. I suppose he is occupied with the usual gardening occupation there. There is a certain amount of gardening to be done.

Mr. EARLE. I see that there is a large amount for improvement of the grounds.

Mr. HYMAN. There is an amount for the improvement of the grounds.

Mr. EARLE. I would like to ask the hon. minister if all public buildings in the Yukon are the property of the Dominion or if any of them are rented ?

Mr. HYMAN. As far as I know I think that all the buildings we occupy are the property of the Dominion. There are no rents.

Mr. WILSON. It seems to me that $6,000 for the salary and contingencies of the superintendent is a very large amount. I do not see why it should be so much.

Mr. HYMAN. The salary paid to the caretaker is $3,000.

Mr. WILSON. What are his living expenses and contingencies ?

Mr. HYMAN. Of course the balance of the amount is made up of the contingencies in connection with his office. There are telegrams and things of that kind in connection with his office. This gentleman who represents the Department of Public Works in the Yukon has a considerable number of duties to perform.

Mr. WILSON. Perhaps the hon. gentleman would give the name of the gentleman, how much he is allowed for living expenses, how much for travelling expenses, and how much for contingencies ?

Mr. HYMAN. Mr. Bertrand is his name. There is no living allowance ; $3,000 is his salary without any living allowance.

Mr. WILSON. Tell us what he spent for travelling expenses and for contingencies ?

Mr. HYMAN. I shall be very glad to bring down the details of this item if the hon. gentleman will allow it to pass.

Mr. WILSON. Well, bring them down to-morrow.

Mr. SPROULE. If he is the caretaker of a public building, how could he have any travelling expenses ?

Mr. HYMAN. He has charge of the public buildings at Dawson and at Whitehorse as well. He is the representative of the department in the Yukon having charge of all government property there.

Mr. WILSON. What do you call his office ?

Mr. HYMAN. He is superintendent of Public Works in the Yukon.

Mr. BLAIN. Is the word 'caretaker' as set out in this item correct ?

Mr. HYMAN. He is not the caretaker. He is the superintendent, this item is for the salary and contingencies of the representative of the Department of Public Works in the Yukon, having charge of all government property in the Yukon.

Mr. EARLE. And of public works as well ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes, generally speaking, he is the representative of the department.

Mr. EARLE. Similar to the agent of the Department of Public Works in the provinces ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes.

Mr. EARLE. Is there a caretaker as well ?

Mr. HYMAN. There will be a caretaker of each of the buildings, of course, but he will only be the caretaker of the building.

Harbours and rivers, Nova Scotia—Abram's river—wharf, $1,000.

Mr. EARLE. There was $1,000 voted last year and apparently not spent.

Mr. HYMAN. This is a revote.

Mr. EARLE. What is the object of putting it in year after year and not spending it ? Is it in consequence of an anticipated election this year ?

Mr. HYMAN. No, I do not think that is the intention at all.

Mr. EARLE. It looks so.

Mr. HYMAN. I cannot help how it looks.

Mr. EARLE. Explain why it is.

Mr. HYMAN. The hon. gentleman will possibly remember that last year the session was kept on until some time in October when it was almost impossible to get on with public works.

Mr. EARLE. You could have expended $1,000 by the first of June.

Mr. HYMAN. There was a very large number of public works.

Mr. KAULBACH. Which county is this in ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yarmouth.

Harbours and rivers, Nova Scotia—Bailey's Brook—breakwater wharf, $1,000.

Mr. KAULBACH. Which county is that in ?

Mr. HYMAN. Pictou.

Mr. EARLE. Does this complete the work ?

Mr. HYMAN. This is a revote of last year's amount.

Mr. EARLE. It was $3,000 last year.

Mr. HYMAN. $1,000 is a revote.

Mr. EARLE. Does that complete it ?

Mr. HYMAN. That is the estimated amount required to complete.

Mr. COCHRANE. That is a kind of evasive answer.

Mr. HYMAN. It is not completed yet.

Mr. EARLE. Your officers ought to be able to give you the information.

Mr. HYMAN. Yes ; the officials of the department inform me that it will.

Harbours and rivers, Nova Scotia—Bayfield, harbour works, $4,300.

Mr. BLAIN. How much has been expended on this up to date ?

Mr. HYMAN. The estimate was $6,850, and there was expended to the 30th of June last $3,350.

Mr. BLAIN. Is the work done by contract ?

Mr. HYMAN. By day labour.

Mr. BLAIN. Why not by contract ?

Mr. HYMAN. In many cases it is impossible to do it by contract ; the officers of the department report to the minister that the work would be done more expeditiously and cheaply by day labour.

Mr. COCHRANE. Was the material obtained by contract ?

Mr. HYMAN. It would hardly pay to advertise for these small supplies. The material was purchased at the very lowest price.

Harbours and rivers, Nova Scotia—Baxter's harbour, $2,000.

Mr. KAULBACH. Where is this ?

Mr. HYMAN. King's county.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. How does it happen that no money was expended last year ?

Mr. HYMAN. Owing to the lateness of the session, it was impossible to get some of these works under way.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. That is not a satisfactory reason, because an interim Supply Bill was taken as early as August for one-fifth of these amounts, and it was done for the express purpose of preventing excuses of this kind.

Mr. EARLE. In the previous work you had no difficulty in expending $3,000.

Mr. KAULBACH.

Mr. HYMAN. That work had been started, and the officers of the department tell me that it was impossible to commence this work.

Mr. LENNOX. If the session happens to be late, do the officials remain idle until prorogation, and then remain idle for the balance of the year ?

Mr. HYMAN. That does not follow ; the staff was very fully employed, but they were unable to start some of these works.

Mr. LENNOX. The same thing applies with reference to all these works, and if we had the same staff as the year before, they must have remained idle.

Harbours and rivers—Big harbour (Port Bevis), wharf, $3,700.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The same observation would apply to all these votes, that very little money was expended on the vote of last year. In the case of Big Pond, Big Harbour, Breton Cove, Bridgewater and most of the others, substantially no money has been expended. Either these works were premature last year, or else there has not been a great deal of energy displayed in prosecuting them.

Mr. EARLE. I presume the demand for these improvements was very slight.

Mr. SPROULE. They were awaiting the elections.

Mr. HYMAN. The acting chief engineer informs me that everything possible was done to get the work under contract ; but, of course, plans and specifications have to be prepared, in some instances titles acquired and, where necessary, tenders called for. There was no desire on the part of the department not to expedite these works.

Harbours and rivers—Big Pond—wharf, $8,200.

Mr. KAULBACH. In what county is this?

Mr. HYMAN. Cape Breton.

Harbours and rivers, Nova Scotia—Breton Cove—boat landing, $4,600.

Mr. KAULBACH. In what county ?

Mr. HYMAN. Victoria.

Mr. COCHRANE. What do you mean by 'boat landing' ?

Mr. WM. ROSS. The shore is exposed there, and this wharf has to be built so as to afford shelter for boats.

Mr. HYMAN. It might be called a 'wharfette.'

Mr. COCHRANE. You might call it anything.

Mr. EARLE. Is it used by the public ?

Mr. WM. ROSS. Yes. Steamers go there three times a week, and the passengers have to be landed in boats now.

Mr. BLAIN. What is the explanation of this large increase in the vote for Big Pond ?

Mr. HYMAN. This is simply to complete the works contracted for.

Mr. COCHRANE. Why did not the contract provide for its completion ?

Mr. HYMAN. The contract is $7,720.

Bridgewater—dredging, $5,000.

Mr. EARLE. Is the dredging under your department now ?

Mr. HYMAN. The general dredging, except the dredging of the St. Lawrence channel, is under the department, all the dredging that has ever been under the Department of Public Works except the ship channel.

Cow Bay run—breakwater to protect outlet of harbour, $2,000.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Why has no work been done on that ?

Mr. HYMAN. The vote last session was $4,000, of which $2,000 was spent and $2,000 will be spent this year.

Mr. COCHRANE. Is that under a contract ?

Mr. HYMAN. No, it is being done under day labour.

Mr. COCHRANE. Why ?

Mr. HYMAN. In all these small votes the matter is entirely under the control of the engineers. The department is guided entirely by their advice. The resident engineers decide whether it is better to be done by contract or by day labour. In this case the report to the department was that there would be less delay in the execution of the work by day labour.

Mr. COCHRANE. I can understand where there are improvements or repairs to a wharf that it might be better to do it by day labour, but where there is a new work, as I think this was, I cannot see why it should be better or more economically performed by day labour. We all know that in connection with such works that system is not cheaper.

Digby pier, renewals and repairs, $1,500.

Mr. BLAIN. How much has been expended on that.

Mr. HYMAN. The expenditure to July 30, was $513.15.

Mr. LENNOX. I would like to have that item stand. The hon. member for East Simcoe is not here and he wants to speak on that.

Mr. FIELDING. This is only for repairs. There will be some other items.

Mr. BLAIN. When will these repairs be completed ?

Mr. HYMAN. These piers are timber piers. This amount is departmental. The officers of the department have asked the department to put this amount in the estimates for the maintenance of this particular work. This year they have asked for this amount, with timber piers which are exposed to storms there is always apt to be a certain amount spent each year in the way of departmental expenditure.

Mr. BLAIN. That is all very well so far as it goes but it does not go very far. It seems to me that where a wharf requires repairs the department should make an estimate of what the repairs would cost and that amount having been expended it seems to me that no further amount would be required for some years. Is there any revenue from this pier ?

Mr. COPP. I think the gross revenue is about $4,000 and the net revenue $2,300 or $2,400. It is one of the best paying of them all.

Mr. INGRAM. I suggest that this item should stand.

Mr. FIELDING. As these items are grouped together, allowing one of them to stand, holds back all the rest. If it is desired to have an opportunity of discussing it on some future day we can do so on some other item, but the holding of any one holds them all. However, if the hon. gentleman wishes we shall allow it to stand.

Fort Lawrence landing pier, $10,000.

Mr. BLAIN. We should have some information on this.

Mr. HYMAN. The work is under contract, the amount of the contract being $14,895, to which is added superintendence and contingencies bringing the estimated cost of the work to $16,400.

Mr. BLAIN. Who is the contractor, what is the date of the contract and when will it be completed ?

Mr. HYMAN. The contract is dated June 2, 1903, and the date at which the contractors agreed to complete is June 2, 1904.

Mr. BLAIN. Is it expected that it will be completed then ?

Mr. HYMAN. That date had passed and the work is not completed but they are at work.

Georgeville, N.S.—wharf, extension, $1,500.

Mr. BLAIN. When will that extension be through ? Are you going to extend a little every year or every four or five years ?

Mr. HYMAN. I am informed by the chief engineer that they expect to have the wharf completed during the present season.

Mr. EARLE. Will that make a complete job of it ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes.

Glace Bay, N.S.—harbour improvement, $25,000.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. There was considerable question about the title last year.

Mr. HYMAN. It is exactly in the same position now. The matter is before the department.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I should think it was behind the department. That question of title was to have been looked into.

Mr. HYMAN. I am not entirely familiar with the matter and have not had time to follow it up. It has not been finally dealt with.

Mr. COCHRANE. Will this be done by contract ?

Mr. HYMAN. I would not like to make a distinct promise. Regarding work of this kind the department must be governed by the advice of the engineer.

Mr. EARLE. On what do you base the estimate $25,000, if you have no report from your engineer ?

Mr. FIELDING. This is a case in which the government and the company who own the harbour propose to co-operate in making the repairs. The plan proposed is that the company should undertake to perform the work and make this a public harbour, with a schedule of wharfage rates to be approved by the government. Many years ago this was quite a shipping point, but when the small mines became amalgamated with the large mines in Cape Breton, the company ceased shipping coal in Glace Bay. Since that time a large settlement, running into 20,000 people, has grown up within a radius of two or three miles, and the people are very anxious that the harbour should be opened and utilized for the shipping of coal and also for the bringing in of produce by vessel from different parts of the Dominion.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I visited the locality since last session and saw the harbour. It is an artificial harbour and the ownership of the land is vested in a company. No doubt the work is very desirable, as there is a large community there and a great deal of business is done. We see rows of houses where only a few years ago there was a forest. The community is not only large but rapidly increasing and very progressive. The difficulty last year was as to the status of the harbour after the money of the country would be expended on it. The government were not able to state exactly what the arrangement would be in that regard, but it was the view of the Finance Minister that the harbour should be public so that all vessels would have the same right of entry as if it had been a natural harbour in the first instance instead of an artificial one, subject of course to the rights of private property in the wharfs or docks which might be constructed by private enterprise. Not only is the company interested, which proposes to bear part of the expense, but the people of the community are interested in giving to this harbour the status of public navigation.

Mr. FIELDING. The company have not been seeking this change at all. It is the people of the district who are most anxious to have their supplies brought by water direct instead of having them landed at Sydney or Louisburg and then transhipped by railway. The harbour will always be useful for the shipment of coal by vessels of small class. The difficulty has been in obtaining a title and nothing is finally decided. My idea was that if we could secure an arrangement with the company to have this harbour open to all, with a scale of wharfage rates fixed, subject to the approval of the Governor in Council, that would meet all the requirements of the public. It was an agreement of that character which commended itself to my judgment, and that is the form in which it is to be hoped the arrangement will be made.

Mr. BLAIN. That is the same explanation as was given last year. When does the hon. gentleman expect the arrangement to be completed ?

Mr. FIELDING. I am consistent.

Mr. BLAIN. Yes, but not very speedy in the discharge of a public duty. The government should be a little more active in the interests of the public. Do I understand that this harbour is owned by a coal company ?

Mr. FIELDING. Yes, at present.

Mr. BLAIN. Do the government purpose purchasing the property ?

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. It is not exactly a purchase but the company are to enter into an arrangement under which, in consideration of the expenditure of this public money, the harbour should be to all intents and purposes a public harbour, to which all vessels would have the right of entry, just as if the harbour had been a natural one instead of an artificial in the first instance. That was the policy suggested last year, and the policy that I myself advocated. I do not think that any money should be expended unless an arrangement of that kind is brought about.

Mr. HYMAN. It is anticipated that the company will agree to spend a sum of money besides this. There have been negotiations between the company and the government, in fact they have been almost continuous.

I am almost sure we shall come to an arrangement.

Mr. BLAIN. What will the total cost be to both the government and the other side ?

Mr. HYMAN. It will depend on whether the estimates of the department are satisfactory to the company. This is really one of the matters under negotiation between the company and the department at the present time—the amount of money the company shall be called upon to spend before the department enter upon an agreement.

Mr. BLAIN. What is the estimated cost of the work ?

Mr. HYMAN. Something over $50,000.

Mr. SPROULE. These items are nearly all in the same category—in nearly every instance the money is a revote. Now, either the needs of the country demanded that these expenditures should be made, or they did not. If the expenditure was necessary, and the money was voted, it ought to have been spent ; if the expenditure is not necessary, the vote should never have been asked for, because money voted and held in this way can be used for only one purpose, and that is electioneering. I have no doubt that many of the items we voted last year were voted in view of a probable election. But it happened that the election was not held. So, we have none of the money spent. I would like to hear the Minister of Trade and Commerce (Sir Richard Cartwright) in this case do what he has done many a time in this Houes—direct the thunderbolts of his eloquence against this voting of money which was not intended to be spent, but only to be held out as a temptation to corrupt the people. The minister, in explaining these items, gives just about the same explanation as he gave last year—or, in some cases the year before, for some of these votes are re-voted for the second or third time. It reminds one of the story of the lady of uncertain years, who was asked by the census officer her age. And when he came back some years after, this same lady gave her age at exactly the same figure. When he remonstrated, she answered, 'I want you to understand, sir, that I am not the kind of girl that would tell one story one year and a different story another year.' That seems to be the principle upon which the Minister of Finance and the Minister of Public Works go. If we turn up 'Hansard' we find that, concerning these works, they told almost the same story in almost the same words last year and the year before.

Green Cove—boat harbour, $600.

Mr. KAULBACH. Which county is this in ?

Mr. FIELDING. Victoria.

Mr. WM. ROSS (Victoria). This work is completed.

Hall's harbour—improvements, $2,500.

Mr. KAULBACH. Which county ?

Mr. FIELDING. King's county.

Iona—extension of wharf, $12,000.

Mr. HYMAN. This work is under contract for $10,230. Adding the usual amount for superintendence and contingencies, we get a total of about $12,000 the amount of the vote.

Mr. EARLE. If you had the estimate of the engineer, how was it you asked only $5,000 last year ?

Mr. HYMAN. When a department asks for a vote of $5,000, that does not necesarily mean that that amount will complete the work for which it was voted. The sum of $5,000 was asked for because it was thought that that was all that could be spent in that season.

Indian Harbour—wharf, $12,000.

Mr. KAULBACH. Which county ?

Mr. FIELDING. Halifax.

Island Point—repairs to wharf, $800.

Mr. FIELDING. This is in Victoria county.

Janvrin's Island—wharf, $800.

Mr. FIELDING. In Richmond county.

L'Ardoise—extension of breakwater up to shore, $14,000.

Mr. KAULBACH. Is that under contract?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes.

Mr. KAULBACH. What is the amount ?

Mr. HYMAN. $24,820.

Mr. KAULBACH. When will it be completed ?

Mr. HYMAN. The contract calls for the completion by the end of the present calendar year.

Larry's river—breakwater, $2,000.

Mr. FIELDING. This is in Guysborough.

Mr. LENNOX. I noticed that last year $14,250 was voted—almost the whole amount. Is this vote necessary because the estimate is exceeded.

Mr. HYMAN. The contract for this work is $15,840. Allowing for contingencies and so on, and you have about the total amount voted for this work.

Mr. LENNOX. One would suppose that, if there was an estimate made of the cost of the work, instead of voting $14,250, and leaving $2,000 to be voted this year, the hon. minister would have asked the whole amount.

Mr. HYMAN. As I explained in the other case, that was the amount that could be spent during that year.

Mr. LENNOX. But, when the amount is so near the total, one would expect the whole sum to be voted. As a matter of fact what was the estimate ?

Mr. HYMAN. It was under contract last year.

Mr. LENNOX. Was the contract let before the vote of last year ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes, it was let on 22nd of November, 1902.

Lingan—beach protection, $1,000.

Mr. HYMAN. In Cape Breton county.

Livingston's Cove—repairs to breakwater, $2,200.

Mr. KAULBACH. Which county is that in ?

Mr. HYMAN. Antigonish.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Does that complete the work ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes.

McNair's Cove breakwater—extension, $5,000.

Mr. FIELDING. In Antigonish county.

Main à Dieu breakwater—extension, $5,000 ; harbour, $6,500.

Mr. FIELDING. In Cape Breton county.

Malignant Cove—close piling ends and sides of channel piers with creosoted piles, $2,800.

Mr. KAULBACH. Where is that ?

Mr. HYMAN. In Antigonish county.

Margaretsville—general repairs to harbour works and extension of eastern breakwater, $2,000.

Mr. FIELDING. In Annapolis county.

Meteghan Cove—restoration of breakwater, $2,000.

Mr. FIELDING. In Digby county.

Melbourne wharf, $900.

Mr. FIELDING. In Yarmouth county.

Middle River—shear dam, $1,000.

Mr. HYMAN. In Victoria county.

Neil's Harbour—breakwater, $1,000.

Mr. FIELDING. In Victoria county.

Mr. BLAIN. I suppose at the close the minister will give us a summary of these counties, showing where each work is situated.

Mr. HYMAN. I think the hon. member for Lunenburg will be able to give that.

Mr. EARLE. At the same time he might supply us with a map of Nova Scotia, so that we might see if there are any of these coves that have not been supplied with a breakwater.

New Campbellton—ballast wharf in Kelly's Cove, $12,000.

Mr. FIELDING. In Victoria county.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Is that work under contract ?

Mr. HYMAN. No ; there is some question about the site, and until that is settled the work will not be put under contract.

North Gut, St. Ann's—wharf at Morrison's Point, $2,000.

Mr. FIELDING. In Victoria county.

Ogden's Pond—to complete channel protection works, $500.

Mr. FIELDING. In Guysborough county.

Pembroke—breakwater, $8,000.

Mr. FIELDING. In Hants county.

Mr. HYMAN. That is under contract, dated 28th March, 1904. We expect it will be completed in one year.

Mr. BLAIN. A few minutes ago the minister read a contract which called for completion more than a year ago.

Mr. HYMAN. That was the exception rather than the rule.

Pickett's Pier—reconstruction of, $3,000.

Mr. FIELDING. In King's county.

Pleasant Bay—wharf, $6,700.

Mr. FIELDING. In Inverness county.

Port Au Pique—wharf, $2,000.

Mr. FIELDING. In Colchester county.

Port Hastings—wharf, $4,000.

Mr. FIELDING. In Inverness county.

Port Hawkesbury—$10,000.

Mr. HYMAN. This work is under contract, and will be completed at the end of this season. It was to have been completed on the 11th September, 1903.

Mr. BLAIN. What is the explanation of the delay ?

Mr. WM. ROSS (Victoria). In getting the creosoted pine from Virginia.

Mr. McLENNAN. The work is in my county. The delay has arisen from the fact that the ruins of an old bridge and an old wharf were discovered quite a distance out in the Strait of Canso. These had to be removed by divers, which took a considerable length of time longer than the contractor expected ; in fact, he did not expect to meet such difficulties at all. The consequence was that the work took a great deal more time than was stipulated for.

Mr. BLAIN. Since the contractor has met with these difficulties, will he complete the contract for the amount mentioned in the contract ?

Mr. HYMAN. There was a contract made for the removal of the crib-work and ballast my hon. friend speaks of for $2,900.

Mr. BLAIN. Was that contract made after the original contract was made ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes.

Mr. BLAIN. The hon. gentleman representing the county says that was to be included in the original contract.

Mr. McLENNAN. Not at all ; the hon. gentleman misunderstood me.

Mr. BLAIN. I understand that the contractor met with these unforeseen difficulties. I suppose he was not looking for these difficulties. The fact of the new contract being made seems rather a peculiar way of doing business. Perhaps the hon. minister will give us an explanation on that point. I understand that after the original contract was let some difficulties were found that were not expected and a further contract was let.

Mr. HYMAN. That practically is the explanation. When the contract was let, there were some changes made in the work. It was found necessary to remove this old crib-work and ballast and a contract was made for the removal at $2,900.

Mr. BLAIN. Who was the contractor under the second contract ?

Mr. HYMAN. A. W. Girouard.

Mr. BLAIN. Were there two separate contractors ?

Mr. HYMAN. Not two separate contractors but two separate contracts.

Mr. BLAIN. Then this second contract was awarded to the same man ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes.

Mr. BLAIN. May I ask the hon. minister if the engineers who gave an estimate on this work did not see that it would be required ?

Mr. HYMAN. It was not foreseen at the time the original contract was let.

Mr. EARLE. Have you the report of the engineers at hand ?

Mr. HYMAN. No.

Mr. EARLE. There must be something very much at fault in regard to the engineering staff when we have so many errors of this kind occurring.

Mr. HYMAN. I do not think they occur on many occasions.

Mr. EARLE. This is one.

Mr. HYMAN. It was on the report of the chief engineer that this contract was let.

Port Hood harbour—closing of northern entrance with brush and stone work, $20,000.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I would like to ask the hon. minister the nature of the work that is being done there or which is to be done and whether or not there have been doubts expressed as to its fulfilling the service which it is designed to perform ?

Mr. HYMAN. The work that is being done is brush and stone work which is for the purpose of closing the northern entrance to the harbour. I am informed by the engineer that it is fulfilling the purpose for which it was designed. There are 600 feet already completed.

Mr. KAULBACH. This is between the island and the mainland ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Is that work being done by contract or by day labour ?

Mr. HYMAN. By day labour.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What is the estimated cost ?

Mr. HYMAN. The work that it is intended to complete now is supposed to be completed by this $20,000.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I have got some documents with me which give some information on the subject, but I shall take an opportunity on some other item of saying a few words in regard to it.

Mr. HYMAN. Yes, upon any other item.

Port Maitland—extension of buttress on seaward side, western breakwater, shorewards, $1,500.

Mr. KAULBACH. Which county ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yarmouth.

Prospect wharf, $600.

Mr. KAULBACH. Which county ?

Mr. HYMAN. Halifax.

Sandy Cove—breakwater, $2,000.

Mr. KAULBACH. Which county ?

Mr. HYMAN. Digby.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Is this to complete the work ?

Mr. HYMAN. This is to complete the work ?

Scott's Bay—extension of breakwater, &c., $1,000.

Mr. KAULBACH. Which county ?

Mr. HYMAN. King's.

Skinner's Cove—boat channel and protection works, $10,500.

Mr. KAULBACH. Which county ?

Mr. HYMAN. Pictou.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Is that to complete the work and is it under contract ?

Mr. HYMAN. This is supposed to complete the work. The contract has not been let.

Spry Bay—wharf, $1,500.

Mr. KAULBACH. Which county ?

Mr. HYMAN. Halifax.

Summerville wharf—addition, $1,600.

Mr. KAULBACH. Which county ?

Mr. HYMAN. Hants.

Sydney quarantine station—extension and repairs to wharf, $1,500.

Mr. HYMAN. Cape Breton county.

Tenecape—breakwater, $7,500.

Mr. HYMAN. Under contract.

Mr. KAULBACH. Which county ?

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Hants county. Does this complete the work ?

Mr. HYMAN. No, not quite. This amount will be spent during the year and it will require $1,700 to complete.

Victoria Beach—wharf, $25,000.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. A word or two in regard to that would be in order. This is in Annapolis county. Has anything been done there ?

Mr. HYMAN. The contract was let for this work on the 15th June of the present year.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Has the work been commenced ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes, the work has actually been commenced.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Will this complete the work ?

Mr. HYMAN. There is a further sum in the supplementaries. The work will cost $93,890.

Mr. EARLE. What accommodation will it afford ?

Mr. WADE. This will afford accommodation for a great deal of shipping, but there is a railway being constructed down to this point and there will be more than one line of steamers running from this point to different places. In addition this pier will afford protection to the whole of the Annapolis basin and will be a protection for the shipping that comes into that basin.

Wedge Point—extension of breakwater, $3,000.

Mr. KAULBACH. Where is Wedge Point ?

Mr. HYMAN. In Yarmouth county.

West Bay (south side)—wharf, $2,000.

Mr. KAULBACH. Which county ?

Mr. HYMAN. Richmond.

White's Cove—improvements to breakwater, $1,000.

Mr. KAULBACH. Which county ?

Mr. HYMAN. Digby.

Mr. BLAIN. Does that complete Nova Scotia ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes.

Mr. BLAIN. May I ask the hon. minister to be good enough to give us a summary of these counties, the amount expended in each and the total amount voted for the province of Nova Scotia ?

Mr. HYMAN. If I understand the hon. gentleman he is asking for a statement of the votes as they appear in the estimates for each county. I shall be very glad to bring that statement down ; that is a statement of the votes in these estimates for each county.

Mr. BLAIN. For each county.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I have avoided asking individual questions in order to save time. I would like also a statement in all cases in which the amount now asked for will not complete the work and a further statement of the amount that will be required to complete the work in such cases.

Mr. HYMAN. Although the return will require some time to prepare I shall be very glad to bring it down.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Had I asked the question on each item I would expect the hon. gentleman to be able to answer it. It would save time to do it the way I suggest.

Mr. HYMAN. As I understand, the hon. gentleman (Mr. R. L. Borden) desires a statement as to what each of those Nova Scotia items will take to complete, but where the vote completes the work you do not want a statement.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I will understand that the items not mentioned will require no further vote.

Mr. HYMAN. You want it with reference to Nova Scotia.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. If it is not putting too much work on the officers of the department it would save a great deal of time if you would give that information with respect to all the other items.

Mr. HYMAN. Shall we now take up the Prince Edward Island estimates ?

Mr. TAYLOR. We have done a good deal of work to-night and there is no member from Prince Edward Island present, but there will be to-morrow morning.

Mr. HYMAN. The appropriations are so evenly divided and so just that I am sure there will be no criticism. I will be glad to leave one item on which any discussion may come up.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. It is suggested that perhaps we might go on with Ontario.

Mr. TAYLOR. Dr. Sproule has gone home with the idea that Ontario will not be reached.

Mr. HYMAN. Very well. I will move that the committee rise.

Some resolutions reported.

Mr. FIELDING moved the adjournment of the House.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What business will be taken up to-morrow ?

Mr. FIELDING. The Minister of Justice will proceed with the Bills which stand in his name, and then we will go into supply and continue with the Minister of Public Works.

Motion agreed to, and House adjourned at 11.40 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

WEDNESDAY, July 27th, 1904.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Eleven o'clock.

FIRST READING.

Bill (No. 161) respecting the Canadian Assessment Policy-holders in the Mutual Reserve Life Insurance Company.—Mr. Heyd.

DOMINION ELECTIONS ACT—AMENDMENT.

House in Committee on Bill (No. 148) to amend the Dominion Elections Act, 1900.—Mr. Fitzpatrick.

On section 1,

Hon. CHAS. FITZPATRICK Minister of Justice). This section is intended to amend section 24 of the Dominion Elections Act, 1900, in respect that in so far as the electoral district of Algoma is concerned, the returning officer has the power to fix a date beyond the date fixed for the nomination of candidates and the holding of elections in other countries, if he deems it prudent in his discretion. By the Redistribution Act of last session, Algoma was divided into east and west Algoma, and the effect of the present amendment will be that the returning officer will have power to do with respect to the two ridings of east and west Algoma what he had the power to do with respect to Algoma as it originally stood. It makes the law applicable to the constituency as subdivided. The same thing will apply to British Columbia. There the counties of Burrard, Yale, and Cariboo, have been divided into Comox-Atlin, Kootenay and Yale-Cariboo. The electoral divisions mentioned in the Act now practically take in the territory covered by the old divisions in British Columbia. That is the only change except that to the list of counties in Ontario in which the returning officer may extend the time for voting we add the district of Nipissing, which I am informed is geographically in the same position as Algoma. It is a county covering a great area of country, and some portions of it are unorganized, so that the same conditions that prevail in Algoma apply to Nipissing.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I regard the provisions of this section, as far as a number of these ridings are concerned, as absolutely unjustified. For example, in British Columbia, I have had time to get information about only one of these ridings, but I find that in the riding of Kootenay the provincial elections were held on the same day as in the rest of the province, without the slightest inconvenience, as I am informed. All portions of that riding are reached by rail or steamboat, and I am surprised that the Minister of Justice should present this measure to the House without giving some better reasons for postponing these elections than he has done. The mere fact that this has been done in the past is not of much consequence ; the question is what the conditions are at present. The country has not been standing still, so far as means of communication are concerned, during the last fifteen or twenty years, and in these districts there are better means of communication than there were before. So far as the two other ridings of British Columbia are concerned, I am not in a position to state their condition, but I shall require some good reasons to convince me that the elections should not be held there on the same day as in the rest of the province. It is not a sufficient reason to state that they are large districts. So far as Algoma and Nipissing in the province of Ontario are concerned, I believe that what I have stated with regard to one of the British Columbia districts is true of one of the Ontario districts —that the provincial election there is held on the same day as the general election.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Which of them ?

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I am informed that in the provincial elections the voting in Nipissing is held on the same day as in the other ridings. I am sure the Minister of Justice will regard that as a very cogent reason for carrying out the same policy in this Bill. I am not familiar with the riding of Algoma, but my hon. friend from East Simcoe (Mr. Bennett) will speak about that. He tells me that there are equally strong reasons why the election there should not be postponed. So far as the ridings in the province of Quebec are concerned, I would not presume to speak of them, not having a knowledge of the facts. The Minister of Justice, I am sure, will be good enough to make an explanation to the House with regard to these. I am not objecting to this proposal in any case where it is necessary. But I say that there should be very strong, in fact imperative, necessity before any election is postponed. The principle we have followed in this country for more than a quarter of a century is to have all the elections throughout the country held on the same day ; and only for the gravest reasons should that rule be departed from.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. So far as Quebec is concerned, I can speak with some degree of personal knowledge. In the Gaspé district there has been absolutely no change within twenty years so far as facilities of communication are concerned. They have not a single railway within the whole district. The facilities for communication in summer have been somewhat improved, but not to such an extent as to allow the elections to take place under the same condition as in other parts of the province. In Chicoutimi and Saguenay there has been an increase in the facilities of communication. There is a railway which reaches Lake St. John and extends down to the town of Chicoutimi. But it is a very large district and there are many outlying parishes which are in quite an exceptional position. Therefore, I think that the conditions existing in these two districts are such as to justify the action I ask the House to take with regard to them. As to Nipissing, I am personally responsible for having added that district to the number which are treated exceptionally. Looking at the map and taking into consideration the position, I came to the conclusion that the district was not accessible. And, so far as one can judge by looking at the map, it seems to me that this is one of the constituencies which is in an exceptional position. But I am entirely in the hands of the committee so far as Nipissing is concerned. As to the division of Algoma, I merely apply the old law with the verbal changes made necessary by reason of the fact that that territory has been subdivided into east and west Algoma. If there are reasons as to one riding why the old law should not be made applicable, I am quite willing to listen to any objection that may be stated. As to the province of British Columbia, I would ask members from that province to explain the conditions there.

Mr. BENNETT. I think it will be agreed that the two ridings of east and west Algoma were formerly the one riding of Algoma. Now, the minister will find upon inquiry, that the government thought it wise and proper to have the elections in the district of Algoma in 1900 on the same day as the general election.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The provincial election ?

Mr. BENNETT. No, the Dominion election. The local elections are also held on the same day as in other ridings of the province. Surely, if the election for the whole district as one riding could be held on the same day as the general election in 1900, there is no reason why, now that it is divided, a change should be made. That must appeal to the hon. minister's sense of right.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. My hon. friend (Mr. Bennett) I understand, speaks from his certain knowledge when he says that the election in 1900 in Algoma was held on the same day as the general election ?

Mr. BENNETT. I am very positive about that from something I recollect—I am confident I cannot be mistaken. If a returning officer could do the whole work for these two districts in 1900, and if one candidate could look after his interest for the whole district, surely, now that railway communication is improved and there is more accommodation in every way as well as a considerable addition to the number of settlers, the same course could be pursued in two districts with two returning officers and a double organization.

Mr. BLAIN. I desire to say a word or two respecting the electoral district of Nipissing. That district is described thus in the law :

> The territorial district of Nipissing, with the townships of Clara, Head and Maria, shall constitute the electoral district of Nipissing, and shall return one member.

The same territory constitutes exactly the ridings of east and west Nipissing for the local legislature. The elections for those ridings have always been held on the same day as the general election for the province of Ontario, and there has never been a complaint either in those districts or in any part of Ontario because the elections were so held. The Minister of Justice says that he is responsible for this change. I think it would be only fair for him to make inquiries about the district of Nipissing——

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I think I will drop it.

Mr. BLAIN. Do I understand the hon. minister to say he will drop Nipissing from this section ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Yes.

Mr. BENNETT. How about Algoma ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I took Algoma because I found it in the statutes we had before. The other statute could not be made applicable to the changed state of things and therefore I included both east and west Algoma in this Bill. If the hon. member for East Simcoe (Mr. Bennett) says that he is in a position, of his own knowledge, to inform the House that the election of 1900 in Algoma was held on the same day as the general election, of course I shall have to consider it.

Mr. BENNETT. I am positive that in 1896, the election in Algoma was held subsequent to the general election, and I am equally positive that in 1900 the election in Algoma was held on the same day as the general election.

Mr. BOYD. The Canadian Northern Railway has been constructed since the last election and runs directly through the western portion of the constituency, taking in Rainy River and all that territory, while the Canadian Pacific runs through the other portion. There is really no necessity for making an exception as to the date of holding the elections there.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I have a communication from a gentleman who is very familiar with that district, in which he says :

> In the old days, when it was the custom to hold the Algoma election later than the general election, there was good cause. It was impossible to give the notices required by law within the specified time. But now, it is different. The railway has opened it up and it is now just as easy to hold the election on the same day as the general election, as it is in any ordinary constituency in the east.

Mr. CLANCY. I would call the attention of the Minister of Justice to the fact that, even if there were any reason why the election in Algoma should be held on any other day than that of the general election, the difficulty would arise with regard to Manitoulin Island, which difficulty could only be at some seasons. If any reasons do exist for this provision, they can only apply to one riding and not to two.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. In which of the ridings is Manitoulin Island ?

Mr. CLANCY. In East Algoma.

Mr. GALLIHER. With regard to the division of the district of Yale-Cariboo, the leader of the opposition is in error when he says there is no occasion for having the general election at different dates. I may state to my hon. friend, and I know something about the geography of that country, as well as the facilities for travelling through it, that it is a physical impossibility to have the next general election at the same time in what will be the district of Kootenay. There are nine local ridings in which the returning officer will have to act in the Dominion election ; that is to say, he will have to do the actual work of nine returning officers in a provincial election.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Is the hon. gentleman talking about Kootenay or Yale-Cariboo ?

Mr. GALLIHER. I am talking about Kootenay for the moment. Now, in the election of 1900 we endeavoured as much as possible to give every voter an opportunity of voting, and we followed out the practice in the Dominion election of establishing polling places at the same points as in the provincial elections, so as if possible to give every person an opportunity of voting. I may state to my hon. friend that there are sections in that district that cannot be reached by rail or by steamer. For instance, you have all the Fire valley to travel through, you have other parts of the Trail district to travel through, and you have parts of the Lardo where you have to travel by teams, and any person who is acquainted with mountain roads must know that you cannot travel over them in the same space of time as you can country roads. Furthermore, a reference has been made to the election being held at the same time as the general election in what was the old riding of Yale-Cariboo. But the conditions then were absolutely different from what they are now. Then all the settlement was in the upper part of the district around Kamloops, and along the railway belt, and there was very little settlement in Kootenay. In fact, I believe that the few people who were residing in Kootenay then did not know there was an election until after it had taken place. That, I believe, is an actual fact. But this was in Mr. Mara's time, before I was elected. That country is settled up now. You must remember that you will have to travel probably 100 miles in one direction in order to deliver the ballot boxes. You cannot cross a range of mountains to reach another valley ; you have to retrace your steps to the central point, and take another direction. Any person who will take the trouble to study the physical features there must come to the conclusion that it is a physical impossibility for any returning officer, within the time between the nomination and election, as fixed by the Act, to do that work.

Mr. BLAIN. Why not have two returning officers for each district ?

Mr. GALLIHER. The Act provides for one for every district. The same remark applies to the Yale-Cariboo district, with equal force. There is no question, as I stated before, that it is a physical impossibility for the returning officer to do the work within the time.

Mr. MACPHERSON. I would like to put the facts of the case before the leader of the opposition, who seems inclined to take the stand that the Dominion elections will have to be held upon the same day. The district of Comox-Atlin is 1,500 miles in length, as the crow flies, from the polling subdivision which will be at Squamish to Surprise Lake. If the election is held in the winter time, you will require a dog train to take up the polling boxes ; if in the summer time, you will require canoes to take them up. My hon. friend from Yale-Cariboo (Mr. Galliher) has said it is a physical impossibility to hold an election in Kootenay in the time required by law, and it is equally impossible in Comox-Atlin. In fact it is more difficult in Comox-Atlin than in any other district, for the reason that the facilities for travelling are much more difficult. To illustrate by a case in point. On the occasion of the last election the returning officer went into the then district of Burrard—Comox-Atlin is a little larger than the district of Burrard—and he was obliged to travel five days with a dog team. He had first to travel on snowshoes to break a trail for the dog team to bring the ballot boxes in. It takes him almost fourteen days from the time he leaves. If he takes Nanaimo as the central point of Comox-Atlin, it would be a physical impossibility for him to get into Surprise Camp or to Atlin, as my hon. friend from Victoria (Mr. Earle) can substantiate, in less than fourteen days.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I move that the words 'West riding of Algoma and Nipissing' be dropped from this section.

Mr. BENNETT. Is that with the idea of having Eastern Algoma subsequently ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Yes.

Mr. BENNETT. Eastern Algoma is the most easily approachable, for the reason that a branch line of railway running along the north shore of the Georgian bay runs through a part of the riding, and then it is only a few miles further across to Manitoulin island. In the winter time you can shorten the distance by crossing on the ice. In summer there are numerous boats plying across to Manitoulin. There is a thorough system of telegraph lines all through that district, and a telephone system too, I am informed, on Manitoulin and on the north shore.

Amendment (Mr. Fitzpatrick) agreed to.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. As far as the riding of Kootenay is concerned, I am not much impressed by the argument of the hon. member for Yale-Cariboo (Mr. Galliher), who I regret to observe has disappeared within the last moment. It is beyond doubt that it comprises nine provincial electoral districts, and an election was held in every one of these nine districts at the recent provincial election. In one of them, Columbia, there was an election by acclamation, in the other eight there were contests. I am informed on the authority of a gentleman whom I know very well, and who is absolutely reliable, that there was no inconvenience whatever experienced in holding all these elections on the same day as the elections in the rest of the provinces. The hon. member for Yale-Cariboo dwells on the fact that this district comprises nine provincial electoral districts. The Minister of Justice will remember the riding of Alberta. That comprises eight or ten territorial electoral districts. We never found it necessary to postpone that election. We had the whole of the Northwest Territories divided into four electoral districts. We have never found it necessary to postpone the elections in these. Why should there be any necessity for postponing the elections in these districts in British Columbia ? The means of communication in British Columbia are just as good as they are in the Territories. The physical difficulties of crossing the mountains may be greater, but as far as the roads are concerned I do not think there is any great difference between the conditions in those two ridings of British Columbia and the conditions as they were in the Northwest Territories years ago when we held elections at the same time as in other ridings in the Dominion. It seems to me that there should be an irresistible case made out before the elections in any of these ridings should be postponed. Yale-Cariboo is large, Kootenay is large, but so also are the districts in the Northwest Territories ; so are also many districts in Ontario, where the elections are held on the same day as those in the rest of the Dominion. All through the provinces we have conditions of that kind. If you have an active returning officer, and if you empower him to use the means which may be at his disposal, I think there should be no difficulty of holding these elections on the same day as in the rest of the country. My hon. friend from Yale-Cariboo (Mr. Galliher) did not say very much about his own riding. He devoted his attention more particularly to Comox-Atlin and Kootenay.

Mr. GALLIHER. I spoke of Kootenay and I said that my remarks would apply equally well to Yale-Cariboo.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I have spoken of Kootenay, and my remarks will also apply to Yale-Cariboo. I do not see why the elections in these ridings should not be held on the same day as those in the rest of the country and the absence of any special argument in regard to his own riding should be the best reason for believing that the hon. gentleman does not entertain any very strong views upon the subject. I trust the hon. Minister of Justice will not place a blot upon the statute-book by postponing the elections in these ridings unless he is absolutely convinced that it is necessary.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The blot is there unfortunately and we are trying to remove it.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The blot is not there except under certain conditions, whereas, this is a blot under present conditions. May I ask whether the elections in the Chicoutimi and Saguenay district are postponed under the provincial law ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I think that if the elections take place in the summer time as far as Chicoutimi and Saguenay are concerned the voting takes place on the same day. It has taken place on the same day. But if in the winter time I imagine, if there is any justice to be done to the electors, it would be physically impossible to have the election held on the same day as elsewhere, because you have to go all over the riding in sleighs.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. How is it in provincial elections ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. It is the same as in Dominion elections.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Are they postponed in these three ridings ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Yes. My hon. friend of course, understands the geographical conditions existing in Gaspé. Gaspé is at the extreme eastern end of the peninsula. It is absolutely inaccessible except in summer time by boat and in winter time by sleigh. As far as Chicoutimi and Saguenay are concerned my hon. friend will remember that the district of Chicoutimi and Saguenay takes in the Lake St. John region, the Saguenay river and the whole north shore of the St. Lawrence.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I am quite ready to accept the assurance of my hon. friend as to that, but as far as the east riding of Algoma is concerned and as far as these British Columbia constituencies are concerned, particularly Kootenay, I am very strongly of the opinion that they should not be pressed. I would even ask the hon. Minister of Justice to delay for twenty-four hours to make inquiry.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. There is no objection.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I think he would be satisfied that there is no real necessity for postponing the elections in at least two of them.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I would like at the same time to hear all that could be said in favor of the objection that is made to this proposal so that I may be in a position to have all the information obtainable on the subject. I would like to know all that can be said because I must confess that to a large extent I was guided in regard to the east riding of Algoma by what the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Clancy) said as to the difficulties of getting access to the island of Manitoulin.

Mr. CLARKE. When the distinction was made in respect of the holding of elections in Algoma there was no railway communication at all. This is one of those provisions that was allowed to remain upon the statute-book when it should have been removed. Algoma is just as accessible as many other districts in the province of Ontario. The Canadian Pacific Railway runs along the north shore of Lake Superior and there is no difficulty in getting to Manitoulin now.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. What about the autumn and spring ?

Mr. CLARKE. There is no trouble reaching the Manitoulin island during the period when navigation is opened. After navigation closes there is access from the north shore at Little Current and there is I believe abundant means of communication with eastern Algoma, just as there are with western Algoma. There is no trouble in reaching western Algoma.

Mr. SPROULE. In eastern Algoma there are only a few weeks in the spring and fall during which there is any danger connected with reaching the island of Manitoulin ; that is in the spring when the ice is breaking up and in the fall when the water is freezing over. That usually takes about two or three weeks. The distance is very short and when the ice is formed there is no difficulty in getting to the island. In the spring of the year up to the time that the ice breaks up it is an easy matter to get to Manitoulin island and when on Manitoulin island the roads will be found to be as good as the ordinary roads of the country.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Two or three weeks in the spring and autumn might make a very considerable difference. If the elections were held in the spring or the autumn it would make a material difference. My hon. friends opposite must remember that this power is only discretionary with the returning officer. He is not under any obligation to postpone the election. This is only intended to confer upon him the power to exercise his discretion in view of the conditions existing at the time the election is held. Of course, the returning officer would necessarily be a man upon whom we could rely and who would not postpone the elections if there was not necessity for it.

Mr. CLANCY. I perhaps did not make myself clear to the hon. Minister of Justice. I did not urge that there was any reason why there should be a different period for holding the election in East Algoma but what I said was that if there were reasons, and there were at that time, they would apply to both east and west Algoma since they had been divided. The hon. gentleman knows that the Rainy River district which has been made into one riding and east and west Algoma were all contained in the district of Algoma formerly and that if the same reasons existed as formerly for holding the elections on a different day these two ridings of east and west Algoma would not be subject to them now. But, as my hon. friend from West Toronto (Mr. Clarke) points out there is no good reason that would apply to even East Algoma now as compared with any other riding in the province. The hon. Minister of Justice has stated that this power is discretionary with the returning officer but I want to point out to him, that, notwithstanding the fact that the elections in 1900 were held on the 7th November, at a time when Algoma was perfectly accessible, as much so as in June, the election there was held on a different date. Therefore, the returning officer takes the law as mandatory rather than being a merely discretionary power placed in his hands.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. In Chicoutimi and Saguenay the elections were held on the same day in 1900 as in other districts, because they were practically held in the summer time.

Mr. BENNETT. I was in error in saying that in 1900 the election in Agloma was held on the 7th of November ; I find it was held a week subsequently. It would appear to me that the reasons for holding the election in East Algoma on the same day, are stronger than with regard to West Algoma.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. My only reason for insisting is because of the Manitoulin islands. Would my hon. friend direct his attention to that ?

Mr. BENNETT. The most remote part of the islands is, I think, Little Current, and that is a trifling distance from the main shore ; in fact you can see right across.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. In some places it is only 100 yards.

Mr. BENNETT. There are little islands in between and the water freezes over early in the fall and the ice remains late in spring, so that it is usual to have uninterrupted communication to every point. The town of Sault Ste. Marie is in East Algoma and the local elections were held in that district on the same day. The Manitoulin islands are one of the most accessible places in Ontario ; and I remember well that the first returns that came in last election were from these ridings.

Mr. GALLIHER. In view of what the leader of the opposition has further said in regard to Yale-Cariboo and the Kootenay districts, I wish to place the facts before the House. The Kootenay riding is curved out as a subdivision of Yale-Cariboo which I now have the honour to represent, and which after the next election I hope to continue to represent.

Mr. LOGAN. Hear, hear.

Mr. GALLIHER. I shall direct my remarks particularly to the Kootenay, and they will apply to the new division of Yale-Cariboo. I am informed that the leader of the opposition stated that in the nine ridings the provincial election was held on the same day. That is quite true, but the hon. gentleman must see that the one federal returning officer, in order to establish polling places and to give facilities to the electors to vote, would have to do the same amount of travelling as the nine separate returning officers did in the provincial elections.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Is it the practice in British Columbia that the returning officer must travel over the whole riding ?

Mr. GALLIHER. Yes.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. It is not the practice in my province. The returning officer sits in his office in the city of Halifax and makes arangements over the whole constituency, which has many miles of seacoast without any railway, and he never has had any difficulty.

Mr. GALLIHER. What about the distribution of the ballots between nomination and election.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. He sends them out by messengers to his deputy returning officers.

Mr. GALLIHER. I can only speak of what took place in the Yale-Cariboo election. There is no question, but that it is a physical impossibility for any one man to get over that district in the time unless you give him wings. If my hon. friend (Mr. R. L. Borden) knew the district as I do, he would realize that. The returning officer has to appoint his deputies, and swear them in and give his instructions to them personally, and he cannot do that as it can be done in other constituencies. Personally I would not object to having the election on the same date as the other elections, but I know it is a physical impossibility.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. When was the election held last time ?

Mr. GALLIHER. On the 6th of December, about a month after the general election. I am well acquainted with the district and with the means of egress and ingress, and I will be frank with my hon. friend. There are many mining camps where there are fifty or a hundred men who could not vote unless they had a polling place. It is neither fair nor just to ask them to travel from the camp and lose a whole day going to vote. They have an opportunity of voting in the local election, and they should not be deprived of it in the Dominion election. In the matter of settlement and in the matter of places to be reached to establish polling places, the conditions are entirely different from what they were ten years ago when every one knows that the population in the mining camps was very sparse. My hon. friend (Mr. Macpherson) can speak as to the Atlin district, but I know as regards Yale-Cariboo that it is simply a physical impossibility to cover that district in the time provided.

Mr. BROCK. It is most extraordinary that commerce has overcome the difficulties which are spoken of by gentlemen on the other side of the House. Commercial men have been going through the constituency of Yale-Cariboo regularly, and not carrying a bundle of papers either, but ten or fifteen heavy trunks.

Mr. GALLIHER. On a pullman car.

Mr. BROCK. The whole country is traversed by commerce and it is very hard to make a merchant believe that there is any physical impossibility in getting through that country. The fact of the matter is that we have post offices, telegraph offices, and telephone offices scattered pretty generously through that territory.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. If we could only vote by telegraph it would be most convenient.

Mr. BROCK. If the people want to vote they will have no difficulty in voting. The hon. gentleman from Yale-Cariboo (Mr. Galliher) has told us that one election was over before the people knew there was an election at all.

Mr. GALLIHER. I say so again.

Mr. BROCK. Commerce has shown you how to get through that country and how to get through it regularly. Even in Gaspé about which the Minister of Justice speaks so much, the conditions are wonderfully changed as compared with fifty or a hundred years ago.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. My hon. friend (Mr. Brock) has now got me on ground with which I am familiar. In what respect have the conditions changed ?

Mr. BROCK. Ask the Quebec merchant how he deals with that country now as compared with the conditions fifty years ago, and he will tell you that he has his commercial travellers all through the district, and that there are a multiplication of post offices there. Could the returning officer not send the deputy returning officers all the papers by mail, and inform them about the election ? The argument in favour of the principle of having all these elections on the one day, far outweighs any difficulties that might be presented on the other side, and the government should drop this Bill. There may be some injustice done, but that occurs in every act of administration, and the injustice that would be done by holding the elections on the same day is far less than the injustice of making these exceptions which really make it look as if you were providing certain openings for defeated candidates.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. That might have been the reason formerly, but we are trying to remedy it now.

Mr. BROCK. The remedy is in the hands of the government because they can fix the elections on any day they like, and they can give notice sufficiently far in advance to afford facilities for voters in these outlying districts. Give the notice a few days earlier, and all the elections can be held on the same day. So far as we on this side of the House are concerned, we are ready for the elections when they may come. But, in view of the failure of the hon. member (Mr. Galliher) to make out a case for his own constituency, I think the government should drop this Bill, and stand on the principle of uniformity. North of Lake Superior and the Georgian bay at one time we had no post offices, telegraph offices or railroads. This is all changed. You would be surprised to know that the people up there now read the daily papers. I hope the people out in Cariboo are becoming educated enough to read a weekly paper, at any rate. The hon. gentleman should supply them, and let them know when an election is coming on. But apart from that, the great question in this country is, when we shall have the elections; and the Prime Minister should name the day far enough ahead so that we can have them in the whole country on the same day.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. My hon. friend is evidently quite unaware of the difficulty which we have to deal with. My hon. friend must not imagine that by giving a year's notice of the elections we could help the difficulty we are now confronted with. The difficulty is this. There are certain things which have to be done after nomination day : the ballot boxes, the ballot papers, the electoral lists and the instructions have to be distributed. There are only eight days under the law between nomination day and polling day ; and the difficulty arises with respect to those electoral districts in which the physical conditions are such that it is impossible to make the distribution within that time. If my hon. friend's information with respect to Algoma is not more accurate than it is with respect to Gaspé, then I would not place on his information in this respect that reliance which I generally place on what he says in this House. So far as Gaspé is concerned, suppose the nomination takes place at Percé, at the extreme eastern limit of the peninsula, and it is necessary to send the ballot boxes up to Ste. Anne des Monts or Cap Chatte, I would like my hon. friend to tell me how, after the 1st of December, when navigation is closed, it will be possible to do it in eight days ?

Mr. BROCK. By notifying the men whom you appoint as returning officers in the different istricts to be at the nomination and take their ballot boxes home with them.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. If my hon. friend had them there, and provided them with relays of horses at every ten miles, they could not do it in eight days. That is a fact about which there is no doubt. In the first place, along two-thirds of the coast there are no roads, and you have to use dogs if you get along at all. On the north shore of the St. Lawrence, in Chicoutimi and Saguenay, you have to go from Tadousac, at the mouth of the Saguenay river, to Blanc Sablon, on the Labrador coast, and how are you going to do it in eight days? It is a physical impossibility.

Mr. BROCK. If you have a will you can do it.

Mr. SPROULE. There is no reason why the nomination should be held at the extreme limit of the constituency. The law says it shall be held as near the centre as possible, and three poll clerks may be appointed as well as one to distribute the ballot boxes and the papers. As a matter of fact, in the province of Ontario, the ballot boxes are usually held by the various municipalities, and are not required to be taken from one centre to another. The provincial ballot boxes are used.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. That explains many things. We are getting light now. If the ballot boxes are not under the control of the returning officers, but are distributed around, we had better look after them.

Mr. SPROULE. That has been the case for years. The ballot boxes in most cases are owned by the municipalities and are not in the possession of the returning officers. Where the municipality cannot furnish the ballot boxes, the returning officer is bound to furnish them. But the rule is that the same ballot boxes are used for provincial, Dominion and municipal elections.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I cannot say anything about what is done in Ontario, because I am not there; but subsection d of section 41 of the Act requires that 'the returning officer shall deliver to each deputy returning officer, two days at least before the polling day, a blank poll book, forms of oaths to be administered to voters, envelopes, sealing wax and a ballot box.'

Mr. SPROULE. Let me tell the hon. gentleman how he does it.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh, oh.

Mr. SPROULE. Is there anything laughable or absurd about it? The only thing absurd is the ignorance of the laugh. The election clerk gets the ballot boxes from the clerk of the municipality, and after they are used he returns them to the municipality. They are gathered up and distributed by the election clerks.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. That is very improper.

Mr. HOLMES. There is another point that has been overlooked by our hon. friends opposite, that is, that the ballot papers are not printed until after the official nomination; and, as a general rule, it takes two days to print the ballot papers before they can be given to the returning officer.

Mr. SPROULE. The hon. gentleman has had experience—I would not venture to explain why.

Mr. HENDERSON. In the larger districts the returning officer never attempts to distribute all the ballot boxes and papers himself. He delegates that power to others, which I think the law permits him to do. Either the election clerk or some other person is employed by the returning officer to make the distribution. In the outlying counties what is to hinder the returning officer employing half a dozen men, if necessary, to cover the whole ground? Where there is a will there is a way.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. There is no difficulty about his employing others if he chooses. His obligation is to deliver to each returning officer the ballots, the lists and the ballot boxes. When the distances are so great that after the ballots are printed he cannot do that within the eight days, what is going to be the result? If he cannot reach every polling division in the whole district within the eight days, is that not sufficient reason for postponing the election?

Why should any group of men be deprived of their right to vote? Is it not fair to say that if the conditions existing at the time the elections are held are such that any important group in the community may be deprived of the right to vote that the returning officer shall have power to postpone the election in order to give these men the right to vote, especially as this provision is restricted to two or three counties in the province? So far as Ontario is concerned the only district added is East Algoma, and the contention of my hon. friends opposite is that this provision is not necessary for that constituency. I have heard nothing on this side in support of the contention; nobody on this side seems to be interested in the question of whether the election be held on the same day or on a subsequent day. I shall take into consideration what my hon. friends opposite say, but I want to point out that it is not a case of whether all parts of one island are accessible, but whether all parts of the constituency are accessible. Suppose the elections are held in the autumn or spring there might be difficulty.

Mr. BENNETT. Manitoulin island is a very old settled district. Farmers have been living there for years and there is a splendid system of municipal organization. The island is almost connected with the main shore and there will be no difficulty in traversing it at any season of the year.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. If there is no difficulty, if the thing can all be done within the eight days, then I will have to consider the propriety of dropping the provision as to East Algoma as I did that with regard to the west riding. So far as Quebec is concerned, I know what I am talking about because I have been about the country and know it. All that is necessary is to take a map for instance of the county of Chicoutimi and Saguenay and look at the distance from Tadousac to Blanc Sablon. It must be 150 miles and there is a dog trail for most of the road.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I shall not dispute with my hon. friend about the province of Quebec; he knows more about it than I do, and I am willing to accept his assurance. In regard to Ontario I find, according to the statutes of 1887 the latest I was able to get in the library, that all the provincial elections took place on the same day, and I understand from Ontario members that the same thing is done under the statutes of 1897. If that is so I am sure the Minister of Justice would recognize that it is not necessary to have this extension.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. If that is so there is no reason for our making an exception.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. So far as Yale-Cariboo is concerned, let me say that if the mode of procedure that the hon. gentleman (Mr. Galliher) seems to think should be followed by returning officers were generally adopted about two-thirds of the constituencies in Canada would require to have the elections postponed. He seems to argue that the returning officer himself should go to every deputy returning officer and deliver the boxes and ballots and administer the oath. This is not done. It is not done in my own county, it could not be done in Halifax. If it was done, Halifax would require to be in the excepted list. We have 100 miles to the east with no railways, and 40 miles to the west with no railways, and it would be a physical impossibility for the returning officer to go over that county and visit every district between nomination and polling. The returning officer sends to some of these polling districts a messenger, and for many other districts he has the deputy come to Halifax and personally receive from him the ballot boxes and ballots. I see no reason why the same procedure should not be followed in the constituencies in British Columbia. How shall we say that any one of these is any more difficult to traverse than one of the great constituencies of the west before they were recently divided.

Mr. GALLIHER. I can say it because I speak from knowledge. I know the province and my hon. friend does not, I think, know as much about the Yale-Cariboo as I do. I do not think any man in the House does. I know the district and I know what I am talking about.

Mr. R. L BORDEN. I am not disposed to dispute that for a moment, although the argument the hon. gentleman used a moment ago would seem to indicate that he is not familiar with the mode of procedure in reference to ballot boxes. So far as the physical conditions of the district are concerned, I concede at once that he knows a great deal more than I do. It has been divided since the last election into two districts. How many times has it to be subdivided before the elections there can be held on the same date as the elections in the rest of the Dominion of Canada? How long is this to be kept up? I found very good travelling facilities in that country when I went through it, good steamboats and good railroad trains and I had no difficulty in making progress through the district at a fairly rapid rate. I do not think my hon. friend would be inclined to ask for delay on the ground that the district is in a very backward and uncivilized condition. I did not find it backward or uncivilized; I found it progressive and well equipped for travelling.

Mr. GALLIHER. I do not think I will dispute that.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. My hon. friend will not dispute that? Well, he practically abandons his case.

Mr. GALLIHER. Oh, no.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Because all we require is that there shall be a deputy returning officer, who by means of messengers or by requiring his deputy returning officer to come to him shall distribute his ballot boxes and ballots within the period between nomination day and election day. Why cannot the returning officer use exactly the same polling districts and polling places as those which were established in the recent provincial election? Ought there to be any difficulty about that? One would not suppose that if there were any real desire on the part of the returning officer to accomplish this within the time mentioned that he would have the slightest difficulty in doing so. My hon. friend is very confident about coming back. So far as he is personally concerned I would like to see him here, but perhaps not, from another standpoint.

Mr. GALLIHER. I do not think I was egotistical enough to speak in that way. I said I hoped that I would have the honour of being returned. I think a man may modestly say that he hopes he will come back to this House.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. If he is coming back we would like to have him back as early as possible and therefore to have the election as early as possible. Of course we will endeavour to console ourselves if he does not, hoping that we might see him occasionally, but if he is to come back we hope we may see him at the earliest possible moment, and therefore there is every reason from his own standpoint why we should have the election on the same day as they are held in other parts of Canada.

Mr. OSLER. Is not Yale-Cariboo the mining camp where they play poker for 150 votes ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Order, order.

Mr. GALLIHER. I have no doubt they can play poker in some of the mining camps in Yale-Cariboo.

Mr. BENNETT. The national game.

Mr. GALLIHER. Yes, the national game. I hope the leader of the opposition does not think that it is not purely from a desire to give to every person and to every part of that district, whether to the miners in the mining camps or to those along the direct line of railway and steamboat which my hon. friend travelled very comfortably, an opportunity to vote that I am taking the position I now take. I certainly want to give every man entitled to vote an opportunity of voting. I therefore want to have every facility granted to these men whether they be working as miners in a mining camp even although it be very remote as some of these camps are. There is no question about the fact that while we are civilized and advanced in British Columbia as far as means of travel are concerned, there are many mining camps in the mountains miles and miles away from these means of transportation, and I want to see these men have an opportunity to cast their vote whether they vote for me or against me. The vote is their own privilege and they have a right to vote for whoever they please. Now, it is all very well to say in general terms : We see no reason why this should not be done. Why the elections should not be held here at the same time as the other elections. Personally I have no interest in postponing it. In fact, if you wish to know my personal preference, I would rather face the fight on the day of the general election than later. But I am instructed, and I know, that it is a physical impossibility to have this election on the same day as the others. I have stated that two or three times already. I do not know how often this district must be subdivided to bring it down to the same position as other constituencies in regard to holding the elections, but I know that though it has been subdivided, it still covers a vast area. It has been said that there are constituencies of great area in the Northwest. That is true, but the conditions are altogether different. From any point in these constituencies in the Northwest you can strike off to any other point. But you cannot do that in a mountain district. You may travel fifty, a hundred or even two hundred miles in one direction to reach a certain point. From there, you cannot cut across the mountain range to a point that may be only twenty miles away, for there is no means of communication. The only thing you can do is to go back to the starting point and strike off at another angle. I do not know why we should have to repeat these things. They are facts, and facts that anyone knows who has travelled through the mining regions. Many points you can reach comfortably in a parlour car or in the cabin of a nice steamer, travel such as the leader of the opposition, like myself, has frequently indulged in up and down that country. But when you get away from the points reached by these means of communication, the travelling is very different indeed.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I would like to read to my hon. friend a statement that has been sent to me by a gentleman in that district. It differs from the statement of my hon. friend (Mr. Galliher). I do not know whether my information is under a misapprehension or not. Probably my hon. friend would say he is :

The Kootenay district according to Representation Act, 1903, section 2 of the British Columbia division of that Act, provides that the electoral district of Kootenay shall comprise the provincial electoral districts of Cranbrook, Columbia, Fernie, Kaslo, Nelson, Revelstoke, Rossland, Slocan and Ymir. As far as I can see, and all others here agree upon the point, there is no physical reason for postponing the election for this district to any later date than that of the general election. We had a general provincial election in 1903 for the same districts and the election was held in all these districts on the same day. No inconvenience whatever was experienced thereby, and, inasmuch as the Dominion elections will be upon the same lists and with the same polling places, there is absolutely no excuse for making the change. In the Columbia electoral district there was no poll held, inasmuch as the member was elected by acclamation. But an election took place in all the others. Each one of these districts is reached by rail or steamer. The means of communication are good, and in fact the returns were in from every point, with the possible exception of one or two small polls, on the night of the election.

If that is a correct statement of the facts, I do not think there is any adequate reason for postponing the election in this district.

Mr. GALLIHER. Who wrote that letter ?

Mr. BORDEN. It is not a confidential letter, and I do not think the gentleman who wrote it would have the slightest objection to my making known his name. It is from Mr. A. H. MacNeil, K. C., of Rossland, to whom I wrote for information.

Mr. GALLIHER. There is nothing there except what my hon. friend (Mr. Borden) has repeated. It is stated that every district is reached by rail or steamer. It is true that probably some portion of every district is reached by rail or steamer, but there are points in these districts that cannot be reached in that way. As I said, you have to go by team to the end of the settlement, and from one point you cannot strike across to another even though it is only ten or fifteen miles away, but must retract your steps and strike off at another angle.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Does my hon. friend agree that the returns from all these districts except one or two were in on the night of the election ?

Mr. GALLIHER. That is probably true. But my hon. friend (Mr. R. L. Borden) knows that returns can be sent by telephone or telegraph from places which could not be reached by driving except with great expenditure of time.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. But, if you have the means of communication by telephone or telegraph, cannot you bring in your deputy returning officer on the day of nomination and send him out with the ballot box ?

Mr. GALLIHER. Of course, you can reach a man by telephone or telegraph if those means of communication exist, but—

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I think my hon. friend (Mr. Galliher) is not very much in earnest.

Mr. GALLIHER. So far as I am personally concerned, I do not care to have the election postponed. But I am told that it is impossible to hold it on the day of the general election, and I know it is impossible.

Progress reported.

REPRESENTATION ACT 1903—AMENDMENT.

Bill (No. 149) to amend the Representation Act of 1903—Mr. Fitzpatrick—was read the second time and House went into committee thereon.

On section 2,

Mr. HAGGART. What is the effect of this ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. This is to correct a clerical error. When the Bill was prepared last session an Act of the Ontario legislature 1901 was overlooked. It was one of a series of Acts which are passed each year by the legislature of Ontario, entitled 'Acts to amend the Statute Laws.' They are amendments to various statutes and especially this Act in question has reference to the Ontario Territorial Divisions Act, chapter 3, of the Revised Statutes. The amendment consists in shifting the boundary between the provisional judicial districts of Algoma and Thunder Bay, twenty minutes westward from eighty-five degrees west longitude to eighty-five degrees, twenty minutes. The effect of that I cannot realize myself, but it was in order to make our description of that territorial division agree with the territorial division as described in the local statute.

Mr. CLANCY. It would be difficult to tell what the effect really is. The hon. gentleman has no doubt looked into it ; is he prepared to say if it affects the population ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Territorially it will make a very trifling difference, I could not say how much. Twenty minutes is not much.

Mr. CLANCY. It depends upon how fast the hon. gentleman travels.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I know nothing about it except that the gentleman who is responsible for it in my department, Mr. Fraser, drew my attention to the fact that we had overlooked this Ontario Act of 1901, and told me it was important to make the definition in our Representation Act agree with the territorial description given in the Ontario Act. My hon. friend can take my word for it that there is nothing serious in it.

Mr. SPROULE. It is assuming that this description is exactly the same as in the Provincial Act.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Yes.

Mr. SPROULE. I was going to suggest that as the government are getting out maps of each constituency it would be desirable if they would prepare a map of these constituencies so that we might examine them before the Bill is finally passed.

On section 1,

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Sections 7 and 8 of the Representation Act slipped into their present position where they are now, by mistake. Hon. gentlemen who may have a copy of the Act will see that in chapter 60 of the Act of last session, sections 7 and 8 form part of the beginning of the Act and therefore apply to all that comes after it ; that is to say, 7 and 8 will apply to all the schedules for all the provinces because they are at the beginning of the Act. Section 7 says :

> The limits of every electoral district bounded by a river extend to the middle of that river.
> 8. The nearness of an island or islet to an electoral district is measured by the relative distance between either side of the island or islet and the shore of the opposite electoral district.

These two sections are taken from the Quebec Act, Revised Statutes, Quebec, chapter 2, sections 67 and 68. The intention was to put these two sections at the head of the Quebec schedule so that they would apply exclusively to Quebec. There is no reason why they should apply to any other province because the electoral divisions of the other provinces are regulated upon different lines. But so far as Quebec is concerned the limits of the electoral district, where it is bounded by a river, extend out to the middle of the river, which is the boundary ; and when there are islands or islets in a river separating two electoral districts the island or islet is counted with the electoral district to which it is nearest. There is no reason why these sections should apply to all the provinces, and it may create confusion; there is every reason why it should apply to Quebec because it is part of our municipal organization.

On section 3,

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I propose to amend that so it shall read as follows:

(f.) For the purpose of defining the constitution and boundaries of the counties mentioned in paragraph (a) and sub-paragraphs 10, 11, 15 and 16 of paragraph (c), of subsection 3 of section 3 of the Representation Act, chapter 6, of the Revised Statutes, the said paragraph and sub-paragraphs respectively shall be read and construed as if the words 'Section 1 of' in each of these paragraphs were struck out.

My hon. friend will understand the meaning of this by examining the statutes of Canada of 1886.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. It would take a little while to work it out.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Here is the point. Perhaps my hon. friend will be better able to appreciate it after I have made my explanation. I do not intend to ask that the Bill shall go beyond the committee stage at this sitting. The Representation Act, 1886, chapter 6, of the Revised Statutes, section 3, defines the limits of each electoral district in the province of Quebec. In the province of Quebec the counties of Ottawa, &c.

As they were respectively constituted on the thirty-first of January, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-one, section one of chapter seventy-five, of the Consolidated Statutes for Lower Canada, shall each be an electoral district and shall each return one member.

That is to say that these divisions as constituted under section 1, of the old Revised Statutes of Lower Canada shall each return one member. Then they go on to describe other counties which they say are constituted as they were constituted under section 1 of the old statute. Speaking generally, therefore, all the provisions of the old statute are applicable to all the other counties except these and three or four others, for instance, Quebec county which is my own county as it was constituted on the 31st January, 1861, by section 1 of chapter 75 of the Consolidated statutes for Lower Canada. The same thing applies to Lotbinière, Bellechasse and Beauce.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I thought they had included all these counties in the first general statement.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. No, they included in the first general statement Ottawa, Pontiac, Hochelaga, Jacques Cartier, Laval, Vaudreuil, Soulanges, Laprairie, Chambly, Richelieu, Yamaska, Maskinongé, St. Maurice, Champlain, Montmorency, and others, only a certain number of them. Then they go on and distinguish. I would like to point out the difficulty that results from that. The old statute of Lower Canada, chapter 75, section 1 provides:

The counties, cities and towns hereinafter mentioned, shall be the subdivisions of Lower Canada upon which the representation of the people thereof in the legislature shall be based; and the said counties are those intended for all purposes in these Consolidated Statutes and in the Consolidated Statutes of Canada, except only where it is otherwise expressly provided, either in the said Consolidated Statutes or in some local or special Act remaining in force and applicable to the subject of the enactment, that is to say:

Then they go on to give a description of the different districts. Then section 2 of the statute provides that:

All augmentations or gores of parishes, townships or seigneuries, and all cities, towns, villages or reserves for the same, not specially mentioned in this Act, shall be considered as forming part of the county in which the principal part of such locality or in the immediate vicinity of which, such city, town, village or reserve is situate, unless it be otherwise ordered by some statute in force, for any purpose or purposes.

Then it goes on:

Wherever both banks of any river in Lower Canada are in any district or county, there the river itself is within such district or county:

2. Wherever one bank of any river is in one district or county and the opposite bank is in another, there the centre of the main channel of the river is the boundary between the two districts or counties, each of which extends to the centre of such main channel;

3. And wherever any river or portion of a river is in the county, it is also within the district of which such county forms part.

All these things are provided for in sections 2 and 3 particularly of the consolidated statutes of Quebec, chapter 75 and are applicable to all the counties except those that are constituted under section 1. The effect of the amendment is that in the province of Quebec, where we have only 65 members and where the number does not change, the counties shall be the same counties as were constituted under the Consolidated Statutes for Lower Canada by section 1, chapter 75.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. That results from the provision made in the statute that certain districts settled from time to time shall become part of the counties which they adjoin? That is exactly the idea. I see that you simply strike out section 1.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Yes. Sections 7 and 8 are not mentioned, because we constitute the counties under the old Consolidated Statutes for Lower Canada. In view of the fact that in our province we have only 65 constituencies and that they remain the same we retain the old division as we had it previous to confederation.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. This is really for the purpose of making the law as we understand it already ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. As we understand it now.

Section as amended agreed to.

On section 4,

Paragraph 5 of that part of the said schedule which deals with the province of New Brunswick is repealed, and the following paragraphs are substituted therefor :—

'5. The electoral district of Victoria shall, as heretofore, consist of the counties of Victoria and Madawaska, and shall return one member.

6. Each of the remaining counties of the province shall form an electoral district and shall return one member.'

Mr. FITZPATRICK. A mistake was made in the New Brunswick schedule, it having been overlooked that the old county of Victoria had been divided by a provincial Act into the two counties of Victoria and Madawaska and that these two counties have since that date formed the electoral district of Victoria, which is entitled to return one member. It will be seen that under the schedule as it now stands there would on account of this mistake appear to be 14 electoral districts in the province each entitled to return one member, whereas the province is only entitled to 13 members.

On section 5,

The said schedule is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following :—

'THE YUKON TERRITORY.

'The Yukon Territory shall form an electoral district, to be called the electoral district of Yukon, and shall return one member.'

Mr. FITZPATRICK. That was omitted.

Bill reported.

Mr. SPROULE. I understand that before the Bill is read the third time the hon. minister is to furnish a map of Algoma so as to ascertain whether the limits as described are correct or not.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Yes.

ARBITRATION WITH THE GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY.

Bill (No. 152) respecting an arbitration between His Majesty and the Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada (Mr. Fitzpatrick) read the second time and House went into committee thereon.

On section 1,

Mr. BARKER. What are the questions that will arise on this arbitration, and under what circumstances have the disputes arisen ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. In 1879 the government originally purchased that portion of the Grand Trunk Railway extending from Rivière Du Loup, 110 miles below Quebec, to a place called Hadlow on the shores of the St. Lawrence almost opposite the city of Quebec. The road extended at the south side of Lévis up to a point called Chaudière curve, and then came down again towards the city of Quebec on the south side of the St. Lawrence to Hadlow Cove. From Hadlow to a place called South Quebec, there is a piece of line that also belongs to the Grand Trunk Railway, but that piece between Hadlow and Quebec South remained the property of the Grand Trunk Railway. At a subsequent period it was decided to build a branch line extending from St. Charles on the line of the old Grand Trunk purchased in 1879, down to a place called Harlaka Junction, thence from Harlaka Junction on to the town of Lévis, and from the town of Lévis to a place called South Quebec. It will be borne in mind that there are two links there from South Quebec to Hadlow, one the property of the Grand Trunk, and the other from Hadlow to Chaudière Junction, the property of the government. By the original agreement the government granted to the Grand Trunk Railway Company, for the purpose of using its yard at South Quebec, running powers over that portion of the line extending from Hadlow to Chaudière curve, and on the other hand the Grand Trunk Railway gave to the government the right to use that portion of its line between South Quebec and Hadlow Cove. The government had running powers over the road from South Quebec to Hadlow and the Grand Trunk Railway had running powers from Hadlow up to Chaudière curve. After the St. Charles branch was built down to Point Lévis, then the importance of Harlaka Junction came in. Harlaka Junction is the point where the Quebec Central Railway intersects the Intercolonial Railway, and the Quebec Central, has running powers over the Intercolonial Railway from Harlaka Junction up to Lévis. There is considerable interchange of traffic from the Quebec Central Railway to the Intercolonial Railway. The Quebec Central Railway hand their traffic over at Lévis to the Intercolonial Railway, and the Intercolonial Railway takes the westbound traffic west. Under the original agreement running powers were conferred upon the Intercolonial Railway over this little piece of road belonging to the Grand Trunk Railway between South Quebec and Harlaka Junction, and the Grand Trunk Railway says : We gave you running powers over that, but we did not give it to you for the purpose of taking freight from the Quebec Central Railway ; you must hand that freight over to us at South Quebec and we will haul it west, but if you do not you will have to pay us for each car you receive from the Quebec Central that you haul over this little piece belonging to the Grand Trunk. They claim from $2 to $2.50 a car which they charge either to the consignee of the freight or to the Quebec Central. Our argument is that when that freight reaches Point Lévis it becomes Intercolonial Railway freight and we have a right to handle it and to get the tolls on it from the time it reaches our line at Lévis until it gets to its destination. We argue that the parties to the agreement of 1879, had in contemplation not only the freight of the Intercolonial Railway proper, but all freight that was gathered from intersecting lines until it reached the point of destination at Lévis. That is the difficulty with respect to the 1879 agreement. There is another trifling matter which arises out of the fact that they are making certain charges for handling our freight at South Quebec which we think are too high. Subsequently, in 1898, when the Drummond County Railway was acquired by the government, another agreement was made between the two companies with respect to the use of the Grand Trunk line from Ste. Rosalie up to St. Lambert Junction, and thence over the bridge into the Bonaventure depot. In return for that, the Grand Trunk were under obligation to hand over to the Intercolonial Railway certain freight that was intended for points eastward. We hold that the Grand Trunk have not carried out the conditions of their agreement in respect of the handing over of this freight at Ste. Rosalie, and as a result difficulties have arisen out of that agreement. All these matters have been referred to arbitration under the conditions of the original contract which provides for arbitration in case of dispute, and it is to carry out the terms of the original agreement that this arbitration was entered into. When the matter got before the arbitrators, we discovered that it would be important to get access to all the documents and all the papers on both sides and the arbitrators found that they were without power to grant the necessary orders for the discovery. It is for the purpose of getting these additional powers and authority to summons witnesses that this Bill is introduced. The arbitrators say that they have not got these powers, and it is at the suggestion of the arbitrators that this legislation is asked for.

At One o'clock, committee took recess.

Committee resumed at Three o'clock.

Mr. BARKER. I do not rise to oppose this clause of the Bill, but rather to express my regret that the Bill does not go much further and occupy a very much larger field. We have been entering into other agreements with the company referred to in the Bill, the Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada, with relation to matters of a somewhat similar nature to those that have led to the dispute which is now being arbitrated. It appears that for the last six years, under the contract of 1898, the Grand Trunk Railway Company, in the opinion of the government at all events, have been refusing to the Dominion the traffic which they had agreed to give to the Intercolonial Railway. That has been persisted in so that the government have found it necessary to have an arbitration with the company to dispose of the question. Now, we have during this session been spending week after week in discussing an agreement with the government of Canada and the Grand Trunk Railway Company with relation to traffic matters, and especially with relation to the diversion of traffic from Canadian ports to American ports. I say the Grand Trunk Railway Company, because that is the real party to the contract which we call the Grand Trunk Pacific contract. We have again and again endeavoured to get hon. gentlemen opposite to see the need and propriety of inserting in this agreement carefully prepared provisions to protect the people of Canada as against the self-interest of the other contracting party ; but we have been told over and over again that we were dealing with an honourable company, a company of such a character that we might rely upon it ; and the government, instead of inserting proper clauses to protect the people against the selfish interests of the company, knowing all the time that this same company were not carrying out honourably, according to the opinion of the government, a contract which had been entered into six years ago, have refused to accept the amendments proposed by the opposition for the purpose of protecting the people against that company. Under these circumstances I am somewhat surprised that the government should bring in at this session, while the country has still before it the recollection of their attitude with regard to the Grand Trunk Pacific contract, a Bill to enable them to get at the books of the Grand Trunk Railway Company in order to see plainly whether that company told the whole truth or not with regard to the course the traffic took under that agreement of 1898. Why, Sir, when we proposed in one of our amendments that the Dominion government should have the right to inspect the books of the Grand Trunk Railway Company with reference to the traffic that is carried from the Northwest to the ocean, the government voted our amendment down, and the hon. gentlemen behind them, in dutiful allegiance to their party, but regardless of the interests of the country, backed up the government in that refusal ; and yet all that time hon. gentlemen opposite knew that the company which they refused to protect the people against, was absolutely, according to their own opinion, refusing to carry out the obligations they had themselves entered into with regard to the traffic. Therefore the introduction of such a Bill as this may be regarded with some surprise. Here we have a Bill enabling the arbitrators to compel the Grand Trunk Company to produce their papers. Why, Sir, when we asked that there should be put into the Grand Trunk Pacific Bill a provision that the Grand Trunk Company should be obliged to disclose its papers to the government, they said, no, we do not require them. They said that, with the knowledge that they were quarrelling with the Grand Trunk Company at that very moment on the same subject, and were getting no redress. Under these circumstances I think we have a right to criticise the attitude of the government on this matter. It is quite true, the hon. gentlemen had settled their agreement with the Grand Trunk Company. That was the only answer we ever received. The Grand Trunk Company could get alterations made in the contract when they needed them, while the government would not ask for the slightest alteration on behalf of the people. When they are introducing this Bill to give the arbitrators greater power, why do they not go a little further ? For the past six years they have had an agreement with the Grand Trunk Company which has not worked satisfactorily. The hon. Minister of Justice tells us that certain traffic which the Grand Trunk had agreed to hand over to the Intercolonial has not gone to the Intercolonial ; and there is a dispute between them as to whether it ought to go to the Intercolonial or to the Grand Trunk. We all know that these questions will arise. On the one hand, the Grand Trunk Company, looking after their own interests and not after the interests of the country, will take every advantage they can to take the traffic over their own rails and on their own trains, and to put the freight charges into their own pockets. Nobody blames the Grand Trunk for that. We only blame the government of the day that allows them to do it, and refuses to put provisions into contracts entered into with the Grand Trunk that would enable the country to get what it ought to get. Now, we propose not only that the government should have the right to inspect the books, papers and vouchers of the Grand Trunk relating to this traffic, but that if there should be found any reason for complaint that the Grand Trunk Company are not carrying out the provisions of that contract with regard to the course or direction of the traffic, that matter should be investigated by the Board of Railway Commissioners, and reported to this parliament for action. The hon. gentlemen not only refuse to give us the power to inspect the papers, or to take upon themselves that power, but they refuse to give the Board of Railway Commissioners the power to investigate and report to this House.

Not one step would they take to enable the country to get protection against what has been going on apparently for the last six years under the contract of 1898. Therefore I say it is a matter of regret in this committee that this Bill, good as it is, does not go further and provide once for all for all contracts between the government and the Grand Trunk Railway. It should have provided for a full investigation of all matters not only under this contract but under any other railway contract, which they may enter into with that company, and it should have provided that in any arbitration or proceeding, either by arbitration or the Board of Railway Commissioners, they should have all the power for which the government is now coming to parliament to ask under this Bill. For that reason and not because I object to the Bill which is all right so far as it goes ; I say that we ought to go further and when the government have entered into a contract of such enormous interest and value to this country as that respecting the Grand Trunk Pacific which is infinitely greater in its relation to the interests of the country than the comparatively small agreement with which we are now dealing, I say they ought to have applied the knowledge and experience that they have derived in the last six years in their traffic negotiations and dealings with the Grand Trunk to the new contracts that we are entering into. They should have availed themselves of that experience to put every necessary provision in the new contracts instead of voting them down as they did when they were proposed by the opposition.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I am sure that my hon. friend does not expect me now to discuss over again the clauses of the Grand Trunk Pacific Bill. So far as I am concerned I think we had better deal with the Bill now before us and refer those interested in the Grand Trunk Pacific to the debates that occurred in the committee when that Bill was under consideration.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Still it would be desirable to have a little further explanation from the Minister of Justice as to the precise nature of the differences that have taken place between the government and the Grand Trunk Pacific under the agreement of 1898. As I understand the traffic arrangement made at that time was practically of the same date as the so-called lease by the Grand Trunk Company of a portion of its line to the Intercolonial Railway. The Minister of Justice adverted to differences which had arisen under that traffic arrangement but he did not give us much information as to the magnitude of the differences, of what was really involved in them or of their nature.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. With respect to the differences that have arisen under the agreement of 1898 I would like to say that the Crown claims damages in respect of several breaches :

First, for the diversion by the Grand Trunk Railway of traffic destined for the maritime provinces and Newfoundland, via Lennoxville and the Canadian Pacific Railway which we contended under the agreement of 1898 should have been routed via Montreal and the Intercolonial Railway.

Second, for the diversion by the Grand Trunk of traffic destined for the maritime provinces and Newfoundland which has been sent via United States ports instead of via Montreal and the Intercolonial Railway.

Third, for the diversion of traffic destined for the maritime provinces and Newfoundland by the Grand Trunk Railway via the water route from Montreal instead of via the Intercolonial Railway.

The Crown also claims damages in respect of a certain agreement as to switching and terminal privileges covered by an agreement entered into by the Grand Trunk Railway and the Canadian Pacific Railway, enjoining the Grand Trunk against switching or permitting to be switched cars or freight to or from sidings on the island of Montreal included in the agreement of the Canadian Pacific Railway from other roads when such freight is destined to or from points on the Intercolonial Railway.

The Crown claims that the Grand Trunk Railway has not afforded to the Intercolonial Railway the accommodation at Bonaventure station required by the contract and claims damages therefor.

The Crown has paid under protest one-half of the cost of a subway and station at St. Hyacinthe. We claim a refund of the amount so paid.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Has the amount of the claim of the Crown been stated in dollars and cents ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. $140,000.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. How much of that is for traffic diverted to the United States ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I have not the details.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Perhaps the minister will give them on the third reading of the Bill. Could he in the meantime inform the committee on what basis the Crown makes up its claim for damages in respect of the diversion of traffic ? Is it the net profit that would be earned by the Canadian government's railways, or is it the gross amount of the claim or what is the basis ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I did not draw up the claim myself and I really could not, speaking off-hand, give that information.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. It occurs to me that it would be useful to know the actual amount of freight in tons which the government claim to have been diverted, and to what United States ports it was diverted.

On section 2,

The said arbitrators may sit for the hearing of evidence wherever in Canada they think it necessary, and they may, from time to time and as often as they think fit, adjourn the sessions to meet either in the same place or elsewhere.

Mr. BARKER. This leaves the arbitrators plenty of time to make their return.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. My hon. friend will remember that the third arbitrator is a judge of the Supreme Court, Mr. Justice Killam. The arbitrators are separated and will not come together until September, and I do not think there is any danger of delay in the rendering of the final award.

Bill reported.

SUPPLY—RESIGNATION OF LT.-COL. GREGORY.

Hon. W. S. FIELDING (Minister of Finance) moved that the House go into Committee of Supply.

Mr. E. A. LANCASTER. I desire to call the attention of the House and the government to the matter of the resignation and treatment of Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory, of the 2nd Dragoons of St. Catharines. Probably the shortest way to bring the matter to the attention of the Minister of Militia would be to read the letter which Colonel Gregory wrote me last month, in which he asked me to give my attention to the matter, as representing the people of the county in which Colonel Gregory has resided since his infancy. I propose therefore, to give Colonel Gregory's own words to the minister and the House in order that they may have a full understanding of the facts. Colonel Gregory, in writing to me, said that his term of command of the 2nd Dragoons was about to expire when the officers of the regiment signed a requisition requesting him to accept an extension of term. Colonel Gregory goes on to say :

I did not make application for an extension, but as I had been requested by some of the officers of the permanent force to accept an extension I called upon the District Officer Commanding, and told him if my term of command was to be extended I wished to know it, and if it was not I wanted to be relieved of my command at once. I stated that if I accepted an extension at all I wanted it for three years.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Is this the same letter which was published in the 'Mail and Empire' on the 23rd of June ?

Mr. LANCASTER. I would not say it is the same. In effect it is, but it is not a verbatim copy. This is a letter addressed by Colonel Gregory to myself, as representing in this House the people of the county in which he resides.

On the 4th of August Colonel Otter wrote me that the period I named would not be entertained by the department. He was quite willing, had that day recommended me for an extension of two years and trusted it would be approved.

I heard nothing more about the matter until on the 2nd of November I saw a copy of the general order of September 3rd, in which my term had been extended to July 12th, 1904.

I immediately sent in my resignation and a few days later received a letter from Colonel Otter saying he had my resignation, but before forwarding it he was writing urging that my term be extended as recommended and not to be surprised at some delay. Shortly after this I was asked to make a report as to the fitness of Major W. R. Ferguson for the position of second in command which he held, and as I was given to understand by Colonel Otter that some one was urging the matter, and believing that Major Ferguson would be gazetted out if he did not resign, I advised him to send me his resignation, which he did, and which I forwarded.

On the 10th of January Colonel Otter wrote me directing me to at once recommend Major Glasgow as regimental major, also for the officer who was to succeed him. I replied that at present and under all circumstances did not feel disposed to accede to his request. Colonel Otter wrote me again January 14th requesting an explanation for writing such a letter, claiming I was in duty bound to do as directed. I replied on the 18th stating that my reasons were that I did not consider it was in the interest of the regiment that he should be promoted at present. On the 21st January I received another letter from Colonel Otter saying, I now tell you it is necessary you should recommend Major Glasgow as second in command, saying further 'You may be sure I have good reasons for asking for this action on your part.' On the 23rd I had an interview with the General Officer Commanding in Ottawa and he gave me to understand that my time of command had been extended for two years or would be extended. On the 25th I called Colonel Otter by telephone and told him if his anxiety for the promotion of Major Glasgow was on my account there was no longer the necessity for it as the General Officer Commanding had informed me on the Saturday previous that my time of command had been extended for two years, and to me Colonel Otter replied that he knew more about the matter than any one else, as he had made the arrangements, and later on in a private interview told me that my extension to two years depended upon me recommending Major Glasgow, saying further, that when in Ottawa some time previous to this the General Officer Commanding had told him to express to me his regrets that he was unable to carry through my extension for a longer period than one year, and that after leaving the General Officer Commanding he went to another.

On the night of the 25th, I had a meeting of the officers of the regiment followed by a dinner to which a number of gentlemen not in the regiment were invited and were present. After the dinner I entered into an arrangement with Major Glasgow that he was to remain in command of his squadron until after this camp in June and in the meantime take a course in the Royal Military College, and I would then recommend him for the position of second in command. The next day I wrote the District Officer Commanding, notifying him of arrangement with Major Glasgow and that I expected to receive a letter from him concurring in the arrangement, but which I did not get.

At an interview I had with Colonel Otter a few days later he informed me that he had reason to believe that nothing but the recommendation from Major Glasgow would secure my extension as recommended and stated that I would only be playing into the hands of those opposed to me and sacrifice the regiment as well if I resigned as I threatened to do before I would recommend Major Glasgow if he did not take steps to improve his qualifications.

On the 22nd February I wrote the district officer commanding again, reiterating what I was prepared to do, and again on the 29th asking if my letter of the 22nd would be acceptable and if my tenure of command was to be extended beyond the 12th of July, 1904, and received a reply dated March 2nd stating that he had written Major Glasgow a few days before, and that he had promised to attend the school before camp for a course, and that he (Colonel Otter) was quite prepared to forward his recommendation at once, and asking me to forward the recommendation as soon as possible. Again on the 3rd of March Colonel Otter wrote me in reply to my communication of the 29th February stating that the recommendation of Major Glasgow as second in command should be sent in at once and he had every reason to believe that the extension of my command would follow.

