The estate is divided among immediate relatives.

The large barns of Thomas K. Thompson, third concession, Ennis-killen, were destroyed by fire last week, entailing a loss of over $10,000, with insurance covering but one-eighth of the loss. George H. Thompson's barn in Dawn township was also burned, making four barn fires within a radius of ten or eleven miles within a week, all thought to have been of incendiary origin.

A charming September wedding took place in Edmonton, Alberta, the 27th, when Miss Marjorie Pray MacTaggart was united in marriage to Mr. George Walter Robinson, by Rev. S. W. Locke, at the home of the bride's grandfather, Mr. W. H. Pray.

The bride, who was attended, entered the drawing-room to the strains of the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin, played by her cousin, Miss Helen Hurst, and during the signing of the register, Miss Hurst also sang "Because."

The bride looked very graceful in a travelling suit of brown French broadcloth with blouse of maize crepe, and velvet toque with fur trimming. She carried a shower bouquet of Killarney roses and lilies-of-the-valley.

Mr. and Mrs. Robinson left at 10:35 for the Pacific Coast via Prince Rupert, and on their return will reside in the Algonquin apartments, Edmonton South.

ANOTHER SUCCESSFUL FAIR

Good Attendance and Large List of Entries at Exhibition.

Although a cloudy sky and a strong wind did not promise a favorable day, the Glencoe Fall Fair, held last Wednesday under the auspices of the Moss and Ekfrid Union Agricultural Association, was a splendid success. There was a large attendance.

Entries in nearly every class were heavy. Spring rains and a summer drought accounted for the agricultural showing not being as good as usual. Potatoes were fairly good, but other roots did not compare well with former years. This was fully made up for by entries in other classes.

Five stock and horse exhibits were exceptionally large, of uniformly fine quality. Entries of ladies' work and domestic manufactures were numerous and the exhibit of art work was excellent.

The grandstand was crowded for the afternoon performance, which included judging of horses, all classes, and two races. The London pipe band was in attendance and added liveliness to the day by a number of Scotch airs.

The races resulted as follows:
Free-for-All
E. Mackey, Strathroy 1 2 1
G. Seaborn, Longwood 3 3 3
O'Keefe, Strathroy 2 1 2

250 Trot of Pace
E. Mackey, Strathroy 1 1 1
D. Turner, West Lorne 2 3 2
A. Kelly 3 2 3

In the second heat of the free-for-all Donnie Boy, driven by George Seaborn, ran too close to Tony Bars, driven by E. Mackey, just at the commencement of the second lap. Donnie Boy was thrown and did not regain his feet for some time. Mr. Mackey was thrown from his sulky, the racer finishing the lap itself. Neither driver was injured, and the horses showed no bad effects, finishing the next heats in good time.

In the evening a concert was held at the opera house. This also was well attended.

Those in charge of arrangements this year were—D. McCallum, president; A. B. Gillies, 1st vice-president; N. J. McKellar, 2nd vice-president; J. A. McKellar, treasurer; R. W. About the House

Useful Hints and General Information for the Busy Housewife

Dainty Dishes.

Chopped Cucumber Pickle.—Peel and chop twenty-four large cucumbers and five onions. Mix with one-half pint salt and let drain for several hours. When drained add black peppers, cloves and mustard seed, using two tablespoonfuls of each. Cover with good vinegar, add horseradish if desired. Put in glass jars and cover with vinegar if needed.

Quince Honey.—Pare six quinces and grate on a coarse grater. For each quince take one pint of sugar. Moisten this with two quarts of water. Boil the sugar and water until a very thick syrup is formed, or until it spins a thread. Then add the grated quince and boil for twenty-five minutes. Seal in pint jars.

"Corn Salad."—Select two dozen ears sweet corn, two heads cabbage chopped fine, eight onions, four green peppers, one cup sugar, one-half cup salt, vinegar to taste, one teaspoon mustard, one teaspoon tumeric powder. Dissolve two tablespoonfuls cornstarch or flour in vinegar; mix all together. Boil hard for ten minutes. This makes eight quart jars full, which should be sealed and kept for winter use.