To this I replied on the 7th that if Major Glasgow did attend the school as he had promised he should remain in command of his squadron until after camp, when his promotion would immediately follow, and that I was firmly convinced my proposition was not only reasonable but in the interest of the regiment, and that I had come to the conclusion that if my extension of time demanded upon me acceding to the demands of Major Glasgow, I had better resign my command at once.

On the 10th of March Colonel Otter wrote me that he regretted that I could not see my way to make the recommendation and that as action had shortly to be taken, he now proposed to do it himself. After getting the 'Canada Gazette' of June 11th, in which appeared the promotion of Major Glasgow to second in command, also that of Captain Sharp to major commanding 'D' squadron, and Lieutenant D. Dell to rank of captain, and none of which I had recommended, I forwarded my resignation to the district officer commanding and asked to be relieved of the command of the regiment at once. My resignation was sent in on the morning of Wednesday, June 15th.

Now, Mr. Speaker, it seems to me, although I am not technically what would be called a military man, that the department has put itself entirely in the wrong. The people of this country have a deep interest in seeing the Militia Department administered in the interests of the militia of Canada. And digressing here for a moment, I think I can say without any fear of contradiction that it is only as an institution for the benefit of the people of Canada that this militia organization exists; and speaking as a representative of the people I am just as much entitled to say what I think of it as if I were a military man technically or enrolled in the militia force. I need not of course say that those of us who do not technically belong to the militia force nevertheless have the interest of the militia as much at heart as those who do belong to it; and it is because we have only so many hours in a day and so many days in the month in which we can work at anything, after getting the necessary sleep that nature requires, that we are not all of us able to take that active part in militia affairs that some of us do and others would like to do. Now the case of Colonel Gregory seems to me to be a pitiable one, pitiable from the standpoint of the interests of the people of this country, not to qualify it in any stronger language. I ask the House to accept one statement from me without proof, and that is that Colonel Gregory is, as far as a man can be who is not a regular soldier belonging to the regular army, as well qualified an officer, as careful, as earnest, as painstaking, as self-sacrificing in the expenditure of time and energy in the performance of his duty as any militiaman or any other man in the Dominion of Canada possibly could be, and not belong to the regular army. Colonel Gregory has been known up in the county of Lincoln where he was born and has always lived, to have, as some critics of his would say, spent too much time over the militia; he is known to have sacrificed his money, even his financial interests in his devotion to the welfare of the militia and in the energetic performance of his duties as a militiaman. No man on either side of politics, I am not afraid the most violent Reformer in the county of Lincoln will contradict me in saying, that no man on either side of politics will say that Colonel Gregory as a military man is not absolutely qualified for the performance of his duties, and he has seen that the officers under him and with whom he is associated are also well qualified. It is evidenced by this letter that Colonel Gregory has realized his duty to the country, and to the officers above him as well as to the officers beneath him, and to the whole community in what he was called upon to do. He seemed to think that the duty he was called upon to perform was not a mere bagatelle; he realized that he had a serious duty to perform to those in authority over him in the militia, and to the whole people of Canada, in the exercise of the duties that devolved upon him while an officer in command of that troop. Now he was called upon, as is seen by this correspondence, he was invited, as it were, to ask for an extension of time, he was asked if he would accept an extension of time. It does not matter for what length of time; the point is this, that he was not going to be allowed to have any extension of time unless he did what, Mr. Speaker, unless he certified to a thing that, whether he was right or wrong in his judgment, he would have been a dishonest man if he had certified to holding the opinion he did.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. My hon. friend is probably not aware that Colonel Gregory had one year's extension of time without any condition, and he does not pretend there was any condition.

Mr. LANCASTER. Colonel Gregory has had an extension of time of one year before this extension of time without any condition. The question is not whether he should have an extension of time for more than one year. It is idle to say that a different rule or principle should be applied according as the extension of time was long or short, for one year or more. No matter whether it was for one month or three months, for one year, or ten years, or a hundred years, the principle is the same, and it was intimated to him that if he did not do something which he could only do on the assumption that whether it was right or wrong does not matter, and which he could not do as an honest man, he was told that if he did not do it, he could not get that extension. If that principle was to prevail in any department of government it is easy to imagine what the consequences would be. If it was to prevail in the Finance Department, in the Department of Trade and Commerce, in the Department of Inland Revenue, in the Department of the Postmaster General, in the Department of the Minister of Customs—now I have named the departments of all the cabinet ministers who are in the House except the Minister of Militia. I say that if this principle was to prevail, what confidence would any one have in those departments or in any other institution in which it was allowed to prevail? If Colonel Gregory was wrong in his opinion, that might be a reason for telling him that he was no longer fit to command, but it would be no reason for imposing upon the people a commanding officer who was exercising his functions as he was entitled to exercise them, and still telling him that he could not remain in command unless he exercised his functions on a different side of a question to what he in all conscience thought he ought to exercise them.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Would the hon. gentleman state what was the condition?

Mr. LANCASTER. The condition, according to this letter, was that if he would recommend Major Glasgow as second in command his extension of time would at once follow. He said he could not do so, because Major Glasgow was not qualified in his opinion, not having the necessary military training. He was right in that statement, and was asked to certify the contrary.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. He was qualified.

Mr. LANCASTER. I differ from the hon. minister. I am not a military man, but I can understand facts and inferences, and the results of facts, in regard to the Militia Department as well as I can understand them in regard to any other department. It is quite clear that Major Glasgow at that time was not qualified, because Major Glasgow partly did afterwards what Colonel Gregory was insisting would have to be done at that time before he could be qualified. The hon. minister may be right technically in saying that he is qualified now, but at the time it was sought to obtain Colonel Gregory's recommendation he was not qualified, and I would like the hon. minister to explain why it was that this gentleman had to get a further qualification before he could get the certificate.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. If the hon. gentleman will look at the papers which were laid on the table of the House he will see by Colonel Gregory's own report that Major Glasgow was qualified in the summer of 1902.

Mr. LANCASTER. I differ from the hon. minister. That may be his way of looking at these papers. I must speak of the facts as I understand them. It is all very well for the hon. minister to put his construction on certain things, but I am sorry to say that I cannot find the facts to be as he represents them. We must differ in respect to the certificate that Colonel Gregory gave. The fact stands out clear and distinct, and I would not be doing my duty to the people if I did not insist upon this fact being presented clearly to them. The fact stands out clear and distinct that Colonel Otter told him that some one was urging him to secure the recommendation on behalf of Major Glasgow. As the hon. minister does not seem to understand it, I will read it again :

On the 23rd I had an interview with the General Officer Commanding in Ottawa, and he gave me to understand that my time of command had been extended for two years or would be extended. On the 25th I called Colonel Otter by telephone and told him if his anxiety for the promotion of Major Glasgow was on my account there was no longer the necessity for it, as the General Officer Commanding had informed me on the Saturday previous that my time of command had been extended for two years, and to me Colonel Otter replied that he knew more about the matter than any one else, as he had made the arrangements.

Colonel Otter had made the arrangement. What arrangement ? Colonel Otter had made the arrangement that Colonel Gregory should have an extension of time. There had to be pressure brought upon him to make the arrangement that Major Glasgow was to be placed in command and that notwithstanding the fact that he was not certified to as being qualified.

Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory says that on the 25th he called up Colonel Otter by 'phone, and Colonel Otter told him that he knew more about the matter than any one else, that he had made the arrangement, and later on he told Colonel Gregory that his extension of two years depended upon his recommending Major Glasgow. If Major Glasgow was qualified without a recommendation by Colonel Gregory, why was Colonel Gregory told by Colonel Otter that his own extension for two years depended upon him granting this certificate ? That is the vice and the mischief of this matter. That is where you are striking right at the heart of our militia. Whether Colonel Gregory's judgment was right or not in saying that he would not recommend Major Glasgow when the government said to him : Although according to your judgment it may be wrong, you must do it, and we will not extend your time of command for two years until you do it, they were introducing a system that means ruin to the militia of this country. It is an unfortunate thing for the people of Canada. Colonel Gregory would not submit to that, because, being a soldier, he was a man. They cast a reflection upon him, and he said in effect. I am a man. I will not certify what I do not believe. He said : I am responsible to Roland W. Gregory and to Roland W. Gregory's own conscience for what I do, and as my superior officers do not say that my judgment was wrong, I consider that it is my duty to resign in order that the people of Canada may clear up the matter and take such means as they see fit to ensure that the government shall not allow this serpent to crawl in and accomplish the disasters that it will accomplish if this course is allowed to prevail, and which undoubtedly would have prevailed if something had not been done to prevent it by putting the facts before the House, as he did and as I am endeavouring in my humble way to do, I being the representative of the county in which this gentleman resides. He goes on to say :

Colonel Otter replied that he knew more about the matter than any one else, as he had made the arrangements, and later on in a private interview told me that my extension to two years depended upon me recommending Major Glasgow, saying further, that when in Ottawa some time previous to this the General Officer Commanding had told him to express to me his regrets that he was unable to carry through my extension for a longer period than one year, and that after leaving the General Officer Commanding he went to another person (but did not give name)——

I think the House will be curious to know who that was.

—and arranged with him that if I recommended Major Glasgow for the position of second in command my time of command would be extended two years.

I do not notice in the correspondence that the hon. minister has referred to a few moments ago any instructions or memoranda by which we can draw any satisfactory inference as to how that result was brought about. There is nothing in the correspondence to indicate how the change took place. There was a changing of mind here on the part of those in authority over Colonel Gregory, but I do not find anything in the correspondence that shows how it came about. There should be some explanation given to the House as to how it arose, because Colonel Gregory says that Colonel Otter, after leaving the General Officer Commanding, went to another person, but did not give the name, and arranged with him that if Colonel Gregory recommended Major Glasgow for the position of second in command Colonel Gregory's time of command would be extended two years, and that information had been conveyed to the General Officer Commanding that his time was to be extended for another year. I want to point out to this House, in endeavouring to do my duty in this matter in the interests of the people of Canada, that, although I am not, as I said, a qualified military man, I do understand the difference between a combatant and a non-combatant. I think we all understand without being in the militia that a man who is trained as a surgeon is not the best man to command in a fight. If it is a question of which wing of the army you shall put forward, if it is a question of drill, if it is a question of whether you shall march or counter-march, a surgeon is not the best man to put in command. I want to tell the hon. minister that we have two officers in our district, Major Stull and Major Birch, who, although residents of my constituency, are not both supporters of mine in politics. The hon. minister need not be afraid of that. He has already heard of Major Birch. He knows that Major Birch had a brother who lost his life in South Africa, he knows that he lives in the county of Lincoln, and he knows that he is a well qualified major of these dragoons.

Major Stull is also a well qualified combatant officer in this regiment; these two gentlemen are the next best qualified after Colonel Gregory to take command of that troop of dragoons. Colonel Otter, who went out of his way to recommend Major Glasgow, for some strange reason, has shown by his course the necessity for having Colonel Gregory's certificate and not that of some outsider who apparently did not know there were two majors who were the next best qualified to command the troop after Colonel Gregory. But what did they do? Major Glasgow was a surgeon-major; he took this very much hurried course—I think it was for less than a month—to qualify him, and he was appointed instead of Major Stull and Major Birch who were overlooked entirely by whoever was interfering—for somebody was interfering—and this Major Glasgow who was promoted——

Mr. LANCASTER.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I know my hon. friend (Mr. Lancaster) does not wish to mislead the House, but he must know, if he has acquainted himself with the case at all, that Major Glasgow was the next in order of seniority.

Mr. LANCASTER. I do not know what this government, or this Minister of Militia, means by next in order of seniority, but if he means that Major Glasgow was the next best qualified I take issue with him. Major Glasgow was a surgeon-major——

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I am sorry to interrupt my hon. friend. The hon. gentleman must know that Major Glasgow was the senior major in command of the senior squadron of that regiment and that he had been in that position for at least two years.

Mr. LANCASTER. If so, he was there without proper qualification as a combatant officer.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Which is not true.

Mr. LANCASTER. I am perhaps on dangerous ground not being a militia man—

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. If the hon. member will allow me——

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I have as much right to interrupt as the Minister of Militia, and I object to the impertinence of the Minister of Inland Revenue in calling 'Hear, hear.'

Mr. LANCASTER. If I chose to give the floor temporarily to my hon. friend (Mr. Sam. Hughes) I suppose I could do so?

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I hold in my hand the militia list, and I find that these three officers were gazetted on exactly the same day, viz., the 16th of February, 1902.

Mr. LANCASTER. And I think that list describes Major Glasgow as a surgeon-major. Although not a military man myself I have still impudence enough—if you like to use the word—to believe that a surgeon-major is not so well fitted to command a regiment as a major who is a combatant officer. The fact that he is a surgeon-major merely means that he is given the rank and perquisites of a major, but he is not in the force as a combatant officer. If as surgeon-major, he was two years in command of the troop, then there is another grievance against the government, and I can well understand that Colonel Gregory thought it was time to put an end to such a state of things. Although as I have said, I am not in the militia, I represent the militia of the county of Lincoln, and I believe it is my duty to raise this question in parliament. As there are other gentlemen on both sides of the House who are well versed in military matters, and who will no doubt take part in this debate, I shall not trespass further on the time of the House.

Hon. Sir FREDERICK BORDEN (Minister of Militia). The hon. gentleman (Mr. Lancaster) has pinned his faith entirely in this discussion on a letter written to him by Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Lancaster) has shown an utter disregard,—I think I might say contempt—for the papers which have been laid on the table of the House, and whenever he was pressed to give fair play to Major Glasgow he shielded himself behind the fact that he has no particular knowledge of military affairs. I would venture to advise the hon. gentleman (Mr. Lancaster) to acquaint himself somewhat with the ordinary rules governing military proceedings and promotions before he attempts to discuss a question of this kind in parliament. The letter which the hon. gentleman read is almost word for word the statement which Colonel Gregory published in the 'Mail and Empire' on the 23rd of June last; and before proceeding with the main statement which I have to make on this subject, I will make a passing reference to this statement, which, by the way, I may observe at the outset, was an exceedingly improper statement for Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory to make. It was a direct violation of the regulations of the Militia Department of Canada, and a direct violation of the King's regulations as well; a fact which must have been known at the time to Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. How is that?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. If the hon. gentleman wishes information I will endeavour to give it to him.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. At the time Colonel Gregory wrote the letter was he under orders?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. At the time Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory made the statement he was still commanding officer of the 2nd Hussars though possibly under suspension.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Was he in camp?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. He was in camp, and the hon. gentleman (Mr. Sam. Hughes) knows perfectly well that it was an impropriety, and even afterwards it would have been almost equally an impropriety, because in that statement is involved an accusation against Colonel Otter, and accusations against Colonel Gregory's superiors in the headquarters staff, and against the minister himself. The King's regulations 2118 says:

> The only legitimate use an officer or soldier can make of documents or information of which he becomes possessed in his official capacity is for the furtherance of the public service in the performance of his duty. Publishing official documents or using them for personal controversy, or for any private purpose without due authority, will be treated as a breach of official trust.

Mr. INGRAM. Is the minister quite sure that Colonel Gregory was in camp when that letter appeared in the 'Mail and Empire?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I believe so.

Mr. INGRAM. My impression is that he was not.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. He was still in command of the regiment.

Mr. LANCASTER. He had sent in his resignation; he had left the camp and had gone home before he gave the interview.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. He is still on the reserve list of officers and is equally under the regulations.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What is the date?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. The 23rd is the day it is published. The article in the 'Mail and Empire' is dated Niagara-on-the-Lake, June 22, from which I assume that the statement was made there and sent from there, and that he was in camp at the time.

With regard to the language of this statement there are just two or three observations which I wish to make. In view of the statement that unjust conditions are attempted to be made, I wish to call attention to the fact that Lt.-Col. Gregory insisted on having three years' extension, which is the maximum permitted under the regulations, and at the outset refused to accept any less, and threatened to resign his commission if less than three years were given. He finally modified that to two years. Further on he says that he 'was given to understand by Col. Otter that some one was urging the matter,' and so on; the insinuation all through being that either the minister himself was taking a personal interest in this matter, or that some one behind the minister was urging the minister to take this personal interest.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Although the hon. gentleman did not make that statement, I make it for him, and I say that such an insinuation is absolutely unfounded and without the slightest justification. Moreover, the hon. member bases his argument entirely upon the ipse dixit of Lt.-Col. Gregory, and reiterates Col. Gregory's statement as to conversations which took place between Col. Otter and himself, in which Col. Gregory puts words into the mouth of Col. Otter for which there is no proof whatever, and which I doubt very much Col. Otter ever uttered. He says, for instance:

> On the 23rd I had an interview with the General Officer Commanding in Ottawa, and he gave me to understand that my tenure of command had been extended for two years.

I do not believe a word of that. I do not see how it is possible that the General Officer Commanding could have given such an assurance as that when the matter had not been discussed with me, and had not been recommended to the minister. Then he goes on to say that Col. Otter visited Ottawa, and saw the General Officer Commanding and then 'went to another person,' meaning, I suppose, the minister. I wish to say here most emphatically that so far as I know and believe and can remember, Col. Otter never discussed the question of Lt.-Col. Gregory with me, here or anywhere else in his life.

I do not know that I need refer to any more of the points mentioned in that letter. But, Sir, I propose, in the discussion of this matter, to refer to the papers which have been laid upon the table of the House. Before doing so, however, let me refer again to a matter which I referred to in a debate which took place in this House on the 23rd of June, namely, the question of the limitation of the extension of Lt.-Col. Gregory's extension to one year instead of three years. There was a recommendation, which will be found in these papers, from Col. Otter that Col. Gregory's term should be extended for two years. That recommendation came before me, and I saw fit—and I believe I acted wisely, as the events prove—to change that to an extension for one year. I did it in conformity with a practice which I had adopted; because great injury and injustice may be done to worthy junior officers by these long extensions of time. If after an extension of one year it turns out that there is still good reason why a further extension should be made, it is always possible to make a further extension. No possible harm can be done by limiting the extension in the first place to one year, because it can always be extended another year and yet another year; but the greatest harm and injustice to worthy, capable and qualified young officers may be done by an immediate extension of time to three years at the outset.

Now, to come to the papers. We are told that Lt.-Col. Gregory is a good officer. I do not quarrel with that statement. I believe he is an excellent cavalry officer; but I cannot say as much for the methods by which he proposed to keep himself in the command of his regiment after the term for which he was appointed had expired. He was appointed for the regular term of five years, and at the end of five years he proposed, by hook or by crook, to continue in the command for three years more, and threatened the district officer commanding that if he did not give him the extra three years he would resign the command of his regiment. Well, Sir, let me point out to the House the peculiar methods which this gentleman adopted in order to attain his end. Let me point out the peculiar little game this gentleman was playing. The second in command of his regiment—will the House believe it?—was a doctor—not Dr. Glasgow, but one of the best friends the hon. gentleman (Mr. Lancaster) has in his constituency or in the neighbouring constituency—Dr. Ferguson, a prominent Conservative. I suppose it is all right for a medical man to hold a combatant position under such circumstances.

Mr. LANCASTER. With a combatant's rank.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Dr. Ferguson was second in command, with precisely the same qualification that Dr. Glasgow had. Let me stop here for a moment to say, in justice to my profession, that we are sometimes able to fight, and that some of the best combatant officers to-day are medical men. Let me point to Dr. King, whom the hon. gentleman knows. Will the hon. gentleman undertake to sneer at Dr. King because he is a medical man? I think he will not dare to do it.

Mr. LANCASTER. Will my hon. friend permit me? I did not object to his being a medical man. I said he had a medical training only, not a combatant's training.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Which is not fair, if it were parliamentary, I would say it is not true; because the hon. gentleman knows, or ought to know, if he examined the papers, that Dr. Glasgow possessed exactly as good a qualification as Dr. Ferguson or Dr. King. In saying that I speak of what I know. It does not do for the hon. gentleman to shake his head and make denials against facts. So much for this doctor, the Dr. Ferguson who is all right and to whom the hon. gentleman took no exception. Dr. Ferguson, in accordance with the peculiar methods which I am going to expose on the part of Col. Gregory, was unfit, as I shall show by Col. Otter's report for five long years to fill the position of second in command. He was kept there by Col. Gregory for the very purpose of giving him an excuse for asking that his own tenure of command be extended because the second in command was unfit to fill his place.

Mr. LANCASTER. There is no evidence of that.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. The papers will show that.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What is the meaning of this sentence in Colonel Otter's letter of June 10, 1904?

On this I wrote Major Glasgow advising him to take a course as soon as possible to which he replied on the 22nd of February that it was his intention to do so, and had had such in contemplation before he heard from me.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I will explain. The reason is that Colonel Gregory had made up his mind that for some reason or other best known to himself, Major Glasgow should not be promoted to the position of second in command although qualified, and he insisted that before he would recommend Major Glasgow, although Major Glasgow was qualified, he must have a promise from Glasgow that he would attend another course. For what purpose ? To improve his qualification, not to get qualified, those are not the words.

An hon. MEMBER. Oh, oh.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. My hon. friend may laugh, but it was to improve his qualification, and those are the words which Lieut.-Colonel Gregory has carefully used.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I am not making any suggestion to the contrary, but I am asking for information. Why is it in this case that Colonel Otter concurs in that and advises Major Glasgow to do it ? He is not in a conspiracy with Colonel Gregory.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Because Colonel Otter was anxious to have peace in this regiment and I dare say Colonel Otter recognized even Colonel Gregory himself would not suffer by taking a further course to improve his qualifications, and he was quite willing to co-operate with Colonel Gregory to insist so far as he could although the officer was qualified that he should take or so advise that he should take a further course to improve his qualifications which were already sufficient technically at any rate for the purpose of promotion.

Now, I wish to come to a little closer quarters with Colonel Gregory and I wish to point direct to the attention of the House to a letter which appears in this file of papers, which was laid on the table of the House. The letter is one addressed by Colonel Gregory, in December, 1902, to the District Officer Commanding, Colonel Otter, with reference to officers of his regiment who he said were 'indifferent'. This is a report which refers to those officers only who are 'indifferent'. This is the letter.

Sir, I have the honour to report that the officers mentioned in my report as indifferent are :

1st. Major Glasgow, who intends taking another course at the school.

2nd. Captain M. S. Muir, who is a poor horseman.

3rd. E. D. Taylor, who is not yet qualified.

Evidently the other two were qualified.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
ROLAND W. GREGORY,
Lieutenant-Colonel Commanding 2nd Dragoons.

Now, I have here the report in detail, the confidential report of Colonel Gregory, dated December 3, 1902, in which he reports upon every officer in his regiment in detail under the headings.

General ability, general professional requirement, practical proficiency in drill and in the field, professional zeal, smartness in performance of duties, horsemanship, capacity for command, judgment, tact, temper, self-reliance, and 'is he fit for promotion for higher rank ?'

Now, let us look at these men. First, there is Lieutenant-Colonel Roland W. Gregory himself, who is reported upon by Colonel Otter.

Next comes this Doctor, Major Ferguson, William R. Ferguson, and next comes the other Doctor, the objectionable Doctor, S. H. Glasgow. I follow these two names through under the above headings and I find that whereas Dr. Ferguson, second in command is reported upon as fair, Dr. Glasgow is reported upon in the same column as good. Under the next column where Dr. Ferguson is reported as fair, Dr. Glasgow is reported as good. So it goes on. In nearly every column in this report, Dr. Ferguson is reported upon as fair, and Dr. Glasgow is reported upon as good. In only one case is Dr. Ferguson reported upon as good where Dr. Glasgow is reported upon as fair. This I think is somewhat significant. But it so happens that both are reported upon under the heading of 'Practical proficiency in drill and in the field,' as indifferent. But it does so happen too that under the column

Is he fit for promotion to higher rank ?

Mark you they are majors now.

Is he fit for promotion to higher rank ?

The answer to the question by Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory, confirmed by Colonel Otter is 'Yes.'

Mr. HAGGART. Does that mean that he is qualified, that they reported him qualified ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Qualified for major and fit to be promoted to a higher rank, namely, lieutenant-colonel.

Mr. WARD. I believe that confidential report also gives the qualifications of officers, does it not ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. No. I read all that it gives, but I will give the qualifications before I have finished.

Mr. WARD. The hon. gentleman has referred to that qualification which was possessed by Major Glasgow and I would be glad if the minister before leaving the question of qualification would give exactly the qualifications which these two officers possess.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. They both possess the qualification of field officers' qualifications. Ferguson's qualification is R.S.C. and Glasgow's qualification is field officer's which is equivalent as I shall show before I get through with my statement.

Now I want to call attention particularly —because I am dealing with Gregory, the gentleman who has obtruded himself upon the consideration of this House and this country—to the fact that Colonel Gregory has written a letter which singles out Major Glasgow as being indifferent when the record, his own record, shows that Major Glasgow's qualification and his character for fitness and good conduct are better than that of Major Ferguson, and I wish to show you, Mr. Speaker, that this was part of a scheme to discredit Major Glasgow and to keep on Major Ferguson who was not able to attend drill in 1901, indeed was not in camp at all, was only in camp a few days in 1902 and was not able to go to camp in 1903. There again the game was to keep Ferguson on in order to be able to say that he was unfit. He was unable to speak above a whisper and he was kept in that place as a sort of warming pan so that Colonel Gregory could use him and be able to say: There is no second in command able to take my place; therefore I must be kept where I am.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The letter to which the hon. gentleman refers accompanies that same report, does it not? They are of the same date.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. This report is not in the letter of Colonel Gregory at all.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The hon. gentleman has read a letter in which Major Glasgow is described as one of the officers who are indifferent. It is dated the 13th of December, 1902, and he gave that same date as the date of this confidential report.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Yes.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Then the letter accompanied the report.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Exactly. And the letter is a misleading one intended to call attention to Major Glasgow in an unfavourable way, while passing over Major Ferguson who was in a worse position, on Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory's own report, than Major Glasgow himself. The hon. gentleman has referred to a round-robin signed by all the officers of Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory's regiment, asking that his term of command be extended. If the hon. gentleman will look through the papers, he will find that both Colonel Otter and Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory were severely reprimanded, I might almost say—it did not amount to that—but at any rate exception was taken to the fact that a round-robin had been signed in that way, because that is absolutely against all military rules and regulations; and I am informed—I do not state it as a fact—but from all I can hear and see, and reading between the lines, I am disposed to believe that the statement which has been made to me, namely, that Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory procured the signing of that round-robin. This is the memorandum that was sent from headquarters:

Will you please inform Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory to communicate to the officers of his regiment that it is highly improper for them to send any communication with reference to his tenure of command.

How could an officer refuse? This paper is put before him. He does not wish to run the risk of getting the ill will of his commanding officer and he signs it, and such a request is against all military regulations and rules, and the reason is obvious.

It was your duty when you received this round-robin, to communicate to the officers of the 2nd Dragoons the great breach of military etiquette and military procedure of which they were guilty, and to have returned the round-robin to those who signed it.

Now we come to the extension of time. On the 4th of September, 1903, under the heading of 'Appointments, promotions, &c., general order 149' we find the following:—

2nd Dragoons—the period of the tenure of command of Lieutenant-Colonel R. W. Gregory is extended to the 12th July, 1904.

It will be remembered that Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory in his letter appears to complain of the fact that he found that Major Ferguson's case was being inquired into and it appeared probable that Major Ferguson would have to resign. Major Ferguson was being kept, as I have stated, for a certain purpose, and later on somebody seems to have ascertained the fact. Colonel Gregory, I believe, feared a medical board to examine into the case of Major Ferguson would follow; and Major Ferguson was advised by him that he would lose his position and that he had better make a virtue of necessity and resign rather than have any examination.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Who ordered the medical board?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I did not say that a medical board was ordered. I said that it was expected that a medical examination would be made and a medical board appointed to look into the matter.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Is there any evidence of that in the report? I do not know of any private correspondence or evidence of that.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I am not aware that there is any.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. On what does the minister base his statement.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I take it from the tone of Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory's letter.

I find here:

Recommendations for appointments, &c., in the 2nd Dragoons, headquarters at Welland, on 28th March, 1904 : Major Sinclair Holden Glasgow, physician, residence Welland, native country Canada, date of birth and so on. State of health good, recommended for the rank of second in command vice Major W. R. Ferguson, resigned. Qualifications, field officer, recommended by F. L. Lessard, acting district officer comanding military district No. 2.

I hold here a copy of the qualifications of Major Glasgow :

Canada—Certificate of Royal Military Instruction. Cavalry, field officers' class, special course.

This is to certify that Surgeon-Major S. H. Glasgow, Medical Reserve of Officers, has attended the Royal School of Cavalry at Toronto, from 17th October, 1901, until 21st November, 1901, and having passed the required examination in the undermentioned subjects, is entitled to this certificate. R. and O., part viii., paragraph 102.

F. L. LESSARD, Lt.-Col. and B. Col., Commandant Royal School of Cavalry at Toronto, Ontario.

Let me observe at this point that my hon. friend has given the impression, whether intentionally or otherwise, that Major Glasgow had been at the same time acting in the capacity of surgeon or physician in connection with this regiment. But the hon. gentleman gave the impression—I am sure unintentionally—that Dr. Glasgow had somehow or other been connected with this cavalry regiment in the capacity of physician or surgeon. That is absolutely without the slightest foundation. As a matter of fact, Dr. Glasgow was not only qualified yesterday and the day before, but he has been qualified ever since 1901 and has as good a qualification as Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory himself. And it is unfair to Major Glasgow that such an impression should be conveyed to this House or country. In answer to my hon. friend from East Durham (Mr. Ward) who asked about the qualifications, these are the qualifications :

1st class grade 'A.' Short course or special course certificate must be obtained by all field officers and adjutants in the cavalry. Regulations and orders, page 269, paragraph 88.

Special course, paragraph 102, page 274, provides for a special course for the permanent staff and field officers and grants of field officer certificate, which is equivalent to the 1st class grade 'A' certificate, and this is the certificate held by Major Glasgow.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Whose statement is that ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I am quoting the paragraph itself. Now Colonel Otter states distinctly in his letter here that there was no question whatever about Major Glasgow's qualification. But we are told that there was an attempt made to make a bargain with Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory, that conditions were imposed. I want to call your attention, Mr. Speaker, to the fact that the man who wished to impose conditions was Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory himself. First, he wished to impose the condition that his extension must be for three years, and if it was not for three years, he forsooth, would have none of it, and would resign his commission—which he thought better of afterwards. But, Mr. Speaker, let me point out the fact that no conditions were being forced upon Colonel Gregory, so far as I know, but he was attempting to insist upon conditions with Colonel Otter before he would agree to do what it was his bounden duty to do, to recommend, unless there was some strong objection against it, the promotion of Major Glasgow who was next in seniority. And what were the conditions which he wished to impose ? He wished to impose the condition that although Major Glasgow might be promoted to the position of second in command, he should not take that position, but should remain in command, I think it was of D squadron, until after the next camp, that is that he might in name only be second in command ; and that as long as Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory, who has followed him with the utmost hostility and endeavoured to block his promotion, remained there, he should not act upon the staff and take his position of second in command alongside of the pretentious Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory. When we talk about conditions, those were the terms which Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory undertook to impose upon the District Officer Commanding, Colonel Otter, and Colonel Otter very properly refused to be dictated to in any such way. It is stated that Colonel Lessard went to Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory and asked him to sign the recommendation, and that Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory agreed to do so, and then putting the pen to one side, refused ; and after writing letter after letter and doing everything that mortal man could do both Colonel Otter and Colonel Lessard found that it was necessary, in order to do simple justice to Major Glasgow, for them to act without the recommendation of Colonel Gregory, and this they did. I am sure that any impartial man who will read the papers and observe the course which Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory has pursued from the beginning, the means by which he was keeping an unqualified man for five years, knowing him to be unqualified, a man who was not able to attend camp in three years, a man who is described in the manner which I will read in a moment, by the District Officer Commanding, Colonel Otter, keeping that man in a position which was directly against the interests of the militia and of the country, in order to keep Major Glasgow down and to keep himself in——

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I presume the minister means unqualified, not in a military sense ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Yes.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. He does not mean that Major Ferguson had not proper certificates.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. No, he had no voice.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. That is what I want made clear.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I do not know what that would be called.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Had he the same qualification as Major Glasgow ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I am informed in the department that it is precisely the same, although the letters are not the same. In the case of Major Ferguson it is R. S. I., but in the case of Major Glasgow it is F.O., field officer, which is a more recent qualification, but I am informed is just as good a qualification. Now I want to read what Colonel Otter says with reference to this matter. Here is what Colonel Otter, writing to the adjutant-general, says with reference to Dr. Ferguson, second in command :

Toronto, 8th July, 1904.

Sir,—In reply to your memorandum of yesterday's date I have the honour to report upon the duty performed by Major Ferguson, late 2nd Dragoons, during the latter part of his connection with the regiment.

1901, absent with leave for the whole period of training.

1902, absent with leave for four days of training.

1903, absent with leave for the whole period of training.

As to the ability of this officer to perform his military duties satisfactorily I have no hesitation in affirming that owing to the loss of his voice from an affection of the throat he has not been fit for his military duties during the last five years of his connection with this regiment. In this assertion I am sure that both Colonel Lessard, inspector of cavalry, and his own commanding officer, Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory, will bear me out. In the interest of the regiment I should have reported his case long ago, but as he informed me, whenever the inquiry was made, that he hoped soon to be quite well again, I deferred action until it became apparent that his recovery was most doubtful, and that the efficiency of the regiment was becoming affected through the want of a second in command who was able to undertake the duties of that appointment.

I have the honour to be, sir,
Your obedient servant,
W. D. OTTER, Colonel.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. What is the date of that letter ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. That letter is dated 8th of July, 1904, a few days ago. I do not know that I need go further in the matter. It seems to me it has been abundantly proved that the course which I pursued in limiting the extension of the command of Colonel Gregory, was in the interest of the public service. There is proof that Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory, although he may be a very good officer, was a man who possessed so little regard for the public interest in connection with his regiment that he kept as second in command, for a period of years during which this man was unable to attend camp, a man whom he knew could never be able to succeed him as commanding officer of the regiment.

I believe that the papers justify me in saying that he did it with malice prepense, that he did it deliberately for the purpose of keeping the place warm for himself so that he could hold it for the extra three years or for a longer period if possible. I say that Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory, knowing the facts concerning Major Ferguson, has fallen far short of performing his duty in reference to that officer. I say that he has shown a malevolent disposition, at least an unfair disposition towards Major Glasgow who was qualified, who has been qualified for three years past and who holds as good a qualification as Major Gregory does himself, by standing persistently in that officer's way and refusing when he had no good reason for doing so to recommend that that officer be promoted to be second in command and before he would agree to sign the recommendation for promotion endeavouring to impose the condition that Major Glasgow, although he could be promoted to the second in command, should not be promoted and should not enjoy the results of that promotion until after the next camp and until after Major Gregory had passed out of the regiment.

Mr. HAGGART. What was the date of the qualification of Major Glasgow for F.O. —Field Officer ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. The date of qualification was the 6th February, 1902. In conclusion let me repeat, if I may, what I have said before, that I believe it is in the interest of the militia and therefore in the interest of the public that these extensions of command should be reduced to a minimum and that no extension of command should be made unless absolutely necessary. I believe it is the duty of the department, and of the head of the deartment to give special attention to matters of this kind and see that abuses such as those which existed in connection with this regiment are not permitted to exist and are not repeated in the service of the militia.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES (North Victoria). Mr. Speaker, when the hon. minister rose to his feet he reproved my hon. friend the legal member for Lincoln (Mr. Lancaster) for having shown a disregard and contempt for the papers laid on the table of the House. He demanded fair play for Major Glasgow and he said that my hon. friend had shielded himself behind his lack of knowledge of the duties of a militia officer, at the same time advising my hon. friend to make himself acquainted with the rules governing the militia. A very strange doctrine, Mr. Speaker, coming from the hon. Minister of Militia and Defence, who, as is evidenced by the facts that have been brought before us in recent weeks, has shown an utter disregard and contempt for the papers laid on the table of the House. My hon. friend from Lincoln, I venture to say, and I am within the judgment of the House, adhered more closely to the papers laid upon the table of the House than did the hon. Minister of Militia and Defence. The hon. minister has paid no attention whatever either directly or indirectly to the papers laid on the table of the House except in so far as it suited his own convenience to draw from them improper inferences in relation to Major Ferguson and in relation to the conduct of Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory. A point at the outset and it is an old point of contention between the hon. minister and myself; he asserted that this letter which Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory wrote to the Toronto 'Mail and Empire' on the 23rd June, was written in direct violation of the King's regulations. I asked him at the time how it was a violation of the King's regulations and he gave us to understand, although he qualified it somewhat later, that Colonel Gregory was then in camp. I am going to show that the hon. minister paid no attention to the papers he has in his hand, because if he had done so he would have found that it was by his own order that Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory was suspended from his command and that he returned to his home dismissed from his regiment on the 20th June, three days before he wrote that letter.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Does my hon. friend think that it makes any difference?

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I am coming to that in a moment. I am merely pointing out to the hon. minister that he was wrong and that my hon. friend from Lincoln did not utterly disregard the papers laid on the table.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. That paper is not on the table of the House.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Well, the papers are here in my hands.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Oh, yes.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Furnished by the hon. minister, I presume they are genuine. And here let me ask the hon. minister if all the papers have been brought down. If they have not been we want them. I understood from Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory and other sources that the papers are not all here.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. In regard to that, the hon. leader of the opposition (Mr. R. L. Borden) asked the other day for some letters which had passed between us and Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory. I intended to state before and I shall repeat now what I said to the hon. leader of the opposition to-day that these papers will be here to-night or to-morrow morning. I propose to lay them on the table.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. It is four weeks since I particularly specified that I desired these papers as well as the others. I would have thought that with a reasonable amount of effort they might have been here a fortnight ago. Let me point out that if the copy with which I have been furnished of the papers laid on the table of the House is correct, the document referred to by my hon. friend (Mr. Sam. Hughes) is among the papers brought down.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I thought my hon. friend from North Victoria (Mr. Hughes) referred to Colonel Gregory's letter published in the 'Mail and Empire.'

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. No. I was referring to the minister's letter dismissing Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory. As to the papers which have not been brought down the hon. minister will be able to bring them down possibly after six o'clock in case they are not now here. The hon. minister himself in a former debate referred to the fact that he assumed the responsibility of ordering that Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory should not get an extension of command. I do not find any such order here. The hon. minister will remember distinctly that he himself assumed the responsibility of issuing the order that Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory should not get an extension of command. I find no such order here. Will the hon. minister bring that down?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. There is no such order but what happened was that when the 'Gazette' was made out a recommendation was made for two years and that recommendation was modified to one year. That is what happened and there were no papers in connection with it.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. The hon. minister has referred to various other matters in connection with this subject, and I shall take up the point in reference to the King's regulations. I have shown that Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory was not in camp at the time he wrote that letter to the Toronto 'Mail and Empire.' Now I want to tell the hon. minister one thing so that he will correctly understand one of the principles of liberty and of responsible government, and so that he will understand what it is to live in a free country and not be under the tyranny of some dark age tyrant; I want to tell him that when Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory is not on duty and is not in uniform he can write as many letters as he can get the papers to publish and that he is absolutely independent of the Minister of Militia. Is it a repetition of the Ponton case that the hon. minister would have brought before us ? Is he going to dragoon every man in the militia who dares to stand up before him or the Militia Department ; and endeavour to silence him in this way ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I would venture to suggest that as a matter of fair play, it would possibly be just as well not to discuss the Ponton case, as my opportunity for speaking is exhausted. I will be quite prepared to discuss the Ponton case when the time comes, but it would be unfair to discuss it at this moment unless I am given an opportunity to reply.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. We will discuss the case the minister has before him where the members of the musketry school down here are marched up like so many school boys and ordered to give a statement. The minister talks about round-robins, but what was done in the case of the men attending the musketry school ? Let me ask him how any of these poor fellows down at the school of musketry dare refuse the order of the commandant of the school to say that everything was satisfactory ? Why should not a lot of free men speak out and say that they wanted Colonel Gregory to remain as commanding officer ? I am glad that last night the men and the officers at the school of musketry showed themselves free men, and ready to stand up in defiance of the tyranny of their superiors, and to take part in the grand demonstration on the departure of the late General Officer Commanding. What are the facts of the case ? Colonel Gregory was in command of his regiment and there was no question as to his qualification. He comes from a military family ; he has been in the force for a generation you may say, and he has always borne the reputation of being one of the best officers in the service. Colonel Gregory had as senior major, one Major Ferguson who was an excellent officer in many ways, but whose voice had failed him. The doctors reported again and again that it was only going to be a temporary failure of the voice, and Major Gregory was absolutely justified in keeping Major Ferguson second in command until some other officer qualified. Any one who has commanded one of these corps knows the difficulty there was eight or nine years ago when an officer had to go to a permanent school and put on all the fuss and feathers of a parade before Her Majesty ; one can readily understand how lots of these fellows hesitated about the expense of going to these schools. Colonel Gregory was justified in keeping Major Ferguson there until some one was qualified for second in command.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. What Glasgow had done on the 6th of February, 1902.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I will come to that later on. Colonel Gregory became officer commanding on the 12th July, 1898, and Major Ferguson succeeded to his majority on the 20th of January, 1899, and proved himself to be a very excellent officer. Gregory's five years were up and he was given a year's extension which brought his term to the 12th of July, 1904. I remember distinctly that Colonel Gregory some years ago told me that his business affairs would not permit of his taking hold of the regiment under the proposed reorganization, unless he were given a three years extension. He is a commercial traveller ; is away from home a good deal of the time and he wanted three years in order that he might have a chance under the new arrangement to do justice to himself and his regiment. That is why Colonel Gregory wanted three years extension, and in all fairness he was as entitled to it as any man in Canada was ever entitled to an extension of time. I know for a fact that Colonel Gregory dogged Ferguson to get the best medical treatment possible to have his voice restored so that when he retired from command of the regiment Major Ferguson would be able to take his place. About the beginning of last year we began to see signs of political meddling. Colonel Otter and Colonel Gregory were in Ottawa as is shown by references in the correspondence.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. It is simply a statement of Colonel Gregory that Colonel Otter told him, and it is absolutely unsupported.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. The minister will not deny that on the 4th of April, 1903, Colonel Otter wrote recommending the extension of Colonel Gregory's command for two years in addition to the other.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Not in addition to the other.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Well for two years. Colonel Otter wrote :

> My reasons for such recommendation are these :
> 1st. The officer next in command, Major Ferguson, is not at present prepared to accept the command, as will be seen by the accompanying telegram in answer to a communication from me as to his wishes in the matter. The remaining officers of the regiment have also expressed their desire in the form of the inclosed petition——

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Round-robin.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Call it what you like. They had an absolute right to sign this and the minister cannot lay his finger on anything in the King's regulations or the Army Act to the contrary. The minister must remember that the militia of Canada are not a permanent force paid for 365 days in the year ; but must remember that we are determined to preserve our individuality as citizens in this free country, and we are not going to be held under the beck and nod of every pettifogging officer no matter how high he may be ; even the minister himself. He must remember that we are not going to be dragooned and held to the strict letter of regulations which do not apply in England to the militia volunteers or yeomanry but only to the regular forces. Does the minister imagine that we are going to allow him to dragoon us into line in this country ? We are not.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Oh, well, we know you are a great man, but I might point out that there are special regulations that apply to the militia in England which are quite as strong as the regulation I read. I am not sure that this particular regulation does not apply to the militia in England, but I think it does, and be that as it may the King's regulations apply to the militia in Canada.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. In this country the King's regulations apply only when a man is on duty or in uniform, and the minister knows that because he and I have discussed it on many an occasion.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Oh, well——

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. The minister admits it, and the West York market gardener need not interfere. The next statement of Colonel Otter is this :

> The remaining officers of the regiment have also expressed their desire in the form of the inclosed petition, that Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory should remain for another term.

The minister says that the other officers were anxious to get Colonel Gregory out, but I know several of them and I know they are independent free men who would scorn to sign this petition at the request of Colonel Gregory or any one else, if they did not believe it. Colonel Otter goes on to say :

> 2. That none of the squadron commanders have had charge of their squadrons for more than eighteen months, and lack the experience to fit them to command the regiment.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. And I extended the time for one year so that they would have eighteen months, plus a year.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. How does the minister get over the statement that Colonel Otter says they were not fit to command ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. After the time was extended a year they would have two and a half years then.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I am speaking of the facts at the time the two years were refused. I have given the reason why Colonel Gregory wished the two years extension and I am now giving the recommendation of Colonel Otter. So the minister cannot turn it on Colonel Gregory and Major Ferguson and endeavour to show that it was a conspiracy on their part. I am going by the record laid on the table of this House.

> Third, That in view of the great improvement in the efficiency of the regiment that has taken place during Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory's command, I think he is deserving of the recognition of his services which I now recommend.

What further proof do we want, in the face of Colonel Otter's own recommendation, of the political meddling of the hon. member for Welland and the senator representing that district ? The minister endeavoured, until I corrected him, to make it appear that Major Glasgow was considerably the senior of the other gentlemen in the regiment. I want to point out that the officers of the regiment stand as follows : Major Ferguson ; Major Glasgow ; Dr. Ferguson's full majority dates from February, 1892.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. If my hon. friend looks further in the list, he will learn that Major Ferguson was put in on the same day as Major Glasgow. How does he happen to be at the top ?

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I will tell the hon. gentlemen how. Dr. Ferguson was a major in that regiment in January, 1899, when Dr. Glasgow was not in a cavalry regiment at all, but was a surgeon, I believe, in the 44th Regiment, an infantry regiment in the city of St. Catharines. Is that satisfactory to the minister ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Is Dr. Ferguson a combatant officer ?

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Certainly.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Then Dr. Glasgow is.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Dr. Glasgow was not a combatant officer until 1902 ; the minister does not pretend that he was ; whereas Dr. Ferguson was in the regiment for fifteen or twenty years. Another thing : let me ask the minister why Birch and Stull, men with equal qualifications to Dr. Glasgow, men who had distinguished themselves in a cavalry regiment for many years, the brother of one of whom went to South Africa, and both of them good Liberals—although that makes no difference, for we refuse to recognize the politics of any man in the militia—why these two men were passed over and a medical doctor from the 44th Regiment was selected instead, and put over their heads. Will the minister answer that question ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Because Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory so recommended.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Let me ask a further question. What machinery was behind Colonel Gregory at that date to get that done ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I do not know.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I am pointing out to the minister that if we want to criticise motives, we can show what the motive was from the start to the finish. Now, Sir, what are the facts of the whole case ? Colonel Gregory reports, away back on December 3rd, 1902, that Major Glasgow is indifferent. The minister tried to make some capital out of the confidential report. Let me say that I do not believe in these confidential reports. I never made a confidential report in my life without showing it to every officer of the regiment. I object to these intrigues to cut a man's throat behind his back. The sooner that is stopped the better. There is hardly a regiment in this country in which the sheet which the minister holds in his hand is not taken advantage of. I was complimented once by the statement that I had sent in the most satisfactory report of my second in command in the whole community. I object to any commanding officer sending in a confidential report to the minister that would knife a man from behind his back. The first principle of British justice is to bring the accused and the accuser face to face ; and if the commanding officer has any charge to make against any man in his regiment, the man should have a chance to answer it. The report made by Colonel Gregory in reference to Major Ferguson shows that he was honest, because he says that although Major Ferguson had worked his way up in the regiment, he was not as good a man as he would like, being fair in general ability, fair in general professional requirements, indifferent in practical proficiency, in drill and in the field, good in all other respects excepting fair in judgment. All these things are brought out because Dr. Ferguson, I presume, was indifferent owing to being laid up by ill-health.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. What does the hon. gentleman have to say about the letter which he will find in the report of the 3rd of December, in which Colonel Gregory singles out Dr. Glasgow to be reported against, and makes no reference whatever to Dr. Ferguson, who is certainly deserving of a more unfavourable report in that very report than Dr. Glasgow ?

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. These are officers for promotion. Dr. Ferguson could not be promoted to any higher place, and therefore Colonel Gregory had no occasion to report upon him.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. If Colonel Gregory was going out, he would be promoted.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. No, he would have to pass a special examination, as the minister knows. I had to do it, although I thought I knew as much about drill as the others. I took the courses at Kingston and at London, although I had passed examinations in the same matters years before. Every officer in the service, as the minister knows, must do the same thing.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. If my hon. friend will look at the sheet under the heading of 'practical proficiency in drill and in the field,' he will find Major Ferguson marked indifferent and Major Glasgow indifferent ; and if he looks at the special report which Colonel Gregory makes he will find the following :

I have the honour to report that the officers mentioned in my report as indifferent are—

Not Major Ferguson, but first, Major Glasgow, although they are both reported indifferent in this report.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Is the minister getting childish, or what is the matter with him ? This is a special report to Colonel Otter himself, and why should Colonel Gregory mention those who are indifferent ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Why should he put one man down as indifferent and not the other ?

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Because he is reporting men who are fit for promotion. Major Ferguson could not be promoted, because he was already second in command, and therefore did not require to be reported upon to Colonel Otter.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. If the hon. gentleman will allow me ?

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Oh, yes ; I will allow anything, although the minister is not always so courteous to me.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Of course, I know I am very remiss in that regard.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Yes, I am sure the minister has been quite brusque.

Sir FREDRICK BORDEN. Under heading 14 the question is put :

Is he fit for promotion to higher rank ?

The reply opposite to Ferguson's name is 'yes.' Thus he was fit for promotion according to Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Certainly.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. And liable to be promoted.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. These are for the position of second in command. Major Glasgow, who intended taking another course at school, and Taylor, who was not yet qualified. He reports Glasgow as indifferent in the two essentials for second in command——

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Ferguson also.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. As indiffrent in practical efficiency, in drill in the field, and as only fair in horsemanship, the chief requisite of a good cavalry man. He reports Ferguson as good in horsemanship. These two points show that he had Major Glasgow's qualification for promotion in mind when he took the stand he did. Now, what are the facts? He goes to Glasgow and says: Ferguson is unqualified to be promoted on account of the weakness in his throat, I want you to go to the school and be qualified. The minister has told us that this man Glasgow was as well qualified as the other. Now, the minister knows that technically he may be right, but practically he is absolutely wrong, and I shall show him by his own regulations that he is absolutely wrong. I will take the case of an officer who succeeds to the command of a regiment. Under the present regulations he must go and take his qualifying certificate; that is, he must go and brush himself up, so to speak, before he can become commander of a regiment. As far back as 1897, I had to do that, so had my friend Colonel Thompson, my friend Colonel Ward, and every other officer in the country before they could be promoted from one step to the other. A few years before, this did not have to be done. Is the minister fair to this House and the country in trying to make believe that the status in relation to the certificates and the regulations applying to the certificates are the same as they were ten years ago, although a man who came in ten years ago was as well qualified as one appointed now? I will prove by his own regulations that he is wrong. In the regulation dated June, 1904, for appointments and promotions, I find:

No person shall be appointed or promoted to any command rank or appointment in the militia unless such person has the qualification which from time to time may be prescribed for such rank or appointment.

4. No person shall be promoted unless he has served at least two years in the rank which he then holds.

Now, I turn to another militia order, No. 69, Wednesday, March 3, 1904. I find there that the classes for the purposes of professionally qualifying for promotions in the militia, other than the permanent force, will be divided into five classes. The fourth class is:

Of majors who desire to qualify for regimental command and of officers who have passed the third-class examinations and desire to qualify for staff appointments.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. How are they to qualify?

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. By the rules.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. By being instructed at a central camp. Look at clause 3, on the next page.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES (reading):

The third, fourth and fifth classes of officers mentioned in paragraph No. 1 of this order—except those resident in Military Districts Nos. 10 and 11, for whom special provision will be made—and the third-class of non-commissioned officers mentioned in paragraph No. 2 of this order—except those resident in Military Districts Nos. 10 and 11, for whom also special provision will be made—will be instructed at the Central Camp only.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. There was no central camp, and therefore there could be no qualification.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I point out to the House that under the minister's own rules before Major Glasgow——

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. No.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES—could become second in command, he had to comply with this rule here, or else the rules are made fish for one and flesh for another.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. No.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I know that officers already had to pass these examinations, that there has been disturbance in the country before, and that under the minister's own regulations these officers have to comply with the necessary requirements before they can proceed.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. This is the celebrated regulation which was made in the effort to improve the education of officers, and this regulation did not rescind the previous regulations and orders of 1898, although, by an extraordinary attempt in a militia order, the General Officer Commanding undertook to make a militia general order rescind an Order in Council.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. He is not out of the country yet; be careful.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I do not think I have shown myself to be very much afraid of the general or of the hon. gentleman opposite.

All previous orders relating to the training of officers and non-commissioned officers at schools of instruction, are cancelled.

That is, a General Officer Commanding, by a mere militia order, attempted to cancel a general order. As a matter of fact, the general order of 1898 is in force, and there has never been any qualification whatever under any other order than the order of 1898, which covers the qualification of Major Glasgow.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Now, Sir, Colonel Otter, not content with the recommendation that Colonel Gregory's time be extended, comes back on November 3, 1903, and again demands the extension necessary for Colonel Gregory, but secret influences are at work, the new influences that have been brought into play, which we have recently discovered in connection with the 13th Light Dragoons, and now with this and other regiments. The political pull has been brought into force, and the hon. member for Welland stated, in language more forcible than polite, at a dinner at St. Catharines, that Lord Dundonald had nothing to do with granting an extension of command to Colonel Gregory, and that he would not get it.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I do not believe that.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I will take the word of a gentleman who heard him much in preference to that of the hon. member for Welland (Mr. German).

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. That is hard on a brother member of the House.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. In a letter from Lord Aylmer, the 30th June, 1904, Lord Aylmer asks—and I am sorry that the papers between Colonel Otter and Colonel Gregory are not here. I have them, but they are not official, and therefore I do not care to use them.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. The gentleman may use them ; I have them here, all but one letter, I believe, and I shall be glad to send them over.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I think I have them all.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Then there is no objection at all. As a matter of fact, I got the letters, and then received word from Colonel Otter that one letter had been found later, and I thought it better to bring them all down together.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. On January 10, 1904, Colonel Otter writes to Colonel Gregory :

My dear Colonel,—Will you please send me at once recommendation for the appointment of Major Glasgow as regimental major and also for the officer who is to succeed him in command of 'D' squadron. I think that your extension for another year will be arranged.

(Sgd.) W. D. OTTER.

Colonel Gregory wrote in reply that he did not so intend. Colonel Otter writes on November 3 to Colonel Gregory in reference to the letter which I have previously quoted here, showing that he has again urged the department to give Colonel Gregory the extension. Then Colonel Gregory wrote a reply to Colonel Otter that he did not feel disposed to recommend Major Glasgow at that time. On the 14th of January, Otter comes back on Gregory again. He says :

I have your note of yesterday and cannot understand what you mean by writing such a reply to a request that you are in duty bound to accede to.

Why is he bound to accede to any political meddling of a senator or any minister ? If Colonel Otter is weak enough for this, Colonel Gregory is not weak enough to bow to this command.

Please explain this at once, as I cannot accept from you such a reply. It is, to say the least of it insubordinate, though you may not be aware of it.

I want to point out that, on the day Col. Gregory wrote the letter, to which the letter of 14th January, 1901, was a reply, Col. Otter had not the slightest control over him. And as far as I am concerned, I am going to see that our militia officers and men show the spirit of freedom, and that when the minister or any of his satelites under the political regime that seems to be in force at present, undertakes to dragoon them, they will stand up for their rights as free men, and not allow themselves to be trampled upon. Under the statutory law of Canada, the minister has no control over these men except when on duty or in uniform.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I have no control, but it seems to me their superior officers ought to have.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Not the slightest. Why should they ? Has the minister no better opinion of the militia ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. You would have a pretty funny militia if you had your way.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Not at all. But we would have a very funny militia if any minister could lay his thumb on these men and say to them : You must dance to the tune I play or I will make you suffer, because you are under the King's regulations. These men are not going to submit to that kind of thing. Then follows other correspondence until the 21st January, when Col. Otter again writes Col. Gregory :

I have yours of the 18th instant and accept your explanation in so far as the abruptness of your note is concerned, for most abrupt it was, being a direct refusal to carry out instructions given you without assigning any reason.

And a little later, when poor Col. Gregory assigned reasons, he was promptly dismissed from the service.

I want once more to tell you that it is necessary you should recommend Major Glasgow as second in command and also the officer who is to take over his squadron, so please let me have inclosed form duly filled in as soon as possible. You may be sure that I have good reasons for asking this action on your part.

I want to know these reasons. What are the good reasons which Col. Otter had for his action in this matter ? Was it a question of political pull ? Here again I want to revive the memory of the minister, and possibly he had better ask his deputy. The hon. minister told me in the House that he assumed the responsibility of cancelling the order giving Col. Gregory an extension of command for two years. I want to see that order.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Not cancelled it, changed it.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. The hon. minister changed it, and I want to see it. We want that correspondence brought down. I am told that Col. Gregory informs his friends that there was an order of that kind issued.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Does the hon. gentleman doubt my word ? I stated a moment ago that the thing happened in this way. A recommendation was made to extend the time for two years. I altered that recommendation to one year. There is not the slightest objection to showing the hon. gentleman or anybody else the original document.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. We would like to see it.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. But it is the first time since I have been in parliament that I have known an hon. gentleman to refuse to accept the statement of a minister as to a question of fact. Of course when the hon. gentleman doubts my word, I shall bring the paper down.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. The minister will pardon me. I want to tell him that I have every reason for thinking he is mistaken ; and I would suggest to him that he should consult his deputy and look up all the correspondence, and he will find out that Col. Gregory's statement is true, that the minister, through his deputy or somebody, issued an order to the General Officer Commanding to cancel the 'Gazette' which gave Col. Gregory two years' extension. The minister will find out, on examining the record, that what Col. Gregory informs his friends is true.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. No such thing. I remember exactly what happened. When the recommendation came to me I changed it, and initialled the change, and there it is. I have seen it myself within the month.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. There was no letter accompanying it ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. No. I am speaking of the extension of time of Col. Gregory.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. That is the very thing I am speaking about. Then Col. Otter goes on to say :

I once more tell you that it is necessary you would recommend Major Glasgow as second in command and also the officer who is to take over his squadron, so please let me have the inclosed form duly filled in as soon as possible. You may be sure I have good reasons for asking this action on your part.

I wish the minister would ask Col. Otter for the good reasons. Now we come to a letter from Col. Otter to the officer commanding the Second Dragoons :

Your letter of 22nd of February was duly received and replied to yesterday. The recommendation of Major Glasgow as second in command will be sent in at once, and the extension of your command I have every reason to believe will follow.

Still Col. Gregory stood to his guns. He still said : Until this man goes and qualifies, until he carries out his promise to me by taking a course at the school, I shall not put him in as second in command.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Improve his qualifications ! He was already qualified.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Then Col. Otter says :

I have yours of the 22nd, re the promotion of Major Glasgow. I wrote this officer a few days ago and he has promised me to attend at the school before camp for a course, and am quite prepared to forward his recommendation as second in command at once.

So that Col. Otter is still bearing out Col. Gregory's contention that Major Glasgow has not the necessary qualifications to take the second in command.

And I am quite prepared to forward his recommendation as second in command at once. Will you therefore please send me the necessary recommendation as soon as possible. In the letter above quoted you refer to certain conditions under which you will only make the recommendations to which I refer to. But I would not advise you to adhere to the determination you have expressed as Major Glasgow has promised to attend the course before camp. I think that ought to be enough. I am anxious to get this matter settled as soon as possible.

Then we come to another letter from Col. Gregory to Col. Otter :

Sarnia, March 7th, 1904.

Dear Sir,—I have yours of the 2nd instant re promotion of Major Glasgow, and in reply beg to say that if Major Glasgow does attend the school as he has promised, he should remain in command of the squadron until after camp, when his promotion would immediately follow. I am firmly convinced that the proposition I made was not only reasonable but in the interest of the regiment, and I have come to the conclusion that if any extension of tenure depends upon my acceding to the demands of Major Glasgow I had better resign my command at once.

He was still determined that before he would recommend this officer to be second in command, Major Glasgow should be qualified, and rather than recommend him, under the circumstances, he would leave the regiment. Then Col. Otter writes back to Col. Gregory :

Toronto, 10th March, 1904.

I have yours of the 7th instant re Major Glasgow, and regret that you cannot see your way clear to make the recommendation. An action must shortly be taken. I now propose to do it myself.

So that the minister, in endeavouring to shoulder the blame on Colonel Lessard must see that there was a conspiracy behind all this. Why should Colonel Lessard have become imbued with the notion to get near Colonel Otter, and why should Colonel Otter hold the intention as early as the 10th March to act himself in the matter unless there was a power behind the throne ? Unless political pull was being exercised to the detriment of the force and in order to get Major Glasgow promoted. The fact is before us that without Major Glasgow's knowledge stores were handed over to another man without the officer in command of the regiment being consulted. Here let me tell the minister that he will search the records of the Militia Department from confederation down to the present hour, and he will not find another instance where such a thing was done in connection with a regiment without the commanding officer being consulted and being a party to it. It is scandalous that such a thing should be allowed to take place in a free country. One would think that we were under a despotism of the dark ages. If such things are permitted we shall prove ourselves unworthy, of civil and religious liberty. Here is a letter from Colonel Gregory to Colonel Otter, dated May 4, 1904 :

Sir,—In view of our previous correspondence I have the honour to respectfully request you to give me the following information :

1. When and by whom was the order given for the transfer of the arms and accoutrements of 'D' squadron from Major Glasgow to Captain Sharp, and when did the transfer take place ?

(The order was given by me and transfer made on 25th March, 1904.—W. D. O.)

2. Has Major Glasgow been recommended for the position of second in command ?

(Yes, 4, 4, '04.—W. D. O.)

3. Is my tenure of command to be extended beyond July 12, 1904 ?

(No recent recommendation has been made as I understood from Colonel Lessard that you had told him that you did not desire such as you proposed resigning—W. D. O., 13, 5, '04.)

Then Colonel Gregory, as a free man, answered as a free man would do. This letter I may say reached him during the Niagara camp :

Camp Niagara, June 15th, 1904.

To Colonel Otter—

Sir,—As a protest against the system of political intrigue that compels my superior officers to interfere with the efficiency and discipline of the regiment under my command, by promoting without my approval an inefficient officer in my regiment while knowing and acknowledging such inefficiency, and at the same time being aware of the fact that I was trying to compel the officer referred to (Major S. H. Glasgow) to improve his qualification before I recommended him for the promotion to the position of second in command,

I hereby tender my resignation as commanding officer of Second Dragoons, and would further request that I be relieved of my command at once. I have just seen the official announcement of promotions above referred to in the recent issue of the 'Canada Gazette.'

I have the honour to be, Sir,

ROLAND W. GREGORY,

Lieutenant-Colonel Commanding Second Dragoons.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES.

Now, Sir, see the little petty politician get his hand in. Here is another statement :

Camp Niagara, June 21, 1904.

Colonel Gregory to Colonel Otter.

I have the honour to request that I be allowed to correct the statements made by Sir Frederick Borden regarding myself as reported in the Toronto 'Globe' of yesterday.

I do not know what these statements are, but I presume the letter of Colonel Gregory of June 23rd, corrected them. Now we will see what the sequel to this is. Colonel Otter takes that letter of Colonel Gregory's resignation where he says :

As a protest against the system of political intrigue that compels my superior officers to interfere with the efficiency and disposition of the regiment—

Colonel Gregory does not blame Colonel Otter, but he blames the political intriguers in Ottawa. In reference to that, the colonel forwarded this communication :

In connection with this communication, I resent and deny the charge of 'political intrigue' with relation to the appointment of Major Glasgow as second in command of the Second Dragoons.

As I have already explained in a previous memo, I considered it advisable in the interests of the regiment that the appointment above referred to should be filled with the least possible delay, and as Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory would not make a recommendation in the matter, I felt justified under the circumstances in doing so without his recommendation.

We find Colonel Otter's explanation different from that which I quoted a few minutes ago. I referred to it at that time, and asked the minister to obtain from Colonel Otter an explanation of why he had changed his base, why he had now found out that Major Glasgow was qualified for the command whereas a few weeks ago he found he was not qualified for the command.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. He never said so.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. He says he was unfit for the command. Colonel Otter says on the 4th of August, 1903, giving as one reason for his recommendation :

Second, That none of the squadron commanders have had charge of their squadrons for more than eighteen months, and lack the experience to fit them to command the regiment.

Now there was no camp and no opportunity for Major Glasgow to get any training, or to get any further experience between the 4th of August, 1903, and the date when he was placed in command of that squadron. I ask the minister, did Major Glasgow spend any time in school, or one day in camp anywhere, where he could obtain the qualification to make him better fitted on the 10th day of June, this year than he was on the 4th day of August, 1903 ? Then he goes on to say :

That in view of the great improvement in the efficiency of the regiment that has taken place during Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory's command, I think he is deserving of the recognition of his services which I now recommend.

I want the minister to obtain from Colonel Otter and bring to this House his reasons for changing his position, and for finding out so suddenly that Major Glasgow was entitled to the command.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. If the hon. gentleman would read the memorandum of Colonel Otter addressed to the adjutant general, which is among the papers, he might get some light.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. What is the date of the memorandum ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. June 10, 1904.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I will read this paragraph in which he says :

On this I wrote Major Glasgow advising him to take a course as soon as possible, to which he replied on the 27th of February that it was his intention to do so, and had such in contemplation before hearing from me.

I thank the minister for drawing my attention to that clause where Colonel Otter deliberately recognizes the fact that Major Glasgow was not qualified to take the position of second in command, but that he urged him——

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Will the hon. gentleman read another paragraph?

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. The hon. minister asked me to refer to this recommendation and I am referring to it. The next paragraph reads :

Towards the end of March, in order to get all probable transfers completed, I had the transfer of the squadron made by the District Staff Adjutant and at the same time that officer got all particulars concerning the officers affected by the change, and filled up the militia form C1 on the day the transfer took place, namely the 28th of March.

Now I am delighted that he has referred to me again in this matter. When he opened up he charged my hon. friend from Lincoln with not being familiar with the proper routine of promotions in the service. I charge the hon. minister with having deliberately inspired Colonel Otter to trample under foot the recognized course of responsible government in dealing with promotions.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I say that is absolutely without the slightest foundation.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Well many a man has been hung for circumstantial evidence and in this case the hon. minister would stand a poor chance of having a verdict of not guilty rendered in his favour.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. If you were the jury I might.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. The hon. minister has declared that my hon. frend from Lincoln did not understand the proper course to be pursued in making recommendations. The captain of a squadron recommends to the officer commanding. If it is a major commanding the squadron then the officer commanding the regiment under responsible government is the man and the only man that can do that. I will recall to the mind of the hon. minister the fact that a gentleman who is now a senator from Lindsay undertook to meddle in the formation of my regiment, undertook to force a man into the position of major who was absolutely disqualified and that I defied him and told him that there was only one person in Canada that could make that recommendation. I would not allow the district officer commanding to recommend an appointment over my head. I venture to say that if the minister and the Department of Militia undertook to pursue an illegal course we would be justified in the regiment in pursuing an illegal course also. That is the only way to bring these gentlemen to time and I am surprised that Colonel Otter should undertake to step into a regiment and make a recommendation that only one in the empire can make under our law, viz., the commanding officer. I am satisfied that Major Glasgow's appointment as second in command without having the necessary qualification is not legal unless sanctioned by Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory, the officer in command of the regiment. This is the course laid down under our responsible government and the minister who stands up and charges my hon. friend from Lincoln with not being familiar with the proper course has been trampling under foot every regulation that has been in force in the service for generations. Does the hon. minister expect that this House and this country are simple enough to believe that Colonel Otter would have dared to take the course which he pursued if he had not known that the minister was at his back ? If he does he must think us much more simple than we are.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. He did not know from me.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I do not think there is anything more to be said. There is a great deal of correspondence here but I will not go into it further. It shows the government to have been absolutely guilty of political meddling. There is just this one point and it is the contemptible manner in which the minister dispenses with the services of a man whose record is as honourable as that of Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory. Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory's services in the force have been as follows : He joined the St. Catharines troop commanded by his father in 1867. He received his commission as cornet at the suggestion of Colonel Duree, deputy adjutant-general, on the 10th January, 1870, and at the request of the late Colonel Villiers, then brigade-major, he took the adjutancy of the dragoons in 1876, he held that position until he took command of the St. Catharines troop in 1883. He held the command of the St. Catharines troop until appointed major, second in command, of the regiment in 1893 and this position he held until he got command of the regiment on July 12, 1898. There is a record of which any man might be proud and every one in the old Niagara district knows that Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory has been one of the most self-sacrificing and disinterested soldiers in the service. Yet, a gentleman with a record of that kind, because he has the spirit of a free man, because he resents the petty political tyranny of the minister and his satellites, because he dares to speak out is treated in this manner. He resigns, but, Sir, in place of accepting his resignation in place of allowing this gentleman to retire the hon. minister who has become so egotistical, carried away by his self-importance does what ? Here we have a letter from the General Officer Commanding the militia. Thank God it is not signed 'Dundonald.'

From the General Officer Commanding Canadian militia to the Deputy Minister of Militia and Defence.

Ottawa, 18th June, 1904.

Resignation of Lt.-Col. Gregory, 2nd Dragoons.

While the attached letter, of the 15th inst., from Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory, officer commanding 2nd Dragoons, is grossly insubordinate in tone, whether his statements are true or false, I feel that it would be better as Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory's regiment is now in camp at Niagara, and under his immediate command, that he should be suspended from his command, furnished with transport requisitions and ordered to return to his home forthwith.

The apparent cause of this officer's insubordination—the promotion of Major Glasgow as second in command of the 2nd Dragoons without the concurrence of Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory—is fairly well set forth in the accompanying correspondence, but if the hon. minister should consider it desirable that further information be supplied, a court of inquiry can be assembled at a later date for that purpose, after which the disposal of Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory's services as an officer of the militia can be decided upon.

(Sgd.) AYLMER,
Colonel, commanding Canadian militia.

Here is the order suspending Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES.

Headquarters, 20th June, 1904.

From the Adjutant General, Ottawa, to District Officer Commanding, Military District No. 2, Toronto.

SUSPENDED FROM COMMAND.

Lieutenant-Colonel R. W. Gregory, commanding 2nd Dragoons.

With reference to the resignation of Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory, commanding 2nd Dragoons, and your covering letter of the 16th instant thereon, you will be so good as to suspend Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory from the command of his regiment until further orders, provide him with the necessary transport requisitions to cover his immediate return to his home, and hand over the command of the 2nd Dragoons to the next senior officer in the usual manner.

(Sgd.) D. H. VIDAL, Colonel,
For Adjutant General.

Is that a fitting conclusion to the connection of this gentleman with the militia ? I am amazed to think that the hon. minister should lend himself to any interference such as has been clearly proven in the conduct of this whole matter. I am not saying anything against the qualifications of Major Glasgow as a medical doctor. But in the 44th he was only the surgeon of the regiment and he never had any qualifications as a combatant officer until 1902. Then, he is placed over the heads of older military men in the regiment. Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory shows no ill will towards him. He speaks well of him although he says he is not good at drill and not a good rider and he urges that he shall go to the school and qualify himself. Then, it comes down to the question of extension of Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory's command. He says —at least he said to me ; I am a commercial traveller, I am away from home a great deal, it is not worth my while to take the command of the regiment for another year and go on with the organization of it, but, if I can get the command for three years, I am willing to take it. Then, he compromised by offering to accept an extension of two years, but the hon. minister denies him that right and confers in an unconstitutional manner the appointment on Major Glasgow. I am not saying a word against Major Glasgow, I do not know the gentleman, but as far as Major Glasgow's being placed second in command of that regiment is concerned, although Colonel Otter's report as well as Lieutnant-Colonel Gregory's report says that he is not qualified and that he should go to the school, it simply presents another instance of the militia being dragged through the political mire. I will tell the right hon. Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) that Mr. Mackenzie never allowed it. The old Liberal leader in bygone days never allowed it. The old Minister of Militia (Mr. Ross) has told me, as he has told this House, that he never directly or indirectly permitted it. Sir John Macdonald never permitted it. He alweys said that he kept the bench and the militia free from party politics, and if the hon. Minister of Militia has fallen into bad hands I call upon the right hon. Prime Minister to step in and see that party politics are kept out of the militia of this country.

PRIVATE BILLS.

SECOND READING.

Bill (No. 159) respecting the Pacific Bank of Canada—Mr. Holmes.

WEST CANADIAN COLLIERIES, LIMITED.

House proceeded to consider amendments made by the Senate to Bill (No. 80) respecting the West Canadian Collieries, Limited—Mr. Oliver.

Mr. SPROULE. I have once before suggested that in the case of these Bills coming from the Senate, some one should take the responsibility of announcing to the House whether the amendments made by the Senate are of some consequence, or merely verbal alterations.

Mr. OLIVER. The amendments here are clerical; the only exception being that clause 8, providing that the company may dispose of its undertaking, and clause 9, which provides for the issue of paid-up stock by the company, are stricken out.

Amendments read the second time and concurred in.

SUPPLY—RESIGNATION OF LIEUTENANT COLONEL GREGORY.

House resumed debate on motion for Supply.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). In view of the somewhat elaborate discussion which has taken place on this matter, I propose to detain the House only a very few moments. It would appear to me that the attacks which the Minister of Militia has made upon Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory are founded more upon inference than upon any evidence we have before us. After a pretty careful examination of this correspondence from beginning to end, I do not find anything that would justify one in coming to the conclusion that there had been any conspiracy on the part of Colonel Gregory. The Minister of Militia founds his inference principally upon the fact of Major Ferguson's illness and the refusal of Colonel Gregory to recommend the appointment of Major Glasgow as second in command. That inference is unreasonable and without any foundation. It is beyond question, so far as I have been able to gather, that Major Ferguson was absolutely qualified in a military sense, and that under the advice of experts he fully expected to recover from the infirmity of the throat which had occasioned his loss of voice. It was therefore entirely fair that Major Ferguson should be allowed a reasonable time to undergo medical treatment, in order that he might recover and proceed to promotion in the regiment.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Major Ferguson's qualification was no better than that of Major Glasgow; in fact, according to the confidential report of Colonel Gregory, it was not as good. They were both reported 'indifferent' in a certain thing, and in other things 'fair' and 'good.' The report upon Glasgow was somewhat better than that upon Ferguson.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I do not think that concerns the question very much, and I will tell the hon. gentleman why. The question is, whether or not it was a reasonable thing for Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory to insist that Major Ferguson and Major Glasgow should obtain some further training and qualification before either should be recommended as second in command. In that matter Colonel Gregory should have the right to his own judgment; the commanding officer is not supposed to make his recommendation as a mere matter of form; he has to exercise his judgment upon it, and the only sound criticism that could be made upon Colonel Gregory would be that in refusing this recommendation he was not acting bona fide. That would be a fair, and it would be a severe criticism on the part of the Minister of Militia, if he had any foundation for it. But any such idea is absolutely inconsistent with the evidence before us. I am willing to concede, for the purpose of argument, that the minister is correct in saying that Major Ferguson's qualifications were no better than Major Glasgow's, but what does Major Ferguson himself say when there is some question raised as to his undertaking the command of that regiment. In a letter, dated the 13th of July, 1903, he says:

> Letter just received. By all means I wish to see Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory's time extended. I am not in a position now to take his place and if it were open to-morrow could not, so wish you would do what is within your power to have his time extended as long as possible. I hope to be able to get to the school this coming winter and qualify.

It has not been denied by the Minister of Militia that Major Ferguson was as well qualified as Major Glasgow, so that out of the mouth of Major Ferguson, as the first witness, we have the distinct statement that if he should take the command of that regiment he regards it as absolutely necessary that he should go to the school and qualify. These gentlemen may be technically qualified, but they may not be regarded either by themselves or by their commanding officer as professionally qualified to fill that high position in such a sense as would justify the recommendation of the officer commanding. The next witness is Major Glasgow himself, and I will read a letter which has not been placed before the House as yet. This letter is dated the 27th of February, 1904, signed by Major Glasgow and addressed to Colonel Otter :

Dear Colonel Otter,—I received your letter and in reply will state that it is my intention to attend the school to improve myself before the June camp. I thank you for your good advice and in fairness to myself will say that I had the matter under serious contemplation before the receipt of your communication.

Yours truly,
S. H. GLASGOW.

Major Glasgow himself is the second witness in answer to the minister, and he recognizes the fact that he must have a further training before he can hope for a recommendation as second in command, or promotion as commanding officer. He excuses himself ; he says :

In fairness to myself will say that I had the matter in serious contemplation before the receipt of your communication.

That is in reply to a letter from Colonel Otter, in which the District Officer Commanding had pointed out to Major Glasgow the absolute necessity of adopting this course if he desired to be recommended as second in command. Here are two witnesses to prove that it was eminently reasonable for Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory to call upon Major Glasgow to get some further training before he should be recommended to this position. How then can the Minister of Militia for one moment say that Colonel Gregory was acting in bad faith when he suggested that Major Glasgow should take this very course ?

It was a course which Major Ferguson admitted to be necessary in his own case ; it was a course which Major Glasgow admitted to be necessary in his case ; and, according to the statement of the Minister of Militia this afternoon, these two officers, so far as qualification is concerned, were on the same footing. But we have a third witness ; we have the testimony of Colonel Otter in support of Colonel Gregory in this regard. Here is a report from Colonel Otter to the Adjutant General under date of the 10th of June, 1904, and it contains the following passage :

On the 22nd February Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory replied that he would recommend Major Glasgow provided that he, 1st, retained the command of the squadron until after the June camp; 2nd, that he would in the meantime take a course at the Royal School of Cavalry, and improve his qualification.

Now, if the matter had presented itself to Colonel Otter as it evidently presents itself to the Minister of Militia, or rather as he presented it to the House this afternoon, Colonel Otter would have said : I immediately told Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory that that was not at all necessary, that he was going out of his way to make any such suggestion as that with regard to Major Glasgow, because he was fully qualified, and it was his duty either to recommend or not to recommend. Does Colonel Otter leave the situation in that light ? Not by any means. Let him speak for himself. His letter continues as follows :

On this I wrote Major Glasgow advising him to take a course as soon as possible, to which he replied on the 27th February that it was his intention to do so, and had such in contemplation before hearing from me.

You have thus three witnesses not only as to the absolute bona fides of Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory, but as to the wisdom of the course which he suggested Major Glasgow should follow. Under these circumstances it does not seem to me becoming that any reflection should be made on one side of the House or the other on the bona fides of Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory in that regard, or on his conduct in making this suggestion.

I will not deal further with that portion of the correspondence, because it has been gone over pretty thoroughly, and I do not want to repeat what has been said. But I am bound to say a few words on a certain portion of the correspondence which has been read this afternoon, and I must confess that it presents itself to my mind in a very peculiar light. On the 4th day of August, 1903, Colonel Otter wrote to Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory as follows :

Dear Colonel,—I have yours of the 23rd ultimo re your extension of command, and while I am sure the period you name, three years, would not be entertained by the department, I am quite willing to recommend you for a term of two years, which I have done to-day, and trust to have approved.

In haste, yours,
W. D. OTTER.

I may say in passing that on no less than two occasions did Colonel Otter recommend Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory for an extension of two years. On two occasions he stated that Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory's extension of the command for that period was in his opinion necessary to the welfare and efficiency of the regiment ; and I would have thought that after the report of an experienced officer of Colonel Otter's standing, the Minister of Militia should have given some better reason to the House for overriding that report than the reason he gave the House this afternoon. However, the whole record is on 'Hansard.' On the 3rd of November, 1903, Colonel Otter writes again to Colonel Gregory as follows :

My dear Colonel,—I have your official of the 2nd instant, but before forwarding it to headquarters I am to-day writing urging that my recommendation of some months ago, for two years, be granted. You will thus understand any delay that may take place.

On the 10th of January, a little more than two months after he had forwarded that second urgent recommendation, there is a letter from Colonel Otter to Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory as follows :

My dear Colonel,—Will you please send me at once recommendation for appointment of Major Glasgow as regimental major, and also for the officer who is to succeed him in command of 'D' squadron.

I think that your extension for another year will be arranged.

It appears that in reply to that Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory wrote a letter of which I have no copy ; but on the 14th of January, Colonel Otter wrote in reply to that letter as follows :

Dear Colonel,—I have your note of yesterday and cannot understand what you mean by writing such a reply to a request that you are in duty bound to accede to. Please explain yourself at once as I cannot accept from you such a reply. It is to say the least of it insubordinate, though you may not be aware of it.

I may not thoroughly understand the principles of military etiquette, but I confess that I do not understand how Colonel Otter could say to Colonel Gregory that he is in duty bound to make a particular recommendation. Is this recommendation a mere matter of form ? Has Colonel Otter, as district officer commanding, the right to say to Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory, You are bound to recommend a particular individual as second in command, though that is against your better judgment ? If there is a form of that kind, I would say that in the interest of the whole country, in the interest of the militia especially, it had better be abolished at once. In reply to that, Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory, on January 18, 1904, writes as follows :

Dear Sir,—Yours of the 14th instant received and in explanation beg to say that in the interest of 'D' squadron and the regiment I did not think it advisable to take Major Glasgow from his squadron at the present time. I may not have been sufficiently clear in my note as to my reasons, but I certainly had no intention of being insubordinate.

To that Colonel Otter, on the 21st of January, replied as follows :

Dear Colonel,—I have yours of the 18th instant and accept your explanation so far as the abruptness of your note is concerned, for most abrupt it was, being a direct refusal to carry out instructions given you without assigning any reason.

That seems very curious language to come from Colonel Otter in respect to a matter in which Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory has a right to exercise his judgment—ay, more than that, is bound to exercise his judgment. If Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory gave a recommendation of that kind against his true judgment, he would be guilty of dereliction of his duty in every sense of the term. It would be dishonest for him to do so ; it would be wrong for him to do so. And yet Colonel Otter seems to think he has a right to issue instructions to Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory commanding him to recommend a particular officer as the proper person to become second in command.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. He has no authority.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. If he has any such authority, I should think that the sooner it is taken away the better. His letter continues as follows :

I once more tell you that it is necessary you should recommend Major Glasgow as second in command and also the officer who is to take over his squadron, so please let me have the inclosed form duly filled in as soon as possible.

And he uses that language, although he has been definitely and distinctly told by Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory that he does not regard it as in the best interests of the regiment that he should recommend Major Glasgow as the second in command. It seems remarkable language to be used by an officer in a position of that kind. For my part I am not able to understand it. Colonel Otter continues :

You may be sure that I have good reasons for asking this action on your part.

A most mysterious portion of the letter, and a portion of which we have had no explanation up to the present time. I accept at once the statement of the Minister of Militia, that he knows of nothing to which this can refer, if he went that far, but whether there was some action on the part of the minister or not—and in view of his denial we are bound to assume there was not—there certainly was action on the part of some person who thought that he had influence in matters of this kind, and it is evidently on account of the threatened exercise of that influence that Colonel Otter sees fit to say, dares to say, to Colonel Gregory in respect of this matter :

You may be sure that I have good reasons for asking this action on your part.

Let it not be forgotten in dealing with this correspondence that Colonel Otter has twice recommended Colonel Gregory for an extension of two years, has pressed that upon the department, and that that appointment is now being delayed while Colonel Otter is fencing with Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory during all these weeks for the purpose of compelling him to make a recommendation which Colonel Gregory thought he had not the right to make.

The correspondence continues as follows : On January 26, Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory wrote Colonel Otter as follows :

Sir,—I have the honour to report that I have made the following arrangement with Major S. H. Glasgow re promotion.

First, that he retain command of 'D' squadron until after the camp in June, and in the meantime try and take a special course at Royal Military College to improve his qualification.

Second, that I will at, or immediately after camp recommend him for the position of second in command of the regiment.

I expect to have a letter from Major Glasgow concurring in this arrangement which I trust will be satisfactory.

On the 22nd of February he writes a further letter, which I need not read, and which is practically to the same effect. Let it be understood that during all this period there has still been no action taken upon the report of Colonel Otter, that an extension of two years should be granted to Colonel Gregory.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I would like to interrupt my hon. friend there. Action was taken in September, 1903, upon that report, and, so far as I know, there was no report except a letter a month later from Colonel Otter, in which he regrets that the extension had not been made for two years instead of one. I do not know of any other report since that time, and I do not think there was any.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. There were two reports of Colonel Otter's.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I think they were close together. There was his first report, favouring an extension of command for two years. That extension was cut down by me to one year. Almost immediately after there was a letter from Colonel Otter, regretting that the extension had not been carried out for two years instead of one. That was within a month.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I think the minister has not very carefully followed the correspondence I have already read. On November 3, 1903, Colonel Otter writes to Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory as follows :

My dear colonel,—I have your official of the second instant, but before forwarding it to headquarters I am to-day——

That is on November 3rd, 1903.

—writing urging that my recommendation of some months ago for a two years' extension be granted. You will thus understand any delay that may take place.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. That letter of Colonel Otter's is among the papers.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I know it is, but my hon. friend thought there was no letter later than September. This will show that there was a letter as late as November 3, and it was to that I was referring.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I said that there was but the one occasion upon which the matter was dealt with at headquarters. That was after Colonel Otter's recommendation of September, which was dealt with, and immediately thereafter—I thought it was sooner than two months, but shortly thereafter—a letter from Colonel Otter, reporting that he regretted that the two full years' extension had not been given.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Here is the letter I was looking for. It is a letter from Colonel Otter to the Adjutant General :

Toronto, 3rd Nov., 1902.

Sir,—I have the honour to refer to G. O. 149 of 5th September, 1903, respecting the extension of the command of the officer named below for one year.

Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory, 2nd Dragoons,

And to respectfully ask the reconsideration of the case by the General Officer Commanding, with a view to enlarging the time of extension to two years as recommended by me in my letter of the 4th August last.

In that letter you will note my reasons for making this recommendation and I am still fully convinced of the desirability of conceding the extension for two years, if the efficiency of the regiment is to be maintained ; besides which I very much doubt if Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory will accept an extension for one year.

I have the honour to be, sir,

Your obedient servant,

W. D. OTTER, Colonel.

That is the letter to which I alluded when I said there had been no action taken during all this period, that no action was being taken on this letter.

I have quoted letters from Colonel Otter to Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory, demanding that he shall give a recommendation to Major Glasgow as second in command of the regiment, letters not only urging him to do it, but commanding him to do it, as a matter of military duty. Now, I said, and I repeat, that having regard to the terms which Colonel Otter used in these letters addressed to Colonel Gregory, it is evident that some person who either has or imagines he has political influence, is communicating with Colonel Otter respecting this matter, and is insisting that Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory shall recommend Major Glasgow as second in command, or in the alternative that there should be no further extension of Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory's command. That is perfectly evident, and no one who reads these letters with any care or consideration can for one moment doubt it.

On February 29, after this had continued during all these weeks—and one can understand why Colonel Gregory should be anxious to know whether or not he was to be continued in command, as he would have his arrangements to make, and would have to consider his own future as well as the future of the regiment—during all this period, while the correspondence was going on, he was in doubt, so finally, on February 29, he addressed this letter to Colonel Otter :

Sir,—I have the honour to respectfully request you to inform me if my letter of the 22nd instant re promotion of Major Glasgow to the position of second in command will be acceptable and if my tenure of command is to be extended beyond 29th July, 1904.

I have the honour to be, &c.

He frankly recognizes the situation there. He has made a certain recommendation in favour of Major Glasgow as second in command, provided Major Glasgow obtains certain qualifications, and he writes to ask whether or not that recommendation will be acceptable, and if his tenure of command is to be extended beyond the 29th of July.

In reply to that letter Colonel Otter writes under date 3rd March, 1904 :

Officer commanding 2nd Dragoons.

Your letter of February 22nd was duly received and replied to yesterday. The recommendation of Major Glasgow as second in command should be sent in at once.

And the extension of your command I have every reason to believe will follow.

That is as plain as words can make it. If Lt.-Col. Gregory, against his better judgment will, without qualification, recommend Major Glasgow to be second in command of that regiment, then his period of service will be extended one year ; if on the other hand, he follows the dictates of his better judgment and insists on the full qualification to which reference has been made, the period of his service will not be extended one year. There is the whole thing in black and white. You are not left to inference ; there is Col. Otter's direct statement to Col. Gregory as to what the situation is. If my hon. friend the Minister of Militia thinks that is a desirable condition in which to leave this matter without further explanation, I can only say that I should hardly be inclined to concur with him.

There is some further correspondence which, it seems to me, throws no further light upon the subject, until we come to the letter of Lt.-Col. Gregory addressed to Col. Otter, and dated 7th March. It is as follows :

Sarnia, March 7th, 1904.

Dear Sir,—I have yours of the 2nd instant re promotion of Major Glasgow and in reply beg to say that if Major Glasgow does attend the school as he has promised he should remain in command of his squadron until after camp when his promotion would immediately follow. I am firmly convinced that the proposition I made was not only reasonable but in the interest of the regiment, and I have come to the conclusion that if my extension of tenure depends upon me acceding to the demands of Major Glasgow I had better resign my command at once.

Yours sincerely,
ROLAND W. GREGORY,
Lieutenant-Colonel Commanding 2nd Dragoons.

Colonel Otter, D.O.C., Toronto.

I think we would all agree with him that his usefulness was gone if conditions were such that he was not permitted to exercise the judgment which he was bound to exercise in the interest of his regiment and, as I should think, under his oath of office ; if he was not to insist upon certain qualifications which he believed to be necessary but was obliged, as a matter of military command, to make this recommendation, or if he was obliged to make it as a condition of obtaining the extension of command which he thought his due, it is clear that he was right in believing that his usefulness was gone and that he was right in resigning his command. Finally we have his letter of 15th June in which he refers distinctly to political intrigue. This is denied by Col. Otter. I think it would have been well for Col. Otter in making that denial to furnish to this House and to this country some explanation of the letters I have read. And I have to say that, if I had anything to do with him, and if he could not give a clear and frank explanation to show that political intrigue was not affecting his judgment in these matters, I would consider that he was worthy to be dismissed within forty-eight hours. How does this gentleman venture to impose upon Lt.-Col. Gregory, as a matter of military command, that which should be left to the right and true judgment of Lt.-Col. Gregory ? How does he venture to traffic in the question of extending Lt.-Col. Gregory's term of office ? How is it that we find a district officer commanding descending to work of that kind. 'If you assent to this recommendation ; if you withdraw your qualifications, your term will be extended for one year ; if you persevere in what you believe to be right ; if you persevere in what you believe to be in the interest of the regiment, your term will not be extended.' I think it is high time we had some rule in the militia of this country which would prevent a district officer commanding entering into traffic of that kind. I accept at once the statement of the Minister of Militia (Sir Frederick Borden) that he knew nothing of it. But some one knew of it ; Col. Otter was doing this at the instance of somebody. We are not quite fools ; and, when we read this correspondence we understand well enough what it means. And I venture to think it would be very much in the interest, not only of the government but of Col. Otter as well, that some explanation of this most extraordinary correspondence should be furnished to the House forthwith. I can take only one meaning from it. In saying that, I desire to be fair to Col. Otter. I regret very much, in the interest of the militia force, that correspondence of this kind should have been placed before the House.

And let me say that in the additional correspondence that the Minister of Militia brought down to us I have this further confirmation not only of the bona fides but of the wisdom of Col. Gregory in insisting upon further qualification. Here is a letter from Major Glasgow, under date of 17th February, addressed to Col. Otter :

Dear Colonel Otter,—I am forwarding to Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory by this mail a letter asking that I be recommended as second in command of the regiment.

Yours truly,
S. H. GLASGOW.

I do not know whether that is in order. I should suppose that Major Glasgow ought to have communicated with his own lieutenant-colonel. However, he saw fit to go outside of his own commanding officer and to write this letter to Col. Otter. And on this document, at the bottom of the page, is a note—evidently we have not the full correspondence. This note made by Col. Otter says: 'Answered 19th February concurring and advising further qualifications at once.' So, here is Major Glasgow's intimation to the district officer commanding that he is asking to be recommended as second in command, and upon it is the memorandum of the district officer commanding that he concurs and advises further qualification at once. Yet, we are told by the Minister of Militia that Lt.-Col. Gregory was not acting bona fide when he was insisting on this qualification. Was Col. Otter acting bona fide when he advised it? I think the Minister of Militia has done injustice to Lt.-Col. Gregory in describing him as a conspirator—for this was the indictment against him to-day, I think there is not a line, not a syllable, in this correspondence which does not indicate that Lt.-Col. Gregory in taking the course he did, was taking the course which presented itself to his best judgment; and in every single action he took with regard to Major Glasgow he is not only supported by Major Glasgow himself, who admitted the necessity of further qualification, but also by Major Ferguson who, having the same qualification as Major Glasgow, admitted that he must require more if he were to be appointed second in command; and, last but not least, Lt.-Col. Gregory is supported by the direct advice and concurrence of Col. Otter at the time. Under the circumstances, it seems to me that Lt.-Col. Gregory comes out of this with his reputation absolutely unblemished; comes out of it as one who has acted the part of a good soldier and an honest man, one who only retired from the regiment when he found that his usefulness was gone by reason of certain influences which were being exercised against him and which prevented him from giving to the regiment that direction which he thought was its due.

Mr. E. B. OSLER. I would like to ask the minister to answer one question. It is a question which has been raised in this House a great many times during this debate and during other debates on military questions, and one which must be of interest to the country. That question is whether the militiamen of the country, when out of uniform and not on duty, are subject to the control, or the will—control, perhaps, is a better word—of the Minister of Militia or the officers of their regiments? I am asking this question because it is one of public interest. It has been stated positively by my hon. friend from Victoria (Mr. Hughes) that the militia are not in any way under the control of their military superiors when they are not in uniform and not on duty. I hope sincerely that he is right in that statement, and that such is the fact. The Minister of Militia, so far as I have heard him, has not denied these statements. The question is so important and affects so closely the personal rights of almost every man in the militia, every volunteer in the country, that I think it is due to the force that the Minister of Militia should make a distinct announcement on that question so that there can be in future no doubt about it. It is only fair to the members of the militia that they should get from the minister a statement clear enough to leave no misunderstanding. If they are under the control of the Minister of Militia or of their superior officers all the year round, it had better be known and realized at once.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I think it would be out of place for me now to make a statement on this point. There may be an opportunity later on. I would refer my hon. friend to Militia Law and Regulations.

Mr. OSLER. I am perhaps in the position of most of the members of this House in not being connected with the militia force and I am not able, certainly without a great deal of study, to form an opinion on the subject. I think surely the Minister of Militia ought to be able to make an announcement on that question that would carry weight all over the country. I do not think it should be left to each member of the militia and each volunteer to interpret for himself, or that they should be obliged to study up the laws, rules and regulations in order to ascertain whether they are entitled to speak their mind freely on subjects which they know they cannot discuss when they are in uniform and on duty. I think it is essential that we should have from the minister a clear, straight statement on that question.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. If I may say one more word—I am sure that nothing I could say would settle the question; it would still be a question probably for the courts to determine, no matter what I might say.

Mr. OSLER. If that is the case, might I suggest that in the Militia Bill now before the House we should take that question out of the courts and make it perfectly plain, so that there may be no longer any doubt about it. It is the duty of the government not to allow any rules to be put in so vague a manner that the Minister of Militia himself says they must be referred to the court to interpret.

Mr. T. S. SPROULE. The Minister of Militia is at the head of that department in Canada and is always looked up to as the one who might properly interpret the Militia Law. Let him put an interpretation on it, and then leave it to others to call that interpretation into question if they desire. But a pronouncement from him would certainly carry weight. There are many who desire to keep strictly within the regulations and yet entertain an opinion that they ought to have perfect freedom, when they are not wearing the King's uniform to hold and to express their views on public matters. I think the Minister of Militia should not be reluctant to give us his opinion on this question.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. If I might ask a question of the Minister of Militia——

Some hon. MEMBERS. Order.

Mr. SPEAKER. The hon. member can only speak again with the consent of the House.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. By permission of the minister I want to ask a question. The Militia Bill comes up again in committee in a short time, and when it comes to its third reading, I would suggest that the minister give us a little notice, then the question brought up by the hon. member for West Toronto (Mr. Osler) can be discussed. I have given the minister notice of a motion that I propose moving on that occasion.

Mr. R. G. MACPHERSON. Can we not get through our business in this House without so much militarism ? I have been here from 10th of March——

Some hon. MEMBERS. You don't like it.

Mr. MACPHERSON. I have a right to express my opinion. I have not bothered the House by talking much, and I am very anxious to get away, I think we all are. I think, Mr. Speaker, the people of Canada are thoroughly sick and tired of hearing so much talk of military matters in this House. There are other things to talk about. I am prepared to do my share at all times in defence of my country, as well as any other man, but I do wish to protest against so much time being wasted on military matters in this House. There are many other things of very great importance that we should consider, and among them is that of winding up the business of this session so that we may get home. I wish to enter my protest as vigorously as I can, and I hope we will forget for a little while at least that we have such a thing as a militia in this country. Let us get to work and do business.

Mr. E. F. CLARKE. If the innocent question which my colleague from West Toronto (Mr. Osler) has asked the Minister of Militia is not a proper question to ask and not a proper question to be answered, I am very much surprised. Is it introducing militarism into this House to enter an emphatic protest on every occasion against the prostitution of the militia force to the advancement of party interests ? Will anybody say that the opposition is introducing militarism in the discussion which took place this afternoon, in entering a protest against the treatment which has been meted out to a gallant officer ? The opposition would be derelict in its duty if it allowed this session to pass without taking prompt notice of this matter, and bringing it to the attention of the country. Shall it be said that the hon. member for West Toronto is taking up the time of the House unnecessarily in discussing militarism when he asks the simple question of the Minister of Militia, if a militiaman when off duty, when not clothed in the garb of a military man, is amenable to military discipline ? I think my colleague was endeavouring to put a stop to the imperium in imperio that is being created on the other side of the House, and that he should receive the support and countenance of the hon. member for Vancouver (Mr. Macpherson). We have some rights in this House, and I think certainly one of our rights is to protect the militia force, to endeavour to keep it what it was intended to be, and to prevent it being reduced to an arm, a political aid and support, of hon. gentlemen opposite. If there is any quarrel between the two sides of the House it is we who are standing as guardians of the militia, who think the militia has a mission to perform, and that that mission can only be performed to the satisfaction of the country by the force being kept out of party politics.

Mr. MACPHERSON. You have had your innings already.

Mr. CLARKE. We have not had our innings yet, but we will have it when the Bill comes up again, and we will see whether a reasonable question asked by my colleague should receive an answer. I think the minister ought to have been able to answer it.

Mr. MACPHERSON. I had no reference to that question at all.

Mr. W. B. NORTHRUP. Mr. Speaker, I agree with my hon. friend from West Toronto (Mr. Clarke) that the question asked by his colleague (Mr. Osler) was one of the most important questions that could be asked in this House and I have merely risen to say that although the hon. Minister of Militia and Defence (Sir Frederick Borden) now declines to answer that most important and very proper question he practically answered this afternoon. It will be remembered that this afternoon a letter was read by my hon. friend from North Victoria (Mr. Hughes) bearing date the 23rd June at which date it was stated by the hon. Minister of Militia the writer of that letter, Colonel Gregory, was in camp. As a matter of fact he was not in camp and the attention of the hon. Minister of Militia and Defence having been called to this fact that not only was Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory not in camp at the time but that he had been actually suspended by the order of the minister himself some three days before the minister quietly added : I do not know that it makes any difference. Every member of this House knows, every militiamen in this country knows that if Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory had been in camp wearing his uniform on the 23rd of June it would have been improper for him to have written that letter to the newspapers. Nobody would question that ; but when the hon. minister states that he did not know it made any difference whether Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory wrote that letter not merely after he had ceased to be a member of the militia but after he had been suspended by the hon. minister himself, it would seem to be such a monstrous doctrine that I, an ordinary layman would not have believed my ears had not precisely the same theory been carried into effect in my own city of Belleville. One of our colonels retired after he had served his time in the regiment and when he was on the retired list, happening to make some observations at a private dinner which were obnoxious to the hon. minister, he was called upon to give an account of his words. The answer was sent by the colonel to the minister with the request that it be laid before the General Officer Commanding and while at the same time courteously answering the letter raising the point whether or not the minister had any control over him now that he was on the retired list, no answer was given by the department and although the colonel has written again and again asking that his questions shall be answered he has been unable to obtain even the courtesy of a reply. I think in view of these two facts, the treatment of Lieutenant-Colonel Gregory and the treatment of Lieutenant-Colonel Ponton, which is an actual fact in the history of the militia force, we do not require any statement from the hon. minister as to what his view is as to his rights or intentions in regard to the militia force. I would like to point out to the hon. minister that while he says that the question before the House is a moot question, that the regulations are there and that every one can read them for himself, everybody knows perfectly well that if it is a moot question it could be made a plain question in two minutes by the hon. minister, and if he is willing to have an Act of this parliament passed declaring that no official of the department has any control over an officer who is not on duty every officer will feel himself free and independent if he is not on duty. The doctrine laid down by the hon. minister brings it down to this that every officer and soldier in the militia, no matter how high or how humble he may be, when he joins the force pledges himself for ever to abstain from politics in so far as supporting the party of the opposition in this House is concerned. But, when it comes to gentlemen in the militia supporting hon. gentlemen opposite it is apparent that they can sign any sort of a document they choose to give a certificate of character to hon. gentlemen opposite and the government does not deem it to be a violation of the King's regulations. But, let any gentleman in the force, no matter what his position in the country may be, express a difference of opinion with hon. gentlemen opposite and he is at once disciplined by his superiors. If that is not a case of dragooning I would like to know what it is.

Motion agreed to, and House went into Committee of Supply.

Public Works—harbours and rivers, Prince Edward Island—Higgin's shore pier, works of construction and repairs, $1,000.

Mr. HACKETT. I would like to ask the hon. minister what is being done at Higgin's Pier ?

Mr. CHAS. HYMAN (acting Minister of Public Works). The departmental estimate for the work is as follows : Face timbers, 25 pounds, $250 ; cross ties, $100 ; face piles, $250 ; one and a half tons iron, $150 ; stone filling, $175 ; gravel filling, $75.

Mr. HACKETT. Is that for the renewal of the old work or is it for a new one ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes, for the renewal of the old work.

Mr. HACKETT. You will remember that last year I made a protest against any money being expended on the old work and that I pointed out that if the government desired to accommodate the people of that part of the country they would build an entirely new work.

Mr. HYMAN. The work is there, it is a government work and the government felt they ought to maintain it. Therefore the engineers recommended that this sum be expended for the purpose of maintaining the old work.

Mr. HACKETT. Before I came to parliament last year a meeting of the people of the locality was held and they sent a memorial to the government asking that no more money be spent on the old work but that a new work be commenced some 100 yards away from the old work because the old work was in an improper situation and would never be of any more benefit. I am sorry that the government are spending money on this old work.

Mr. HYMAN. I shall be very glad to drop the item if the hon. gentleman objects.

Mr. HACKETT. That is the old game of bluff. Strike it out if you dare. I dare you to strike it out.

Mr. HYMAN. I move that the item be dropped.

Mr. HENDERSON. I think perhaps on consideration the minister will realize that he had made a mistake. He wants to throw the responsibility upon the hon. member (Mr. Hackett). I know nothing about the transaction nor as to whether it is a wise expenditure or an unwise expenditure, but I understand the protest of the hon. member (Mr. Hackett) to be that the money was not being spent in the proper place. If the minister had listened to the suggestion of the hon. member, he would have allowed the item to be passed with the intention that if that were not the proper place to spend the money it would be spent in some adjacent location where people of that section of the country approved of it, or the minister himself or his engineers might think it better to expend the money. I have no desire to increase the expenditure of the country or to ask the minister to allow the item to go through beyond the fact that I think it unfair to throw the responsibility of dropping the item upon the hon. member, simply because he made the suggestion that it would be better to spend the money at a place where the people would get greater advantage from it.

Mr. MONET. I do not think there is anything unfair in dropping this item. At the end of every session gentlemen opposite are in the habit of criticising the general expenditure without mentioning a single item to which they object. Just now they have mentioned an item which they believed not to be a legitimate expenditure, and the Minister of Public Works relying upon the remarks of the hon. member (Mr. Hackett) moves that the item should be dropped. I think that is perfectly fair.

Mr. OSLER. Will the hon. gentleman (Mr. Monet) carry out that suggestion a little further, and say that the minister should drop every item to which the opposition object ?

Mr. MONET. If I condemn an expenditure in my constituency, I think the minister should drop the item.

Mr. HYMAN. This is a work which has been in existence. The officers of the department have recommended to the minister the expenditure of $1,000 for repairs of the old work, and the hon. member (Mr. Hackett) objects to the expenditure of this money altogether. It is not a question of spending the money in some other place ; the money is intended for the repairs of this particular work ; and it cannot be expended elsewhere. If the hon. member thinks there should be a new pier, I shall be glad to instruct the engineers to have the matter looked into, but it is not a thing that can be decided at a moment's notice to-night. As I understand, the hon. member (Mr. Hackett) asked that the item should be struck out, and I shall be glad to have the engineer at the first opportunity inquire into the necessity for a new work.

Mr. HACKETT. The people of that section of the country are not in favour of expending any more money on the old work. They want a new work altogether, about 100 yards away from the old work, and at a meeting of the electors held a year ago they passed a resolution that any expenditure made there should be upon the new work, and that it would be simply a waste of money to expend it upon the old work. That is the view of the people, and you can do what you like about it. You may strike it out or you may leave it there. It makes no difference to me ; I am only expressing the wishes of the people when I make these remarks.

Mr. HYMAN. I withdraw the motion.

Motion withdrawn and item agreed to.

Harbours and rivers—Prince Edward Island—New London harbour improvements, $5,500.

Mr. HACKETT. What is this vote for ?

Mr. HYMAN. This is to improve the entrance of the channel. The work is under contract ; the contract price being $5,500.

Mr. HACKETT. Were tenders invited ?

Mr. HYMAN. Public tenders were invited.

Mr. HACKETT. Who was the contractor ?

Mr. HYMAN. T. P. Cullen.

Harbours and rivers—Prince Edward Island —Point Prim island wharf, $5,000.

Mr. HACKETT. Is this a new work ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes. The estimated cost is $15,000, and tenders have been called for.

Mr. HACKETT. Is this intended to improve the entrance to Charlottetown harbour ?

Mr. HYMAN. It is a wharf at Point Prim island, and is to be 1,000 feet long.

Mr. HACKETT. Are the boats that will use it engaged in the deep sea fisheries, or the coast fisheries ?

Mr. HYMAN. I suppose when the wharf is built, any kind of boat will be able to use it.

Mr. HACKETT. Has the contract been let ?

Mr. HYMAN. Tenders have been advertised for but the contract has not been let.

Mr. HACKETT. I am making no objection to this vote at all, but I consider that there are many parts of Prince Edward Island, especially on the northeast of the island, where money could be expended with greater advantage to the people than at this particular point.

Mr. HYMAN. It is only a question of degree then.

Mr. HACKETT. I at first supposed that this was to improve the entrance to Charlottetown harbour, but it appears now that it is only for a boat shelter. I am in favour of affording every accommodation to the fishermen of the island, and I would like to know whether these boats are small boats or large boats.

Mr. HYMAN. My foresight is not sufficient to enable me to tell what kind of boats will use this wharf when it is built. At the outer end the wharf is six feet at low water, and fifteen feet at high tide, and any boats that come there to use it will be allowed to.

Mr. HACKETT. Is this wharf from the shore towards the island ?

Mr. HYMAN. It is on the island.

P. E. I.—Richmond Bay — reconstruction of wharf near Grand river ferry, $5,000.

Mr. HACKETT. When did this wharf come into the hands of the federal government ?

Mr. HYMAN. The officers of the department tell me that this wharf was purchased from the province a number of years ago.

Mr. HACKETT. I remember when the piers on Prince Edward Island were taken over by the federal government from the local government, and this wharf was left. It must have been taken over lately.

Mr. HYMAN. The question is in regard to the expenditure of money on a wharf which belongs to the Dominion government. I can inform the hon. gentleman that I will have this matter looked into, and if the wharf does not belong to the Dominion government, the money will not be spent.

P. E. I.—Rustico harbour—breakwater on Robinson's island, south side of entrance to harbour, $11,000.

Mr. HACKETT. This is mainly a revote. What has been done there ? Has the contract been let ?

Mr. HYMAN. The plans are all ready, and the tenders will be advertised for immediately.

Mr. HACKETT. We have a great deal of this kind of thing on Prince Edward Island. Immediately preceding an election a large amount of money is voted, but nothing is done. I trust the minister will see that this money will be expended in the interest of the people down there, and that the placing of money in the estimates to be carried until the elections are over will be stopped.

P. E. I.—Souris, Knight's Point—strengthening of breakwater, $5,000.

Mr. HACKETT. Who is the contractor for this work ?

Mr. HYMAN. The contractor is J. Lanigan.

Mr. HACKETT. Anybody else ? The allegation has been made in the press that the hon. member for King's is a partner in this work, and he will be able to deny that statement if it is not correct.

Mr. JAMES. J. HUGHES Does my hon. friend make that statement ?

Mr. HACKETT. I saw it in the press.

Mr. J. J. HUGHES. Does my hon. friend endorse it ?

Mr. HACKETT. I am not assuming to endorse it

Mr. J. J. HUGHES. When any man makes that statement on his own authority, I will refer to it.

Mr. HACKETT. I want to be perfectly fair to the hon. gentleman. It is not necessary for me to endorse it. I say that I saw the allegation in the press. If the hon. gentleman desires to deny it, I think he should do so now.

Mr. J. J. HUGHES. I too saw the statement in the press, and I asked the paper which published it to give me the name of the person who made the statement, or publish my reply, and it refused to do either. Consequently until some person will make that statement over his own signature or on the floor of this House, I will take no notice of it.

P. E. I. — Summerside harbour — breakwater, $15,000.

Mr. HACKETT. What has been done there ?

Mr. HYMAN. The estimate for the total completion of this work is in the neighbourhood of $150,000. Part of the work was undertaken, but after a small amount had been expended upon it, it was found that the work was not of a substantial enough character to stand the heavy stress of weather there, and therefore only a small amount has been expended as yet. The work will have to be still further looked into by the engineers to see if some other method cannot be found to effect the improvements in the harbour.

Mr. J. J. HUGHES. As my hon. friend does not go further than to repeat in this House a statement which is unfounded and devoid of truth, I challenge him to father the statement. It is unworthy of him to repeat such a silly, unfounded and absolutely untrue statement in this House.

Mr. HACKETT. I regret that I have raised the ire of the hon. member for King's. There is an old saying that a guilty conscience needs no accuser. The statement appeared in the newspaper press of Prince Edward Island some months ago, and I was giving the hon. gentleman an opportunity of denying it. I must accept his denial, but I regret very much that the hon. gentleman did not take the opportunity of denying it through the press. I was waiting simply to give him a chance to show himself on the floor of parliament this evening. Who are the contractors for this work at Summerside ?

Mr. HYMAN. The contractors were Macdonald & Moffatt.

Mr. HACKETT. What was the amount of their contract ?

Mr. HYMAN. The amount paid to them was something like $11,000 or $12,000. The total amount of the contract was $55,000, but the work has been stopped. They have not had very much time since May 17th, when it was found that the work was too light, but it is the intention of the department to take the matter up as soon as possible.

Mr. HACKETT. There is no work being done there now.

Mr. HYMAN. Not at the present moment.

Mr. HACKETT. What kind of work is this ?

Mr. HYMAN. Brush, stone and pile work, protection work.

Mr. HACKETT. Where was the work done, at Indian Point, or near the lighthouse ?

Mr. HYMAN. The work was started at Indian Point, and worked out from Indian Point.

Mr. HACKETT. I notice by the supplementary estimates there is another large amount for this very work at Summerside Harbour.

Mr. HYMAN. The object in putting in a further sum bears out what I have said that the department are acting in good faith in the matter. When the department have $35,000 at their disposal they would feel justified in going on with a heavier class of work.

Mr. HACKETT. I have had a great deal of experience in connection with this work. At every election, local or federal, this work has been taken up, and a certain amount of money put in the estimates for it. Macdonald and Moffatt are good contractors. They entered into a contract with the government to construct this work, and a large amount of money was voted for it. Why was it stopped ?

Mr. HYMAN. Simply because the officers found that the work was not strong enough to stand the stress of weather and it was thought better to cancel that contract, to take a further vote to look into the matter and if necessary enter into another contract at a larger cost. In this the department acted in good faith, and it was only after it was started and the difficulty of the work became known that it was thought better in the interests of the public to put in a work of a more satisfactory and stronger character.

Mr. HACKETT. It is a singular thing ; the same ground and water was there, the same facilities for building a breakwater were there, and I cannot see why the government cancelled the contract with Macdonald and Moffatt. It is looked upon by the people of Prince Edward Island as a mere mockery. I would ask the minister to invite tenders and be serious about it.

Mr. HYMAN. I think the department has proved they were serious ; they did invite tenders.

Mr. CLARKE. Was the work performed according to plans and specifications of the officers of the department ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes, there is no doubt about that.

Mr. CLARKE. The officers were in error, the work was not strong enough, and so after $11,000 had been expended, the work was abandoned, and new specifications were arranged for ?

Mr. HYMAN. There were two sets of plans, one involving a very heavy expenditure, and another involving a less expenditure. It was thought by the officers of the department and they recommended that in their opinion the lighter work might answer, but after starting the lighter work it was found that owing to the stress of weather it would not be in the interests of the public to continue it. The work done is not thrown away, the material is there, it is simply a question of widening the present breakwater and going on with the extension if it is found to be in the interests of the public that that should be done.

Mr. HACKETT. Have any surveys been made lately in connection with this work ?

Mr. HYMAN. This matter has only been settled a short time ago, and no surveys have been made since, but surveys and specifications will be made at once.

Mr. HACKETT. You will require the surveys first.

Mr. HYMAN. The surveys before the specifications, of course.

Mr. EARLE. Is it the intention of the department to carry on this work on the greater plan now ?

Mr. HYMAN. I would hardly like to make a definite promise. I am only acting minister, but if I am in the department for the next month I would like to see the plans and have the reports of the engineers. The good intention of the department was shown by the fact that they have taken a further estimate of $20,000 in addition to this $15,000.

Mr. EARLE. I am asking, for information, if you are going to adopt the greater plan or have further investigation ?

Mr. HYMAN. There will be a further investigation.

Prince Edward Island—West Point wharf—repairs, $1,000.

Mr. HACKETT. Is that for repairs or for an extension of the work ?

Mr. J. J. HUGHES. Before you pass from Prince Edward Island I want to say one word more in regard to the matter which was brought up by the hon. member for West Prince (Mr. Hackett). Since the matter was referred to I think it is due to myself to make a still further statement in that regard. I did not expect that that matter would be brought up here at all. My hon. friend if he has read the newspapers of Prince Edward Island at all, must know the facts of the case, and since he has referred to this matter he might as well have the whole statement of the case. He knows that an anonymous writer in the Charlottetown 'Examiner,' the Conservative organ in Charlottetown, who signed himself 'Elector,' but whose identity I think I know, referred to this matter and mentioned my name in connection therewith. The editor of that paper in an editorial stated that he would be glad to publish a reply. I sent a reply to that paper absolutely denying the truthfulness of the statement made by the anonymous writer, but the editor refused to publish my reply. The hon. gentleman who referred to this to-night must have known that as well as he did the other and he might have referred to it. My reply appeared in the 'Patriot.'

Mr. COCHRANE. Gracious !

Mr. J. J. HUGHES. My hon. friend from East Northumberland (Mr. Cochrane) is the sprightly boy of the opposition and very often engages in these unseemly interruptions.

Mr. COCHRANE. We want to get away, and I do not know that this committee is very much interested in what the hon. gentleman (Mr. J. J. Hughes) may have written in Prince Edward Island.

Mr. HACKETT. I think it is due to myself to say that it was not an account of animus against the hon. gentleman (Mr. J. J. Hughes) that I brought this question up. He thinks I ought to have known that he had written to the Charlottetown 'Examiner.' How could I tell about that ? The hon. gentleman was attending to his business and I was attending to mine. I cannot see that the hon. gentleman has any grievance against me in that regard.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Let us go home.

Mr. HACKETT. Some of these hon. gentlement are very anxious to go home. Some of them, who live within 500 miles of Ottawa, can go home every Friday night ; but we who live 1,000 miles or more away must remain here all session. Let these hon. gentlemen go away. We are here to attend to our duties as representatives of the people. and we are not to be blocked by anybody in this chamber. I wish to say to the hon. gentleman (Mr. J. J. Hughes) in conclusion, that I have no desire to make any personal attack upon him. I hear some hon. member say 'sit down.' I want to tell that hon. gentleman that I will not sit down at his word.

Mr. HOLMES. Nobody asked the hon. gentleman to sit down.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. We are discussing an item that we passed some time ago. Now, I wish to bring to the attention of the committee this fact, concerning which there seems to be a false impression—each of these items is a subject in itself, and when it is discussed and passed it cannot be referred to again.

Mr. HACKETT. I asked a question with regard to the work at West Point, whether it is the new work, the extension of a pier or repairs ?

Mr. HYMAN. This is repairs to an old work.

Mr. BLAIN. This ends the list of these items for Prince Edward Island. There was a request made by the minister last night to give us a statement of the items that were passed then showing the counties in which the works were situated. May I ask if that statement has been prepared ?

Mr. HYMAN. I gave instructions to have the statement prepared, and I expect to be able to lay it on the table in a few minutes. But, if I cannot get it to-night I will give it to the hon. gentleman in the morning.

Public Works, chargeable to income—harbours and rivers—New Brunswick—Anderson's Hollow—improvements and repairs to wharf, $1,100.

Mr. GANONG. Where is this located ?

Mr. HYMAN. In Albert county.

New Brunswick—Black Brook—(Loggieville)—wharf, $3,500.

Mr. GANONG. Is this to complete the work ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes.

Mr. GANONG. What is the total cost ?

Mr. HYMAN. The total estimated cost is $7,000, of which $3,500 has been expended, leaving $3,500 to be expended under the present vote.

New Brunswick—Campbellton wharf—extension and repairs, $20,000.

Mr. GANONG. I notice that this amount was in last year's estimates. Has anything been done since last year in connection with this ?

Mr. HYMAN. There was some difficulty in connection with acquiring the wharf we propose to extend. The matter is still in court. Consequently, although tenders have been called for, the matter not having been settled, the department has not yet accepted tenders for the work.

Mr. GANONG. What is the estimated cost of this work ?

Mr. HYMAN. The estimated cost of the construction work is $35,000, and this $20,000 is on account.

Mr. GANONG. Has it been under the control of the government engineer all the time or is there a local engineer in charge?

Mr. HYMAN. There is the district government engineer, of course.

Mr. GANONG. Who is he ?

Mr. HYMAN. Mr. Geoffrey Stead.

New Brunswick—Cape Tormentine—improvements, $10,000.

Mr. HACKETT. Are these improvements intended to give greater facilities in crossing between New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island ?

Mr. HYMAN. I am afraid that that is not within the purview of the Department of Public Works. I must ask the hon. gentleman (Mr. Hackett) to renew his question when the estimates of the Department of Marine and Fisheries are up.

New Brunswick—Caraquet wharf, $44,000.

Mr. GANONG. We had better have a little explanation about an amount of this kind and what we are going to get for the money.

Mr. HYMAN. The wharf is under contract, with Messrs. Simmons and Burpee, for $59,950. Adding the usual 10 per cent for contingencies, we get a total estimate of cost of about $65,000.

Mr. GANONG. Were tenders called for this ?

Mr. HYMAN. Tenders were publicly called for.

Mr. GANONG. Was there any public accommodation at Caraquet before ?

Mr. HYMAN. No deep-water accommodation, I understand. This is a deep-water wharf.

Mr. GANONG. What is the population of Caraquet ?

Mr. HYMAN. I do not know that the population of the town itself is very large. This is intended to serve the shipping from that point which, I am told, is very considerable.

Mr. FOWLER. There is an item which has been passed to which I ask leave to refer—the Campbellton wharf. Can the minister tell me whether this wharf was purchased from Mr. Shives ?

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. Mr. Hyman moves that item 'Campbellton wharf extension and repairs, $20,000' be reconsidered. Is it the pleasure of the committee to adopt that motion. Carried.

Mr. FOWLER. Was this wharf purchased from Mr. Shives ?

Mr. HYMAN. I understand it was.

Mr. FOWLER. How much was paid for it ?

Mr. HYMAN. No money was paid to him. The matter is still in court.

Mr. FOWLER. Is there a suit ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. A reference to the Exchequer Court.

Mr. FOWLER. Was the property expropriated ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes.

Mr. FOWLER. What special privileges have been granted to Mr. Shives in the wharf ?

Mr. HYMAN. None.

Mr. FOWLER. Has he no right or privileges there over other users ?

Mr. HYMAN. No.

Mr. FOWLER. I am informed that when Mr. Shives wanted to load freight on that wharf other people had to stand aside.

Mr. HYMAN. That is not the case. If Mr. Shives assumes any position of that kind it is not with the consent of the department.

Mr. FOWLER. I understand an order with respect to that matter has been issued by the department, that some correspondence has passed between the William Richards & Company, Limited, and Mr. Gourdeau, the deputy minister.

Mr. HYMAN. That is in the Marine and Fisheries Department. All we have to do is to construct the wharf, and we hand it over to the Marine Department.

Mr. FOWLER. I understand that there have been certain privileges granted to Mr. Shives over the other users of the wharf.

Mr. HYMAN. Not with the consent of this department.

Mr. EARLE. Will the minister state what amount he offered for the property ?

Mr. HYMAN. I understand the Justice Department offered $5,000 for it. Something over $40,000, I am told, was asked for it, and I thought we had better go to court under the circumstances.

Mr. FOWLER. I understand there were two large users of the wharf, the Richards Company and the Shives Company.

Mr. HYMAN. The Marine Department are the only ones who have a right to use the wharf.

New Brunswick—Dalhousie—harbour improvements, $10,000.

Mr. OSLER. How is that money being expended, and what is the nature of the improvements ?

Mr. HYMAN. To build an extension to the present government pier. The estimated cost of the work is $42,000.

New Brunswick—Dipper Harbour—breakwater, $15,000.

Mr. HYMAN. The estimated cost of that work is something over $30,000. No money has been expended on it so far.

New Brunswick—Great Salmon river—groyne and breakwater combined, $4,300.

Mr. HYMAN. I move that we drop that item. The policy of the department is not to make expenditures where the government cannot control the roads to the wharf. I understand in this case there is some difficulty in obtaining that right, in order that we may give the public the free and full use of the property adjoining the wharf. For that reason the department will not proceed with the work.

Mr. FOWLER. This is a very important point, and the breakwater is much needed.

Mr. HYMAN. It is important that the department should own it.

Mr. FOWLER. Why don't you expropriate it ? Down at a place called Grande Vallée, I remember distinctly we spent about $75,000, and the Minister of Justice said they had a right to expropriate the land there. It is not fair to allow one individual who owns this land to prevent a public work being constructed which would be of advantage to the public. I think you had better let that vote stand and expropriate the land.

Mr. HYMAN. As the hon. gentleman thinks it is of some importance, I have no objection to letting it stand. I was only saying that we were unable to obtain satisfactory control of the approaches to the wharf.

Mr. FOWLER. I do not know as to the importance of this particular work that is proposed, but I know the place is important. There are large lumber interests there and important businesses.

Mr. HYMAN. We had better drop it and take it up another session.

Motion agreed to, and item struck out.

New Brunswick—Hopewell Cape wharf—repairs, $2,000.

Mr. GANONG. What is the total cost of this work ?

Mr. HYMAN. $2,000 is all that it is intended to spend upon it. It is to repair a wharf that was burnt.

Mr. GANONG. The statement last year with regard to this wharf does not agree with that.

Mr. HYMAN. That was another work. This is not the same work.

Mr. FOWLER. I know something about that locality. There is an old wharf and a new wharf.

Mr. HYMAN. This is the old wharf. It was burned, and it is in the interest of the public to repair it. It only requires a small amount.

Mr. BLAIN. When the item was up before we were told it was under contract.

Mr. HYMAN. It is the new work that was under contract. There are two wharfs in the same place. This is to repair the wharf that was partly destroyed.

New Brunswick—North Head breakwater wharf—Grand Manan, $10,000.

Mr. GANONG. Has anything been done in connection with that work ?

Mr. HYMAN. This is rather a large work, and it is estimated to cost $125,000 or $130,000.

Mr. GANONG. $91,000 was given as the estimate last year.

Mr. HYMAN. The difference between the two estimates is that one was for native timber and the other for creosoted timber. The difference is as $91,000 to $120,000.

Mr. GANONG. Has the land been acquired ?

Mr. HYMAN. I do not think the land has been acquired yet.

Mr. GANONG. Has any effort been made to acquire the land ? They must have located the wharf in order to make the estimate.

Mr. HYMAN. The necessary plans have been prepared by the department for the acquirement of the land.

Mr. GANONG. Can you tell me who owns the land that will have to be acquired?

Mr. HYMAN. No, I have no information as to who the owners of the land are.

New Brunswick—Petit Rocher—breakwater, $6,000.

Mr. HYMAN. Under contract.

Mr. FOWLER. That is in Gloucester county ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes.

Mr. FOWLER. What is the total cost of this wharf ?

Mr. HYMAN. The amount of the contract is $32,900. The estimated total cost is $36,000. The contract has been entered into with Mr. McGregor of Dalhousie for $32,900. We are taking a vote of $6,000 in these estimates and in the supplementary estimates there is a vote of $10,000, making $16,000, the amount which we will have to pay out during the present year.

Mr. FOWLER. When was the contract let ?

Mr. HYMAN. On the 31st May.

Mr. FOWLER. Did you spend any money last year ?

Mr. HYMAN. No.

Mr. OSLER. What business is there at that port to warrant such a large expenditure ?

Mr. HYMAN. There is a population in the town of 2,000 and there are large fishing and lumbering interests which use the wharf.

Mr. FOWLER. How many miles from the post office, for instance, would you have to go to get 2,000 people ? There is no such population of 2,000. It is merely a farming community. It is a very thickly settled district but there is no town ?

Mr. HYMAN. There is the parish of Beresford, which has a population of nearly 5,000 to be served by this work.

Mr. FOWLER. Yes, in the whole parish.

Mr. GANONG. Will the hon. minister explain why he has increased the cost of this work ? It was stated last year that the contract price was $27,400.

Mr. HYMAN. Do I understand the hon. gentleman to say that the contract was let for that amount ?

Mr. GANONG. The estimate was $27,400.

Mr. HYMAN. In this case the estimated cost was higher than what was found to be the real cost when the contract was let.

Mr. FOWLER. It was the other way ; the estimate was $27,400.

Mr. GANONG. I think the hon. minister should give some explanation as to why this work is costing $5,000 or $6,000 more than the estimate.

Mr. HYMAN. The explanation given by the officers of the department is that in preparing the estimate there is not as much care taken as when they are preparing plans for the contract.

New Brunswick—River St. John, including tributaries, $16,000.

Mr. HYMAN. The usual vote.

Mr. FOWLER. Are there any applications for wharfs along the St. John river adjacent to King's county ?

Mr. HYMAN. We have an item in the supplementary estimates in connection with the local government.

New Brunswick—St. John harbour—Negro Point breakwater, $20,000.

Mr. GANONG. Is this for repairs ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes.

Mr. GANONG. What is the total ?

Mr. HYMAN. This is practically a maintenance item. The departmental engineers report that it is necessary to spend $20,000 for repairs and this item has been put in for the purpose.

New Brunswick—Upper Salmon river (Alma pier), $1,300.

Mr. FOWLER. What are you doing there ?

Mr. HYMAN. This work is under contract and this vote is simply to complete it.

Mr. FOWLER. You had a vote of $4,000 last year ?

Mr. HYMAN. The amount of the contract is $4,964, $3,360 has been spent and that is to complete the work.

Harbours and rivers, Quebec, $723,300.

Mr. BENNETT. Will the hon. minister take up Ontario instead of Quebec ?

Mr. HYMAN. I am sorry to say that I have not the particulars for the Ontario items.

Mr. BENNETT. As far as we can go. I do not think there will be much objection.

Mr. HYMAN. Very well.

Harbours and rivers, Ontario—Amherstburg —dredging, $30,000.

Mr. BENNETT. Will that complete the work ?

Mr. HYMAN. This work is practically rendered necessary owing to the increased draught of boats that are now going up and down the river. The approaches to the wharfs would only permit a boat drawing sixteen feet to come up to them. This item is put in the estimates with the intention of calling for tenders to perform work so as to increase the depth of the water and permit larger boats coming into the wharf.

Ontario—Barry's Bay, Madawaska river, wharf, $4,500.

Mr. BLAIN. Explain this.

Mr. HYMAN. The estimate was $4,500; there has been no expenditure; it is intended to prepare plans and call for tenders.

Mr. BLAIN. What do you mean when you say it is a departmental matter.

Mr. HYMAN. I mean that the resident engineer reports to the chief engineer that a certain amount of money is required for repairs, and when the report comes to the minister it is scrutinized and a vote asked in accordance with the departmental report.

Ontario—Bracebridge wharf, $5,800.

Mr. BENNETT. What is the total cost, and has the contract been let?

Mr. HYMAN. $7,000 is the estimated cost; the contract is not yet let.

Ontario—Burlington channel pier, $20,000.

Mr. BLAIN. What is the explanation of this?

Mr. HYMAN. This is under contract; it is a revote to complete the payment.

Mr. BLAIN. When will the contract be completed?

Mr. HYMAN. The engineer informs me that it will be completed in the month of September.

Ontario—Collingwood, improvements in harbour, $50,000.

Mr. BENNETT. Has Mr. Coste, the government engineer, valued the Collingwood dry dock, and if so, what is the valuation?

Mr. HYMAN. That is not connected with this item, but I will be glad to get the information later.

Mr. BENNETT. Surely the minister would remember.

Mr. HYMAN. I do not.

Mr. BENNETT. Is it correct, as reported, that Mr. Coste has valued the dry dock at $540,000?

Mr. HYMAN. I cannot remember, but I will bring the information down to-morrow.

Mr. BENNETT. It is a matter of very great importance if we have to pay for thirty or forty years 4 per cent on $540,000.

Mr. HYMAN. I will bring the information down to-morrow.

Mr. SPROULE. What is this item for?

Mr. HYMAN. To complete the widening of the channel which is under contract at present.

Mr. SPROULE. When will it be finished and how much is required to finish it?

Mr. HYMAN. This amount is to complete the work—carried.

Mr. SPROULE. It won't pass in that cavalier way.

Mr. HYMAN. What does the hon. gentleman mean by 'cavalier'? I am delighted to give the hon. gentleman all the information I can.

Mr. SPROULE. The minister should not call 'carried' without replying to the question asked. Collingwood is a very important harbour and it is the duty of the minister to give the information we require.

Mr. HYMAN. The total amount of the contract is $87,000, there was paid upon that $49,000, and this is to complete the balance of the work.

Mr. SPROULE. What is the depth and width of the channel?

Mr. HYMAN. Twenty-one feet deep and 220 feet wide for the whole distance of the harbour and for some distance outside.

Mr. BENNETT. If a boat gets out of the channel what will be the depth of the water at the side?

Mr. HYMAN. It would vary from twelve to fifteen feet.

Mr. SPROULE. The first channel was 110 feet wide, and now it is being enlarged to 220 feet. How much remains to be completed?

Mr. HYMAN. Judging by the expenditure, about one-half.

Mr. SPROULE. This has nothing to do with the bonus for the dry dock.

Mr. HYMAN. Nothing at all.

Mr. SPROULE. Who has the contract?

Mr. HYMAN. C. S. Boone.

Mr. SPROULE. There were a good many complaints last year, but I do not think the contractor was entirely to blame because he had a great many difficulties to overcome. Taking everything into account I think he did very well. Some were very strongly of the opinion that the Minister of Public Works should take the work from him, but I do not think so at all. I think he was making a reasonable effort to get along with the work as best he could.

Mr. HYMAN. I think these complaints were made two years ago. Last year and this year so far as the department is concerned, the work has been proceeded with in a satisfactory manner.

Mr. SPROULE. Is it dredging, or rock work now ?

Mr. HYMAN. The engineer informs me that the present work is principally rock work.

Mr. SPROULE. Has Mr. Broone any dredges other than he had last year, or is he working with the same plant ?

Mr. HYMAN. The same plant, so far as the department is aware.

Mr. SPROULE. Is he progressing at the usual rate according to your progress estimates ?

Mr. HYMAN. The engineer informs me that the work is progressing satisfactorily.

Mr. SPROULE. Collingwood is a very important port and every reasonable effort should be made to get the work done promptly. The people will be glad to know that the work is likely to be finished at an early date, and that the harbour will be in a proper shape to enable them to carry on their business successfully.

Depot Harbour breakwater, $100,000.

Mr. BENNETT. What is the total cost of this work ?

Mr. HYMAN. The total contract is $157,500 and there is some rip-rap work for foundation amounting to $37,500. The contract was let on the 14th of May, 1902, to Messrs. Davis, Haney & Miller.

Mr. BENNETT. What are the dimensions of this breakwater ?

Mr. HYMAN. The addition is 120 feet long, 80 feet wide and from 29 to 50 feet high. It runs from the main land towards the island.

Mr. BENNETT. Practically it is a present to the Canada Atlantic Railway.

Mr. BLAIN. When was that amount first voted ? I see that the same amount was in the estimates last year, and no money was expended.

Mr. HYMAN. The contract was let last year.

Mr. BLAIN. What is the amount of the contract ?

Mr. HYMAN. $6,275.

Mr. BLAIN. Did the government purchase the land ?

Mr. HYMAN. I am informed that the wharf is being built at the foot of a public road, so that there is no necessity for purchasing the land.

Mr. BLAIN. It belongs to somebody, of course ?

Mr. HYMAN. It is open to everybody.

Mr. LENNOX. I do not think that follows. On a public road you must get liberty the same as anywhere else.

Mr. HYMAN. I do not suppose that it is possible to close the road, and therefore it will always be open to the public.

Mr. LENNOX. If the minister has obtained an opinion from the Department of Justice to that effect, we must bow to it, but I have very great doubt about it.

Mr. SPROULE. Is this to complete the work ?

Mr. HYMAN. No, there will be a small amount left.

Mr. LENNOX. I do not understand why the department does not take the whole amount now.

Mr. HYMAN. We are taking the difference in the supplementary estimates.

Mr. SPROULE. When does the contract for Depot Harbour call for completion ?

Mr. HYMAN. Early this fall.

Mr. SPROULE. The parties who did the work last year were Haney, Davis and Miller. Is that the same Davis who did the Cornwall canal business ?

Mr. HYMAN. I understand not. This is J. P. Davis.

Ontario—Gananoque, dredging, $5,000.

Mr. EARLE. Will the minister explain this ?

Mr. HYMAN. It is for the purpose of increasing the depth of the harbour from 10 to 15 feet. The work was commenced this year and this is to complete it.

Mr. SPROULE. Is this being done by contract or by days' work ?

Mr. HYMAN. It is being done by a rented dredge at the rate of 13½ cents a yard.

Ontario—Goderich harbour works, $20,000.

Mr. BENNETT. What is the total amount of the contract ?

Mr. HYMAN. $20,000. This vote is for repairs to the north pier.

Mr. BENNETT. Is it all for repairs ?

Mr. HYMAN. All but about $2,000 for dredging.

Mr. BENNETT. Is it intended to ask for tender for this work, less what there may be for dredging ?

Mr. HYMAN. The work is made up of some six or seven different items. It is almost impossible to have a work of this kind done by contract. It is being done under the engineers of the department by days' work. There is a special engineer in charge of the work.

Mr. BLAIN. What amount was expended last year and what was the result ?

Mr. HYMAN. The work last year was on the south pier.

Mr. BLAIN. The amount voted last year was not for repairs, but for the construction of a breakwater.

Mr. HYMAN. I understand that the vote of last year was for repairs.

Mr. BLAIN. The hon. gentleman is misinformed or wrong information was given last year. It was to the effect that the vote was to construct 200 feet of a breakwater as a trial. The minister in charge of the estimates said that if that was found to be a valuable work, it would possibly be continued. How was the money expended, and what was the result ?

Mr. HYMAN. $12,000 of this is a revote. $8,000 was spent on the repairs. Only $8,000 is being asked for this year.

Mr. BLAIN. Is there anything in the supplementary estimates for 1905 ?

Mr. HYMAN. There is nothing in this work for the supplementary estimates.

Mr. BLAIN. For another work there ?

Mr. HYMAN. For the extension of the breakwater there but nothing for this.

Mr. BLAIN. Was there any money expended last year on the breakwater ?

Mr. HYMAN. Not on the new breakwater.

Mr. BLAIN. How was that ? The money was voted for that purpose.

Mr. HYMAN. It is being revoted now and the contract has been let for the work which is now being proceeded with. The timber is being got out for the work but no money has been expended.

Mr BLAIN. What is the length of the pier ?

Mr. HYMAN. 500 feet.

Mr. BLAIN. It would seem to me that when a certain amount of money is to be expended on an important harbour like Goderich there should be some general information given to the committee as to how much money will be required to complete the harbour and make it worthy of the people of Canada. This system of putting in $20,000 this year and $20,000 next year, &c., makes it rather unsatisfactory to the committee and cannot be in the interests of the people of that neighbourhood. Last year the hon. gentleman having charge of the estimates said that it was proposed to spend $20,000 on the new breakwater. The Minister of Public Works at page 13240 of last year's 'Hansard' said :

This matter has been taken up not alone by the Goderich people but by the large business and commercial interests of Ontario, especially from Toronto west who represent in the strongest manner the importance of this work. I am asking for this vote of $20,000 for the purpose of making a trial of 200 feet of breakwater.

There is the statement of the hon. minister. It may be that the hon. gentleman will keep this going for many years. It has been going now for many years.

Mr. HYMAN. The explanation of the item is simply this, that the breakwater to which the hon. gentleman alludes has been contracted for but on the old breakwater certain repairs were needed and $8,000 were expended on this last year. There are two separate works and the intention of the department is to proceed immediately with the construction of the new breakwater which is now under contract.

Mr. BLAIN. Did I understand the minister to say that $8,000 of the $20,000 voted last year for the construction of 200 feet of a breakwater was expended on repairs ?

Mr. HYMAN. There was a larger item $20,000 last year, an item of $36,000, which was in different appropriations and of this $8,000 was expended on repairs to the south breakwater.

Mr. BLAIN. Then the $20,000 voted last year was not expended at all ?

Mr. HYMAN. No.

Mr. BLAIN. Out of what vote was the $8,000 expended ?

Mr. HYMAN. I am informed that the amount expended for repairs was in the supplementary, not in the main estimates.

Mr. BLAIN. When will the Goderich harbour be completed ?

Mr. HYMAN. That is a somewhat difficult question to answer. The reports of the engineers in regard to Goderich are that before a complete work is made, at least a thousand feet of the new breakwater will be required. The contract which has been entered into by the department at the present time is for 500 feet of that breakwater. If that is not found sufficient it will then be a matter for the department to decide whether they will extend the breakwater to a thousand feet or not.

Mr. BLAIN. I do not want to continue the discussion beyond saying that last year the statement of the minister was that it was proposed to make an experiment here with 200 feet of breakwater at a cost of $20,000. I understand the minister to say the $20,000 was not expended. They are proposing now by the statement of the hon. gentleman to try 500 feet. They are going to make an expenditure very much larger before they ascertain whether the breakwater will be suitable or not. If it was necessary in the interests of the country to experiment with 200 feet I do not think it is in the interests of the people that the department should now experiment with 500 feet.

Mr. HYMAN. The only explanation I have in regard to the matter is that the engineers of the department reported, after looking into the matter carefully in different states of the weather, that it might require 1,000 feet of breakwater but that 500 feet would be quite necessary in the interests of the department and the public, and a contract was entered into for 500 feet, in the hope that it will be sufficient and that the balance will not be necessary.

Mr. SPROULE. What became of the balance of the vote of last year ?

Mr. HYMAN. We are revoting $12,000. Hon. gentlemen will understand that these estimates were made up some time since. This vote should have been for a larger amount than $12,000, but it was expected that more of the vote available in the department would have been expended before the end of the fiscal year and consequently there appears a vote of only $12,000.

Mr. ROSAMOND. Could the minister give any idea of the total amount of this expenditure ?

Mr. HYMAN. There is a contract for 500 feet. If my memory serves me the contract amounts to $71,000 or $72,000.

Mr. ROSAMOND. What amount of shipping goes into that port ?

Mr. HYMAN. I have not the details but I may say that Goderich is one of the most important ports on Lake Huron. There is a large elevator there now which is being served by the Grand Trunk Railway at the present time and the Canadian Pacific Railway are extending their line so as to reach Goderich harbour ; I presume the amount of shipping will increase when they get there. I understand it is the intention of the Canadian Pacific Railway to make Goderich a large receiving and shipping port.

Mr. SPROULE. When and to whom was this contract let ?

Mr. HYMAN. Battle & Conlon, the lowest tenderers. The amount of the tender is $74,000.

Mr. SPROULE. How many tenders were received ?

Mr. HYMAN. I have not the information here, but I shall be glad to give it later on.

Mr. SPROULE. Information given after the money is voted is interesting, but it is more interesting when given before the money is voted.

Mr. HYMAN. It was given to the lowest tenderer.

Mr. SPROULE. Is the $16,000 spent last year included in this contract, or was that for something else ?

Mr. HYMAN. It was not included. This is a straight contract for the building of 500 feet of breakwater at Goderich. There has been no expenditure under that contract.

Mr. SPROULE. What became of the $16,000 over and above the repairs ?

Mr. HYMAN. I am sorry that I have been unable to explain the matter to the satisfaction of the hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule). It is stated in the estimates that this is a revote of $12,000. The hon. gentleman will understand that these estimates were made up very early in the year. It was then expected that there would be a larger sum expended upon the amount available to the department, that the contract would be let on certain money earned. But the preparing of the plans and calling for tenders took longer than was expected, and the work did not go on. Otherwise the amount would have been larger than $12,000. This is a revote of $12,000.

Mr. SPROULE. That is practically no explanation at all. Last year $36,000 was voted for this work at Goderich. Out of this the minister tells us he spent $8,000 in repairs. That left him $28,000. Now, if $12,000 of that is revoted, that leaves $16,000 that must have been spent for some purpose, because it does not appear in the revote and is not in the estimates. What was it spent for ?

Mr. HYMAN. It may have been revoted. It is not spent. If this item were made up to-day, or if the department had known the exact expenditure that would have been made up to the end of the fiscal year, it would have read ' Goderich harbour works, revote, $28,000.' But $16,000 of the money lapsed.

Mr. SPROULE. That is what you revote.

Mr. HYMAN. We revote $12,000 and $16,000 lapsed.

Mr. SPROULE. But why do you revote $12,000 ?

Mr. HYMAN. Because it was thought that the expenditure for the year ending 30th June, 1904, would be larger than it actually proved to be.

Mr. LENNOX. If we had known all we know now we would have had a revote of $28,000 instead of a revote of $12,000 ?

Mr. HYMAN. That is practically correct—only $8,000 was expended.

Mr. LENNOX. We voted $36,000 last year and spent $8,000. That would leave $28,000. Should we not amend this item, and make it plain that it is a revote of $20,000 instead of a revote of $12,000 ? In its present form it is misleading. If you change that to a revote of $28,000 you will have to change the other column to make it correspond. The result is that we are voting less this year than last year.

Mr. HYMAN. Sixteen thousand dollars has lapsed.

Mr. LENNOX. Is it all lapsed ?

Mr. HYMAN. We revote $12,000.

Mr. LENNOX. It is all lapsed except the $8,000 that has been expended. That is correct, is it not ?

Mr. HYMAN. The total vote last year was $36,000, of which $8,000 was spent. We might have revoted $28,000, but we only revoted $12,000 owing to the fact that when the estimates were made up we thought the expenditure would be larger. But we make a revote of $12,000 and an additional vote of $8,000.

Mr. LENNOX. If we are revoting at all, we should revote to the whole extent of the vote of this year, so long as it is within the limits of the lapsed vote. You could revote to the extent of $28,000. As a matter of fact, you are revoting $20,000.

Mr. HYMAN. We are only revoting $12,000. Surely the hon. gentleman will see that of the amount of $20,000, $12,000 is a revote and $8,000 is new.

Mr. LENNOX. The mere fact that the hon. minister puts it down as $12,000 does not make it so. There was a lapsed vote of $28,000. Anything that you vote to-night up to $28,000 is a revote, however it may be put in the estimates. But you should make the estimates accord with the facts.

Mr. SPROULE. That is right—otherwise this is misleading the House. We voted last year so much. At the end of the fiscal year everything voted and not spent lapsed. So, to the extent of the unspent amount, any money voted this year is a revote. If this is done in every case, we know what we are giving in addition to what was given last year. We know what we are doing.

Mr. LENNOX. This ought to be amended——

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. Campbell). Carried.

Mr. LENNOX. I want the chairman to understand that if he wishes straight sailing he will have to treat us properly. When a gentleman is speaking it is not proper for the chairman to throw 'carried' in his face. I protest against that. Now, I want to say to the minister, through the chairman, that it is not consistent or proper that we should deal with an item in the way it is here proposed. We have the minister's bald statement that we are revoting $12,000 and making a new vote of $8,000 besides, a total of $20,000. Now, the fact is we are revoting $20,000 of a lapsed vote of $28,000. I submit to the committee that that item should be changed before we go any further if the committee has any regard for consistency or any desire to put the facts on record as they actually exist.

Mr. SPROULE. We have an extra column put in the estimates to enable us to keep track of what money we vote from year to year, how much has been expended and how much is intended to be expended in the future. Now, if this column that is headed 'revote' means anything or is worth anything, we ought to have put down here the amount actually revoted. Contrary to the custom, in a great many cases this year, it is improperly put down, and so the House is misled. It takes much more trouble to get at the information, and even then we do not get it as clearly as if it were put down in the estimates as it ought to be.

Mr. LENNOX. I move that this item be amended by changing so as to show that this is a revote of $20,000.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. Campbell). This resolution reads 'Goderich harbour, $20,000.' Of that one-fifth has been already voted. We are now asked to vote $16,000, and it is for the committee to say whether that is to be voted or not.

Mr. OSLER. Is it the intention to spend only $20,000 this year ? I understand the position the minister takes, that so much money was expected to be expended by the 1st of July, and that was expended when these estimates were made up. Now I ask whether the government intends to spend the lapsed amount in addition to the $8,000.

Mr. HYMAN. Whatever is in the supplementary estimates. That is the total amount that we are permitted to expend.

Mr. SPROULE. Now that the Finance Minister has come in, I want to appeal to him with regard to these items. For the purpose of enabling the House to understand how the money is voted and used, we have the estimates made up with three columns of figures. One gives the full amount of money voted for the work last year ; the last column gives the amount supposed to be voted this year, and the third column to the left shows how much of the money voted last year is to be revoted this year because it was not spent. In this case according to our calculation, there ought to be a revote of $28,000 because there has been only $8,000 of it spent in repairs ; but it shows in this case a revote of $12,000. Now, either there is a purpose in having this additional column or else it is useless. The purpose has been to enable us to understand how much of the money lapsed at the end of the financial year and how much was spent during the year we require to revote for that work. Now this is misleading, because any one would come to the conclusion that out of this $36,000 all was spent but $12,000, whereas the minister says only $8,000 was spent. We want to know whether it is the intention to have the estimates made and kept in a proper way, or jumbled up in such a way that we do not know what we are voting.

Mr. FIELDING. I have not heard the explanation of the Minister of Public Works, but I know there is no jumbling up and no hap-hazard way about it. These main estimates were made up months ago. The only judgment to be formed was as to the amount which was likely to be spent during the financial year. My hon. friend says a revote should be made of the money which has lapsed at the close of the financial year. That would be correct if the estimates were prepared at the close of the financial year, when you know exactly how much money you have spent. But when you make up your estimates early in the year, say in the month of January, and the main estimates were begun earlier than that, you can only form a reasonable judgment as to what amount is likely to be spent, and when we reach the end of the financial year it may turn out that the actual expenditure has been different from that anticipated. The statement for the revote therefore made some months ago was made in perfect good faith, but the events of the six months since intervening might largely change the figure, and the actual expenditure might prove to be different from what was expected. There is no lack of good faith I can assure my hon. friend.

Mr. SPROULE. But when the estimates were made up it was in the winter time. You could not do this class of work in the winter time, therefore it was within the knowledge of the minister or the heads of the departments that it was utterly impossible to spend the money for this work for which he is asking money now. Therefore it must be revoted if they intend to use it for the coming year. We would naturally expect that the amount of money not spent would appear as a revote ; otherwise what is the purpose of having a column of revotes ? It does not give the House any intelligent information if it is made up in that way, and we might far better have no column to show the revotes.

Mr. FIELDING. My hon. friend forgets that when the estimates were made up, say in the month of January—probably the appropriations began to be made up in December—the officers of the departments might reasonably expect that in the months of April, May and June, a very large proportion of this money would be expended ; and if it turned out that less was expended than they expected, that certainly would not show any lack of good faith. It would simply show that the officers in the winter could not say how much money would be expended up to the 30th June. But they might make a fair estimate and say : If the season is favourable we may probably spend so much. That would be a fair way to deal with it. The estimates begin the 1st of January, or in December, because we aim as soon as parliament meets to have the estimates ready. As soon as the beginning of the new year we commence to urge the various departments to prepare their estimates, and some of them are prepared as early as the first week in January. The estimates are not finally brought down until parliament meets. Speaking generally, we urge the various departments to prepare their estimates in January in the hope that parliament might be able to meet in January, and I am sorry that it was not able to do so.

Mr. SPROULE. The minister will see that his explanation does not apply to this case at all. The Minister of Public Works tells us that this contract was let recently. Now the work was of such a nature that it could not be undertaken in the winter time, therefore the money could not be spent, they had not made any provision for letting the contract. It was only let very recently, and the minister is not sure whether the contract is signed. So it must have been apparent to the minister that that money could not be spent before the 30th of June, as there was no contract let and they were not prepared to let it. Therefore, whatever money they required that was voted last year on that contract for the coming year and was not spent, must be a revote and it could easily be known that it would be a revote, even at that early date.

Mr. FIELDING. It is conceivable that the engineers preparing their figures in January expected this work would be let and would be begun in the month of April, though they might not have ben correct in their anticipation. But preparing their estimates in January, it would be reasonable for them to assume that this work would be commenced in April and during the next three months they would spend so much money. They can make only an approximate estimate.

Mr. LENNOX. The Minister of Finance has expressed exactly what I claim ought to be expressed. I am not making any charge of bad faith. I was pointing out that we voted last year $36,000. It has been ascertained now, though it could not be known at the time the estimates were made up, that the whole expenditure was $8,000. That left $28,000 expended. Now up to the extent of the $28,000 which lapsed, I say that would be a revote, and finding we have actually spent only $8,000 they are asking for another vote. Now the $12,000 I see in that column should be changed to $20.000, that is a revote of the whole amount the government is asking for. That $16,000 we are taking to-night is part of the $20,000, the total estimate for this year. When we vote the $16,000, that, with the $4,000 voted the other day, makes up $20,000, and every dollar of that is a revote, because it is part of the balance of $36,000 voted last year. It is only a question of getting the matter right, and I move that the item be amended in the revote column by changing the amount from $12,000 to $20,000.

Mr. FIELDING. The hon. gentleman will see that we cannot do that. The revote column is not before us for the action of the committee. It is given for the information and assistance of the House and we are not legislating on the revote. We are dealing with the specific sum in the estimates. It is really of little or no consequence whether it is a revote or not.

Mr. LENNOX. I will take the statement of the hon. minister and if there is any difficulty about it technically I will not urge it at all.

Mr. TAYLOR. The hon. minister came down last year and asked for $36,000. The House voted it. Now he comes down and says that out of that $36,000 he has only spent $8,000 which would leave a balance of $28,000 to be expended under the estimate of last year. He says now that he does not want that $28,000, that he is only asking for $20,000. If the hon. Minister of Finance will look at the vote before us he will see that there is a discrepancy; either the hon. Minister of Public Works asked for too much last year or he is not asking enough this year.

Mr. FIELDING. Well, that may be correct. If he is not asking for enough the hon. gentleman should not complain. If the hon. minister wants to have a fit of economy why should we not allow him?

Mr. TAYLOR. But he should not have asked for $36,000 when he did not want it, because it was stated last year that the estimate was based on the engineer's report.

Mr. SPROULE. These figures are placed in the estimates for the purpose of enabling us to understand what we are doing, and what we complain of is that the House is being improperly misled. While that cannot be avoided now we are drawing attention to it because we have the same thing occurring frequently this year. This is a thing that we have rarely had to complain of before but we have had this trouble several times this year and it is suggested that the estimates have been gotten up very loosely and carelessly.

Mr. FIELDING. These estimates were not got up carelessly or loosely. At the time this estimate was prepared it was a fair and reasonable estimate, but it was prepared on the assumption that these votes would be dealt with long ago. It turns out, however, that we are, at a late stage of the session, dealing with estimates which were prepared many months ago.

Mr. SPROULE. But if that applied to this year it would apply to every year where the session extended beyond the 30th June.

Mr. FIELDING. Yes, it would.

Mr. SPROULE. And we would have the same thing to contend with every year. Until this year we have rarely found this condition but this year we have found it very often.

Harbours and rivers, Quebec, $723,300.

Mr. BENNETT. Will the hon. minister answer a question as to Midland? Is the government dock at Midland rented and was any rent derived last year from it?

Mr. HYMAN. I am afraid the hon. gentleman will have to ask the Department of Marine and Fisheries, because docks, immediately they are employed, are placed under the control of that department.

Mr. BENNETT. I might explain to the hon. minister that that dock has not yet passed over to the Department of Marine and Fisheries. He can ask the deputy minister whether it was rented last year or this year to any person, and if so, what rent is payable.

Mr. HYMAN. The deputy informs me that he has no knowledge of the dock being rented.

Mr. BENNETT. The department are not receiving any rent for it?

Mr. HYMAN. This department would not receive rent from the dock.

Mr. BENNETT. I have a letter here which I will read to the minister and which will show that this department are dealing with it. There is a valuable dock in the possession of this department, they have not handed it over to the Department of Marine and Fisheries, and last year an offer was made for the dock and the warehouses on it on the following terms:

Ottawa, 28th April, 1903.

Gentlemen,—I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter asking whether this department would accept an annual rental of $450 for the use of the storehouse and docks belonging to the government and which were lately purchased by the town from Messrs. Burton Bros.

I have the honour to be, sir,
Your obedient servant,
FRED. GELINAS,
Secretary.

This is addressed to the Midland Mercantile and Trading Company. The hon. minister will see that last year this company offered $450 in rental for the dock. It has been in the occupation of other parties. Surely the deputy must be conversant with the case. The docks and buildings are being used by Playfair and Company. Is that correct or not ?

Mr. HYMAN. I have no information in regard to the matter. I will look into the matter and let the hon. gentleman know all about it when the item comes up.

Mr. BENNETT. I may not be here when the item comes up. Surely the deputy must know something about it. These docks have been in use by this company for two years and there are large warehouses on them. Surely the deputy must be able to inform the committee whether Playfair and Company are paying rent or not ?

Mr. HYMAN. Playfair and Company are paying no rent to the department.

Mr. BENNETT. That is what I expected. May I ask the hon. minister, just on the question of this Midland item, if the department have received anything from any persons in Midland for dredging done by the government dredge there ?

Mr. HYMAN. At the request of the hon. gentleman I took up Ontario. I shall be very glad to answer any questions in regard to Ontario, but the Quebec votes were the next in order, I have the explanations in regard to Quebec but I am not prepared to give the explanations in regard to the rest of Ontario.

Mr. BENNETT. I am only asking the hon. minister as to whether anything has been received for the dredging done there and as his deputy is sitting there surely he could give the information.

Mr. HYMAN. The deputy informs me that he cannot remember the circumstances.

Mr. BENNETT. I am sure nothing has been paid either for the dredge or the dock.

Mr. HYMAN. That may be your statement.

Mr. TAYLOR. When we asked the hon. minister to forego Quebec it was for the reason that none of the members from that province on this side of the House were present. My hon. friend from Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) will be here to-morrow. We understood that we would take up Ontario. I always thought the minister had his book with all the explanations for the whole of the estimates with him at every meeting of the committee so that he would be able to go on. I think the hon. gentleman should go on and give any explanations that are necessary.

Mr. HYMAN. I cannot. I have not the book here and I cannot do it.

Mr. TAYLOR. Then, do I understand you expect to get through with Quebec to-night?

Mr. HYMAN. I expected to go on with Quebec.

Mr. TAYLOR. You have gone now as far as you can go with Ontario ?

Mr. HYMAN. It was simply at the request of the hon. member for East Simcoe (Mr. Bennett) that Ontario was taken up. The understanding with the hon. gentleman was that we should take up Ontario, proceed as far as we could and then turn back to Quebec.

Mr. TAYLOR. Are we to understand that when we do Quebec that is as far as we can go ?

Mr. HYMAN. No, there are lots of other things.

Mr. TAYLOR. What other things ?

Mr. HYMAN. We can take up telegraphs, dredging and certain capital expenditures which we passed over.

Mr. TAYLOR. If my hon. friend is prepared to go on with Quebec we will go on.

Mr. MORIN. Go on. I am ready.

Quebec—Anse aux Gascons—extension of wharf, &c., $6,000.

Mr. MORIN. Where is that ?

Mr. HYMAN. Bonaventure county.

Mr. MORIN. It is bound to be either Bonaventure or Gaspé.

Quebec—Baie St. Paul—repairs to wharf at Cap aux Corbeaux, $1,000.

Mr. MORIN. Is this wharf used by the Richelieu and Ontario steamers, and if so, do they pay wharfage dues ?

Mr. HYMAN. The Public Works Department builds a wharf when it is required, and then it is handed over to the Marine Department which takes control of it, appoints a wharfinger and collects the tolls.

Mr. MORIN. Does any one collect dues at this wharf ?

Mr. HYMAN. The Minister of Marine is not here just now.

Mr. MORIN. I have no objection to the government building a wharf, but the Richelieu and Ontario Company are rich enough to pay for the use of it.

Quebec—Bonaventure East, breakwater, $5,000.

Mr. SPROULE. Is that to complete the work ?

Mr. HYMAN. The work is under contract for $15,690 ; the contract was let on the 27th of April last.

Mr. SPROULE. Then why do you only take $5,000 ?

Mr. HYMAN. There is a further amount in the supplementary estimates.

Quebec—Caplan, breakwater, $5,000.

Mr. HYMAN. The contract for that has been let; it amounts to $13,700. There is a balance to complete in the supplementary estimates.

Mr. SPROULE. These are all let by public tender?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes.

Quebec—Chambord wharf, $8,000.

Mr. HYMAN. Tenders are advertised for and according to the estimate this is the full amount. This is on Lake St. John.

Quebec—Champlain—wharf, including repairs and additions, $8,200.

Mr. SPROULE. What is this for?

Mr. HYMAN. It is asked to provide for the purchase and repairs to a wharf. The matter is now with the Department of Justice.

Mr. SPROULE. Who are you purchasing the wharf from?

Mr. HYMAN. From Messrs, Arkoff and Champlain.

Mr. CLANCY. How is it divided?

Mr. HYMAN. $1,000 is to be paid for the purchase of the wharf and the balance for improvements on the property.

Quebec—Chateau Richer, harbour improvements, $3,000.

Mr. HENDERSON. Is this vested in the Crown, or is it private property?

Mr. HYMAN. It will be vested in the Crown.

Mr. HENDERSON. It is not acquired yet?

Mr. HYMAN. The actual deed is not passed, but an agreement has been made for the purchase from a private individual.

Quebec—Deschambault wharf, $9,000.

Mr. SPROULE. What is this?

Mr. HYMAN. It is proposed to call for tenders and the plans are almost ready. The estimate given by the officers of the department for completion is $11,000.

Mr. TAYLOR. How did you come to spend $5,000 on this last year; that would make it $14,000.

Mr. HYMAN. The $5,000 last year was for repairs to the present wharf, and this is for an extension.

Quebec—Father Point—landing pier, $40,000.

Mr. HYMAN. The contract for this work, amounting to $44,300, was let on the 23rd of May, 1904, and the work is to be completed next year.

Quebec—Grande Vallée—pier, $20,000.

Mr. BENNETT. Does this complete the work, and what is the total cost?

Mr. HYMAN. This is to complete the work. The amount of the contract is $53,900. The estimate of the total cost is $58,500.

Mr. FOWLER. How much has been paid?

Mr. HYMAN. $38,559.

Mr. LENNOX. How much was spent last year?

Mr. HYMAN. Up to the 30th of June last year, $22,559.25. The expenditure during the last fiscal year was $12,000 odd.

Mr. SPROULE. I understand that there was some trouble about the proprietorship of the land.

Mr. HYMAN. That has been settled. The ownership has been vested in the Crown.

Mr. SPROULE. How much did we pay for the land?

Mr. HYMAN. Nothing at all.

Mr. INGRAM. What is the importance of the expenditure at this place?

Mr. HYMAN. Of course, the vote that is being asked this year is simply to complete a work which is under contract.

Mr. INGRAM. But we are spending a large sum of money, and there has never been a satisfactory explanation give to this House in regard to this Grande Vallée pier. It is simply a matter of politics. The vote was put in the estimates to satisfy a political friend, and it is an expensive way of doing it. We on this side of the House are frequently taunted in the country with allowing estimates to pass this House without reasonable criticism. I wish to say to hon. gentlemen opposite that in allowing these estimates to pass as they are doing to-night, we are not doing our full duty; but if hon. gentlemen want to get through before the snow flies, I suppose we shall have to let them go through holus bolus. I do not want to stay here all summer; but if I am taunted in the country for allowing the estimates to go through, I shall have my answer.

Mr. MORIN. I never heard of a pier costing $58,000 in my life. What is this for?

Mr. HYMAN. This is a wharf.

Mr. MORIN. What is the use of the government building a wharf for a man who carries on lumbering operations? In the first place, the gentleman got his property cheap enough, and he could very well build his own pier or wharf. Why does the government do so much for one man and so little for others? If a poor farmer was to come here and ask for $10,000 to clear up a farm he would be kicked out of the House but if a man comes here who is worth a whole lot of money and asks for $58,000 to help him in his business you turn around and give it to him, and then you go to the country and say that the opposition is detaining the House. Who is to blame? It is the minister or the ministers. Whenever some one goes to any minister to ask for a thing of that kind, if the minister did his duty he would say to that man: Clear out. I will not give it to you. That would be the proper course but it is not done in that way. Whenever the government is afraid that they cannot carry a county they are going to bribe that man and that county if they can do it. That is the way it is done and I know it and I can prove it.

Mr. FOWLER. This I understand was a matter of contract; in order to get a candidate in a county in the eastern townships it was necessary that this wharf should be built and I suppose the government is simply carrying out its bargain. That seems on the face of it to be a rather commendable thing to do.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. My hon. friend knows where Grande Vallee is. It happens to be a place on the lower St. Lawrence on the north shore of the Gaspé peninsula and if my information is correct that is the only wharf on the whole south shore of the St. Lawrence, between Perce and Matane, a distance I am sure of several hundred miles. It is the only wharf in the whole of that locality. This is rather an important place. My hon. friend is aware that quite recently an important lumbering industry has been established there and it is for the purpose of affording the people on that shore some place to which they can have access for their boats that this work has been done. It is perhaps also in the knowledge of my hon. friend that there is not a single mile of railway in the whole of Gaspé or for several hundred miles on the south shore of the St. Lawrence from Father Point down to Gaspé.

Mr. FOWLER. This matter has been discussed on other occasions in past years, and the whole subject was gone into very thoroughly last year on this very estimate. It was shown very conclusively that the only people who are accommodated by this wharf are people connected with the lumber industry at Grande Vallee, that a certain gentleman, a member of this House, who I understand was not a member of this House at the time he made the purchase, bought this property, this seigneury of Grande Vallee in which there is a large timber limit, and in order to make that timber limit profitable it was necessary to have a wharf constructed at a very large expenditure. He found that if he had to construct this wharf at his own expense he had a white elephant on his hands, and so the government came to his rescue and constructed this wharf which is built solely and entirely for this gentleman's use in connection with this lumber business. This man, a member of this House, afterwards transferred this property which had become valuable owing to the expenditure which the government had agreed to make in connection with this wharf and it was stated in this House that the building of this wharf was the result of some sort of understanding between some person acting on behalf of the government and this gentleman in order to induce this gentleman to become a candidate for the federal House for a certain county in the eastern townships. Comment was made at the time that on every occasion when this item came up that person made it convenient to be out of the House during the discussion and on one occasion at least this item was held over in order that that gentleman might be present, but that gentleman still found it convenient to be absent when the matter was discussed. I remember on one occasion, the gentleman was in the House just as the item was called, and quietly slipped out as soon as he knew it was being discussed. It seems to me that is a matter for fair comment. In order to give that gentleman a chance, if he is unavoidably absent to-night, it would be well to allow it to stand in order that he may be here to speak for himself.

Mr. BLAIN. Is there a post office at this place.

Mr. HYMAN. I am informed there is a post office.

Mr. HENDERSON. How many people are living around this wharf? What is the population of the place?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I do not know how many people are living in this immediate locality, but I do know that this locality is now being developed by lumbermen who have gone in there and to whom this work is a necessity. But in addition to that the people living in the locality who frequent that coast are entitled to some consideration. Here you have hundreds of miles on the south shore of the St. Lawrence without any means of access. We want to open that country, and create facilities if facilities do not exist and if there is not population in there we want to draw it. We can only do that in so far as we provide proper facilities for them.

Mr. HENDERSON. The Minister of Justice seems warm on this. He must certainly feel a deep interest in it. I would be sorry indeed to withhold from these people anything to which they are entitled, but it is a well known fact that this whole transaction savours very much of a big political job. That has been admitted for years and that is the reason why we look with a good deal of suspicion at any additional grant of money to these people. I think the minister should come out frankly and tell us how many people live in that section, and how many lumber firms there are who are interested in it. So far as my recollection goes we have never heard of anything but the one lumber firm being interested in the construction of this pier. That was the firm of gentleman referred to by the member from New Brunswick, who gave us a little of the inside history of this transaction. Is this government going on year after year expending additional sums on this pier simply for the same purpose that was in view when it was originally suggested ? If it is, I think it is time the committee should call a halt and until we are given at any rate some assurance that we are spending this money for a proper purpose. There may be a very large range of coast on which perhaps no public money has been spent ; there is a large range of coast that could not be improved even by a very large expenditure of money. We know little of the character of the country down there. We do not know anything of the extent of this lumber industry. It has been looked upon for the last two or three years as a mere farce, and I think we should have some information as to the number of people living there, the number of lumber mills there and the number of industries that are being carried on in this place. There are plenty of other portions of the country where large industries are carried on which would be glad indeed to have an expenditure of this kind. I want to be perfectly fair to this county, I think it is the county of Gaspé. But we want to know that the money is being spent for a legitimate purpose and not simply to gain a party advantage, which we were led to understand some years ago was the reason of the whole transaction.

Mr. BOURASSA. I happen to be in a position to give the committee some information as to this place, because I have been there. There is quite a village at Grande Vallée—a church, a post office, and a population which has been waiting for communication for years and years. The reason they did not get it before this industry was established there was because the wharf was to be more costly than those of almost any other place in the district. The people petitioned for years to get communication. I have been there a couple of days, and have seen the freight gathered by the boat that passes once or twice a week, and I know that this wharf will be a great relief to the people there. Since the establishment of a wharf the village has been increasing in population. Not only is this industry a thriving one, giving employment to the people of the village and thereby increasing population, but since the wharf is being built settlement is going on as it never did before. Formerly the people had no local markets and they could not get to Quebec with their produce. They have now both their local market and communication with Quebec. Speaking without regard to party, and as one who has no interest in the industry, I can say that this wharf is one of the most useful made by the government on that coast, the whole of which I have visited.

Mr. SPROULE. We were told last year that there were no farmers there.

Mr. BOURASSA. They are just going in.

Mr. SPROULE. Oh, oh.

Mr. BOURASSA. My hon. friend is laughing. But if he knew that country well he would not laugh. I represent a similar county myself, and I understand the conditions. There is a seignory there, and the government townships are a little distance from the coast. The government could not see their way to making an expenditure, because the people would not go in on the government townships before the seignory was settled. It is only after the seignory land was settled that the Quebec government could get the settlement to go into the back townships.

Mr. TALBOT. There is a population of 400 in the village.

Mr. BOURASSA. In the village itself. The wharf is more costly than it would otherwise have been because of the sandbank at the mouth of the river, which prevented boats going up and loading there, and people have to go six miles to a smaller place to get their goods shipped and to receive goods that come in.

Mr. TAYLOR. Last year we were told there was not a wharf within a hundred miles of this place. And now the hon. gentleman says the people have to go only six miles.

Mr. BOURASSA. There are places within six or eight miles where the small sailing boats go. But the steamers do not stop there.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. There is a steamer that plies between Montreal and Gaspé, calling at Quebec and other points. And, between Matane and Gaspé, this is the only place they can call. There are small ports where the sail boats go.

Mr. BLAIN. I am sure we are much obliged to the hon. member for Labelle (Mr. Bourassa) for the information he has given us. I do not wonder that he spoke of the growth of the town. We were told that its population was 300, and very soon after a voice from the back benches said that it was 400. Evidently it is growing very rapidly. At the same time, I notice that the total revenue from the post office there for twelve months was only $97.17.

Mr. BOURASSA. That is for the twelve months ending 30th June, 1903, I suppose. I have just told the hon. gentleman the population was increasing very rapidly, especially since last year, because it was only last year the boat began to stop and people began to go in. I was there when the first or second boat stopped there in the month of August.

Mr. BLAIN. These towns do not spring up quite so rapidly as the hon. gentleman (Mr. Bourassa) suggests. I have just stated that the postal revenue there for the last fiscal year was only $97.17. The hon. gentleman I am sure will not regard that as a great revenue. However, I will not pursue that point. What amount of dues is paid by those using the wharf ?

Mr. HYMAN. The wharf is not yet completed, much less transferred to the Marine and Fisheries Department. Therefore, no dues have been paid.

Mr. BLAIN. Is it the intention to collect dues at this wharf ?

Mr. HYMAN. The law provides for that. When the wharf is completed and transferred to the Department of Marine and Fisheries, the collection of dues will be provided for.

Mr. INGRAM. I understand that the hon. member for Labelle (Mr. Bourassa) is a scientific farmer. Probably he would like to farm in that district. Would he describe the country for us ? I suppose it is nice and level—a beautiful country ?

Mr. BOURASSA. Does the hon. gentleman (Mr. Ingram) wish me to go into the landscape painting business ?

Mr. INGRAM. I am sure the hon. gentleman will be able to find a beautiful landscape view there. The hon. gentleman was not in the House when this item came up first, and nobody seemed to know about it. I believe that the government had no authority to build this dock where they did, for the land belonged to private parties. That is the reason why this expenditure was brought about in the first instance—it was a political reason. Hon. gentlemen opposite can colour it as much as they like, but that was the fact. I can understand that the Minister of Justice (Mr. Fitzpatrick), with an election in view, would try to put the best face on it.

Mr. SPROULE. It was shown last year that the land in that seignory belonged to one individual, and there were not even highways to the wharf. It was shown that the owner was a gentleman who was carrying on this lumber industry. The hon. member for Labelle speaks of bringing in produce to the wharf, but it was shown that there were no highways to the wharf, and the people could not get there without trespassing on private property, all the land belonging to the owner of the timber limit and the mill. We might as well be honest about it, and say fairly and frankly that this is a political job which is costing us about $58,000.

Mr. BOURASSA. The great maritime road which runs through the counties of Rimouski and Gaspé, runs through this seignory and close to the wharf.

Mr. SPROULE. How far ?

Mr. BOURASSA. Half an arpent—just a few feet.

Mr. SPROULE. But there is no highway ?

Mr. BOURASSA. That is a highway—the provincial highway.

Mr. SPROULE. But for the trade to the wharf there is no highway ?

Mr. HYMAN. There is a road, vested in the Crown.

Mr. SPROULE. When ?

Mr. HYMAN. Now—since last year.

Mr. FOWLER. Is there a good road built ?

Mr. HYMAN. I presume there must be a road. They are bringing the material to the wharf.

Mr. SPROULE. The hon. minister does not know that as a matter of fact ?

Mr. HYMAN. It is a matter of fact, as I am informed by the officers of the department, and that is the only way a minister can get information on these subjects. The materials for the wharf are being carted on this road.

Mr. BOURASSA. And I have driven on the road myself.

Quebec—Grondines wharf, $7,500.

Mr. HYMAN. This vote is asked to make provision for the completion of the proposed reconstruction and enlargement of the present wharf. The estimated cost of reconstruction and enlargement is $5,000. Improvement to bridges, stone lifting, &c., is estimated to cost about $10,000. $7,500 have been expended on the wharf and there is a revote of $2,500.

Maritime Provinces—Harbours, rivers and bridges—general repairs and improvements, $20,000.

Mr. MORIN. This item appears to have a very wide scope. Where are these harbours, rivers and so forth ?

Mr. HYMAN. This vote is taken for emergency repairs. It is often found that wharfs become damaged through storms or otherwise, and this general vote is taken to make those repairs. It would not be expedient to wait for a special appropriation.

Mr. LENNOX. Would the minister state what was done last year with the $20,000 then voted ?

Mr. HYMAN. I have a long detailed statement here of small items which I will read if the hon. gentleman desires.

Mr. LENNOX. Give us the large items amounting to $4,000 or $5,000.

Mr. HYMAN. There is no item in the whole number anything like that amount.

Mr. HENDERSON. Was there anything more than $20,000 spent under this head ?

Mr. HYMAN. No, there is nothing to be taken out of this year's appropriation.

Quebec—Lake St. John—dredging, $4,000.

Mr. BLAIN. How is the dredging done on this wharf ?

Mr. HYMAN. There is a government dredge there, and this vote is taken to pay for its maintenance.

Mr. HENDERSON. Since the departments have been rearranged, has the Marine Department taken over the dredging plant belonging to the Public Works Department, or will it be necessary for the Public Works Department to supply itself with an entirely new outfit of dredging plant and all the paraphernalia necessary to carry on their operations, or will they borrow from the Marine Department, or is it the intention of the Public Works Department to purchase or construct new dredges ?

Mr. HYMAN. The transfer which has taken place from the Department of Public Works to the Department of Marine and Fisheries which require dredging covers only the St. Lawrence channel. When that work was taken over the dredges that were transferred to the Department of Marine and Fisheries were the dredges which were at the time working in that particular branch. The transfer affects in no way the policy of the Department of Public Works in regard to dredging generally, nor will the transfer of dredges that were taken over affect in any way the question of dredging generally, which belongs to the Public Works Department.

Quebec—Laprairie ice piers and protection wall—works of reconstruction and repairs, $15,500.

Mr. HYMAN. This is a new work, and this sum is estimated to complete it. The total amount of the contract is $29,650.

Mr. BLAIN. Do you expect any revenue from this ?

Mr. HYMAN. No. This is a protection work from which there will be no revenue.

Mr. BLAIN. Why is a work of this kind required and who will be served by it ?

Mr. HYMAN. These works were built a number of years ago, and this is practically a revote for their protection.

Mr. BLAIN. Did they get out of repair altogether ?

Mr. HYMAN. They were decayed, this is practically a renewal.

Mr. BLAIN. Has there ever been any revenue from this place ?

Mr. HYMAN. This is purely and simply for protection. I am informed this particular work protects the whole village of Laprairie which otherwise would be flooded.

Quebec—Lotbinière wharf, improvements, $12,000.

Mr. HYMAN. This work is under contract, and this vote is expected to complete it. The total amount of the estimate was $19,800. The Public Works Department is obliged to construct all the wharfs, and after a wharf is constructed it is handed over to the Marine and Fisheries Department.

Mr. BLAIN. When the committee are asked to vote a large amount of money we should have some information from the hon. gentleman in respect to the revenue.

Mr. FOWLER. What is the estimated revenue ?

Mr. HYMAN. The question of the revenue derived from a wharf lies entirely with the Department of Marine and Fisheries. As far as this department is concerned we have no estimate of the revenue.

Mr. EARLE. I simply rise to suggest that if we are to get the information we are entitled to with reference to items of this sort it will be necessary for the hon. Minister of Public Works to have the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries here to give it. We have no opportunity of getting that information unless we get it upon the items we pass. It is absurd to tell the committee that the government have no information to give us on matters of this kind and if it is necessary the hon. gentleman should have the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries present or the item should stand.

Mr. FOWLER. It seems a very strange thing that the Department of Public Works should decide upon the construction of a wharf without having any information as to the estimated revenue to be derived from it if it is usual to get a revenue from these wharfs.

Mr. HYMAN. Yes, wherever it is possible.

Mr. FOWLER. That ought to be one consideration upon which you agree to construct the wharf. One thing is the accommodation of the public, another is the advantage to that portion of the public which is served by the wharf and another is the advantage to the general public by means of the revenue derived from the wharf when constructed. This is the only opportunity we have of getting the information, and I think the hon. gentleman should have it.

Mr. HYMAN. The hon. gentleman will understand the difficulty of arriving at any estimate in a matter of this kind. It is purely a new work and until the work is completed it would be almost impossible to arrive at any estimate that would be of any value to the committee.

Mr. FOWLER. I can hardly agree with that. It seems to me that you could easily estimate the revenue to be collected from the importance of the place, the amount of business that is done and the amount of shipping that comes there.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. My hon. friend (Mr. Fowler), who, I know, has gone up and down the river very frequently between Montreal and Quebec, will have noticed on the south side of the river St. Lawrence after leaving the harbour of Quebec and getting above Cap Rouge that the country is very populous. Lotbinière is about twenty miles above St. Nicolas and above Cap Rouge, and taking the whole country from St. Nicholas, or from the harbour of Quebec, there is no railway within thirty miles of the settlement on the river side. The Drummond county railway and the Grand Trunk pass in the interior, and I am sure there must be at least twenty miles at some points from these settlements on the river front to the line of railway inside. These are probably the most prosperous parishes we have in the province, in the district of Quebec at all events. These are parishes which are thickly settled. The river front looks like a village extending over the whole territory once you leave the harbour of Quebec. Lotbinière is the centre of that district, and in addition to being a very important farming centre from which centre farmers come down to Quebec in the ferry-boats three times a week, there is a large brickyard in that locality. It is a very important brickyard. I know that some of the bricks from that yard have been sold in Ottawa.

Mr. SPROULE. Is that where the brickyards are on the St. Lawrence ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. That is one of them ; it is on the south side of the river. There is an immense beach at that place. There is a rise and a fall of tide in that locality of from fifteen to eighteen feet and when the tide goes down all the villages along there are inaccessible. This wharf will be located at about the centre of the most thickly settled portion of that beautiful country. I can understand that my hon. friends may say that in so far as Quebec is concerned we are very well supplied with wharfs and that our demands are numerous, but you must realize that the old settlement of Quebec is on the river front. All the villages and churches are on the river front and once they leave the city of Quebec the lines of railway on both sides of the river diverge and go inland. The Canadian Pacific Railway does not run a long the north shore of the St. Lawrence until it comes almost to the neighbourhood of Three Rivers. It is the same thing on the south side with the Drummond county and Grand Trunk. To enable these people to get to market it is necessary for them to have this convenience and I know that market boats coming to Quebec at times, in order to take advantage of the tide, are obliged to leave the night before. These people would be able if they were provided with these facilities to come to Quebec within an hour and a half or two hours whereas they are obliged at the present time to leave sometimes the night before to get into Quebec in the morning and they are obliged to wait until the next night to get back because they can only go back when the tide suits. My hon. friend from Dorchester (Mr. Morin) knows these facts as well as I do. He lives among these people and it is under these circumstances that we appeal to hon. gentlemen opposite to allow these items to go through, because they will surely realize that they are works of absolute necessity in so far as the people in the neighbourhood of Quebec are concerned.

Mr. HENDERSON. I am sure we have been delighted with what the hon Minister of Justice has told us. It has been very interesting to me and I have no doubt to others but I do not wish the hon. Minister of Justice to think for one moment that we have any objection to these wharfs being built. I think there is necessity for them, but we would like to know about them. We would like to know for what purpose the money is being put that we vote and I think it was a reasonable question as to what revenue was being derived from this wharf. I am not sure that there is any revenue derived.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. There is no public wharf at that place now.

Mr. HENDERSON. I thought this was for repairing an old wharf ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. No, this is for a new wharf.

Mr. HENDERSON. Personally I am not opposing these people getting the improvements that are necessary to carry on their operations wherever there is a population that would call for them. I think that parliament is here to provide for the necessities of the people, but I would like to ask the hon. Minister of Justice what the policy of the government is in reference to such wharfs. Are they free ; or is there toll charged vessels which may load or unload goods at these wharfs ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I am not here to explain the policy of the government but I can tell my hon. friend that under the law the Department of Public Works is merely a contracting department.

Mr. HENDERSON. I quite understand that.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. When a wharf is deemed necessary the Department of Public Works build the wharf and after it is built it is transferred for its management and control to the Department of Marine and Fisheries and the Department of Marine and Fisheries are obliged to collect tolls. I have a very small wharf at Beauport and I have endeavoured time and again to get that wharf transferred to the municipality which would take control of it and be responsible for the repairs ; but on looking into the law I find that it is not within the power of the Department of Marine and Fisheries to transfer these wharfs because they are public property and they cannot hand them over. If my hon. friend will look at page P—134 of the Auditor General's Report he will find lists of the wharfs in the different provinces and the revenue derived from each of them.

Mr. FOWLER. The item as it appears states that it is for improvements. The hon. Minister of Justice says there is no wharf there. Is this a new work ?

Mr. HYMAN. The explanation of that is that there was an isolated block built and this is to connect it with the shore and make a wharf.

Quebec—Magdalen Islands, breakwaters and piers, $20,000.

Mr. LENNOX. Will this complete the work ?

Mr. HYMAN. The engineer tells me that this will complete the work, but it may be necessary to ask another small amount.

Quebec—Murray Bay—increasing height of wharf, $4,000.

Mr. FOWLER. Why have you to increase the height of the wharf ? Is the water higher than it used to be, or did you make a mistake the first time ?

Mr. HYMAN. The wharf was originally not built high enough and in heavy weather the water flows over it.

Quebec—Newport breakwater, $10,000.

Mr. HYMAN. This is under contract.

Mr. HENDERSON. Where is it ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Gaspé county.

Mr. HENDERSON. I thought Grande Vallee was the only expenditure in Gaspé county.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Gaspé is a promontory that juts on the St. Lawrence and the Bay de Chaleur. Grande Vallee on the St. Lawrence side and Newport is on the Bay de Chaleur side.