Cold Salsap.—Use one peck of ripe tomatoes, cut or chopped into small pieces and put into colander to drain off juice. Two cups chopped celery, six medium chopped onions, six large red sweet peppers, two pounds light brown sugar, one-half cup salt, two cups mustard seed, two ounces ground cinnamon, two quarts cider vinegar. Mix all together. Pack in jars and let stand for a week, when it will be ready for use.

Cream of Celery Soup.—Two small potatoes, one small onion, one-half dozen stalks celery, chopped parsley, one tablespoon butter, one teaspoon flour and seasoning. Slice vegetables and put on to cook with only enough water to be almost boiled away when vegetables are tender. Drain, mash and add milk. Thicken with butter and flour, mix together, and let boil up. Season to taste, sprinkle with parsley and serve with bread strips that have been buttered on both sides and browned in oven.

Turkey Timbales.—When no more slices can be cut from cooked chicken or turkey, take bits of meat, chop fine, and to two cups of meat allow one cup soft white bread crumbs and one-half cup hot milk. Mix crumbs and milk together; add chopped meat and yolks of two eggs. Season with salt and pepper. Beat whites of eggs lightly—they must not be frothy—and mix well with other ingredients. Turn mixture into buttered individual tangle molds, set in a pan of hot water and cook in moderate oven about three-quarters of an hour. Carefully unmold on hot plates and serve.

French Pickles.—A chopped mixed pickle with tiny whole onions and cucumbers in it. Chop, not too fine, three large carrots, two bunches of celery, one quart of common onions, three sweet green peppers, three sweet red peppers and one quart of large cucumbers. Divide one large cauliflower into small flowerets, skin one quart of tiny button onions and carefully wash one quart of small cucumbers. Mix. Pour off and cover with a weak brine, and let stand two or three hours. Pour off and cover with a weak brine making it salt enough to taste. Boil all together until tender, about fifteen or twenty minutes. In the meantime have boiling two quarts of vinegar, into which pour the following paste, consisting of three cups of sugar, one cup of flour, one tablespoon of tumeric, four tablespoonfuls of ground-mustard. Mix these with water to form a smooth paste and stir into the vinegar. Let it cook about ten minutes. Drain the pickles from the brine and add to the vinegar mixture. Seal in glass jars.

Tasty Stews.

Veal Stew with Shortcake.—Cut in cubes three pounds of breast of veal. Put in a stewpan, cover with boiling water and cook slowly for one hour. Then add one dozen small peeled silverskin onions, which have been par-boiled 10 minutes, and one dozen small new potatoes and cook another hour. Season with salt and cook until vegetables are tender. Remove meat and vegetables; keep warm in separate vessels. Add one cup of hot cream or milk to liquid, season again with salt and pepper and thicken with flour, diluted with cold milk. Bake a shortcake in layer cake pans, place one round on a warm chopplatter, spread with butter. Heat meat again in gravy, pour over shortcake and place remaining round over meat. Surround shortcake with vegetables, pour gravy over all, sprinkle with one tablespoonful of finely chopped parsley and serve.

Rabbit Stew.—Take a dressed young rabbit, cut in small pieces and soak in cold water for an hour or longer; drain, roll in flour and fry a light brown in hot lard and butter, mixed; cover with boiling water and simmer until tender; drain off stock and use it to make a sauce, with one tablespoonful of butter and two of flour; season with salt and pepper and celery salt if desired. Add one cup of hot milk and pour the sauce slowly over one well-beaten egg; stir well and put in hot dish. Garnish with a few sprigs of parsley.

Spaghetti Stew.—One 5-cent package of spaghetti, one-half pound of sliced bacon, three medium-sized tomatoes or a small can of tomatoes, two medium-sized onions and two medium-sized sweet peppers. Cook spaghetti to boiling salt water 12 or 15 minutes, drain and remove from the fire. While spaghetti is cooking, cut bacon in small squares in frying pan and stir until brown; then place onions, peppers and tomatoes, chopped fine, in the frying pan with the bacon and cook until all are tender and form a thick sauce. Pour over the spaghetti and stew all together about five minutes, season with salt and pepper to taste and serve.

Household Hints.

Fried calves' liver, cold and chopped fine, makes a good sandwich. To bake patties successfully the oven should have a strong under heat. Delicious soup can be made of rice stock flavored with tomato, onion, or both.