Mr. HENDERSON. Are there farming operations on the other side as well ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Of course. It would do my hon. friend good to visit that country. He would find in Bonaventure and Gaspé on the Bay de Chaleur side as fine a farming country as there is in all Canada.

Quebec—Perce wharf, $9,000.

Mr. HENDERSON. Where is that ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Gaspé.

Mr. HENDERSON. I am glad we are doing something for Gaspé. By the way, the minister is constantly saying that some of these items are departmental. I would like to know on what authority the department goes on making expenditures. We have constitutional government in this country, and it is the minister who is responsible, but it would appear that the minister knows nothing about this expenditure.

Mr. HYMAN. I did not say that I knew nothing about it.

Mr. HENDERSON. I understand it is an expenditure recommended by the engineer, and it would seem as if the department was run by the chief engineer and not by the minister.

Mr. HYMAN. The word departmental is possibly a word of my own. There is a resident engineer in charge of the public works in each district, and he reports that certain repairs are necessary, and the chief engineer brings these reports before the minister who considers whether the repairs should be made or not. The responsibility is altogether on the minister. When I say departmental I mean that the report has reached the minister entirely through the channel of the resident engineer in charge of these works.

Quebec—Pointe St. Pierre—breakwater, $6,000.

Mr. FOWLER. Where is that ? I understand there are a great many places of that name in Quebec.

Mr. HYMAN. This is in Gaspé county. This is under contract, the total cost is $24,000 of which $22,000 is the amount of the contract and there is something for superintendence.

Quebec—Rimouski, extension of piers, &c., $30,000.

Mr. HYMAN. This is for repairing the present piers ; it is a very important place.

Mr. SPROULE. How much did you expend last year on that ?

Mr. HYMAN. When these estimates were prepared no money had been expended, but during the fiscal year there were $75,000 expended.

Mr. LENNOX. Will this $30,000 complete the work ?

Mr. HYMAN. It will complete these repairs.

Mr. LENNOX. Is there something else in view ?

Mr. HYMAN. An extension and several other improvements have been asked for, and the applications are before the department. This is all that has been asked for and all that the department will spend in the meantime. It completes the repairs on that wharf.

Quebec—Rivière du Loup (Fraserville) harbour improvements, $20,000.

Mr. SPROULE. What improvements are being made here ?

Mr. HYMAN. As a matter of fact, this vote is taken in anticipation of the expenditure, to enable the department to enter into a contract. There has been some difficulty in regard to acquiring the site.

Mr. GAUVREAU. Is it the intention of the minister to go on with this portion of the work at an early day ?

Mr. HYMAN. The whole question in regard to the harbour is under the consideration of the department, including the question of acquiring the site.

Mr. SPROULE. Where are you acquiring the site ? it is private property ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes. There is already one wharf there, the approach to which is owned by the government. The report of the engineer is in regard to another wharf ; but before that can be started it is necessary to acquire the property in order to get an approach to the wharf. These two wharfs are intended to form a harbour of refuge after dredging between the two wharfs.

Mr. LENNOX. There appears to have been $3,500 of last year's vote expended. How did that occur ?

Mr. HYMAN. That would be on repairs to the other wharf.

Mr. LENNOX. That is not what the vote was for. The minister will not say that under the expression harbour improvements we are voting money for repairs.

Mr. HYMAN. Yes, I will say that under the wording of this item it is quite in accord with the custom of the department to spend a certain amount of money for repairs.

Mr. LENNOX. Then I submit the custom of the department ought to be changed. It is quite unfair to the committee to use the word ' repairs ' at certain times, indicating repairs that are to be executed, and then, under the head of harbour improvements, at the sweet will of the department, to spend money for repairs. There should be a reasonable definite meaning to the language employed. If that has been the practice of the department, it is just as well that it has come to light, and I think it should not occur again.

Mr. HYMAN. In this particular instance, besides the repairs, it is intended to improve the harbour by building a new wharf. Where the item is for repairs only, it is so stated. When it is for harbour improvements, these may include repairs.

Mr. LENNOX. What are we to understand by this particular item ? Is it for improvements only or for repairs ?

Mr. HYMAN. It may include both.

Mr. BLAIN. What amount has been used for the purchase of land

Mr. HYMAN. The matter is under negotiation between the owners of the property and the department. There has been no decision arrived at.

Quebec—Ste. Famille — extension of pier, $6,000.

Mr. HYMAN. There is a contract in this case amounting to $17,764. The total probable cost will be $19,500. In addition to this vote it will require $13,500 to complete.

Mr. SPROULE. What was the $4,000 spent for last year ?

Mr. HYMAN. It is a question of estimates, $4,000 was not expended. At the time the estimate was made up, it was expected it would be.

Quebec—St. Godfroi de Nouvelle—breakwater, $6,000.

Mr. BLAIN. What about this one Mr. Chairman ?

Mr. HYMAN. That amount is under contract. The contract was $19,300, the total probable cost $21,300. There is $6,000 in the main estimates and the balance in the supplementary estimates.

Quebec—St. Jean des Chaillons wharf—$12,000.

Mr. BLAIN. What is this ?

Mr. HYMAN. Tenders have been called for. There are $5,000 in the supplementaries for it, and the total estimated cost is $28,000.

Mr. SPROULE. I would suggest that we have done a good day's work and as some of our friends who are absent wish to discuss some of these remaining items, I think we should adjourn.

Some resolutions reported.

Mr. FIELDING moved the adjournment of the House.

Mr. SPROULE. What business will be taken up to-morrow.

Mr. FIELDING. We may take some of the Bills still on the order paper but at an early stage we will go into supply and continue the estimates of the Minister of Public Works.

Motion agreed to, and House adjourned at 12.35 a.m., Thursday.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THURSDAY, July 28, 1904.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Eleven o'clock.

THE PACIFIC BANK.

Mr. R. G. MACPHERSON moved that Bill (119) respecting the Pacific Bank of Canada be placed on the Orders of the Day for second reading on Friday, July 29.

Mr. DAVID HENDERSON. I think the hon. gentleman is making a mistake. That Bill was last night referred to the Committee on Banking and Commerce.

Hon. W. S. FIELDING (Minister of Finance). The Clerk informs me that this Bill has already been given second reading and referred to the Committee on Banking and Commerce. There would therefore be no reason for adopting his motion and I would suggest that he withdraw it.

Motion withdrawn.

QUESTIONS.

NORTHERN FISHING PRIVILEGES.

Mr. BOYD asked :

1. Has a license been granted to any person or persons giving the exclusive fishing privileges on lakes north of Lake Winnipeg ? If so, what lakes ?
2. If such license has been granted, to whom granted, for what term of years, and what is the fee paid, if any ?
3. Was there any Dominion license granted to parties to fish on these waters previous to the granting of the exclusive lease ?

Hon. RAYMOND PREFONTAINE (Minister of Marine and Fisheries) :

1. No.
2. Answered by No. 1.
3. Answered by No. 1.

I may state that these licenses will be laid on the table of the House during the afternoon.

GRAIN CARRIED ON INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY.

Mr. FOWLER asked :

1. How many tons of grain and grain products were carried by the Intercolonial Railway from south-west of Montreal to St. John, for other Bay of Fundy ports during each month commencing September 1, 1903, to June 30, 1904, and how many tons of the same articles from points west of Montreal were carried during the same time to the same port for local delivery ?
2. What are the respective freight rates for such products from points west of Montreal to St. John, when intended for local delivery, or for distribution to other Bay of Fundy ports?
3. Is the Department of Railways and Canals aware that grain and grain products from points west of Montreal have been delivered in St. John for local delivery after having paid the export rate of freight only? If so, to whom have these products been delivered, in what amount, and what is the reason for the discrimination ?
4. What means are taken by the department to make sure that freight delivered at St. John by the Intercolonial Railway at a special rate for export is really exported and not detained for local delivery ?

Hon. H. R. EMMERSON (Minister of Railways and Canals) :

1. No grain or grain products were carried by the Intercolonial Railway from southwest of Montreal to St. John for other Bay of Fundy ports from September 1, 1903, to June 30, 1904.

The following tonnage of the same articles was carried from points west of Montreal during the same time to the same port for local delivery :

	Tons.
September, 1903	1,427
October, 1903	982
November, 1903	919
December, 1903	963
January, 1904	562
February, 1904	716
March, 1904	614
April, 1904	798
May, 1904	662
June, 1094	672

2. As grain and grain products are shipped from many points, rates can only be ascertained by obtaining copy of billing of each shipment. Generally speaking, the rates from main line points west of Toronto to St. John for local delivery is 21 cents per 100 pounds, and for furtherance to Bay of Fundy ports, 13½ cents per 100 pounds.

3. The Department of Railways and Canals is not aware that grain and grain products from points west of Montreal have been delivered in St. John for local delivery after having paid the export rate of freight only.

4. The usual means adopted by all railways, viz. : the delivery of the freight to the steamship line upon which the through bill of lading is drawn.

POONAMALIE DAM.

Mr. LAVELL—by Mr. Taylor—asked :

1. Has the dam at Poonamalie, on the Rideau canal, been at any time rebuilt since the construction of the canal ? If so, when ?
2. What repairs have been made to the dam, or any part of it, in the last fifteen years ?

3. When was the protecting dam removed, and why was it not replaced ?

4. After the boom was removed, was anything done to protect the dam from injury from ice ?

5. If so, what was it, and when was it done ?

Hon. H. R. EMMERSON (Minister of Railways and Canals) :

1. The dam has been entirely rebuilt since the construction of the canal. It was rebuilt in 1870.

2. The dam has twice been partially rebuilt within the last fifteen years. A new weir having been put in, and a new top and braces having been built. The dam was last repaired in 1899.

3. Not aware of any protecting dam having been removed. There certainly has been no such protecting dam for the last twenty-two years.

4. There was a boom for catching flood wood which was removed over thirty-five years ago, as there was no further necessity for it.

5. Is answered by No. 4.

BOUNTY ON CRUDE PETROLEUM.

Hon. W. S. FIELDING (Minister of Finance) moved that the House do to-morrow go into Committee of the Whole to consider the following proposed resolutions :

1. Resolved, That it is expedient to provide that there shall be paid out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund a bounty of one and one-half cents per gallon on all crude petroleum produced from wells in Canada on and after the 8th day of June, 1904, and on crude petroleum produced from wells in Canada and held in storage tanks or other storage receptacles on that date.

2. Resolved, That the Minister of Trade and Commerce may, subject to the approval of the Governor in Council, make such resolutions as he deems necessary respecting the payment of the said bounties.

Motion agreed to.

RESIGNATION OF COL. GREGORY.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN (Minister of Militia). As some doubt was expressed in the discussion which took place yesterday as to the correctness of my statement regarding the occurrence immediately preceding the passing of the Order in Council extending the time of Lieut.-Col. Gregory, I wish to carry out the promise which I made to bring down the original 'Gazette' for the inspection of the House.

DUTY ON TOBACCO.

Mr. A. B. INGRAM. Would the right hon. gentleman say what he has done about the tobacco question, as I did not catch his remarks. My hon. friend from Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) asked me to remind the right hon. gentleman of his promise not to proceed with this question until the return of the hon. member from Jacques Cartier.

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). My hon. friend from Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) asked us not to proceed with the resolution of the Minister of Finance in his absence.

REPRESENTATION ACT, 1903—AMENDMENT.

Hon. CHARLES FITZPATRICK (Minister of Justice) moved that Bill (No. 149) to amend the Representation Act of 1903 be read the third time. He said : In the discussion in committee yesterday my hon. friend from Grey (Mr. Sproule) asked that the third reading be postponed until to-day so that I might procure some maps that he thought were in existence, showing the boundaries of the electoral constituencies in Ontario. I have given him the information.

Mr. SPROULE. I thought there were maps of each constituency in Ontario, but the minister writes me that there are no such maps.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the third time, and passed.

ARBITRATION WITH THE GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY COMPANY.

Hon. CHARLES FITZPATRICK (Minister of Justice) moved that Bill (No. 152) respecting an arbitration between His Majesty and the Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada be read the third time.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The hon. gentleman has been good enough to send me a telegram from Mr. Cook, who appears to be an official on the Intercolonial.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. No, he is counsel for the government in the arbitration.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. From the nature of the telegram I supposed he was an official on the Intercolonial. It appears from this telegram that there are no data by which the government are able to estimate the amount of freight diverted. Perhaps the hon. gentleman would have no objection to my reading the telegram.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. None at all. In fact I shall have a letter to-morrow which will give fuller information. I am willing to allow the matter to remain over until that letter is received.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Perhaps that would be the better course, and if the hon. gentleman would let me have such information as he sees fit in the meantime, I would be very glad.

Motion withdrawn.

BANK ACT—AMENDMENT.

Bill (No. 160) to amend the Bank Act—Mr. Fielding—was read the second time, and House went into committee thereon.

Hon. W. S. FIELDING (Minister of Finance). In introducing this Bill some days ago I fully explained its purpose. Though it is a repeal of a statute of 1899 and its reenactment, this is done entirely for the purpose of drafting, so that the Bill may be in good form. The actual change is very slight. Existing legislation provides that our banks doing business in colonies other than Canada shall have power to issue notes in those colonies. We have made provision for the issue of notes in pounds sterling and in Canadian dollars. But a case has arisen in which it is found that a bank which desired to issue notes in another colony discovered that its currency was slightly different from the currency of Canada. Although the currency of both countries is in dollars and cents, that slight difference is enough to prove an obstacle. The case arose in the colony of Trinidad, and the British government, through the colonial office, expressed the desire that the matter should be dealt with by legislation in the parliament of Canada. What we propose therefore is that a bank doing business in any British colony shall have a right to issue its notes in that colony in the currency of the colony in actual commercial use. That is the whole matter. There are only a few words changed in the Act.

Mr. OSLER. Is there any provision in the Bill as to what proportion of the circulation is outside of Canada ? That might perhaps be of importance.

Mr. FIELDING. We have never required it. But of course under the general provision calling for a special return, we can obtain it at any time. Perhaps my hon. friend is right in the suggestion, it might be desirable information ; but the Bank Act gives power to obtain it by calling for a special return.

Mr. SPROULE. When the minister spoke before I asked if these notes would be legal tender in the Dominion. We give them authority to issue the notes.

Mr. FIELDING. No, they would not be legal tender in Canada. In fact, except under special conditions, a bank note is not a legal tender. Here we provide simply that the notes shall be redeemed in the colony in which they are issued, so long as the bank does business in that colony ; but if for any reason business is suspended, then they must be redeemed in Canada. The idea is that the circulation of the notes shall be confined to the colony in question because, as they represent a different currency, it would be rather confusing to have their notes circulated in Canada. They are not a legal tender.

Bill reported, read the third time and passed.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN.

SUPPLY.—WHARF AT CAMPBELLTON, N.B.

Hon W. S. FIELDING (Minister of Finance) moved that the House go into Committee of Supply.

Mr. GEO. W. FOWLER. Mr. Speaker, before you leave the chair, there is a matter which I wish to call to the attention of the government in connection with the public wharf at Campbellton, Restigouche county, N.B. It seems that there is just one public wharf at Campbellton, which all the shippers of lumber, particularly at that port, are obliged to use, but it seems that one corporation have been granted a preference in the use of this wharf by the Department of Marine and Fisheries, without any good reason therefor. The wharf is necessary for the economical shipment of lumber at that port. An order was given, a copy of which I have, and which I will read, by the Department of Marine and Fisheries, dated June 16, 1904, addressed to Mr. Asker, who is the wharfinger at Campbellton. It is as follows :

Sir,—I am to instruct you to see that ships taking cargo direct from the cars on the government wharf at Campbellton are given the railway or wharf berth. It has, the department understands, been the custom in the past for the first vessel in to get the choice of berths but in future precedence is to be given in this connection to vessels loading from the cars.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

(Sgd.) F. GOURDEAU,
Deputy Minister M. and F.

To Mr. G. E. Asker,
Wharfinger, Campbellton, N.B.

As a matter of fact at this government wharf there is only room for one steamer to load at a time, and the complaint is made that the corporation known as the Shives Lumber Company have the right under this order, which is given here, to take the wharf and to take this berth whenever they choose, no matter whether other vessels are in before them or not. Complaint was made to the department in a letter written by the William Richards Company, Limited, under date of June 23, 1904. That letter is as follows :

Campbellton, N.B., June 23, 1904.

F. Gourdeau, Esq.,
Deputy Minister M. and F.,
Ottawa, Can.

Dear Sir,—In reference to inclosed copy of your instruction of June 16 to Mr. Asker, warfinger at this port, we hardly think that you know or are at all aware of the condition of affairs at this port or you would not have issued the order in question. We will, as briefly as possible, give you the condition of affairs. At the port of Campbellton there are only two shippers that have been shipping deals over the government wharf, they being the Shives Lumber Co. (Limited) and ourselves, and in fact up to this year have been the only shippers from this port in recent years. We, as a rule, load the bulk of our cargoes from lighters, while the Shives Company load theirs from cars and lighters, but this year they will load the most from cars, whereas we will load none from cars, and they shall have full charge of this government wharf under this order. As far as the order is concerned, the wharf is the only berth where steamers can load with safety, and if the Shives Lumber Company are given the full control of this wharf it means that our company have to carry deals on lighters to Point le Garde, some ten miles below Campbellton, which is the only safe berth for a steamer to load within the port of Campbellton, excepting the government wharf. If such a state of affairs continues it means that this company, in order to do business, must do such business at a great loss to themselves, as well as doing injury to the port, as there is no safe berth within the port, and there are days when you cannot load a steamer at Point le Garde, because it is an open and exposed roadway, and lighters cannot put alongside the ship. We feel that if this order is carried out as intended, and we have no rights to the use of the government property at this port, and it is given over to one shipper for their absolute use and benefit, it means that we cannot see any course left open to us but to stop doing business and shipping from this port. We might further add that we have a very valuable plant situated at this port and are large employers of labour and make more use of the wharf than any other shippers, as by reference to the customs here you will ascertain. We would therefore ask that the said order be cancelled forthwith and that both shippers be given equal rights in regard to the use of government wharfs and property at this port and that the old state of affairs be restored, namely, that the first vessel arriving to have the preference of the use of the government wharfs on payment of the proper tolls, and we would thank you to give this matter your serious and prompt consideration, as we can asure you that it is a very serious matter as far as this port is concerned. Awaiting your reply.

We are, your respectfully,
(Sgd.) WM. RICHARDS & CO. (Ltd.)

To that letter the department replied by the following letter bearing date of July 2nd, and addressed to Wm. Richards & Company, Limited :

Your letter of the 23rd of June has been fully considered. Instructions were given Mr. Asker, wharfinger, to give the preference to vessels loading from the cars. It was understood that Mr. Shives, at considerable expense, placed a siding on the wharf in order that vessels might be loaded from the cars.

I am instructed that that is absolutely untrue ; I am instructed that Mr. Shives did nothing of the sort ; I am instructed that Mr. Shives expended no money upon the government wharf after the expropriation proceedings were taken.

In view of the fact and the expense to which Mr. Shives has been put——

Remember, this is the sole ground upon which this preference is granted according to the letter of the department.

In view of the fact and the expense to which Mr. Shives has been put, it seems reasonable that vessels that have been loaded from the cars should be given the preference with regard to the berth. It was also understood that two vessels being there together owned by different firms would rarely occur, and consequently any other firm shipping lumber would not to any extent suffer. The department does not wish to place any obstacle in the way of yourselves in loading lumber from the wharf, and would be pleased to consider your interest as well as that of Mr. Shives. It is understood that there will be a large expenditure for wharf accommodation at your wharf in the future, and that there will be abundance of room for lumber dealers to load and unload lumber in Campbellton.

That is a case of : live horse and you'll get grass.

In the meantime, I do not consider that the instructions to Mr. Asker can be at this stage cancelled unless you are able to prove that you are suffering severe damage.

In reply to that, the Messrs. Richards and Company addressed another letter dated 6th July in which they say :

Re inclosed correspondence, we would like to add that since this order has been issued and it has become known, it has already compelled us to pay extra freight over the other shipper from this port, as the steamship owners are fully aware that when a steamer moves to Point le Garde, that it involves a lot of extra expense; we might say that we have recently had to pay 5 per standard on account of this order, and think that in all decency and fair-play it should be cancelled.

This means, that if Richards and Company cannot have the use of the government wharf they must load their steamers at Point le Garde which is ten miles distant, and in an open roadway which in storms from certain quarters is very dangerous for steamers. It is impossible to carry on the loading there under certain conditions. The steamer is detained therefore much longer than would be necessary, if she were at the government wharf and in consequence Richards and Company have to pay higher rates on the shipments of deals. The letter continues :

We also have a steamer in port since last Friday, and on Saturday the writer requested the harbour master to allow him to have the berth after the Shives steamer sailed, and the reply he got was this, that Mr. Shives had a sailing vessel, that he wanted to load at the wharf, and if he wanted the steamer to get the berth we woould have to arrange with Mr. Shives. Our steamer is some 1,600 tons and is loading from lighters in the stream, and the Shives barque is only 800 tons and loading from lighters in the stream, and we are informed that most of her cargo is coming in lighters. The barque could load safely where she is. as she is only geting 35 M. of dry boards per day and our steamer is loading at the rate of 200 M. per day, and if she does not get the berth as soon as vacated by the Shives steamer on Friday will have to proceed to Point le Garde to take in balance of her cargo, which will likely be one million. At present there are in port one steamer and one large sailing ship for us and one steamer and one sailing ship for Shives, as well as a number of schooners that cannot get a berth at all. You will see at once that our claim is fair and just, and we cannot see how the government or department can give over public property like this to one concern and debar the rest of the public. We trust that the department will at once cancel this order or it will be not only very injurious to ourselves, but to the port and public in general.

It seems that the Shives Company had a wharf alongside the government wharf, and that in order to reach the government wharf it was necessary to cross the Shives wharf. Expropriation proceedings were taken by the government to get the Shives wharf ; the government offered Mr. Shives, or the corporation of which he is the head, some $5,000 for the wharf, but $40,000 or $50,000 was demanded, and the award of the arbitrators was $35,000, which I understand the government has appealed, and it is now before the Exchequer Court. But it does not appear from anything on the face of this correspondence or from any other evidence, that the Shives Company has any right to any preference. The point is made that the Shives Company is loading lumber from the cars, but I fail to see how that could give them a preference on this government wharf over other shippers. I am informed that the allegation that any expenditure has been made by Mr. Shives for a siding on this wharf is absolutely untrue. Anyway, what right would Mr. Shives have to run a railway track upon the government wharf ? It seems to me that whoever is in charge of that public wharf would be derelict in their duty if they allowed any private individual or corporation to make such use of government property. In view of the strong statements made in this letter and in view of all the circumstances, it seems to me that this order—a very improper order in the first place—should be cancelled, and that fair play and equal rights, what we call British justice should be meted out to each man who desires to use that wharf—and who is willing to pay tolls for that use.

Hon. RAYMOND PREFONTAINE. Surely the hon. gentleman (Mr. Fowler) does not expect me to give him the information without any notice whatever being given in advance. If the hon. gentleman had wanted the information to-day, he should have certainly given me notice last night or yesterday. I know nothing whatever about this matter, but will make the necessary inquiry and bring down the information.

Mr. FOWLER. I mentioned this matter yesterday in supply, and I stated that I would bring it up again at the first opportunity. I would suppose that was sufficient notice. I did not intend to be guilty of any discourtesy in not giving notice.

Mr. FOWLER.

Hon. H. R. EMMERSON (Minister of Railways and Canals.) My attention has not been called to this matter, but as the question of a railway siding is involved I wish to say that there was an appropriation last year for laying rails and ties on a siding connecting the new industry at Campbellton established by the Shives Lumber Company, with the Intercolonial railway. The Shives Company graded the siding and we put down the rails and ties with the view of securing to the Intercolonial railway the products of that mill, which they would ship by water if this were not done. The products of the mill are brought down over the Intercolonial railway and shipped from the public wharf at Campbellton. An extension of that wharf is arranged for whereby a turntable will be used, and I have no doubt that within a very short time provision will be made for more vessels than one. That of course will be done at the expense of the Intercolonial railway, in order that it may have the advantage of the traffic, and not at the expense of any individual or corporation. Do I understand the Richards Company lighter their material to the wharf and then load it from the lighters, or do they haul it on to the wharf and have it shipped ?

Mr. FOWLR. I do not know, but I presume the latter.

Mr. EMMERSON. Their mill is on the line of the Intercolonial railway, but I do not know whether they utilize the railway or whether they haul their lumber.

Mr. FOWLER. They do both. Sometimes they haul by the railway and sometimes they carry by lighter.

THE TREADGOLD CONCESSION.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Mr. Speaker, before you leave the chair I would like to inquire of the government whether or not they have any further information as to the date on which the report of the commission appointed to investigate certain matters in the Yukon will be laid on the table of the House. So far as I am aware, it has not been laid on the table up to the present time.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Does my hon. friend refer to the report of Mr. Justice Britton ?

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Yes.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. No, it has not been laid on the table yet.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. There seems to be an extraordinary delay in this matter. The instructions to the commission were issued in June of last year, some thirteen months ago. The commission had not a wide scope, although a promise was made by the member for the Yukon in the election campaign that certain charges of fraud would be investigated as soon as parliament met. The hon. gentleman's health was not such as to enable him to be present till some time after parliament met. I am not saying that in reproach to him; but in his address to the electors of the Yukon there was a promise made that charges of fraud would be thoroughly investigated. That promise was ratified last year by the Postmaster General, when the matter was first brought up by the hon. member for Montmorency (Mr. T. Chase Casgrain). I do not propose to go over the discussion which we had last year on the instructions to the commission which were brought down by the government—instructions which did not admit of the investigation of the circumstances attending the granting of the concessions. We on this side of the House demanded that wider powers should be given, so that all those circumstances should be investigated by the commissioners. Although that investigation had clearly been promised by the Postmaster General, the promise was afterwards withdrawn; and the instructions to the commissioners were carefully framed so that no such inquiry could be made. The inquiry, such as it was, proceeded before two commissioners—Mr. Justice Britton, of the bench of Ontario, and Mr. Bell. The inquiry, so far as it went, was concluded, and from that time to the present we have had no report; although, if I remember rightly, the inquiry was concluded in November or December last. This House has now been in session nearly five months, and it was not unreasonable for us to expect long before this that the report of Mr. Justice Britton should have been received. I do not know whether any report, or any draft report, from the other commissioner, who met his death by a deplorable accident, was ever received by the government. It is well known that Mr. Bell stated before his death that his report had been drafted. No trace of it has ever been found, and I assume that no copy of it, certainly not the original, has come into the hands of the government. If it was ever received, its nonproduction merits the severest criticism. Its disappearance has undoubtedly been very mysterious, because I believe no trace of it has been found among Mr. Bell's papers. Since Mr. Bell's death the matter has been before Mr. Justice Britton, and I should have thought he could have made up his report ten times during the period at his disposal. I am saying that with all respect to the necessity of his performing his judicial duties; because, if his judicial duties are of such a character that he has been unable during the seven or eight months which have elapsed since the investigation was closed, to prepare his report to parliament on this subject, then he should never have been appointed on this commission. The whole inquiry has been absolutely farcical. It was farcical, to begin with, because that which had been promised to the people of the Yukon during the election campaign by my hon. friend who represents that constituency was not granted. It has been farcical, in the next place, because seven or eight months have elapsed since the investigation was completed, and apparently parliament is to be prorogued without having an opportunity to consider that report. I desire to place on record my protest against this method of conducting the public business. There was a very unanimous cry—not a party cry, but a cry from one end of the Yukon to the other—to have, not only the investigation which the government has given, but an investigation of a very much wider character. The limited investigation that was given, was given thirteen months ago, and from that time to this we have not heard one word of what that investigation amounted to, or what the opinion of the commissioners was. I do not think the government are to be congratulated on the way in which they have dealt with this subject, and I conclude by once more asking the Prime Minister whether or not we are to have, even in the closing days of this session, any report from Mr. Justice Britton?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). Mr. Speaker, I think I can fairly say that the matter which my hon. friend has brought to the attention of the House is no longer an issue, and has been disposed of more than once on the floor of this House. It is quite true, promises were made at one time by parties who were not in the government, but who spoke in the interest of common justice, that certain charges of fraud, which were made in the Yukon, would be investigated. The government expressed its willingness to have such an investigation when particulars were given; but we refused to authorize a blanket investigation into charges which were not formulated. Such being the intention of the government, expressed more than once in this House, a commission was issued last year to Mr. Justice Britton and Mr. Bell authorizing them to investigate, not the charges of fraud which had been made, but the nature of the concession, the needs of the Yukon, and especially the wants of the miners as to water. The death of Mr. Bell was most disastrous in many respects. It is stated that his report was drafted. That may be, but, so far as I know, the draft never reached the government. In the absence of the Minister of the Interior, I would not say any more. With regard to the report of Mr. Justice Britton, I do not know that he has made his report as yet. He has been communicated with once more to hasten it, so that we may have it before the House rises. I may say that the necessity which existed at one time for this investigation has been removed by the fact that the Treadgold concession, which most of the complaints had reference to, is no longer in existence.

Mr. E. F. CLARKE. It seems to me that the very fact that the Treadgold people have abandoned their privileges is all the more reason why this matter should be investigated. It will be within the recollection of hon. members that members of the House were sent again and again copies of newspapers which support the government from the Yukon making the most serious and damaging allegations. Public opinion seemed to have been aroused at the enormity of the transaction; and the commission having been appointed, it seems most unfair, notwithstanding its limited power, that parliament should be prorogued without having the report of Mr. Justice Britton. It is seven or eight months since the commission ceased taking evidence, and Mr. Justice Britton has either had time or has not had time to make his report. I understand that he has been in Ottawa several times during the last three or four months. Has the government received any information from him as to what progress he has made with his report? I understand that no report has been received by the government from the late Mr. Bell. Has the government received any information as to the progress of this report, and is there any possibility of our having it before prorogation?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I cannot say off-hand whether that is possible or not, but will inquire.

Mr. T. S. SPROULE. That seems an extraordinary reply, in view of what has taken place recently. The Treadgold concession has been cancelled by the government because no doubt of some information conveyed to it through some channel that it would be improper to continue it or carry it out. That is the only conclusion which we can reach. Through what channel did that information come? The government have their own channel, and were inquiring into the charges made with reference to that concession. The charges were of a most specific character. They were not made by opponents of the government, but by their own friends. Letter after letter is in the possession of members on this side, written by friends of the government, complaining that they had made every representation possible, and could get no redress. These friends of the government complain that they elected a representative to this House, who became dumb from the day he entered it up to the present, because, so far as they knew, he has never opened his mouth in this House to bring to the notice of the administration the complaints which people were making, and the difficulties under which they were labouring.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. He ran away.

Mr. SPROULE. The government promised to have a full investigation, and the member elected promised his constituents to have an investigation made as soon as he reached parliament. That member has been in parliament a long time, and if such an investigation were made what information has reached the government as the result of it. We are utterly in the dark regarding what took place. It is true that one of the commissioners is dead, but the other is still living. Can it be possible that he is so busily engaged in his different duties that he is unable to make a report? He was appointed to inquire and report, so as to put parliament in possession of the information which parliament ought to have in order to deal intelligently with the question, yet during the whole of this session, which has lasted nearly five months, this commissioner has given up most of his time to his ordinary duties, and has so far made no report to parliament. That is treating parliament with contempt. It is not treating parliament with that courtesy to which it is entitled from its own officials, and this commissioner is really an official of this parliament. It is treating the representatives of the people with contempt. It is treating the people of that country, who have made complaints regarding the condition of affairs, with great contempt. I have in my possession a letter describing the kind of inquiry which was made. I do not know the gentleman who writes the letter, but he is represented to me as an intelligent, respectable, law-abiding citizen. He says that the inquiry was a perfect farce, that he was called down by the commissioner several times for doing what his counsel advised him he had a perfect right to do. He endeavoured to place information before that commission, but the commission refused to receive it or allow him to give it and would only receive just such information as the commissioners asked for. Following that procedure, an indictment was made against him and he was told that if he did not conduct himself better he would be dealt with for contempt of court.

An hon. MEMBER. Dragooned.

Mr. SPROULE. Yes, dragooned for contempt of court. His answer to this threat was that he did not see how it was possible for any one to have greater contempt for the court than he had in view of the way in which he had been treated. But out of that grew some other trouble for which he was put in prison; and as far as I know, he has been lying in prison ever since. He was refused the common justice of being judged by his own peers. He was refused a jury trial. He was deliberately thrown into prison, and is there yet. He writes to know if anything can be done, and if that commission has reported. He was indicted on another charge which, I believe, arose out of this matter before the commission—the charge of taking logs which he thought he had a perfect right to take. He was denied trial by jury, and tried by a stipendiary magistrate, and is now in prison.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Do I understand the hon. gentleman to say that some one was thrown into prison by order of the commissioner for contempt of court ?

Mr. SPROULE. Not by order of the commissioner ; but he was indicted before a stipendiary magistrate, and thrown into prison, and is there yet.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. That happens everywhere.

Mr. SPROULE. If that kind of inquiry is enough to satisfy the government, it is not enough to satisfy the people out there. If that kind of justice satisfies the government, it is not what will satisfy lovers of British justice in any part of the British empire. It is a high-handed proceeding, which is devoid of the essence of fair play or justice. These things require to be ventilated, and the only opportunity we have is to discuss them in parliament, and to do that properly we should have the report before us. We are now in the closing days of the session, and we want to know whether it is the intention of the government to lay that report on the table, and give us an opportunity of considering it. Is the government going to content itself with the cancelling of the Treadgold concession ? What is the reason that the government does not dare to bring down that report, or give parliament the reasons why it has cancelled the Treadgold concession ? Parliament is entitled to know why. On what information has the government acted ? That information should be given parliament, and above all things the commission appointed over a year ago ought to have had its work done long ago and reported to parliament, so that we might deal with this question in the light of all the information available.

Mr. JAS. CLANCY. Has any communication been had with Mr. Justice Britton regarding this report ? The right hon. gentleman will perceive the pertinency of this question when he remembers what took place in the Senate a few days ago. The government has declared that the Secretary of State was not warranted in the statement he then made that the remaining commissioner would not report. Has Mr. Justice Britton been requested to make a report ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I can inform my hon. friend that Mr. Justice Britton has been communicated with.

Mr. SPROULE. What is his reply ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. That is more than I can say at present. The Secretary of State made a statement some time ago in the Senate, to which attention was called, and he then communicated with Mr. Justice Britton, and instructed him to take his letter as not written, and hasten his report.

APPOINTMENT OF MR. J. B. JACKSON.

Mr. W. H. BENNETT The other day, when the estimates of the Department of Trade and Commerce were being discussed, I brought up what is known as the Jackson matter in the province of Ontario, namely, the appointment of Mr J. B. Jackson, formerly of Ingersoll, to the position of commercial agent in Leeds, England. The minister stated that when an item was reached under the heading of commercial agencies, the matter might be taken up. As the hon. minister saw fit to discontinue his estimates, no opportunity to discuss it was reached, and I am bringing it up now.

Some few years ago a general election was held in the province of Ontario, and as the result of the death of one of the elected members, the Ross government found itself with a majority of only one. All the sacrifices which had been used in Ontario for many years had been resorted to, and then the government, staggering under what was a decisive defeat, saw that something had to be done. Their only hope was to resort to the courts. After looking over the field they seized on South Oxford which had for many years been a Liberal stronghold and they thought if they could succeed in unseating the Conservative candidate there they could win that riding. A close study of the whole situation revealed the fact that they could not by legitimate means unseat Donald Sutherland, the Conservative member, who had been returned by a majority of about 150. There lived in the town of Ingersoll in the county of Oxford J. B. Jackson, a particular friend of the Minister of Trade and Commerce, a gentleman whose name has figured very conspicuously in those hand to hand encounters which have signalized the entrance of the Minister of Trade and Commerce into the party conventions of that riding, and there can be no doubt that of all the men who have done yeoman service for the Minister of Trade and Commerce in the bitter, acrimonious fights to secure the nomination, none stood closer to the minister than did Mr. Jackson. It was notorious in Woodstock, Ingersoll and all that neighbourhood that Jackson was carrying in his pocket the appointment of county judge of the county of Huron. That was rife and well known there. This and other offices had been promised to Jackson and I can only produce in substantiation of that, Jackson's own sworn testimony. He was asked referring to certain offices which had been mentioned, and said :

> Well there are several in my mind and have been for several years.

And being asked if several positions had been the subject of discussion, he replied :

> Well, I do not know that.

He was asked :

Will you swear to that, that have been mentioned between yourself and those in whose gifts these officers are ?

He replied :

Oh, I suppose that conversations have taken place between me and others in regard to that in the last few years.

So it is quite clear from the statement in evidence of Jackson that he expected something from this government. It is clear that the Minister of Trade and Commerce was solely responsible for this man's appointment because the Minister of Public Works speaking at Woodstock when complaint was made as to Jackson's appointment said :

I have heard since I came home something in reference to acts of Mr. Jackson that were not creditable to him ; but his appointment was a departmental matter, under the minister, Sir Richard Cartwright, and I have no doubt that he had no idea there was anything wrong.

This statement was made by Hon. Mr. Sutherland last winter and it cannot be expected that the public will be so gullible as to believe that a man of the ability of the Minister of Trade and Commerce had not heard of the peculiar and improper acts of Jackson as commented upon at the time. It is true that Hon. Mr. Sutherland here refers to some improper acts. I do not know that he means, because he does not say specifically, Jackson's action in connection with this trial. He may refer to some other actions that were discussed in that neighbourhood. There was a prosecution of this same Jackson on a charge of forgery before the courts of Oxford which was dismissed owing to the fact that in some mysterious manner the very document that was the basis of the charge disappeared. I shall not refer to other charges that are rife there. but I assume and it is fair to assume that what Hon. Mr. Sutherland referred to as improper acts on the part of Jackson are those acts which were condemned and rightly condemned by one of the trial judges. I have before me the evidence in this case as heard before Mr. Justice Britton and Mr. Justice Street when after days of fishing and days long drawn out of evidence given, the court had only two cases before them and on these two cases, most trival in their nature, one judge was in favour of acquittal and the other in favour of unseating. An appeal was taken to the court of appeal, but the appeal court decided that an appeal did not lie where two judges disagreed in that manner and Mr. Sutherland was sustained in his seat. I shall not advert to the judgment which Mr. Justice Britton gave, but it was an unfortunate thing for that judge coming fresh from politics wherein no one will say that he had not been a bitter partisan, that on two most trifling charges that were backed up by evidence of a scatly character Judge Britton should have decided against Mr. Sutherland while Judge Street decided in his favour. Be that as it may Mr. Donald Sutherland was sustained and I am going to refer to the facts which led up to the prosecution or persecution of Mr. Donald Sutherland. There have been many election trials in this Dominion but no other trial can be compared to this one. Jackson was the solicitor in the case, living in Ingersoll, right in the centre of that well populated riding. He was conversant with all the adjacent towns. He had carte blanche and unlimited funds to find evidence, whether true or false, as sworn to by witnesses, to unseat Sutherland.

Now what is some of the evidence that proves that I have here the sworn evidence of this Mr. Jackson ? Jackson goes through that riding and one approach that he makes is to Mr. Chambers in Woodstock. I need not give a verbatim account of the evidence but briefly it is this : He approached Chambers in Woodstock, a man whom he had practically not known up to that time, goes into his place of business, addresses him in a familiar way and after serving him with the subpoena says : We will require you at the trial. He then invites him across the street to have a cigar. As soon as they reach the hotel he asks Chambers to adjourn to a private room and once there starts at Chambers with a most astonishing proposition. He says that he is prepared to spend an almost unlimited amount of money in order that evidence may be secured against Sutherland and his agents in order to effect his downfall. Chambers mentions $5,000 and, after a little parley, it is arranged that this man Jackson shall come from his own home in Ingersoll to Woodstock and at the house of Chambers discuss the terms upon which Chambers shall produce evidence, whether true or false, that will bring about the defeat of Sutherland on the protest and his consequent unseating. Chambers was a man of prominence in the community and he at once went to certain friends of his and divulged the whole affair. The result was that, true to his promise, Jackson turned up at Woodstock on a subsequent evening. On this occasion Chambers had taken the precaution to have two responsible gentlemen conveniently situated where they could overhear what was said during the interview. Chambers was not going to trust himself to the tender mercies of Jackson, for prior to this time Jackson had a most unsavoury reputation. These two gentlemen heard everything. Jackson's proposition as admitted in his own sworn evidence was that he would pay $375 to Chambers if evidence was forthcoming, perjured or true, and $375 more should be furnished to Chambers if eight charges were proven. They go on further and discuss it and Jackson further makes this offer that if the charges were successfully proven $1,500 might be paid to Chambers. It was necessary in order to get evidence to resort to witnesses who knew nothing whatever of the matter, but who could be suborned to perjure themselves. Chambers had furnished certain names of men as Chambers was right in the game. He knew nothing of any improper wrong doing and consequently Jackson did not call any of these men into the box because he found subsequently that he had been hoaxed and had been deprived of $375.

But Jackson turns in another direction, and that seems to have been a very fertile field in the riding of South Oxford, namely, to resort to the most abandoned characters, men who were proved by the records of the police court to have been time and again arrested on criminal charges. One man who is a strong witness against Sutherland on the personal charge, had served a term in the Central Prison at Toronto. What is some of the evidence of this man ? A man named Charles Parker testified that a brother-in-law of his, named George Fournier, came to him and asked him if he would swear that he got money from a man named Joseph Clark ; and he was given the further option that if he did not want to swear that he got the money from Clark he could swear that he got it from a man named Sindon, and if he did'nt want to swear that he got it from him he could swear that he got it from a man named Davis. He was offered the option of three different men from whom he could swear that he got the money. There looms up then from the office of Kerr, Macdonald & Grant, Toronto, who seem to be engaged in all these election protests, a fellow named Sullivan or Sutherland, who is notorious as a part of the machine in the province of Ontario. This Sutherland had been celebrated in a certain provincial election trial in the county of Lennox, and Sutherland makes the further admission that he went to this man and swore it on Sindon or Johnson, or a third man whose name I forget. Now the house will wonder why he was given the option of three men to swear it on. The reason was this, that Clark was a coloured man, and everybody knows there is a certain amount of prejudice against men of colour. Therefore it was decided by this foxy Sutherland, after a good deal of consultation with Jackson and the rest of the gang, that this charge was to be put on this man Clark. But it would not be well to have Clark go into the box and swear that he had received a sum of money from some reputable man in the town of Oxford —because this took place in the county of Oxford ; and in that case it would be necessary to swear that it was got from some man whose word would not avail him, and something more than that was necessary to have the other parties opportunely turn up and be able to swear that they heard the conversation. So he got Fournier to promise that he would be on hand and would swear the story true. He also says another man named Keir is to be on hand in order to corroborate the story. Now Fournier swears that he had conversations with Jackson, repeated conversations in Jackson's office, and although we are not able to prove that Fournier and Jackson were in combination, because neither of the two will admit that they tried to bribe this man Parker, still we do know that Jackson admits that he paid $5 to Fournier himself, that he paid $5 to Parker himself, although Parker says he got $10 from Jackson. Then he was to swear that the coloured man had paid him $5. Then Parker meets again this man Sutherland in Jackson's office, and there he is promised by Sutherland that he will be paid $20, and in the event of his losing his position in the city hospital where he was employed, he would secure him a position on the government canal. Now if the story of this man Parker were not true, it would have been fair for them to have called Sutherland, and to have denied the statement made by him. But Sutherland although a short time prior to that was in the city of Woodstock, could not be found, and Sutherland's solicitors were unable to find him and put him in the box either to corroborate or deny the statement of Parker. Then there was another man who figured prominently, one named Anderson, county constable in the town of Tilsonburg. Then a man named Fick was given by Jackson a considerable sum of money, some $250, and he employed himself in going about the country and attempting subornation or perjury, and witness testified that he received money from Fick, and yet when the trial comes on Fick, also flies from the country and cannot be found. The result was that they could get no denial from Fick and no corroboration of the witnesses called by Sutherland. Then they called a man named Frederick Avey and he testifies :

> One Hewlett cancelled store account of $40 for signing a declaration. Jackson told me to say nil as to the account. Jackson came to my house at Norwich.

Now the game followed out was this : Prior to holding the trial these men Sutherland, Jackson, Fick, Wright and Hewlett would go to these abandoned characters in the police court and get declarations from them that they had received certain sums of money, and then they would afterwards be able to confront these men with the declarations and say : You made this solemn declaration, now we expect you to swear it through. In the case of this fellow Hewlett who cancelled the $40 store account, he will swear that he received from a Conservative a certain amount of money. Jackson acknowledges himself the fellow who went to his house at Norwich, and Jackson further asks him to say nothing as to the account, to say nothing as to having got the $40 for making this declaration, and which declaration Avery replies was untrue. Another man named Pollard says :

Hewlett paid me $25 for declaration. I was promised $75 and protection from law. Jackson saw me at Norwich and told me to say nil about the declaration.

That is what is guaranteed in the province of Ontario to those who give testimony in election trials where wrong doing has been committed, namely immunity from prosecution by law. The same thing was done in the West Elgin trial, and in all these trials in the province of Ontario men who have been wrong-doers have never been brought to book, everything has been covered up. No wonder that this man Pollard, when he was sure of protection against the law, and that the Attorney General of Ontario would not prosecute him said he believed the statements made by Hewlett,. Then a man named W. A. Young is called and he says :

Sutherland of Kerr's office told me he would give me $25 if I would stick to charge on respondent.

So it goes all through the evidence. Witness after witness is called who testify that they received money for making those declarations, and then afterwards when they were brought to book in court, openly admitted that they knew nothing at all as to the truth of these charges, that they were false, that they had not been paid this money for making the declarations. Now it cannot be argued that Jackson did not know who these men were. They were all living not far from each other, and they came into contact several times with the solicitor of the government. He must have been making inquiries. What is Fournier's record :

Convicted August 12, 1901 of being drunk and disorderly, fined $5 and costs. Convicted 22nd January, 1898 of assault, fined $1 and costs. Convicted 8th June, 1894 of assault and battery, fined $1 and costs. Tried July 17, 1896 on a charge of perjury, dismissed on a technicality as explained in the evidence of Mayor Sinclair.

Another man named Keilor, who was one of the corroborative witnesses, had been committed to three months in jail for vagrancy. Another man named Mustard was convicted of theft and again of being drunk and disorderly. A man named Collins, who swore a charge on Mr. King of Ingersoll, was convicted of an indecent assault and fined $50 and costs. Again convicted of being drunk and disorderly, again drunk and disorderly, convicted on three different charges of theft and sentenced to four years in Kingston penitentiary ; charged by his wife with attempting to commit suicide. A large number of witnesses swore his reputation was so bad that they could not believe him on oath.

Mr. BENNETT.

Then there was John Henderson who swore this charge on Johnson in corroboration with Parker. Henderson was convicted of being drunk and disorderly ; again convicted of breaking and entering a shop of John Christophers and stealing goods therefrom, sentenced to 18 months in the Central Prison. Isaiah Wright, who swore to charge on Johnson, was convicted on October 15, 1890, of being drunk and disorderly, sentenced to 30 days in jail ; again convicted of larceny, sentenced to 365 days in the Central Prison ; another charge of drunk and disorderly, 30 days ; convicted of assault, $1 and costs ; another charge of drunk and disorderly, 30 days ; another charge of drunk and disorderly, 10 days; another charge of drunk and disorderly, 20 days; another charge of drunk and disorderly, 20 days ; convicted of theft, 3 months in common jail ; disturbance, 6 months in Central Prison ; non-support, 6 months in Central Prison ; theft, 29 days in Central prison ; drunk, $1 and costs ; drunk and incapable, $2 and costs ; drunk and disorderly, 30 days in common jail ; drunk, $1 and costs. And these are the men who are the confidants, friends and accomplices of this Canadian representative in Leeds today. But what was the whole condition of this matter ? It is all very well to make comments here but we have the comments that a gentleman made, who was right under the guns, so to speak, who was holding the inquiry into the fact. When this matter was before the court and when man after man had been placed in the box, the comment of Mr. Justice Street, as reported in the 'Globe' of October 20, 1902, was as follows :

Judge Street interposed saying : 'Mr. Blake was quite within his rights in calling attention to the means that have been taken to procure evidence in this case. One of the difficulties I have in this case is the knowledge of the improper and reprehensible means and large expenditure which have been proven to have been devoted to an absolutely improper purpose. It is impossible to follow the ramifications of such an expenditure, and in dealing with the last case I cannot get out of my mind the possibility of the course of the inquiry having been affected by the expenditure of a very large sum of money. Here is Mr. Jackson, a lawyer in Ingersoll, here is this man of the lowest possible character, as far as appears from what has been said about him, and one knows of the desperate efforts that have been made to prove the charges. Nothing was ever heard in my experience before like it. It is impossible to trace out all these underground influences.

And yet this is a sample of the men who to-day are to be found in Great Britain as the representatives of this country. Mr. W. T. R. Preston certainly had an unsavoury reputation in this country, but even his reputation is as the rose compared with that of this man Jackson. How did Jackson act when he was in the box ? There is no doubt that Jackson was trying to save himself as much as he could. When he was driven from pillar to post, he was forced to admit that he had never kept any record of these moneys that he had been paying out. He had paid Chambers $375, Fick $250, and a considerable amount to Hewlett as well as paying all these other individuals one after another as they came into his office, different small amounts. What does he say ?

Q. And have you got no book in which you have entered that ?
A. I have not.
Q. How do you keep track of such payments ?
A. Well, I sometimes paid by cheque but I generally tried to keep track of such payments.
Q. In what way, I am asking you ?
A. Well, in my mind.
Q. In your mind ?
A. Yes.
Q. Are all your cash transactions done in the same way ?
A. Not my business transactions.
Q. This you did not call a business transaction ?
A. Well, I was paying him and I think I gave him about $150 and about $100 besides to pay for subpœnaing some 46 witnesses.

Then he was referring to Fick :

I was not asking you that ; you told me you paid him $150 and now you tell me you paid him another $100, that is $250. I asked you what track you kept of it and have you any entry in any book of that ?
A. I have not any entry in any book of that.

What does all that show ? It shows that Jackson knew that he was being involved in a discreditable and disgraceful proceeding. What is going to be the end of this sort of thing if it is to go on in this country ? It would seem that Jackson was supplied with funds to an unlimited extent and there is no statement on his part that this was his own money. It is incredible to think that this was his own money. Chambers in his statement says that Jackson told him that he was going to Toronto to see some members of the government and I think he said Mr. Ross amongst them, although I will not say as to that, and that when he did come back he did see him about it, and all the information that we have about Jackson's circumstances is decidedly of the nature that would go to show, that $375 was not an amount of money to be found every day on the person of Jackson. Then it must be positively the fact that this money was furnished from headquarters. I am not going to say that Mr. Ross, or whoever supplied him with the money, was aware of the purpose for which it was to be used, but here is the money on Jackson who was able to secure command of this money and here is the conclusion of the judge after hearing the evidence, who says, that the conduct of Jackson was in every way most disgraceful and discreditable. Two charges were brought against the respondent Sutherland, one a question of disqualification for giving an hostler a fifty cent tip, and these were the subject of a disagreement between the judges. Men were found to give the evidence and accomplices turned up to corroborate their statements. The plan was so laid that there was always corroborative evidence. In face of the fact that this matter was commented on publicly at the time in the newspapers it is idle for the right hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce to say that he never heard of it. It would be incredible on the part of any reasonable person to believe that the right hon. gentleman never heard of the South Oxford election trial. He must have read these comments of the judges. As a party man, he was interested in the South Oxford riding. As to the success or failure of his party in South Oxford whether in federal or local affairs it goes without saying that he would be interested. He has been the representative of South Oxford for a great many years in this House, and there is no reasonable man who will ever be got to believe for a moment that the right hon. gentleman did not read the comments of the judges on the evidence adduced at the trial. So that, at the time of the appointment of this man Jackson, it is impossible for us to believe that he was not aware of his wrong doing on that occasion. As to the matter of the appointment we must not forget that the hon. Minister of Public Works has declared that the right hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce is solely responsible for the appointment and employment of this man Jackson, and I think the right hon. gentleman owes it to the country and to the House to explain why Jackson in the first instance was ever secured by the government to perform the duties of the office that he now fills and in the next place why, in face of the allegations that have been made against this man in the House and in the face of the means that the right hon. gentleman has had of gaining access to the records which will prove the truth or falsity of these statements, his services have not been dispensed with.

Right Hon. Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT (Minister of Trade and Commerce). Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman (Mr. Bennett) is perfectly right when he says that I am responsible and I accept the sole responsibility for the appointment of Mr. J. B. Jackson. I have not the slightest desire to shelter myself under any diversion of that responsibility. I may add, that, knowing Mr. Jackson very well, I know him to be a very intelligent, capable man, I know that he has filled his office well and will, I think continue to discharge his duties well. As to some of the points to which the hon. gentleman referred I have one or two things to say. There is no doubt whatever that the circumstances connected with the election of Mr.

Sutherland, to the local assembly for South Oxford were such as to naturally excite a very considerable amount of suspicion in the minds of those who are acquainted with the history and the details of that country. South Oxford is and has been for a great many years a persistently Liberal county. Mr. McKay, the local member who was defeated, had been returned at the last election by a majority of some 400 or 500—I forget which at the moment. I myself had been but a short time before returned for these portions of the constituency which were afterwards carried for Mr Sutherland by a very large majority also. Very unexpectedly, very suddenly, we discovered the large majorities for the Liberal candidate were turned into a minority. There was no doubt whatever that large funds had been put up, not by Mr. Sutherland, but by the supporters and friends of Mr. Sutherland, for the purpose of defeating the Ross government, and there was perfect justification for the suspicion that very improper means had been used to elect Mr. Sutherland. Mr. Jackson who was very well acquainted with the constituency, knew who were likely to be concerned in this; he had been making inquiries and had come on a number of clues that pointed to the fact that a certain gentleman by the name of Chambers knew all about the matter. I think the hon. gentleman (Mr. Bennett) said that Mr. Chambers was perfectly unknown to Mr. Jackson.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. Chambers lived at Woodstock and Jackson came in and served him with a subpœna and invited him across the street to an hotel and up to that time they were perfectly unacquainted.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. My recollection and information is totally different, and as I represent South Oxford I know something about it. Mr. Jackson and Mr. Chambers were exceedingly well acquainted with each other. Now, I am not pretending to say that Mr. Jackson's zeal in this matter did not outrun his discretion but every one knows—I am not addressing a girls' school in this matter—that when you have to obtain evidence for a contested election it is absolutely impossible for you to obtain it from highly respectable members of society. The parties who have received bribes are not as a rule men who are of the very highest standing, and if hon. gentlemen opposite are going to lay down the proposition that it is an immoral act to offer a man money for making a declaration, all I can say is that you may as well issue a proclamation of amnesty from that time out, to every man who chooses to use money to carry an election. I have no doubt whatever that Mr. Jackson was not by any manner of means discreet in dealing with Mr. Chambers. He knew perfectly well that Mr. Chambers was a Conservative heeler of high standing, and before he had anything to do with Mr. Chambers he ought to have been very careful, he ought to have looked behind the door, he ought to have looked under the bed; he ought to have looked up the chimney; he ought to have taken every imaginary precaution to know that he was not being entrapped and hoaxed, that he was not being induced to pay money for evidence which was entirely bad and unreliable. The hon. gentleman has quoted from a newspaper report of the judge's charge; he has quoted some remarks of Mr. Justice Street with respect to this evidence.

Mr. BENNETT. It is the trial report in the 'Globe.'

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. The trial report in a newspaper is not the judge's charge by any manner of means.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Why is it not the judge's statement?

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. The judge's statement it may be, but it is not the judge's statement corroborated by the judge himself. My hon. friend knows very well that these newspaper reports are not to be taken as absolutely reliable on all occasions. I accept what the judge states from the bench as very good evidence of what the judge thought, but I am informed that when the matter came to be reviewed—the trial was conducted before Mr. Justice Britton and Mr. Justice Street—neither of these gentlemen commented on Jackson's proceedings.

Mr. INGRAM. Would the hon. gentleman permit me to say that I was present and heard the statement made by Judge Street, and that report is as near as can be, word for word of what he said.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGT. Was that his final charge?

Mr. INGRAM. There is no final charge.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. The judge delivers his judgment.

Mr. INGRAM. No. I have the statement here from the evidence itself.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. If that were the statement corroborated from the shorthand notes taken before the judge, it undoubtedly would be entitled to regard; but, if it is a simple statement in the newspaper it is not entitled to equal regard no matter what that newspaper may be.

Mr. SPROULE. It is in the friendly 'Globe.'

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Well, it does not matter. If Mr. Jackson had committed an offence punishable by law there were plenty of parties who would have desired nothing better than to prosecute Mr. Jackson.

Mr. COCHRANE. You got him out of the way.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. No they had months and months, and months, and they would have prosecuted him had he committed a criminal offence. I made inquiries about the matter and I was informed that whatever indiscretion he may have been guilty of, he had committed no offence contrary to the laws of the land, and I know that these people would have prosecuted Mr. Jackson if he had so done. Nor do I notice that either one or other of the judges stated that Mr. Jackson had left himself open to a prosecution in any shape or way.

Mr. CLANCY. You seem to think that Mr. Jackson was a mere martyr.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Mr. Jackson no doubt finding that this constituency had been carried in a very suspicious fashion, and finding that the tracks lay in a particular direction, did go to the party whom he had reason to believe was the most thoroughly acquainted with the whole details, and he did offer him a considerable sum of money it appears for the purpose of obtaining that evidence; but Mr. Jackson did not suborn nor did he attempt to suborn testimony.

Mr. BENNETT. I quoted from the sworn evidence of the person who said that Jackson asked him not to mention anything about this matter.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. All that came before the judges and the judges did not make any such imputation upon Mr. Jackson. Mr. Jackson did attempt to obtain evidence, but he did not attempt to suborn testimony.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I would like to know how you are going to obtain evidence in these election trials, unless sometimes men are prepared to pay sums of money for the obtaining of evidence. I venture to say that there are mighty few election trials which are brought to a close in this country in which something of the kind has not to be done. I do not mean to say that it is nice work; I do not mean to say I like it; I do not mean to say that it is good work, but it is work that has to be done unless you are going to allow these parties on either side to go from one end of the country to another using money for the purpose of illegitimately influencing the electors. You have two choices; you may prohibit the use of money for obtaining evidence, but if you do, as I said, it practically amounts to granting an amnesty to all parties concerned, to go and bribe just as they please. In this matter Mr. Jackson offered a sum of money to a party whom he thought could obtain evidence which would unseat Mr. Sutherland. How, and in what way I would like to ask, is Mr. Jackson, morally speaking, more censurable or more culpable than the gentlemen who—unless my memory fails me—offered rewards of several thousand dollars to all parties who would obtain evidence against Liberal candidates at this very same general election? I think a public advertisement was used; I think large sums of money were offered; I think every possible inducement was given to get up cases against the Liberal members. I never heard hon. gentlemen opposite object to that. I never heard these hon. gentlemen dissent from that being an illegitimate means of employing their money, and I cannot for the life of me see in what respect, morally speaking, Mr. Jackson's conduct was worse than the conduct of those very respected and honourable gentlemen who publicly advertised that they were prepared to pay large sums of money to obtain such evidence as would unseat Liberal members.

Mr. COCHRANE. Such rascals did not get government appointments.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. No; my hon. friend knows something about government appointments in past times, as the records of the House will show, unless I forget.

Mr. COCHRANE. You need not forget. I am here and if you want to make that charge, come up into my riding and make it. You are looking for a constituency now, and you can come up to my riding and tell all you know about it, and that won't take you long.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. It is on record, and my hon. friend need not distress himself. The matter has been discussed in this House.

Mr. COCHRANE. The riding has spoken several times, and if you are not in accord with the verdict, come up and try it yourself.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. My hon. friend must find the cap to fit very tightly, or he would not be so irate at being reminded of what he did in reference to government appointments. It is not the first time, and I suppose it will not be the last on which we shall hear from hon. gentlemen in reference to this matter. No doubt, as I have said, the means that are adopted for obtaining evidence in these election trials are of a character which I suppose no man on either side of the House wishes to see employed. At the same time, I must point out that the judges stated that in their opinion Mr. Jackson, whatever he had done, had not brought himself within the precincts of the law, nor did the parties who, were disposed, if they had a fair chance, to prosecute Mr. Jackson, attempt to take any proceedings against him. Unless I am entirely misinformed, these same parties did not put Mr. Chambers into the witness box at all.

An hon. MEMBER. Why ?

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. The evidence, such as it was, was obtained by Mr. Jackson himself. Why did they not put him into the box ? If I might suggest, they abstained wisely from doing so because in all probability he knew too much. However, be that as it may, I desire to be clearly understood. I exonerate my colleagues entirely in this matter and take the full responsibility of Mr. Jackson's appointment. I say he is a capable man, and if he continues in his office, I think he will justify his appointment. Already I have received on more than one occasion testimony to the ability and diligence with which he is conducting his work. The hon. gentleman did not conclude with a motion ; but I have given him all the information in my power. Such of his facts as were correct I have admitted ; and I have called the attention of the House to the fact that if Mr. Jackson did wrong, his assailants might avail themselves of the courts, but they did not choose to do so, which is the best proof that they knew that whatever faults Mr. Jackson committed, he did not bring himself within the purview of the law.

Mr. BENNETT. I received the following from the evidence :

Q. Do I understand you to say that Jackson told you not to say anything about the declaration if you were asked ?—A. If anybody asked me, he told me not to say anything about it.

If he was asked at the inquiry if he had made such a declaration, he was to answer that he had not. There is the evidence of half a dozen other witnesses that Jackson interviewed, and each one of them, when asked that question, presumably at the trial, was to answer that he had not made any declaration. I congratulate the hon. gentleman on his view of political morality in this country.

Mr. A. B. INGRAM. I was rather amused to notice that when the right hon. gentleman rose in his place he received the applause of his friends ; but I was very much pleased to notice that when he took his seat, his friends did not see fit to applaud him for the stand he had taken.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. The professionals applauded him.

Mr. BENNETT. They hope to get their jobs.

Mr. INGRAM. The hon. member for South Oxford says that Mr. Jackson is a very capable and intelligent man. I quite agree with that. Some years ago my right hon. friend had some difficulty in securing the nomination in South Oxford, and he appealed to this capable and intelligent man to manipulate the convention as against his friend Mr. Janes, from the city of Toronto. Mr. Jackson was successful. I do not know whether he encouraged all the criminals that he could get in South Oxford to assist him in securing that convention ; but I do know that he was successful in securing it for the right hon. gentleman, and he is well able to carry out successfully anything he undertakes in the political line. The hon. member for South Oxford says that the constituency is a very safe one. I would ask the right hon. gentleman, from his own experience in politics, whether he would advise his friends to expend large sums of money in a constituency which he claims to have been carried sometimes by hundreds, some times by thousands, and sometimes by acclamation. The right hon. gentleman would not advise his friends to do anything of the kind. That kind of thing is not done on either side. But what occurred in this case ? The representative, Dr. McKay, had paid very little attention to his constituents. In a measure he had ignored them. There was a rumour circulated to the effect that he only required to run his election in order to obtain a government position. Many of his supporters, who had been loyal to him up to that time, disliked that kind of conduct and when Mr. Sutherland, who is a farmer—it is largely a farming constituency—went round the constituency, large numbers of the electors agreed to support him instead of Dr. McKay. These were sufficient to roll up a majority of a hundred or more for Mr. Sutherland. Now, nobody has ever charged Mr. Sutherland with corruption in that election. The proof is in this fact that the trial started on the 15th of October and continued to the 18th, when it was adjourned to December 1st, 2nd and 3rd, after which the argument was adjourned to the city of Toronto. Will any hon. gentleman in this House say, after a careful search made by men like Mr. Jackson, who was connected with the firm of Messrs. Kerr, Davidson, Patterson and Grant, after securing all the assistance which they could by hook or crook, from constables and others, all these days of trial in the city of Woodstock, that Mr. Sutherland was guilty of any charge of corruption without having that charge brought before the judges of the court ? It is simply absurd for any hon. gentleman to talk in that way. There was only one charge proved against Mr. Sutherland's friends ; that was, the hiring of a livery in the town of Ingersoll. I think that pretty conclusively proves the statement of my hon. friend if there was anything suspicious in connection with that election in South Oxford, it is not borne out by the evidence which was brought out in the court held in the city of Woodstock. Now, if my hon. friend's statement is correct that large sums of money were supposed to have been spent in the case of Mr. Sutherland to corrupt the vote, this is the only instance. With reference to Mr. Chambers being practically unacquainted with Mr. Jackson, let me say that Mr. Chambers was acquainted with Mr. Jackson and Mr. Jackson was acquainted with Mr. Chambers.

At One o'clock, House took recess.

House resumed at Three o'clock.

Mr. INGRAM. When you left the chair at one o'clock, Mr. Speaker, I was leading up to the difference between the explanation of the right hon. the Minister of Trade and Commerce and that of the hon. member for East Simcoe (Mr. Bennett), regarding degree of acquaintance between Mr. Chambers and Mr. Jackson. The hon. member for East Simcoe was quite right in assuming that these gentlemen were not well acquainted with each other. When he read the declaration of Mr. Chambers, he found these words in it:

> He then asked me to come with him to the Dufferin Hotel and have a smoke. When we reached there, he asked if there was a private room, and on being shown one we both went in alone. He talked with me very familiarly, calling me by my first name.

From these words one would naturally conclude that Mr. Jackson had assumed a familiarity with Mr. Chambers which he had not been in the habit of doing, and consequently the hon. gentleman was quite justified in concluding that the two men were strangers. I know from my personal knowledge that they were acquaintances, but I am quite well satisfied that they were not familiar acquaintances. My right hon. friend the Minister of Trade and Commerce tried to make a point out of the fact that the respondents counsel did not place Chambers in the box on that occasion. But he did not say why Chambers' evidence was not admissible. His evidence was offered in court, he was called, but the fact of Mr. Jackson not being the respondent in this case and not being on trial, rendered Chambers' evidence not admissible. In other words, it was collateral evidence and not admissible on that occasion. But I can go so far as to say that if the evidence of Messrs. Chambers, Francis and Smith had been admitted, they would have proven beyond doubt that Jackson had made the statement that he was prepared to pay for any evidence which would unseat Mr. Sutherland, whether that evidence was true or false. I was amazed when my right hon. friend, in his jocular way, condoned the conduct of Mr. Jackson. I was amazed to hear him condone the obtaining of evidence in that way. I was grieved to hear the right hon. gentleman (Sir Richard Cartwright) view it in that light, and I must confess I had a better opinion of my right hon. friend. It is a well known fact that judges do not approve of statements being taken down by lawyers on behalf of witnesses. It is well known that they do not approve of lawyers taking affidavits or declarations. They prefer that the witnesses should be placed in the box and give evidence themseives and be free to state what they believe to be the truth; but my right hon. friend (Sir Richard Cartwright) seems to approve of the solicitor for the petitioners in this case obtaining affidavits from men—who are telling the truth. Now, the sole object was to obtain affidavits from men who, Mr. Jackson knew, were not to tell the truth, and he was paying them to make such affidavits and to be prepared to stick to them, should they be called into court as witnesses.

There is another case, that of Mr. King. The hon. member from East Simcoe mentioned Mr. King. Mr. King is a highly respected citizen of Ingersoll. He is a merchant and a gentleman whom the citizens honoured by electing him as mayor, and he represented that town as mayor for some time. Well, what do we find Mr. Jackson doing? We find him going to a man of the name of Collins, whose criminal offences have been quoted in this House, and inducing that man to make a statement against one of the most respected citizens of Ingersoll. And who did Jackson get to corroborate this statement of Collins? No other than Collins's wife, who was also a criminal, as was shown in court. And we have these two criminals giving evidence against one of the most honoured and respected citizens of the town—one whom the people of Ingersoll, largely Liberal, elected as their mayor, although he is a Conservative, thus showing their confidence in his honesty and ability. Yet in order to unseat Mr. Sutherland, these two criminals were brought in to swear falsely against a respected citizen of the town of Ingersoll. Why was all this done? Because the Ontario government was only sustained in the general elections by two of a majority, and owing to the death of Mr. Munroe, of Renfrew, that majority was reduced to one. In order to save themselves they attacked Mr. Sutherland in the county of Oxford. They attacked him in order to unseat him, because, as my right hon. friend has said, South Oxford has a Liberal majority, and they thought, if they could unseat Mr. Sutherland by any means, good or bad, they would be in a position to elect in his place a supporter of the Ontario government. That is what the Ontario government had at stake. And what had Mr. Jackson at stake? He had a judgeship at stake. He was working for his reward from this government. There is no use trying to deny the facts. We have in this House a gentleman, occupying one of the highest positions in the government of Canada, honoured by the imperial authorities with a title (Sir Richard Cartwright), coming forward and admitting that he knew all the facts in connection with the case and took full responsibility. Was this the reason why this government rewarded this gentleman? I do not believe that it was the sole reason. I am inclined to believe that services rendered, untold events which occurred in some years gone by—and which Mr. Jackson threatened to expose, if not rewarded—had something to do with his appointment. Mr. Jackson knew that he could not secure a judgeship. He knew that the Ontario government dared not with its small majority of one, appoint him to any position under it. He therefore came to Ottawa, and inside of a year was appointed to an important position in England. What was that important position? I find this inquiry put by the Hon. Sir Mackenzie Bowell in the Senate:

Whether a man by the name of J. B. Jackson, of Ingersoll, Ontario, has been appointed to any position in England or elsewhere, by the government of Canada, or any member of said government?

If so, what are the duties assigned to him, and what salary or remuneration is he to receive for the performance of such services?

Hon. Mr. SCOTT—J. B. Jackson, of Ingersoll, Ontario, was appointed by Order in Council of date October 31st, 1903 (appointment to date from 1st November, 1903) commercial agent to Leeds and Hull, England.

His duties are to report monthly, or more frequently, if necessary, to the Department of Trade and Commerce upon all trade matters which may be of interest to Canadian exporters, and to use his best endeavour to further Canada's market in the district to which he is assigned. These reports are published weekly and are sent to any business men in Canada desiring them.

Mr. Jackson's salary is $3,000 per annum, and office and contingent expenses.

I have made hard statements about this man. I call upon my witnesses to substantiate the statement I am making and if the right hon. gentleman will communicate with Mr. Ball, county Crown attorney for Oxford, I believe that he will get some information about Mr. J. B. Jackson. He will find that Mr. J. B. Jackson was charged with forgery or perjury and that owing to the theft of a certain document during the night Jackson escaped being committed for the crime with which he was charged. If my right hon. friend will communicate with Mr. Ball, Mr. Ball will tell him that Jackson is a scoundrel. And yet, Sir, this gentleman whom I find in the 'Parliamentary Companion' to bear this title:

Rt. Hon. Sir Richard John Cartwright, G.C.M., P.C.

Privy Councillor, who has received one of the highest titles in the gift of the imperial authorities as bestowed on Canadian subjects, a gentleman who has filled the important position of Finance Minister of Canada, and who to-day is filling a responsible position of Minister of Trade and Commerce, has appointed this man Jackson to an important position. I ask my hon. friends who have heard the evidence that has been shown in this House to-day, after witnessing the flippant manner in which that right hon. gentleman spoke in connection with the appointment of this man Jackson, do they think it will be a very nice thing for the imperial authorities, who have bestowed this title on the right hon. gentleman, to read the evidence in connection with J. B. Jackson? Do hon. gentlemen think that the imperial authorities will consider that the title has been well bestowed upon a man who by his own assertion to-day has condoned the purchasing of perjury and offences of this kind? Reference has been made to the confusion of Ontario and Dominion politics and the Conservatives in this House have been blamed for dragging in the provincial government in matters of this kind. I remember in days gone by when the Liberal party in this House condemned the Dominion and local authorities for travelling in couples. I remember those days quite well, but, Sir, who were the first to drag into the same arena local and Dominion issues and make them as one? The very party of which the right hon. gentleman is one of the chief leaders. Who are they selecting as candidates for this country? I go to London and find that the governor of the county jail in Middlesex is the Dominion candidate in North Middlesex. I go to the constituency of my hon. friend from Halton and find opposing him the public school inspector receiving pay from the Ontario government. I go to Dundas, and find as the Liberal candidate the provincial inspector of jails and asylums, Dr. Chamberlain. These men drawing money for their services from the local government are now candidates for this House on behalf of the Liberal party. And yet hon. gentlemen talk to us about associating local and Dominion politics!

There is another important question. As I said the hon. gentlemen opposite applauded the right hon. gentleman when he rose to reply to the remarks of the hon. member for East Simcoe (Mr. Bennett), but I wish to congratulate hon. gentlemen behind him upon the fact that they did not applaud the right hon. gentleman after he made his explanation in this House, and I am sure when the statement made by him is quoted against him in this country—and it will be because it deserves to be—showing the depth to which these hon. gentlemen have descended, and showing the disregard they have for what is proper and right and the degradation that will attach to any man who is a member of a party whose leaders express such sentiments. This chamber has rung day after day during this session because we have found that a government employee of this country had the audacity to write a letter or to find fault in connection with certain political interference with his duties connected with his office. We were told by the Liberal press that these officials had disgraced themselves. The people of this city were only the other day warned not to join in a procession in honour of a man who had disgraced Canada by finding fault with the political influences used in his department. Every word of that paper was in condemnation of those who turned out to give a send-off to that man because he had disgraced himself. I have yet to learn that Lord Dundonald has arrived at the stage of having bought perjured evidence in this country to unseat a good man. What he has done has been an honourable thing. He is condemned for that and yet we find praise and reward for the man who had purchased perjured evidence. Now, Sir, I do not wish to pursue this matter any further. The right hon. gentleman has relieved us from believing that he was not aware of what occurred on that memorable occasion and I have only to say to him that the electors of South Oxford will not compliment him for saying that money was put into that constituency for the purpose of purchasing the honest electors of South Oxford.

Mr. T. S. SPROULE. There was a time in the history of Canada when the Reform party were credited with standing for honour and honesty if for nothing else. The people of the country believed that the more prominent men of the party were men of sterling honour and sterling integrity and certainly in the public life of Canada so far as Canada knew they were examples of honesty, examples that might well be copied by the rising generations. But unfortunately of late years they seem to have drifted away from their moorings, and those who were the leading lights in the party in the past appear to vie with each other to-day in their degradation and their lowering of the public life of Canada, in discrediting the honour of Canadian public men and disgracing party politics. That is the position as it appears to-day. What is the qualification for appointment to office to-day ? Appointments to office are made strictly I believe for party purposes, and I am speaking advisedly when I say so. If I were requested to give an example I might name them by the dozen and the greater the scoundrel, the more successful he has been in wrongdoing for his political party, the more successful he has been in accomplishing in an improper way what they desire to have accomplished, the success of the party, the greater seems to be his qualification for a position of trust and of honour. Need I give examples of it ? Take, for instance, the one that we have been discussing this afternoon. Take Mr. Preston, if you like, who occupies a very prominent position as an immigration agent of Canada to-day. For years and years, to the disgrace of the party and the disgrace of Mr. Preston, he was one of the most unscrupulous men, I believe, not only in the province of Ontario, but in the Dominion of Canada, a man whose word was of no account, whose honour seemed to be so light that no person respected it, a man whose own uncle went into court and produced not less than ten or twelve respectable witnesses who made affidavits to the effect that they would not believe him on his oath. That is the reputation of the man who has been honoured by being appointed to a prominent position and to-day he is pensioned on the country at a salary of $3,000 a year and office and other expenses, as an immigration agent in England.

Mr. CAMPBELL. And he is one of the best we ever had.

Mr. SPROULE. One of the best we ever had according to the judgment of the hon. member for West York (Mr. Campbell). And when the country knows that, I need say no more.

Mr. CAMPBELL. They do know it.

Mr. SPROULE. I say that that man who came back here and entered a suit against a party in this city to vindicate his character——

Mr. BENNETT. His what ?

Mr. SPROULE——and he dared not go on with the suit for fear that his character which he wished to vindicate would only be shown to be blacker than it was considered to be up to that time.

Mr. CAMPBELL. If Mr. Preston was here you would not dare to say that to him outside the chamber.

Mr. SPROULE. I have said the same thing to Mr. Preston face to face. I do not need to hide behind the privileges of parliament. Mr. Preston knows it too well, and the hon. member knows it too.

Mr. CAMPBELL. You are very bold in the House of Commons, but you would not be so bold outside.

Mr. SPROULE. I may be told that had the suit been tried Mr. Preston would have been cleared. What are the facts ? The record stands to-day in the courts of this country that twelve presumably honest men went into the court and swore they would not believe him on his oath, his own uncle and other witnesses to the number of ten or twelve. This is the man who did the dirty work for the party for years, and travelled in filth and mire up to his neck ; and this is the man who to-day is honoured by holding the high position of representative of Canada in England, and who is writing letters to discredit a man like Lord Dundonald. This is the civil servant who did the dirty work of the party and whom they celebrated to-day, he believing that he will be shielded by his party as he has been in the past. That is an example of what is going on in our decaying and decadent public and political life in Canada as a consequence of the party who are in power to-day.

Then we take Jackson whose case is before the House for consideration at the present time, and we hear an hon. knight declaring: I assume full responsibility for Jackson's appointment, and I defend it. And what does he add? He is an intelligent and capable man? On hearing that I said mentally: It is a great pity he could not say that he is an honest and truthful man. Could he do it? No, he dare not risk his reputation by saying that, because there is too much on record to prove the contrary—a man who stands disgraced before the public of Canada to-day, a man who has not only perjured himself but endeavoured to purchase others to commit perjury as well, a man who is a forger himself, and had the documents not been improperly stolen or taken away from the public office, documents that are in the custody of friends of the hon. gentleman, that would have been proven in court, and I presume Jackson would have been in the penitentiary to-day instead of receiving the salary that he does over in England. And this is the man of whom the knight says: I assume the full responsibility of his appointment, I am prepared to assume it. Then if we go back in history a little, what do we find? We are told this is the man who succeeded by his peculiar methods in political life, or who helped others to succeed in getting the knight elected in South Oxford, for the last time—the Wandering Willie of his party, who, like Noah's dove, found no rest for the sole of his foot until he found it in South Oxford by virtue of the machinations of such men as Jackson, who to-day is reaping his reward. No wonder the hon. gentleman assumes responsibility for his appointment. There is a debt of gratitude due to Jackson from the hon. gentleman that he dare not withhold. Jackson knows too much to be left in the cold and friendless world, he must be taken care of, and he is taken care of, and the hon. member to-day assumes the full responsibility of his appointment. I can tell him that, talking a short time ago with some of the honest Reformers in South Oxford, they declared publicly to me that it was one of the most disgraceful appointments ever made in Canada, and on no man does that disgrace rest with greater weight than upon the hon. member for South Oxford.

Mr. TAYLOR. The Prime Minister is responsible.

Mr. SPROULE. Yes, and every other member of that cabinet, and they must be held responsible for it to the public of Canada, because that is what they have brought upon Canada by such appointments. Then we take others of the same ilk, because they are hunting in couples to-day, they are employing the same degraded characters to do the dirty work for the party in the Dominion as well as the provinces. Take Pritchett, take Tom Lewis, take the notorious Grant, who has always been the handy man of the party, ready to do their dirty work, take Captain Sullivan, take Frank Sullivan, take the whole gang of them, and what are they? Every one of them, the deeper they are steeped in political crime in the service of their political party the more eligible they are for high appointments in the gift of the party.

An hon. MEMBER. Masters of the administration.

Mr. SPROULE. Yes, and some of them threatened publicly that the government dare not do otherwise than defend them, because they knew too much. We are justified in coming to that conclusion because the government are obliged to take these men up, no matter how deeply they are steeped in filth, and defend and support them otherwise disclosures would take place which might be very uncomfortable for the government and for the party. Now the hon. member for South Oxford says: What is the difference between a man who endeavours to buy a witness to commit perjury in order to prove a case, and the man or the society who offers a reward for the prevention of crime? He puts them in the same category—the man who, when a crime is committed, offers a reward for any one who will give such evidence as will lead to the conviction of the guilty party—he puts that man in the same category with Jackson who goes and deliberately hires the down-trodden of the earth, the scum of creation, the jail birds, the penitentiary birds, to swear and perjure themselves for the purpose of making an innocent man guilty. And the hon. member for South Oxford, the Knight of the country who holds his title from the Queen, declares there is no difference in his judgment between the one or the other. Is that his sense of right? Is that what the country expects of him? It seems to me it is a degradation that no person ever expected that either he would reach or any one of the prominent men of his party.

Now then, what has been the result of all this? For it has been going on for many years. Take the province of Ontario, and I speak more especially with regard to that, because I know the history of the political party in that country better. I say it openly and above board to-day, that these things have tended to demoralize the courts of our country, and they are demoralized in the eyes of the world, disgraced in the eyes of the world. They have tended to destroy the administration of justice, and there is no faithful and honest administration of justice in the country to-day. Take political offenders before the courts to-day and what is the result ? Why, if you took them before magistrates anywhere to-day you could not convict them. You might bring the most direct evidence in the world, and they would be liberated on their recognizance, or be dismissed, or if they were committed they were released immediately afterwards, they never served any time, they never received any punishment for their crimes because they were released. The courts seem to have been manipulated from the magistrates court up to the highest courts in the land, and to-day the honest conviction in the minds of the people of Canada is that you cannot go into the courts and get justice. The criminal is often shielded by virtue of the machinations of the politicians who seem to be able in one way or another to control and manipulate the courts. That is a hard thing to say with regard to our courts, but the history of what has taken place for the last twenty years in Canada justifies me in saying it, and I say it here in the precincts of parliament, so that it may be disseminated in the widest manner, that the people of Canada and the world may know it.

The time will come when a long-suffering people will not tolerate it any longer, and I can tell those who are the perpetrators and abettors of it, like the right hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce, that if it continues much longer it will result in a rebellion, because they are driving the people to that extremity. I give the right hon. gentleman and his friends timely warning, when I say that the shot-gun will do what the courts do not do ; that is, punish criminals, because they are destroying all respect for law and authority in this country. They are practically shielding criminals, they are putting a price upon rascality, and they invite others to commit offences. The result is that there is no honour in the land, and that public men are not respected. They are lowering and degrading public life, and this degradation is being upheld by one who, by virtue of his position, ought to be an example of probity, honour, truthfulness and character. But when public men come out like the right hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce and defend criminals, and justify and support crime, can we expect the common people of the country to look up to these men as examples of what is right, proper, honest and truthful ? Is it to be wondered at that the sneak thief follows his nefarious calling, when we find men in public life justifying and defending it ? I say it is not. This has been going on from year to year, until the public life of Canada has been lowered to such a degree that the people do not respect public men, or the word of public men, or their honour. Who are responsible for this ? No class of men in Canada are more responsible than the present party in power and their friends in Ontario. The history of these transactions has been accumulating and growing worse and worse every year. There is no possibility of getting an independent verdict from the people because of the nefarious conduct of the party who control the situation, and control the courts as well. I say the time is rapidly coming when the people will take the power into their own hands, and will defend themselves and the ballot box if the courts of the country will not do it, or if the party who are responsible for the administration of affairs do not do their duty, as they have not been doing it for the last twenty years in Canada.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Mr. Speaker, the right hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce (Sir Richard Cartwright) has accepted the full responsibility for the appointment of this gentleman to the lucrative position which he now holds. It may be advisable for us to review that appointment very briefly in the light of what was disclosed at the trial which has already been referred to. Mr. Jackson, who was a solicitor, had charge of the petition, and his chief assistants in the local preparation of the case were a constable named Ellis Fick, of Tilsonburg, another man named Charles Hewlett, a prominent Liberal worker in the riding, and a professional machine man, as he is called, in the riding, named George Sutherland. The trial opened at Woodstock on the 15th October and continued for several days. The evidence and declarations which I have in my hand disclose the following facts in regard to Mr. Jackson :

He personally paid money to George Fournier, a criminal character, one of his witnesses in the protest. A man by the name of Parker, another named Elijah Harp, and others, swore that Fournier offered them money to swear to falsehoods. I have the evidence for that under my hand, and I have the pages to refer to if any hon. gentleman sees fit to deny or discredit that statement. Jackson paid Charles Parker $10, or, according to his own admission, $5 for similar purposes. I have the evidence to give in answer to any person who will undertake to contradict that statement. He paid Ellis Fick, by his own admission, $250, and according to the evidence of Charles Parker and William Abraham Young and others, Fick endeavoured to bribe them to swear to falsehoods. The right hon. gentleman has referred to witnesses not being put in the box. Let me remind him that when this evidence was given in this case the petitioner did not put Fick in the box to contradict this statement, but, on the contrary, Fick was found conveniently absent as soon as this evidence had been given. Mr. Jackson had Charles Hewlett and George Sutherland assisting him in preparing the protest, and he himself interviewed witnesses, F. R. Avey and Lincoln Pollard, who admitted on oath that Hewlett had paid them money to make declarations. A large number of witnesses, among them Parker, Young, Avey, Pollard and Mustard, admitted on oath that Hewlett and Sutherland had bribed and attempted to bribe them to give evidence, and their statements were not attempted to be denied. In fact, the evidence shows that Hewlett and Sutherland absented or concealed themselves, so that the respondent could not subpœna them for the adjourned trial. It should also be remembered that Sutherland did a great deal of his work in the office of Mr. Jackson himself.

Mr. Jackson himself paid Edward Chambers $375 cash, and promised him $375 more on condition that Chambers should get evidence which would prove eight charges. This agreement with Chambers was to be private; in fact, there was a written declaration drawn up that nothing was to be said about it. Mr. Jackson admits that the last $375 was to be paid only on condition that Chambers would prove eight certain charges. Jackson told Chambers that it did not matter whether the evidence was true or false so long as it answered the purpose. Mr. Chambers is corroborated on oath as to this by two other reputable gentlemen of Woodstock, Mr. Vaughn Francis and Mr. Samuel Smith, who declare that they overheard Jackson distinctly tell Chambers that it did not matter whether the evidence were false or true, so long as it unseated Sutherland. The right hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce is now willing to accept responsibility for that. I should say, in justice to Mr. Jackson, that he denied this statement, but he was met with the distinct statement to the contrary of no less than three witnesses. He disbursed an enormous amount of money in connection with the campaign, and he states that he kept no record of his disbursements. He interviewed Frederick R. Avey, a bribed witness, at Avey's house, and, as Avey swears, told Avey he was not to say that he had been given anything for giving his evidence. He interviewed Lincoln Pollard, another bribed witness, and, according to Pollard, told Pollard if any one asked him about it to say nothing about making the declaration. I would be inclined to think that the right hon. gentleman is accepting a pretty fair share of responsibility when he undertakes to shoulder all that.

Let me call his attention to some of the sworn evidence, to which I will just briefly refer in order that this evidence may impress itself a little more upon him. Edward William Chambers made a sworn declaration on the 11th October, 1902, from which I shall read. On Friday evening, before the trial opened, and the trial opened on the 15th October, he had an interview with Mr. Jackson. He told Mr. Vaughn Francis of the proposed interview, and he arranged to have Mr. Francis and Mr. Samuel Smith come to his house on that Friday evening, in order that they might hear what Mr. Jackson had to offer. He goes on to say that they were in a position to hear what took place, and he details in his affidavit the conversation as follows:

> After a general conversation Jackson wanted me to sign an agreement not to divulge the conversation, which I refused to do, and then Jackson wanted to know how much I wanted to get him evidence to unseat Sutherland. I told him $5,000. He said that was out of the question. He then said that he thought $500 down, and $1,500 additional if the evidence was sufficient to unseat Sutherland.

That is paragraph 4 of the declaration and paragraph 5 is as follows:

> I then asked him what class of evidence he wanted, whether false or true, and he said it mattered not to him whether it was false or true so long as he could unseat Sutherland. He said he would lose his gown if this conversation was divulged.

Let me point out to the Minister of Trade and Commerce, that by the sworn declaration of Mr. Vaughn L. Francis under date of 11th October, 1902, that statement is expressly and absolutely confirmed, and by the sworn statement of Mr. Samuel Wm. Smith under date 11th of October, 1902, that statement is also confirmed. I shall refer to one or two passages in the evidence taken in the trial. I quote from the evidence of Chas. Parker.

> Q. What proposal did he make to you?
> A. Well, he asked me if I received anything for my vote and I told him I did not.
> Q. What next did he say to you?
> A. Well, he asked me if I would say that I had.

This was not a proposal made by Mr. Jackson himself but it was a proposal made by one of the men whom he had hired and paid for the purpose of obtaining evidence in this case. In the evidence of Mr. Jackson himself he was asked with reference to his conversation with Mr. Chambers.

> Q. Didn't he ask for $5,000 or $10,000 or a larger amount?
> A. $5,000 may have been mentioned, but I am sure that $1,500 and $2,000 was mentioned.
> Q. How much did you promise to give him?
> A. I gave him $375 and I promised to give him $375 more if he could produce evidenec to substantiate the eight charges he gave me.

Further on:

> Q. You paid him $375 down and you were to pay him the balance on what condition?
> A. On condition that the eight charges should be proved.

Let me point out to the Minister of Trade and Commerce that he himself has stated that applications of this kind are made to persons of a certain character; persons who are not to be too much trusted, and here is this gentleman for whose appointment the minister takes full responsibility, going to one of these men so characterized by the Minister of Trade and Commerce—although I believe him to be a reputable citizen—Jackson goes to this citizen who is supposed to be influenced, and he pays him $375 down and promises him the same amount in addition if he will produce evidence that will unseat Mr. Sutherland. The Minister of Trade and Commerce has no adjectives to apply to conduct of that kind, except 'indiscreet.' That is all that the English language will furnish the right hon. gentleman for conduct of that character and for an occasion of that kind—his vocabulary is not so bare on other occasions. In the evidence of Mr. Frederick R. Avey, is to be found the following :

Q. Do you know Mr. Jackson, the lawyer of Ingersoll ?
A. Yes.
Q. He stated to you as I am instructed that you were not to say that you had been given anything for swearing for them ?
A. He did.
Q. When was that ?
A. Well, it was a week ago last Tuesday night, or two weeks.
Q. Where did he give you these instructions?
A. At my house .

Further on :

Q. Did he speak to you about the declaration which you had given to Mr. Hewlett ?

Mr. Hewlett was one of the paid agents of Mr. Jackson.

A. Yes.
Q. What did he say about that ? He knew all about it then ?
A. Yes.
Q. What did he say about it ?
A. He said : If they ask did you make a declaration, you need not tell them ; somthing like that.

Further on :

Well, he says, if they ask you whether you got anything for it or not, tell them that you did not.

Further on another witness whose name I do not recollect was examined by Mr. Watson counsel for petitioner.

Q. There is just one question ; in the meantime do I understand you to say that Mr. Jackson told you not to say anything about the declaration if you were asked ?
A. If anybody asked me he told me not to say anything about it.

And so on, and all through this evidence one could quote ad libitum statements of precisely a similar character. It seems to me that the position which the Minister of Trade and Commerce has taken with regard to this matter is of an extraordinary nature. In fact he has invented a new decalogue ; so far as the commandments forbid, he would abolish them all and insert instead : 'Thou shalt be discreet so that thou shalt not be found out.' The Minister of Trade and Commerce has no word of criticism upon Mr. Jackson for asking these men to procure evidence, whether true or false, so long as it should unseat Mr. Sutherland. He has no word of criticism with regard to that, but he has a reproach against Jackson because he did not look up the chimney, because he did not look in the cellar to see if any one was listening ; in short, because he was indiscreet. In other words if we are to take the right hon. gentleman at his own valuation he is perfectly content that Mr. Jackson should purchase evidence that he should incite these men to procure evidence whether true or false ; and the only requirement necessary for promotion in the civil service of Canada is that it shall be done so that it cannot be proven. Well, the right hon. gentleman is eloquent sometimes ; he is severe sometimes ; I think he told us since last session that on this side of the House we were a lot of nobodies, heard of nowhere outside of our own parishes. I say to the right hon. gentleman the Minister of Trade and Commerce, that it had been better for him as a public man in this country if he had retired to the isolation of his own parish and been heard of no more, before he made the declaration which he has to-day made in this House. I believe, Sir, that there never was in the public life of this country or of any other country a more damnable doctrine more unblushingly avowed. I do not understand how a gentleman who has had his experience in public life, who has in the past preached lofty doctrines with regard to purity of public life and in the administration of public affairs, could ever have found it in his heart to stand up in this House of Commons, and to make the avowal which the Minister of Trade and Commerce has made to-day. It was bold ; it was more than bold, it was unblushing, and if I were not transgressing parliamentary decorum I would say that it was utterly shameless. That this man, so stigmatized by Mr. Justice Street, should be promoted to the public service of Canada, and that the Minister of Trade and Commerce speaking for the government should not be ashamed to stand up and justify him, is an unheard of degradation in our public life. We are indebted to the hon. gentleman (Mr. Bennett) for bringing the matter to the attention of the House, and in my opinion, it deserves grave consideration from the House and the country. To testify my appreciation of the importance of the question, I beg to move :

That all the words in the resolution after the word 'that' be omitted and the following substituted therefor :—

That in making appointments to pubic offices, and particularly to those of a representative nature, party services should not alone be considered, but selections should be made with regard to capacity and to personal character.

House divided on amendment of Mr. R. L. Borden.

SUPPLY.

Public Works—harbours and rivers—Quebec—St. Siméon wharf—extension, $3,000.

Mr. BLAIN. Please explain this item.

Hon. CHAS. HYMAN (Acting Minister of Public Works). This is for the extension of the wharf, the estimated cost of which is $15,000.

Quebec—Seven Islands—wharf, $60,000.

Mr. BELL. What is the explanation of this ?

Mr. HYMAN. This is for the completion of a wharf at Seven Islands.

Mr. BELL. Is it at the place called Seven Islands ?

Mr. HYMAN. It is in the bay.

Mr. BELL. How far east from Seven Islands ?

Mr. HYMAN. Just at the entrance, about four miles across the bay.

Mr. SPROULE. When was this wharf begun ?

Mr. HYMAN. In November, 1903.

Mr. BELL. What is the population ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I do not know anything about the population there now, but there seems to be quite a number working in that locality. The bay of Seven Islands is the only harbour of refuge practically on the north shore of the St. Lawrence from Tadousac down to the entrance of the Straits of Belle Isle. It is immediately opposite the western end of the island of Anticosti on the north shore. It is getting to be a very important business centre. Several industries have been started there, including one of the largest pulp mills in the world, belonging to the Clark Paper Company, composed of capitalists partly from Toronto and partly from New York.

Mr. BELL. Did the government begin this work ?

Mr. HYMAN. No.

Mr. BELL. We would like fuller explanation.

Mr. HYMAN. This matter was discussed last session. The North Shore Power and Navigation Company began the work. The government acquired from that company the work, which was in an uncompleted state, for $34,433.99. Since then the government have been engaged in completing the wharf. This item of $60,000 is to complete it.

Mr. SPROULE. What was paid for the site ?

Mr. HYMAN. Nothing was paid for the site. The site was given free of charge.

Mr. BELL. Is this work under contract ?

Mr. HYMAN. No, the local engineer is in charge of it.

Mr. MORIN. Will this wharf be the property of the company or of the government ?

Mr. HYMAN. It is the property of the government.

Mr. SPROULE. How is the engineer carrying on the work—by contract or day labour ? The law provides that any work over $5,000 must be let by contract after calling for public tender. That law seems to be entirely ignored in this matter.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. My hon. friend will realize how futile it would be to call for tenders for the construction of a work at this place. I have explained where the Bay of Seven Islands is situated. It is in the county of Chicoutimi and Saguenay. The firm interested are men well known in Toronto, Clark Bros., who have an establishment also in New York where they carry on a large printing and publishing company. They bought a large tract of land down the north shore of the St. Lawrence for the purpose of developing a pulp industry. In addition to the Clarks, there is a firm there from Ontario, called the Mossie, Boyd Company. They are the adjoining proprietors. The only harbour down there which can be used by these different persons developing that pulp industry is the harbour of Seven Islands, and the Clarks got possession of the best location in the harbour and set to work to build a wharf. It is desirable that the wharf should not be the property of any particular company, but of the government and be used by all those who want to do business in that locality. The Bay of Seven Islands is the only harbour on the whole shore from Tadousac down, with the possible exception of Pentecost, where we are now attempting to create a harbour. Last year the government undertook to acquire this wharf from the Clarks. We had an estimate made of the work done, and on that estimate took over what work was done and the materials and supplies and arranged with the Clarks that the latter should complete the work according to plans and specifications prepared by the department and under the supervision of the government engineer who was down there. They will supply all the vouchers for the material before they get paid. These people are in possession of the locality and are the only people who can supply the lumber and labour. They have a great many people employed there at present. If you were to call for tenders, they would get the work practically at their own price or at any price they chose to offer.

Mr. SPROULE. They are getting that anyway.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I submit they are not. They are to be paid solely for the actual expenditure they make for materials and labour, and it seems to me we are getting the benefit of the work carried on there by this private corporation——

Mr. CLARKE. Have you any agreement with them ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Yes.

Mr. CLARKE. Will the hon. minister bring it down ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes, I shall be glad to do so.

Mr. CLARKE. If they agreed to furnish materials and labour at cost, that is very reasonable, but we should see the agreement.

Mr. OSLER. Is the government quite sure that the development of the pulp industry is going on ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Yes.

Mr. OSLER. Because we have all over Canada as we know a great many pulp industries which have started and many of which have not been a success. I must say that I quite agree with the proposition of the minister that if this large work is going on and the government are to build a wharf there, perhaps the best way to build that wharf is in the manner suggested, with proper supervision to see that the government are not charged too much. I think, however, the government should be very certain that the private works are going on and will likely be permanent before spending this large amount.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I am speaking now of my own actual personal knowledge, and I say that over a million dollars has been expended and that it is expected that the pulp mill will be in operation this autumn.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Is not this island owned by some individual ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. You are thinking of Anticosti, owned by Menier. This is the Bay of Seven Islands on the coast of the St. Lawrence ; the Island of Anticosti is opposite it.

Mr. BELL. It is evident in this case that the government is building a wharf for a private corporation.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Not for one, for several.

Mr. BELL. The minister states that there are some others, but he has not given particulars. My information is that there is not a house or dwelling at this place.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. That is absolutely incorrect.

Mr. BELL. There is a settlement, an old Hudson's Bay post, nine miles distant from this work, and the fact is evident that the government are repeating here what they did in Grande Vallée, furnishing a wharf for private parties. Under these circumstances we cannot allow an item of this kind to go through without information. We must have the contract. If the government are disposed to put it through they have the power to do so, but it is our duty here to bring out all the facts. In the first place it is evident that the company spent $34,000, and then the government took the work off their hands, and now when they propose an expenditure of $50,000 more, instead of letting the work by contract the government are simply paying the bills of this private corporation, settling such accounts as they choose to render.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. That is not a correct statement of what is done. Ask Mr. Osler of Toronto, a business man what his view is of this.

Mr. BELL. The statement of the Minister of Public Works was that the department were paying—

Mr. HYMAN. The actual expenditure under the supervision of a government engineer.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Why is a government engineer in charge of the work if we have not voted money for it before ?

Mr. HYMAN. We have voted money before.

Mr. OSLER.

Mr. BELL. $25,000 and nearly $10,000 more than that amount has been spent upon it. The minister said a few moments ago that $34,000 had been expended.

Mr. HYMAN. That is the amount. We have not paid it, but we have become liable for that amount.

Mr. BELL. That is practically expended now and this work will cost $85,000 which is a large sum even for the Dominion of Canada. There is no guarantee that $85,000 will complete the work, because this corporation may extend the work indefinitely, and apparently all they have to do is to pass the accounts to the government through the engineer in charge and have them paid. We cannot allow this to go through without having the information.

Mr. HYMAN. What information ?

Mr. BELL. We want to know what the contract is. If the government of Canada have entered into a contract with these parties without inviting tenders or making any effort to get them, I think it is essential that we should know what the contract is.

Mr. CLARKE. What wages per hour are being paid these men ? What is being paid per thousand for the timber that is being used, and what advantages are to be secured to others than the gentlemen who commenced the construction of the wharf ? Would it not have been better for the government to give a round sum with all these conditions securing facilities for others and with certain obligations imposed upon the builders ? Surely the government will not expect this item to pass without laying the contract on the table ? I think that request is so reasonable that the item should stand.

Mr. HYMAN. The wages paid are the current wages in the district, whatever they may be.

Mr. CLARKE. What are they ? Does the fair wage officer fix the wage ?

Mr. SPROULE. The minister stated that you could not let a contract here because it is remote from the settled sections of the country. There is no force in that because contractors go all over the country.

Mr. HYMAN. How could a contractor from outside compete with local men who are the owners of the mills and all facilities ?

Mr. BELL. If tenders had been advertised for, then we would know that the local men got it by open competition. In the first place there is a deliberate violation of the law.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. My hon. friend has forgotten the amendment of last session.

Mr. SPROULE. I forget the amendment of last session. There was a violation of the worthy principle that in the expenditure of public money the work must be let by contract. I am told that in this case only two firms are getting the benefit.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. For the present, but there will be others.

Mr. SPROULE. Men go in and get timber limits and they want the government to come to their aid and provide facilities for working these limits. They commence work for themselves, but afterwards induce the government to buy the works for $35,000. $35,000 will pay for a good deal of material supplied in a place like that which is almost a forest and the little work that has been done, and I have no doubt that they have been paid a large figure for everything. The government now, instead of turning round and endeavouring to economize public money by advertising for tenders, give the contract to the same individuals regardless of price, practically, because where there is no competition they can charge us any price and we cannot help it. This money is being expended simply for their purposes, just as in the case we dealt with last night at Grande Vallee. Possibly in the future there will be a town or village, but that settlement will be the aggregation of people brought in by the company to do their own work, to handle the timber and manufacture it as they are supposed to do. We do not believe it is right to allow public money to be voted in that way and we would like to know what contract there is between the government and those parties to do the work.

Mr. MORIN. I think that the government has too much love for those Clark fellows at Seven Islands. In the first place we all know that the Clarks are very wealthy men.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Hear, hear.

Mr. MORIN. And they have millions of dollars to spend.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. They are spending it too.

Mr. MORIN. They were building a wharf there. Why not leave them alone and let them build their own wharf ? Let well enough alone. Do you not think that is better ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. My hon. friend who has some knowledge of the local conditions will no doubt answer this question as to whether there exists at the present time a harbour on the north side of the St. Lawrence, taking in the Island of Anticosti, in which a ship can find refuge at any point between the entrance to the Saguenay river and the entrance to the Straits of Belle Isle ? Is there a single place outside the Bay of Seven Islands where a ship can get refuge in the whole of that territory ?

Mr. MORIN. In the first place, there is no reason for any ship going there.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. There were no less than four wrecks there this spring.

Mr. MORIN. There are places where small vessels land, but steamships or sailing ships never go to the Seven Islands at all. Vessels stop along the coast, and have been stopping there for years, and they will keep on doing so. I think in this case there must be a nigger in the fence.

Mr. HYMAN. I have no objection to let the item stand. I have sent for the contract.

Mr. CLARKE. Last year $65,000 was voted on this item and the explanation given was :

> This is to make provision for the construction of a deepwater pier on the west side of Bay of Seven Islands. The pier will run out in a northerly direction, nearly at right angles to the shore, and it will have a total length of 1,325 feet, reaching a depth of 48 feet at low water spring tide. The estimated cost is $65,000. The reason for the work is that there is a most important development going on at that place, and there are now large pulp mills in that district which was up to a year or so ago almost unknown.

It would look from that as if the government intended to construct a deep water pier. The information we have to-day is that the people are building a deep water pier themselves, and having spent $34,000, the government are now taking it off their hands, paying for it, and allowing them to do the work at their own price.

Mr. HYMAN. That statement is not fair, The hon. gentleman knows perfectly well that is not in accordance with the statement given when he says they are allowed to do it at their own price.

Mr. CLARKE. At what price are they doing it ?

Mr. HYMAN. The price is controlled by the department.

Mr. CLARKE. What control has the department over the price ?

Mr. HYMAN. The department knows what price they pay themselves. They have an engineer in charge and he has certified that these prices are fair.

Mr. CLARKE. According to the statement I have read, there was no development and no improvement on the water front there a year ago. Now what kind of work did the department get done there a year ago ? How can they compare the price being charged here with the price the company paid themselves ?

Mr. HYMAN. The work is done by the company as I understand.

Mr. CLARKE. When this vote was taken last year there was a different statement made altogether. The government said they proposed to construct the pier in deep water at low spring tide.

Mr. OSLER. When was the contract made for the purchase from the private individuals ?

Mr. HYMAN. The agreement is dated February 8, 1904.

Mr. CLARKE. The appropriation last year was passed in October. It seems to have been an afterthought, after parliament had voted this money, for the government to construct this pier and take it off these people's hands. Surely we ought to have all the particulars, all the correspondence and negotiations for the purchase mentioned here, and some reasons in addition why the government should allow the company to go on and complete their own pier. They must have had the work more than half done because, according to the evidence given us last year, the work was to cost $65,000 and the company had $34,000 worth of work done.

Mr. HYMAN. Allow the item to stand, I have sent for the contract.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I might draw attention to the fact that last year the member for one of the Victorias, speaking of this particular locality, said it was a very good work and deserved to be commended.

Mr. OSLER. It would appear from the discussion at that time that there was no information given to the House that any work had already been done there, it looked as if it was an entirely new work. From the information that is given to us now it is evident that at the time this item was under discussion a large amount of work had been done and the government must have had in contemplation, not the new work undertaken by the government, but the purchase of the work done by private individuals. That must have been contemplated by the government then, though no intimation of it was given last session.

Quebec—Three Rivers harbour—additional deep water wharfs, $60,000.

Mr. HYMAN. This work is under contract, which was made on the 16th of June, 1902.

Mr. OSLER. What is the estimated total cost ?

Mr. HYMAN. Of course this is a large work, in a place like Three Rivers. The amount of the contract is $280,000 and there is an additional contract for the substitution of concrete for timber in the superstructure, for the sum of $50,000. Including sums for contingencies the whole amount would be $355,400. $81,564 was spent up to the 1st of December. With this at the disposal of the department they will be able to pay $169,914 of the total $355,000, leaving an additional amount required to complete the work of $185,400. The first contract was let on the 16th of June, 1902. I am informed by the engineer that at that time the general policy was, and has been since, wherever it was possible, and the matter is always taken into consideration by the engineer, to substitute concrete for timber. The price seems to be fair in view of the alterations made.

Mr. CLARKE. Surely two years ago that policy prevailed in the department. It strikes one as peculiar that the contract should be let in June, 1902, after which a change was made involving an additional cost of $50,000 or $60,000 for concrete. To whom was the contract awarded ?

Mr. HYMAN. Part of the work had been done before the change made by the department.

Mr. CLARKE. How much money had been paid to the contractor before this change ?

Mr. HYMAN. I am unable to say the exact amount. About $80,000 had been expended on that work when the change was made. The change was made on the 7th of December, 1903, and the expenditure up to the end of December was $81,588.

Mr. CLARKE. Was a vote taken last session of parliament for the increased cost owing to the change made from timber to concrete ?

Mr. HYMAN. The supplementary contract was made on the 7th of December, 1903. The hon. gentleman will understand that it was impossible to take a vote last session because the House rose in October.

Mr. CLARKE. This additional expenditure was contracted for notwithstanding that parliament had been advised that the work called for a certain sum and was been expended in a certain way. It seems to me to be out of the usual course of business to change the character of a work from timber to concrete involving the country in an expenditure of $50,000 or $60,000 without having an appropriation from parliament.

Mr. HYMAN. The change was made at the request of the harbour commissioners. The harbour commissioners made the request to the department and the department upon taking into consideration their request, decided that it would be in the interest of the country to have the change made. Almost every day matters of this kind come before the department. Work is contracted for and very often it is found in the interest of the public to make some change. After the work has been started and a certain amount of money expended the engineers find upon consideration and as a result of suggestions having been made there are changes which can be advantageously made.

Mr. TAYLOR. Generally in the interest of the contractor.

Mr. HYMAN. I do not know that that is exactly fair. I think the interests of the country are very well looked after by the engineers of the department.

Mr. CLARKE. Would it not be reasonable to suppose that these gentlemen would be able to advise in the first place in respect to the best means of doing this work ?

Mr. HYMAN. They always try to do that.

Mr. CLARKE. They thought the wooden pier would be all right until some one suggested that the work should be done in concrete. It seems to me to cast a reflection on the ability of the officer who would make such a recommendation.

Mr. BUREAU. The harbour commissioners of Three Rivers and the chamber of commerce demanded this change. We have docks at Three Rivers. The current runs inland and every year, these docks being floored with deals, the deals come off and the front of the docks is torn up. The result is that it is necessary to make extensive repairs every year after the ice floats down.

Mr. CLARKE. Were the engineers aware of the local situation which the hon. gentleman describes when they made this recommendation ?

Mr. BUREAU. I do not know. The docks at Three Rivers are under the control of the harbour commissioners and they have their own engineer. The commission reports to the department when they want to borrow any money, because under the law it is necessary for them to have their plans ratified, formerly by the Department of Public Works, but now by the Department of Marine and Fisheries. The money has been expended on an ice-breaker that was built 150 feet long by 50 feet wide in a depth of 30 or 32 feet of water. They had to make it very strong because coming out of Lake St. Peter the St. Lawrence brings the current and the ice inside of this spot at which they are building the dock. It was at the instance of the commissioners that I went to the department and recommended a change being made from a wooden to a concrete dock. This is a dock 2,020 feet in length. It extends up the river and it has to resist the force of a rapid current and the ice which comes down with it.

Mr. CLARKE. It seems to me that in regard to this work involving a very large expenditure one would have expected to have received better advice from the engineering staff. They should have made themselves familiar with the local situation, because it is not business after a work has been commenced to allow alterations of this character to be made. If it were necessary in view of the local situation to have a particularly strong wharf, it seems to me that the engineers should have made the recommendation in favour of concrete in the first place, and not have had this change made involving this large additional cost ?

Mr. SPROULE. What is the additional cost ?

Mr. HYMAN. The additional cost involved by the substitution of concrete for wood is $50,239.

Mr. SPROULE. Did the hon. minister get a report from his own engineer before he ordered the change ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes, there was a report from the resident engineer to the chief engineer and this was concurred in by the chief engineer.

Mr. SPROULE. Is the resident engineer the government engineer or is he the resident engineer of the harbour commisioners there ?

Mr. HYMAN. The government engineer.

Mr. OSLER. Is that man a resident of Three Rivers ?

Mr. HYMAN. The resident engineer at Three Rivers has charge of the government works.

Mr. OSLER. Was it the resident engineer at Three Rivers who prepared the plans that were submitted to the government in the first place for a wooden dock ?

Mr. HYMAN. No. The plans were prepared by the department under the supervision of the chief engineer.

Mr. COCHRANE. I would like to ask the hon. minister if the department have had any experience with reference to this concrete work ? Are they sure that with the ice jamming around there these piers of concrete will not break as well as timber ?

Mr. HYMAN. Not only have the department had considerable experience, but they have the advantage of knowing what the experience is all over the world. This is the age of concrete. Concrete is being used more freely in all works. In this case it was adopted on the report of the resident engineer because it was considered to be in the interest of the general public.

Mr. CLARKE. We are desirous of seeing this work properly done, if the hon. gentleman will give us any good reasons why the change should be made; but are we to understand that the gentlemen at headquarters here prepared these plans for this work and offered their advice without consulting the engineer in charge of the work in the district of Three Rivers ? Did it strike this gentleman at Three Rivers that, after a large sum of money has been spent on the work, the plans should be changed and the work done in concrete ?. Surely it is not paying a very high compliment to the engineering skill of the engineer at Three Rivers to say that he would allow that work to go to a certain stage, and that then it would strike him all at once that concrete would be a better substitute ? It is possible that the gentlemen at headquarters did not know the local situation. The hon. gentleman who represents that district (Mr. Bureau) has explained the great pressure from the ice and water, but the local engineer ought to have known all about that ; and if he was familiar with the conditions we would have expected that he would have advised before the work had been let that it would be in the public interest to substitute concrete for timber. It does not look to be a very healthy state of affairs, having such a multitude of councillors as the hon. gentleman has, that he should be obliged, after the work is half done, to call for new plans. It does not seem to be a business-like method of procedure. He has an engineer at Three Rivers as well as engineers in his own office here, some of whom ought to know the conditions required in the construction of the pier or wharf, and who ought to be able to say which is the better material to be employed in the construction of the work.

Mr. HYMAN. At the time these plans were prepared in the Department of Public Works there was no resident engineer at Three Rivers. The resident engineer at Three Rivers only became the resident engineer after this work was started. The plans for the work were prepared in the office of the department here by the engineer and that engineer was placed in charge of the work. This gentleman who is the resident engineer and who has charge of the work made the recommendation to the chief engineer of the department in favour of the change, it was concurred in by the chief engineer and upon their joint report the change was made and the extra contract entered into. There was no resident engineer of the department at Three Rivers at the time the original specifications were made. If there had been he would have been consulted by the department. The gentleman who is now the resident engineer at Three Rivers was at that time on the staff at Ottawa. It was only on the commencement of the work that the resident engineer was sent there to specially supervise that work.

Mr. CLARKE. And since he has been there he has been impressed with the magnitude of the undertaking and with the desirability of making it more substantial by using concrete ?

Mr. CLARKE.

Mr. HYMAN. That is it exactly.

Mr. BELL. What amount was spent on this work up to the time the change was made ? I understand that about $80,000 worth of work was done before the change was made. Is that $80,000 absolutely lost in consequence of making the change ?

Mr. HYMAN. There is no loss to the country at all. There is $80,000 worth of work completed. When you construct a pier you start at the bottom. The piles have to be driven. After this $80,000 worth of work had been completed the engineers as a result of their discussions and the consideration of their reports decided that it would be in the interest of the country that an increased expenditure of $50,000 should be made upon this work by substituting concrete, in this way very much increasing its durability. The minister acted on the report of the engineer's department that the public interest would be better served by a substitution of concrete for timber.

Mr. SPROULE. What foundation did they make for the concrete ?

Mr. HYMAN. The same foundation.

Mr. SPROULE. How is the foundation built ?

Mr. BUREAU. I am not an engineer, but I know that they have a solid front and that spiles are driven, and the solid front is fixed on to these big spiles with iron rods, and on top of that they construct their concrete work. The $80,000 was spent in dredging and levelling. At the head of the dock there is an ice-breaker that rises thirty or forty feet above the water. It is built of square timber cribwork filled with broken stone. The country did not lose a cent by the change, because if the dock had been built with a wooden superstructure everything that was done at the time of the change would have to be done all the same. They utilized every particle of the work done under the first contract for the second contract.

Mr. SPROULE. You are building a concrete superstructure upon wood and stone ?

Mr. BUREAU. Exactly.

Mr. SPROULE. Wood must decay in time.

Mr. TALBOT. It never decays under water.

Mr. SPROULE. The hon. gentleman may know a good deal, but there are others as old as he and with quite as extended experience. Certain kinds of wood will last longer under water, but they will decay in time, and no one will argue that this work would be as permanent as if it were built on solid concrete from the bottom. Now, I want to see the report of the engineer recommending the change. I want to know if, when this contract was changed, tenders were invited, or was the contract continued by private arrangement ?

Mr. HYMAN. There were no new tenders. $80,000 had been spent on the work, and upon the report of the engineer the contract was extended, and $50,000 added to pay the extra amount required for the substitution.

Mr. SPROULE. That was a private agreement between the contractor and engineer.

Mr. HYMAN. It was sanctioned by Order in Council.

Mr. SHERRITT. It is a pity that this work was not first started with a view of using concrete. The explanation given by the minister would indicate that there was no resident engineer there at the time, and that it was the member for the constituency that recommended the change.

Mr. HYMAN. There was no departmental resident engineer when the original contract was entered into, but there was when the change was made.

Mr. SHERRITT. I understood the hon. member (Mr. Bureau) to say that he recommended the change. Why didn't he recommend concrete when the first contract was made ? I have been a contractor myself, and I know a little about these things, and I know that after a contract is taken the changes are usually made in the interests of the contractor.

Mr. HYMAN. That is a frank admission from an old contractor.

Mr. SHERRITT. It is, and it is the case nevertheless. I understood that the hon. member (Mr. Bureau) said he recommended the change.

Mr. BUREAU. I stated that I recommended the change at the instance and request of the harbour commissioners and the chamber of commerce, through their engineers. They came to me and asked me to advocate the change, and I did so. As a matter of fact, they passed a resolution asking that the top of the dock should be concrete instead of wood.

Mr. SHERRITT. Why didn't they recommend that in the first place ?

Mr. BUREAU. I do not belong to the harbour commission.

Mr. SHERRITT. Why did not you recommend it at first ?

Mr. BUREAU. I am not a contractor or an engineer, and I did not know anything about it. I wanted the dock to be built, but I had nothing to do with the plans. The other docks were built in wood and I knew they had to make repairs every year, but I could make no suggestion for a better way, because it is not in my line of business at all.

Mr. SHERRITT. I understood you suggested that the top should be concrete.

Mr. BUREAU. No ; the harbour commissioners asked for it. There was a resolution sent to me, which I forwarded to the department, and they asked me to use my best efforts to have the change made.

Mr. SPROULE. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Bureau) seems to have engineered the job all right.

Mr. BUREAU. I submitted it, and it was so good in itself that it went through.

Mr. SPROULE. How is the work paid for now ?

Mr. BUREAU. It is a lump sum contract.

Mr. SPROULE. The lump sum must be based on something.

Mr. HYMAN. There was an estimate made by the engineer.

Mr. SPROULE. Was it let per cubic yard for a lump sum without any knowledge of the cubic yards in it ?

Mr. HYMAN. Not at all. It was a lump sum, and of course the number of cubic yards is taken into account by the engineer in arriving at the lump sum.

Mr. SPROULE. How much are we paying per yard ?

Mr. HYMAN. I am informed by the engineer that it is impossible to arrive at the exact calculation of how much per square yard, because the change to concrete involves some other changes. The $50,000 represents not only the concrete, but any additional work that may be required in consequence of using concrete.

Mr. SPROULE. Any engineer can estimate exactly how many cubic yards of concrete will be required. When that information is before us, and not till then, can we tell whether we are getting value for the money expended.

Mr. HYMAN. When it was decided to change this contract, an estimate of the work was made by the engineer. The whole amount is not for concrete. Part of it is for cement, and the balance is for extra piling, extra iron work, and bracing in consequence of the extra weight of the concrete.

Mr. SPROULE. Then we want to know how much is allowed for concrete, how much for the extra iron work, the extra piling, and so on. When we have that information, we shall have some idea whether this is a profligate or an economical expenditure of public money.

Mr. HYMAN. The hon. gentleman is entitled to any information in the possession of the department ; and if he will allow the item to pass, I shall be very glad to-morrow morning to give him the detailed estimate made by the engineer on which the recommendation was made by the department to council.

Mr. SPROULE. I do not want to check these items more than is necessary, but it is not the best plan to pass the item and then to get the information. We would rather have the information first.

Mr. HYMAN. I should be very glad to have the hon. gentleman make any comments he pleases after getting the information.

Mr. CLARKE. Unless the committee are supplied with the information as to the amount of concrete required and the value of the extra iron required for bracing, how can they determine whether the contract has been a profitable one or the reverse ?

Mr. HYMAN. I shall be very glad to bring down the engineer's report, which he tells me shows the details of the whole work. I will put the information in the hands of the hon. members, and it can be discussed on any item in the Ontario estimates.

Quebec—Trois Pistoles—breakwater, $3,000.

Mr. HYMAN. This amount is to complete the work. The estimated cost is $5,800. The expenditure up to the 30th of June, 1904, was $2,800.

Quebec—Verchères—wharf, $3,000.

Mr. HYMAN. The appropriation for 1903-4 was $5,500. The estimated expenditure up to June 30, 1904, was $3,500. This vote is to complete the work.

Quebec—Yamaska river, dredging, $10,000.

Mr. HYMAN. The appropriation for 1903-4 was $16,000. The expenditure up to the 30th June, 1904, was $6,000. This is a revote to complete the work.

Mr. CLARKE. What depth of water ?

Mr. HYMAN. Seven feet.

Mr. SPROULE. How is this dredging being done—by the government dredge or by contract ?

Mr. HYMAN. By dredge 'No. 4,' for which the department pays at the usual rate of $8 per hour, which is based on the amount of work done according to the capacity of the dredge.

Quebec-Ontario — Grand Bend breakwater, pier, &c., $15,000.

Mr. HYMAN. This vote is asked to make provision for the construction of a breakwater at Grand Bend. A contract was entered into amounting to $21,388. The estimated total cost of the work is $23,400. There is an amount in the main estimates of $15,000.

Mr. SHERRITT. Has the government purchased any property there ?

Mr. HYMAN. My deputy has no recollection. There has never been any suggestion that the public has not free access to the wharf.

Mr. SHERRITT. My information is that it has none.

Mr. HYMAN. Does the hon. gentleman state that the public have no approach to the wharf ?

Mr. SHERRITT. I am asking for information.

Mr. HYMAN. We have no information to that effect. Instructions will be sent that no money shall be expended until free approach is granted.

Mr. McEWEN. There is a roadway there running down to the lake, but south of that, at the creek or river, there might not be a public approach.

Mr. SHERRITT. Is the work let by contract ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes, to the lowest bidder.

Mr. SHERRITT. Has not some change been made in the contract since it was let?

Mr. HYMAN. The only change made was that it was reduced. It was found that the expenditure was too large, and a certain amount of work was taken off and the price proportionately reduced.

Mr. SHERRITT. Were the parties who tendered notified and given a chance to tender again ?

Mr. HYMAN. No, the lowest tenderer got the contract. It was found that the work, as originally contemplated, would cost too high, and it was decided to cut it down. But instead of going to the expense of re-advertising for tenders, the lowest tender was accepted and a proportionate amount struck off the price.

Mr. SHERRITT. What proportion of work was cut off ?

Mr. HYMAN. Four piers.

Mr. SHERRITT. What proportion of the whole amount of work is that ?

Mr. HYMAN. The cubic contents of the whole wharf were taken and a proportionate amount reduced from the contract.

Mr. SHERRITT. Had you not a tender from a syndicate at the head of which was one McTavish ?

Mr. HYMAN. I have not a list of those who tendered. I have only the name of the lowest tenderer. It would not have made any difference, because a proportionate amount taken off any of the higher tenders would still leave it lower than the lowest original tender.

Mr. SHERRITT. I have been informed that the contractors consider they were not fairly used. The tender of the Mc-

Tavish Company for the whole work was $34,000. In taking off the cribs, 9, 10, 11 and 12, which are the four placed in the deepest water, you are taking off a work which is proportionately more difficult and more costly than the other, and consequently gives an advantage to the contractor. Had that been done with the McTavish tender, it would be lower than the one accepted. Is there any dredging in connection with the contract ?

Mr. HYMAN. There was and that was taken into consideration.

Mr. SHERRITT. Is there any to be done in connection with the contract ?

Mr. HYMAN. Not now.

Mr. SHERRITT. I am more than ever convinced that your contract, let as it is, for $21,000, is higher than would have been the contract if the $34,000 tender had been accepted. When you consider the four piers in deep water taken from the contract, that would certainly bring the $34,000 tender lower than the contract accepted. The cribs put down close to the shore are certainly not as expensive and difficult and would not require the same quantity of material as the cribs put in deeper water. What is the depth of water ?

Mr. HYMAN. Twelve feet.

Mr. SPROULE. What is the length of each crib and the width and depth ?

Mr. HYMAN. The original length of the wharf was 648 feet and it is now about 450 feet. Each crib is twenty feet wide.

Mr. SPROULE. What kind of cribs ?

Mr. HYMAN. Ordinary cribwork built up and filled in. There is also 100 feet of a stone approach.

Mr. SHERRITT. What was the object of cutting off this ?

Mr. HYMAN. Because it was felt that the expenditure was too great. The department did not feel inclined to enter into an expenditure of this kind and it was felt that the 450 feet would practically answer the purpose, but if it is necessary hereafter to extend it from time to time the department will take into consideration the question whether the extension should be made.

Mr. SHERRITT. $34,000 was the tender.

Mr. HYMAN. I have not the verification of the amount but of course I am willing to accept the hon. gentleman's statement.

Mr. SHERRITT. I am not speaking positively. For the payment of a little over $10,000 it does seem to me it would be in the public interest to continue that work to the full extent first intended. As I am better acquainted with that place than other members of the House I may say that it strikes me that the sandbar there may cause sand to drift in. Possibly the engineer was relying upon the existence of this sandbar when he came to the conclusion that it would not be necessary to run it out the 600 feet. I fear that the sand may drift in and perhaps leave the work done practically useless. I think the minister might consider the continuing of that work in accordance with the original specification.

Mr. HYMAN. I see the work has not been completed and will not be completed for a year and I have instructed the engineer to make a report on the whole matter. I will be glad to discuss the matter with the hon. gentleman, and if the engineer thinks it is in the public interest that an extension should be made, I will be glad to take the matter into the consideration of the department.

Mr. SHERRITT. Has any provision been made for the purchasing of a road to the wharf ?

Mr. HYMAN. I do not think that a road would have to be purchased.

Mr. SHERRITT. The wharf is not on a public road but is at the point to which the Au Sable river was diverted by the municipality which is 30 or 40 rods from the main road, so that you would have to cross private property in order to get to the wharf.

Mr. HYMAN. The information I have from the engineer of the department is that the department has been very careful in all these works not to start any construction until such time as the property has been conveyed to the Crown.

Mr. SHERRITT. I was asking for information, I was not aware of any purchase.

Mr. HYMAN. I will have that matter looked into at the same time as the other.

Mr. McEWEN. Has the work been begun ? Have the cribs been put down ?

Mr. HYMAN. The contract has only been let a short time. I do not think there has been any actual work although the contractor has, I suppose, ordered his material.

Mr. McEWEN. If they have the pier at the end of the street or road, they will not require to buy any land. I know it will be much handier at the end of the road than down at the mouth of the Au Sable.

Mr. HYMAN. A change in the location might of course require an entire alteration of the specifications.

Mr. SHERRITT. The wharf is not intended to be put at the end of the road, but at the point to which the river was diverted by dredging. It was felt that the same amount of money would go further there, notwithstanding the little difference in the cost of the purchasing the road. We have spent as a municipality some $20,000 in dredging and the plant and specifications have been drawn up with a view to building at the outlet of the river, which is about 60 rods from the end of the road. The timber is there and although the work has not been carried on to any great extent, I saw the timber there.

Mr. McEWEN. I do not quite agree with that, unless you want to go on and dredge the river afterwards, and have deep water in behind. I think that this pier or wharf can be built as cheaply at the end of the road as at the mouth of the river, notwithstanding what has been said to the contrary. I believe it could be built as cheaply at one place as at the other, and it certainly would be much more handy at the end of the road than away down there.

Mr. SPROULE. What was the depth of the four cribs that were left out?

Mr. HYMAN. Of course this contract has not been changed without a report having been made by the engineer to the department authorized by Order in Council. While it would be impossible to bring down all the reports in connection with these different works, I shall be glad to bring down any that are needed.

Mr. SPROULE. The government does not change all contracts after they are entered into, and the minister could easily have with him those in which changes have been made. It is important to know whether the four cribs that were left out are deep or shallow, as it might make a great difference in the amount of stone that would be required for them. It appears that the original contract was for $34,000.

Mr. HYMAN. I don't say so.

Mr. SPROULE. I understood that.

Mr. HYMAN. I said the contract was let for $21,388.

Mr. SPROULE. The amended contract; what was the original?

Mr. HYMAN. This was the only contract that was let. The hon. member for North Middlesex made the statement, and I presume he is aware of the fact, that there was a tender, possibly a local tender, amounting to $34,000. It was not a contract, it was a tender.

Mr. SHERRITT. Will the hon. gentleman tell me the full amount of the tender of Mr. Warwick the present contractor?

Mr. HYMAN. I have not the amount here of the original tender, the lowest tender for the work.

Mr. SPROULE. Now, the tenders were upon plans and specifications for 648 feet of cribwork upon which the prospective contractor would tender. Did they tender upon that basis, or were tenders received? The hon. gentleman says he don't know whether any were received.

Mr. HYMAN. I did not say that, I said tenders were received, but I was not aware of the fact that tenders were received for $34,000. I said tenders were received for the work as originally contemplated, upon the plans and specifications furnished by the department for the original work; and after the tenders had been received it was not considered in the interest of the public that such a large expenditure should be made, therefore the departmental engineers figured out upon the lowest tender and made certain reductions based upon the proportionate amount, leaving the additional work for four piers, and then the contract was let to the lowest tenderer, on the basis of the cubic contents of the wharf.

Mr. SPROULE. If the reduction was made upon the basis of the number of cubic yards, it would not be so bad. But there must naturally be an allowance for the whole cost of the work that is done in water as compared with that done on the shore, and I take it there ought to be some allowance made for that. I wished to ascertain upon what basis the contract was let, if tenders were asked for the longer work and upon what basis the contract was let.

Mr. HYMAN. If the hon. gentleman desires full information with regard to the tender I shall be glad to bring down all the tenders and the amounts of each. I have already told him how the reduction was arrived at. It was arrived at by taking into consideration the cubic contents of the wharf. There were four piers that it was not considered in the interest of the public to complete; therefore a contract was entered into for a less amount of work, making a reduction which was a proportionate amount of the whole. The original number of piers was twelve, and four of them were not built. But in making the calculations the stone approaches have to be taken into consideration, all of which was done by the engineers of the department.

Mr. SPROULE. If a number of cubic yards in the increased length of the work is cut off, one can understand that the contractor is substantially the gainer by the change.

Mr. HYMAN. I cannot agree with the hon. gentleman's argument, though I do not dispute his right to make any statement he pleases.

Mr. SPROULE. I am giving the reasons for my statement. I say it would be more costly to put in 100 cubic yards of stone in water 9 feet deep than to put the same quantity of stone where there is little or no water at all. Which is the most costly, to do work at a distance from the shore or to do work on the land?

Mr. HYMAN. I do not pretend to arrive at an exact cost of this work, nor do I suppose the hon. gentleman would presume to either. I am informed by the engineer that the difference in the depth of water where the piers are to be built, and the depth of water where the four were left out, will not affect the cost. The engineer tells me that the difference in the depth of the water is so little that it will not affect the cost. The hon. gentleman does not know whether the water is four feet deep or five feet deep, or where the stonework starts at the end of the pier.

Mr. SHERRITT. I can assure the hon. gentleman that there is a great difference in the depth of water where the pier commences and where it ends. The hundred feet of stonework is in a cut where the water is very shallow. While the minister might advance that sort of an argument, I do not think an engineer would say that it was not more expensive to handle a cubic yard of stone where there is 14 feet of water than where there is only 2 or 3 feet of water. Any schoolboy would understand that. This wharf is on a shore which is subject to severe storms, and some $10,000 had to be spent a short distance off to replace piers that were blown away. We know very well that where there is ten feet of water there must be more risk and more expense in constructing piers, in sinking the cribwork and filling it with stone, than there would be in shallower water. I think the hon. gentleman ought to apologize for advancing such an absurd argument.

Mr. HYMAN. I am simply giving the statement and estimate of the engineer, based upon careful examination of the spot. I hope the hon. gentleman would not presume to put his opinion against that of the engineer. The hon. gentleman himself probably does not know what depth of water there is where these piers start, and where they end. I am obliged to take the information furnished by the engineer, and I am informed that the cost is not out of the way, in view of the reduction of the work.

Mr. SHERRITT. I cannot take your statement.

Mr. HYMAN. Any statement I have made is made upon the advice of the chief engineer of the department; and if I have to accept advice upon a pier, I would rather have the advice of the chief engineer of the department than that of the hon. member for North Middlesex.

Mr. SPROULE. I can only tell the hon. gentleman that a contractor would reason the other way. I have seen a few of them figuring up contracts for piers, and they make a big difference between working in water, close to the shore, where the water is calm, and working out where it is exposed and much deeper. They do not think it should be done at the same price. I would like to ask the hon. minister if he will bring down the engineer's recommendation as to the change?

Mr. HYMAN. I shall be very glad to do it.

Mr. SHERRITT. And also a list of the tenders?

Mr. HYMAN. I cannot give a list of the tenders now, as they are all locked up in the department, but I will bring it down in the morning.

Harbours, rivers and bridges—general repairs and improvements to, $15,000.

Mr. CLANCY. What progress has been made with the work in the River Sydenham? There seems to be no item this year, either in the main or supplementary estimates, for dredging the River Sydenham. The hon. gentleman perhaps will be able to recall that $5,800 was voted for that work last year, but I understand no dredging was done such as was contemplated. Perhaps the hon. gentleman will be able to give the reason why it has not been done.

Mr. HYMAN. I am informed by the chief engineer that there was some dredging done. Do you mean in the Sydenham itself?

Mr. CLANCY. Yes.

Mr. HYMAN. There was a small amount of dredging done in the vicinity of Dresden. There was some dredging done at Mitchell's Bay and some at the mouth of the Chenal Ecarté. If there is any necessity for further dredging being done, the department will have at their disposal an amount for dredging, and that money can be used for the purpose. It can be taken from the general vote.

Mr. CLANCY. There is some correspondence in regard to that. Will the hon. gentleman be good enough to take that up after six o'clock? I want the hon. gentleman to bring down the correspondence.

Mr. HYMAN. I cannot get the correspondence at this time, as it is all locked up in the department, but I will be very glad to bring it down.

Mr. CLANCY. When you reach the supplementary estimates?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes, I will bring it down.

Mr. CLANCY. Will all the correspondence be brought down in relation to the work being done at those particular points?

Mr. HYMAN. If the hon. gentleman desired this correspondence, I presume the proper way would have been to have moved for it. Of course, it is a very voluminous correspondence, and I do not want to make a promise that I cannot fulfil.

Mr. CLANCY. I fancy the hon. gentleman will not ask members at this stage of the session to move for correspondence. I am aware of the character of the correspondence that ought to be brought down, and can be brought down in ten minutes.

Mr. HYMAN. The item which is being discussed is :

Harbours, rivers and bridges—general repairs and improvements to, $15,000.

I do not anticipate the hon. gentleman would ask me to bring down all the correspondence in reference to this item. If the hon. gentleman will specify the correspondence he wants, I will bring it down.

Mr. CLANCY. I asked a question upon this item, because there was no item in the estimates in regard to the improvement of the Sydenham river. The correspondence I want is in relation to the disposal of the $5,800, and as to the work done in the River Sydenham, at the mouth of Chenal Ecarte, and at what is known as the eastern passenger Chenal Ecarte, going into Lake St. Clair. The hon. gentleman's chief officer will know what I refer to. I do not want any further correspondence.

Mr. BLAIN. Will the hon. gentleman give an explanation of this item, and state where the money is to be expended ?

Mr. HYMAN. This is a general item that is always taken by the department to provide for cases of emergency, such as injury to a wharf caused by a storm. The department have felt that they should have at their disposal a general sum with which work of that kind can be proceeded with at once.

Mr. BLAIN. The hon. minister will remember that I brought to his attention some repairs which are required at Port Credit, and I would like to know whether any of this vote will be available for a purpose of that kind ?

Mr. HYMAN. If it were a small work it would be. If I understood the conversation we had the other day, it was in regard to some dredging we had at Port Credit. The matter has been pressed upon the attention of the department by numerous residents of the locality in addition to the hon. gentleman himself. The vote out of which that work can be done is not included in this particular item. This vote relates to repairs to wharfs, &c. The work which the hon. gentleman asked me to have done could be done out of the general vote for dredging if a dredge were available.

Mr. BLAIN. There is a vote of that character ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes.

Ontario—Honora—wharf, $8,000.

Mr. BLAIN. We will ask the hon. gentleman to give us some explanation of that ?

Mr. HYMAN. This work is under contract, which was entered into on the 22nd February, 1904. The amount of the contract is $9,000.

Mr. BLAIN. What county is it in ?

Mr. HYMAN. Algoma.

At Six o'clock, committee took recess.

After Recess.

Committee resumed at Eight o'clock.

Ontario—Kingsville—filling superstructure of extension of breakwater with stone ballast, $4,000.

Mr. HYMAN. The engineer has recommended that more good could be accomplished if a certain portion of this vote were used for dredging, and I think that should be the understanding.

Mr. SPROULE. Amend your resolution by adding the word 'dredging.'

Mr. HYMAN. Yes, but if it is mentioned in 'Hansard' I think it should be sufficient.

Resolution amended by adding the words 'and dredging.'

Ontario—Lake Temiscaming wharfs, $3,500.

Mr. SPROULE. Will this complete ?

Mr. HYMAN. There is a further amount in the supplementary estimates of $3,000 which will complete the work. There has been $12,000 expended and $3,500 is asked for in these estimates.

Ontario—Little Current—improvement of northern steamboat channel in Georgian Bay, $15,000.

Mr. HYMAN. This is a revote and there is a further amount in the supplementary estimates of $10,000. This is to dredge the channel to afford twenty foot navigation.

Mr. SPROULE. Is it being done by contract or by the government dredge ?

Mr. HYMAN. It is done in the usual way ; the department has a dredge there for which they are paying so much an hour.

Ontario—Meaford harbour—new breakwater, pier, $15,000.

Mr. SPROULE. You did not use any money for this work last year. I think you have another item in the supplementaries as well as this.

Mr. HYMAN. We have $10,000 in the supplementaries. I am informed by the officers of the department that there was some delay in the preparation of the plans and specifications, but tenders have now been advertised for and received. I am not sure whether the contract has been completed or not, but the lowest tender was from Messrs. Kastner and Porter, of Wiarton for $59,500.

Mr. SPROULE. I heard they got the contract.

Mr. HYMAN. I am not sure if it has passed Council yet.

Mr. SPROULE. How much will it cost when completed ?

Mr. HYMAN. The total estimated cost is $65,800 ; the contract is $59,500, and then the contingencies have to be considered. This is a revote of $15,000, and with the $10,000 in the supplementaries it leaves $25,000 available during the year.

Mr. SPROULE. Will the work be gone on with right away.

Mr. HYMAN. Yes, the work will be completed at once.

Ontario—Midland harbour—wharf, $15,000.

Mr. BENNETT. What is the amount of the contract here ?

Mr. HYMAN. $19,492, the contractor is A. A. Macdonald of Hamilton.

Mr. BENNETT. When will it be completed ?

Mr. HYMAN. The contract calls for completion this fall.

Ontario — Midland harbour improvements, $20,000.

Mr. BENNETT. Have any amounts been paid for private dredging done at Midland?

Mr. HYMAN. The work done in 1902-3 by the Owen Sound Dredging and Construction Company amounted to $16,700.

Mr. BENNETT. The government pays the Owen Sound Company for the work they do, but has the government been recouped by any persons for whom dredging was done which might be of a private nature ?

Mr. HYMAN. I have been informed that there has been no money paid back.

Ontario—Owen Sound harbour—dredging and pile protection work, $14,000.

Mr. SPROULE. What is this item for ?

Mr. HYMAN. This is to provide twenty feet of water in the channel. They are working at the usual price of $8 an hour.

Mr. SPROULE. You have something in the supplementaries for that as well.

Mr. HYMAN. That is for the continuation of the same work.

Ontario—Pembroke—wharf, $43,000.

Mr. HYMAN. This contract was let some time ago but the department only recently decided upon the location, and it is only two weeks ago the contractor was ordered to start the work, so that it may be necessary to extend the time.

Mr. BLAIN. Does the government own the property ?

Mr. HYMAN. The wharf is at the foot of a public street.

Mr. BLAIN. What would be the total cost ?

Mr. HYMAN. The total estimate is $43,000 and the contract was a shade under $42,000.

Mr. BLAIN. Will that be the total cost?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes, except that there is always something added for contingencies.

Mr. BLAIN. Who is the contractor ?

Mr. HYMAN. W. J. Poupore.

Ontario—Penetanguishene, dredging and other improvements, $22,000.

Mr. BENNETT. What is the nature of the other improvements ?

Mr. HYMAN. Repairing the reformatory lighthouse pier, which amounts to $1,200.

Mr. BENNETT. Why does the Dominion government do repairs on property of the local government ?

Mr. HYMAN. This is done on account of the lighthouse being a Dominion institution.

Ontario—Port Perry, dredging harbour, $2,200.

Mr. HYMAN. This vote was not expended last year owing to the difficulty of obtaining a dredge.

Mr. VROOMAN. I would like to ask the minister in reference to the dam at Lindsay, which is on the same water as Port Perry. I understand that the minister sent his engineer to inspect that dam, which is a very old work and needs to be repaired. In fact, I think he will find that the report of his officer recommends a new dam. I anticipated that there would be an item in the estimates for this work, but I have not been able to discover it.

Mr. HYMAN. I think there is a report of the engineer in the department. I will have it looked up, and if I find that the survey has not been sufficient, I shall be glad to have another officer examine the work and report.

Mr. BLAIN. Is Port Perry a government-owned harbour ?

Mr. HYMAN. There is no information in the department to the effect that it is not. Has the hon. gentleman any information to that effect ?

Mr. BLAIN. I have no information that would be valuable to the committee, but my understanding of it is that it belongs to two private individuals. I assumed that the minister would know.

Mr. HYMAN. I have no information here in regard to the matter. The hon. gentleman will understand that there is a difference between an expenditure on a harbour in the way of dredging, although it may not be a government-owned harbour, and an expenditure on a wharf which is not owned by the government. The hon. gentleman has possibly in mind some dredging in regard to another harbour on Lake Ontario. I can only say that I shall be glad to take that matter up, and the only reason why I understand the dredging has not been done there before, has been the difficulty in getting a dredge.

Ontario—Port Stanley—dredging, $4,000.

Mr. HYMAN. The harbour of Port Stanley in the past two years has become a very important harbour, serving from 150,000 to 300,000 in the western part of Ontario. For a number of years this harbour was in possession of the railway, and the policy of the railway was not to open it but rather to keep it closed. The harbour is now being transferred to the Dominion government, and coal, which was formerly brought around by Detroit, is now brought across the lakes by ferries which run winter and summer to Port Stanley. So that it has become a very important harbour in this respect, besides being a harbour of refuge. In addition to this vote, there is a further amount of $25,000 in the supplementary estimates for Port Stanley.

Ontario—River Otonabee, dredging at Peterborough, $6,000.

Mr. HYMAN. This work is being proceeded with by a small dredge rented from the Department of Railways and Canals.

Mr. VROOMAN. Is that below the town?

Mr. HYMAN. No, directly at the town.

Ontario—Rondeau harbour—improvements to piers and dredging at entrance, $16,000.

Mr. HYMAN. The explanation which I gave in regard to Port Stanley harbour practically applies to this harbour. Port Stanley, Rondeau and Port Burwell are practically the only harbours on that part of the lake. At the present time there is no harbour of refuge in that vicinity at all. Until the last two or three years the shipping which came to Rondeau harbour was not very large; but at present the amount of coal coming there from across the lake has very greatly increased, and the improvement of the harbour results in cheapening the supply of coal all through western Ontario.

Mr. SPROULE. Is this by contract?

Mr. HYMAN. By a dredge owned by the department.

Ontario—Sarnia, dredging, $12,000.

Mr. HYMAN. This is being done by contract.

Mr. SHERRITT. What is the cost per yard?

Mr. HYMAN. This dredge is hired by the hour at the rate of $12 per hour, and the price is based on the amount of work which the dredge is capable of doing in a given number of hours. It is based on a price of 13⅓ cents a yard. In order to earn the $12 per hour, this dredge has to remove 800 yards. In the case of a dredge to which we pay $8 per hour, the price is based on 600 yards.

Mr. BELL. Are they actually paid by the yard?

Mr. HYMAN. No, but the day's pay is based on the price of 13⅓ cents per yard.

Mr. BELL Suppose they do not take out the quantity, are they paid the full price?

Mr. HYMAN. The difficulty is sometimes that material may change and that is taken into consideration. There is a government inspector on each dredge. They are very closely watched, and often the full amount is not paid. We must have a certificate from the inspector that the dredge does the full amount of work.

Ontario—Sault Ste. Marie—harbour improvements, including dredging of approaches, $30,000.

Mr. HYMAN. This work is under contract. The contractor is Joseph Battle of Thorold. The estimated cost of the work is $71,500.

Mr. SPROULE. What harbour improvements are you making there?

Mr. HYMAN. This includes the extension of the government wharf and dredging, so as to have twenty feet at low water.

Mr. SPROULE. Is that dredging the approaches to the harbour or the channel.

Mr. HYMAN. The channel entering the canal. This is for dredging from the head of the wharf to the channel. The actual work in the channel comes under the Department of Railways and Canals. This is for the extension of the wharf and dredging twenty feet from the wharf to the channel.

Mr. SPROULE. When that is done, will it allow the largest boats, such as the Canadian Pacific Railway boats, to call there?

Mr. HYMAN. This will provide twenty feet of water. Any boat that can go through the canal will be able to approach the wharf, which they all cannot do now.

Mr. SPROULE. Will this complete the work? It seems to me from the outlines there, that there is a great deal of dredging to be done before boats could get with safety to the wharf.

Mr. HYMAN. This will not complete the wharf. One of the objects of extending the wharf was to lessen the amount of dredging. This amount will cover all that can be expended during the present year, and a further amount of about $39,000 will be required to complete.

Mr. BELL. What length is the wharf extension ?

Mr. HYMAN. Two hundred and fifty feet.

Mr. SPROULE. Is there anything in the supplementaries for this ?

Mr. HYMAN. No, the engineer of the department reports that this $30,000 will cover the expenditure until another vote is taken. This is done by contract.

Mr. SPROULE. By the yard ?

Mr. HYMAN. This is a bulk sum including the dredging and the extension of the wharf.

Ontario—Southampton—improvement of harbour, $10,000.

Mr. HYMAN. I was going to explain to the committee that the estimate for this work is quite large, and I am going to move that this item be struck out. The reason is that, in the opinion of the engineers of the department, the money can be more advantageously spent in other portions of the harbour, and in the supplementaries will be found an item of $10,000 for improvements which could not be spent under this vote.

Mr. BELL. How does it appear in the supplementaries ?

Mr. HYMAN. As Saugeen river improvements. We thought it better to take a vote for Saugeen river so that there would be no misunderstanding.

Mr. HALLIDAY. This is the fourth session that this item has appeared in the estimates. It seems to be held there as bait or something of that kind without any intention of spending the money. Three years ago we were told that this money would be spent at once.

Mr. HYMAN. Well, we are perfectly frank about it, and I am moving to strike it out on the report of the engineers.

Motion agreed to, and item struck out.

Ontario—Spanish River, dredging, $10,000.

Mr. HYMAN. The difficulty here is that we have not so far been able to find a dredge available to do the work.

Mr. SPROULE. Have you any assurance of being able to get a dredge this coming summer ?

Mr. HYMAN. It is almost impossible to get dredges to take small contracts of this kind, owing to the cost of towing, loss of time, &c., in going from place to place.

Mr. SPROULE. I can appreciate the difficulty of getting dredges, because I know there is a dearth of them in that district, but at the same time, I object to the principle of taking money from year to year, unless the government are satisfied they can go on with the work because otherwise it becomes a temptation and is used in favour of the government at election times. I have often heard the hon. member for South Oxford (Sir Richard Cartwright) in the strongest language denounce this practice, and I think he was justified in doing it. I agreed with him and still entertain that opinion. We have these items by the dozen, money voted year after year and not spent. When they ask for money they should make an effort to spend it, and they should not ask for it unless they are in a position to go on with the work.

Mr. HYMAN. The hon. gentleman is perfectly right in saying there are certain amounts in the estimates, but the great difficulty is with such a large number of works to get them all going. It takes a considerable amount of time in the department to prepare the plans, but the engineers lose no time in their work. But, of course there must be delay in a case of this kind where a dredge is not available.

Mr. SHERRITT. What amount of money has been expended since last year ?

Mr. HYMAN. $5,000 the whole vote.

Mr. SHERRITT. What is the condition of the work there now ?

Mr. HYMAN. I am informed the work is completed.

Mr. SHERRITT. Last session the member representing that riding objected to this vote, I am not sure he moved to strike it out but he opposed the item and the Minister of Public Works promised this committee that no more money would be spent on this until he went up himself personally and investigated it. Could the acting minister inform the committee whether that promise has been carried out or not, whether the minister has himself gone up and investigated it ?

Mr. HYMAN. The department has simply employed sufficient labour to use the materials that were on the ground. It was felt that it would not be right after making an expenditure of that amount to let the material go to waste.

Mr. SHERRITT. We were well aware of that last year. But the matter has been brought before the committee last year, that the promoter of that work was not very reliable and that he had in some way misled this government. The Minister of Works agreed with this committee that under these circumstances, having been informed that the promoter was not reliable, and had made statements that were not at all likely to be correct, he himself would go up before the material was made use of and investigate. I shall read the minister's words with reference to the promoter last year. He said, referring to Mr. Cantin :

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This man is no doubt a good deal of the character the hon. gentleman (Mr. McEwen) spoke of. He seems to be able to live by his wits and to induce people to put money in schemes that have little foundation. I do not know him myself or anything about him except what I have heard in connection with this matter. He deceived a great many people into putting money into this scheme. It is stated now that a good many substantial people have taken hold of the work, and I think we might probably take a vote and spend it on the conditions as to whether they are going on to develop this place and the work will help to do so. Now that we have spent so much money we might go on.

This is the opinion given by the Minister of Public Works and after some further remarks by Mr. McEwen in opposition to the vote, the minister says :

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There has been over $10,000 expended on the work, but I am perfectly willing, if the item passes, to have an inquiry into all the circumstances, and if this work is not in the public interest, I will not finish it. The chief engineer of the department says that there are ten or eleven feet of water there, and I cannot understand how he could have made such a report if there is none.

Mr. McEwen said on that occasion :

As far as I am personally concerned, if the hon. minister will go up there and see for himself, I am willing to let the item drop.

That is the hon. member's statement. Now we will see what the hon. minister says further :

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am perfectly willing to go up there and consult the hon. members of the riding before anything further is done.

In another place he says, in answer to Mr. McEwen :

If the hon. gentleman thinks that I should go instead of the chief engineer, I am quite willing to do so.

Now, there was a straight promise to go up there and investigate. He knew the circumstances very well, there has been nothing revealed since. All the material was lying there at the time, there has been no other material furnished since that discussion took place. The minister promised that he would go there before he spent a dollar of money. Under these circumstances we allowed the matter to pass, being satisfied that if he went up there and investigated for himself he would not spend a dollar of money. Now, it is unnecessary for me to say that the people up there look with a good deal of disfavour upon the government spending public money there. If the people in that part of the country asked for that amount of money, do you think the member representing that riding would get up here on the floor of the House and oppose it, as he did oppose it in every possible way ? Do you think that I would risk my reputation amongst the people there by opposing it, as I live only a short distance away from the work ? The thing is very unpopular there. It is an extraordinary state of affairs that, notwithstanding a promise made in the House by the Minister of Public Works, this work should go on and money should be spent there. To my mind it is an awful state of affairs if we cannot believe a minister's statement.

Mr. HYMAN. Oh, I think that is rather hard.

Mr. SHERRITT. I will take that back—if we cannot rely upon the promise of the minister to go up there and see for himself.

Mr. HYMAN. Under ordinary circumstances possibly the hon. gentleman might be justified in making these rather harsh comments. But I would like him to remember that the Minister of Public Works has not been in good health for some time. The hon. gentleman knows that for the last two or three months he has been entirely unable to give serious attention to his department, and under these circumstances I think the hon. gentleman might have been a little milder in his criticism. When the minister gave that promise I am quite sure he intended to carry it out and to go there and see this work. Unfortunately for the last three or four weeks he has been obliged to be away a good deal of the time. I do not remember myself authorizing the work, but I remember the condition of affairs was brought to my attention, and I was told that this amount of material was lying there, and that the engineer had reported that it was in the interest of the country that the work should be proceeded with instead of allowing the material to go to waste. I know there has been considerable criticism of this vote, but it must be remembered that at that time a large amount of money had been spent and a considerable amount of material was on the ground.

Mr. SHERRITT. I have no doubt that the minister at the time intended to carry out his promise made in the House. But it seems to me if he could not go himself he might have sent some one. When he stated in the House that he would not spend any more money without discussing the matter with the member for the riding—of course I do not represent the riding—I thought that he might at least have given us some idea of his intention. I assure you again, Mr. Chairman, that the people in that locality look upon this expenditure as a throw-away of money. May I ask the minister what is the condition of the harbour there now, what depth of water is there now ?

Mr. HYMAN. I am informed there is from ten to eleven feet at the outer end of the pier.

Mr. SPROULE. The year before last the same question was discussed in this House at length, and the then Minister of Public Works told us most positively that he would have a report made upon that harbour, and if the circumstances were found to be as alleged no money would be spent. Still he went on and spent the money. When we came back to this House that minister is out and another takes his place.

Mr. HYMAN. The minister is not out, he is ill.

Mr. SPROULE. I am correct, I say the minister who gave this promise to the House was out and another was in his place when we came back again. Now we have the same discussion over again. More money was asked for and the money which was voted the year before last was spent, notwithstanding the promise that had been made. Another sum was voted last year, and we had a similar promise made by this minister, and we come back this year to find that the money is spent again, and that the minister has not carried out his word. So we are being jollied along from year to year, promises are made which are not kept, and in the meantime the money is being squandered.

Mr. BLAIN. When was this money expended, the $5,000 that has been expended since the last session of parliament ?

Mr. HYMAN. In the months of April, May and June of this year.

Mr. BLAIN. Well, I think this is a very strange manner of conducting public business. In addition to what my hon. friend from North Middlesex (Mr. Sherritt) has read, I want to read a statement from the member for South Huron (Mr. McEwen). Last year, speaking about the promise that was given to the government when they first proposed to construct this work, the hon. gentleman said :

> They have not yet established a manufactory of any kind or any other thing that would require a wharf.

Further on he says :

> As to the wharf, there has been $10,000 spent, and I am very sorry to say that the money has been unwisely spent. I could not approve of this expenditure, because nine out of ten of my constituents believe that the money has been unwisely expended.

Now, here is a statement from the hon. gentleman who represents the county and is a supporter of the minister himself. Leaving out the fact that this gentleman was sufficiently influential with the government to get the work commenced, I will just read what the member for South Huron says about the matter :

> What surprises me is that a man of his kind should be able to mislead this government into spending money where there is no need for it at the present time or for years to come.

It is a little unfortunate that the minister and his supporters should expend money in so many places where it is not required, even according to the statements of the hon. gentleman who represents the county, and leave other places unprovided for where the money is required in the public interest. According to the testimony of the hon. gentleman on that side of the House who represents the county, it appears that the government were misled by this gentleman into an expenditure of $10,000. The hon. gentleman stood up in his place at the last session and condemned the government for undertaking this work, and as my hon. friend from East Grey has pointed out, we had a promise from the hon. Minister of Public Works two years ago, and another promise last year that no further money would be expended until an examination of the work had taken place, but in the face of the statement of the hon. gentleman representing the county that the wharf is of no value, that it is not required now, that it will not be required for years to come, and in face of the further statement in reference to the $10,000 that has been expended we are asked to put $5,000 more into the work. The hon. member who represents the county said last year :

> As to the wharf there has been $10,000 spent, and I am very sorry to say that the money has been unwisely spent. There are seven or eight cribs on the shore, and one crib in two or three feet of water, and that is the whole result of the expenditure of $10,000.

In the face of that statement, the hon. gentleman and his supporters will go into that county and spend $5,000 more of public money, having before them the bald statement of the hon. gentleman representing that county that the wharf is of no value to the people, and knowing that the promises given by the gentleman who induced the government to spend this $10,000 have not been fulfilled. Then the hon. minister appeals to the electors again by saying : We will consider it further and we will, perhaps, spend some more money.

Mr. HYMAN. I am sure the hon. gentleman does not wish to put words in my mouth that I did not utter.

Mr. BLAIN. I do not wish to misrepresent the hon. gentleman, but I thought his remarks suggested something in reference to what might take place in the fall or at some time in the near future. I think this is a wasteful expenditure of money. There can be no justification for it whatever. In face of the statement made by the hon. gentleman who represents the county on May 19, 1903, the government send a representative up there, and they say to the department: Go on and spend the money. No matter about the $10,000; let it go. We have evidence that the wharf is not required, and we have the evidence from the county representative that the wharf is of no value to the residents there. Although this work will be of no use to the public, it will be a monument to an extravagant government which has money to spend in counties where a work is not required and which is neglecting some other counties where money wisely expended would be in the public interest. I hope the hon. minister will learn new lessons of economy since he has taken charge of the department. I hope that next year he will not venture to bring such illustrations of economic government before the people of this country as this one is.

Ontario—Thessalon—breakwater, $15,000.

Mr. HYMAN. Under contract.

Mr. SPROULE. What is the nature of the work?

Mr. HYMAN. The building of a pier. The contract amounts to $19,000. The total probable cost will be about $21,000. There was voted in the main estimates $15,000, and in the supplementary estimates there will be $5,500 to complete.

Mr. SPROULE. Who has the contract?

Mr. HYMAN. Boyle Brothers, Sault Ste. Marie.

Ontario—Thornbury, dredging, $3,550.

Mr. BELL. How is that dredging done?

Mr. HYMAN. It is done by a hired dredge.

Mr. SPROULE. I notice that you did not do this dredging last year. I suppose that was because you could not get a dredge?

Mr. HYMAN. That was the reason.

Mr. SPROULE. This happens to be in my riding, and of course I know the necessities of the case better than those who are not acquainted with the locality.

Mr. HYMAN. If the hon. gentleman can suggest where we can get a dredge, I shall be very glad to do the work.

Mr. SPROULE. If I could I would be very glad to do so, but I do not know where the dredges are located. I do know the necessities of the people of Thornbury.

Mr. BENNETT. I was not here when the Collingwood item was under consideration, but I would like to ask the hon. minister if he can state to the committee what is the valuation of the dry-dock at Collingwood?

Mr. BLAIN. The information was promised to me to-night.

Mr. HYMAN. I have not the information, but I will be very glad to bring down a memorandum to-morrow.

Ontario—Toronto harbour—works at eastern entrance, &c., $28,000.

Mr. OSLER. Before this item is adopted, I would like to draw the attention of the hon. minister to a paragraph I see in the Ottawa correspondence of the Toronto 'News,' which bears upon it. It is as follows:

> In the main estimates brought down some months ago there is an item of $28,000 for Toronto harbour works at the eastern entrance, and, according to the departmental officials, this item will cover dredging generally, repairs to the two piers at the eastern gap and repairs to the breakwater from the eastern entrance westward. No further item appears in the supplementaries. The department is advised by its own engineers and by other engineers who have studied the question, that the ultimate solution of the protection of the island must be found in the construction of a continuous breakwater from end to end of the island. For the present, however, the government does not seem disposed to invite the necessary vote. The present item, which may be reached in discussion to-day, is not thought to be large enough to permit any enlargements of the breakwater. That portion of it which will be applied to the breakwater will be for repairs done.

I would like to ask the hon. minister what amount has already been expended for repairs under that item of $28,000?

Mr. HYMAN. The expenditure from the 1st of July to the 31st December, 1903, was $13,041, and up to the 30th of June it is estimated that the expenditure will have been $10,900. That will be about $24,000, and there is $10,000 of a revote. We are asking for a further amount of $18,000.

Mr. OSLER. Toronto harbour is one of the most important harbours in Canada outside of a sea harbour. I suppose it is next to Montreal, if it is not ahead of Montreal. It is a work which is entirely under the control of the Dominion government. It has, without doubt, been neglected, and year after year damage is being done to the harbour and to the island, which, if not looked after now, will entail later on an expenditure of tens of thousands of dollars, where thousands of dollars will suffice now. The hon. minister knows that this year there has been exceptionally high water. Perhaps it is at high water mark in all our lakes. While I cannot speak from having visited the eastern end of the island this year, I can state, having visited the western end of the island, that the water is so high that the washing away of the island this year is more serious than it has been for ten years past. I think that in justice to the important harbour of Toronto the hon. minister should see that the matter is reported upon at once, and that a necessary amount is provided in the supplementary estimates to cover any expenditure that may be absolutely necessary for this year. According to the statement in the 'News' there is only $18,000 available.

Mr. HYMAN. I will have to disclaim responsibility for the statements of the 'News,' there is $28,000 to expend.

Mr. OSLER. Toronto harbour is so important that the government should not fail to grant sufficient money to keep it in proper condition. I am sure that the neglect of the government to expend a comparatively small sum of money immediately, would entail the expenditure of ten times as much in the future.

Mr. HYMAN. I have listened attentively to what the hon. gentleman (Mr. Osler) has said with regard to Toronto harbour, but I cannot agree with him that Toronto harbour has been altogether neglected. The government of Canada up to date has spent over one million and a quarter dollars upon the harbour. There is now an item of $28,000 in the estimates which is for the works at the eastern entrance. There have been very strong representations made of late, particularly during the last few days that it is imperative that a certain extension should be made to the breakwater for the protection of the island. The total amount asked for is a very large sum, but I understand there are likely to be some small additional supplementary estimates, and I can assure the hon. gentleman that I shall have a report from the engineer in Toronto at once and have a sum placed in these estimates; if there are further estimates, and I am almost sure there will be. There will be an item which will extend the breakwater, possibly not to the full extent asked, but sufficient for the present.

Mr. OSLER. I thank the minister for giving this matter his attention. I would remind him that I am not asking for money to be spent on the harbour itself, but for protection works on the island. When the late Minitser of Public Works visited Toronto, and when he was asked for a large expenditure on the harbour, he stated that he would not recommend such an expenditure until the city of Toronto took charge of the sewerage in the harbour. Unlike most of the gentlemen who met the minister, I agreed with him that the city should look after the sewerage and that then the government should look after the harbour. The expenditure necessary in this case is on the island itself outside the harbour, and unless the government see to it, serious consequences will follow from neglect.

Mr. KEMP. The minister (Mr. Hyman) is under a misapprehension when he says that one and a half million dollars have been spent on Toronto harbour by the government of this country. Not one single dollar has been spent by any government on Toronto harbour. The money he refers to has been spent upon the island and upon the canal through which vessels come into the harbour. Toronto harbour not only accommodates a great deal of commerce but it is a harbour of refuge as well, and some years ago it was considered good policy to have a channel built through the eastern end of the island. Some years ago the city of Toronto paid to the government $100,000 and were discharged for all time to come from any obligation regarding that entrance. The government expenditure has been on works to prevent the washing away of the southern part of the island, and on that eastern entrance. The revenue derived from the shipping in the Toronto harbour has been devoted to improving the harbour from time to time by the harbour commissioners of Toronto, but I repeat that there never has been a dollar of public money expended upon the harbour itself. Three or four years ago the government appointed an engineer to consult with an engineer appointed by the city of Toronto in regard to the diversion of the Don, and the improvement of the harbour. The government engineer agreed with the engineer representing the city that certain works ought be carried out by the government, and the government, four years ago, put a sum of $75,000 in the estimates but no money was spent. This appropriation was put in the estimates for the purpose of diverting the Don river which flows into the eastern end of the harbour and which river carries with it during the spring freshets, immense alluvial deposits from the surrounding country north and east, which have gradually filled up the beautiful harbour of Toronto which used to have from fifteen to thirty feet of water, but which now has only five or six feet in certain places. The government have been appealed to by deputation after deputation. It was pointed out that the city of Toronto could in no sense be held responsible for the filling up the harbour by these alluvial deposits, and that the government should undertake the work of diverting the Don river to prevent this occurring. Within this last year or two the government has seen fit to drop that item from the estimates. Why, it is impossible for me to say; after their own engineer reported in favour of this work. I contend that the government is under a moral obligation to the city of Toronto to go on with that work and save the harbour. I do not want the impression to go forth that the government of Canada have spent public money on the Toronto harbour in any form, because it is not so.

Mr. HYMAN. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Kemp) says he does not know why the government have dropped this item of $75,000 from the estimates, but he has been answered by his colleague (Mr. Osler) who said he agreed with the late Minister of Public Works that there should be no expenditure on the harbour until the city took charge of the sewerage.

Mr. OSLER. That was another item.

Mr. HYMAN. It was for the same work. I repeat what I said in answer to the hon. gentleman (Mr. Osler) that I shall have the extension of the breakwater looked into immediately, and will provide, if there are further supplementary estimates, a sufficient amount to undertake that work.

Mr. OSLER. I think there is more work required there. I understand that there has been considerable damage done west of the breakwater on the eastern portion of the island, and that another year of high water and storm from the east may cause further material damage.

Mr. HYMAN. I will have the report of the hon. gentleman's remarks in 'Hansard' with regard to that portion of the work, and the engineer will examine into it at the same time.

Mr. KEMP. I wish to state that about a year ago the city council passed a resolution to the effect that they would accept responsibility for the sewerage, provided the government would do the work they had proposed to do according to the estimates submitted to parliament. So far as the city is concerned, I think it has relieved itself from any responsibility by passing that resolution. I would like to have it understood that these are two distinct questions. The question now before the committee is that of the breakwater at the eastern gap, for which the government is responsible, and for which the city of Toronto, by paying $100,000 some years ago, was relieved of responsibility. The other matter is one which we have been agitating for years; and when money is being lavished on dredging, wharfs and other public works in small places all over the country, we do not understand how it is that the great city of Toronto, which has more freight to ship than any other place in this country, which ships much more freight than the city of Montreal, is so much neglected by the government. I would like the minister to tell us why the government neglects its duty in regard to the diversion of the Don in order that the deposits from that river may be diverted to Lake Ontario and not fill up the harbour in the future as it has done in the past.

Mr. HYMAN. I understand that it was only last year that the city council took this ground. So that whatever blame may be attached to the government could only be from last year.

Mr. KEMP. It was previous to last session.

Mr. HYMAN. The government always took the stand that until the sewage was disposed of, it would be impossible for the government to do any work on the harbour. Personally I thoroughly appreciate the importance of the work and the importance of Toronto as a shipping point. I am only acting minister, but so far as I can, I will take pleasure in affording any expenditure possible to improve the shipping facilities at the port of Toronto; and if the city council are prepared to enter into negotiations with the government for the disposal of the sewage in accordance with the plan laid down by the former Minister of Public Works, I shall be glad to take up the matter at any time.

Mr. KEMP. Will the acting minister have any objection to reinstate in the supplementary estimates the sum which his predecessors committed themselves to for the straightening of the Don river?

Mr. HYMAN. I am not prepared to make that promise.

Mr. KEMP. Why was it taken out?

Mr. HYMAN. I think negotiations should first take place between the city and the government. It is a matter that would have to be discussed first departmentally and afterwards with my colleagues in the government.

Mr. KEMP. I admit that. At the same time, the work need not be gone on with until a proper arrangement is come to with the city. The sum might be placed in the estimates conditional on such an arrangemet being made.

Mr. HYMAN. The only fear I have in regard to a matter of that kind is this. If we should put the $75,000 into the estimates and if by the end of the year the government and the city were not able to come to any arrangement, I have no doubt that the government would be charged with having put it in for political purposes. Therefore I would not like to pledge myself, because I might get into trouble.

Mr. KEMP. The $75,000 is only a drop in the bucket when the government are trying to find means of spending the tremendous surplus which they have; and, inasmuch as the hon. gentleman's predecessors committed themselves to this policy, I think he ought to be willing to reinstate the amount in the estimates, subject to a satisfactory arrangement being arrived at with the city of Toronto. In reference to the vote having a political tinge, the members from Toronto are willing to assume any responsibility in that respect. I do not think the government need be afraid of being criticised for an expenditure of this kind in an important harbour like Toronto, in view of the tremendous amount of money being spent in Montreal, at Three Rivers, on the deep water wharf at Sorel, and on public works at other small places. If the minister reconsiders the matter, I think he will see that there is not much in that argument.

Mr. HYMAN. I presume that the hon. gentleman knows whereof he is speaking when he says that the city of Toronto passed such a resolution. Can he tell me whether it has been communicated to the Department of Public Works ?

Mr. KEMP. Yes, and a deputation waited on the Minister of Public Works last year in reference to it. It was passed for the purpose of being communicated to the government.

Mr. HYMAN. Can the hon. gentleman remember the nature of the resolution—that the city desired to enter into negotiations with the government in regard to the matter ?

Mr. KEMP. The city assumed all responsibility in regard to the sewage and the removal of it.

Mr. HYMAN. It would seem to me that the department would require something more than that, to guard against the harbour being filled up again with sewage. I think the hon. member should be satisfied with what I say, that I shall be glad to have the matter taken up immediately. with regard to reinserting the item in the estimates, I am not prepared to say off-hand that I will do so. I think it is a matter that ought to be preceded by negotiations between the city and the department.

Mr. KEMP. I think the first item placed in the estimates was $75,000, and that in the following year $50,000 was inserted. I think it will be satisfactory if the minister will reinstate the sum of $50,000 in the supplementary estimates, subject to a satisfactory arrangement being arrived at with the city. If a satisfactory arrangement is not arrived at, then the amount drops.

Mr. CLARKE. If the minister would come up there himself, he could see the work that is required to be done. My colleague from East Toronto has stated the case correctly. Many years ago a celebrated engineer, Captain Eads, visited Toronto, and recommended the construction of a breakwater to separate Ashbridge bay from the harbour. That has not given satisfaction, for the reason stated by my hon. colleague. The freshets carry a large amount of alluvial matter down the Don river to the eastern part of the harbour. The result is that there are scores of acres where the water is not more than two or three feet deep. The appropriation of $75,000 taken some years ago was intended, I think, to be expended in diverting the channel of the Don towards the southeast, so that the alluvial deposits would go to fill up Ashbridge's bay, which would be a great improvement. Instead of that, the debris flows into Toronto harbour, constantly filling it up.

The expenditures which have been made and which are charged against the Toronto harbour were incurred in order to protect the island, and in work on the eastern gap, As has been pointed out, on account of the water being so high in the lake, especially this year, great damage has been and is being done to the southern part of the island. But with regard to the harbour itself, there cannot be two opinions as to the necessity of a large expenditure being made to protect it ; and if the minister could find time to make a personal visit, he would be able to judge of the condition of the harbour for himself. As to the work of disposing of the sewage, that work is done by the city. There is a large quantity of sewage taken out of Toronto bay to-day at the expense of the corporation, which should be taken out at the expense of the government. As my hon. friend from East Toronto (Mr. Kemp) has pointed out, the sewage deposit is increased by the silt which is carried down by the river Don. The slips are continually being cleansed by the city dredges, and the engineer's estimates of the quantities dredged out would convince the hon. gentleman that the city of Toronto is not shirking in any way the obligation devolving upon it. This work of cleansing and deepening the harbour is necessitated by the action of the Don river, which has been declared a navigable stream, and over which the city of Toronto exercises no jurisdiction. Therefore the work of removing the silt brought down by the Don, which is being performed by the city of Toronto, is not work the cost of doing which ought to be borne by that municipality. The government has expended a large sum in protecting the eastern end of the harbour, but that work will be practically of no value until steps are taken to remove from the harbour proper the accretions brought down by the river Don to the eastern end from year to year. If the minister would read the report of his officers, endorsed by the report of Mr. Jennings, he would see the reasonableness of the request made ; and no charge of political design on the city will be made against him if he will only comply with our reasonable request and put a substantial sum in the supplementaries to carry the desired work out. And if he should not be satisfied, after an examination and inspection, with the arrangement which the city of Toronto has made, then he need not spend a dollar. That proposition is so reasonable, coupled with the cordial invitation to the minister to come and see for himself, that I do not see how he can decline to come. The harbour is being steadily destroyed. Captain Bonicastle, fifty years ago, in prophetic words declared that that would be the inevitable result if the Don were allowed to continue pouring its flood into the harbour. The city undertook to pay the sum that was considered necessary and reasonable, namely the sum of $100,000, as its share of the work of preserving Toronto island. It provided that sum and handed it over to the Dominion. Inroads are being made on the island by the waters of Lake Ontario ; and it will not be argued that the municipality of Toronto is bound to protect an island two or three miles out in the lake from the depredations caused by the heavy storms from the east and south-east. The situation is a unique one. If the government desire to perserve the harbour, they must protect the island, and that can only be done as the result of an intelligent and systematic cooperation of the government with the municipality. A personal examination of the situation will convince my hon. friend that the statements of my colleague are absolutely within the mark and that it is necessary something should be done.

Mr. HYMAN. As regards the protection of the island, I would recommend strongly on my colleagues that a sufficient sum for the extension of the breakwater be put into any further supplementary estimates. With regard to the other question, I shall be glad to take the opportunity, either as acting Minister of Public Works or member of the cabinet, to visit Toronto and become acquainted with the whole work. I should be glad to have the opportunity of personally inspecting the whole work, but I must make a decision at present, as far as I am concerned. Until negotiations are entered into with the city of Toronto and the propositions made by the city have found favour with the engineers of the department, or whatever engineer the matter may be referred to, the matter will have to remain in abeyance. A work of that character, leading to a very large expenditure, had better be proceeded with, in the first place, by negotiations between the city of Toronto and the department, and I shall be glad to study the whole question from every standpoint.

Mr. OSLER. The time is very short within which the last supplementaries may be presented.

Mr. HYMAN. I will have it done by telegraph to-morrow.

Mr. CLARKE. I have a copy of the resolution of the council, also of Mr. Jennings's report, and a copy of the by-law passed authorizing the raising of $100,000 for the protection of the island ; but as the documents are voluminous I shall not undertake to read them. But I assure the hon. minister that the city of Toronto has expressed its willingness again and again to do its share of the work, and is actually doing more than its share. It is dredging all the slips into which the sewers flow, and that work has been going on continuously for twenty years. According to the statement of the Toronto city engineer, the quantity of material taken out of the harbour by the city dredges at the expense of the city is much greater than the quantity deposited by the sewers every year. The condition of the Toronto harbour, especially the eastern part, is deplorable. Scores of acres of the harbour are filled up now as the result of the deposits brought down by the Don river. The citizens and the Board of Trade have urged the government to have the necessary work done. The department issued instructions to one of its engineers to make a report, in conjunction with Mr. W. T. Jennings, late city engineer of Toronto, who is thoroughly familiar with the ground and with all the conditions in the harbour. The hon. gentleman has that report in his department now, and I think a perusal of it would enable him to possess himself of knowledge as to the requirements of the harbour. The harbour of Toronto is growing in importance, its shipping is increasing, and as the hon. gentleman knows it is the only harbour of refuge on the north shore of Lake Ontario. It is a most important harbour and the necessary expenditure should be made.

Mr. HYMAN. I may say that I have asked the engineer to bring the resolution of the council to my attention. At the same time I shall look over the reports in the department and if I cannot find it I shall avail myself of the hon. gentleman's offer.

Mr. KEMP. On April 16, 1903, the matter was brought up in the House. The discussion on the question was not very long as it was thought by the deputation which came down to wait on the Minister of Public Works that he was so deeply impressed with the justice of the case that he would bring in, in the supplementary estimates, an additional sum for the purpose we are discussing. The Minister of Public Works, as reported on page 1433 of 'Hansard' said in regard to Toronto harbour and this question we are discussing now, the diversion of the Don.

This has no connection with the matter to which the Toronto deputation made reference recently.

He was referring to the matter of $14,000 in the estimates of last year for works at the eastern entrance.

This work has no connection with the matter to which the Toronto deputation made reference recently. I had a communication from the council this week pointing out that this work is very pressing.

So that the Minister of Public Works has this resolution and this memorial from the council. The deputation waited on him in his room in this building. I was present and I am sorry there was not placed in the supplementary estimates last year a sum for this purpose, but we expected there would be this year. The deputation, I believe, has not visited the minister this year. I do not know why for one thing the mayor is away in Europe at present. I really think the proposition to put a sum in the supplementaries, contingent on a satisfactory arrangement being arrived at with the city as to sewage disposal, is a fair proposition, and I am surprised that the minister does not accede to it.

Mr. HYMAN. It is only fair to say that this matter has been brought to our attention by His Worship the Mayor of Toronto. I would ask if this communication to which reference was made in the remarks of the Minister of Public Works was before or after the passing of the resolution by the city council of Toronto assuming responsibility for the sewage.

Mr. KEMP. This resolution was passed prior to the coming of the deputation. Council passed a resolution in regard to the sewage previous to this time.

Mr. HYMAN. Did they pass the resolution to which the hon. gentleman referred in which he says, the council declared that they were prepared to take the responsibility for the sewage.

Mr. KEMP. This was passed previous to the time the deputation waited on the Minister of Public Works.

Mr. HYMAN. Then it was two years ago.

Mr. KEMP. I do not know the date of the resolution. I have the full information about it, but the resolution was passed previous to the coming of the deputation.

Mr. CLARKE. The resolutions were passed a year ago. There have been deputations down here again and again, as the hon. gentleman is aware, about this matter, and I would like to emphasize the fact that the corporation of Toronto has been dredging these slips for 15 or 20 years in order to enable vessels to come in. The hon. gentleman, I am sure, knows the Yonge street slip, the main slip of the city, where the Niagara boats and the island ferries ply from. The city dredges that slip continuously, and also dredges elsewhere when it is required. The city is doing all of that work now, and there need be no apprehension of the city's desire to shirk any of its obligations, because it has never done so. The city has not only cleansed the slips of the material deposited by the sewers, but has absolutely dredged along the front the material brought down by the Don. I say that it is not fair to hold the city of Toronto responsible for the disposal of the silt brought down by the Don, and yet it is this silt which is filling the harbour and causing all the trouble. As long as the mouth of the Don is allowed to discharge as at present, into the harbour, the difficulty will continue. The Don must be diverted. There was a sum of $75,000 placed in the estimates some years ago for this work, but no expenditure was made. The estimate was provided three or four years ago, I think.

Ontario—Wiarton wharf, $13,000.

Mr. INGRAM. As this is the last item in the Ontario estimates for harbours, I would like to ask the minister what is included under a vote for harbour improvements. Does it include the extension of piers, dredging or any work done around the harbour ?

Mr. HYMAN. The broad words 'harbour improvements' include dredging, repairs to piers or an extension to piers.

Mr. INGRAM. I asked a question the other day with respect to the expenditure at Port Stanley. The hon. gentleman answered that the total expenditure had been something like $9,000. In 1893 there was an item of $12,000 for the extension of the piers. In 1894, $5,000 was voted for the improvement of the harbour, so that I cannot reconcile these facts with the statements made in reply to my questions. It may be that my question was not full enough and that for that reason I did not make myself quite understood.

Mr. HYMAN. The hon. gentleman has quoted the amount voted, not the expenditure ? Which does he mean ?

Mr. INGRAM. That is what I want to arrive at. I am anxious to get the correct information. I asked the amount of the expenditure and I thought there might be some mistake in the reply. Am I to understand that of the $12,000 voted in 1893, only about $1,000 was expended in that year. I would ask the hon. gentleman to look the matter up.

Mr. HYMAN. I will have the hon. gentleman's remarks in 'Hansard' and I can look the matter up.

Mr. CLARKE. What is being done in the way of additional groining on the south side of the island at Toronto ?

Mr. HYMAN. There is nothing in the present estimates for the south side.

Mr. CLARKE. The protection given by the piers at that part of the island is limited. It extends only a certain distance west, and the damage is done to the island proper west of the point where the influence of the piers ceases.

Mr. HYMAN. I understand there was a good deal of that work done last year.

Mr. CLARKE. I would like to suggest to the hon. gentleman that additional groins would be of immense service in protecting the south shore of the island.

Mr. HYMAN. I do not think there have been any representations made to the department up to the present moment in regard to this particular expenditure.

Mr. OSLER. The minister might ask that to be reported upon at the same time as the other matter. He might find out if anything is really necessary in reference to that.

Mr. HYMAN. I shall include that.

Mr. BLAIN. Might I ask the minister where that item for general dredging in the province of Ontario will be found, in the supplementaries.

Mr. HYMAN. It is on page 56—dredging, Ontario and Quebec. We have not reached it yet.

Mr. BLAIN. I would like at the same time a summary of the expenditures that I asked about.

Mr. HYMAN. I will send it over to the hon. gentleman.

Mr. BLAIN. And will the hon. gentleman be good enough to furnish us with a summary of the expenditures in counties in the other provinces as well some time before the supplementary estimates come up for discussion ?

Mr. HYMAN. That would involve a considerable amount of work, as the items do not appear in the estimates. The hon. gentleman will understand that when these estimates are going through the engineer has to be here and cannot well attend to other matters. But I will endeavour to furnish the hon. gentleman with the Nova Scotia one, which he asked for.

Mr. BLAIN. There are perhaps some other officers of the department who can prepare a statement of this kind. Perhaps the hon. gentleman would have it ready for next week, when the supplementaries come up.

Manitoba—Harbours, rivers and bridges—general repairs and improvements, $3,000.

Mr. BOYD. Will the minister explain what that is for ?

Mr. HYMAN. This is a general vote for emergency cases. If anything happens to a harbour or a public work in consequence of a storm or other accident, this amount will be available for immediate use.

Mr. BOYD. Last session I asked the minister to put something in the estimates for the Assiniboine river. There are a great many people living on that river, and I think something should be done to make it navigable. Some hundreds of miles of it can be made navigable. The minister assured me he would make some surveys and ascertain what was necessary to be done. Does the minister propose to do anything in that respect ?

Mr. HYMAN. I am informed that no report has been made up to the present time.

Mr. BOYD. Will the minister say whether he will have anything done in that regard ?

Mr. HYMAN. Instructions have been given, but the report has not yet been received.

Manitoba—lowering of Lake Dauphin, $2,500.

Mr. BOYD. What has been done in regard to that ?

Mr. HYMAN. $2,500 was spent last year in dredging. I do not think any decision has yet been come to as to how far the lake should be lowered. The work will be proceeded with from year to year, and we will see what the effect is.

British Columbia—Anderson and Kennedy lakes—clearing outlets, $2,500.

Mr. EARLE. Will this sum complete the work ?

Mr. HYMAN. This item is to continue the work.

Mr. EARLE. Does the minister know how much more is required to complete ?

Mr. HYMAN. I could not tell at the moment.

Mr. EARLE. My object in asking is this : A considerable sum is eaten up in sending a foreman there, in overseers' expenses and small matters like that, so that unless a considerable amount is voted there will not be much left. I think that it would be advisable to grant a larger amount so as to complete the work.

Mr. RALPH SMITH. I understand from the report of the British Columbia engineer that this sum will complete the work.

British Columbia—Fraser river—improvements of ship channel, protection works, &c., $25,000.

Mr. EARLE. Could the minister give us any information as to the condition of that protection work that has been going on for some years, whether the work is found to be effective, whether it will be continued from year to year, and also the amount that has been expended up to the present time ?

Mr. HYMAN. We will allow that item to stand until the engineer is back to give the information.

British Columbia—Fraser river, improvement of ship channel, protection works, &c., $25,000.

Mr. HYMAN. If my hon. friend from Victoria (Mr. Earle) will renew his question I will be glad to give him the information.

Mr. EARLE. I would ask the hon. minister if he would give me what information he has in regard to the protection works being carried on in the Fraser river for many years, the amount expended up to the present time, whether the work has been effective, and whether it is work which will have to be continued from year to year indefinitely.