Carrots and beets should always be cooked whole and then skinned and sliced.

A coat of clear varnish is a good thing to give straw matting before it is laid.

There is nothing more indigestible than bread that is not baked thoroughly.

Stale macaroons pounded and added to any pudding will improve the flavor.

Pans for baking bread should be narrow to insure thorough baking of the bread.

An attractive little mold of rice served with canned peaches makes a dainty dessert.

Japaned trays should not be washed in water; dip a cloth in alcohol and wipe them off.

Put a little salt on the dishes on which eggs are served and the egg will wash off easily.

Mashed potatoes, if given a final beating with an egg-beater, will be very light and fluffy.

To prevent embroidery scallors from pulling is to launder them before they are cut out.

When cleaning saucepans in the sink there should be a board in the bottom of the sink to stand the pans on.

Do not store ashes in a wooden box, pail or barrel, nor throw them on the cellar floor. They should be kept in metal containers.

A tiny piece of charcoal in the bottom of the vase in which cut flowers are standing will prevent the unpleasant odor of stale water.

Test potatoes by cutting the potato in two and rubbing the cut surfaces together, then press the two parts together. If they stick, the potatoes are good.

Cold boiled rice added to stewed tomatoes and seasoned with minced peppers, onions, salt and pepper, makes a savory dish which is served with chops.

To keep home-made catsup fresh after the bottle has been opened is to pour a little olive oil into the bottle after use and before it is put away for the next meal.

The hole will seem smaller and will be easier to darn.

Do not leave matches where children can get them. Have a proper holder out of their reach, and do not store your supply in a cupboard unless protected in a covered tin box or something similar, and you will eliminate the prospect of mice setting fire to your home.

To make ideal dusters for window ledges, sash boards, legs and backs of furniture, lighting fixtures and other small places, is to buy a little 10-cent dish mop and saturate it with furniture oil. This makes it a dust-less duster, which may easily be cleaned by washing it in hot soapsuds, and may be renewed by another application of the furniture polish.

GOVERNOR ON CROWN PRINCE.

Mad Ways of Kaiser's Heir Told in New Book.

Whoever is interested in knowing about such things as the Prussian Crown Prince's special form of nightmare, which is a dream about white mice, will find plenty of entertainment in a new book, "In the Eyrie of the Hohenzollern Eagle."

From October, 1910, until a short time before the outbreak of war, Miss Brimble was governess to the children of the Crown Prince and Princess. Miss Brimble, like other chroniclers, cannot make an engaging personality of the "High Papa," the Crown Prince himself.

His wild lack of consideration for others is illustrated by some of the stories of his romps with his children. "The final act," it is recalled, "usually consisted in the Crown Prince seizing one of the bedroom jugs from the washstand and emptying its contents over Prince Lulu in bed. As soon as he had made his son and the bed thoroughly wet and miserable, out he would go with his dogs, with a guffaw of amusement."

"High Papa's" calls were not welcomed at meal times. "We stood politely while our lunch got colder and colder and the Crown Prince acted the buffoon, seizing a spoonful of potato puree and smearing it all over the boys' heads, or pouring asparagus sauce on their hair, laughing immoderately meanwhile."

"Often he would pour their cups of cocoa over them, or a glass of water down their backs, or rub the whipped cream from a sweet dish all over their faces. Prince Lulu being nearly always the victim on account of his getting so easily irate, though once Prince Wilhelm had to stand with open mouth while his father poured a ladleful of soup into it through a funnel which chanced to be in the room."

NEW ZEALAND SHIPPING.

State-Owned Line of Vessels for Service to Britain.