Mr. HYMAN. The amount that has been expended up to the 31st December, 1903, is $600,000. I am informed by the officers of the department that this vote is asked for the purpose of making provision for maintaining, renewing and strengthening the existing works constructed for the improvement of the ship channel in the winter river. I am also told that it will be necessary from year to year to have certain votes available for the continuance of this work.

Mr. EARLE. There is nothing for new work this year ?

Mr. HYMAN. No.

Mr. LENNOX. I wish to bring to the attention of the hon. minister a matter in reference to the dry-dock at Vancouver. I understand that the government have entered into or are about to enter into an arrangement with the Vancouver Dry-dock and Shipping Company for the building of a dry-dock at Vancouver. I would like to know if the arrangements have been completed.

Mr. HYMAN. I understand that the arrangements have been completed with the Vancouver Dry-dock Company.

Mr. LENNOX. Could the hon. minister inform me whether any work has been done on the dry-dock yet ?

Mr. HYMAN. No work has been done as yet. The agreement is not completed inasmuch as the company have not signed it. The Order in Council has, I understand, been passed, but it has not reached the stage where it has been completed by the signing of the company.

Mr. LENNOX. Does the government propose to complete the arrangement with the company ?

Mr. HYMAN. I understand so.

Mr. LENNOX. Does the hon. minister understand that there has been a protest made by the Jackson Company, which I think is called the Vancouver Engineering Works, represented particularly by Mr. Jackson ? Has the hon. minister had occasion to look at the protest entered on behalf of that company ?

Mr. HYMAN. The matter has not been brought to my attention since I have been acting in the department.

Mr. LENNOX. I propose to discuss this matter and I would like to have a good deal of information from the hon. gentleman in reference to it as I proceed. There are one or two other members of the House who propose to have something to say on it. But, I think it would probably be more convenient if one item were allowed to stand over for that discussion. I think probably my hon. friend the leader of the opposition (Mr. R. L. Borden) also wishes to say something on it.

Mr. HYMAN. If the hon. gentleman will discuss this item on the supplementary estimates I will have an opportunity of looking over the papers in the meantime and I will give the hon gentleman whatever information he may require.

Mr. LENNOX. I think it might be more convenient to have the discussion at some other time, but I would not like to leave it over for the supplementary estimates because probably there will not be very much discussion on those supplementaries, but if the hon. minister will allow this matter to stand until his estimates come up again we could go on and discuss it. I will go on with the discussion now if he will give me the information I require.

Mr. HYMAN. I am not prepared to give the hon. gentleman the information. The matter has not been brought to my attention at all since I have been in the department. If the hon. gentleman will accept my suggestion I will be very glad, if he will give me a memorandum now of the particular documents he requires, to bring down the information when we are discussing the supplementary estimates.

Mr. LENNOX. I want to have an item left over if the hon. minister is not prepared to discuss the matter now.

Mr. HYMAN. This is not an item upon which the matter can be properly discussed. The item that is under discussion is the 'Fraser river, improvement of ship channel and protection works.'

Mr. LENNOX. The hon. minister knows there is a convenient way of discussing it rather than to bring it up on going into Committee of Supply. If the item is allowed to stand until to-morrow I am quite satisfied to leave it until then.

Mr. HYMAN. I do not wish to be discourteous to the hon. gentleman, but he can hardly expect me to be possessed of the information by to-morrow. If I am asked to go on with my estimates to-morrow I will have no opportunity of becoming possessed of the information. The hon. gentleman will have plenty of opportunities for discussing the matter. Leave it over until next week.

Mr. EARLE. Before we leave the votes for British Columbia, I wish to ask whether the city of Victoria will be able to get the use of the dredge 'King Edward' again this summer, to complete the work which was commenced last year ?

Mr. HYMAN. The 'King Edward' is on the Fraser river at the present time. Of course the hon. gentleman knows that this dredge has done a great amount of work in Victoria and the work at the mouth of the Fraser river is very important. It is almost impossible sometimes to decide as to which work a dredge will be put on, and this matter, I will have to discuss with the officers of the department before I can give a distinct answer.

Mr. EARLE. I think there was an understanding that during the season of high-water when she could not work very well on the Fraser river she might be put to work at Victoria. This is work which can be carried on by a dredge of the character of the 'King Edward,' and it certainly is work that is very badly needed.

Mr. HYMAN. I am sorry I cannot give the hon. gentleman any definite answer. The 'King Edward' was in Victoria for a long period and did a large quantity of work there. The work on the Fraser river is said to be very important, and I would not like to send the 'King Edward' to Victoria and go to the trouble of towing her back and forth.

Mr. EARLE. I understand that if she could be spared to work at Victoria for a short time, the city would be quite willing to pay the expense of towage.

Mr. HYMAN. I understand that, but there is the loss of time.

Mr. EARLE. It is only a day.

Mr. HYMAN. A day each way.

Mr. EARLE. The work at Victoria is very important.

Mr. HYMAN. Yes, but so is the work on the Fraser river, and there is a protest against sending her from that work.

Mr. EARLE. There is a protest from our side too.

Mr. HYMAN. There are two protests, but I suppose possession is nine points of the law.

Mr. EARLE. She is a British Columbia dredge and she belongs to Victoria as much as to any part of the province. There is no reason why her services should be confined to the Fraser river continuously. We only want her for a month or six weeks and we could utilize her during the high water in June and July when she could not work to advantage on the Fraser river.

Lewes and Yukon Rivers, improvements, $15,000.

Mr. HYMAN. This vote is placed to the credit of the Yukon commissioner and expended by him on the advice of the steamboat companies for the improvement of navigation.

Mr. SPROULE. You allow the Yukon Commissioner to make the expenditure and then draw upon the government ?

Mr. HYMAN. The vouchers are of course sent there.

Mr. SPROULE. How many dredges have you altogether and how are they distributed ?

Mr. HYMAN. The maritime provinces have seven ; Quebec, three ; Ontario, four ; Manitoba, two ; British Columbia, two.

Mr. PUTTEE. Is the snag-boat for the Red river under construction ?

Mr. HYMAN. No ; the intention is to call for tenders immediately.

New hydraulic dredge for maritime provinces, $50,000.

Mr. LEFURGEY. Is this dredge completed yet ?

Mr. HYMAN. It is afloat, but is has not yet been despatched to its work.

Mr. WILMOT. When will the dredge be ready ?

Mr. HYMAN. I am in hopes that the dredge will be ready for work this fall and sent down to the lower provinces early in the spring.

Mr. WILMOT. I make the inquiry because there is an obstruction at the entrance to St. John harbour which requires to be dredged in order to enable a large vessel to go through. When will the dredge be ready to work ?

Mr. HYMAN. It is hoped that the dredge may be despatched early in the spring.

Mr. LEFURGEY. What work will she be put at ?

Mr. HYMAN. I cannot say at present what work will be considered the most important.

New dredge for Prince Edward Island, $25,000.

Mr. HYMAN. The contract has not yet been signed, but tenders have been received and have been reported to Council.

Mr. SPROULE. What is the estimated cost of this dredge ?

Mr. HYMAN. In the neighbourhood of $50,000.

New dredging plant, Ontario and Quebec, $75,000.

Mr. HYMAN. This is the estimated sum required this year for a new dredge, two new scows, new tug, light draught tug, swing engines and boiler, and four yawl boats. It is practically a renewal of a dredge owned by the department at the present time.

Mr. MORIN. Is that dredge to be used on the Ottawa river ?

Mr. HYMAN. It has not yet been decided where the dredge will be used. That will have to be considered by the department when the dredge is ready.

Mr. BLAIN. Where is the work being done on this dredge ?

Mr. HYMAN. The intention of the department is to have the hull brought to Ottawa and the work done in our own shipyard at the foot of the locks.

Mr. SPROULE. Are you building anything in the shipyard at Three Rivers ?

Mr. HYMAN. I suppose the hon. gentleman means the Sorel shipyard. That is not under control of this department.

Mr. SPROULE. Are any of these dredges being built there ?

Mr. HYMAN. The dredge 'Fielding' is being built there—the new hydraulic dredge for the maritime provinces.

Mr. BLAIN. What is the total cost of the 'Fielding' dredge ?

Mr. HYMAN. In the neighbourhood of $500,000.

Mr. BLAIN. When will it be ready for operation ?

Mr. HYMAN. I answered that question when the item was under discussion. It is hoped that the 'Fielding' will be completed so that she can be tested this fall and be ready for work in the spring.

Mr. SPROULE. Where is the dredge 'Laurier' or the dredge 'Tarte' working at the present time ?

Mr. HYMAN. The dredge 'Tarte' is not working. She is being repaired. She is one of the dredges belonging to the ship channel and is not under the charge of this department.

Mr. SPROULE. Let us understand how these dredges are being built. Are we building dredges under the various departments? I always understood that they were built under the Public Works Department.

Mr. HYMAN. Not necessarily. When the work of the ship channel was transferred to the Department of Marine and Fisheries, as the Order in Council which was read here fully set forth, all the plant belonging to the ship channel was transferred to that department, including the dredge 'Tarte' and six other dredges.

Mr. SPROULE. I understand that the plant might be transferred to the Marine Department after it was built by the Public Works Department. I did not understand that the Marine Department was to build its own plant, as well as the Public Works.

Mr. HYMAN. I do not know what the policy of the Marine and Fisheries may be in regard to these dredges. That will be entirely under his own control. So far as this department is concerned, I do not know that any settled policy has been adopted. When the question of building a dredge comes up, the department adopts the most economical way of building it.

Mr. SPROULE. All I can say is that that explanation is simply moonshine. The hon. gentleman has been long enough in this House to know better. I say it has been the policy in the past to have the dredges built under the Public Works Department. We have never yet to my knowledge had any intimation that the Marine and Fisheries Department was building a dredge.

Mr. HYMAN. I cannot answer for the policy which my hon. colleague, the Minister of Marine and Fisheries will adopt. The Department of Public Works is responsible for the building of its own dredges, and whatever dredges are built under the control of this department will be built in the most economical way. I am unable to give information with regard to what policy may be adopted by the Department of Marine and Fisheries regarding its dredges.

Mr. SPROULE. We ought to have some one who can speak for the government, and let us know what the policy of the government is.

Mr. HYMAN. If the hon. gentleman will renew his question when the leader of the government is here, he will get the information he seeks. I am only authorized to speak as the acting Minister of Public Works, and cannot speak for my colleagues.

Mr. EARLE. In what department are the workshops at Sorel ?

Mr. HYMAN. In the Department of Marine and Fisheries.

Mr. EARLE. If you want anything done at these workshops, you would have to go to that department ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes. The Department of Public Works would ask the Department of Marine and Fisheries for an estimate of the cost, and the work would be done by the Department of Marine and Fisheries.

Mr. EARLE. I cannot understand why these workshops should not have remained in the Department of Public Works. That would not have prevented the Department of Marine and Fisheries having its dredges built there.

Mr. HYMAN. The only difference is that instead of the Department of Marine having to come to the Department of Public Works to have its dredges constructed in the Sorel workshops, the Department of Public Works will have to go to the Department of Marine. The department under whose control these workshops are will do the work.

Mr. WILSON. I would suggest then that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries be sent for, so that he may give the explanation which the acting Minister of Public Works is unable to give.

Mr. HYMAN. I can give all the information regarding this particular item, but I cannot go beyond it and inform the House what policy the Department of Marine and Fisheries is going to adopt with regard to the building of its own dredges. I cannot give information as to the policy of building dredges, generally, because that is in the province of the Department of Marine and Fisheries and not of mine. But I can give all the information required regarding the building of dredges for the department of which I am now the acting minister.

Mr. WILSON. That is the difficulty we are in when these estimates come up and there is only one minister present. We ought to have present such ministers as are able to give the information we seek with regard to any item under discussion.

Mr. SPROULE. When the ex-Minister of Public Works (Mr. Tarte) was in office, he gave us all the information we required with regard to the dredging plant, and he did so because that plant was under the Public Works Department. He told us how many men were employed, how many dredges were being built, what kind of dredges, and so on. But to-day, when there is an item before us for the building of certain dredges, and we desire to know what dredges are being built and all the details concerning them, we are told by the minister that he does not know anything at all about it.

Mr. HYMAN. I did not tell the hon. gentleman that I did not know anything about it.

Mr. SPROULE. When I asked about what was being done at the Sorel workshops, the hon. gentleman said he did not know anything about it.

Mr. HYMAN. Neither do I, because that is not in my department. But I am prepared, perfectly prepared, to give all the information required with regard to this item. I cannot, however, give information with regard to the general policy of building dredges, because that matter has been transferred to the Marine and Fisheries Department, and is no longer under mine.

Mr. SPROULE. I am asking with regard to the general policy of the government in carrying on the public works of this country. I first started by asking if it was the policy of the government to build dredges in the different provinces in which they were entitled to operate. That policy was adopted two years ago, when a question arose as to the advisability of building in British Columbia the dredges that were intended to operate in that province. We contended that it was better these dredges should be built there, and the government finally decided to do that, as far as that could be carried out. At that time the Sorel shipyards were under the control of the Public Works Department, and it was declared that any dredging plant which could not be built in the outlying provinces would be built in those shipyards. We are now desiring to get information as to what is being done in pursuance of that policy.

Mr. HENDERSON. It seems to me that the recent changes in the position of the various departments is not at all in the interests of economy in this country. The only advantage that I can conceive as having been accomplished has been the transfer of power from the control of the minister representing the province of Ontaro to that of a minister representing the province of Quebec, simply exploiting one department to give more patronage and more prestige to the minister of another department. Now we find that the Marine Department wants dredges, the Public Works Department wants dredges. It may be that some of the others will want dredges but we will speak of these two only. The Minister of Public Works had his shops at Sorel, he had all his staff, his engineers conversant with the work of building dredges, and was prepared to construct all the dredges necessary for the work of the country. Now what do we find ? We will have to have another set of workshops similar to those at Sorel and another full compliment of men at some other point to construct dredges, another set of engineers, a professional staff as well as a staff of ordinary workmen. The effect will be that the cost will be double, there will be no advantage to the country beyond simply gratifying the ambition of one minister who thinks he ought to control the prestige of half the country. I do say the minister has made a terrible mistake when he permitted that patronage to slip away from him. I will not say he permitted it because if we are to judge from appearances and from the fact that the minister has not appeared in this House from the time the exploitation was made, it was not done with his consent, and it would seem that he was still protesting and will still protest. I am glad he had the courage to do so, and I think the people of this country will protest against the exploitation of one department for the benefit of another. I am sure there is no gentleman in this House on either side who will not see the impropriety of what took place during this past year with regard to the division of the departments. It can result only in additional expense and no benefit whatever can accrue to the country.

New dredging plant, Manitoba, self-propelling snag boat, $10,000.

Mr. HYMAN. It is intended to build this up there if possible.

New dredging plant, British Columbia, to replace snag boat 'Samson' and dredge 'Mud Lark,' $10,000.

Mr. EARLE. Is that amount supposed to replace both of these ?

Mr. HYMAN. There is a further amount in the supplementary estimates.

Mr. EARLE. How much ?

Mr. HYMAN. There is an amount of $80,000 in the supplementary estimates.

Mr. EARLE. Is that supposed to cover the work ?

Mr. HYMAN. That is the amount that will likely be paid out on the contracts that will be made during the fiscal year until the department is able to ask a further vote of the House.

Mr. BLAIN. What will the total cost be ?

Mr. HYMAN. The total cost is estimated at $169,000.

New dredging plant, British Columbia, one tug and two hopper scows, $36,000.

Mr. BLAIN. Will this be the total cost ?

Mr. HYMAN. This is estimated to be the total cost.

New dredging plant generally, $60,000.

Mr. HYMAN. That is all over the Dominion.

Mr. SPROULE. Is that for repairs or building over or what ? It is hardly a new dredging plant ?

Mr. HYMAN. This is not so much for the building of dredges as for the building of vessels accessory to dredges, such as scows, &c. Accidents often happen, and it is from this vote that all of that is taken. Everything that is necessary as accessory to the dredges.

Dredging, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, $115,000.

Mr. HYMAN. This is for the running expenses of the plant belonging to the government in the maritime provinces.

Mr. WILLIAM ROCHE (Halifax). Last year the Hon. Mr. Sutherland made a promise that at the first favourable opportunity when dredges could be secured some of the harbours in Halifax county would be favoured with a visit from one of those dredges. There are several public wharfs in Halifax county which require a small amount of dredging to make them effective, not a large amount but a small amount, and I would ask the minister if he would give us an engagement that at the very earliest opportunity, say next summer, he will endeavour to assist these harbours in that way. The dredging required is not extensive and a small amount would make these harbours effective.

Mr. HYMAN. I can only say that the large dredge 'The Fielding' which is now being constructed at Sorel, as soon as she is completed will greatly relieve the situation. She is very large and powerful, supposed to be the most powerful dredge in the world. When she is ready the department will have better and greater opportunities of performing works such as the hon. gentleman refers to. There has been a great deal of difficulty in the maritime provinces, the amount of dredging required is very great and in some harbours it is almost continuous, so that the Department of Public Works have considerable difficulty at all times in securing sufficient dredges. I can only promise to give every consideration possible to Halifax.

Mr. WM. ROSS (Victoria). May I ask the hon. minister when that will be ?

Mr. HYMAN. I have already answered that question.

Mr. WM. ROSS (Victoria). We have been promised that dredge in the province of Nova Scotia for the last three or four years.

Mr. KAULBACH. The promise to which the hon. member for Victoria has referred I think is one that is in his memory with relation to the county of Lunenburg. The member for that county has been applying for years and nothing has been done. The promise has always been made that the dredge would be completed, and that when she was in service Lunenburg would be recognized the first of all. The general trade of the place is being interfered with for the want of this improvement. There is no county that requires the dredge more than the county I have the honour to represent. There is more shipping there than in any other part of the province, Halifax not excepted.

Mr. WM. ROCHE (Halifax). I may say in connection with the observations of the minister that in Halifax county we do not require a large amount of dredging, but if we had one of the small dredges at an early period, she could do a large amount of work that would be of great benefit.

Mr. HYMAN. I did not intend to say that it was not the intention of the department to have the 'Fielding' do the work to which he refers, because I hope that she will soon be able to take the place of some of the other dredges.

Mr. WILMOT. I would like to know if any dredging is being done on the St. John river in New Brunswick.

Mr. HYMAN. There is some being done at the present time in St. John. Representations have been made to the department with regard to dredging the St. John river, and we are endeavouring to do our best to meet the wishes of the people of that river. The dredge 'New Brunswick' is now at work there, where there are a number of wharfs that require a small amount of dredging. I cannot tell at which particular wharf she is working at the present time, but she is engaged doing work that has been asked for by the Navigation Company and by the people of the city.

Mr. KAULBACH. There are a number of dredges employed in the province of Nova Scotia doing work that is less needed than that I referred to a moment ago. A small dredge will do for some of these harbours equally as well as a larger one. I would urge that this work be looked after at the earliest possible moment, as the trade and interests of Lunenburg as a county are suffering. A number of vessels are compelled to go to Halifax and discharge there and then reship their cargoes of salt, for the want of dredging in the harbours of Lunenburg, Bridgewater and Mahone Bay.

Mr. HYMAN. I am sorry that I cannot make the hon. gentleman any definite promise in regard to the matter. As a matter of fact there are two dredges doing work in Nova Scotia. When we have the dredge 'Fielding' at our disposal, we hope to relieve these dredges that are now there from some of the work they are doing, and then we shall be glad to send them somewhere eise.

Mr. KAULBACH. Why should favour be shown to those counties where the work is less needed than in my county ?

Mr. HYMAN. I do not think the people of those counties where these dredges are working would agree with the hon. gentleman that his county needs the work more than theirs do.

Mr. KAULBACH. It can easily be ascertained that there is very little shipping in some places where the dredges have been employed for the last few years.

Mr. SPROULE. What has been the experience with the new suction dredge that was built, I mean the 'Tarte ?'

Mr. HYMAN. She was only working for a short period before meeting with an accident, but the report of the engineers' department is that just previous to the accident she was doing more work than had ever been performed by any other dredge in the world. That is a large statement, but it is borne out by the reports.

Mr. SPROULE. What happened to her ?

Mr. HYMAN. Her boiler burst. But before the accident she did 38,000 yards in one day. That is entirely beyond anything that has been accomplished before.

Mr. KAULBACH. All the more reason why she should be employed in the work I have referred to.

Mr. HYMAN. I am afraid the 'Tarte' would be found an unwieldy dredge to take down to Lunenburg. It is a suction dredge.

Mr. KAULBACH. We would be well satisfied to have her there until the other can be brought into service.

Dredging, Ontario and Quebec, $95,000.

Mr. BLAIN. Perhaps the hon. gentleman would give us an explanation about the Port Credit harbour that I brought up.

Mr. HYMAN. I cannot give any more explanation than I endeavoured to give a short time ago. The hon. gentleman has applied for a certain work to be done in Port Credit harbour. Is the dredging to be done at the mouth of the harbour ?

Mr. BLAIN. Yes.

Mr. HYMAN. If it is dredging at the mouth of the harbour, the work is so small that it would be useless to give it out by contract.

Mr. BLAIN. Is that likely to be done this summer or fall ? I do not wish to press the matter, I understand the hon. gentleman is doing his best. It is a long time since the promise was made, but I suppose it is almost impossible for him to meet the wishes of the people at all the harbours. With regard to its being a private harbour, it is owned by a private company. But the hon. gentleman must bear in mind that the government has expended money on that harbour in days gone by. In 1892, dredging was done there by the department that cost $1,214.75 ; in 1893 the work cost $592. Last year the minister sent an acting engineer to examine the work, and he reported what was required in the way of repairs :

The following is an estimate of work required :—

West side, 275 lineal feet of close pile work at $15 per foot..	$4,125
East side, 390 lineal feet of close pile work at $15 per foot..	5,850
Dredging, 14,000 cubic yards at 15 cents per yard..	2,100
General repairs to piers..	1,000
	$13,075

The hon. minister will notice that there was an estimate of $2,100 for dredging a small proportion of the whole amount required. I would like to draw the hon. gentleman's attention to the fact that this is an important harbour. It is a natural harbour, there is a great deal of traffic between Toronto and Hamilton and this harbour is necessary as a harbour of refuge. I would further draw his attention to the fact that there are two large manufacturing establishments at this place, one large starch work employing a great many hands and another, a pressed brick work, which is now in operation and which is likely to employ an increased number of hands. In addition I may say, that the appropriation, if properly expended, would serve very many other citizens in that locality in respect to getting in coal supplies, a commodity which is very important in the province of Ontario at the present time. If that harbour were put in proper shape vessels could come in with coal and the farmers and citizens generally in that neighbourhood would be able to purchase their coal at a very much cheaper rate than they can now, being compelled to bring it in by rail. I do not wish to press the matter further. I have introduced it at every session during this parliament. The government, I think, have made an effort in the shape of promises and I am quite sure the promises have been honestly made but there does seem to be a difficulty in securing sufficient dredges to meet a case of this kind. May I ask the hon. minister if he has a dredge working in the harbour of Toronto or of Hamilton ?

Mr. HYMAN. There is no dredge working at Toronto but there is a dredge engaged in some large work in Hamilton.

Mr. BLAIN. May we expect that possibly during this summer something will be done ? I may say that the longer the delay the greater will be the work that will be necessary. In the petition that was presented to the government from this section last year it was pointed out that :

> The entrance to the harbour is almost filled with sand, making it impossible for vessels with a draught of 4 or 5 feet to enter.

I would therefore draw the attention of the hon. minister to the fact that the longer the delay the greater will be the amount of work necessary, and that possibly the estimate given by the engineer last year of $2,100, if the work is left for another year, will require to be doubled. The hon. minister will see the importance of securing a dredge as soon as possible in order that the citizens of that section of the country may be served by a proper appropriation for the prosecution of this work.

Mr. HYMAN. The petition to which the hon. gentleman refers was brought to the attention of the department and there have been numerous requests made in regard to this work which the hon. gentleman has so forcibly brought to the attention of the committee. It will be the duty of the department to give its attention to the matter, but in the absence of any available dredge it is entirely impossible for me to make such a promise as he suggests. I can only hope that circumstances will intervene that will permit this dredging to be done.

Mr. BLAIN. Do I understand that as soon as this dredge is available the hon. gentleman will give it his attention ?

Mr. HYMAN. As soon as the dredge is available I will give it my serious attention.

Dredging, British Columbia, $35,000.

Mr. EARLE. Before we leave the question of dredging in the west there is a matter that I would like to call to the attention of the hon. Minister of Public Works, as I understand the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Mr. Préfontaine) is to leave in a few days for British Columbia. Dredging in the inner harbour of Victoria has been going on for a great many years. It is impossible to make the harbour capable of admitting the modern vessels that are coming to the port to-day, and the only port we had with sufficient water to accommodate these vessels has been taken over by the admiralty so that it has been left to a private individual to give us all the accommodation there is at the present time outside of the inner harbour for deep water vessels. That gentleman has spent half a million dollars but it has been found that the harbour which he has provided is not capable of accommodating the shipping which comes to the port. There has been a question discussed with regard to affording all the capacity that we require in the future by the building of a breakwater from the outer point or wharf to Brotchie Ledge. It is a question that ought to have been taken up some years ago as it is the only proposition within reasonable cost that would afford the extent of harbour that is required. I think there is a distance of about a thousand yards from the shore to Brotchie Ledge, which if connected by a breakwater would afford wharfage accommodation for any amount of shipping. I would ask the hon. minister to be kind enough to call the attention of his colleague, the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, now that he is going to pay a visit to British Columbia, to the matter, and ask him to look into it and report as to the feasibility of that scheme. It would cost very little to get a report upon the expense of construction from the engineer there because a very late and very close hydrographic survey has been made by Mr. Gamble, who was formerly the Dominion engineer in British Columbia, and all the data required to have an estimate made of the cost is obtainable without any expense whatever. If the hon. minister will be kind enough to have the attention of the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries called to that matter before he goes and if he will ask him to look into it while he is there it will be less expensive than if it were done at any other time.

Mr. HYMAN. I shall be very glad to call the attention of my colleague, the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries to the matter and ask him to look into it when he is visiting Victoria and I shall be very glad to get from him any report that he sees fit to make on his return. I am sure that if the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries enjoys his visit to Victoria as much as I did the last time I was there and if he receives all the courtesies with which I was favoured he will come back in a happy frame of mind and will be able to recommend to the department any expenditure that may be required to have the work done.

Public Works, slides and booms, St. Maurice district—improvements of boom works to facilitate the floating and storage of logs, &c., $40,000.

Mr. HYMAN. This is a revote. The intention is to proceed with the work of the construction of mooring piers and fly booms, the construction of a mooring pier at Ste. Flore, the construction of 600 feet of two fly booms at Les Hêtres, the construction of a mooring pier at Pointe à Bernard and other works and in addition to these there are the usual contingencies amounting in all to $40,000.

Mr. MORIN. I would like to ask the hon. minister if he knows what it costs the government to meet the running expenses of these booms and slides and what the revenue from them is ?

Mr. HYMAN. The gross revenue was $29,232 and the cost of running expenses $11,501, apart from construction charged to capital.

Mr. MORIN. In this case the government gets a surplus of revenue over expenditure which in most instances is not the case. I do not see why the government should go into the business of erecting booms and slides for lumbermen. I have been in the business for thirty years and whenever there was a boom or slide or dam to be built I did it myself. The government might as well build sawmills for the lumbermen.

Mr. HYMAN. This question has received the consideration of all governments since 1851 and it has been looked upon as a national expenditure. The revenue which is derived from it at the present time is very large. For the reason that this is a general work and that one individual for lack of capital or other reasons could not undertake it, it is undertaken by the government.

Roads and bridges.—To open a pack trail from Peace River to Pelly River, $25,000.

Mr. HYMAN. This is asked for by the mounted police, the intention being to open a trail so that in case of emergency, police might be sent from British Columbia to the Yukon.

Telegraph line between Deer Island, New Brunswick, and Eastport, Maine, $3,500.

Mr. GANONG. Is it the intention of the government to build that line this year ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. How many miles of government lines in Canada ?

Mr. HYMAN. Six thousand five hundred.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Is Prince Edward Island connected with the government telegraph system ?

Mr. HYMAN. No. I have a map here of all our telegraph lines which I will send to the hon. gentleman.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Thank you. Is it the intention to extend the Magdalen Island line to Cape Breton ?

Mr. HYMAN. It is now connected in an indirect way by St. Paul's island and is open for private business.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. How near does the line approach Prince Edward Island ?

Mr. HYMAN. The nearest point is Port Hood, a distance of about thirty miles.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What would it cost to extend that line to Prince Edward Island?

Mr. HYMAN. From $600 to $700 a knot.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. That would be about $20,000. What rates do you charge ?

Mr. HYMAN. They are based upon commercial rates.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. On a recent visit to Prince Edward Island, I found there was a great deal of dissatisfaction in regard to the existing telegraph service. The rates paid by the people are double the ordinary rates and from eight o'clock at night till eight o'clock in the morning telegraph communication with the rest of the world is cut off. Has the government under consideration the amelioration of the telegraphic conditions in Prince Edward Island, which apparently could be effected by a small expenditure in connecting the island with the government system at Port Hood ? That may be a suggestion which is impracticable. I am asking entirely for information.

Mr. HYMAN. The matter has been brought to the attention of the department, and there is an item in the supplementary estimates of $5,000, in addition to the $2,000, which was the amount in the estimates last year. I intend to ask the House to place that $5,000 at the disposal of the department, so that it may enter into negotiations with the companies with a view to obtaining an improved service for Prince Edward Island. That is the idea with which the amount is placed in the estimates. Whether it would prove a profitable undertaking for the government to construct the cable line, which the hon. gentleman suggests, is a matter that would have to be considered.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. No disposition was made of the sum voted last year ?

Mr. FIELDING. That is a sum voted annually, arising out of the terms of union, which require that we shall keep up telegraphic communication with Prince Edward Island; and the $2,000 a year is an old subsidy which the Dominion government was to pay. It is now proposed to increase the vote from $2,000 to $7,000, in the hope that we may come to a better arrangement with the companies. With regard to a cable between Port Hood and the island, that would hardly improve the communication in the way the island people most desire. What they are anxious to have is communication with the mainland and also with all parts of the upper provinces; and the hope is that some arrangement may be made with the present companies whereby, in consideration of some increased subsidy, they will reduce the rates and give the accommodation which the people require in regard to later hours.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. If you connect the island with Port Hood, would you not connect it with the telegraph system of Nova Scotia, and therefore with that of the continent?

Mr. FIELDING. Yes; but there is not much commercial business coming from the upper provinces by that way. I think all the commercial business would come by the Western Union or the Canadian Pacific Railway lines. However, all these matters are worthy of consideration. We all recognize the desirability of giving the island better accommodation, and if the House votes the minister the $5,000 which he is asking for, we hope that some arrangement can be made with the companies. If not, the question of the advisability of the government laying a cable will arise. That could best be done between the capes, and perhaps some working arrangement could be made with the companies.

Mr. R. L .BORDEN. Communication between the island and Port Hood would connect with the Western Union system. I do not know whether the Canadian Pacific Railway lines extend there or not.

Mr. FIELDING. They are not in that part of Cape Breton.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I recollect that there is some difference between the view of the contract with this cable company held by the people of the island and the view of those interested in the company. I do not remember the exact nature of the dispute. Possibly the Minister of Finance will recall it.

Mr. FIELDING. Yes. The original contract with the company, which was first known as the New York, Newfoundland and London Telegraph Company, which has since been absorbed or controlled by the Anglo-American, which is associated with the Western Union Company, provided that no other company should have the right to land a cable on Prince Edward Island. But from the point of view of the island people, and the point of view of the Canadian government, that is understood to apply entirely to the landing of a cable from Europe, and would not shut out the landing of a cable from Canada. The company takes a different view; but the parliament of Canada has rejected that view in the last year or two by granting a charter to another cable company, giving it the right to do business with Prince Edward Island, as well as with other parts of Canada. The question may possibly have to be decided in the courts; but the idea of the monopoly has never been acknowledged by the government of Canada.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I am glad that the matter has received the attention of the government. There will be an opportunity of discussing it again. May I ask the Minister of Public Works whether the extension of the government system of telegraphs is in pursuance of any definite plan, or whether it is made from time to time as immediate circumstances may seem to require?

Mr. HYMAN. I do not think there is any definite plan. Each case is considered as it comes up.

Mr. SPROULE. That was not the statement made a couple of years ago. We were told that there was a definite plan, and that the government telegraph system was being extended from time to time along the coast.

Mr. FIELDING. The general rule with regard to the government telegraph lines is that they shall be extended to portions of the coast which are isolated—in other words, to portions of Canada which ordinary commercial enterprise would hardly reach. That is the idea with which they were started, and we still cling to that idea. In pursuance of it, we are opening up the Yukon and the Labrador coast by telegraph. In a sparsely settled country there may be reasons, in the saving of life and property, for erecting telegraph lines.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. For example, between Port Hawkesbury and Port Hood there is a land line indicated. Is there a private line between these two points?

Mr. HYMAN. There is, I understand, a private line between those two points—the main line of the Western Union.

Telegraph lines—Quebec—Bersimis to Godbout telegraph line, P. Q., $6,000.

Mr. MORIN. What is the distance from Bersimis to Godbout?

Mr. HYMAN. About 90 miles.

Mr. MORIN. Is there a drive road or sleigh road between these points?

Mr. HYMAN. This is being built along the shore.

Telegraph lines—Quebec—to repair and improve roadway and increase operating facilities generally to eastward of Godbout, $1,000.

Mr. SPROULE: Is not that a provincial work ?

Mr. HYMAN. This is for the roadway on either side of the line for the purpose of the maintenance of the line and is not a highway.

Telegraph lines—Quebec—Anticosti island—renewal of line wire between Fox Bay and Becscie River, $3,000.

Mr. SPROULE. How is the Marconi system, to which we are giving $80,000 per year, working ?

Mr. HYMAN. Very satisfactorily, but this is a matter which comes under the Marine and Fisheries Department.

Miscellaneous—Public Works, arbitrations and awards, including payments authorized, notwithstanding anything to the contrary in the Civil Service Act, $5,000.

Mr. SPROULE. Is it because you are expecting to employ civil servants as arbitrators and pay them something in addition to their salaries that you put in this item ?

Mr. HYMAN. The expenditure last year on this vote was only $226.12. The vote is only taken in case any expenditure should be necessary.

Public Works—miscellaneous—surveys and inspections, $50,000.

Mr. SPROULE. You spent $50,000 last year. What was that for ?

Mr. HYMAN. It was spent on purchasing instruments and supplies necessary for surveys. The season was too late last year to start the survey, but the supplies were purchased and the parties are out in the field now.

Mr. SPROULE. How many is the party to consist of ?

Mr. HYMAN. Each party consists of ten or twelve—the ordinary survey party.

National Art Gallery, Ottawa, including the purchase of painting on the advice of a committee of artists, $7,500.

Mr. HYMAN. With the consent of the House $750 of this will be spent in having a painting of the late Chief Justice Armour.

Public Works Department—Chief Architect's office—salaries of architects, draughtsmen and clerks, notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act, $32,200.

Mr. SPROULE. Why do you put these words in 'notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act ?'

Mr. HYMAN. Because these are technical men, not put on the permanent list, and you could not get the services of such men if they had to come in for the small sum of $400.

Public Works Department—miscellaneous—to provide for one half of the salary of the departmental photographer, $800.

Mr. HYMAN.

Mr. SPROULE. In connection with this vote I would ask why it is that after the adoption of the amendment of last year providing for the placing of these temporary clerks upon the permanent list we still provide the same vote for the same number of employees.

Mr. FIELDING. The amendment of last year did not require that all these persons should not be put on the permanent list. It was an enabling Act which enabled the government to take a number of these temporary people and put them on the permanent list. It was not intended that they all should be put on but in many cases it was done. It was done in many cases but not universally.

Mr. SPROULE. I thought that all who had been employed for a certain number of years were placed on the permanent list ?

Mr. FIELDING. The intention was to take a number of the temporaries who were especially qualified and worthy and put them on the permanent list. I think in this case they were not put on.

Public Works Department—Miscellaneous—to provide for expenditure in connection with a transportation commission, $25,000.

Mr. SPROULE. We have no report from the Transportation Commission yet. They are visiting different parts of the country and I would suggest that they should make an annual report as they are conducting themselves as if their commission was a permanent commission.

Mr. HYMAN. I think the hon. gentleman's suggestion is a good one. There has been no final report yet and I shall communicate with the committee asking them for an interim report or a report which can be distributed with the report of the Public Works Department.

Land and cable telegraph lines, lower St. Lawrence and maritime provinces, including working expenses of vessels required for cable service, also maintenance of Marconi wireless telegraphy at Belle Isle, $80,000.

Mr. SPROULE. I thought this was in the Marine Department.

Mr. HYMAN. No. I am informed that this part of the system is working very well and very satisfactory. It is only twenty-two miles.

Mr. SPROULE. This was the sum which we gave them.

Mr. FIELDING. No, my hon. friend was mistaken. It happens to be an equal sum but the $80,000 which we gave to the Marconi Company for a station at Glace Bay is what my hon. friend is referring to. That $80,000 was a special vote that appeared only in one year. It was paid and the transaction was closed so far as our expenditure is concerned. The matter has not made all the progress we could desire, but the Marconi people tell us that the experiments are going on satisfactorily. They have been telling us that for many months, and we are not in a position to give much additional information on the subject. This, however, is a different matter, and is for maintenance of other telegraph service.

Quebec harbour improvements, $100,000.

Mr. HYMAN. This is under contract.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. When will it be completed ?

Mr. HYMAN. It is a large work, and the engineer informs me it will take 18 months anyway to complete it.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Is there a time fixed by the contract ?

Mr. HYMAN. A time is fixed by the contract, but the engineer is not prepared to say that it will be completed within the time. A great many difficulties have been met with in regard to dredging, &c., one way and another. I had the pleasure of seeing the work the other day, and I think the contractor has done very good work indeed.

Manitoba—St. Andrew's rapids improvements, Red river, $80,000.

Mr. PUTTEE. What position is that work in now ?

Mr. HYMAN. The engineer's department is looking into the whole question, but I have not yet had any report. They were up there about a month ago.

Mr. PUTTEE. Are you going to call for new tenders, or another contract ?

Mr. HYMAN. I have not yet got a report from the engineer ; when I do, I will take the matter into consideration.

Transportation facilities—lower division of Montreal harbour—improvements below St. Mary's current, $75,000.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. When will this work be completed ?

Mr. HYMAN. Probably it will be completed this fall, this vote is to complete.

Ontario—Port Colborne—harbour improvements, $85,000.

Mr. HYMAN. This work is under contract, which was let on the 8th of June, 1904, and calls for completion on the 30th of November, 1905.

Mr. BLAIN. Will the minister give us some explanation of the manner in which the money has been spent at Port Colborne?

Mr. HYMAN. All by contract. The main breakwater has been completed. This contract is for a further eastern breakwater.

Some resolutions reported.

Hon. W. S. FIELDING (Minister of Finance) moved the adjournment of the House.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What business do you propose to take up to-morrow ?

Mr. FIELDING. I understand an hon. gentleman opposite desires to move an amendment to supply ; therefore a motion to go into supply will be made in the morning. When that motion is disposed of, the Prime Minister and the Minister of Justice will have some estimates, then the Minister of Public Works.

Motion agreed to, House adjourned at 11.55 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FRIDAY, July 29, 1904.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Eleven o'clock.

ALIEN LABOUR ACT.

Hon. Sir WILLIAM MULOCK (Postmaster General) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 162) to consolidate and amend the Acts respecting Alien Labour.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Would the hon. gentleman be good enough to explain ?

Sir WILLIAM MULOCK. Mr. Speaker, although the Bill is entitled 'an Act to amend, consolidate and amend the Acts respecting Alien Labour,' it will be necessary to amend that title inasmuch as it is not a consolidation. The provisions of the present Bill are as follows :

One section of the Bill amends section 1 of the Alien Labour Act, 1897. That original section provides that it is an offence to import alien labour under contract. It was found that this provision could be easily evaded by the contract not being made abroad, and therefore it is proposed to strengthen the clause by making it an offence to import under a promise or offer of employment.

Another section containing a number of subsections provides machinery whereby employers may obtain judicial permission to import labour that cannot be procured in Canada. At present the spirit of the Act, so far as it is enforcible, is stringent, and it is represented that in many cases labour not procurable in Canada could not be lawfully imported. It is expedient that under these circumstances a measure should be adopted to meet such a situation so that there would be no inducement to persons in need of labour of a particular class to import illegally that class of labour. The machinery provided by this Bill contemplates an application to a judge for permission. That application will require to be published in the press and a hearing of the application can be conducted in the open court as in civil causes. All parties interested have a right to appear and if the judge is of opinion that the application should be granted, he may do so, setting forth the extent to which he grants the leave and to the extent to which he grants the leave the order is an authority to the employer to import the persons authorized by the order.

Another section amends section 3 of the Act of 1897, which was further amended by the statutes of 1901. That section as it stands to-day requires the consent of a certain functionary to the bringing of an action for a violation of the provisions of the Alien Labour Act. The proposed section dispenses with any such preliminary sanction.

Under the law as it is to-day it is declared illegal to induce people to come into Canada in contravention of the Act by promise of employment by advertisements. It has been held by a judge of the Supreme Court in the province of British Columbia that an advertisement, for example, such as 'wanted,' naming a large number of men, and other inducements which might be or might not be correct, was not an offence against the law inasmuch as the advertisement could not be held to be a promise. It is proposed therefore to add to this section after the word 'employment,' —or by representations justifying reasonable expectation of employment.

There are some other verbal changes.

Another section deals with the case of inducing people to come to Canada by false representations. This spring there was an illustration of the injury done by men inducing people to come to Canada by false representations. It appears that a very large number of Italians, going up to the thousands, reached Montreal this spring in search for employment under circumstances that amounted to a serious fraud upon these people, and a demoralization of the labour market of Montreal and perhaps of other portions of Canada. A commission was issued to inquire into the circumstances attending the bringing in of those men. The commissioner has not yet reported, but his investigation was conducted in open court, and the press reported somewhat fully the evidence given. I do not purpose at this moment to state in any detail the nature of the evidence, but I think that any one who has perused so much of it as appeared in the press cannot but reach the conclusion that the methods adopted to induce these unfortunate people to come to Canada were criminal and cruel in the extreme. They were brought into Canada by the most grossly false representations originating in Montreal, by a scheme of fraud for the enrichment of men in Montreal to bring men here thousands of miles from their own homes, and, when they reached Montreal, to induce them to contribute money to the persons promoting this agency, in the deluded belief that they would thereby immediately secure profitable employment. The scheme seemed to be conceived and carried out in fraud. It is proposed by this section to make such false representations as to the state of the labour market a criminal offence.

Another section proposes to incorporate into law the spirit of the clauses introduced into the Crow's Nest Pass Railway Contract, requiring the work on lines constructed by a railway subsidized or aided by the government either by gift or loan of money or guarantee or other valuable consideration to be carried on in accordance with the spirit of the clauses made applicable to that contract. Hon. gentleman are familiar with the provisions of that contract. They are to the effect that, wherever possible, the labour shall be British or Canadian labour, and that in case contracts are made with companies for the work of construction, the companies shall be incorprated in Canada under Dominion or provincial legislation, the majority of the directors shall be citizens of this empire and the majority of the capital shall be owned by citizens of the empire.

Another section provides that persons infringing the Act by importing the classes of labour in question, that is in violation of the law, shall be liable for the expense of their deportation to the country from which they came, and obligations are also cast upon the ships bringing out persons of this class knowing, or having reasonable ground for believing, that they have been brought here in contravention of the law. Then some other provisions of the Bill deal with undesirable classes of people, not being brought here in connection with labour at all, and it is proposed to prohibit from landing or remaining in Canada any of the following classes :

Idiots, insane persons, paupers, or persons likely to become a public charge, professional beggars, persons afflicted with loathsome or dangerous contagious diseases, polygamists, anarchists or persons who believe in or advocate the overthrow by force or violence of all forms of law, the constituted authority of the country or the assassination of public officials, prostitutes, and persons who procure or attempt to bring in prostitutes or women for the purpose of prostitution ; persons who have been within one year deported or ordered to be deported from Canada for having entered Canada in violation of any of the provisions of the said Act of 1897 as amended, or of this Act, and of persons convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude; provided that this shall not be held to exclude from Canada persons convicted of offences purely political, not involving moral turpitude.

Another section deals with the liability of the owners of and persons interested in the vessel that aids in any violation of this Act. Another section provides for the arrest of any alien brought in in contravention of the law, and for his detention while waiting to be transferred to the vessel to be sent back to his own country. Another section gives the Minister of Labour, instead of as at present Attorney General, the authority for ordering deportation. Another section authorizes the Governor in Council to appoint special officers for the enforcement of the law and to pass necessary regulations for its more effective working. Another section provides that in case His Majesty should be obliged to defray any expenses in the first place connected with the deportation of persons illegally brought into the country there shall be a clause of action over by the Crown against the persons primarily the cause of such prohibited labour or persons having entered Canada. There are some provisions that I have not alluded to, but they will more fully appear when the Bill is printed and placed in the hands of hon. gentlemen.

Mr. URIAH WILSON (Lennox). I would ask the hon. Postmaster General (Sir William Mulock) if there is any provision in the Bill to oblige them to inspect immigrants before they are allowed to leave the port from which the ship sails, because, unless that is a part of the law, I think it would be very deficient. We saw a case of that kind when the steamer 'Lake Simcoe' landed a number of Syrians the other day. It appeared to me that had there been an efficient inspection at Havre, France, the ship would not have taken any of them on board. The owners of the ship have had to become responsible for twenty-nine that were allowed to come over without any visible means of support. More than thirty of them have had to be deported and there are a large number of others who are subject to treatment. That is an important provision and should be enacted in the Bill.

Hon. Sir WILLIAM MULOCK (Postmaster General). There is much in the remark of my hon. friend (Mr. Wilson), but perhaps when he has looked at the Bill he will find that clause 14, or at all events one of the clauses near the end of the Bill, authorizes the Governor in Council to appoint special officers in order to accomplish the object of the Bill. If the object of the Bill, for instance, is to exclude from landing in Canada any undesirable classes of persons, my hon. friend's proposal would be in harmony with the clause that the Governor in Council should appoint such officers as are necessary in order to give effect to that prohibitory clause. It would strike me as a very wise thing that these proscribed classes should be intercepted at the earliest moment. If the government is of the opinion that it would be wise to have such examination made before the vessel sails I think my hon. friend will find that the measure proposes to give the government full authority to make any such arrangement.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). I, of course, do not propose to discuss the Bill at this stage. May I ask whether or not the Bill has been printed or is it introduced with the intention of having it printed? Has the printing been expedited in any way?

Sir WILLIAM MULOCK. It is not sufficiently printed to enable me to hand my hon. friend a copy, but it was printed in galley form and has been revised.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What I desire to suggest is that the printing may be expedited as much as possible. It is, we hope, a very late hour in the session and we would like to see it as soon as possible.

Sir WILLIAM MULOCK. I will try to have it in galley form in the hands of my hon. friends to-morrow morning. I will send a number of copies so that other hon. gentlemen may be able to see it.

Mr. E. F. CLARKE. Is it the intention to have the evidence which is being taken by Judge Winchester respecting employment of aliens on the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway and respecting the influx of Italian labour into the city of Montreal printed and distributed for the use of members of the House?

Sir WILLIAM MULOCK. It is intended to have it printed at the earliest possible moment, but it will not be possible to have it printed before prorogation if it takes place at an early date. As soon as the inquiry is completed I will have it printed and distributed. The inquiry has not yet been completed, but I was informed by Judge Winchester, who passed through Ottawa on his way from Montreal a few days ago, that there only remained the examination of Mr. Lumsden and perhaps the cross-examination of Sir Sandford Fleming as he has not been able yet to conclude the evidence of these two gentlemen.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

THE LATE MR. PROULX, M.P.

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day are called it is my sad duty to have to inform the House that we have lost another of our colleagues in the person of Mr. Isidore Proulx, member for the electoral district of Prescott. As is well known by most members of the House Mr. Proulx had been in poor health for many months past. He had undergone last autumn an operation which he bore with great fortitude, and it was hoped that it had checked the disease, but unfortunately the vital forces were gone and he was carried away at a comparatively early period. He left us last week with the intention of coming back but we are not to see him any more in this House. Mr. Proulx was a quiet, unobtrusive member of this House, but very much respected by all of those who came in contact with him. and I can bear testimony that he was as faithful a friend as ever lived. I am sure that hon. members on both sides of the House will join in sympathizing with the bereaved family in the sad mourning through which they are now passing.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I desire to join in the expression to which the Prime Minister has given utterance with regard to Mr. Proulx. While it is true that I did not enjoy an intimate acquaintance with him, nevertheless I learned to know him sufficiently to respect and appreciate him. I am sure that all of us on this side of the House will join in the sympathy and condolence which the Prime Minister on this occasion has so fittingly expressed.

CANADIAN MILITARY GAZETTE.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Before you proceed with government orders, there is a matter to which I wish to draw attention. I sent for the Minister of Militia——

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. If my hon. friend is going to make a personal explanation, I might state that the House will be moved into supply in a few minutes, and he will have a better opportunity then of disclosing his grievance.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I have no personal explanation to make. It is a matter in connection with an article in the paper this morning, and I think this is the proper time to bring it up ; is it not ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I think not. It would be more opportune to do so when the House is moved into supply.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. It will not take more than a moment. In the 'Citizen' this morning, under the heading Attempt to Dragoon—Methods of the Martinet to Stifle Criticism—Minister of Militia Takes Revenge Upon the Canadian Military Gazette for Daring to Disapprove of His Course in Dundonald Exposures.

I find an article referring to a letter signed by L. J. Pinault, Deputy Minister of Militia and Defence, addressed to the proprietors of the 'Canadian Military Gazette.' The letter is dated 28th of June, and reads :

Department of Militia and Defence,
Ottawa, June 28, 1904.

Sir,—I am directed by the Honourable the Minister of Militia and Defence to inform you that the agreement entered into with the Canadian Military Gazette, by my letter of the 29th August, 1903, will terminate on the 30th September next, from which date this department will not hold itself responsible for the publication and payment thereof of the Royal Military College advertisement and the Militia General Orders.

I have the honour to be, sir, your obedient servant,

(Signed) L. J. PINAULT,
Colonel,
Deputy Minister of Militia and Defence.

The proprietors of the Canadian Military Gazette.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER.

The paper says :

It seems superfluous to comment on this letter. It tells the publishers of the 'Gazette' very plainly that the minister does not approve of its recent policy in the Dundonald exposures and gives it until September 30 to make amends. If it does not do so a considerable part of its revenue will be cut off.

This is the third time this payment has been withdrawn in an effort to influence the 'Gazette.' The threat will have no more influence now than on the two former occasions. The 'Gazette' will continue to pursue the policy that all honest men believe to be in the best interests of the country—for the militia and country are one.

In an editorial comment the 'Citizen' very properly points out :

The idea that men who volunteer their services to the country in most instances for nothing or at a sacrifice of both time and money, should also be expected to surrender their liberty as citizens not only when on duty but when in civilian life is too ridiculous for consideration, unless the object is to ruin the militia force of this country entirely. The members of the militia make enough sacrifices as it is out of patriotism to keep up a force that should be kept up by the country in such a manner as to at least make the sacrifice part of it unnecessary.

Then follows an illustration of the power of the minister, or of a general, or of any officer to control any officer or man under him, when he is not on duty or in uniform, and it illustrates the case of Sir Mackenzie Bowell when years ago he was major in the militia, and when the general officer commanding sought to influence him and dragoon him for certain expressions to which he had given utterance. In view of the great importance of this question to civil liberty, and in view of the erroneous impression that the officers of the force all over the country have, I think it is proper that some attention should be paid to the matter.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I am sorry the hon. gentleman did not take my suggestion. He is out of order altogether, and the only way he can put himself in order is to move the adjournment of the House.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Well, I can move the adjournment of the House. Section 72 of the proposed Militia Act reads :

72. The Army Act for the time being in force in the United Kingdom, the King's Regulations, and all other laws applicable to His Majesty's troops in Canada and not inconsistent with this Act or the regulations made thereunder, shall have force and effect as if they had been enacted by the parliament of Canada for the government of the militia, and every officer this Act or the regulations made thereunder, to from the time of being called out for active service, and also during the period of annual drill or training under the provisions of this Act, and also at any other time while upon military duty or in the uniform of his corps upon or within any rifle range or any armoury, or other place where arms, guns, ammunition or other military stores are kept, or any drill shed or other building or place used for militia purposes, or during any drill or parade of his corps at which he is present in the ranks, when going to or from the place of drill or parade, and also whether in uniform or not at any drill or parade of his corps at which he is present as a spectator.

Subsection 2 :

2. Officers and men of the permanent force and members of the permanent staff of the militia shall at all times be subject to military law.

It is clear this last section applies only to the permanent force, which, of course, is subject to the military law throughout the year, but the militia force is not subject to military law except they are on duty or in the uniform of their corps. In order to encourage the officers and men of the permanent force to be free men, and to take an interest in military matters and let the public have the benefit of their views from time to time, I have given the minister notice that I intend to move the following amendment to section 79 of the Militia Bill :

Nothing in this Act shall at any time prevent any officer or man of the militia, except when on parade or on duty, from temperately expressing his views on questions affecting the welfare of the militia force and communicating suggestions, criticisms and statements thereon to the public of Canada.

Mr. SPEAKER. If the hon. gentleman is going to discuss the Militia Bill, that is clearly out of order.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I am discussing civil liberty.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Humbug.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I find in the Toronto 'News' of yesterday interviews from three prominent military men, which show that the military officers of the country do not understand that the men under them are absolutely free. I regret that a couple of these officers think they have power over their men when not on duty. For example, suppose a private in Col. Pellatt's regiment should assault him on the public street when not on duty or not in uniform, according to the generally expressed notion the colonel would have control of that soldier under the military law. That is not so. All the redress he could possibly have against him would be under the common law, under which he could be fined. I ask any one of these gentlemen, from the minister down, to point out where directly or indirectly the King's regulations or the Army Act authorizes the bringing of that man under the military law. We want to resist these attempts at dragooning ; we want to resist these attempts at establishing militarism in Canada. We have seen instances of Straffords, Lauds and Jeffreys and Robespierres, and democrats up to the hilt, becoming aristocrats, but there is only one way to preserve civil and religious liberty, and that is to check militarism and tyranny whether it is found in the Prime Minister or in his subordinate the Minister of Militia.

We want no dragooning in this country ; we want no muzzling of the public press or of private individuals in the Dominion of Canada. I move the adjournment of the House.

Hon. Sir FREDERICK BORDEN (Minister of Militia and Defence). As to the letter which has been read, which appears to have been sent by the deputy minister of my department to the printing or publishing office, I can only say that I never saw the letter. I presume it is a business letter written to give notice at the beginning of the financial year, so that if it is thought desirable to terminate the contract, for which it is necessary to give three months' notice, that contract can be terminated. As to the military law, I cannot understand the hon. gentleman bringing the matter up now, seeing that, as he says himself, he has given notice that when the Bill comes up for third reading he is going to propose an amendment. I shall be prepared, when that time arrives, to discuss it. I cannot understand why he attempts to precipitate a discussion upon it at this moment.

Mr. J. J. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, I think it would be well if some of our militia colonels went on a pilgrimage with the Doukhobors, or engaged in a struggle with the spirit wrestlers, and gave the sane people of this country a little time to attend to the ordinary affairs of life.

Mr. SPROULE. I want to draw attention to the exact wording of the letter : 'I am directed by the Minister of Militia and Defence to inform you.'

An hon. MEMBER. What is the date of the letter ?

Mr. SPROULE. The date is June 28, 1904. Surely these words are specific enough.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Every letter sent out from my department is couched in similar phraseology. I am responsible, of course.

Mr. E. F. CLARKE. Might I ask the minister at what period the fiscal year ends—the 30th of September or when ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. The 30th of June.

Mr. CLARKE. The advertisement, I understand, runs to the 30th of September.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Three months' notice is required to have a contract for any advertisement terminated.

Mr. CLARKE. Can the minister recollect if similar notices were sent to other journals publishing this notice of the military school?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. There is no other journal publishing that advertisement.

In all other journals the advertisement is inserted for one issue in the year only.

Mr. CLARKE. Has it been the practice to send a letter like this to this journal at the close of each previous fiscal year ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I am not aware, but I think so. I cannot speak positively.

Motion (Mr. Sam. Hughes) to adjourn, negatived.

SUPPLY—TRANSPORTATION OF PERISHABLE PRODUCTS.

Hon. W. S. FIELDING (Minister of Finance) moved that the House go into Committee of Supply.

Mr. E. D. SMITH. Mr. Speaker, before you leave the Chair I have a resolution to propose, and I wish to make a few remarks with regard to it. The resolution, I may say at the outset, is one censuring the government for not taking that care with regard to the transportation of perishable products from the point of origin to the markets of the world that I think they ought to have taken, and that the opportunities which have presented themselves from time to time enabled them to do. The perishable products of the country are among the most valuable of our exports, not only in the aggregate, but intrinsically. Our total exports of agricultural products for the year ending the 30th of June, 1903, amounted to $114,441,863, of which nearly one-half, or $52,880,153 were perishable products, which require special care in their transportation to the markets of the world to enable the producers to get full value for them. It therefore seems to me particularly incumbent upon the government of the day to look carefully after this matter. These products are the most valuable of our exports. On account of the skill required to produce them, they generally yield more profit than those articles in which there is a great deal of competition. Consequently the production of these perishable articles ought to be encouraged in this country. The chief item among these exports is cheese, of which we export close upon $25,000,000. Another is bacon and hams, of which we export close upon $16,000,000. These two articles require, not cold storage, but simply a thoroughly ventilated storage for their transportation, not only on land in the cars, but in ships on the sea. They simply require the temperature of the outside air, which can be obtained by thorough ventilation. The next item on the list is butter, of which we exported in the year ending the 30th of June, 1903, close on $7,000,000. This requires cold storage at a certain temperature, over which the government should have control. The next item is fruit, of which we exported in the same year $3,751,000. Some of it requires cold storage, but the greater portion requires only ventilated storage on shipboard ; and this can be got without any extra cost of freight and without any appreciable extra expense to the steamship owners. It only requires the government to exercise that supervision and control that will enable the shipper to know positively that his products will have the temperature of the ocean air in crossing the ocean, in which case they will be landed in the old country markets in a sound condition to receive the highest prevailing prices. Any loss from lack of proper transportation facilities ultimately comes out of the pockets of the producer. To the extent to which the service is imperfect, to that extent the value of the product is depreciated. The depreciation from this cause in the value of the products shipped from Montreal amounts to many hundreds of thousands of dollars.

It may be said that our cold storage facilities are better than they once were. That is very true. We are certainly progressing. It would be strange if a government, in an enterprising country like Canada, were not able to improve our facilities from year to year. It would indeed be strange if the transportation companies themselves did not greatly improve their facilities without any suggestion from the government at all. For many years before we initiated cold storage we had the example of other British colonies which transported their perishable products across the tropics from the farthest corners of the world safely in cold storage, while we, who live only two weeks' journey from the British market, even yet, with all that experience of twenty years behind us, are unable to ship these perishable products in a cold storage that is anything near perfection.

Last year the government had thermograph records taken of 155 cold storage chambers carrying these perishable products. In his report of 1902, the hon. Minister of Agriculture said that butter should be carried at a temperature of 20 degrees, and he stated afterwards that to bring about the best results you should have the chamber at 10 degrees. But in these 155 records taken last year there is not one chamber that carried butter at a temperature of 10 degrees, and there are only 40 that touched a temperature of 20 degrees, and that was not the average across the ocean. Only 40 out of the 155 touched 20 degrees, and there was a very large number that carried the goods even above the freezing point. I would just enumerate a few of those. The 'Iona,' of the Thompson line, which sailed July 25, 1903, carried butter, and the butter was put in at a temperature less than 40 degrees. The Minister of Agriculture seems to be always hunting for some excuse to explain why the steamers do not carry goods at the proper temperature, and he sometimes has for excuse the plea that the butter is put in hot. But in only two of these records does it appear that the butter was put in hot. In this case the butter was put in at a temperature below 40, or 10 degrees lower than the temperature of the car in transit usually. Yet it never ran a point lower than 32, and that only when it arrives on the other side. On the 'Monteagle,' which sailed May 29, 1903, butter went in at a temperature of 40 degrees and never reached a point lower than 34, and that only on its arrival on the other side. On the 'Montford,' which sailed August 22nd, the butter was put in at a temperature a little higher, 45 degrees, and the temperature rapidly went down to 40, showing that the butter was not hot, but it never reached a temperature lower than 32 degrees at any point, and when it reached the other side it was 33 degrees. On the 'Montcalm' the butter was put in at Montreal at 36 degrees, an exceedingly low temperature for butter to be put in the chamber, but it never got lower than 34, and several days of the journey it was 36 or 37, or warmer than when put in. On the 'Montford,' which sailed September 27th, butter was put in at 38 degrees and never got lower than 36 at any time during the journey and a large portion of it was at 39. On the 'Corinthian,' which sailed October 8th, the butter was put in at 38, a very low temperature for butter to come out of the car, and never reached a point lower than 32, and that only after the expiration of ten days. On the 'Hungarian' the butter was put in at the low temperature of 34 and never got below 31, and that in the early portion of the voyage. It gradually rose and came out at the other side at a temperature of 34.

Mr. WM. ROCHE (Halifax). Does the hon. gentleman mean that by the time of arrival, the time of arrival in the ship or at the shop where the butter is sold ?

Mr. E. D. SMITH. I am reading from the thermograph records, and of course these were taken while the goods were still on the ship.

On the 'Kildona' the butter went in at a temperature of 42 and 43, and it reached 30 on its arrival on the other side, but only very gradually, so that the average would not be lower than 34.

On the 'Iona' the butter went in at a temperature of 40. It immediately rose, however, to 43, then gradually went down, but at no point was lower than 32.

On the 'Devona,' June 28th, the butter went in at 37 and remained at 37 and 38 during the whole voyage.

On the 'Hurona' it went in at 50, or about the temperature of the refrigerator car in which it arrived in Montreal. It gradually went down, but at no time did it get to a point lower than 40, except for three or four hours before being unloaded on the docks it went down to 38. That was a ridiculously high temperature, and the butter could not be expected to land in good condition. When we find our exports of butter decreasing over $2,000,000 in value, no doubt that is largely due to the hard experience which the shippers of the previous year had, the records of which I am reading. On the 'Hibernian' butter went in at a temperature nearly 70, but the refrigerator chambers of that steamer were never able to get that butter down to a temperature lower than 42. That was about half way across, and instead of holding the butter at 42 and getting it even as low as 32, it gradually rose and came out at a temperature of 54. I would not be surprised if the butter on that steamer was entirely lost.

Mr. CLARKE. What was the month ?

Mr. E. D. SMITH. That steamer sailed August 22nd. On the 'Iona,' which sailed 5th of September from Montreal, the butter went in at a temperature of 66, but never got to a point at any time during the journey lower than 44. In other words, it took the whole of the journey across the ocean in cold storage chambers to bring the temperature down to 44, whereas a good cold storage chamber would bring down the temperature in forty-eight or, at most, 72 hours, no matter how hot were the goods when put in, to a temperature as low as required. Then on the steamer 'Ionian,' which sailed from Montreal June 20th, the butter went in at 40 and never got below 38 during the whole journey. On the 'Kensington,' which sailed the 20th of June, the butter went in at 45, and only at the time of its arrival on the other side reached 30, or an average of about 36. On the 'Tunisian' the butter went in at 37 and never got below 35 during the whole journey. On the 'Pretorian,' sailing July 11, the butter went in at 40 and never got below 35. On the 'Bavarian' the butter went in at 34 and rose gradually to 35, and came out on the other side at 36. In other words, it was in better condition when it went on board than at any time during the journey, in so far as temperature was concerned. On the 'Pretorian,' which sailed 15th of August, the butter went in at 60, and the lowest point reached during the journey was 37. The temperature fluctuated from time to time 4 or 5 degrees every day, showing that the storage apparatus was not in proper order.

Then, the 'Canada,' sailing on 22nd August ; the butter went in at 54, and the lowest point touched during the voyage was 37, coming out, apparently, at the other side at 70. Whether that is a mistake or not, I do not know. I cannot imagine that such a thing would occur except by an accident. The butter in that case must have been very badly damaged. The lowest point reached was 37, or twenty-seven degrees higher than the minister himself and the experts say should be constantly maintained. The 'Pretorian,' sailing on September 19th, took in the butter at 55 ; lowest point reached 38, coming out on the other side at 40. The 'Lakonia,' sailing September 3rd : the butter went in at 50, and at no time in the voyage did the temperature go lower than 43. That butter must have been almost ruined. It might as well have gone across in the ordinary storage, thus saving fifteen shillings a ton. Going in the ordinary ventilated storage it would have received just about as good treatment, so far as temperature is concerned, as in these cold storage chambers. In another chamber of the 'Lakonia' the butter went in at 40, the lowest point reached was 37½, coming out on the other side at 38. The 'Marina'; butter went in at 50, and the lowest point reached was 36, then rose to 40 and remained at about 40, coming out at that temperature at the other side. In another chamber of the 'Lakonia,' the butter went in at 50, reached 32 at the other side, the average temperature for the voyage being about 40. On the 'Kastalia,' the butter went in at 42, but rose immediately to 46, The temperature gradually went down and reached 34, or 24 degrees higher for the lowest point of the journey than the temperature which ought to be maintained according to the minister himself. On the 'Montcalm' the butter went in at 44 and reached the other side at 32.

Now, I have taken up the time of the House in reading a large number of records in order to show that, out of 155 records taken there were something like 35 or 40 where the temperature never reached a point lower than the feezing, whereas, according to the minister himself a temperature of not more than 20 is necessary, and he and the experts now unite in saying that for good results the butter should be carried at not higher than 10. I am sure everybody must agree with me that this is not a satisfactory condition of affairs. After an experience of carrying butter in cold storage by the different British colonies of twenty years and after an experience of this government of about nine years we still find that we are unable to carry a single shipment at the temperature which the experts tell us is required. Only about forty shipments ever reach that temperature during the whole journey, while about one-quarter of all the shipments were carried at a temperature above freezing point and many of them reached such a temperature that the butter must have been ruined in the voyage.

Now, who is to blame? I contend that the government are entirely to blame. This parliament voted willingly the large sum of money it thought necessary in order to secure this cold storage service. Something like $150,000 was spent by this parliament in order to secure a good cold storage system. Half of the expense of putting in the cold storage chambers has been borne by the country. As against this, I wish to point out, the ships going to the ports of the United States pay for their own cold storage chambers; the government of the United States does not go down into the pockets of the people to provide this outfit for the steamships. We have taken the people's money to pay for these improvements, in the hope that we would get a good service, and not only that, but in the hope of being able to control it. And, not only have we not got the service but we have absolutely no control. Not only have we spent the people's money to pay half the expense of providing this accommodation on the steamships, but we have given some of these lines at least enormous subsidies. The subsidy to the Allan Line was ostensibly to carry the mails; in reality it was to induce them to come to the ports of Montreal, Halifax and St. John regularly. Incidentally, in the last contract with the Allans, it was mentioned that they must provide cold storage chambers, We pay them a subsidy, besides paying half the expense of the cold storage chambers, and yet we have not an atom of control. They may carry the goods at any temperature they like. No government officer can step aboard and say: You must carry these goods at such and such a temperature. When the officers of the government go aboard these vessels they must go by the grace and favour of the company, and not by authority of this parliament or by any authority delegated to the officers by this parliament.

Now, what ought the government to have done? There are many courses they might have pursued. The simplest and most obvious thing for the government to have done, was in agreeing to pay half the cost of these cold storage facilities, to make it a condition that they should have control, that they should have power to dictate to the steamship companies at what temperature the goods should be carried. That was not done, and yet this is the most natural thing any ordinary business man would have done in his private business in a similar case. The Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Fisher) himself admits that he has no control. He has neglected every opportunity to put himself in a controlling position. But he and the Minister of Trade and Commerce (Sir Richard Cartwright) have had many opportunities since. First of all in making these contracts with the Allan Line and other lines to carry these goods across the ocean, they might have provided in the contract, when the large subsidy of $260,000 was given to the Allans and other large subsidies to other lines, that the government should retain control of the temperature and provide that the payment of the subsidy should be conditional upon the steamship carrying the goods at the temperature the government desired. But, nothing of the kind was done, or, apparently even thought of. The Minister of Agriculture blandly tells us that he has absolutely no control. But why did he not go to the Minister of Trade and Commerce, when the contract was being made with the Allans, and say: We find ourselves in this position, that we have no control over the temperatures of these vessels and now is our opportunity. We must have control of the temperature. In the contract it is specified that the vessels should have cold storage facilities subject to the approval of the government. What does that mean? It means only that they must put in a refrigerator plant sufficient to produce the degree of cold required. It is as though the city of Ottawa or any other town making a lighting contract with an electric company, were to provide that there should be a power-house of a certain capacity, so many poles, so many lamps placed in certain positions, and so on—but no provision whatever as to the amount of light to be given. That is exactly our position in this case. We make it a condition that cold storage facilities shall be provided, that the chambers shall be built, the refrigerating plant put in and all that, but not a word as to the maintenance of a certain temperature during the voyage.

An hon. MEMBER. And no power to inspect.

Mr. E. D. SMITH No power to inspect, and absolutely no control over the temperature, which is the one essential thing. But, even failing this the government had still another recourse. We have on our statute-books a law providing that no steamship shall sail from our ports carrying cattle until the government inspector has been aboard to see that proper provision is made for carrying the cattle—that certain space is allowed to each beast, that there is a certain width of alley-way, certain provisions for feeding, and so on. Why could not the government have a similar statute passed with regard to the cold storage and ventilated storage on vessels sailing from our ports and thus provide in a practical way for the carrying of these products of this vast industry representing not less than $52,000,000 a year? But they neglected this third opportunity as they neglected every other. So, I am sure that anybody who studies the question will agree with me that the government are to blame that the shippers of this country have not proper cold storage facilities.

Now, the main portion of these perishable products, cheese, apples and meats, are carried in the ordinary stowage, not in cold storage. This is the most important matter of all. It is very important that we should have the six or seven millions worth of butter which we export, carried in cold storage and some of the fruit; but we still have thirty-five millions worth of goods ter which we export, carried in cold storage, simply the pure air of the ocean which costs practically nothing. It has been pointed out time and time again that all that was necessary was to provide that exhaust fans should be put on the steamers, which could be done at a trifling cost, and the ocean air sent through the holds of these vessels. If that were done all these exports could be landed on the other side in perfect condition and we could get full value instead of having a depreciation of millions of dollars every year on our apple crop. Prof. Robertson said before a committee of this House, that we would lose three millions dollars on the cheese export, which was verified the next year. All this enormous loss takes place simply because the ocean vessels and the cars in which the goods are taken from the point of origin to the sea-board are not ventilated. It has been pointed out that this can be done easily and cheaply, but all that the minister has ever done has been to send circular letters to the steamship companies, asking them to do it, asking them, out of the goodness of their hearts, to provide this facility. He has taken no power to control them that would enable the government to compel the companies to install this ventilation which would enable these products to be carried in good condition. He took no power to do this, but in his wisdom he thought he would provide something better, so he came to this House and asked for large sums of money to provide for what he calls a cool air service. This parliament voted willingly something over $100,000 to provide a cool air service, which is a sort of hybrid between cold storage and ventilated storage. What is the result? Last year of a total export of 229,000,000 pounds of cheese, 3,000,000 pounds were carried in the cool air and 226,000,000 pounds in ordinary stowage. Out of 2,000,000 barrels of apples, only 8,000 barrels were carried in the refrigerated air. Why? Not because it is not a good thing, for the cool air is all right and it would be a good thing to carry these products all in cool air storage or better still in cold storage, but there is a charge of ten shillings a ton on butter and cheese and 1s. 6d. a barrel on every barrel of apples placed in the cool air, although the minister stated that there would be no extra charge for the cool air carriage. See 'Hansard', page 5168—1901. Shippers have found that by the courtesy of the steamship companies, a large number of vessels have been fitted with a more or less thorough system of ventilation and on these steamers the goods are generally carried all right. It is also true that many vessels are not properly fitted, but yet shippers take their chance because they would rather trust to the ventilated or unventilated steamers than pay the extra charge for this cool air. In the session of 1902 he stated that these ventilated chambers would be provided and that the cool air would be provided without any extra cost, and yet we find this charge of 1s. 6d. per barrel on apples and 10 shillings a ton on butter and cheese. It would undoubtedly be a great convenience to the shippers of this country if they could receive the benefit of this cool air for the carrying of their products with no increase of cost, but when they have to pay extra cost for it, they find it better to ship in the ordinary stowage. Let us see what the minister has done with regard to ventilated stowage. Time and time again the fact has been brought to his attention, that if these vessels were properly ventilated the goods would be carried over in proper condition. He himself, has admitted that the officers of the government on the other side on examining the apples as they came out of the vessels that were ventilated, found them in very much better condition than those on unventilated vessels. 'Hansard,' page 70, 1901. He admits that it is of very great value to the shippers of this country and yet he has taken no effective steps to ensure its being brought about. During the past three sessions it has been repeatedly pointed out to the minister that goods could be carried in perfect condition and at no extra cost to the shipper, and the minister has said that he was aware of the great benefit that would be derived from having holds ventilated, yet he has taken no steps in the meantime to provide for it. He said that he would put thermographs in each of the chambers in which these perishable products were carried, and in this way he could ascertain the temperature of each chamber on the arrival of the steamer on the other side. then if there was a thermograph on deck which would record the termperature of the ocean air, by comparing the records on the other side he would know whether the exhaust fans on the steamer had been in operation or not. He promised last session that a thermograph would be put in each chamber carrying perishable products from this country. At page 7623 of 'Hansard' he said:

> The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I ordered a large number of extra thermographs and have given most positive and reiterated instructions to the officers in charge that no chamber shall be allowed to go without a thermograph in it. If it is there it will show the temperature, and we shall be able to know whether the fans are used or not. My instructions are plain and positive and I believe they will be carried out.

He made the statement plainly and explicitly and we believed that this would be done. What were the facts? I presume that several hundred trips were made from Montreal last season and on each of these steamers there were several chambers. To make a rough guess there were probably 500 or more chambers carrying perishable products out of Montreal last year in ordinary storage as distinct from 'cold storage,' in 'cool air storage' and the minister promised he would put a themograph in each one to ascertain the temperature. There are his words, plain and explicit. Now, how many were taken? Just twelve records of these temperatures were taken. These twelve records only prove what the temperatures were in these chambers. They do not prove whether the system in operation on these steamers, or supposed to be in operation, was in order or not. This could only be done by having a thermograph also placed where the actual temperature of the ocean air would be registered, which the minister steadfastly refuses to do. A comparison between the thermograph record of temperature in the chamber and on deck would prove this absolutely. Every one of these steamers ought to have an exhaust fan for each chamber. All shippers and all experts agree that the only practicable way in which you can get ocean air through the holds of these vessels is by an exhaust fan or forced draft. I find on looking over the records that there was only a limited number of steamers that were provided with exhaust fans, that there was a great number that had no ventilation whatever and that many of them only had the trunk ventilation. That is simply an opening that will allow steam to get out but which is of no use whatever for the purpose of ventilation. Others had what is known as the cowl ventilation. That system is very good if the wind is not blowing in the same direction as that in which the steamer is going, because then the air is carried down to the bottom of the cargo, passes up through it and out, but if the wind is blowing in the same direction as the steamer is going the cowl system is no good at all. The cowl system, however, is a great deal better than having no ventilation at all provided the air is driven to the bottom of the cargo and there is an opening at the top of the chamber that will enable the air to get out. It is forced out by the impact of the air against the cowl ventilator. The air is taken to the bottom of the cargo, it is then forced up and comes out at the top of the chamber. A considerable number of vessels are fitted with these cowl ventilators, but all should be fitted with exhaust fans. If the vessels that were fitted with these fans had them in operation all the time and if they had them in every chamber, that would be what we want, but I am aware that a great many of the chambers are not fitted with these fans at all. The report simply states that there are exhaust fans on certain steamers, but I find on some of these steamers that whereas there is an exhaust fan in one chamber there is no ventilation in another chamber, so that we do not know what the system of ventilation is upon any steamer. As a matter of fact there are a number of these steamers that have not even the cowl system of ventilation. For instance, the 'Lake Champlain' has only intakes, the 'Ontarian' has only fans in one compartment apparently, the 'Kensington' has only what are called ventilators, the 'Pretorian' has the same, the 'Canada' has the same and there are a number of other steamers such as the 'Southwark,' 'Montcalm,' which have only ventilators apparently—which means that there is no efficient ventilation at all—simply a hole in the roof which is practically no use whatever, while a number of steamers such as the 'Ionian,' 'Parisian,' 'Tunisian,' 'Peruvian,' 'Bavarian,' 'Lake Erie,' 'Dominion' and 'Mount Temple' are only very imperfectly ventilated with cowl ventilators.

This is the condition of affairs to-day in regard to the ventilation of these steamers. Notwithstanding that it is an important matter in view of the fact that we have $45,000,000 worth of products to be carried in these steamers there is no control whatever of the ventilation in the holds. The government are entirely responsible for this condition of affairs. It has been pointed out time and time again but still nothing has been done. The right hon. minister has admitted that the ventilation of the holds of vessels carrying perishable cargo is of enormous benefit, but instead of taking advantage of the opportunities, instead of seeing that remedies are provided, the government have done nothing effective in regard to it. This is something that would cost the government nothing. If the right hon. minister finds that there is something to be done which requires a large expenditure of money he has no hesitation in coming before the House and asking for it because he knows that the House will vote it willingly if it is in the interest of the country. But, he does not appear to be willing to come before the House and propose any measure unless there is a large money vote connected with it. Here is an opportunity. He does not even need to come before the House for anything unless it would be to ask the House to pass a Bill something similar to the cattle inspection Bill so as to give him control of the temperature on these vessels. In making these contracts such as were made with the Allans, the Manchester liners, the direct steamship line to France and the steamship line to Mexico, the minister had an opportunity to provide that there should be absolute control of the ventilation in these vessels. But advantage was not taken of that opportunity. I know it was not taken of the opportunity in the case of the Allans. I have not had an opportunity to examine the contracts made with the line of steamers going to France or Mexico but if I am wrong in my statement in that regard the right hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce will be able to correct me. If a clause were inserted in these contracts providing that the government shall have control of the ventilation in the ship and that the ship shall be ventilated by forced draft ventilation or exhaust fans, the remedy will be found. Here is what the hon. Minister of Agriculture said in regard to the benefits of ventilation in 1901, as reported in 'Hansard,' at page 5166, 1901:

> During the last year or two our cheese has suffered in reputation in consequence of heating in the holds of the vessels, and it is well known that our fruits have been cooked a good deal in the tightly battened down holds.

The hon. Minister of Agriculture said that when he was coming before the House and asking for a large sum of money to put cool air plants into vessels which were not absolutely necessary. At the time that vote was asked for it was pointed out to the hon. minister that it might be very good, but that in all probability there would be an extra charge for it, and although the hon. minister said that there would be no extra charge we find that they are charging ten shillings a ton on butter and cheese, and one shilling six pence per barrel on apples.

I want to show by a few of the thermograph records that the temperature in the holds of these vessels where there are supposed to be fans is not what it ought to be. These twelve returns brought down, although there is no opportunity of comparing them with the records of a thermograph placed on deck giving the proper temperature of the ocean air, show that even though there are fans on the vessels they are not operated as they are supposed to be and that there is really no ventilation. On the 22nd of August the 'Canada' sailed out of the port of Montreal. The temperature commenced at 60 degrees, it goes down to 55, for a large portion of the journey it remains at 55, and on the other side it goes up to 67, at no time reaching higher than 67. There is ample evidence that this steamer was ventilated at any rate during a large portion of the voyage. The temperature recorded is about the temperature of the ocean air. It is also about the temperature of the cool air chambers provided by the government at an expense of $100,000. For instance, take the 'Cervona' fitted with cool air chambers for the use of which a large additional charge is made. The goods went in at a temperature of 68 degrees and at no time did the temperature reach a lower point than 54 degrees. That is almost identical with the temperature in ordinary ventilated stowage, where the exhaust fans are in operation, or where by some system the cool air of the ocean is introduced and forced through the cargo. For a large portion of the journey the temperature was 55 degrees in ordinary ventilated storage, just one degree higher than in the 'cool air' chambers. This simply bears out what I have contended time and again, and it is that the temperature of the ocean, if we can get it through the cargo, is practically all we need for such products as cheese and winter apples. Or we might cite the 'Kildona,' June 7th, from Montreal, cheese and meat in 'cool air;' temperature 55½ to 58 throughout the voyage—almost exactly the average temperature of the ocean air, which we should and can secure without paying 10 shillings a ton extra for it. On the 22nd of August there sailed out of Montreal another steamer, the 'Bavarian,' and the temperature, as recorded by the thermograph during the voyage, ranged around 60 degrees. During a large portion of the time it was 65 and sometimes as high as 67 degrees. It went down occasionally and intermittently to 55 degrees and 50 degrees, but it immediately rose again, an average difference in temperature of from 5 to 10 per cent between this boat and the 'Canada' sailing the same day. Then take the 'Mount Temple' which sailed on the 7th of August; we find that the temperature was at no point lower than 63 degres, ranging most of the time around 65 degrees and 70 degrees and coming out on the other side at 72 degrees.

The next day another boat, the 'Parisian,' sailed the temperature on which at no time was above 65 and ranged from 62 to 65 on all the voyage across. On the 8th of August another boat, the 'Devona,' sailed, and for a portion of the journey the temperature was as low as 48, and at no time did it reach above 60. Here we have three steamers crossing the ocean at the same time, and the thermograph records show a very wide difference in the temperature, the only possible way to account for which is that at least two of them were not properly ventilated. Again, the 'Livonian' sailed on the 5th of June, and on the journey the temperature was as low as 45. At no time did it reach above 60, and that was as she was going down the St. Lawrence. On the same day the 'Tritonia' sailed, and her temperature was 60 at the time of sailing, but it rose to 68 and 69 and when it got across the other side it had reached 74, being 15 degrees higher on an average than the other boat,which shows that one was ventilated and the other was not. I could quote you numerous other examples of the same kind. Last year the Minister of Agriculture promised that he would provide thermographs in every chamber carrying perishable cargo from Montreal, but if he had done so that would not be sufficient unless there was also a thermograph on the deck. Why has the Minister of Agriculture neglected to have these steamers properly ventilated, when through his neglect the producers of this country lose an enormous sum of money annually by not having their goods landed on the other side in perfect condition. The government have been entirely negligent in this matter, and it is a shame that the people of this country should go on year after year suffering in this way when the government have it in their power so very easily to control the situation. We have time and again pointed out that something should be done, but for the last seven or eight years the government have been neglectful, and the people have been suffering all that time. Then, as to the question of ocean freight rates. Why should we not be able to get as good a rate on our goods out of Montreal, as if they were shipped from Boston or New York? Why should the farmers of Canada be compelled to pay last year $800,000 extra freight on their produce, because they sent it from Montreal rather than from Boston or New York? It is true that just now the rate for cheese out of Montreal is just as cheap as out of New York, but even now when freight is so scarce, the rate of butter out of Montreal is 43 cents per 100 pounds, while out of New York it is 33·75 cents per 100 pounds, which on our exports of butter last year would have amounted to a loss of $31,450. It is the same thing with regard to apples. The rate out of New York for Liverpool to-day is 50·40 cents per barrel and out of Montreal 60 cents, a difference of 9 4-10 cents per barrel in favour of New York on our shipment of apples. It is always the case that in the fall when they ought to carry the goods cheaper because there are large cargoes offering, up goes the freight rates to the farmers of Canada, and they are taxed away and above what they would have to pay if they would ship from Boston or New York. In making this contract with the Allans and the other steamship lines the other day, the government had an opportunity to control these freight rates to a very great extent, but they neglected to do so. They might have specified, as in the case of railway rates, that the steamship rates should not be above a certain maximum, and in this way the producers of this country could be protected, but the government neglected to do that and the steamship companies can tax the farmers of Canada just as they please. Then again, our railway cars are badly ventilated or not ventilated at all. Perishable products are gathered in box cars throughout the country, in which the temperature is ten or fifteen degrees higher than it is on a warm day in the shade, and with proper ventilation the temperature in the car could be easily made the same as the temperature in the shade. The Minister of Agriculture paid $62 apiece for certain cars on the Grand Trunk to experiment on, but since that time nothing has been done, and an official of the Grand Trunk came before the Railway Commission at Toronto the other day and stated that the system was insufficient and did not seem to produce any good results, and he did not know that it was to be continued. The matter is now before the Railway Commission, and whether they take action or not remains to be seen. If we had the cars properly ventilated, and the ships properly ventilated, we would be able to lay down in the old country, the most valuable of the products of Canada, in a perfect condition and get for them their full value which we are entitled to. It is a shame that this enterprising country should have delayed for so long to recognize the value of the St. Lawrence route ; a route which properly utilized and safeguarded would enable us to get the trade not only of the Canadian Northwest but of the American Northwest. Owing to the facility of transporation over our waterways, goods from the west can be laid down in Montreal at a cheaper rate than in New York or Boston. Our wheat is laid down in Montreal at one and a half cents a bushel less than in New York, and other goods from the lake ports are laid down at a proportionately favourable rate, but in the transit of our goods across the Atlantic we lose all that advantage. That may be to some extent due to the fact that up to the present time steamers have not been able to navigate the channel day and night, and that there are other defects in the navigation of the St. Lawrence : lack of sufficient aids to navigation, a bad pilotage system, Montreal harbour dues, old-fashioned and expensive methods of loading and unloading vessels, &c. The Minister of Marine stated the other day that for a large portion of the journey steamers could now navigate the St. Lawrence day and night, but I make bold to say that they cannot do so along the entire route.

Steps should be taken to insure to the people of this country as low rates from the port of Montreal as can be obtained from the ports of Boston, Portland and New York ; and when that is done, we shall be able, from the natural advantages of our position, to capture all that trade. This parliament has never refused any vote that is asked for, to improve those routes. This government should at the earliest possible moment take steps to insure greater return cargoes for our ships by adopting a fiscal policy which will result in our purchasing in England a very much larger share of the things we import than we do at the present time, by differentiating to a much greater extent than we do to-day the duties on imports from the United States and those on imports from the mother country. Why should we not adopt a fiscal policy which will turn the enormous imports which we to-day receive from the United States, a large portion of which could be produced in this country, and another large portion of which we could purchase in England, giving our steamships larger cargoes, and thus enabling them to carry our outgoing products at much lower rates than they do at the present time ?

Now, Mr. Speaker, as it is the desire of some members to get away to-day, I do not propose to talk longer on this subject, though much more might be said. I think I have shown that the present condition of affairs is not a natural, but an unnatural condition ; and if only a reasonable amount of intelligence and energy, or only a small portion of the business ability which this government have boasted so much about, had been applied to this problem, it might have been solved long ago. Every loss resulting from depreciation in the value of goods by the lack of proper transportation facilities comes out of the pockets of the producers, the farmers of this country. I say that if a proper degree of business ability had been displayed by this government, this state of affairs would not exist at this late date in this country, where the people are intelligent and enterprising. I move :

That all the words after the word 'that' in the proposed motion be left out, and the following substituted therefor :

That according to the report of the Minister of Trade and Commerce, the export of agricultural products from Canada, for the year ending 30th of June, 1903, was $114,441,863 ; of this $52,880,153, were perishable products, the value of which can be and is depreciated in value by inferior transportation facilities, which depreciation ultimately comes out of the pockets of the farmers of this country.

The government has signally failed to take advantage of the opportunities that they have had during the past seven years to secure for the farmers of Canada a safe and speedy transport for the perishable products of the farm and at competitive low rates of freight, thus causing a direct loss of many millions of dollars to them.

Rt. Hon. Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT (Minister of Trade and Commerce). Mr. Speaker, I should like very much for my part to know whether the hon. gentleman who has just sat down speaks for himself or speaks for the whole opposition in expressing a desire for a much larger reduction in the rates of duty levied on British goods. I have not observed any overwhelming desire of that kind on the part of any of his friends ; but if he is authorized, in moving this motion, to speak on behalf of the opposition, for my part I welcome it as a sign of grace, and I hope we shall find them ready to support him in the desire he expresses.

Mr. E. D. SMITH. I am sure that nothing I said would indicate that. I said there should be a larger differentiation in the rates of duty. I did not say there should be a lower rate on goods coming from England.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I do not see how you are going to get any great increase of British imports unless you reduce the duties on British goods.

Mr. COCHRANE. Put higher duties against the United States.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Higher duties against the United States will not bring more British goods here. They might exclude a certain kind of American goods.

but they would not bring more British goods, and the return cargoes to which the hon. gentleman attaches so much value are not likely to be increased by any such measure. With reference to the motion itself, almost the whole of my hon. friend's remarks were directed to the Department of Agriculture. Of course, he is perfectly aware that the Minister of Agriculture is not in the city at this moment, and he and his colleagues had ample opportunity during the four months and a half that we have been sitting here to have brought this matter up when that hon. gentleman was in his place. A good many of the points my hon. friend has mentioned I cannot pretend to deal with, with the knowledge which my hon. friend the Minister of Agriculture possesses. With respect to the subject at large, I admit at once the great importance and desirability of attaining the ends which the hon. gentleman has in view; and had this motion been brought up at an earlier period, it might have been of much greater use than I fear it can be at this moment. The facts which have been placed in my hands by the Department of Agriculture, however, do not appear to confirm the statements made by my hon. friend. For instance, if I remember rightly, the hon. gentleman stated that there were only a very small number of thermographs made use of at the instance of the Department of Agriculture. According to a statement placed in my hands by the officers of that department, there were no less than 199 thermographs placed in different parts of the steamships sailing to Great Britain. These were placed at follows: In cold storage chambers, butter and fruit, 155; cold air chambers, cheese and fruit, 32; ordinary storage, cheese and fruit, 12;—in all 199. That does not appear to correspond entirely with the statements my hon. friend has just been making.

Mr. E. D. SMITH. I think it does.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I did not hear him admit that there were 199 thermographs placed in different chambers. On the contrary, I understood him to complain that the department had grievously neglected its duty in that respect.

Mr. E. D. SMITH. Had the right hon. gentleman heard what I said, he would have known that I quoted exactly those figures.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I did not hear him make any such statement.