Following the example of Australia, which has started a Government-owned line of freight steamships, Prime Minister Massey, in the New Zealand House of Representatives, foreshadowed the creation of a New Zealand State line of 20,000-ton steamers of twenty knots, to run between New Zealand and Great Britain. In Britain the interest of the nation in merchant ships will not sanction the sale of any more vessels to owners abroad until the war is over. Nothing definite has been decided as to the future of the fifteen ships bought by Mr. Hughes during his recent stay in London, except that for a time they will be controlled by the Australian Navy Department and will be employed in the transport of wheat and wool to Europe. Under its mail contract with the Orient Company the Commonwealth Government has power to take over any or all of the latter's liners at the market value. Manchester Guardian comments: "There is reason to believe that the intention of New Zealand to create a State line of 20,000-ton steamers is not without significance in this connection, more especially as it has been known for some time that the Union Government of South Africa is willing to co-operate. Both the Belgian and the Italian Governments are adopting schemes of the kind, and a bill is before the United States Congress, and will in all likelihood be passed soon, which provides for the formation of a national board with a view to the construction, purchase and operation of merchant ships on behalf of that Government."

THE FASHIONS

Women of fashion are, to-day, greatly interested in the "two material" dresses. Has not Paris sanctioned them and put forth some of her best efforts in the fashioning of new versions of them for the economical woman with an eye to making over her last winter's dress who looks with approval on this style. To be sure, she may take advantage of it, for this fashion holds great possibilities for her; but, needless to say, it was not originally planned for her.

Combinations of materials are used in dresses of widely different character: quite as often in the one-piece frock for street as in the dress required for more formal wear. Of the first type is the smart dress of cloth and satin illustrated here. There is a suggestion of the military influence have even combined two different colors such as tan and brown, dark green and gray, and mahogany and gray. But the amateur should beware of combining two colors unless they are in perfect harmony, for the result may be vastly different from what the hands of an experienced combiner of colors would produce.

In dresses for formal wear, one sees other combinations. A white Georgette crepe blouse in Russian style was combined with a black satin skirt and the blouse was edged with a wide band of black satin. There was a shoulder cape of white Georgette edged with fur, which trimming also finished the long sleeves. Another dress seen had a blouse of Copenhagen blue chiffon, also in Russian style, worn over a skirt of blue velvet the same shade. Fur edged the blouse.

Another detail of fashion which is making a strong appeal to the well-dressed woman is the use of colored embroidery as a dress trimming. An example is shown on the illustration here of a one-piece dress with cartridge belt. Many of these dresses are seen in dark blue or black serge or satin with gray wool embroidery. In some, the hem of the skirt is further decorated with a wool fringe matching from the lower edge. Other embroidery designs are carried out in Bulgarian colors in wool or silk, or in steel thread and also in gold thread. The two latter are especially effective on dark green, navy blue or black.

Fancy Handbags

A fashionable woman does not consider her costume complete to-day without a dainty fancy handbag, which she angles from a long ribbon or cord. Sometimes it takes the form of the old-fashioned reticule Grandmother used to wear hanging from her belt. In this instance the bag is almost always made from the same material as the dress. But there are numerous other forms and shapes of this important accessory, which, if it does not exactly match the costume should, in any event, harmonize with it. Some very attractive ones are of black velvet with steel beads or of moire with colored beads, and some fluffy little creations are entirely of ruffles of ribbon.

In crocheted bags there is quite an attractive new style worked in various bright colors forming solid rows that go round and round. The bags are round, and longer than they are wide. The top is drawn together on a cord run through rings, and the bottom is finished with a loose tassel. In velvet and silk bags there are a number of odd, irregular shapes as well as oval and round ones.

THEATRE SEATS COSTLY.

British Government Adds War Tax to Prices, Already High.

The high cost of theatres came home a few days ago to the British public. Beginning with reserved seat buyers early, London theatres started to exact the Government's toll in addition to the regular prices.

A West End theatre hoisted a placard bearing this scale: Private boxes, $25, plus $2.16 Government tax. Stall, $2.62, plus twenty-four cents. Dress circle, $1.20, plus six cents.

THE ONION CURE.

It Is Considered Very Valuable as a Food.

The fact that onions are being supplied raw to the troops in France may come as a surprise to many people who despise this vegetable. They do not realize that it is of great value as a food, and that in it are found some of the most valuable and tonic mineral salts in the vegetable kingdom.

Onions are perhaps best known as a cure for insomnia; they also possess such cooling and diuretic properties that they prevent and soothe the pains of rheumatism. For these two reasons alone they will be useful to our men at the front. Moreover, onions are easily digested, stimulate the appetite, and are nourishing. They contain sulphur and other properties which stimulate the activity of the stomach and aid the digestion, and are a preventive of human parasites.