Mr. E. D. SMITH. I said that just twelve records were taken of goods going out in ordinary storage out of several hundred chambers of perishable goods.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. The hon. gentleman led the House to understand that there had been great negligence in the matter of placing thermographs. As to the question of temperature, the figures given me do not appear to correspond entirely with those given by the hon. gentleman. In respect of the Canadian Pacific Railway lines, the highest average on any voyage is given at thirty-eight. His average in some cases were very much higher. In the case of the Domininon Line the highest average was thirty; the Donaldson Line, thirty-nine; the Allans, thirty-five; the Dominion, thirty-six, sailing to Liverpool; the Allans, sailing to Liverpool, the highest forty, lowest fifteen; the Thompson Line sailing from London, highest forty-three, lowest nineteen; the Allan Line sailing to London highest thirty-five, lowest twenty-four; the Manchester liners, highest thirty-three, lowest twenty-two. As regards what the Department of Agriculture has done, the department has furnished me with this memo. They state that the department maintains a staff of inspectors at Montreal to observe and report concerning the condition of Canadian food products when loaded in the steamers, including the shipments carried in cold storage. The refrigerator chambers are examined before loading commences, and a note is made as to their condition. The storage of the packages is carefully observed and thermometers are placed in each chamber in which food products are stowed. The inspectors at the British ports also report on the condition of the Canadian food products when discharged from the steamers. That appears to show that the department exercises control, as far as possible, over the shipment of these various products. I did not understand the hon. gentleman to say that there was any considerable depreciation in the great article of cheese, but that in one or two cases there had been some depreciation. His complaints were very largely directed to the condition of the shipments of butter, which he alleged were carried forward under conditions not favourable to their delivery in England in a proper condition, and I think he also specified apples as having been forwarded in a rather imperfect state. As to the matter of fruit and butter, I am not in a position to say whether the statements made by the hon. gentleman are correct or not. Undoubtedly the matter is one of very great importance. Undoubtedly it is extremely desirable that these goods should be carried in good condition, and undoubtedly the Department of Agriculture has been at pains to endeavour to see that this was done. I may also state that I believe the various steamship companies are, as would naturally be expected, themselves very desirous of seeing that those goods are properly cared for and arrive in proper condition. That is very much in their interest. They desire to encourage trade and are extremely anxious that these products should be delivered in good condition and all damage and loss in transit be avoided. But I notice, particularly in connection with the shipments of apples, that the authorities on the other side are of the opinion that it is absolutely necessary for our fruit dealers to alter their method of packing in order to insure the apples being delivered in proper condition. That is a question of importance and quite apart from the question of ventilation and storage. Both the Department of Agriculture and mine have been advised at various times that great injury to the Canadian trade had resulted from improper packing in various ways, from the use of packages not suitable to the English trade, from very inferior fruit being packed, particularly in the centre of the barrels and sometimes fruit that was damaged at the time. I have a report from the 'Commercial Intelligencer', London, which it is worth while reading, although I hate to detain the House, because it throws a good deal of light on the complaints that have been made concerning the shipments of apples :

The shipments of apples from Canada in the season just closed were on a very large scale, but although we were short owing to the almost complete failure of home orchards, Canadians have not reaped the golden harvest they should have done out of our necessities. Many thousands of barrels of fruit have been sold here at a figure that would not cover freight and charges, without reckoning prime cost, and it is doubtless the fact that shippers have in many cases netted a loss on their consignments.

The Federation of Grocers' Associations of England have passed a resolution calling on exporters to change the present style of packing, and if the advice is followed Canadians may see a little more money in the export business than they have in recent years. They say that the barrel which is now used, save in a few instances, is a most unsuitable package. The fruit arrives in a damaged condition, and frequently apples of a fine quality, which were in prime order when put up, are unsaleable or only disposable at a low figure. This is borne out by our own experience, as we have seen fine fruit turned out of the barrels bruised and unsightly, which were probably a picture to look upon before they began their long journey.

Another objection to the barrel is its size. Grocers have only of late years taken up the sale of imported apples on any scale, and the reason is that they have not always the convenience of stowage required by the barrel, besides which a package containing three bushels of fruit is not a convenient one to handle. The unanimous expression of opinion by this important federation, which represents grocers throughout the entire country, should be taken heed of by shippers in Canada, who, if they can get grocers here to take up the sale of their apples all over the country, need not fear for the disposal of their surplus apples.

The package that would meet the ideas of the grocers here, according to what we have been able to make out from inquiries we have made, is a case of two compartments that would hold about one-half barrel, something after the style of the boxes now arriving from Tasmania and New Zealand. The apples should be laid in tiers, and paper shavings, where these are easily available, would help to prevent bruising and to preserve the flavour of the fruit, which is mostly gone by the time it gets on our tables.

The barrel is absolutely condemned, and it is to the interests of Canadians to devise some package which shall take its place.

Mr. CLANCY. Where does the right hon. gentleman find any justification in that for the neglect of the Department of Agriculture to see that its instructions are properly carried out ?

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I do not say that the department has shown any neglect, but I am pointing out that there are two or three sides to the question. If Canadian shippers had put their goods in proper packages, an immense number of the complaints that have been advanced would have disappeared. The sending forward of very large quantities in barrels is likely to cause the crushing of the fruit in many cases, particularly if the fruit be of tender character, which must naturally depreciate the products of our orchards when for sale in England. The government are as desirous as hon. gentlemen opposite can be, and have shown every anxiety to advance the interests of the community and of the farmers. So far as there is any justification for the remarks of the hon. gentleman, I am quite sure that my hon. colleague will do his very best to meet any reasonable demand that may be made by the shipping interests in the way of securing better shipments of our products.

These statements from his department as to the steps taken, which I have read, appear to me to show that the department has not been negligent of its duty. It appears to me that the department is doing what it can to provide that these matters shall be carefully attended to. I do not see, Sir, that there is any very great use, in my hon. friend's (Mr. Fisher's) absence, in prolonging this discussion very much. I will call his attention, when he returns, to the speech of the hon. member for Wentworth (Mr. E. D. Smith), and to the facts that he has stated—if they be facts ; all I can say is that they do not seem to me to correspond entirely with the statements supplied to me from the Department of Agriculture. I agree with the hon. gentleman (Mr. E. D. Smith) that the question is of importance ; I agree with him that the attention of the House and the government cannot be called to any subject of more importance than that of seeing to it that all our food products are landed in England in the best possible condition—all that is correct and true. The government, and particularly the Department of Agriculture, have been bending their energies in that direction. If, in any respect, they have fallen short or failed, all I can say is that, for one, I propose to do my uttermost to remedy these defects. And any one who knows what my hon. friend the Minister of Agriculture has done in the past in that direction will agree with me that the hon. gentleman may be relied upon to do all that he can, and the government, too, may be relied upon to do all that they can, to meet the needs and wants of the people in this regard.

Mr. A. B. INGRAM. Mr. Speaker——

Some hon. MEMBERS. One o'clock.

Mr. INGRAM. I desire to say only one word. The right hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce (Sir Richard Cartwright) cast reflection upon the hon. member for Wentworth (Mr. E. D. Smith) for not bringing this matter up earlier in this session. I wish to point out that on the 9th of June last the hon. member did bring this matter up, and I will quote one sentence that will be found at page 4568 of 'Hansard,' and which was spoken in the course of a long, able and important speech :

> I find, however, that there are only 199 thermograph records taken, 155 in cold storage chambers, 32 in cooled chambers, and 12 in ordinary storage.

In that speech the hon. gentleman dealt fully with the question. The Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Fisher) was in his place during a portion of the discussion, although he was not here when the hon. gentleman (Mr. E. D. Smith) began his address. So it is not correct to say that my hon. friend from Wentworth left this important matter until late in the session. But, on the other hand, I wish to point out that the hon. Minister of Agriculture has not deigned to reply to my hon. friend's speech from that day to this.

Some hon. MEMBERS. One o'clock.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. We are in the judgment of our friends on the other side. If the debate is closed, if nobody else wishes to speak, I think we had better divide upon the question.

Mr. T. S. SPROULE. I wish to say a few words on this question.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh, oh.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Sit down.

Mr. SPROULE. If hon. gentlemen opposite think that by this kind of interruption they are going to restrain any member on this side from expressing his views, they might as well understand first as last that their efforts will have no such result.

At one o'clock, House took recess.

House resumed at Three o'clock.

Mr. SPROULE. Mr. Speaker, when you left the chair at one o'clock we were dealing with the question of cold storage, and were discussing the answer made by the Minister of Trade and Commerce, who I regret is now not in his place. The minister was excusing the Minister of Agriculture and saying that he was unable to do justice to the subject owing to the absence of his colleague. We regard the Minister of Trade and Commerce as quite as much responsible for any defects in the situation as the Minister of Agriculture, and he should have answered for himself rather than for the Minister of Agriculture. Why ? Because the Minister of Trade and Commerce submits and has this House vote subsidies for steamships carrying mails. It has always been, we are told, the policy of the government in making these contracts to provide suitable accommodation, cold storage, cool air chambers and ventilated spaces for carrying the products of the country. When we were giving these subsidies, when parliament was giving consideration for the services of a steamship line, then would have been the best time to impose such conditions to the subsidy as we desired to have attached to it, and it is not and ought not to be the sole aim of the Minister of Trade and Commerce to have this House vote large subsidies to steamships for the purpose of carrying a portion of the mails of this country. He told us that the large bulk of our mails went by New York and would continue to go by New York on account of the more rapid transportation from that port, and because boats leave New York every day, whereas boats leave Montreal and Halifax practically only about once a week. Then if it was only partially for the purpose of carrying mails that the money is given, what was the other purpose ? The other purpose we are told repeatedly by the Minister of Agriculture and the Minister of Trade and Commerce as well, was to induce the vessel owners to provide suitable cold storage or ventilated chambers for carrying the perishable products of Canada in order to place them on the markets of Europe in the best possible condition. That being the case, whose duty was it above all others to see that this was done, if not that of the Minister of Trade and Commerce ? It was he who got the House to vote the subsidies for these vessels, and who made the contracts with the steamship companies. He was constantly in communication with the steamship companies, and if they failed to make such provisions as would ensure to the people of Canada suitable ventilated chambers and cold storage on these vessels, then they failed to do their duty, and I claim that the Minister of Trade and Commerce was more responsible than the Minister of Agriculture. When we were discussing these subsidies to vessels, his attention was drawn to this state of affairs, and we had the contracts produced: What was the bare provision of the contract? That the companies would provide suitable cold storage with no specifications as to just what provisions should be made and with no authority for the government to supervise or control the system.

This question of ventilation was discussed last year. The Minister of Agriculture was asked on May 14 about this matter and he answered :

Under this arrangement goods will be put into ordinary holds and they will not be charged any extra but just the ordinary freight rates on the same kind of goods.

He was speaking of the air shafts that were to supply cool air to the hold of the vessel. When the question was asked again across the floor of the House by the hon. member for Wentworth, what charges were made, he answered :

8,796 barrels apples were in cold air chambers and the extra charge was 1s. 6d. per barrel.

Now that does not agree with his answer to us when we were voting the money ; then there was to be no extra charge ; but he says there that it is 1s. 6d. per barrel extra, if you take advantage of these cold air chambers. Is that correct ? He assures us in one case that there is no extra charge, and takes credit to himself because they have made that provision in the interests of the farmers of the country, and when the question is put direct to him in another form he says that there is an extra charge for the use of these chambers. The importance of the extra charge of 10 shillings per ton on butter and cheese will be appreciated when I remind the House that the ordinary freight charge is 20 shillings a ton, so that the increase amounts to 50 per cent of the freight charges, for those who take advantage of this arrangement. Whatever benefit might result from the installation of this ventilation was denied to the agriculturists of this country owing to the increased cost.

The Minister of Trade and Commerce said : Oh, the Minister of Agriculture is not here. Why did you not bring this up earlier in the session when the Minister of Agriculture was present ? We have been endeavouring during the whole session up to the last few days to elicit the information we required to enable us to deal with this subject and it was because we could not get this information that we did not bring it up earlier. We had to resort to every expedient in parliamentary practice to obtain that information. We brought it up at the very earliest moment we could so as to enable us to deal with it intelligently and it is not our fault that the hon. Minister of Agriculture is not here. We have had this serious ground of complaint against the government for a long time that generally when these important questions are discussed they are discussed when only one or two or three of the ministers are in the House and when the members of the government charged with the department whose acts are under consideration are nearly always absent. Is it our duty to keep them in the House ? Is it not rather their place to be in the House ? Last night when we were discussing the Public Works estimates and when we desired information what did the hon. acting minister (Mr. Hyman) tell us ?—it is not in my department ; it is in the Department of Marine and Fisheries. Then we asked ; Why is not the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Mr. Préfontaine) here ? This money is being voted ; we want the information to enable us to do our duty to the country properly, to know whether this is a wise vote and if that information can only be got from the Department of Marine and Fisheries why is not the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries here ? I noticed the fact last night that while these important discussions were going on there were only two ministers outside of the ho. minister without portfolio who were in the House, that for a part of the time only one minister was here, and that none of the ministers representing the spending departments of the government that we desired to get information from were here.

Sir WILLIAM MULOCK. How many members of the opposition were present last night ?

Mr. SPROULE. There were enough members to put all the questions that we desired to put in order to bring out the information. If the ministers had been here as they ought to have been we could have shortened the time very much and the progress with the estimates would have been much more rapid. I say that we have just ground for complaint and that we have had to complain of the absence of ministers over and over again during the present session. The ministers seem to think that the discharge of their duties in the House is a secondary consideration. We want information but we are told that the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries is out. Then, we ask about the Department of Public Works and we are told that the hon. Minister of Public Works (Mr. Sutherland) is away, that he is unwell. Then we ask about the Department of Militia and Defence and we are told that the hon. Minister of Militia is not here, next we are told that the right hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce (Sir Richard Cartwright) is not here and we go round from one to the other until we are put to our wits end to know what to do to perform our duty in this House. We cannot get information. For half of the session we have been trying to get information from the hon. Minister of the Interior (Mr. Sifton) but we find that that hon. gentleman is rarely here when we are discussing a question in which his department is involved. Where are these men to-day ? Is it our place to compel them to stay here ? Is it rather not their duty to be here to answer questions put by members of the opposition regarding the conduct of their various departments ? I draw attention to this matter here so that the country may know how difficult it is to perform our duty in this House on account of the absence of ministers who ought to be in their places attending to their duties as ministers of the Crown.

Now, it strikes me in connection with this question which has been brought before the House that the right hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce has made no defence whatever for the Department of Agriculture or for his own department either. He simply says: Well, we desire to do our duty and if we have not done it we wish to do it. They get credit for good intentions but it is said that a certain road to a certain place is paved with good intentions that have never been carried out. They may talk of their good intentions but when it comes down to a question of actual business management there is a notable absence of it. The right hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce said that there were so many thermographs placed upon the vessels. We drew attention to one thing that we believed was very desirable and it is this: You are providing a shaft for the purpose of drawing cool air down into the holds of the vessels where the bulk of the produce is carried and you say you have thermographs down there but how do we know whether the temperature in the holds is the ordinary temperature of the Atlantic ocean or whether it is due to an abnormal or artificial condition produced by the appliances you have for the purpose of cooling the chambers? Attention was drawn to the fact by my hon. friend from South Wentworth (Mr. Smith) that if you do this intelligently you must have a thermograph as well above deck on the vessel so that you can ascertain what is from day to day the ordinary temperature of the ocean and then compare that temperature with the temperature that is registered by the thermograph which has been placed in the cool air chamber. It is not enough to have it in only one place. You say that you have a register of the temperature but you do not know whether the appliance that you have provided is accountable for the temperature that is in the chamber or whether it is due to the temperature of the ocean. To do this work intelligently we claim that it is necessary for you to have a thermograph as well above the deck so that you may be able to compare the temperature above and below deck and ascertain whether the appliance for cooling the air is doing its work or not. Then, there is no authority to go on the vessel to regulate the temperature and ascertain if everything is as it should be before these shipments are made. When the act regulating the shipment of cattle was introduced two years ago I remember very well the objections that were raised. I happened to be one of those who took an interest in helping to secure some amendments to the shipping regulations to compel the vessel owners to provide better accommodation for those in charge of the cattle, a better supply of hay for feed for the cattle, fresh water and to make better provision for the cattle as to space, stalls and other things. This Bill also provided that the government should have the right to inspect the vessels. I remember that when these regulations were proposed to be made we were obliged to fight the vessel owners at every step of our progress. But, we secured these advantages for the shippers of the country, not by the agreeable consent of the vessel owners but because the vessel owners were obliged to consent to these amendments. Inasmuch as some such provision has not been made in connection with the shipment of perishable products we claim that the hon. Minister of Agriculture and the right hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce, have not displayed business ability, prudence or foresight in the arrangements they have made with these vessel owners who have been given these large subsidies. I say it is because of these failures, failures which to-day leave us in such a position that we cannot determine what is the cause of the change of temperature in the holds, that we have no control over these vessels such as we should have, and that we cannot go upon the vessel and see before the cargo is put on or after it has been put on whether there has been suitable provision made to secure the cargo being carried across the ocean so as to be landed upon the market in proper condition. That is the reason why we complain. We have just grounds for complaint and we move this vote of censure on the government, including the hon. Minister of Agriculture and the right hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce, because of their culpable negligence, their want of business ability and indifference to the wants of the agriculturists, dairymen and fruit-growers. It is because of their indifference to the interests of these great classes that we are endeavouring to bring it to the attention of the House and to accentuate it by this vote. Then, I say it shows an indifference to the interests of the great producing class of the country—the farmers. We are told how much hon. gentlemen opposite do for the farmers, but these essential things that they could do they have not done. They have refrained from doing them. Yet, the hon. Minister of Agriculture will go on the platform, spread himself and talk about his splendid cold storage. What did he tell us the other day? First he went on to tell how the dairy products had increased in quantity and quality on account of the splendid provision that he had made for the shipment of them. He told us this industry had developed by millions of pounds because he had provided this cold storage, but a few days afterwards he had to tell us that there was only one cheese out of every fifty-eight, shipped in cold storage——

Mr. SPEAKER. Order.

Mr. SPROULE. I am not a speaking trumpet, and I would like to get an opportunity to say what I have to say—what observation did the Postmaster General make ?

Sir WILLIAM MULOCK. I did not make any observation ; I was only thinking.

Mr. SPROULE. I have no objection to your thinking if you and your government would think out how better to discharge your duties. I was proceeding to show that the development of the industry was not due to anything the government had done by providing cold storage, and as proof I drew attention to the fact that only one cheese in fifty-eight was sent in cold storage. The Minister of Agriculture has no right to take to himself the credit for the development of the industry under such circumstances. It is because of these derelictions on the part of the government and because of their lack of intelligence and business foresight that we believe we are justly entitled to move this amendment and to, if possible, censure the government because of the manner in which they have neglected to discharge their duties.

Mr. ANDREW BRODER. Mr. Speaker—

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh.

Mr. BRODER. You gentlemen had better keep quiet over there, because you are in cold storage, and you will find it difficult to get out. There is no use of your sweating ; that is the trouble with the butter and cheese which we send in cold storage ; it sweats. I want to bring the attention of the House and the country to a few things that ought to be understood more fully by the people of Canada. I find in the report of the Minister of Agriculture proof of the most guilty neglect of duty in reference to the condition of our products when they get to the old country. He tells us in his report that in one instance butter shipped to Glasgow in cold storage lay eleven days on the Glasgow dock. What is the use of shipping anything in cold storage when you allow it to be exposed to the weather for eleven days ? There ought to be some business system connected with this cold storage transportation. Previous to the election in 1900, every large rock and boulder through the country was placarded : 'Vote for Laurier and eleven cent cheese.' We are on the rocks now. Then, any poor fellow that got up on a political platform and could not talk very well, only had to point to the inscription on the rocks. To-day the rocks cry out against the government : Vote for Laurier and seven cent cheese. Where is the wonderful accomplishment of the Minister of Agriculture who himself has to admit that only one box of cheese out of fifty goes in cold storage. It is a strange process of reasoning that will force us to the conclusion that one box of cheese in cold storage will raise the price of the other forty-nine. I call the attention of the country to the further fact that the Canadian farmer to-day is confined to less articles out of which he can make money than ever before in the history of the country. That being so, his butter, his cheese and his cattle must be shipped under proper conditions or he will loose his foothold in the British market. The government are neglecting their duty, and Siberia, New Zealand and Denmark are displacing Canada in the English market. Russia, including Siberia, is taking a larger place in the butter trade of England than Canada is. Talk about what the government has done in the interests of the farmers of Canada. It is the energy of the farmers backed up by the energetic business men of Canada that has pushed the government along. These influences push the cart up the hill and when they get to the top the government shout : 'Look at the load we have drawn.' The Hon. Mr. Fisher is not in his place to-day, but he ought to be ; a farmer should not be away from home in the harvest time. I venture to say, however, Mr. Speaker, that the work won't suffer if he is away, judging of our experience of the man. Until there is a continuity of proper transportation in reference to these perishable products, and provision made on the other shore for their care, our trade will suffer. I am quite willing to admit that it would not be a wise thing for business men, or for the government either to over-ride the business conditions now in control of business men in England. But it is possible to use the men in business over there to the interest of this country, and the government have not done that. If the consignee of an article of a Canadian produce of a perishable nature, allows it to remain in Glasgow for eleven days lying on the dock there is a wrong condition of business. I will read what is said in the report of the Agricultural Department for 1903 :

> A good deal has been done in recent years to improve the transportation facilities for our export butter trade, so that to-day Canadian butter is carried in cold storage from the time it leaves the creamery until it reaches the British docks. To reap the full advantage of our chain of cold storage transportation it is apparent that the butter should go into cold storage as soon as it is landed in Great Britain.

Why is not that the case ?

> Instead of this, however, it is often allowed to remain on the quays at Liverpool and Glasgow several days, greatly to the detriment.

The idea of taking credit for sending butter and cheese over to England in cold storage, and allowing it to lie on the docks there for several days. It makes no difference under what condition you send the article over, if you allow it to stand on the dock until it has deteriorated in value. Can there be any stronger indictment of the government, and particularly the Minister of Agriculture in reference to the cold storage, than this very statement contained in his own report. After all the boasting of hon. gentlemen opposite; taking the last seven years of the Conservative regime and the first seven years of the Liberal regime, the average increase in the price of cheese has only been three-tenths of one cent per pound.

If you take the seven years inclusive of this year, that three-tenths of a cent will be gone; the average will be less than the average of the seven years previous to the Conservative party going out of power. Then why take such credit to the government? The song they sing all over the country is: See what we have done for your butter and your cheese; vote for Laurier and seven-cent cheese. This, as I have said, is on all the rocks. They will not sing the same song this year if they are honest; they will have to dance to a different kind of music. I want to say this before I sit down. In the interest of these large products of this country, the condition of the market as affected by the efforts of other people is not duly considered by hon. gentlemen opposite. We are meeting a different condition of things in the English market from what we ever met before, and until this new condition is studied and met, the business of this country of that nature cannot be successfully handled. We are too much at the mercy of the efforts of other people in the English market, unless we hold the first place there. In order to meet this new condition, it is necessary first to find your market; and, with all their boasting, hon. gentlemen opposite have not found a new market for this country since they came into power. After having found your market, it is necessary to keep it, and, in order to keep it, it is necessary to suit your market. Unless hon. gentlemen opposite change their system of attending to this business, they will fail to keep their market because they will fail to suit it.

House divided on amendment of Mr. E. D. Smith.

Mr. TAYLOR. The hon. member for Cumberland (Mr. Logan) and myself have not voted. The reason I did not vote is that I am paired with the chief whip of the government. I notice also that several gentlemen whose names are recorded are not now present. Their names ought certainly to be struck off the list.

Mr. COCHRANE. I am paired with the hon. member for Labelle (Mr. Bourassa). Had I not been paired, I would have voted for the amendment.

Amendment negatived, motion agreed to, and House went into Committee of Supply.

Department of Justice—salaries, including John Chisholm at $1,650, and allowance to private secretary of the Solicitor General, notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act, $39,090.

Mr. FOWLER. I notice that old phrase, not withstanding anything in the Civil Service Act. I would like to know what it means in this instance.

Hon. CHAS. FITZPATRICK (Minister of Justice). This item has reference to John Chisholm. Mr. Chisholm is a member of the bar of Nova Scotia, he has been in the department for a long time, and the intention is to give him an increase this year of $150 as a first-class clerk. He is a competent man and is worthy of the increase.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I know that Mr. Chisholm is a very good officer, and he has been a long time in the service of the department.

Department of Justice—contingencies, $12,300.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Why is it necessary to make some provision with regard to the private secretary of the Solicitor General?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. At the time he was not qualified but he has since passed his examination, and it is not really necessary now.

Mr. FOWLER. It seems to me it would be better for ministers to take men outside the service as their private secretaries. The private secretary to a minister must be mixed up in politics, and I don't think it is well that members of the civil service should take any part in political matters, although of course they should be perfectly free to exercise their franchise.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. There is something to be said in favour of what my hon. friend urges. But a private secretary, who is acquainted with the details of the department is more useful to the minister than could be an outsider. When Solicitor General, I took the private secretary of my predecessor and found him exceedingly useful. I never had any cause to suspect his loyalty, and when I became Minister of Justice, I took the private secretary of the gentleman whom I succeeded.

Mr. FOWLER. That is all very well, but at the same time a private secretary is bound to mix himself up in politics sometimes.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Of course, he cannot help being mixed up in politics. You have to use him for your private or political affairs.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What is the cause of the increase in the amount to be paid junior second-class clerks?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Miss Armstrong gets an increase of $50 from 1st of July, 1904. Mr. H. A. McGillivray gets an increase of $50 from 1st of October, 1904. There is an increase of $180 to Mr. Gilbert Smith who has been in the department many years and who formerly was connected with the penitentiary branch. He is really no addition to the force, but simply transferred from the position of temporary clerk, which he occupied since 1895 in the penitentiary branch.

Administration of Justice — miscellaneous expenditure, including Northwest Territories, $45,000.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The increase is due to the expanding business of the Northwest Territories. The expenditure has been increasing gradually until it has reached a very large amount. The amount expended in 1902-3 was $42,185. The services which show the largest increases are the maintenance of prisoners and the jury and witness fees, and we are obliged to ask for a supplementary vote of $20,000, making in all the expenditure connected with the administration of Justice in the Northwest Territories some $65,000. The maintenance of prisoners at the police posts costs $26,000. The prisoners who do not go to jail or penitentiary are held over, pending their trial in the mounted police posts, and the mounted police charge the department 60 cents per day for their maintenance. That cost us this year $26,000. Then there is the transport of prisoners from one place to another in the Territories. This is done by the police. We have to pay for the moving expenses and that item amounts to $6,000. Then there are the Crown prosecutors', juries' and witness fees and the coroners and sheriffs' fees.

Administration of Justice—to supplement the salary of the judge of the county court for district No. 7, Nova Scotia, $600.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. That is Judge Dodd at Sydney.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. That, I suppose, is in consequence of the immense amount of work thrown upon Judge Dodd by reason of that great commercial development there?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Yes. We made special cases of Halifax, St. John and Sydney.

Mr. WILSON. What is his salary now?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. It is $3,000—$2,400 was the usual salary.

Administration of Justice—allowance to 'ad hoc' judges, $200.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. This is a vote which is seldon drawn upon. It is to provide that judges of adjoining districts may be sent in, where, through illness or other causes, the judges are not in their places.

Administration of Justice—Supreme Court—one usher, $700.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Is that an additional official?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. This is the usher of the court, in succession to Curran. I understand that Curran was paid as a messenger and acted as usher. We have now appointed a man as usher of the court.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I see that in the next item the messengers, there is a reduction of $540. I suppose that means that there is not an additional official.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The accountant explains to me that the increase of $520 in the item of contingencies and disbursements, extra messengers, &c., means that an extra messenger has been appointed in the Supreme Court.

Administration of Justice—Exchequer Court of Canada—one chief clerk, $1,900.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. This is Mr. Morse, who is a barrister and has been sixteen years on the staff of the court. Since 1890 he has been engaged in the preparation of the court reports, and he acts as a sort of legal secretary to the judge. He is a very competent man. I have decided, this year, to make him a chief clerk, which entails an increase of $150 in this vote.

Exchequer Court of Canada—two junior 2nd class clerks, one at $1,075, one, Duncan Clark at $1,000, notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act, $2,075.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. These are James Macdonald, and Duncan Clark, officials who are well known and who are very competent men. Mr. Clark has been in the service for nine years and is reported to be, by the registrar, as one of the most efficient men in the service.

Exchequer Court of Canada—contingencies—judge's and registrar's travelling expenses, salaries of sheriffs, &c., printing and stationery, &c., and of $50 for judge's books, $4,000.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I was not present when item 26 was under discussion, but I will take advantage of this opportunity to call the attention of the Minister of Justice to a matter of importance. We have had an admission in this House from an hon. member that he sat here with the expectation of taking a place on the bench in the province of Nova Scotia. Telegrams have been sent by that hon. gentleman to his friends, petitions have been circulated by his friends with his knowledge among his friends to the senior minister from that province and to the Prime Minister, urging that the hon. gentleman should be given this position on the bench. It was a rule laid down by the late Sir John Macdonald never to give a place upon the bench to any one who asked for it, because any one who asked for this position proved himself thereby utterly unworthy of it. The hon. gentleman to whom I refer is not in his place now. I am sorry he is not. I will ask the attention of the minister in the meantime, and I will bring it forward again when the hon. gentleman is in his place. I am calling attention to the hon. member for Hants (Mr. Russell) who has been driven out of every part of Nova Scotia in which he has held any position. I would ask the Minister of Justice what are the facts in connection with the application of this hon. gentleman for a place on the bench.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. No application has been made to me for this position. All I can add to that is that, if I were asked to make a selection for the appointment to the court in the province of Nova Scotia, I do not think that, because of his standing and eminent ability and his position generally, I could make a better selection than the hon. member for Hants (Mr. Russell).

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I would ask the hon. minister in this connection, why it is that there has been such very great delay in filling the position of chief justice of the province of Nova Scotia? This has been the subject of a good deal of comment in that province, and the rumour is not by any means unknown that questions of political expediency have had something to do with it;—that is to say, a certain county in the province is a fairly close county in most elections, and that we have had the most unusual condition of a vacancy in the position of head of the highest court of that province continuing now for smething like six months because of that reason, and that reason alone. It is not desirable, in the interest of the administration of justice, that a rumour of that kind should be so common and apparently so well founded as this has been. If I remember rightly the matter was referred to by a question early in the session, and the Minister of Justice said at the time that the delay in filling the vacancy was due to the fact that the late chief justice still retained the position of judge of the Admiralty Court.

It would not appear to me that that affords any reason whatever for delay in the appointment. In the province of New Brunswick, and elsewhere the gentleman who fills the position of local judge of the Exchequer Court is not the chief justice. That position is not associated in any way with the position of chief justice of Nova Scotia. That position is absolutely distinct from that of the local judge of the Exchequer Court. I know no reason why the Supreme court of Nova Scotia should have been deprived of its head for so many months and cannot conceive of any reason for it, unless we are to assume that the rumours which have undoubtedly been current in the province are worthy of credence. I think it is due to the House as well as to the people of Nova Scotia and especially to the bench and bar of Nova Scotia that my hon. friend should make some statement.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I think that the chief justice of Nova Scotia sent in his resignation at the end of January or the beginning of February last. Of course, I speak from recollection only. And at the time he resigned his position as chief justice while retaining his position as judge in admiralty. I quite understand there is no connection between the chief justiceship and the admiralty because the duties of the office of chief justice do not entail the duties of a judge in admiralty. At the same time my hon. friend will realize that it would be advisable in view of the salaries paid—I have to admit, speaking now absolutely for myself, that the salaries are very small,—to offer the position to some one who would enjoy the advantage of being a judge in admiralty and able to add the emoluments derived from that office to these derived from the chief justiceship. The matter has received some consideration and so far no one from Nova Scotia has made complaint that any inconvenience has resulted from the vacancy. Speaking for myself I would be prepared to urge the appointment of a chief justice. Of course the leader of the opposition (Mr. R. L. Borden) is aware that the position of chief justice is not under the patronage of the Minister of Justice. The chief justiceships as well as appointments to the Supreme Court are not under the patronage of the Minister of Justice. However, I will see to it, so far as I am concerned, that immediately after the session we will consider the matter carefully and something will be done towards making the appointment so far as I can arrange.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I do not know the etiquette as to the patronage in regard to these positions, but I believe that the appointment rests with the Prime Minister.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. That has been the practice since 1885, since Sir John Thompson's time.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. It seems to me the Prime Minister should be here to answer the question.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I do not seek to shirk responsibility.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Possibly you might leave an item.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. You can bring it up at any time.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. You will have supplementaries in which that will be touched upon.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I must ask the Minister of Justice to be prepared on some further item to answer this question a little more satisfactorily than he has done to-day. There is no argument at all in what he has said. If the chief justice of Nova Scotia should retain the position of judge in admiralty for the next three years the government of this country would be justified in keeping that position vacant for three years if the argument of the Minister of Justice is a valid one. That is not a valid reason, and it was not believed by the people of Nova Scotia that any such reason has influenced the government. I accept everything the Minister of Justice has said exactly in the sense in which he intended me to understand it. He realizes that perfectly ; I understand it exactly as he intends, but I want him to understand this distinctly that the people of Nova Scotia believe, and I think there is good reason for believing, that the position of chief justice of that province has been kept open for reasons of political expediency and not for the reasons suggested by the Minister of Justice to-day. It is not right that there should be any dealing with important judicial positions from that standpoint or for reasons of that kind. There are men on the bench and at the bar of Nova Scotia who are not only able but willing to fill that position to-day for the somewhat meagre salary attached to it, and there would have been not the slightest difficulty in filling that position satisfactorily to the people and to the bar of Nova Scotia, without delay of more than one or two weeks after the vacancy occurred. Under these conditions I think it is due to the House that the Minister of Justice should either now or later give some better explanation or that the Prime Minister, if the responsibility devolves on him, should give some better explanation than we have had to-day. The whole matter of judicial appointments may require to be discussed a little either now or later on ; in fact I propose to discuss it. I will not say any more at this time but I would like the Minister of Justice to see that the premier is here when some supplementary estimate of his own is brought before the House in order that this question may be discussed in a more satisfactory way.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. In this connection I was a little surprised to hear a gentleman of the standing of the Minister of Justice state that he would have been satisfied to see the member for Hants appointed to a position upon the bench. After the exhibition which was furnished this House and the country yesterday by the Minister of Trade and Commerce in defending a gentleman bordering on the condition of a criminal, and his appointment to a high position in the service of this country, I suppose we should be prepared for anything, but I did not think the Minister of Justice would so far forget himself as to endorse the appointment of the hon. gentleman for Hants to a position on the bench. The hon. member for Hants has distinguished himself in this House. He has practically admitted that he is an applicant for the position of chief justice of the province of Nova Scotia. Whether he admits it or not, it is well known that he is an applicant for the position. It is well known that he telegraphed the Prime Minister and urged his friends to telegraph the Prime Minister——

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. I am afraid the hon. gentleman is out of order. We cannot discuss the hon. member for Hants and his relations to the government under this item.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. We are discussing contingencies and appointments to the chief justiceship of Nova Scotia.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. He is discussing simply the character and reputation of the member for Hants. You cannot discuss that under this heading.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. The item is in reference to judges.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. The hon. member for Hants is not a judge.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. He may be, we are discussing judicial appointments.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. My ruling is this and I am sure the hon. gentleman will see the reasonableness of it, that you cannot discuss the relations of the member for Hants with the government. The hon. member's statement is simply a conjecture and we cannot discuss that here.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I am discussing the purity of the bench and we have the policy of these gentlemen——

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. I rule that it is out of order.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Order, order.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. The hon. member should sit down. My decision is that we cannot take up the question whether the member for Hants is expecting an appointment or not in dealing with a question of this kind.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I am asked to wait until the hon. member for Hants is here. He was in his place five minutes before this discussion began and he skipped out. If the Minister of Justice will give us an item or name a day when this matter will be discussed, I will be satisfied. If he will not I shall make a motion to adjourn, because I certainly am not going to allow, as far as I am concerned, any such appointments as this to be made, of members who occupy places in the parliament of Canada with appointments in their pockets, misrepresenting the people of the country without——

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. Order.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The leader of the opposition (Mr. R. L. Borden) has given notice that he intends to bring this up at a future date and perhaps we might as well discuss it then.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What item is there ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. We will make an item ; we can take it up at any time.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. Will this pass ?

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. No, we will not pass it while I am on my feet making an arrangement with the Minister of Justice. Under no circumstances will we do that.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. The hon. gentleman need not get angry. I was looking at the Minister of Justice and did not see the leader of the opposition was on his feet. The hon. gentleman should be a little more courteous to the chair.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The chair should not be discourteous.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. I have never uttered an uncourteous word in this House in the last four years. Why the hon. member should speak as he has done I do not understand. I must protect myself.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I have no desire to be discourteous but I do not wish to have an item passed when I am on my feet. Would the minister give us the item.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. There are two items in the supplementaries for the present year and for the past year. The additional amount required for judges travelling allowances will be found at page 2 of the further supplementary estimates and at page 1 of the supplementaries.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Then I understand that on any of these items this matter may be discussed.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. On any item, or if it would be more advantageous to have the question widened, we might fix a day on going into supply to take up the matter and discuss it. I will arrange to have the right hon. Prime Minister here and it would probably be better to take it up on going into supply.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Probably it would be better to have it in committee as there might be some question to be asked and it would be less embarrassing.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Is it the intention of the government or the hon. Minister of Justice to appoint another judge in the Exchequer Court ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. That question has been discussed and I must confess I thought it necessary at times to make such an appointment but there is no intention of doing it at the present time.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Then there is no member sitting in this House with the appointment in his pocket ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. He may have the appointment but it has not come from me.

Administration of Justice—Yukon Territory, travelling allowance for judges, $1,500.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. What allowance for travelling expenses do they require ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The two places at which they sit that I know of are Dawson and Whitehorse. I may say that while we have voted this sum for three years none of it has ever been used.

Living allowance of sheriff, deputy sheriff, clerk of court, assistant clerks, police magistrate and stenographers of territorial court at $1,800 each, $14,400.

Mr. TAYLOR. I would like to ask the hon. minister if Mr. Eilbeck is yet in the Yukon Territory ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Yes.

Mr. TAYLOR. And you are giving him a living allowance in addition to his salary ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. His salary is $4,000 a year and his living allowance $1,800. That is the same living allowance as is paid to all the officials in the Yukon with the exception of the judges who receive $5,000 and the librarian and caretaker who receive each $1,200.

Mr. COCHRANE. Would it not be better to give them a salary and allow them to live on their salary ? I do not believe in that way of paying officials at all. There is no inducement for them to be economical or to show any respect for the amount of money that you give them. I believe in giving them a proper salary and allowing them to live on their salary.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I think this whole question of living allowance to officials in the Yukon will require to be reconsidered at a very early date but it would be very hard for the Department of Justice to discriminate as against our officials when the officials of other departments are paid living allowances. It is rather a curious anomaly that the officials of other departments who go to Manitoba, the Northwest, the Yukon and British Columbia, are allowed in addition to their salaries certain amounts over and above for living allowances, but the unfortunate judges who happen to be assigned to the courts there are paid actually less salary than they are paid in the eastern provinces.

Mr. FOWLER. It is unfortunate but a great many men are very willing to take these positions.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The best are not chasing after them.

Mr. FOWLER. I understand that the cost of living in the Yukon is not so very much greater than it is in British Columbia. It does seem to me that $5,000 in addition to the salary of a judge is an exceedingly large amount. Not only that, but we make a living allowance of $1,800 a year to the sheriff, deputy sheriff, clerk of court, assistant clerks, police magistrate and stenographers of the territorial court who in addition receive salaries equal to if not greater than those which they would receive if they were occupying the same positions in the eastern provinces.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. No.

Mr. FOWLER. At least equal.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The sheriff probably gets more than he would receive east but not the rest.

Mr. FOWLER. It seems to me that it is about time that kind of thing was stopped.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I agree.

Mr. COCHRANE. Do I understand the hon. minister to say that the best men are not looking for these positions ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I did not say that but I did say that they were not made very attractive just now.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Will the hon. minister explain if the judges or officials of his department are on the territorial council and if so, what are their functions ? Are the ordinances of the council laid before this parliament ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I think so. I know we receive them. Judge Dugas is on the council but I cannot tell about the others. I think there are six nominative and six elective, or five nominative and five elective members but I do not just remember at the present moment.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. That territory is governed and all the record we have of it practically is the voting of the salaries for these officials. There may be records but they have not attracted my attention. Have we any record of the internal rules, regulations and laws that are enforced in the Yukon to-day ? These should be prepared and submitted to parliament at the very earliest date.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I will have to look at the Yukon Territory Act which we passed a couple of years ago before I can answer that question. The Act provides for the way in which these ordinances shall be disposed of. I know they come to the department but what is done with them after that I do not know.

Mr. FOWLER. The stenographers are paid salaries greatly in excess of what similar officers in the east receive.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. They get $2,000 a year.

Mr. FOWLER. The court stenographers in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia do not get any such salaries, and I doubt if they do in Ontario. In addition to the $2,000 you give the Yukon stenographers $1,800 living allowance.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. In Quebec the stenographers are paid by fees, and these fees are such as to enable them to earn very much more than $2,000 a year. The work of a stenographer is very hard work indeed. A man who is obliged to attend in court all day and do this work earns every dollar he gets, and I can quite appreciate that $2,000 for a really good stenographer—there are two of them up there—is not too much.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. It is not too much if they are good men.

Mr. FOWLER. That all depends upon the amount of labour they perform, and the frequency of the court sittings. It may be that the work of these stenographers is very light indeed, and it need not follow that they must be of the expert class.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I do not know Mr. Craig, but I do know Mr. Valiquette ; he is an Irishman with a French name which reverses the usual order and he is expert in both English and French.

Mr. CLARKE. He ought to be paid double then.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The police court stenographer only receives $1,200.

Mr. FOWLER. I am not objecting to the $2,000, but I do object to the living allowance of $1,800 which brings the salary up to $3,800 a year. We have official reporters in this House who perform duties very much more onerous than the gentlemen in the courts in the Yukon, and our reporters get just the same salary of $2,000, and as I understand they have to pay their own living allowance.

Mr. LANCASTER. I would like to suggest to the Minister of Justice the propriety of having both the stenographers and the sheriff paid by fees.

At these salaries, these men are probably getting from $50 to $75 a day for every day they work. The stenographers cannot be working in court all the time, and I think it would be better to compensate them by fees which of course considering the conditions in the Yukon might be higher than they are in the east ; I do not think we should pay them $3,800 a year, for perhaps not working a quarter of the year. I would draw the attention of the minister to the fact that the Yukon judges are getting in living allowance and salary, twice what the judges get in Ontario. The Yukon judges get $5,000 salary and $5,000 living allowance. Living is pretty expensive now in Ontario, as the government points out when they propose to increase the salaries of civil servants. The judges of the High Court in Ontario get $5,000 salary and they have to live on that. I would assume that the Ontario judges are at least equally as competent jurists as the judges in the Yukon. It would be better in my opinion to give the Yukon judges a salary and let them live economically, or extravagantly as they think fit. It would be a more businesslike way of dealing with the matter. I would not be penurious ; I would give them a good salary, but I do not believe in giving half of the stipend in the name of salary and the other half as living allowance : It would indicate that he is supposed to save his salary and live on the allowance. In Ontario a stenographer gets $5 a day when he sits in court and so much per folio for the evidence transcribed, and they manage to make a pretty good income out of it, but they earn all they get and they are busy most of the time. It would be more satisfactory, I think, if the stenographers were paid by fees.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. If this question of living allowance is to be reconsidered I would like to have it reconsidered in a general way in regard to all the departments, and not to have my department singled out especially. I had an idea at the time the Yukon judges were appointed, that it was not proper to give them this living allowance, but the difficulty arose that if we paid a judge in the Yukon a higher salary than his brother judge elsewhere, and if we wanted to transfer him to another part of the country, he would be sitting side by side with another judge who had far less salary, but who would be performing the same duty. The same difficulty would arise on the retirement of a Yukon judge. I certainly am not of opinion that exorbitant salaries should be paid ; the salaries are large enough already ; they are quite generous. Remember that I am now speaking of the Yukon and not of other parts of the country, because so far as other parts of Canada are concerned I wish to make it quite clear, speaking for myself, that in my opinion the whole question of judicial salaries requires consideration at the earliest possible moment.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. FOWLER. Would not the salary attach to the office and not to the man ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. It is attached to the man. We pass a statute providing for the appointment of a judge, and in the same statute we provided for the salary, so that he that takes the position takes the salary.

Mr. FOWLER. Even if he were sent somewhere else ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Yes, that is the difficulty.

Mr. FOWLER. Do any of these officials get fees in addition to their salaries ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Yes, the Crown prosecutor is paid by fees.

Mr. TAYLOR. What about the sheriff ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The sheriff gets his salary, I am opposed to the system of fees to sheriffs and clerks of the court. I believe, generally speaking, that the fees should go into the public exchequer, and that the man should get his salary. Otherwise, especially when they are far away from control, you could not tell what might happen.

Mr. FOWLER. I agree with that.

Mr. TAYLOR. I hope the Minister of Justice will give instructions that the sheriff of the Yukon will confine his electioneering to the Yukon territory in the coming elections, and that he won't send him down to Ontario.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I never did. I do not approve of it in any manner, shape or form.

Mr. TAYLOR. Then we will take for granted that he will stay at home this time.

Yukon Territory—law books, &c., and freight thereon, for the use of the bench and bar, and stationery, and freight thereon, for use of courts, $2,500.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. So far as I am concerned, this is the last year provision will be made for the library up there. It must be far enough advanced now for them to maintain their own library.

Yukon Territory—miscellaneous expenditure, including fees and expenses of Crown prosecutor, salary and living allowance of stenographer of police court and other officials or employees connected with the administration of justice, coroners' inquests, &c., &c., $25,000.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. We spent last year $19,480.64.

Mr. FOWLER. Why are you taking the whole vote this year ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. They make very good use of the money.

Dominion police, $32,000.

Mr. CLARKE. Have these men been given any increase in their salaries ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. There have been two increases since 1896 ; but there has been no increase, I think, since 1901.

Mr. CLARKE. Was any requisition sent to the hon. gentleman ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The question of increase was considered, and it was thought proper to lay the matter over for the present, so that the government might have an opportunity of considering the advisability of increasing the pay of the Northwest Mounted Police and that of the Dominion Police at the same time.

Mr. CLARKE. What pay does a constable in the Dominion Police receive now ? They are a very fine body of men.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I think they get from $1.50 to $1.90. I think $2.10 is paid to inspectors.

Mr. CLARKE. That is a pretty small wage considering the cost of living in the capital. I think the minister might reasonably give some small increase to these men. The constables in most of the towns of Ontario get more than that.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I think after three years they get $1.90. I can say, as the official head of the department, that these men are admirably well qualified, and they deserve every possible consideration. They are certainly as fine a body of men as we can possibly have. I may say that no department of the government is administered with less friction and gives the minister less trouble than the Dominion Police.

Mr. CLARKE. The best expression of the appreciation of the minister would be a slight increase in the salaries of these men.

Kingston Penitentiary, $177,600.

Mr. TAYLOR. Last year the Minister of Justice stated, in reference to the chaplain of Kingston penitentiary, that he purposed making an arrangement by which each denomination should take week or month about to fill the position, which was then vacant. Has that been carried out ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. That was said when the Bill for the amendment of the Penitentiaries Act was up last year. My hon. friend will remember that the Bill was dropped. That appeared to be the unanimous desire of the House, so far as I could gather at the time.

Mr. TAYLOR. What action was taken ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The Bill was dropped and nothing was done. The old order of things was allowed to continue.

Mr. TAYLOR. I have a letter from a clergyman in Kingston, which reads as follows :

Permit me to report to you as a member of parliament what quite a few in these parts regard as a high-handed way of making government appointments. In a few brief words permit me to state the case. The Rev. Cartwright, brother of Sir Richard, and an Episcopalian, has been chaplain in the penitentiary for twenty-five years. Lately he decided to resign. His resignation was accepted and Rev. Cooke, an Episcopalian, was installed as chaplain without any person knowing anything about the change. One of the executive told me to-day that as an executive they knew nothing about the change until they saw it published in the city papers. Now, what many of us object to is this stealthy way of filling important government positions of this character without giving other denominations any opportunity of having a representative apply for the position. I will be glad if you can do anything which will open the whole case so that the appointment can be made in the light of day and not inside prison walls.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Would my hon. friend pardon me if I ask him to explain the word 'executive' in that letter? I do not understand what that means.

Mr. TAYLOR. Neither do I.

Mr. CLARKE. That would be the local executive of the Liberal party.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I allow politics to run a great many things, but I do not allow it to run religious matters.

Mr. TAYLOR. The minister has not carried out the arrangement he spoke of last year, but, on the recommendation of the executive committee of the Liberal party in Kingston, this gentleman was appointed at once.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I think my hon. friend is quite wrong. The statement in the letter he read was to the effect that the executive had not been consulted in regard to the appointment.

Mr. CLARKE. Was any recommendation received as to the minister appointed?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The only person I would consult as to the appointment of a chaplain belonging to the Episcopal Church would be the bishop.

Mr. CLARKE. Was any recommendation received from anybody else?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I do not remember.

Mr. CLARKE. Who recommended the appointment? Was the recommendation received from the executive of the Liberal party?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Certainly not, I would not consult them in such a matter.

Mr. CLARKE. Was he appointed on the recommendation of the bishop?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I cannot say, but if I consulted anybody, he would be the only one.

Mr. CLARKE. Then there was no one consulted?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Not that I can recollect.

Mr. CLARKE. There were some recommendations, however, received by the department?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I have no recollection of any.

Mr. CLARKE. Would it be possible to ascertain from the files of the department from whom the recommendations came?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I will see.

Mr. TAYLOR.

Mr. CLARKE. And we will have an opportunity of discussing the matter later?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. If this were a question of the appointment of a Roman Catholic chaplain, I should not like to discuss the question of recommendations. I would rely absolutely and exclusively on the question of fitness. I do not like, so far as the appointment of a chaplain is concerned, to discuss the question of recommendations.

Mr. CLARKE. That is just the reason why I ask the minister to bring down all the communications with his department with respect to the appointment of this gentleman to the position of chaplain.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I will consider that.

Mr. CLARKE. I understand the hon. gentleman to agree to do that.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I will consider it. I would not like to establish the precedent.

Mr. CLARKE. If the position which the minister takes is a sound one, if he would not consider any recommendations made, there can be no objection to his bringing these down, so that we may see what recommendations were made and who made them.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The particular point I made, and it is quite apparent to anybody, is that the executive of the Liberal party was not consulted. So far as I am concerned, I would not consult it in a matter of that description.

Mr. FOWLER. What is the rule in the case of Protestant chaplains? Are they confined to any particular denomination?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. No. At New Westminster the chaplain is a Presbyterian. In Manitoba he is a Methodist and at Kingston, St. Vincent de Paul and Dorchester, the Protestant chaplains are Anglican.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. What about the Salvation Army?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. You can leave them to me. They do the work outside the gates and do it very effectively. I have an item in the estimates for them.

Mr. CLARKE. I understand the minister to say that this appointment was not made on the recommendations of the Lord Bishop of Kingston.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. If I were appointing a Roman Catholic chaplain. I would make the appointment on the recommendation of the Archbishop. In the case of the Reverend Mr. Cook, I cannot recollect whether or not he was appointed on the recommendation of his bishop, but I have grave doubts about it. The only man I would consult in the case of that kind, and the only one I think, would be entitled to be consulted would be the ecclesiastical superior of the chaplain.

Mr. CLARKE. Was he consulted ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I cannot say.

Mr. TAYLOR. It would be better if the Minister of Justice would carry out the statement he made last year with reference to the Protestant chaplains. He said that all denominations should have a representative. At Kingston there is a Roman Catholic and there is also a Presbyterian. I have no objection to that, but the other denominations should be represented.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Perhaps they are not represented in the penitentiaries.

Mr. TAYLOR. The minister said last year that he would let a Presbyterian take one month, a Methodist another, an Anglican another, and so on.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Are you sure I made that statement ? Of course I will take my hon. friend's word for it.

Mr. TAYLOR. I am sure that was the statement made. If the hon. minister will look up 'Hansard' he will find it there.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The law provides for one Catholic and one Protestant chaplain.

Dorchester penitentiary, $59,700.

Mr. FOWLER. What is the cause of the increase in the Dorchester Penitentiary?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. It is due to lands, building and equipment. We had nothing but an ordinary board fence around the institution, and we bought some land and are putting the whole establishment on a par with the other penitentiaries.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Is this the penitentiary of which that gentleman is warden who took part in the Guysborough elections ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. He denied that. As soon as I learned of the report, I wrote to the inspector and the charge was denied.

Mr. FOWLER. Did he deny that he was in Guysborough ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The report as to Warden Craig is that he was in Guysborough, but denied that he had anything to do with the election beyond voting. We will take up the second item in the supplementary estimates for the year ending June 30, 1905, I will give my explanations on the items in that vote, and we can then keep it open for the express purpose of discussing the question of the judges' salaries.

Civil government—Department of Justice—to provide for an additional 2nd class clerkship, $1,200.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Two years ago, I allowed one 2nd class clerkship to drop. It had been held by Mr. Blackadar. I wish to recreate that clerkship intending to appoint Miss Armstrong, who has been for many years in the department and who is a very competent person.

To increase the salary of R. R. Creighton, notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act, $200.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Mr. Creighton was accountant of the Kingston penitentiary. A few years ago I transferred the book-keeping of the penitentiary to this department here and brought Mr. Creighton to Ottawa. He has proved such an efficient man that I wish to increase his salary $200.

To increase the salary of T. J. Morris, notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act, $100.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Mr. Morris is a lawyer's clerk whom we have in the department. He is engaged in connection with the filing of records. He is getting $600, which is a very small salary, and I want to increase it to $700. These three items make up the second vote in the supplementary estimates, and we will allow it to remain with these explanations, in case the leader of the opposition (Mr. R. L. Borden) wishes to bring up the question of the judges' salaries.

Administration of justice—penitentiaries generally—to pay expenses in connection with supervision of paroled and discharged convicts, $2,000.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. This is a new departure for which I ask the approval of the House. In connection with the paroled convicts we find that a great number fall away to their old habits because they cannot get employment or assistance. This is an item put in at the suggestion of Superintendent Archibald, of the Salvation Army, who has done an immense amount of good in connection with the prison-gate work of the Salvation Army. The Army has a certain number of people who attend at the prison gate—they know when men are to be released, being kept informed when they inquire by the Department of Justice—and they take hold of these men, find them employment, help them along and encourage them. If a man, for instance, is a mechanic, and needs tools, or something of that kind, the intention is that Superintendent Archibald may be able to take out of this fund such an amount as is necessary to help the chap along. I find that it is absolutely necessary to give a man a chance, if he has happened to fall into trouble and the best way when he gets out of gaol, is for society not to turn its back upon him.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. WILSON. I thoroughly endorse what the minister has said and am very glad that he has this vote in the estimates. There are none more worthy of assistance and none that are doing better work for the poorer classes than the Salvation Army. I think the minister will remember that last session we had a little talk about it. I think that all parties in this House and out of it will endorse the passing of this vote.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The Inspector draws my attention to the fact that, perhaps, under the item as it appears in the estimates we may not be able to do all we want. He suggests, therefore, that it should be amended so that we may be able to buy a kit for a discharged convict or anything of that kind. I would move that it be amended to read, 'travelling expenses and aid to discharged convicts.' That will make it absolutely clear.

Amendment agreed to.

Mr. SAM HUGHES. Why not say that this is for the Salvation Army ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. No, I always mean what I say, and I think that here I have said what I mean. This vote is put in at the request of Mr. Archibald, I want, if I can—I am not sure I shall be able to do it—to appoint an officer who will receive a salary to do this work. I tried to get Superintendent Archibald, but the Salvation Army would not let him go.

Mr. WILSON. Will the new officer be a Salvation Army man ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. That is my inclination.

Mr. SPROULE. The minister keeps a register of those who are on parole and how they turn out afterwards ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Yes. It may be of interest to the committee to know that there are eight men who are discharged convicts from the penitentiary—I will not say where they are, but the facts are given me by Superintendent Archibald—who have been placed by him in important positions of trust. One of them has held his position for five years. The employer knows that he is a discharged convict, but no one else knows it. Not one of these men has fallen away.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. SPROULE. Can the hon. minister give us the returns of those who have been paroled and who have broken their parole ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The hon. gentleman will find that in my report. I will look it up in a moment.

Mr. WILSON. Did the minister agree on this amount with the Salvation Army ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Yes.

Mr. LOGAN. I am glad to see this item in the estimates. The only reason I wish to speak about it is that I wish to say a word about Superintendent Archibald. If the minister can secure his services, he will have the best man in all Canada for this work. I have had the advantage and privilege of knowing Superintendent Archibald from boyhood. He is a splendid specimen of manhood and, as I say, the best man the minister could have for carrying on this work.

Mr. FOWLER. I understood that the minister was looking up the percentage of lapses among paroled prisoners.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The inspector tells me the percentage is about five. I might give the particulars of these because there is an erroneous impression as to the number. The number liberated for instance from the time the Act was put in force was as follows :

Year.	Number.
1899-00	71
1900-1	122
1901-2	157
1902-3	113

Nine per cent of the total prison population were paroled, and of these about five per cent returned. I find the parole system operates admirably, and if I were connected with this work for any great number of years I would adopt the Swiss system in reference to the sentence, the indeterminate sentence so that a man in jail would feel that on his own good conduct would depend the time of his release.

Mr. SPROULE. I am glad to hear this is turning out so well. I know that the hon. gentleman's predecessor Mr. Mills was much in favour of it and I thought he was right, but I have seen some adverse criticisms of the system since that, indicating that if the system was not being abused, it was at any rate not turning out as great a success as was anticipated. I think myself the system is a good one.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. The minister speaks of the inspectors. How many inspectors of penitentiaries are there at present ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. There are two.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. In what position is Mr. Stewart ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. He remains an inspector. He is the senior inspector but remains in the department constantly at my disposal. The other is Mr. Dawson. I may say that the appointment of an additional inspector was absolutely necessary. Previous to the appointment of Mr. Dawson the penitentiary of British Columbia had not been inspected for three years.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. You have a good man there.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Yes, a good man, perfectly reliable in every way. I think the result of the administration shows—of course I cannot claim any credit for it—that the inspectors are competent men and are doing the work well.

Administration of Justice, miscellaneous (further supplementaries), $26,000.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I gave some explanation of this on the item in the main estimates for miscellaneous expenditure, $45,000.

This is an increase of $3,000 over the main estimates for the year 1903-4. The still expanding business of the Northwest Territories necessitates an increased expenditure. The amount expended in 1902-3 was $42,018.58 but a number of accounts had to be carried on to the next year because the appropriation was insufficient. The expenditure in 1901-2 was $42,909.42. The services which show the largest increase of late years are the cost of maintenance of prisoners and the amount of jury and witness fees in criminal trials. We are asking a supplementary vote of $20,000 making $65,000 altogether.

For 1904-5 this vote is estimated to be spent about as follows :

IN NORTHWEST TERRITORIES.
Maintenance of prisoners at police posts at 60 cents per diem for each prisoner	$26,000
Transport of prisoners	6,000
Crown prosecutors, legal services and expenses	8,000
Jury and witness fees	15,000
Coroner's inquests	2,500
Sheriff's fees	1,500
Clerks of court, fees	1,500
ELSEWHERE.
Extradition expenses	2,000
Copies and translation of evidence	500
Sundries	2,500
	$60,000
Penitentiaries—
Manitoba penitentiary, additional amount required	$6,000
Dorchester penitentiary, additional amount required	1,000
Regina jail, additional amount required	500

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The explanation is:

Manitoba—to pay cost of transfer of 32 prisoners to St. Vincent de Paul, $1,500 ; cost of brick-making plant and necessary buildings, $2,500 ; maintenance of convict population above that estimated $1,000. The population was estimated at 130, but notwithstanding the transfer of 32 prisoners, it is 155 now. This abnormal increase has necessitated additional accommodation, and the brick plant has been installed to facilitate construction. The mason instructor was compelled to retire on account of ill-health, and necessitated payment of a gratuity of $1,300.

Dorchester—the appropriation for 1902-3 was short and one-half the staff pay-list for June, 1903, was paid from the appropriation for the current year. This vote is to provide for that charge.

Regina—the population has been about 20 per cent in excess of the normal. A new water service has been installed that will result in greater economy hereafter, but in the meantime the capital cost has incurred additional expenditure.

Mr. WILSON. Is this brick plant in Manitoba bought to manufacture the brick you want for your own use ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Yes. There are two things to be borne in mind in a prison expenditure of this kind. First, you have to provide employment for the inmates, and second, to utilize the product after manufacture. We have to add a wing to the building and the brick will be utilized in that way. We have also to build a fence or wall around it and we find that it will be cheaper to buy and install a plant at the cost of $2,500. You must remember that as it is very much cheaper to manufacture your bricks in Manitoba than to buy them in the market. I am told that in Manitoba brick costs $12 a thousand delivered at the penitentiary. It can be manufactured for very much less than that.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I would ask the hon minister to be good enough to direct his inspector's attention to the fact that the new process of brick making largely utilizes cement, and that there is a very excellent cement works in Manitoba. I think he will find it of advantage when employing this machine to utilize cement in making brick.

Consolidation of Dominion statutes which may be paid, notwithstanding anything contained in the Civil Service Act or in the Act respecting the Department of Public Printing and Stationery, $20,000.

Mr. FOWLER. I wish to ask the hon. minister when the consolidation of the statutes will be completed, what it will cost, and why there has been so great a delay ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. There has not been any very great delay in the statute revision. The appointment of the commissioners were made only a little over a year ago, and the result is that the statute revision is now practically completed, with the exception of the following public Acts : Criminal Code. Interpretation, Dominion Notes, Militia (which we are now considering), Northwest Mounted Police, Provincial Subsidies, Statistics, Reformatories, Dominion Police, Bills of Exchange, Banks and Banking, Insurance, Evidence, Extradition and Fugitive Offenders' Acts. All the rest are done. There is no reason why we should not be able to get through with the revision of the statutes within a reasonable time, probably within the next three or four months. The commissioners are : Sir Henry Strong, chairman ; Mr. E. L. Newcombe, Deputy Minister of Justice ; Mr. Aug. Power, chief clerk, Department of Justice ; Mr. E. R. Cameron, Registrar of the Supreme Court ; Mr. Henry Robertson, of Collingwood ; Mr. Thomas L. Metcalfe, Winnipeg ; Mr. W. E. Roscoe, Kentville ; and Mr. L. P. Sirois, Quebec.

The expenditure up to the present time for printing, stationery, salaries of commissioners and salaries of clerks is $33,146.

Mr. WILSON. What will the total cost be ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The total cost ought to be, although this does not provide for the final printing, in the neighbourhood of $40,000. The last revision in 1886 cost $46,049. I imagine we ought to remain within that figure.

Mr. FOWLER. Do you include the printing in the $46,000 ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. No. The salaries in 1886 amounted to $46,049.

Mr. WILSON. Do the gentlemen in the department get special pay for this ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. They get some pay.

Mr. WILSON. Do they not get as much as the others ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. No.

Mr. WILSON. Explain why, and what they do.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I will explain, in the first instance, the reason why we are employing these permanent officials. The Deputy Minister of Justice is constantly advising in respect to the construction of these statutes, he is an expert draughtsman, he is absolutely expert in the art of drafting, and he has enormous experience in so far as the statutes in respect to the different departments are concerned. I have handed over all these statutes to him.

Mr. GOURLEY. What kind of a man is Mr. Power ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Mr. Power has been in the department since 1871. He is one of the oldest officials in the department. He is a gentleman who is connected with the consideration of appeals in respect to criminal matters. They are dealt with by him. He is also a very competent draughtsman, is a member of the bar of Quebec, has a very good knowledge of French, and is of very great assistance in the revision of the statutes.

Mr. WILSON. A pretty old man.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Men, like wine, improve with age. Mr. Newcombe gets $1,500 and Mr. Power gets $1,000, the intention being that they should give their own time after office hours to this work.

Mr. FOWLER. How much do commissioners like Mr. Robertson, for instance, get ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The salaries of these gentlemen have not been fixed, because my intention was to make some sort of a distribution, so far as they were concerned, in proportion to the amount of work done, and I will make my intention clear when I explain how they proceed. Each man takes home with him a certain number of statutes, does the work, after which the commissioners meet. There have been three meetings up to the present time in Ottawa. At these meetings each man's work is revised by some other members of the commission, and then there is a sub-committee composed of Mr. Newcombe, Mr. Roscoe and Mr. Sirois, who take the work of the general commission and give a finishing touch to it, and I accept the work of this sub-committee as the final revision. I am one of those who believe that there is not always wisdom in numbers in so far as the drafting of statutes is concerned, and I think that by leaving the matter in the hands of a sub-committee we will probably have the matter disposed of more satisfactorily, and in the end we shall have better work. A clear understanding was arrived at with the commissioners that none of them is to receive over $4,000.

Mr. FOWLER. How much does Sir Henry Strong get ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. He gets $3,500. I will give the amounts that have been paid to each: Mr. Newcombe, $2,000; Mr. Power, $1,700 ; Mr. Cameron, $1,700 ; Mr. Robertson, $1,600 ; Mr. Metcalfe, $1,600 ; Mr. Roscoe, $3,200 ; Mr. Sirois, $2,100.

Mr. FOWLER. They are to receive the sum of $4,000 as the total amount ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Yes, as the total amount.

Mr. SPROULE. After the last revision I think one or two copies of the statutes were supplied to each member of the House.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Each member ought to be entitled to three copies.

Mr. GOURLEY. I do not understand the functions of the Printing Bureau.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Well, do not ask me to explain them. I am never able to get anything done there.

Mr. GOURLEY. Are these statutes printed in the Printing Bureau ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Yes ; they have to be done there.

Expenses of litigated matters which may be paid for services in connection with the litigation conducted within the Department of Justice, notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act, $15,000.

Mr. LANCASTER. How much was spent of this last year ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Somewhere in the vicinity of $12,000.

Mr. LANCASTER. Is it counsel fees principally ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Yes. As a result of the change that has taken place since the deputy minister has undertaken to look after litigated matters, I may mention that while for instance in 1897 the cost amounted to $101,000, last year we decreased them to $72,000. In the amount paid to lawyers in the city of Ottawa it is now down to $5,000 from $16,000 to $19,000 previously. I say this to the credit of the officers of the Justice Department, and not for any other purpose.

Mr. LANCASTER. Where was the rest of it spent ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. All over the Dominion. When a lawyer is employed in my department as a rule the department pays, but at times there are payments for opinions taken by the Department of Justice itself and they come out of the $15,000.

Mr. FOWLER. What rule guides you as to the payment of counsel fees ? Is it the rule of thumb ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Mr. Gisborne is the taxing officer of the department. He has been there for a great number of years. and he is almost like the man who sleeps with a gun between his arms.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Like Alexander Mackenzie.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. And he got no thanks for it either.

Mr. SPROULE. As far as the smallness of the fees go it is dog eat dog.

Mr. GOURLEY. I had a lot of experience with Mr. Gisborne and he allows about half what an ordinary taxing master in the province would. It is very seldom that I have a grievance, but I have a grievance now, and it is the grievance of some Liberals in my county more than my own. I and some Liberal lawyers filed six or eight petitions of right in connection with the Belmont accident on the Intercolonial Railway. We desired not to raise the question of negligence. I agreed with my learned friend, Mr Mackenzie and other Liberal lawyers well known to the Prime Minister who were engaged in this suit, to have petitions of right filed. There were cases of great hardship in this Belmont accident. My learned friend Mr. Mackenzie, a very eminent Liberal in the constituency and a very good man, filed a petition in one case of great hardship. I may mention that Mr. Mackenzie frequently praises Sir Wilfrid Laurier all through the constituency, and his praises of Sir Wilfrid Laurier is the greatest difficulty I met with in getting certain electors to vote for me. This good Liberal, Mr. Mackenzie, joined with me in saying that these Belmont claims should be settled in some way by the government without litigation. The claimants are mostly widows with large families, whose husbands were killed in the accident. These petitions of right were filed with the Minister of Justice some months ago, and they were referred to the Railway Department, but since then we have heard nothing of them. I had a letter from Mr. Mackenzie asking me to get Mr. Sinclair and other Liberal members to call upon the minister, and ask him if he would not agree to give those people a reasonable indemnity without sending them to the Exchequer Court. That indemnity could be included in the estimates of this year and the claimants paid. Several of these cases are of particular hardship. I told Mr. Mackenzie that he should write to Mr. Laurier about the case in which he is interested——

An hon. MEMBER. Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Mr. GOURLEY. I beg pardon ; it makes no difference with a democrat up to the hilt.

Som hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. GOURLEY. In the case in which Mr. Mackenzie is interested a man named Wall who had a family of six children, was killed, and the whole of his family are now depending on their friends. I would ask Mr. Emmerson, the Minister of Justice to treat these people generously, and to place some reasonable compensation for them in the estimates. They are poor people ; too poor to take their cases to court unless the government dispenses some measure of generosity, it means an absolute denial of justice to the sufferers.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. When these applications are made to the Department of Justice we have absolutely no power to dispose of them until such time as the department interested is heard from. I act merely as the legal adviser of each department, and therefore it is for the Railway Department to consider as to whether or not they would test the suit or settle. If my hon. friend (Mr. Gourley) will be good enough to call around to see me to-morrow morning we might take the matter up and after we have had a discussion together, I may be able to make representations in the proper quarter, and try to come to a settlement.

Mr. GOURLEY. I shall be glad to. I thank the Minister of Justice.

Mr. FOWLER. Sometimes great injustice is done in the Railway Department in connection with these accidents on the Intercolonial Railway. At Norton an old lady and her daughter coming from early church, were driving in a closed buggy across the track, and as trains do not usually run in our province on Sunday, they were not expecting a train to come along and they were instantly killed. The Railway Department reported there was no liability and they did not seem to think there was even any moral claim. These people were too poor to go to law, and the result is that justice is denied them.

To pay claims for losses of property destroyed by fire rendered necessary to secure the recapture without loss of life, of escaped convict, Ernest Cashel :—Wm. Pitman, jr., $675 ; G. H. Pitman, $100 ; Thos. Emery, $50 ; A. B. Choate, $25—$850.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The explanation of this appropriation is as follows : There was a convict of the name of Ernest Cashel under sentence of death in the guard room at Calgary. On the 10th of December he escaped. Somebody had furnished him with revolvers, and he overpowered the guard. He was immediately followed by the police, but he was not captured until the 24th of January. During that period so close was the pursuit that he did not get more than twelve or fifteen miles from Calgary. After a chase of more than thirty days, he was located at a certain point. On a Sunday morning he was found by the police hiding in a hillock. When he saw the police, he took refuge in the cellar of a log cabin belonging to one Pitman, and commenced firing on the police. In order to save life, the police got the permission of Pitman to set fire to the building and smoke him out, which they did, and he had to come out and surrender. This vote is to compensate Pitman and those who were with him for the losses they sustained—Pitman himself as the owner of the property, and his relatives, one named Emery and one named Choate. Pitman lost his house and the others their clothing and other property. They asked for compensation to the amount of $1,450. The claim was referred to the mounted police and the Crown prosecutor at Calgary, and this settlement was agreed upon.

Mr. FOWLER. Are the constables who were overpowered by this man still in the force ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. No. There were three men, who, I am sorry to say, were guilty of something very unusual. They allowed themselves to be bulldozed by this man and covered, who covered them with his revolver. They have all been dismissed from the service, and two of them are in jail for some technical offence.

Mr. FOWLER. Were they suspected of a desire to assist Cashel to escape ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. No, I think not. I think the escape was the result of loose discipline on the part of one of the officers, who has been reprimanded for it. He is a very good officer, and I would not like to mention his name. But the best of men will sometimes make a mistake, and he did not pay sufficient attention to a warning which had been given to him that Cashel had communication with people outside. Instead of taking the precaution to have a sufficient guard put over him, he disregarded the warning.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Why, then, punish the three constables who never heard of this warning ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Because the constables were guilty of cowardice.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. That is all very fine, when perhaps the constables were standing in the corridor unarmed. It seems that the officer was warned, and yet did not warn his men.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. No. The superintendent was warned by two of the inspectors that they had reason to suspect that there were communications with Cashel from the outside ; and there were, because he had two revolvers in his possession. But when Cashel chose his moment, there were three officers in the guard-room. It was their duty to be on guard, and, even if unarmed, not to surrender, but to risk their lives. They were guilty of such conduct as I think, for the honour of the force, which is above reproach, should not be tolerated.

To pay amount of reward offered for the recapture of escaped convict, Ernest Cashel, $1,000.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. This explains itself. We offered a reward of $1,000 for such information as would lead to the recapture of Cashel.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Who gets the reward?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. It has not been decided yet. There are several claimants.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. The newspaper reports showed that there were a number of ranchers in the locality who rendered very valuable services to the police force.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. So there were.

To compensate members of the Northwest mounted police for injuries sustained while in the performance of duty, $1,500.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. This requires some explanation. To the men who suffer from accidents in the service such as loss of limbs or wounds, if they are disabled in any way, we give pensions varying from sixteen cents to sixty cents a day. At the present time we have nineteen beneficiaries, and the amount we paid last year in that connection was $1,923.55. Sometimes it happens that a man is disabled in early life, and instead of receiving the pension he makes application for a lump sum. For instance, there is a man thirty-three years of age who receives a pension of thirty cents a day, having received an injury to his foot. He has asked to have his pension commuted to a cash sum of $800. The controller of the mounted police submitted a case based on this man's age to the superintendent of insurance, who replied that, upon the British mortality tables and at 3½ per cent interest, the commuted value of the pension would be $1,540. The man is willing to take a lump sum of $800. It is to deal with such cases that we take this appropriation.

Mr. FOWLER. If the man is entitled to $1,500, I do not think you should cut him off with $800.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The man has asked for $800, and we are willing to give him that, provided it is within the commutation tables.

Mr. FOWLER. The present value of the pension, reduced to capital, is $1,500. We have sometimes to legislate to protect men against themselves, and if this man has suffered such an injury as to entitle him to $1,500, he should be paid that much even though he is willing to take less. You should not take advantage of him.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. We are not taking advantage of the man. He is able to look after his own business, and he offers to take a cash sum of $800. Therefore we think we should give him that, and no more.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I would again draw the First Minister's attention to the fact that the mounted police who did duty in the Northwest in 1885, have never received any recognition in the way of land scrip, as other officers and men did. It is not too late yet, and I am satisfied that the right hon. the First Minister will only do himself and the splendid force of which he has the honour to be the head simple justice in giving these men the same recognition as was given all the others in the Northwest, namely, 160 acres of land.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. This takes us back to 1885. After the rebellion the government of the late Sir John Macdonald, which was then in office, considered the case of the volunteers and the mounted police, and decided to give scrip to the volunteers and not to the mounted police. The reason they made this discrimination was that the volunteers were men who left their civil vocations to serve their country, and the government of that day thought it only proper that they should have a special reward, whereas the mounted police were professional soldiers, whose engagement it was to serve their country whenever called upon, and who, consequently, were only carrying out their ordinary avocation when they went to the front. Whether or not it would be advisable now to reverse the judgment passed twenty-five years ago is something which would require some consideration, and until further advised I do not think it would be wise to undo what was then done.

Mr. SPROULE. I am glad that the right hon. gentleman has advanced the argument he has, because it proves the title to consideration of a corps whose claim I have always advocated, the Wood Mountain Scouts. These men were not professional soldiers, but were engaged for the emergency. They went out as scouts, and were in as dangerous a position as either the militia or the police force. I pleaded on their behalf many years ago, but could never succeed in obtaining for them the consideration to which I think they are entitled.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Hear, hear.

At six o'clock, committee took recess.

After Recess.

House resumed at eight o'clock.

PRIVATE BILLS.

THOMPSON RIVER IMPROVEMENT COMPANY.

Mr. W. GALLIHER moved that the amendments made by the Senate to Bill (No. 79) to incorporate the Thompson River Improvement Company be concurred in.

Mr. T. S. SPROULE. I notice that the amendments to this Bill are very extensive, several clauses have been wholly cut out and others considerably changed. We have not had opportunity to examine these amendments and, if they are to be gone on with, some one should explain their nature and effect.

Mr. GALLIHER. The Bill stands in the name of the hon. member for New Westminster (Mr. Morrison), but it is really a Bill introduced by myself. The Bill was modelled on an Act of last session relating to the Columbia River Improvement Company. In going through the Private Bills Committee of this House one section of the Bill with regard to the schedules was left out. Practically, the rest of the Bill was left the same as the other. It then went to the Senate, where some objections were raised to it by parties in the neighbourhood of the Thompson river around Kamloops. They were represented before the Private Bills Committee of the Senate by a lawyer from Kamloops. Finally, certain amendments were agreed to by both parties, and so the Bill was made satisfactory to those who were objecting as well as the promoters. After that, the Senate made some further amendments, and the Bill comes before us with all these changes in it. I do not know whether there is any objection to the amendments made by the Senate. But I know that the session is far advanced, and it seems to me the Bill ought to be considered to-night and assented to. It is a Bill, I believe, that is in the interest of the whole lumber industry along the North Thompson river. Parties are putting a great deal of money into that industry. Naturally, Bills of this kind arouse the opposition of some parties, probably for personal reasons. These may be very good reasons; but, since the two parties interested in the question came before the Senate and agreed, it seems to me that no objection should be made here, unless it can be shown that some of the clauses are objectionable.

Mr. SPROULE. The amendments are so extensive that I contend no one on the spur of the moment can go over them carefully and learn what is the effect of them. I do not think that the argument that the session is far advanced and that therefore we ought to pass the Bill right or wrong should carry much weight. Nor do I think that the argument is conclusive that two parties who claim to be interested have agreed upon this Bill. All that part of the country may be interested and we here are the persons who are supposed to be looking after their rights. Because the conflicting interests of two lumbering concerns have been accommodated, it does not follow that the House should accept the division of interest that they have made. This is not to say that I have noticed anything in the Bill specially objectionable. But the amendments are extensive and I think that some little time should be given to consider them; we should have time to look over them and see whether they should be made.

Mr. GALLIHER. We have an hour to consider this Bill, and I do not see anything in the nature of the amendments that would make it necessary to spend longer time upon it.

Mr. SPROULE. I think the hon. gentleman might leave it until the next sitting of the House.

Sor WILFRID LAURIER. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Galliher) can have it brought up on Monday.

Mr. GALLIHER. There are some parties here who are waiting to see the Bill through. For my part I do not see why the Bill cannot be taken up and the amendments read and considered now. We have an hour to do it, so why should it be postponed? I do not usually press these matters, and if there were other private Bills to occupy the hour to be devoted to that order of business, I probably would not press it now. But, why cannot we consider it within the time?

Mr. SPROULE. The hon. gentleman surely does not want to keep the House held up while we are going through these amendments.

Mr. GALLIHER. If the House were never held up in a worse cause than in considering whether this Bill is right or wrong, no one would have cause to grumble.

Mr. HENDERSON. These amendments came suddenly upon us and we have had no time to give them such examination as would have been given in the Committee on Private Bills. I think the hon. gentleman (Mr. Galliher) should allow this Bill to stand over until Monday and, in the meantime, let some department of the government examine these amendments carefully and state to the House whether this Bill should be passed or not. If the government take the responsibility, it will go a long way towards removing any objection that might otherwise be made. I do not wish to detain the House for an hour to go into the Bill, for there is other business that might better occupy our attention.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt this motion?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Carried.

Mr. SPROULE. If the Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) who says 'carried' will look at the copy of the Bill, he will find four clauses cut out and one clause with eight or nine subsections put in. And this Bill so changed is put into our hands, and in less than ten minutes it is to be carried. We are not going into Committee of the Whole to consider it. Is it not rather going it blind to agree so quickly to such extensive amendments?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I have not suggested that. My hon. friend (Mr. Galliher) is within his rights if he proposes to proceed with the Bill. The only way, if the hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule) is not satisfied is to have each amendment read and let the House decide whether it shall be refused or agreed to.

Mr. CLARKE. The powers given to the company, as I understand it, have been restricted by the Senate?

Mr. GALLIHER. Yes. If there is so much objection to it that any one wants it to go over until Monday, I am agreeable; but I would have preferred to have it go through to-night, because private parties who are very much interested want to start for home.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Since my hon. friend (Mr. Galliher) agrees, I move that the debate be now adjourned.

Motion agreed to.

SUPPLY.

House in Committee of Supply.

For the purchase, equipment and maintenance of vessels to be employed in patrolling the waters in the northern portion of Canada; also for establishing and maintaining police and customs posts at such points on the mainland or islands as may be deemed necessary from time to time, $200,000.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Mr. Chairman, the committee, I am sure, has not forgotten that last year we sent an expedition to explore, patrol and assert the authority of the government of Canada in Hudson's Bay and the northern waters. The object of this expedition was fully explained to the House last year and met with general favour. The view was to assert beyond any possibility of doubt, so as to prevent any future possible conflict, the undoubted authority of the Dominion of Canada in the waters of Hudson's Bay and beyond. The steamer 'Neptune' was chartered last year and sailed from Halifax. It had on board a representative of the Geological Department, a representative of the Marine and Fisheries Department, Inspector Moodie and five men of the mounted police. The expedition for the time being was under the chief control of Mr. Lowe. He was to explore, as far as he could during the season, the northern waters and to establish a post somewhere in Hudson's Bay. No definite instructions were given to the expedition as to the location of the post. Then, as soon as the break of the ice in the spring would permit, the expedition was to go north and explore Baffin Bay and Lancaster Strait, and then come back to Cape Chidley, on the Straits of Hudson Bay. There they would be met by another boat, which was to sail, and has sailed on the 15th of July to meet them, give them coal, provisions, &c. The 'Neptune' is to come back and be relieved and be replaced by another boat, the 'Arctic,' which will be under the command of Captain Bernier, and which is to sail on August 15. This boat will carry an officer and ten men of the mounted police, apart from the crew of the ship. They will relieve the 'Neptune.' Their instructions are to patrol the waters, to find suitable locations for posts, to establish those posts and to assert the jurisdiction of Canada. The government has been induced to come to this action because it is evident that the time has come when our interests in these northern waters should not longer be neglected. At the present time there are whalers and fishermen of different nations cruising in those waters, and unless we take active steps to assert, what is the undoubted fact, that these lands belong to Canada, we may perhaps find ourselves later on in the face of serious complications. Perhaps the committee would understand it better if I should point out on the map the proposed routes of these vessels, and the places which I have mentioned.

Towards the erection of a monument to Champlain at St. John, $5,000.

Mr. HACKETT. Mr. Chairman, I am not objecting to this item at all, but I raised a question in this House some little time ago in regard to the erection of a monument to the memory of the late Hon. Thos. D'Arcy McGee. Has the right hon. Prime Minister considered that question ? While I am not objecting to the erection of a monument to the memory of Champlain I think that the late Hon. Thos. D'Arcy McGee is entitled to some consideration at the hands of the government.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Hear, hear.

Mr. HACKETT. And I would like to ask the hon. minister if he has considered the question and if there will be something in the estimates this year for the purpose.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I am afraid that there will be nothing in the estimates this year but this is an idea which will not escape our memory another time.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Is there any special reason why this monument should be placed at St. John ?

Mr. GOURLEY. He landed there.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. No, his operations were more in Nova Scotia than New Brunswick. I do not object to it. I am delighted to see that this monument is going to be erected there but the point I want to impress on the right hon. Prime Minister is that in case he should be so fortunate as to be in charge of the government another year I want the right hon. gentleman, or whoever may be in charge of the government, to remember the fact that Champlain visited the province of Ontario and that to this is due the inception of the Trent canal. It was from Champlain that the first intimation of the feasibility of the Panama canal came a fact which you will find recorded in Parkman's 'Pioneers of France in the New World,' as follows :

> Returning, he made his way to Panama. Here, more than two centuries and a half ago, his bold and active mind conceived the plan of a ship canal across the isthmus, 'by which,' he says, 'the voyage to the South Sea would be shortened by more than fifteen hundred leagues.'

We find that this intrepid soldier, who, I am proud to say, fought under the white plume of Henry of Navarre at the battle of Ivry side by side with Sir Walter Raleigh, made himself useful in his explorations in the new world. Those of us who come from the Midland district of Ontario recall with a great deal of pride the fact that Champlain was the first European to cover the route of the Trent canal which is now so much in favour with the people of this country. He ascended the Ottawa and the Mattawan passed through Lake Nipissing, descended the French river, passed down the shore of the Georgian Bay to the mouth of the River Severn thence proceeded to Orillia. Parkman in the same volume says :

> At the outlet of Lake Simcoe, they all stopped to fish.

I may say to my right hon. friend that the fishing was good in those waters. In the early part of the seventeenth century when they were first visited by Champlain, and it is excellent to-day and that accounts for the brain and brawn possessed by the people of the city of Toronto who go there to spend their summers.

Mr. CLARKE. Do I understand that Champlain suggested the Trent canal also ?

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Yes, he is partly responsible for it. Parkman continues :

It was the eighth of September, and Champlain, shivering in his blanket, awoke to see the bordering meadows sparkling with an early frost, soon to vanish under the bright autumnal sun. The Huron fleet pursued its course along the bosom of Lake Simcoe, up the Little River Talbot, across the portage to Balsam lake, and down the chain of lakes which form the sources of the River Trent. As the long line of canoes moved on its devious way, no human life was seen, no sign of friend or foe, yet, at times, to the fancy of Champlain, the borders of the stream seemed decked with groves and shrubbery by the hands of man, and mighty walnut trees, laced with grape-vines, seemed decorations of a pleasure-ground.

Trees and grape-vines similar to those which Champlain gazed upon are to be seen there to-day. Then, Parkman goes on to describe the adventures, battles and hunts that took place in that locality. We know the locality. The vicinity of the village of Fenelon Falls between Cameron and Sturgeon lakes was one of the Indian hunting grounds. At all events Balsam lake where the late George Laidlaw had established his home and where his son who saw service in South Africa now resides was one of the camping places of Champlain and I want to direct the right hon. First Minister's attention to the fact. We do not want a $5,000 monument erected here but we will be very much pleased to see something to commemorate the adventures of Champlain in that locality erected in the county of Victoria.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I am most delighted to hear the sentiments expressed by my hon. friend from North Victoria (Mr. Hughes). We will be very happy to do for Ontario what we have been able to do for Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. There was a celebration this year at Annapolis of the 300th anniversary, of the landing of De Monts at Annapolis Royal. This Historical Society of Nova Scotia asked the government to contribute a certain amount towards the erection of a monument to Champlain. This appropriation which we ask parliament to vote has been asked for by the Historical Society of New Brunswick. Parliament has responded very cheerfully to that request and no doubt if any similar organization from Ontario were to send us a similar request it would meet with the same response. The city of St. John wants to put up a better monument than a monument which could be erected for $5,000. We give $5,000 and the city are to contribute an additional sum towards this monument. We shall be guided by the requests which are made upon us but we shall take into consideration any request that is made to us, and if it so happens that we are still in charge of affairs we will have still more pleasure in doing so.

Mr. GOURLEY. It is very proper that the erection of monuments to commermorate the achievements of the early French explorers should be started in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. De Monts, the first European subject to land on this continent made his first landing at Annapolis Royal in 1604. Champlain a short time afterwards landed at St. John. Therefore it is very proper, chronologically considered, that these monuments should be first erected in the places which these men made historic by their first association with them. Afterward, I have no doubt Ontario will have the right to follow the maritime provinces and I will be very glad to join in any movement to that end. I was glad to hear my hon. friend from North Victoria (Mr. Sam. Hughes) read that history which I am rather familiar with. I said some years ago in this House : that Champlain and Cartier, the great early French explorers, had a better knowledge of Canada and its trade routes and its strong commercial position on this continent. than any men in Canada since, with all our education.

Mr. SPROULE. Is this going to be a contribution ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Yes.

Valleyfield public buildings, $30,000.

Mr. CLARKE. What is the total cost to be ?

Mr. HYMAN. The total estimated cost is $55,000. The total expenditure has been $25,000 and this vote will complete.

Mr. BELL. Does it include the land ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes, everything.

Mr. SPROULE. It is a combined building for post office, &c.

Mr. HYMAN. Yes ; this is to complete the contract.

Seven Islands—wharfs, $60,000.

Mr. HYMAN. I handed my hon. friend the contract in this matter.

Mr. CLARKE. Who had the contract from the private parties to build this pier?

Mr. HYMAN. M. Connolly of Quebec.

Mr. CLARKE. Why did not the government allow Connolly to go on with the work for the company, in view of the statement made last year by the minister.

Mr. HYMAN. The engineer says that the department looked very carefully into the matter and that the transfer was in the public interest. The hon. gentleman has read the contract and he knows that the material and labour will have to be certified by the chief engineer before any payment is made.

Mr. CLARKE. Does this company buy the material from themselves ?

Mr. HYMAN. Wherever they get it cheapest; the price of the timber has to be certified by the engineer and there is to be a certified sworn copy of the number of men and the wages and in addition we have a resident engineer.

Mr. CLARKE. How is the price of the lumber to be determined ? We were told yesterday it would be folly to ask for tenders to do this work because this company was in such a position of superiority that they might charge any price they liked. Are they to be allowed to put in any price they like now ?

Mr. HYMAN. I do not think so. Our engineer has a thorough knowledge of the price of timber all over.

Mr. CLARKE. It is not clear to me why the company were not allowed to go on and do the work themselves, and why the government assumed the responsibility of it when it was being done by a private corporation. This corporation had received pulp concessions and water privileges, and in order to make these valuable they had to erect deep water piers and they let a contract for that purpose, as I understand from the minister. When the work was pretty well under way the government stepped in and in a paternal spirit took it off their hands and allowed them $34,000 for the work done, and $21,000 for the material on hand, and then authorized them to go on and complete the work. Why did the government interfere ?

Mr. HYMAN. The reason the government, after acquiring the wharf, did not allow the contractors to continue the work was that there was really no plan that would satisfy the engineers of the department. Plans were prepared by the department, and it was on these plans that the work was proceeded with.

Mr. CLARKE. It has not been made clear why the government interfered and took over the work.

Mr. HYMAN. It was on the opinion of the chief engineer. The hon. gentleman knows that the minister has practically to follow his technical officer.

Mr. CLARKE. Have you the report of the engineer there ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes.

Mr. BELL. We are rather interested to find out how the engineer happened to go there. Who sent him there ?

Mr. HYMAN. It is not possible for the chief engineer to visit every place where work is being carried on.

Mr. CLARKE. Did the engineers drift in there by accident, and say : We ought to take this work over and extend it, and do it on a more elaborate scale ; we will give $34,000 to the contractor for the work done and $21,000 for the material ; we will take it from the contractor, and then hand it back to him and tell him to go on and complete the work ; and he will send us a statement of the materials supplied to him at a certain price and the amount paid in wages ; and if the engineer certifies to it, we will pay you ? Is that the whole plan ?

Mr. HYMAN. If the hon. gentleman looks at the papers, he will see that it was not done in that way at all. He will find, in addition to the certificate of our engineer, a certificate attached of Messrs. Ross and Holgate, both in regard to the amount of work done by the contractor and the amount of material on hand.

Mr. CLARKE. Is Mr. Holgate the company's engineer ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes.

Mr. BELL. The minister has not yet given us any reason for taking this work over. He has given us a description of the course followed in getting a report from the government engineer and also from the engineers of the company ; but what the hon. member for West Toronto (Mr. Clarke) is anxious to know is why the government wanted to take this property over at a time when the company were building the work themselves, and had spent $55,000 or $56,000 upon it. That is the point the hon. member for Toronto is endeavouring to make, and the minister does not seem to catch the point.

Mr. HYMAN. I did not understand the hon. member for Toronto to make that point. The reason for it is this. There is an item in the estimates for a pier at this place. It was explained last night very fully by the hon. Minister of Justice that this is the only harbour on the north shore of the St. Lawrence for a very long distance. It was felt by the department that the government should own and control the wharf at such an important harbour of refuge ; and when the government found that this company had started the wharf, they felt that they should, in the interest of the country, take it over from the company instead of building a new one, and the interest of the public was carefully guarded in the method pursued.

Mr. MORIN. Is this wharf to be built exactly where the old wharf was ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes.