Well cooked, they are an excellent and wholesome food for children, and those who feel a cold hanging about them should eat boiled onions. Unlike most vegetables, they are appetizing when eaten alone, without the aid of meat or gravy.

It is, no doubt, the offensiveness of the breath after eating them which makes most people shy of the nutritive onion. By chewing a coffee-bean, however, or drinking milk immediately after a meal of onions, this pungent aroma can be removed.

VALUE OF PERFUMES.

Have Often Proven to be Useful as Disinfectants.

Persia saw the earliest development of the perfume industry. The depositaries of science, knew the secret of aromatic substances and preserved them. Egyptian perfumes acquired great celebrity, especially those made in Alexandria. The Israelites, during their sojourn in Egypt, adopted the use of aromatic substances. The Jews were fond of cosmetics, and even used to paint the face. All these perfumes were extracted from essences of trees and various plants. The Greeks, who loved elegance, were especially addicted to the use of perfumes, and they taught their secrets and usage to the Romans. The latter, in the days of their decadence, went so far as to scent the coats of their dogs.

In the Middle Ages the Arabs, Venetians, Genoese, and Florentines became famous for the preparation of sweet-smelling essences. France did not become acquainted with perfumes until after the Crusades, and it was Maria de Medici who especially brought them into favor. Makers of perfumes quickly recognized their good or bad medicinal influences. It was remarked both in Paris and London, during the cholera epidemic of the nineteenth century, that no one engaged in making perfumes was ever attacked.

Women on English Farms.

A prominent British statesman remarked recently, that the experience of the last two years has taught him it was never safe to say that a woman could not do anything that a man could do. This statesman was, at the time, rallying a meeting of farmers on their conservatism in the matter of employing women on the land. The latest reports show that even this conservatism is rapidly becoming a thing of the past, in the nine counties from which returns have been received by the Board of Agriculture, more than 7,000 women are employed on the land.

WIVES OF OUR COMMANDERS

NOTABLE WOMEN WHO WORK WHILE THEY WAIT.

Since the Outbreak of Hostilities They Have Done a Great Deal of Useful Work.

Fierce as the light which beats upon a throne is that now focussed upon the military and naval commanders of the Allies. But their wives are so much in the shadow that we seldom see or hear of them, notwithstanding that some of these ladies have done a good deal of useful public work since the outbreak of hostilities, says London Answers.

Madame Joffre leads so retired a life that a French lady who recently delivered a lecture on General Joffre confessed that she did not know the maiden name of that national hero's wife. She is, however, the ruling spirit of the French commander's home at Auteuil, and is always bright and cheerful, despite her husband's long spells of absence.

Madame Joffre.

At the beginning of the war Joffre prohibited wives and sweethearts from visiting men on active service, adding, in his customary terse, vigorous fashion:

"Women have nothing to do with the Army. I fear them as much as I fear intoxicating liquor." They contain sulphur and other properties which stimulate the activity of the stomach and aid the digestion, and are a preventive of human parasites.

Well cooked, they are an excellent and wholesome food for children, and those who feel a cold hanging about them should eat boiled onions. Unlike most vegetables, they are appetizing when eaten alone, without the aid of meat or gravy.

YOUNG FOLKS

Redlegs and Bunny.
Redlegs was a big mallard drake, the boisterous and the bully of the farmyard. He got his name from the deep orange color of his short legs. With two ducks he had a fine time grubbing in the grass behind the barn and swimming in the little pond by the roadside.

Redlegs was very proud of his wings, which were so strong that he could fly almost as well as his wild cousins. He boasted to the hens and picked quarrels with the roosters until no one in the barnyard family liked him. Most of all he enjoyed plugging Bunny, a little buff-colored rabbit that lived in a snug house of his own near the barn—a little house with wire netting over the front and a glass window in the end.

Redlegs had a way of banging his flat bill against the glass window and of hissing through the wire until Bunny crouched in a corner and shivered with fear.

"Ho, ho, Master Bunny!" Redlegs would call through the netting. "It's lucky for you that you made your house so strong! Don't you ever dare to come out here in the yard where I am!"

Bunny would answer not a word, and at last Redlegs would tire of making threats and boasts and would stroll off for a swim in the little pond down by the roadside.

One day, after a warm rain had softened the earth floor of his house, Bunny fell to digging in one corner near the wire netting, for the want of something better to do. Before he knew it, the earth had caved in and there was a hole big enough for him to crawl through.

At first he was frightened at what he had done. He did not dare to venture out for fear the Redlegs would pounce on him before he could scramble back again; but it looked very inviting outside, and Bunny was tired of being a prisoner. Redlegs was nowhere to be seen. Little by little Bunny got up courage enough to push his way through the hole into the grassy yard. He looked all round, but Redlegs was not in sight.

Then the warm sun and the green grass made him forget all his fears. How good it was to stretch his legs! He jumped into the air and skipped back and forth, and chased his own shadow. Then, when he had stopped a moment to nibble some tempting shoots of grass, he jumped higher and farther than before. Faster and faster he went, first this way and then that way, and all of a sudden he fairly flew round the corner of the barn where he had never been before.

My! What was that? Just in front of him were Redlegs and the two ducks! Bunny was so frightened that he thought his heart was going to jump right out through his side. He tried his best to stop, but in spite of all he could do he went sliding on, right among the ducks.

Then what happened? Did Redlegs turn and attack Bunny? No. There were frightened cries from Redlegs and the others, and a great flapping of wings, as all three rose heavily into the air and flew to the safety of the little pond where Bunny could not go. It was some time after Bunny had made his way back to his house before he could figure out what it all meant. But at last he made up his mind that Redlegs was a coward at heart and had really been afraid of him, in spite of all the boasts and threats. After that, Bunny felt no more fear, and life became much happier for him.

As for Redlegs, he felt very sure that only his strong wings had saved him from a bad beating when Bunny came dashing round the corner so madly. He bore himself very meekly, and made no more boasts or threats, for after that day he always had a fear that at any time Bunny might take it into his head to come out and attack him.—Youth's Companion.

WAR PRICES FOR HUNTSMEN.

Rifles, Shotguns and Shells Are All Costing More This Year.

Whether arms and ammunition manufacturers have been so busy supplying the European demands that they have not so much of their output to devote to supplying hunters is immaterial.

The fact remains that those who desire to hunt this season are to pay higher prices for the necessities.

Those who have to buy shotguns will not suffer quite so much, on the average, as those who have to buy rifles, for the jump in prices of the two kinds of guns has not been commensurate. Rifles for which $10 was charged last year are retelling this year at about $15; rifles that sold for $24 last year are selling for about $35 this year.

Shotguns, on the other hand, have only gone up from about $20 to $24—a percentage of 14 to 16 per cent, against a 50 per cent. increase in the price of rifles.

Shells, too, are going to come higher this year, the price for nearly all sorts having advanced about 10 cents per box.

Leggings and hunting suits will retail for the same this year they did last year. There has been a slight increase in the price to the retailer, but this increase will not mean an advance in price to the user. The retailer will simply make a little less on the goods he sells.

A PLAGUE OF LOCUSTS:

Jerusalem Was Visited By Them For Several Days.

In an article in the National Geographic Magazine, Mr. John D. Whiting describes the ravages of the locusts that descended on Jerusalem in 1915 and wrought destruction to gardens, farms and vineyards throughout Palestine. He says:

In Jerusalem they were first seen one day early in March, at noon. The sunshine was suddenly darkened, and then came a veritable shower of their excretions, which fell thick and fast, and resembled those of mice. At times the insects were hundreds of feet in the air; again they came down quite low, and some of them alighted. The clouds of them were so dense as to appear quite black, with the edges lighter, until they faded away into the blue sky.

When they first reached Jerusalem countless numbers poured into the broad-walled road that leads into the city from the west. For three or four days an unending stream filled the road from side to side, like troops marching on parade, and in spite of the traffic at that point, their ranks, although thinned, entered the ancient gateway and the New Breach. The great round "David's Tower" was so filled that the dry earth seemed to be a living mass. Up the city walls and the castle they climbed to the very top.