Mr. MORIN. What kind of timber will you use in the wharf ?

Mr. HYMAN. Mostly southern pine for the face timber.

Mr. MORIN. Is that pine grown in the southern states or at the Seven Islands ?

Mr. HYMAN. I understand from the term 'southern pine' that it is grown in the south.

Mr. MORIN. Sometimes it is called southern pine, though it never grew in the south.

Mr. HYMAN. It is certified by two engineers that it is southern pine, and by southern pine the department understands pine that has grown in the south.

Mr. MORIN. Are you aware that is the fact ?

Mr. HYMAN. I take that from the engineers. I am not aware of the fact.

Mr. MORIN. There is another 'nigger in the fence' there.

Mr. BELL. The government allowed this Seven Islands bay to remain for a number of years without providing a harbour of refuge there. Now they are engaged in carrying on this work. No doubt their attention was called to it by some request either from parties interested in shipping or parties interested in the business. Is there anything on file in the department to show how the government discovered the necessity for this wharf ?

Mr. HYMAN. I am informed by the engineer that it is purely the act of the government, just as I explained before.

Mr. SPROULE. Would it be the act of the government without somebody drawing their attention to the necessity for a wharf ? Is the government sending engineers all around the country to hunt up places where there ought to be wharfs, without any applications being made for them, either from the shipping interests or the public in general ? We are told that this is the only harbour of refuge on that shore, but that has been told us in support of several different items, and that plea is pretty well worn threadbare. It is about time that some better excuse was offered. There might be some excuse if there was any population in that place ; but so far as we know, it has neither population or commerce to any extent worth mentioning and is comparatively speaking a wilderness. But simply because two or three enterprising individuals, finding that there were good timber limits and water-powers in that region, applied to the province of Quebec and got hold of these timber limits and water-powers and started business, and simply because, after they had begun building a wharf which was absolutely necessary to them in the prosecution of their industry, these people found it would be much more advantageous to them to have that work done as a public work, we find this government stepping in and taking the expense off their hands and on the plea of serving the public interest building a wharf for this particular firm. That is really what this expenditure amounts to. This company had done work on that wharf to the extent of some $34,000 and had lumber and other material there, estimated to be worth some $21,000, and the government repay them this expenditure, and then tell them to go on and complete the job and we will recoup you for what it may cost. There is not the slightest evidence that there has been any request from any shipping or commercial interests for this work except from the private company I have referred to. A more wanton piece of extravagance, to use a mild term, could scarcely be exhibited even by this business and reform government.

Mr. MORIN. I said last night that the government appear to be overflowing with love for these Messrs. Clarke, and I am still of that opinion. This place, called the Seven Islands, has been inhabited for no less than 200 years by fishermen and mariners, who navigate in small boats that draw from four to six feet of water, and who had all the accommodation they needed from the little wharf that was built there. During all this time, while these poor fishermen and mariners were the sole inhabitants of that region, no government thought it worth while to spend any money on public improvements on behalf of these people. But no sooner did the Messrs. Clarke secure lumber limits and water-power in that district and start a big business, than this government steps in and takes the wharf, which these people had begun to build, off their hands and are now about to complete it at a great expense to the country. This of course will be eminently satisfactory to the Messrs. Clarke, who own the whole country for several miles up the river and several miles back. They own that country absolutely. Under the charter given them a couple of years ago, no one has the right to build a store there or a hotel or start a place of commerce of any kind. Mr. Clarke owns everything, and yet this paternal government is going to build a wharf especially for him and his associates. Looking at it in any light you please, it appears to me the height of absurdity that any government should have so much love for some men and so very little for others. These poor fishermen and mariners who were in that place long before the Clarkes, were just as much entitled to government favours, but they never got anything. And this government, which claims to be the protector of the people, which claims to carry the whole country on its hands, which, we are told, was going to give a great example of reform, never dreamt of doing anything for the poor people in that locality. But no sooner did the Clarkes take possession of it, than these ministers are ready to kneel down and pray for them.

Mr. CLARKE. As I understand from the records, this work was being proceeded with by the company which owns the limits before the vote of last year was asked for. If the government knew anything about the matter, they must have known that the company was then constructing a pier of its own for its own purposes. The House was not put in possession then of any of the information we have to-night, although if the government engineer had been down there and had made a report on the necessity of constructing a pier for the purpose of establishing a harbour of refuge, he would certainly not have failed to mention all the facts. I have not yet been able to satisfy myself that there was any justification for the interference of the government in this work. The privileges which this company had obtained had to be exploited, and in order to exploit them the company had to build a wharf, and were doing it when the appropriation was voted by parliament last year. The next thing we find is that the work which was being performed by this company has been taken over by the government, and the government has undertaken to pay the company some $50,000 to $60,000 for work done and material in hand. That certainly is not a very satisfactory proposition to my mind.

Mr. BELL. It would appear from these papers that months before the government asked for a vote of $25,000 last year, this work was under way. It was begun by the company in April, 1903, and continued until November. The sum of $34,000 had been expended by the company at the time the government asked parliament for a vote for the purpose of erecting a wharf of its own. It now appears that the purpose was to purchase the work which the company had begun. And we find that the government had undertaken to do this without any interested party, unless it be this company interested, asking that it be done. The public of Canada has not asked for this work. The shipping interests have not approached the government in order to have the sum of $25,000 put in the estimates to pay for the work which was being constructed by private parties. But in the course of the early months of 1904, the government bound itself to pay the company for the portion of the work already constructed, the sum of $34,433.75, and the agreement goes on to provide :

That over and above the said sum, for all the materials, including pine, spruce, iron, &c., which have already been delivered on the site and for the purpose of the contemplated works, the government bind itself to pay the said company, once for all a further sum of $21,485.34, it being clearly understood and agreed that all such materials are to be used in the carrying out of the construction of the balance of the works contemplated.

5. And it is understood and agreed that the said company are hereby entrusted with the performance of the balance of the works required to complete the works set out or referred to in the specifications hereto annexed, marked 'A' and set out or referred to in the plans prepared for the purposes of the said works, which said specification and plans are declared to be part of this contract.

6. That the balance of the works in the preceding clause referred to shall be so performed and carried out under the immediate supervision of an engineer delegated by the Department of Public Works of Canada, whose decision when approved of by the said Minister of Public Works shall be final and decisive as regards both the materials and the quality and the quantity of the works.

7. That whatever disbursements will have been made by the said company in carrying out and performing the balance of the works hereinabove referred to shall be reimbursed to the said company by the government in following manner, that is to say :

8. As to the materials the said company shall produce vouchers containing a certificate to that effect that the materials outside and apart from those mentioned in clause four (4) of the present agreement, have actually been purchased and are necessary for the carrying out of the balance of the works hereinabove referred to, such certificate to bear the signature of the secretary-treasurer of the said company as well as that of the resident engineer hereinabove mentioned.

9. As to the labour the said company shall produce pay-rolls duly receipted and containing a certificate signed in the manner determined in the preceding clause to the effect that the labour mentioned in such pay-rolls has been actually and necessarily performed and paid for in connection with the carrying out of the said balance of the works.

And this is the plan on which the government generously came to the relief of this company. They took over work for $10,000 more than parliament had justified the government in spending, and also covenanted to pay them $22,000 for material which the government had not authorized them to pay at all, and then bound themselves to go on and spend nearly $100,000, and perhaps more——

Mr. HYMAN. Not more.

Mr. BELL. Probably more, because there is no limit.

Mr. HYMAN. I am sure the hon. member (Mr. Bell) does not wish to be unfair. He knows very well that there is a limit. I have told him that there were plans and specifications, and they are referred to.

Mr. BELL. If, under the operation of this peculiar contract the government vote is exhausted, the minister has prudently made provision——

Mr. HYMAN. The hon. gentleman knows that the vote as taken is mentioned. Last year I think the minister told the House that it would require $60,000.

Mr. BELL. But it is evident that the minister contemplated that the company would spend more than the vote, because he has put in this provision.

Mr. HYMAN. Because the plans might be changed.

Mr. BELL. He has put in this provision :

10. Should the amount now voted by parliament and applicable towards payment for the works hereby contracted for be at any time expended previous to the completion of the said works, the contractor shall not be entitled to any payment for work done beyond the amount voted and applicable as aforesaid until the necessary funds shall have been voted by parliament in that behalf.

Mr. HYMAN. We only had $25,000 at that time and so that seemed a necessary provision.

Mr. COCHRANE. Quite an amount for an ordinary wharf—$25,000. We would be glad of half of it in our section.

Mr. BELL. This is clearly one of the most extraordinary transactions that have come before the notice of this House. In discussing this matter last night attention was called to the fact that no tenders were called for this work. The reason advanced by the minister for this course was that no person would be in a position to tender except the company interested, because material could be supplied by them to better advantage than by any one else. Now, I find in the specification of timber as submitted by the government engineer that the greater part of that timber is southern pine, valued at $28 per thousand.

Mr. HYMAN. It is $27 per thousand is it not ?

Mr. BELL. Perhaps it is ;—$27 or $28 per thousand. Certainly, any other company as well as one engaged in the production of pulp on the St. Margaret river would be in as good a position to procure southern pine as they would. So, there is nothing whatever to justify the government in spending $85,000—supposing it be no more —in violation of the Act that requires that works of this kind should be carried out by tender and contract. That Act provides as follows :

The minister shall invite tenders by public advertisement for the execution of all works, except in cases of pressing emergency in which delay would be injurious to the public interest, or in which, from the nature of the work, it can be more expeditiously and economically executed by the officers and servants of the department—

Mr. SPROULE. This is not by officers of the department.

Mr. HYMAN. Certainly it is.

Mr. BELL. I understood that the only officer there was a resident engineer.

Mr. HYMAN. All those engaged in the work under that clause are officers and servants of the government while engaged on the work.

Mr. BELL.

Mr. BELL. In that case, the North Shore Power and Pulp Company is an officer of the government, because that is the party doing the work.

—or in cases where the estimated cost is less than $5,000.

Regarded from every point of view, there is really nothing that has been said to this House that justifies this transaction. The idea of this being built as a harbour of refuge is one that escaped the attention of the government for seven years. Only now, when certain parties want to build it do they make the discovery that it is necessary to make these important works. The reason given for not publicly calling for tenders is quite inadequate and offers no justification for adopting this course. There was no question of emergency, and there is nothing to show that it is more in the interest of the government to build this without tender than in the case of any other contract in which the government are engaged. If the government can take refuge under that section to justify the carrying out of this work in the way they are doing it practically they have set aside any other obligation resting upon them to perform any part of the public works of this country by tender and contract. If this is to be the interpretation placed upon the section by the minister, the whole system that has been looked upon as, in a certain measure, a security to the people of the country is wiped out. Because, there is no public work going on in Canada for which such justification could not be found if the government chose to do the work in the manner in which they are doing it here—by buying the materials and supplying the labour.

Mr. MORIN. I suppose the engineer has given to the minister the height, length and width of the wharf, and how many thousand feet of lumber and timber will be used in the contruction ?

Mr. HYMAN. He made plans of the wharf, and, of course, those plans give all the measurements.

Mr. COCHRANE. The minister tells us that there were plans and specifications, and, as I understand, work was done under them. But now a new plan has been adopted. How are the engineers going to apply the work done under the old plan to the lines of the new ?

Mr. HYMAN. The hon. member for West Toronto (Mr. Clarke) has the report which explains the matter.

Mr. CLARKE. Are these all the documents connected with the matter that are on file in the department ?

Mr. HYMAN. All the documents under which this contract is made. I asked for all the documents and these are all that were laid before me.

Mr. CLARKE. This item was discussed on the 9th October last year. The statement made by the Minister of Public Works was a very brief one. He said :

This is to make provision for the construction of a deep water pier on the west side of Bay of Seven Islands. The pier will run out in a northerly direction, nearly at right angles to the shore, and it will have a total length of 1,325 feet, reaching a depth of 48 feet at low water spring tide. The estimated cost is $65,000. The reason for the work is that there is a most important development going on at that place, and there are now large pulp mills in that district which was up to a year or so ago almost unknown.

That statement was made on October 9. That statement bears evidence that the department had sent an engineer down there, and that the engineer had made a survey——

Mr. HYMAN. The hon. gentleman can make any deductions he pleases ; as a matter of fact an engineer had not been sent down at that time.

Mr. CLARKE. The hon. gentleman can then explain the meaning of the language which his colleague used in asking the committee twelve months ago for this appropriation. He gave particulars as to the location of the dock ; he told us in what position it was to be located ; he told us how it would run out ; he told us it would be at right angles to the shore running out in a northerly direction ; he told us it would have a total length of 1,354 feet and that it would have a depth of forty-eight feet at low water spring tide. The estimated cost was $65,000. We have surely the right to infer, if any value is to be placed on the statement made to the committee last October by the Minister of Public Works, that he had data upon which he made that statement and gave those particulars. If there had not been an engineer down there then we cannot attach much value to the statement. If the department had not sent an officer to make a survey of the harbour, to decide on the best site for the pier, of what dimensions it should be, and how it should run, if this statement of the minister is all to be cast aside, then I cannot say much more about it. The House or any person reading his statement would certainly conclude that the minister was speaking on the authority of some information given to him by an engineer of his department. How did he know the length the pier would be, or what it would cost ? Have we a right to infer that the minister imagined these things, or that he had some officer in his department who advised him as to what the probable cost would be ? How could he ascertain what the cost would be if he did not know the dimensions of the pier and the probable cost of material down there ?

Those remarks of the minister were made on October 9. Parliament prorogued about October 24, and this correspondence commenced, so far as the papers brought down show, on November 23. The first letter is dated from Quebec less than a month after prorogation, and six weeks after the statement of the minister. It is as follows :

NORTH SHORE POWER, RAILWAY AND NAVIGATION COMPANY.

118 St. Peter St.,
Quebec, Nov. 23, 1903.

Hon. Jas. Sutherland,
Minister of Pubic Works,
Ottawa.

Sir,—We beg to hand you herewith our statement of work on Seven Islands wharf to end of season, showing expenditure of $34,433.95. Tenders were received for this work, but as none were satisfactory, all were rejected and the prices inserted in the bill herewith are contract figures and less than any tender received. They were arrived at after lengthened discussion with contractor Connolly. We affirm that the figures are fair and reasonable for the locality.

Certificate of engineers Ross and Holgate appended.

We submit the account for your approval, and shall be glad of early payment.

We beg to remain,
Yours very respectfully,
North Shore Power Railway and Navigation Company.

THOS. MEANEY,
Secretary-Treasurer.

Six or seven weeks after the House was asked to vote $25,000 as an initial appropriation to enable the government to construct a pier in a certain place, and of certain dimensions, a demand is sent from the secretary-treasurer of this company asking for payment of $34,433.95. There must have been some correspondence between the minister of the department and these gentlemen prior to this. This surely is not the beginning of the correspondence, where a person writes demanding the payment of $34,433.95.

Then on the next page, we have the account for work, which is as follows :—

NORTH SHORE POWER, RAILWAY AND NAVIGATION COMPANY.

Account for work on Seven Islands wharf. 1903.

Rock filling in approach, 17,695 cubic yards at $1.25, equals..	$22,118 75
Gravel top filling, 1,500 cubic yards at 30 cents, equals..	450 00
Timber, 205,548 feet B.M. at $27, equals	5,549 80
Framing timber, 17,129 cubic feet at 10 cents, equals	1,712 90
Rock filling in crib, 3,190 cubic yards at $1.25, equals	3,987 50
Iron in crib-work, 20,000 pounds at 3 cents, equals..	615 00
Total value of work done....	$34,433 95

And then this is the certificate attached:

ROSS & HOLGATE,
Consulting and Supervising Engineers,
80 St. François-Xavier Street,
Montreal, November 21st, 1903.

The North Shore Power, Railway and Navigation Company, Quebec.

Dear Sirs,—The work in connection with the construction of the wharf at Seven Islands bay was commenced in April last, and carried on continuously until the first week of this month, when it had to be discontinued on account of the severity of the weather.

The approach to the wharf comprises the rock filling of about 530 feet in length. This was nearly completed, and one length of 200 feet of cribwork was sunk, and built up to elevation 110·00.

The expenditure on the construction of the wharf to date, for work, has been as follows :—

Rock filling in approach, 17,695 cubic yards at $1.25	$22,118 75
Gravel top filling, 1,500 cubic yards at 30 cents	450 00
Timber, 205,548 feet B.M. at $27	5,549 80
Framing timber, 17,129 cubic feet at 10 cents	1,712 90
Rock filling in crib, 3,190 cubic yards at $1.25	3,987 50
Iron in cribwork, 20,500 pounds at 3 cents	615 00
	$34,433 95

We beg to certify that the above statement is correct.

Truly yours,
ROSS & HOLGATE.

PRICE LIST.

Wharf timber at Seven Islands.

12 x 12 per appended statement, 691,309 feet B.M., $27 per M. feet B.M.

10 x 10 sawn cedar, 70,000 feet B.M.,

10 x 10 spruce, 20,000 feet B.M., $18 per M. feet B.M.

10 x 10 white pine, 30,000 feet B.M.,

Iron.

22,000 pounds ¾ round at 3 cents pound.

Then on December 16th, nearly a month after the payment of $34,433.95 was demanded by the secretary-treasurer of the company on account of the work done, we have this memorandum from the department of Public Works :

Copy. No. Subject, Seven Islands, Q.
Ref. No.

Department of Public Works of Canada,
Chief Engineer's Office,
Ottawa, December 16, 1903.

Sir,—During the last session of parliament the sum of $25,000 was granted towards the construction of a breakwater in the harbour of Seven Islands, county of Saguenay, Quebec. The building of a breakwater was, however, commenced by the North Shore Power, Railway and Navigation Company, under contract with Mr. Michael Connolly, the amount expended by the company to date being, according to the inclosed letter from Mr. Thomas Meaney, secretary-treasurer of the company, $34,433.95. The contract prices were fixed by the company after calling for tenders from a number of reliable contractors. None of the tenders being found satisfactory, an agreement was entered into with Mr. Connolly to perform the work at prices lower than those of any tender received, and I am satisfied that the prices affixed to the different quantities of work already performed are fair and reasonable. I therefore believe it would be in the interest of the department to purchase from the company for the amount of the expenditure incurred to date, the portion of the work which they have already built, and to continue the breakwater to completion on the site adopted by them, which is the one they have deemed best suitable for the purpose it was intended to serve.

The company are the owners of the site of, and the approach to, the work commenced by them. It would therefore be necessary, should the department take over the work, for the company to vest in the Crown the deep water lot upon which the wharf is to be built, as well as all the land required for freight sheds, &c., and the road across the property, for the public use.

With the plans at my disposal I am unable to locate and properly describe the land required for the road and storage accommodation, and it is impossible at this season of the year to send an engineer to make the necessary survey. This, however, if an agreement is entered into with the company, could be done as early as possible next spring, and before the actual work of construction was commenced. I have not at my disposal the necessary plans with soundings on the site of the proposed work, and I will cause contract plans and specifications to be prepared as soon as I am advised that the work already performed by the company has been vested in the crown, and that the company have agreed to give all the land required for the public use of the wharf when completed.

The company have on hand on the site of the proposed work the following quantities of materials :

Southern pine, 12 inches by 12 inches square, 691,309 feet B.M.

Sawn cedar, 10 inches by 10 inches square, 70,000 feet B. M.

Sawn spruce, 10 inches by 10 inches square, 20,000 feet B.M.

Sawn white pine, 10 inches by 10 inches square, 30,000 feet B.M.

Iron, ¾-inch round, 22,000 pounds.

I understand from Mr. Meaney and the company's engineer, Mr. Holgate, of Montreal, that the prices paid for these materials are as follows :

Southern pine $27.00 per M. B.M.

Cedar, spruce and white pine, $18.00 per M. B.M.

Iron, 3 cents per pound.

At these prices, which I deem fair and reasonable, the above-mentioned materials would cost $21,485.34, and as they are already delivered on the site of the work, a clause might be inserted in the specification to the effect that intending contractors would agree to take over these materials at the prices mentioned. Annexed to this letter is a statement of the quantities and prices of these materials.

I may add that the work already performed by the company includes the building of a stone embankment or approach to the wharf, about 530 feet in length, any one crib 200 feet in length, sunk in position. According to the building plans left with me by the company, the work has been performed in the manner in which such works are usually built by the department. I would, therefore, be at liberty to accept the work already performed.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
(Sgd.) EUGENE LAFLEUR,
Acting Chief Engineer.

This is all the correspondence in this bunch except some one or two typewritten statements as to quantities of timber, southern pine, &c. It was pointed out by the Minister of Justice last year that this work ought to be done. In the course of the speech which he made recommending the appropriation of $25,000, he said :

It is of the greatest importance to the navigation of the St. Lawrence that there should be a port in the Bay of Seven Islands, which would be a place of refuge for the vessels, and where they could be repaired. It would be in the public interest to have a wrecking plant and a dry-dock there. It is really more central than Quebec, where there is a wrecking plant now. When a vessel gets aground, it is of the utmost importance that she should be taken off at the earliest possible moment, so as to be saved the consequences of the terrible battering she would get if a storm came on. If a vessel happens to be stranded and is allowed to remain on the rocks for a week, and one of those terrific storms which we have down there comes on, she will, as the saying is, practically pound the bottom out of herself. This place is not in my constituency, but is in the constituency of my hon. friend (Mr. Girard) ; but it is the only point on the lower St. Lawrence where there is a harbour, and it is important that we should have at that central point conveniences for enabling us to go to the help of vessels which may be wrecked in the locality. This work is not for the benefit of one firm only. All those American firms which come in there for the purpose of exploiting our spruce limits will use this port as a port of shipment. How can you ship pulp from the lower St. Lawrence if you cannot get vessels into a harbour whence it can be shipped ?

Just a few weeks after that statement was made as to the necessity of this work we find the government in negotiation to acquire a property about which the engineer practically knew nothing, because he makes no certificate as far as I can see here. He says that it is impossible to send an engineer down at that season of the year. He accepts a work constructed by a private company on its own property. He accepts the statement of the secretary treasurer of the company accompanied by the certificate of the company's engineers, and upon the strength of that he recommends, and the government accept the recommendation, that this pier at Seven Islands, and which was being constructed by this private company in its own interest, should be taken over at the company's price. The government also assume the responsibility for the completion of the work and pay for all the work and materials which the company have done or supplied and the government's engineer certifies to the account. If this is a satisfactory way of doing business, why then I do not think I should occupy any more of the time of the committee. It seems to me to be a most unbusiness like proposition. It seems to me that the committee was not placed in possession of all the information which it had a right to expect from the hon. minister when he asked for this vote last year. There has been no reason advanced yet why the government should have taken this work over and made the contract which it has made with this company. I enter my protest as one member of the committee against this method of doing business because I think it is not in the public interest that business should be done in this way. The hon. gentleman may have all these letters and documents now.

Mr. COCHRANE. Would the hon. mintser please answer that question ?

Mr. HYMAN. I have endeavoured to explain the item several times.

Mr. COCHRANE. The hon. gentleman did not explain the question I put to him.

Mr. HYMAN. What was the question ?

Mr. COCHRANE. I thought the hon. minister was paying some attention to what I was saying.

Mr. HYMAN. It is pretty hard to remember the question after the long oration we have had from the hon member for West Toronto (Mr. Clarke.)

Mr. COCHRANE. The question was if the wharf was partly built in accordance with one specification how the government could adopt a new specification and work it out. This is an extraordinary position to take and I think the hon. acting minister will see how fallacious his statement is when he pretends to shelter himself behind the wording of the statute. I know that when he thinks the matter over he will see that the statute was never intended to cover a case like this. I am here to tell the acting minister that if he has no alternative, but to accept the recommendation of his engineer he had better get out of the business. The hon. minister has power to either accept or reject the recommendation of his engineer. I never knew that the department was run by the engineer. I knew it would be pretty hard for the minister to adopt every recommendation of the engineer, but I never knew that the minister was compelled to accept every recommendation that the engineer made. If that is the stand that the minister takes he is in a very absurd position. If a private individual got money in the same way that the hon. Minister of Public Works got money from this committee last year he would soon be put behind the penitentiary bars. He got the money under false pretenses. He asked for money to commence a work when it was already commenced, and it cost the country somewhere about $34,000 to pay for the work that had already been done. I think it is an absurd proposition to say that if they change their minds in reference to a work they cannot call for new tenders. They had to change their plans and specifications. I would like to ask the hon. minister what there was to hinder him from asking for public tenders for the work. The hon. minister will realize that he cannot shelter himself behind that clause of the statute because that clause of the statute was framed to meet a different situation. Should sudden emergency arise on a canal or public work the statute was designed to enable the government to employ the men on the canal or public work in finishing up the work. It is absurd to say that because these men are hired by the government they are officials of the government. It is absurd to say that the labouring men employed on this wharf are government officials. The engineer is a government official, but outside of that they are not government officials; they are hired men. We all know, from what has transpired here, that it costs about twenty-five per cent more for the government to do work by day's labour than by contract. If this work is necessary, I am prepared to vote the money, but I must be sure that it is in the best interests of the people of Canada, and that no private individual will be reaping a rich harvest out of the hard earnings of the people of this country.

Mr. HYMAN. I am sure that when the hon. gentleman (Mr. Cochrane) sees his words in 'Hansard' he will regret stating that the Minister of Public Works last year asked the House for money under false pretenses.

Mr. COCHRANE. Yes.

Mr. HYMAN. There is not one tittle of evidence before this committee——

Mr. COCHRANE. Would the minister tell me——

Mr. HYMAN. Excuse me; I have the floor. There is not one tittle of evidence before this House which would show that in October last, when the minister asked for this vote, he had any knowledge whatever of the fact of there being a wharf there that time.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Then how did his officer make a report?

Mr. HYMAN. I am stating, in answer to the charge made, that when the minister asked for this vote there is not a tittle of evidence to show that he knew there was a wharf in existence. He said it was proposed to build a wharf there; he gave the cost at $65,000, and he pursued the usual course in initial votes in asking for a sum in the estimates sufficient to enable the department to enter into a contract, but not enough to complete the work. It was decided afterwards that it would be more in the public interest that the government should acquire the property that had already been constructed.

Mr. COCHRANE. And the minister did not know it. When ignorance is bliss it is folly to be wise.

Mr. HYMAN. Very often, when a work has progressed to the extent of forty or even fifty per cent, if in the opinion of the engineer it is in the public interest to change the plans, the plans are changed without in any possible way interfering with the work already done. In this case there were certain changes made in the plans of the engineer, notwithstanding that there had been an expenditure of $34,000. It is quite true that a minister does not of necessity have to follow the reports made by his engineer, but he must be very largely guided by these reports. I do not say in all cases the minister is obliged to concur, but it is a very serious matter if he goes against his engineer's reports, and if I tried to justify such a thing in this House I have no doubt hon. gentlemen opposite would make a serious attack on me.

Mr. COCHRANE. I referred to the engineer's recommendation.

Mr. HYMAN. His recommendation in writing and his report are practically the same thing. The engineer is a technical officer and it is a serious thing for the minister to override on a purely technical question, the report of an engineer who has been in the department for many years.

Mr. COCHRANE. The minister has left his department in a worse hole than before he attempted a defence. I can tell him that when I see 'Hansard' I will not be sorry for what I said.

Mr. HYMAN. I am sorry you won't.

Mr. COCHRANE. You need not be sorry for me; be sorry for yourself. You are responsible for the blunder you made in playing into the hands of a certain party that you think more of, it looks to me, than you do of the public funds of this country. What is the position of the minister after challenging me for my impertinent statement?

Mr. HYMAN. I never said that.

Mr. COCHRANE. Let me speak now.

Mr. HYMAN. The hon. gentleman is quick enough to interrupt me——

Mr. COCHRANE. Sit down; I have the floor; that is what you told me. If I understand the matter rightly, the Minister of Public Works did get money under false pretenses. Will the hon. gentleman now tell me that from the time parliament prorogued until the time they made this contract, they could expend $34,000 without the knowledge of the department? The minister last year asked for that appropriation to commence a work that had already been commenced and had been going on for nearly six months, and then the hon. gentleman tells this committee that the minister did not know anything about it. Well, when ignorance is bliss, it is folly to be wise.

Mr. CLARKE. Or otherwise.

Mr. COCHRANE. If the company were constructing a work there and willing to spend their money on it, I cannot for the life of me see why the government should assume that work.

Mr. HYMAN. The vote was passed in October, 1903. There was no payment made to the company until after the report of the engineer of the 25th of June, 1904.

Mr. COCHRANE. But the work was done.

Mr. HYMAN. The papers show that the work had been commenced by the company in 1903.

Mr. CLARKE. I can appeal to the hon. gentleman that if time has been taken up on this item, it is due to the paucity of the information which he gave to the committee when this matter came up yesterday. There is some cause for complaint that the full information to which the committee was entitled has not been laid before it; because I maintain, with all respect for the hon. gentleman's officers, that the file of correspondence which has been laid on the table does not contain all the correspondence which took place between the persons from whom this wharf was purchased and the department. That is rather an unfortunate state of affairs. The engineer did not recommend that the site of this company's dock should be accepted. He did not recommend that the proposition made to this committee by the Minister of Public Works last year should be abandoned altogether. He does not say that the wharf which the government has taken over is on the same site and in the same location and is for the same purpose for which a vote of $25,000 was taken last year to commence the construction of a government pier. The engineer should not be held responsible for the action of the government. The engineer's report speaks for itself. The engineer is very prudent and very cautious in making his statement, and that statement was not made until almost a month after the secretary-treasurer of the company had sent a certificate to the minister of the value of the work done on the wharf and asked for a cheque for it. The statement of the engineer points out that this wharf or pier is on private property, and that before the government can do anything in the matter the property will, of course, have to be deeded to the Crown. The engineer recommended further that the material for which the country is to pay, or has paid, $21,000 or $22,000, should be charged up to the contractor for the work at the same price that the government paid to the company. That, it seems to me, would imply that the engineer of the department desired that the remainder of the work should be done by contract. Will the hon. gentleman pass over the report or read that portion of it?

Mr. HYMAN (reading):

> At these prices, which I deem fair and reasonable, the above mentioned materials would cost $21,485.34, and, as they are already delivered on the site of the work, a clause might be inserted in the specification to the effect that intending contractors would agree to take over these materials at the prices mentioned.

Mr. CLARKE. If the engineer knew what he was writing, and I suppose he did, he intended that tenders should be called for the completion of the work, because he recommended that if tenders were called for, the successful tenderer should be charged the same amount for the material on hand that the government had paid the company for it. The transaction all through is in a very unsatisfactory shape, and if we reach wrong conclusions in regard to it, it will be because we have not received all the information we are entitled to. I understand the peculiar difficulty the acting minister finds himself in, because this correspondence took place and this report was made prior to his assuming charge of the department; but it was the duty of his officers to supply all this information, so that we might form an intelligent judgment upon the matter. I think it is a vicious principle for the government to ask parliament for a vote for a specific purpose, and then to ignore the intention of parliament, apply the money to another purpose, purchase private property, and do it all in the most careless and slipshod way. The hon. gentleman said this money was not to be paid over until June last. The contract was not completed until the 23rd of June, the date on which it was signed. Have the officers of the department obtained any information as to whether the storms of last fall and winter damaged the work that was constructed?

Mr. HYMAN. We have no information as to any damage having been done to the work.

Mr. TAYLOR. I think the opposition have a perfect right to object to this item. Last year the government prepared their estimates in Council, laid them before parliament and asked for $25,000, and the minister, when asked by this side of the House what that was for, stated that it was for the purpose of erecting a wharf, giving the name of the place, the kind of wharf that was to be constructed, the necessity for it, its dimensions, and everything else connected with it. The opposition accepted the minister's statement that it was a work of necessity and in the interest of the country, and supposed that the government would proceed with the work as all public works are carried on, by first getting a report from their engineer and then calling for tenders. But what do we find to-day? If there is any truth in the statement which I have in my hand, and which I am going to read, the government must issue a commission and have this matter investigated. A party who has been on the ground writes this letter:

Dear Sir,—I regret to say that conditions were not favourable to take a photograph of the work I saw going on at 'Clarke's City,' in the bay of Seven Islands, for I would dearly like to show the people of this country how they are being 'flim-flammed' and their money squandered in aiding the schemes of unscrupulous adventurers, from across the border, for a consideration, enlist the active support of one of the members of this 'business' government.

In this instance I refer to the operations of the company known as the North Shore Power, Railway and Navigation Company, a body corporate and politic, with head office in New York, though I think they have an office in Quebec, for which, like Gaynor & Green, the firm of the Hon. (?) Charley Fitzpatrick is counsel, &c. Anyway, it was that hon. gentleman, who got this company its charter, and has ever since watched over it with fatherly care.

Some two years ago, this aggregation of New York adventurers, through the efforts of Fitzpatrick's firm, of which Mr. Parent, premier of Quebec, is a member, secured a tract of timber and pulpwood lands, situated on the River St. Marguerite, about three hundred miles below Quebec. After this, they purchased, for a nominal sum, the water power of the River St. Marguerite, and began to make such improvements as seemed necessary for the manufacture of pulp. For this purpose, it was necessary to have an outlet on Seven Islands bay, so a railroad about nine or ten miles long running from the first falls of the Ste. Marguerite to Seven Islands bay was projected—but I understand it is not yet finished—all the rolling stock of which has been allowed in free of duty; but this is not the worst feature, from a public standpoint, of the 'encouragement' that has been extended to this 'infant industry.' A deep water terminus was necessary, so this company set to work to build a wharf, by extending out in the bay, a rock embankment, from the excavations along the line of railway to a distance of about eight hundred feet, or to a depth of about ten or twelve feet of water, where the first section of a timber wharf about two hundred feet long and thirty wide was placed, and filled up to low water with stone from the excavation. This much was accomplished last year; but towards the close of the season, the North Shore Power, Railway and Navigation Company discovered that they had undertaken an expensive experiment, and ways and means were discussed to induce the government to undertake the expense of providing this company with the wharf and terminal facilities for their own business; and strange as it may seem, the Department of Public Works have taken over, and paid for all the work and material supplied by this company on account of the terminal facilities required for its own use. There is not a habitation or living man residing within miles of this wharf, and no person will ever use it, but this pulp proposition (if it ever is finished.)

I understand this scheme was worked last year by the Hon. 'Charley' Fitzpatrick, who induced the Minister of Public Works to put an item in the estimates ($25,000) for a wharf at Seven Islands. This passed the House all right, for Seven Islands is an old Hudson Bay post, and still something of a trading station with the Indians; but is fully nine miles across the bay from Clarke City, where the wharf is being built. Then during the present session of parliament, another appropriation of $60,000 has been asked, making in all so far $85,000 to aid a scheme that is no earthly use to any one outside the aggregation comprising this pulp syndicate, Fitzpatrick, Girard et al; but presumably some of this money will be laid aside to help Girard, M.P., for the district, and the Hon. Charley through the next election.

I am credibly informed that the North Shore Power, Railway and Navigation Company is building this wharf by days' labour, and furnishing the material at abnormally big prices, and the Department of Public Works is paying the bills monthly.

No wonder Fitzpatrick et al were desirous of getting rid of the Auditor General.

Why should these bills be paid? Even if the work were required for the general good of Canada, the Public Works Department, has no authority to assume the expense of such a job without letting the work by public tender. It is easy for such cattle to find money to debauch the electorate, if they are allowed to go on in this manner.

Ask for a royal commission to investigate the matter.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Signed by whom?

Mr. TAYLOR. By a gentleman who, if given the commission, will produce evidence to substantiate every word that is in that paper. If these are the facts, it is the duty of the government to name a commission and see whether these statements are correct or not.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Will the hon. gentleman pass me over the paper? I find there is no signature to this document which the hon. gentleman has read. Kindly give us the name.

Mr. TAYLOR. Will the hon. gentleman name a commission?

Some hon. MEMBERS. Name.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Either one of two things. The hon. gentleman has read a document which——

Mr. TAYLOR. Which was placed in my hands by a responsible party, who, he says, will verify every statement it contains.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The hon. gentleman said that it was signed by a responsible party.

Mr. TAYLOR. I did not say it was signed, but that it was placed in my hands by a responsible party.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Will he give the name of the responsible party or, in the alternative, make himself responsible for the truth of those statements, and they will be met very quickly.

Mr. SPROULE. There is another alternative. These statements just read are alleged to be correct. We have no knowledge whether they are correct or not. They were read before the Minister of Justice, who is one of the parties named, and the reading of these statements affords him an opportunity of either denying or explaining them or attaching what weight to them he thinks fit. They are made in such a way that he can set this House right. If any members of this House are improperly informed or wrongfully informed, or if the allegations are not correct, the opportunity is given him of setting the House right.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I must confess that I am surprised that my hon. friend from Grey (Mr. Sproule) for whom, as he knows, I have very great regard, would take the responsibility of saying here that an anonymous document of this sort must be answered in this House. The document has been read in the House, and I ask now that it be laid on the table to form part of the records so that we may know with what we are dealing. Independent altogether of the statement appearing in 'Hansard' which gives it some weight, in view of the fact that it was read by the chief whip of the opposition, I want this document to be in the custody of the House because I know something of this document and I know it did not reach the chief whip of the opposition direct but came to him through another channel. In this paper, these gentlemen, the Clarke Company are said to be a firm of New York adventurers. Sir, there is not a member of that firm, so far as my recollection goes—and I am pretty certain that I am correct—who is not a Canadian. The members of the firm are the Clarke Brothers of Toronto, who also do business in New York, but who have remained British subjects. They never changed their allegiance. It is said here that this firm acquired these timber limits by—I do not know exactly what process described, but evidently the writer of this paper suggests that they were acquired by some improper method. Sir, they were acquired by that firm at public auction after competition. No public timber limits can be sold in the province of Quebec except at public auction. That is provided by statute. With respect to the water-powers, I do not know anything about the way they were acquired. Nor do I know anything about the incorporation of the company. I left my law firm in 1896, and have never been actively engaged in the management of it since then. I know absolutely nothing of what was done and am absoutely unconnected with the management of my firm in any way, shape or form, except that my name appears in it. In view of these facts and in view of the fact that this production is anonymous——

An hon. MEMBER. Disreputable.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I think it is, to say the least, unfair to make it the basis of an attack upon me. I do not know of anything I have done at any time since I have been connected with the House which would justify any gentleman in assuming, on the strength of an anonymous letter, that I would for a consideration—for that is what is stated—commit this House to an improper vote. All I know is that—as I stated last year and repeat now—this coast, extending from Tadousac to the entrance of the Straits of Belle Isle, a distance of 600 odd miles, with a population of over 10,000, should have some facilities, and there is not a public wharf in the whole of that locality except at this point. As to whether or not the bargain was a provident or an improvident one, that is something which hon. gentlemen can judge for themselves. At all events I had absolutely nothing to do with the drawing of the contract. I never saw it until I read it to-night. I never saw anything of the correspondence exchanged until this moment, and I fail to understand what is the reason of this personal attack. It seems to me we can discuss matters of this sort without having recourse to such methods.

Mr. SPROULE. Is that all the explanation the minister has to give ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. What further explanation do you require ?

Mr. SPROULE. I think the minister will be fair enough to admit that we are doing him an act of great kindness and justice when we bring to his attention the rumours which he alleges are entirely false, and which would create an erroneous impression if not explained by himself or some one else who knew the situation and the circumstances and could put the matter right. But when we give him this opportunity, he thinks we are doing him an act of unkindness. The hon. minister says I took the responsibility of that article.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I did not say that the hon. gentleman did. I said I was sure that the hon. member for Grey (Mr. Sproule) would not do it.

Mr. SPROULE. No, I would not, but since it is there, let me point out what is likely to be the public impression created by

it. The Minister of Justice, who is a member of the firm of Fitzpatrick, Parent and—what is the name ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. There are five or six names in it.

Mr. SPROULE. Mr. Parent is the premier of the province of Quebec and has under his control practically, or that of his government, the disposal of the timber lands and the water-powers in that province. The Minister of Justice has given us a piece of valuable information, to my mind, and that is that the timber lands are sold by public auction. That being the case, we must assume that the gentlemen who purchased these limits, purchased them at their value in the market. So that there could be nothing wrong about that transaction whatever firm bought the limits. But the impression would have been left on the public mind, without such explanantion, that in some way or other the premier of the province of Quebec, who is a partner of the Minister of Justice, had secured for this firm valuable timber limits and water-powers. There is no information as to it being secured properly or otherwise ; it is secured. There is no insinuation, so far as I know that any of the parties have individually profited.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. My hon. friend (Mr. Sproule) is aware that, under the law of our province, there can be no sale of timber lands by the province except by public auction.

Mr. SPROULE. That is an illustration of what I have just said—that this gives the Minister of Justice an opportunity to make an explanation which the world at large does not know, and which puts a very different face upon the matter. With that explanation, it is clear that the firm could not have obtained the limit for less than it is worth. I do not know that any one has insinuated or would insinuate, after hearing this read together with the explanation of the minister, that either Mr. Parent or Mr. Fitzpatrick profited by this.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. It is insinuated that I got it for political purposes.

Mr. SPROULE. But, after this firm becomes possessed of the timber and water-power through one member of the legal firm, another member of the same legal firm, who happens to be in the Dominion government advocates the building of a wharf there, and secures—or, if he does not secure it, at least there is secured through the Minister of Public Works—an item in the estimates for the building of that wharf. And, if the allegations be true that there is no settlement there and no commerce to be provided for, there would be no need for a wharf except to improve the facilities for this corporation. There is another corporation there of which I happen to know in Ontario as a respectable firm. I say nothing against the firm of Clarke Brothers, because I know nothing about them. But we cannot suppose but that people will draw their own inferences from the facts that are placed before them. The fact that the Minister of Justice happens to be a member of the law firm that got the land and water-powers for this concern, and, immediately after, the Dominion government, of which he is a member, buy a portion of the wharf that this lumber firm are building and add money to build a wharf which, according to the allegations made can be of no use except to further the interest of these parties ; and this is done upon an engineer's report which does not show that he has measured or verified in any way the quantity of work taken over but simply says that he believes the estimate of the timber is reasonable ; and on the strength of this the money is paid. The Minister of Public Works says that he knew nothing about the existence of a wharf there or of one being built. But the Minister of Justice had already told him by his statement in this House, which was as follows :

> I know something of the bay of Seven Islands and this wharf partly built by a private company.

This statement was made when this item was under discussion. Yet, the Minister of Public Works says there is not a word to justify the statement that the Department of Public Works knew that there was such a work under construction, and there is no reason to insinuate that he knew that anything was being done except to begin de novo a wharf undertaken for philanthropic purposes or to facilitate the commerce of that region. We are told that there is no wharf for a great distance along that coast, and that these waters are considered the graveyard of the St. Lawrence. That would be a strong argument in favour of building a harbour of refuge. I felt like asking how many wrecks had taken place in these waters within the last twenty or thirty years. Because, if it could be shown that many wrecks had taken place, that would be an exceedingly strong argument in favour of a harbour of refuge. If, in addition, it had been shown that the navigators of those waters had applied to the government for a harbour of refuge, I would say that that also was a strong argument in favour of it. But we endeavoured to get that information from the acting Minister of Public Works (Mr. Hyman) and also from the Minister of Public Works himself (Mr. Sutherland), but we got no information at all along that line. So, we have the right to assume that there was no demand and no application from the shipping interests of that section for a wharf. Taking all these things into consideration, we had just grounds for the assertion that this wharf was built in the interest of this one concern and of this one concern alone. I am far from saying that even then it would not be justified, for, when people build up a great industry and give employment to labour, they are entitled to consideration, and they have their claims to be furnished with facilities, as well as people in any other part of the Dominion.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I suppose that document will be placed on file in the House ? I request that it be placed on file.

Mr. SPROULE. There would be no object in doing otherwise. It was for the purpose of bringing out the information that it was brought forward. And my own suggestion regarding it was to have the name of the Minister of Justice mentioned in a document of this kind and in connection with such rumours as were current means either that the rumour should not be circulated or else there must be something behind it, that we did not know. Now, I thought it would do the minister greater justice to read it in his presence and allow him to make such explanation as he thought fit to have such a rumour going around the world where he was in no position to defend himself by making such explanation as he could make here.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Was not this company incorporated by this parliament or was it the railway company ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK : Not this company, but the railway company.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I remember the minister making the explanation about this very place. I would like to have the plans of this shore and the wharf laid on the table that we may see whether this is going to be a harbour of refuge or simply an accommodation for the pulp factory. If the government fairly make the excuse that it will be a harbour of refuge, that will be something in favour of this vote. But, if it is merely for the accommodation of this one corporation, the item has to come out so far as the opposition are concerned. I wish to point out to the minister that the sums involved in this work and in that of Grande Vallée for the benefit of two lumber companies on the River St. Lawrence where there is no settlement would open up a hundred miles of navigation in a country that is well settled in the county of Victoria and Haliburton, by connecting a number of lakes and thus give the people there access to the world. And yet, we cannot get a dollar for those works. But these lumber companies walk up and get for such works as this and the Grande Vallée wharf, sums that are almost fabulous, the spending of which increases the value of their property, and the voting of which is so suspicious that a deal is charged by one of the government supporters in this House. And the Minister of Justice knows it. I will not say he (Mr. Fitzpatrick) is a party to this matter. It is a Montreal district man who made the deal. And here is this other which looks like a deal, though we do not know the nature of it. If there is a harbour of refuge there well and good. But we ought to see the plans.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Sam. Hughes) will not need to look at the plans. If he will look at the map, he will see that this is on the north shore of the St. Lawrence opposite the eastern extremity of the Island of Anticosti. This is a bay that is eleven miles wide and at least eleven miles deep and practically land-locked. It affords perfect protection from the storms.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Where is this dock, in the bay ? If so, what do you want a dock for in a harbour of refuge ? If you get into a land-locked bay what more do you want ? Why are not the plans of these things brought here ? We tried to get the plans for the Grande Vallée dock and I never saw them.

Mr. HYMAN. I am informed by the engineer, as the Minister of Justice has already said, that this is a perfect harbour. This wharf is built there to close up part of the mouth of the harbour and thus reduce the width, making it a better shelter harbour, that is reduce the width of the mouth of the harbour and add material to make it a shelter harbour.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. What was the depth of the harbour at their dock ? It is largely sailing vessels that are used there and these would want a wider entrance to come in.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. It is steamers altogether.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. These sailing vessels would not want to make port through a narrow entrance.

Mr. HYMAN. The length of the dock is 1,100 feet.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Let us have a chart.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. We will get Bayfield's chart.

Mr. BELL. Had we not better let this item stand ?

Mr. HYMAN. The matter has been fully discussed, and I do not think it should be discussed any longer.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I do not think it should pass at all.

Mr. HYMAN. Then move to strike it out.

Mr. TAYLOR. Surely, in view of the statement which has been placed in my hands by a responsible party, who says he has been there, and in view of the fact that there is no contradiction of his statements, it is proved that the government came down last year and asked and obtained $25,000 to build a wharf, and at the same time, and six months before, the company were at work building a wharf. Now they come forward and ask another appropriation of $65,000. From the papers laid on the table of the House it is proved that no tenders were advertised for, that there was simply a bargain with these people who are to go ahead and complete it. If last year, when the committee was asked to vote $25,000 to commence this work, they had known all these circumstances, the opposition would have voted that this appropriation be struck out. I would, therefore, move that this item of $65,000 be struck out.

Mr. BELL. In listening to the reading of the certificate by the engineer I thought it was a very cautious one. Were there any subsequent surveys obtained by the department before they paid the money ?

Mr. HYMAN. The money was paid upon an account by the company upon the certificate of the two resident engineers and the chief engineer of the department.

Mr. CLARKE. Who were the two engineers ?

Mr. HYMAN. Mr. Tassé and Mr. Lamoureux.

Mr. HYMAN. Are they engineers of the department ?

Mr. HYMAN. They are both engineers of the department. One is district engineer and the other is resident engineer.

Mr. BELL. And they certify both as to quantity and price ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes.

Mr. CLARKE. Are the certificates of these engineers there ?

Mr. HYMAN. They will be on the bill rendered by the company.

Mr. CLARKE. Have we that bill before us ?

Mr. HYMAN. What is here is simply a statement of the expenditure.

Mr. CLARKE. There is no certificate of any engineer there.

Mr. HYMAN. That will be filed.

Mr. CLARKE. There must be some more papers filed, because certainly that file is incomplete.

Mr. HYMAN. The bill rendered by the company would not form part of the papers in the possession of the department in any case.

Mr. BELL. If this embankment was constructed, as it has been said, by the company simply dumping in the harbour the stone from the excavations on the railway, and they were paid $1.25 a yard for that, the company must have reason to look on this as a fairly paternal government. That is a very fair rate of pay. We have not very full information in reference to this matter, and if the minister can assure us that he can give some further information, I think he should let the item stand until Monday.

Mr. HYMAN. The engineer informs me that there is really no further information that can be laid before the committee.

Mr. TAYLOR. Surely there is some more correspondence that can be brought down. There must be the first application for a grant, and then an attempt should be made to reconcile the statement of the minister last year when he asked for the $25,000. I have produced here a statement that there is not a man within nine miles of this place. Surely, in the face of this statement, the government are not going to force it through.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. At the mouth of what river is this pier being erected ?

Mr. HYMAN. The engineer informs me it is at Pointe Noir.

Mr. CLARKE. This committee are entitled to know if the government are in possession of any information or report from the engineer. We passed a vote of $25,000 last year to commence the construction of a pier for a specific purpose. The hon. gentleman's predecessor gave us particulars last year when he asked this vote of $25,000. It is not creditable to the department that we have to drag these statements out in order to get information to enable us to know what we are doing. The minister made specific statements as to the location of the dock, the length of the pier, depth of water, &c. He must have done that from some advice or report of his engineers. We are entitled to know why the engineer abandoned the location, why he accepted this new property, and if it will suit. He has made no statement to that effect in the documents which have been submitted to us.

Mr. HYMAN. I am informed by the engineer that the work which this vote is asked to complete will fulfil all the requirements that it was intended to fulfil when the vote of $25,000 was asked for.

Mr. CLARKE. I can only say that in so far as I am personally concerned that statement by the engineer will mitigate the conditions considerably, but we have a right to have some report from the engineer to justify this departure from the policy announced by the hon. Minister of Public Works last year.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I find that by the letter read that this wharf is not near the west side of the harbour of Seven Islands at all. It is said to be at the mouth of the St. Margaret river according to the letter produced and it is shown by the chart in an air line to be seven and a half miles from the entrance to the river and up towards Quebec. I think you may assume that this is correct and the acting Minister of Public Works is ignorant of any knowledge as to where the wharf is to be.

Mr. HYMAN. Is the wharf marked on the chart ?

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. No, but I have the chart here showing that the St. Margaret river is seven miles west. The railway charter called for a road in the valley of the St. Margaret river. That is where the charter requires the railway to run, and here we find the St. Margaret river entering the St. Lawrence seven and a half miles above the harbour of Seven Islands. Seven Islands and the Hudson Bay post are away on the north side, and in an air-line across the isthmus it is eleven miles as stated in this report which has been read by my hon. friend from Leeds (Mr. Taylor). I think that in face of all this the hon. minister should bring down some plans and not attempt to have this committee deceived by stating that this wharf is to be at the entrance of the Bay of Seven Islands. It is not according to the letter read, but is on the St. Margaret river and away up from the mouth of the harbour. Surely the hon. minister is not going to attempt to ask for a vote of this kind ?

Mr. HYMAN. I will ask the hon. gentleman not to use such intemperate language. I am making no attempt to deceive the committee at all. The hon. gentleman is making his statement upon an anonymous letter read to this committee by the hon. member for Leeds ; I am making my statement upon the statement of the engineer who assures me that the wharf is where I have stated it to be at the entrance to the harbour of Seven Islands. Surely I cannot be charged with misleading the committee under these circumstances.

Mr. BELL. Upon which side of the harbour is it, the east or the west ?

Mr. HYMAN. On the west side of the harbour.

Mr. BELL. How far is it from the village of Seven Islands, which I understand is on the east side of the harbour ?

Mr. HYMAN. The statement was made last year that the wharf is eight or nine miles from the village of Seven Islands.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Well, then, all we have to do is to get the plans of the department.

Mr. HYMAN. The plans will not show the position of the wharf on the shore.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. The plans will have to show where it is on the shore. They cannot show it in open water. I want to tell the hon. minister that if he says the harbour is on the west side then his statement a little while ago was absolutely unfounded. The hon. minister has made the statement based on the random and vague expressions of some of the officials of the department that this would narrow the entrance to the harbour.

Mr. HYMAN. The statement I made was that this would narrow the entrance of the harbour and I still maintain that is perfectly correct.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Well, then I will tell the hon. gentleman that his statement is absolutely wrong because the entrance to the harbour is on the southeast side of the bay and not on the west side of the bay, so that he had better look up his geography. I will send the plan over to him if he wants to see it.

Mr. HYMAN. Well, the hon. gentleman is making the statement.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. No, he is not making that statement. He knows what he is talking about.

Mr. TALBOT. That is something new.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. No, as hon. gentlemen know to their cost it is not something new. The hon. member for Burrard (Mr. Macpherson) will know it if he is not very careful. I will take him in hand some of these days and I will endeavour to civilize him a little.

Mr. MACPHERSON. He will take care of himself.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. He will skip out the same as the hon. member for Hants (Mr. Russell) did to-day.

Mr. RUSSELL. The next time the hon. gentleman has anything to say to the member for Hants I hope he will say it when he is in the House and not when his back is turned.

An hon. MEMBER. Take it back.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I never take anything back. The statement of the hon minister is entirely wrong.

Mr. HYMAN. The statement is not entirely wrong. The statement is perfectly correct. The wharf is built on the west side of the harbour and narrows the entrance of the harbour of Seven Islands.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. We will take the statement here, although the engineer has not his plan, which is to the effect that the entrance to the harbour is on the southeast side of the bay and not on the west side. The hon. minister said that it was at the west side.

Mr. HYMAN. I said from the west side.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. The minister did not say from the west side. He said at the west side. However, if he says he said from the west side I suppose I will have to accept his statement although I know what he said. He may have meant 'from' but he said 'on.' I had the chart in front of me at the time he made his statement. We find that the engineer has never visited the place and has no plan of it. He says that this railway runs along here. I want to see a plan of the harbour and I want to see where the railway line runs. If the railway is surveyed you can get the plans in the railway department. The plans must be registered, if so they must be in the Railway Department, and they will show where this line or railway runs, and also show its relationship to the bay, and we will be able to ascertain then when we see whether there is a dock there at all or not, nobody ever saw the dock.

Mr. TAYLOR. In view of the information laid before the committee to-night and in view of the statement which I have presented from a party who says that he knows the facts to be correct as given, it is plain that we were humbugged last year in voting $25,000 on a statement made by the hon. Minister of Public Works which was not in accordance with the facts as represented to the committee to-night. We are now asked to vote $60,000 to carry on this job—it is nothing more or less than a job—which is being perpetrated so that this amount of money can be given to a company of Americans. The hon. Minister of Justice says that these gentlemen are British subjects although living in New York. Notwithstanding the fact that they are living in New York he says that these men have never become naturalized. Their business is carried on from New York and the hon. Minister of Justice has not contradicted the statement made in that letter.

Mr. R. F. SUTHERLAND. What letter?

Mr. TAYLOR. Well, that statement.

Mr. R. F. SUTHERLAND. It is not a letter.

Mr. TAYLOR. It is a statement.

Mr. GALLIHER. From Mr. Anonymous.

Mr. TAYLOR. I will ask the hon. gentleman (Mr. Galliher) to ask the government to grant a commission and this gentleman will prove every statement made there.

Mr. GALLIHER. I would expect from a member with the long experience of the hon. gentleman (Mr. Taylor) that he should know more than to stand up in this House and ask a commission on the strength of a statement made by a man who is either ashamed to sign it, or is too big a coward to sign it, or is a liar on the face of it. If this is the kind of statement the hon. gentleman expects a commission should be appointed on, I am afraid that his ideas of the dignity of this House are far below the mark.

Mr. TAYLOR. I have been in the House for twenty-two years, and I know that when the Liberals were in opposition dozens and dozens of charges were made against the Conservative party on the basis of such statements.

Mr. GALLIHER. If that be so, I do not believe in it.

Mr. TAYLOR. When information of this kind comes to the opposition, it is their duty to bring it to the attention of the House no matter from what source it comes, and this communication is from a reliable source. The hon. gentleman who placed that in my hand is reliable and he says that if he is granted a commission he will establish every statement he makes and pay his side of the expense too. This is placed in my hands, as whip of the opposition, telling me it is my duty to bring it before the House, and I assume the duty and responsibility. If the statements there are true, this government ought to be swept from power at once. The Minister of Public Works stated last year when $25,000 was voted that it was in the public interest to build a dock there, but now the government comes forward and says that the Minister of Public Works did not know what he was talking about last year. When this money was voted they paid that company $34,000 and appointed them their agents contrary to the law which says: that no public money can be expended over $5,000 unless let by tender, except it is a work of necessity or where in the opinion of that department it can be better done by the officers of the department. What employees of the government are doing this work? It is done by an American firm with its office in New York, who have a gang of men building a railway and they are dumping the ballast down the side of a hill and get $1.25 a yard for the filling. And what is the dock for? Some one said yesterday that a large village was going up in the neighbourhood. Why it is seven miles across. This gentleman says that there is not a man living within seven miles of it, nor a man who will use it except this American pulp company. The Minister of Justice says that the Clarkes, of Toronto, are British subjects, but they are in New York and have been there for years doing business with their associates.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I understand the Minister of Justice said that the firm of Mossom, Boyd and Company, of Bobcaygeon, are engaged with this firm.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. No. I said they were the owners of the adjoining limits; that they intend putting up a large pulp mill in the neighbourhood on a power they have in the immediate vicinity; that this will enable them to export the pulp, and that it is necessary for them to have wharf facilities in this place. That I know from one of the Mr. Boyd's, who told me so himself a year and a half ago or so, in Quebec, and from the gentleman who acted as his lawyer—I forget his name but he is a well-known lawyer in Toronto.

Mr. SAM HUGHES. Mr. Wickham ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Yes. The hon. member for Leeds (Mr. Taylor) says it is the duty of the opposition to bring a matter of this sort before the House. I understand it is the duty of the opposition to discuss the estimates to the full extent, and so far as their criticism as to the manner in which the work is carried on I have nothing to say. But, when the hon. gentleman says it is the duty of the opposition to produce anonymous documents as he has done, it is the duty of a gentleman to deal with such a thing as the member for Grey (Mr. Sproule) has dealt with it.

Mr. TAYLOR. I produced the documents of a gentleman who was there and knows whereof he speaks. Grant a commission and that gentleman will come forward and substantiate the statements. I accept fully the statement of the Minister of Justice that he has nothing to do with the legal firm that is engaged in this transaction. But here is the statement made by that gentleman that these negotiations are carried on through the firm of which the Minister of Justice himself admits he is only a member in name. They were carried on through Mr. Parent and the members of his firm, but so far as the Minister of Justice is concerned he certainly was a party to advising the government to put $25,000 in their estimates last year and $60,000 this year for this work ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Yes ?

Mr. TAYLOR. He must assume the responsibility for that.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Of course I do, and I justify it.

Mr. TAYLOR. He must assume the statement made by the Minister of Public Works last year when he asked us to vote $25,000 that it was to build a dock down there when that was not true. To-day the acting minister of Public Works states that the government did not build the dock but went to work and negotiated with a firm that had $34,000 expended on a private enterprise and took if off their hands, and allowed that firm to go on building it without public tenders being called for. This work was undertaken, so far as the papers show, without a request from anybody, without a report from the engineer, without a plan of the work or anything else. And in the face of that it must convince every candid man in the House that the statements made by my hon. friend in that document are absolutely correct, that it is a job and a job of the very worst sort.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Did my hon. friend hear what the hon. member for Grey (Mr. Sproule) said ?

Mr. TAYLOR. I did.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Does he agree with the member for Grey that the explanation was satisfactory as respects the acquisition of this property by that company ?

Mr. TAYLOR. Certainly, but is it not correct that this firm through their lawyers, Parent and Company secured these timber limits ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. It is not correct ; it is untrue.

Mr. TAYLOR. And Parent and Company bought it at auction.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. That is not true.

Mr. TAYLOR. Was Mr. Clarke present ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I don't know.

Mr. TAYLOR. Who were the parties representing Clarke that bought that timber in? Clarke was not on the grounds; it was bought by agents and the firm of Parent were the agents that secured it.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Absolutely untrue.

Mr. TAYLOR. Well, that is what this gentleman says.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. He doesn't say it.

Mr. TAYLOR. I accept the statement of the Minister of Justice.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. How does the minister know when he is not connected with the firm ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. It is absolutely untrue that any member of the firm would go and buy in that limit.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Why ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Because one of the members of the firm is the Commissioner of Crown Lands who sold the property.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Would that stick them ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Yes ; they have some regard for decencey.

Mr. TAYLOR. Who bought it ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. If it were bought at public auction, as it must have been, it was bought by some person other than a member of that law firm. I know absolutely nothing about who bought it, and what difference does it make anyway who bought it ?

Mr. TAYLOR. It makes no difference, and I am not saying there is anything wrong in buying the land, and the statement does not say anything about it. But through that firm he acted as agent for this American firm.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I did not.

Mr. TAYLOR. Well, that is the statement, and we will have it investigated under oath.

Mr. R. F. SUTHERLAND. It seems to me that no more contemptible course could be followed in this House than that followed in this debate. An anonymous letter is read——

Some hon. MEMBERS. Order.

Mr. R. F. SUTHERLAND. What is the point of order ?

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. The point of order, I understand, is that the hon. member used the word 'contemptible.'

Mr. R. F. SUTHERLAND. I think that was a perfectly parliamentary term to apply to this case.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. I do not think it is quite parliamentary to use the word 'contemptible.'

Mr. R. F. SUTHERLAND. If that is not parliamentary, I will say a course which this House would not care to see followed by any hon. member. An unsigned letter is read, a letter which the writer is afraid to sign, as an honourable man would sign a letter; the Minister of Justice rises in his place and categorically contradicts it. As soon as he has done that, the member hands the letter to a reporter at the door of the chamber for the purpose of having it taken into the press gallery and put in the press of the country; while his colleague sitting beside him honourably rises and accepts the explanation of the minister.

Mr. SPROULE. Let me ask the hon. member this.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Order.

Mr. SPROULE. I am going to ask him a question, with his permission. I was going to ask if it could be seriously objected that a reporter got the letter when the Minister of Justice asked that it be placed on the table of the House, where any one could get it ?

Mr. R. F. SUTHERLAND. I am discussing the propriety of a member of the House handing that paper to a reporter after the statements in it had been absolutely contradicted by the Minister of Justice. I say that is a course which no reputable member of the House would take.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Order. Mr. Chairman, I rise to a point of order——

Mr. R. F. SUTHERLAND. I say, should take——

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Order. I rise to a point of order. The hon. gentleman said no reputable member would do as the hon. member for Leeds has done.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. The hon. gentleman cannot directly impute to a member anything disreputable.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. He has done so.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. If he has done so, he will kindly withdraw the expression.

Mr. R. F. SUTHERLAND. I say should not take that course. I am not prepared to accept any criticism along that line from the gentleman who rises to correct me, a gentleman who, so far as I have been able to gather during the last few weeks, distinctly lowers the tone of every debate in which he participates.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I am very much pleased with the elucidation the gentleman has given to this subject.

Mr. FIELDING. Order. I think the hon. member for Colchester (Mr. Gourley) has the floor.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Are you the chairman ?

Mr. FIELDING. I was protecting the right of the hon. member for Colchester.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. It has been my privilege to bring into line one or two gentlemen on the other side of the House who forgot what was due to decency and decorum in this House, and there are a couple of others I wish to bring into line.

Mr. LANCASTER. While the hon. member for North Essex (Mr. R. F. Sutherland) was giving us a lecture as to what is proper and reputable conduct and what is not, I wonder that he did not ask the government whether their conduct of last session was to be regarded as reaching the highest extent of propriety, in getting a vote put through on the representations made by the then Minister of Public Works, and not apologizing or explaining more than they have done to-night. The hon. member for North Essex, we quite realize, is anxious to support this government in all they do. If he were half as anxious to know the facts of the case when he is voting away the money of the people of this country, he would be serving his constituents better than he is doing in lecturing people who are just as able to understand what their duties in this House are and to know what is proper and what is not, as he is. The highest sense of propriety that ought to prevail in this House is that propriety of doing our duty to our constituencies. Before we go into these finer and higher questions of propriety and ethics which the hon. member for North Essex wants to talk about, we had better do our plain duty to our constituents, and ascertain when voting money whether we are voting it in the interests of the country.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Might I ask the hon. gentleman, is not the hon. member for North Essex the gentleman who plagiarized the resolution of another member of this House last session ?

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. The hon. member has no right to say that an hon. member has plagiarized.

Mr. LANCASTER. If he got any comfort out of what he wanted to do in that respect, he can have it. The gentleman who promoted the matter to which the hon. member for North Victoria refers succeeded in doing for the people of Canada what he wanted to do after three sessions fighting, and got the support of the hon. member for North Essex afterwards. Whether it was right or wrong for that hon. member to endeavour to take credit for what he was not entitled to and had opposed until then is a different matter. That is all over now, the people got their rights, and they know whom to thank for them. But the people will not thank any hon. member of this House for turning away from the issue before the chair, which is the expenditure of a large sum of money for works for which the original vote of parliament was not intended. Speaking for myself, as a humble member of this House, but representing a somewhat important constituency, which pays a large share of taxes to the general funds of the country, I am not satisfied to pass this vote as it stands. As the issue is before the chair at this moment, I feel that this item ought to be struck out, and I shall be obliged, if it is pressed, to vote for the motion for the hon. member for Leeds. I do not care whether the hon. member for Leeds reads a letter that is not signed, or a memorandum or a statement ; I do not care what he says is the source of his information. He stands in his place in this House and says he has certain information. What does it matter whether that information is in a letter, the writer of which has not given the permission to use his name, or has come within his knowledge in any other way ? I cannot understand why hon. gentlemen opposite are tumbling over each other to find excuses for voting this money through.

I cannot see how that fact can alter the question before the House, and that question is whether the allegations stated in this paper are true. What difference does it make who wrote that letter, or whether that letter was signed by one man or another ? The member who produced the letter has told the House that he is satisfied the statements are true and should be investigated. That hon. gentleman is surely not anonymous. He stands on his feet and makes an assertion and is courteous enough to state the source of his information although not obliged to. He says it is from a reputable gentleman whose name he is not at liberty to divulge at this particular moment. But these gentlemen opposite are disappointed and want to go off on a tangent, and quarrel about whether that gentleman who wrote that document should have his name disclosed on this particular occasion or be produced when the commission is granted. If the government have good reasons for wanting this item to go through, they can always give them. If they have information to show that the statements made by the hon. gentleman who wrote that letter are not true, they can give it. They can produce the reports asked for from the engineers, the plans made by the architects or engineers showing the necessity of the work, if they have such reports and plans, and they can explain, what they have not done at all yet—not that I have noticed, at all events—how it is that this grant was asked for last year on an entirely different condition of things from this year, and how it is that a much larger amount is asked for this year in addition to what was voted last session. The people of this country do not want the public money voted under false pretense. I do not mean to use that word in any insulting or improper way, but it amounts to a false pretense to ask parliament to vote the people's money in order that we may build a certain work, employ labourers doing work for the King, and build this work as a government work, start it from the beginning and make it a government work, and then after that money is obtained on that representation use it to buy from somebody else some work that the government say will do as a substitute and pay an extravagant price for what is apparently supposed to have been done in that connection. The government should have known last year what they were going to do. I presume they thought they were going to do what they asked for. I presume they thought they were going to build the wharf when they got that grant ; and if they have changed their policy, they should be able to give more information than they have given as to their reasons for the change and show what necessity there was for acquiring from these people—who are practically Americans and not Canadians, who are practically people belonging to the adjoining republic and not to Canada at all—a transfer of their property without any benefit whatever coming to the people of Canada. We are too fond of voting away the public money just for the mere sake of voting it away. We should only vote away money when it is going to do the Dominion good. If any money is asked to be voted which is not going to give full value to the people for every dollar voted, we should not vote it. There is no use in our voting money for the mere sake of voting it. If it is not going to benefit the people, there is no reason for voting it. Hon. gentlemen, particularly on the government side, appear to forget that they should first prove the benefit Canada is going to get from an expenditure before voting it, and it has not been shown that Canada will get one particle of benefit from this expenditure. We can assume, from the evidence before the House, meagre as it is, that these people from New York city are going to get some benefit. And by a strained construction we may assume that as they are doing the work in Canada somebody in Canada will do the work and get part of the benefit in the wages from them for doing it. But that is not what we are voting money for. We are voting money because the work will be of some benefit to Canada, and until the government can show it is of some advantage to the people, I am not prepared to vote for this expenditure.

Mr. TAYLOR. The hon. member for Essex (Mr. R. F. Sutherland) took occasion to rise and criticise my conduct as an hon. member of this House, because I read a statement which has been placed in my hands by a responsible party, and he said that the Minister of Justice categorically denied every statement in that paper. Well, I am going to take every statement in it, and put the question to the hon. minister with respect to each one whether he will deny or admit it. What is the first statement? It is this:

I refer to the operations of the company known as the North Shore Power, Railway and Navigation Company, a body corporate and politic, with head office in New York.

Did the minister deny that statement? The writer of this paper did not say whether they were Canadians or Americans. This statement does not say so.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Yes, it does.

An hon. MEMBER. It says a lot of New York adventurers.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. American adventurers.

Mr. TAYLOR. That does not say they are living in New York. My hon. friend says they are living there but never foreswore their allegiance. The writer of this paper does not say they are American or British subjects.

I think they have an office in Quebec, for which the firm of Mr. Fitzpatrick is counsel.

Does the hon. gentleman deny that statement? Then the writer says:

Anyway, it was that hon. gentleman who got this company its charter and has ever since watched over it with fatherly care.

Was he the hon. gentleman who got that company its charter? Did he deny that?

Mr. R. F. SUTHERLAND. What would that have to do with the question?

Mr. TAYLOR. The hon. member for Essex (Mr. R. F. Sutherland) said that the Minister of Justice denied categorically every statement.

Mr. R. F. SUTHERLAND. And I repeat that he did, in so far as it affected the case.

Mr. LANCASTER

Mr. TAYLOR. The statement you made—and 'Hansard' will prove it—was that the Minister of Justice denied categorically every statement made. I have given two already which he did not deny.

Some two years ago, this aggregation of New York adventurers——

He does not say living in New York, but that their head office is in New York. The only contention of the Minister of Justice was that these gentlemen had not foresworn their allegiance. But if they are living in New York, they may be New York adventurers all the same. Then the writer says:

Through the efforts of Fitzpatrick's firm, of which Mr. Parent, premier of Quebec, is a member, secured a tract of timber and pulp wood lands.

The statement of the Minister of Justice in answer to this was that the only way land can be secured in the province of Quebec is at public auction. That may be the case, and they may have secured them at public auction. The lands may have been put up at public sale, and they may have had an agent buy them in for the firm. This firm did not attend the sale and buy themselves, so I am informed, but they were bought by an agent. The Minister of Justice explained, and I accept his explanation, that the lands were sold at public auction.

Mr. BUREAU. That is the law.

Mr. TAYLOR. Some one bought them for this firm.

Secured a tract of timber and pulpwood lands, situated on the river Ste. Marguerite, about 300 miles below Quebec. After this, they purchased for a nominal sum, the water power of the River Ste. Marguerite.

The Minister of Justice did not say whether they did or not. The statement is that they purchased the water power there at a nominal sum, and that statement the Minister of Justice did not contradict.

For this purpose, it was necessary to have an outlet on Seven Islands Bay, so a railroad about nine or ten miles long, running from the first falls of the Ste. Marguerite to Seven Islands Bay was projected—but I understand it is not yet finished—all the rolling stock of which has been allowed in free of duty.

Did the Minister of Justice reply to that? Did he say whether it was or was not true? That this company got its rolling stock in free of duty?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Absurd.

Mr. TAYLOR. The minister did not contradict the statement that they got the charter, that they built this short road and that they got their rolling stock in free of duty. And yet, the hon. member for North Essex (Mr. R. F. Sutherland) said that he contradicted every statement and charge made.

—but this is not the first feature, from a public standpoint, of the 'encouragement,' that has been extended to this 'infant industry.' A deep water terminus was necessary, so this company set to work to build a wharf——

Did the minister contradict that statement or say whether this company had begun to build this wharf for themselves or not? The statement made by the Minister of Public Works to-day is that they began to build it and expended $34,000 upon it.

—by extending out in the bay, a rock embankment from the excavations along the line of railway to a distance of about eight hundred feet, or to a depth of about ten or twelve feet of water, where the first section of a timber wharf about two hundred feet long and thirty feet wide was placed, and filled up to low water with stone from the excavation. This much was accomplished last year; but towards the close of the season the North Shore Power, Railway and Navigation Company discovered that they had undertaken an expensive experiment, and ways and means were discussed to induce the government to undertake the expense of providing this company with the wharf and terminal facilities for their own business; and, strange as it may seem, the Department of Public Works have taken over and paid for all the work and material supplied by this company on account of the terminal facilities required for its own use.

There is another statement that the Minister of Justice did not deny. And the acting Minister of Public Works (Mr. Hyman) proves that the statement is correct.

There is not a habitation or living man residing within miles of this wharf, and no person will ever use it, but this pulp proposition if it ever is finished.

Did the hon. minister contradict that statement? We were told last year that there was a village growing up around there, and yet this sentence says that there is not a habitation within miles.

I understand this scheme was worked last year by the Hon. 'Charley' Fitzpatrick, who induced the Minister of Public Works to put an item in the estimates ($25,000) for a wharf at Seven Islands.

Twenty-five thousand dollars was in the estimates last year and the House voted the money on the statement made by the Minister of Public Works (Mr. James Sutherland), who is not now present. Who induced him to put that $25,000 in the estimates? We have no correspondence on the subject before us. The Minister of Justice is the member of the cabinet for that district, and no doubt it is through him, as stated here, that the item was put in the estimates by the Minister of Public Works. If there is any correspondence on the subject it is not brought down. Is it not fair to assume that the Minister of Justice must have been consulted in reference to this $25,000 that was voted last year? The Minister of Justice did not contradict that and did not say that he was not a party, with the Minister of Public Works, to puting this item of $25,000 in the estimates of last year. The hon. minister has not contradicted a single statement made here, except that he is not a member of the firm of Parent & Co. I accept that statement of course. But this document does not say that these timber limits were bought in any but an honourable way—

Then during the present session of parliament an appropriation of $60,000 has been asked——

And it will hardly be said that the hon. minister contradicted that statement for we have this item of $60,000 now before us to carry out this scheme not in the interest of the country but in the interest of this pulp company.

—making it all so far $85,000 to aid a scheme that is no earthly use to any one outside the aggregation comprising this pulp syndicate.

Did the Minister of Justice say that this expenditure would benefit anybody else? He says that it will make a harbour. But there is a harbour there, and building a dock will not improve the harbour in any way. It is not put there for the purpose of the harbour, for vessels that are under stress of weather can go in there now and anchor and so avoid the storm. The only reason for building the dock is that vessels may go there and take away the pulp wood, as was intended by the company when they began to build this work. Every one thought that the Minister of Public Works last year was making correct statements, and yet we find the facts to be different from what we understood them to be from his explanation. I have read this document, and it will be seen that the minister has not contradicted categorically or otherwise any statement except that he is not a member of the firm of Parent & Co., but he cannot say that he is not counsel for this company and that they were not the parties who got this charter. And so in every respect it is seen that the statement of the hon. member for North Essex is not correct.

Mr. R. F. SUTHERLAND. I will only say, in answer to the remarks of the hon. member for South Leeds (Mr. Taylor), that the whole tone of his address after reading that document would convey the impression that in some underhand and improper way the Minister of Justice or his friends had given a benefit to these people, and I said that categorically the minister had denied every such imputation.

Mr. TAYLOR. I did not lay it at the door of the Minister of Justice, but I say that it is done by the government. But the evidence as we have it here, including the statements made by the Minister of Public Works last year and by the acting Minister of Public Works this year, can lead to no other conclusion but that there is a job behind this vote. And it will be the duty of the opposition now, and in concurrence if we are voted down in committee, and in the country if we are voted down in this House, to fight this vote as one of the most nefarious jobs ever perpetrated by this government.

Mr. INGRAM. When this vote was asked for last year it was granted under an explanation of policy made by the Minister of Public Works (Mr. James Sutherland). That hon. gentleman said that his policy would be, in carrying out any new work, to carry it out by contract after publicly calling for tenders, and that he would lay before this House a proper estimate, made by the engineer of his department, of the cost of the work, so that hon. members on both sides might know what they were voting for. Now, if hon. gentlemen will read 'Hansard' of last year, they will see that the House was led to believe that the money then voted was to be spent upon an entirely new work. There is no question about that. But something has leaked out since to prove that the work was not a new work. Within a week after the money was granted last year there was a demand made by the North Shore Power and Navigation Company for $34,000 for work done by that company. Now what I ask—and I ask it in all fairness because I do not wish to discuss this matter in a carping way—is, where is the correspondence that took place before this demand for $34,000 was made ? There must have been such correspondence and we as members of this House are entitled to see it. The fact that the government did not carry out the work by contract, and the fact that they did not let the House know that a part of the work had been done, is sufficient evidence to any reasonable man that there is something wrong. There was concealment. Whether that concealment can be justified or not, I do not know, but concealment itself indicates that there was something wrong. Now, what have we at this moment ? We have an item for $60,000 more, and we are asked to vote that $60,000 directly in the face of the statement made by the hon. gentleman who was then Minister of Public Works (Mr. James Sutherland) and who, I understand, is still Minister of Public Works, and for whom my hon. friend (Mr. Hyman) is acting at this moment.

That is the public impression, that is our impression, and we have never been notified to the contrary. That being the case, we are still under the old system as inaugurated by that hon. gentleman and we have a right to assume that this work should have been carried out by contract instead of in the way it has been carried out. Will the hon. gentleman who is administering the department now tell the House that Mr. Sutherland has nothing to do with the Public Works Department and that this is a new system he is going to carry out himself to have work of this character and of this magnitude $85,000 done by day labour or under the supervision of a company over whom we have no control ? If that is the case the sooner we know it the better. For my part I have listened carefully to this discussion and I cannot make up my mind to support this item without some information that is being concealed at this moment. The minister has not told us that his engineer has inspected this work. I infer it was the engineer of this North Shore Navigation Company that did this work ; it certainly was not an engineer of the department. That being true we were certainly misled last session because the work was partially done by a private company and you must take into consideration that you are inaugurating a peculiar system. I care not what limits are in question or who purchased these limits, but I ask are the people of Canada going to vote money to every company who choose to buy timber limits anywhere, who choose to start in to build a wharf for their own accommodation? Are we to accept the word of an engineer whom they have instructed to da that work? Are we to take the opinion of any engineer other than the engineer of the Public Works Department who is responsible to this House through the minister, for every report he may make ? I must say to the hon. minister that we have a right to get more information than he has given to-night in connection with this. We have a right to get that portion of the information which is being withheld, whether intentionally or not I do not know. We have a right to see the correspondence that led to this demand for $34,000. If hon. gentlemen in asking the $25,000 had told the committee candidly and frankly : The reason we are asking this $25,000 is that a certain company has started to build a wharf, that we believe they are doing right and we want the $25,000 to help to recoup them for the money they have expended on this wharf and next year we may ask an additional sum—if that statement had been made on that occasion there would have been no reason for this discussion to-night. I for one, will not vote for the item of $60,000, thus making a total expenditure of $85,000, until the necessary information is brought down.

Amendment (Mr. Taylor) negatived, yeas 21, nays 35.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I want the minister in all fairness to hold the item over until the plans are brought down. We have come to the conclusion that we have been too easy in taking the word of ministers in reference to such works as this and the similar work at Grande Vallée. If it can be shown that this harbour will be useful as a harbour of refuge I am satisfied that the opposition will not hesitate to vote this sum. Will the minister undertake to bring the plans over ?

Mr. HYMAN. The item I think has been sufficiently discussed. The committee is aware that for the Public Works estimates there are hundreds of plans and to bring over the plans in connection with each work would be simply impossible. If the hon. gentleman will pass the item I have no objection to-morrow to let the hon. gentleman see the plan.

Colonization roads in Manitoba and Northwest Territories, $25,000.

Mr. INGRAM. Would the hon. gentleman give us an idea of where they are to be constructed ?

Mr. HYMAN. This item appears in the estimates at the request of the Department of the Interior, the reason being that settlers are coming in very fast and these roads are necessary to permit settlers to reach Dominion lands. The localities which it is proposed to serve are as follows : Northwest Territories, road from Athabasca river to Lesser Slave lake to be re-opened and improved, road from head of Lesser Slave lake to Peace river to be further improved at an estimated cost of $15,000 ; road to be opened and improved from a point near Sprague northwards for a few miles on the route which is followed by immigrants coming into Canada from Minnesota at an estimated cost of $2,000 ; road between lake Winnipeg and lake Manitoba to accommodate new settlers going into that country, $3,000 ; road to be graded from a point on the Prince Albert branch of the Canadian Northern Railway west of Erwood to a point north of Carrot river, $5,000.

Mr. BLAIN. How will this money be expended ? Will there be contracts let or will men be put on the work ?

Mr. HYMAN. I do not know that the question has occupied the attention of the officers of the department as to whether contracts will be let or not. I fancy it will be a somewhat difficult matter in regard to the smaller amounts to let contracts for roads of this character as naturally the drawing up of the plans would render it almost impossible to get contractors for the roads. I have no doubt that a certain amount of work will be done by contract, but I do not know whether or not all of it can be done by contract.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. In regard to the road to the Peace river I suppose that is to re-open the old road built at the time of the Yukon excitement. I am satisfied that if the hon. minister makes inquiries from persons who are competent to judge he will find that the road is not put in the best locality. The road from Athabasca river to Lesser Slave Lake is built through a rough and hilly country. A much better route will be found farther west and one which is much more along the line of future settlement. Is it intended to build this road to the head or foot of Lesser Slave lake ? The hon. minister is making two roads when there should be only one road to the Peace river country. People going into that country will travel either by wagon or by boat. If they travel by boat they will not go by way of this road at all. They will go down the Athabasca river and then up the Peace river. If they are going by wagon they will go across country from the Athabasca river and then down the Peace river. If they are going by wagon they will get nearer to the mountains than the road which the hon. minister outlines here. I know what I am speaking about and I am satisfied that if the hon. minister consults any person who travels in that part of the country and who is familiar with the conditions there, he will find that the statement which I make is borne out. From Athabasca river at Fort Assiniboine, he can get a very good road through a good country to Peace river and then if he wants to branch down to the lower Peace he can go down by water or by the road. The first road known as the Edmonton Trail was not built in a good locality.

Mr. SPROULE. I thought that all these expenditures in the Northwest were made through the Northwest Council. I think they have usually built these roads and that we have voted the money. Is it not intended to use this money in the same way ? Are we commencing to build roads independent of the Northwest Council ?

Mr. HYMAN. In a general sense that is the case, but in this particular case I am advised by the Department of the Interior that the object of the construction of these roads is to reach fertile districts and to enable settlers to get through. These districts are very sparsely settled at the present time and the Department of the Interior have recommended that it is in the interest of the Dominion in order to enable them to open up these lands that the Dominion shall make these small expenditures.

Mr. SPROULE. That is not the part that I am questioning at all. My question is : How will the money be spent ?

Mr. HYMAN. The money will be spent by this department.

Mr. SPROULE. Will it not be spent by the Northwest Council ?

Mr. HYMAN. No, it will be spent by the department.

Mr. SPROULE. We are to commence spending money that heretofore has been spent through the Northwest Council ?

Mr. HYMAN. In this case.

Mr. SPROULE. This is a departure from the policy which the government have followed for some years back ?

Mr. HYMAN. I have stated that this is an exceptional case. This vote is put in at the request of the Department of the Interior. There are certain Dominion lands which are valuable, and for the purpose of enabling settlers to reach these lands it is necessary to construct these roads. Our information is that the settlers are going in at a very rapid rate, but the country is very sparsely settled at present. In so far as this vote is concerned we are departing to that extent from the general policy of allowing the roads to be built by the Council of the Northwest Territories. The lands are Dominion lands and the Northwest Council do not care to assume these particular expenditures. This government consider it to be in the interest of the country that these roads should be built so as to open up lands which are owned by the Dominion.

Mr. BOYD. It seems to me that as far as Manitoba is concerned the hon. minister has made the explanation very nicely. It is a rather unusual departure on the part of the government to commence building colonization roads in a province such as Manitoba and I think the government are establishing a dangerous precedent when they begin colonization roads through an organized province. The information that has been given to me is that in three cases each one of these amounts is to be expended in a way that is going to be a benefit to the candidates of the government who are now in the field.

Mr. HYMAN. In the absence of my colleague the hon. Minister of the Interior (Mr. Sifton) I am going to ask that the matter stand.

Mr. BOYD. The information I have is that there is a certain foreign vote in the localities which are to be traversed by these roads and that the object of spending the money is for the reason I have given. It is a most extraordinary departure to undertake to spend the money of this government in that way and we ask that if you are going to spend money spend it in some proper way.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Give it to the Manitoba government.

Mr. BOYD. Give it to the Manitoba government and give it to the territorial government. If you spend it there, why should you not be called upon to do the same thing in every part of Manitoba, or in Ontario, or in any part of Canada? I do not know any person who could have placed it before the House in a nicer way, but it does not alter the case as I have stated it to the committee.

Mr. INGRAM. I do not view this item with very much favour and I do not believe that the people of the organized provinces of this Dominion will look upon it with very much favour.

Mr. BOYD. We know well enough what they are doing it for.

Mr. HYMAN.

Mr. INGRAM. We know what the idea is, but we know it is a thing that should not be encouraged. We have organized provinces in the Dominion who look after their roads and bridges; and we pay a sum of money to the government of the Northwest Territories to administer the Northwest Territories. If they want $25,000 for building roads, this government should let them expend that as they expend the other money voted to them. If this system is allowed, the government will not hear the last of it. Our sessions are long enough now, but if matters of this kind are introduced they will be extended. I am anxious to close the session, but I will stay here to prevent this kind of thing. If this money goes to the Northwest Territories' government I have no objection.

Mr. SCOTT. So far as the Territories are concerned, this is not a precedent, because money was voted for this very road by this parliament five or six years ago.

Mr. SPROULE. Which road?

Mr. SCOTT. One of the roads mentioned by the minister.

Mr. HYMAN. Athabasca river to Slave lake.

Mr. SPROULE. Who spent the money?

Mr. SCOTT. I think the money was put in the hands of the Northwest Public Works Department.

Mr. SPROULE. Yes.

Mr. SCOTT. And the vote was made in this way. There is nothing to prevent the system being followed.

Mr. SPROULE. We have voted money every year for this purpose, and the vote was introduced by the Minister of the Interior, but the money went to the Northwest assembly and the work done under their control, but now we are taking it out of their control.

Mr. HYMAN. I simply asked the vote to stand in the absence of the Minister of the Interior. I said the department had no policy in the matter.

Mr. INGRAM. You said the Public Works Department was going to expend it.

Mr. HYMAN. I think you will find in 'Hansard' that I merely said I presumed so.

Mr. INGRAM. I will apologize if the minister did not say that his department would expend this money.

Mr. HYMAN. I did not intend to say so, and I think you will find that I did not make the statement. There will be a full explanation if you allow the item to stand until the Minister of the Interior, at whose request it was introduced, is here.

Mr. SPROULE. When I asked if that were the policy of the government the minister said that it was a departure from their former policy, and that the Public Works Department would expend it, but now he says the government have no policy.

Mr. HYMAN. I think it is a departure, because you do not find every year items of this kind.

Mr. SPROULE. Yes, you do.

Mr. HYMAN. Was there an expenditure last year in Manitoba ?

Mr. SPROULE. I am speaking of the Territories.

Mr. HYMAN. I was speaking in reference to the whole item.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. When the item comes up again would the minister let us know where that road runs from North Erwood, and why they are building a road there ?

Mr. HYMAN. I will call the attention of the Minister of the Interior to the hon. gentleman's remarks.

River St. Lawrence ship channel—to make good the damage to the dredge 'J. I. Tarte,' $65,000.

Mr. HYMAN. There was an accident attended unfortunately by loss of life and we require four new boilers for the dredge which were purchased by contract at $36,800 and the total cost is $65,000.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Was there an inquiry ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes, but I do not wish to make a statement for the reason that there are some suits pending against the government and it might be used.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. What class of boilers ?

Mr. HYMAN. Scotch boilers.

Mr. BLAIN. Are they manufactured in Canada ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes, the contract is let to Canadians and they will be made in Toronto.

Rideau Hall and grounds—repairs and improvements, $600.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. What are these ?

Mr. HYMAN. These are repairs required in consequence of the fire.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. People have drawn attention to the dilapidated condition of the sidewalk down there. Why not put in a granolithic walk?

Bayfield harbour—extension of southern pier, $1,600.

Mr. BLAIN. How much has been expended altogether at Bayfield ?

Mr. HYMAN. The total amount of the contract was $6,440. There has been an expenditure of $4,458.42, and there is a balance of $1,600, making a total expenditure of $6,141.42.

Mr. BLAIN. What interest does this serve ?

Mr. HYMAN. It is a vote asked for to close the contract that was entered into. Full particulars were asked for and given at the time.

Collingwood harbour improvement, $6,050.

Mr. SPROULE. We wanted to get some information about Collingwood harbour. We wanted to know what was the cost of that dock and how was the estimate made ?

Mr. HYMAN. The report of the engineer of the government is that the cost was $545,000.

Mr. SPROULE. Has the engineer made a report on that ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes.

Mr. SPROULE. Will that report be brought down ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes, we will have it brought down and it may be discussed on the further supplementaries.

Depot harbour, dredging, $11,200.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. What is the explanation of that ?

Mr. HYMAN. This is dredging around the wharf so as to make the depth of water twenty feet. It is a government wharf.

River Otonabee, dredging at Peterborough, $410.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. What is this for ? These waters for some purposes are under the control of the Railway Department and for some under Public Works.

Mr. HYMAN. For canal purposes they are under the Railway Department and for some under Public Works.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I suppose the channel wants to be enlarged.

Mr. HYMAN. That would be Public Works.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. A great deal of work requires to be done in Victoria county.

Mr. HYMAN. Yes, and it is necessary work.

Sidney harbour breakwater, British Columbia, $3,000.

Mr. EARLE. Does that complete the construction of the breakwater ?

Mr. HYMAN. There is a further vote in the estimates. This is to complete the work down to the 30th of June, 1904.

Mr. EARLE. What is the total cost ?

Mr. HYMAN. The toal cost up to the present is $13,000. The estimated cost is $16,000.

Pelee Island, Ont., cable connection with mainland, to complete payment for repairs, $1,150.

Mr. INGRAM. How is that cable operated ?

Mr. HYMAN. It is operated by telephone by the government.

Telegraph lines—Qu'Appelle-Edmonton section—loop line from a point between Bresaylor and Onion Lake stations to Lloydminster, $4,500.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Are you changing the line ?

Mr. HYMAN. This is a line that makes a loop from the main line and back to the main line.

Some resolutions reported.

Mr. FIELDING moved the adjournment of the House.

Mr. SPROULE. What will we take up on Monday ?

Mr. FIELDING. A number of Bills and then probably Militia estimates and Railways and Canals and there is quite a number of odd items yet to be passed.

Motion agreed to, and House adjourned at 12.05 a.m. Saturday.