They were disastrous to the crops in the country, and obnoxious in the houses, for they squeezed through the cracks of doors and windows, and even scaled the walls to the roofs, and then got into the houses by throwing themselves into the open courts. Women frantically swept the walls and roofs of their homes, but to no avail. For several days Jerusalem was thus visited, but the insects evidently sought greener and less populated districts; so, after the first few days, we saw nothing more of them. At Bethlehem heavy showers of rain brought them to the earth, and the poorer people gathered quantities of them. A few ate them roasted; but the main reason for collecting them was to get the small bounty offered by the local government of Bethlehem. Tons of the insects were destroyed; most of them were buried alive, until several ancient abandoned cisterns were filled.

The native vineyards and orchards were stripped bare to the bark of the trees and vines. Of all things fig leaves best suited their taste; and once a tree felt a prey to them, the ground about would be literally layers deep.

DEAF MAN IN WAR.

He Faces Silent Death Rescuing the Wounded.

Some day the stretcher bearers who are working steadily throughout the big advance ought to have a monument all to themselves. They have already earned it by their magnificent courage under terrific fire. One officer of a Manchester "Pals" regiment which fought at Mametz and elsewhere is now in a London hospital, his life saved by the courage of the men who dashed through a curtain of fire to his rescue when he fell helplessly wounded.

He says that all the time the stretcher bearers were doing these things which deserved the Distinguished Conduct Medal, and he told of at least one man who he thinks has won it. This is a man so deaf that he was unfit for work in the trenches. He was a cheerful sort and the men liked the queer things that happened when he failed to hear an order.

Every one but the deaf man stood to attention. He took no notice. "Stand to!" shouted the colonel. The deaf man turned pale eyes on him. "Is it true, sir?" he asked anxiously, "that the Government has stopped the rum ration?" During the big battle he was ordered to the clearing station just behind the lines, but he spent the whole day under the murderous fire of the machine guns and the artillery between the first line trenches and a shorter trench far advanced in the most exposed part of the ground, picking up the wounded, twisting them on to his broad back, and staggering back with them under fire until he reached a place of comparative safety.

Then he went back into the thick of it again. He was the one man in that toiling, devoted company who did not hear the awful clamor of the shells, but calmly faced a silent

When the daintier morsels were gone, the locusts ate the bark of the topmost branches. Then they would gnaw off small limbs, perhaps to get at the pith within. They stripped all the fruit trees and many shade trees of all their foliage.

118 SUICIDES IN WEEK.

Despair of Hunger in Germany is Evident.

News from Munich states that during a recent week, owing to the misery of starvation, 118 suicides, the majority of whom were women, happened in Germany.

One mother, accompanied by three young children, shot herself before the gates of the Royal Palace of Munich and in the presence of the sentries. A placard found pinned to her breast stated: "Your Majesty, feed my children, I cannot."

Parents are abandoning children in the parks in increasing numbers. The police have collected nearly 200 children in Rhine towns.

The Lokalanzeiger is indignant because thirty-two children were abandoned in Berlin one Sunday. Thefts of food are becoming frequent.

RELIEF FROM INDIGESTION

The Most Common Cause of This Trouble is Poor Blood.

All conditions of depressed vitality tend to disturb the process of digestion. There is not a disturbed condition of life that may not affect digestion. But few causes of the trouble are so common as thin, weak blood. It affects directly and at once the process of nutrition. Not only is the action of the gastric and intestinal glands diminished but the muscular action of the stomach is weakened. Nothing will more promptly restore digestive efficiency than good, red blood. Without it the normal activity of the stomach is impossible.

Thin, pale people who complain of indigestion must improve the condition of their blood to find relief. The most active blood builder in such cases is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They make the rich, red blood which quickly restores the digestive organs to their proper activity, and the dyspeptic who has hated the sight and smell of food now looks forward to meal time with pleasure. As proving the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in curing indigestion Miss Edith M. Smith, R. R. No. 4, Perth, Ont., says: "I can honestly say I owe my present good health to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. My stomach was terribly weak and I suffered from indigestion and sick headache, and was always very nervous. I was troubled this way for nearly three years, and in that time took a great deal of doctors' medicine, which, however, did not help me. I could eat anything without experiencing the most agonizing pain. My sick headaches were most violent and I could not rest night or day. I was asked one day by a friend to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and consented to do so. After taking them some time I found they were helping me, and I continued to take them steadily for several months, until I found that I was completely cured. While taking the pills I gained both in strength and weight, and I feel it impossible to praise Dr. Williams' Pink Pills too highly."

You can procure these pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail, post paid, at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

BATTALION HAS FAMOUS CHEF.

Allan Line Chief Cook to Feed Soldiers on Delicacies.

The 245th Battalion, which has just started recruiting in Montreal, does so under the most favorable auspices conceivable, for through the agency of Capt. Andrew Allan, one of its officers, there has been engaged as chef the famous superintendent of the Allan Line, cooks, M. de Gorgo, who will devise the menu for the soldiers.

"We are going to see that the men of the 245th get every possible benefit in the way of feeding that knowledge and skill can supply," said Capt. Allan. "As a rule the men do not get much variety in their diet, with a round of food that comes with monotonous regularity and is often not near the standard that the men who have enlisted were previously used to."

"In order to overcome this we have decided to try a new experiment with the 245th Battalion, and to that end I have enlisted the services of M. de Gorgo, who is known as one of the most famous chefs in the world."

M. de Gorgo was delighted at the opportunity of turning his culinary skill to the aid of Canada's soldiers, and at once volunteered his services.

M. de Gorgo has held many important gastronomic posts in Europe. He was for some time in an important position with the King's household, and was decorated by King George. He conducted a restaurant in London for some time and was chef of the Reform Club before he was brought here by the Allan Line to take charge of their catering from this end.

"BILL SADLER'S LEG BOX."

How Donald A. Smith Satisfied the Fisherman.

How to get a man into a bunk that was a foot too short for him, and how to keep him from being discontented with his bed, was the Procrustean problem solved by Lord Strathcona when, as Donald A. Smith, he was a chief factor of the Hudson's Bay Company. A solution at which he arrived is described by Mr. Beckles Wilson in his "Life of Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal."

The company had a number of boarded huts for the fishermen in their employ, of such narrow dimensions as to afford sleeping accommodations only for persons of normal length. On one occasion a very honest and active man presented himself to Chief Factor Smith for a bunk in one of these huts. The difficulty was that he was six feet six inches in length—nearly a foot longer than the bunk. On an inspection of his quarters he suggested Mr. Smith's offer summarily, declaring that he was not going to be cramped for any agent or planter living, and neither was he content to be saved in two.

"Will a bed seven feet long suit you?" asked the chief factor.

The fisherman said it would. Thereupon Mr. Smith sent for the company's carpenter; a hole was cut in the wall of the building, to which a box lined with deer skin was applied outside and rendered stable by props. The man afterwards told Mr. Smith it was the first thoroughly comfortable bed he had occupied in years. The receiptable was afterwards exhibited at the store at Rigolet and enjoyed much local fame as "Bill Sadler's leg box."

BITS ABOUT ANTWERP.

A Bell Which Is Rang Only When the Nuns Want Food.

Antwerp, the city of churches and chimneys, is crowned with history, and its name will figure prominently when the page of the future comes to be written. The romantic Belgian city, that ever resounds with the sound of church bells, will doubtless have heard lately the sinister chime of a bell that has not been rung within the history of living man. The bell hangs in a convent supported by nuns of a curious order. These nuns have all been great ladies who have renounced the world and all its ways, and consecrated their wealth to the church. Having taken the vow of poverty they walk through life barefooted, and hold no communication whatever with the busy populace outside their walls. For their daily bread they depend solely on the charity of the townspeople, who religiously leave food on their doorway every day. The bell hanging in their convent is never tolled, it being kept as a last desperate resort to inform the city that the nuns can live no longer unless they have food.

One half the population of a village knows all about how the other half lives.

A GREAT CONVENIENCE.

What the Canadian Pacific Railway Is Doing For Its Employees.

For the convenience of the employees, of whom there are nearly 2,000 in the Windsor Station buildings, Montreal, the Canadian Pacific Railway has recently set up a cafeteria luncheon at 15 cents in a large apartment which will accommodate 251 persons at a sitting. Judging by the attendances, it is bound to be one of the most popular features of the company has put its hand to. There are hundreds of girls, especially, who have not time to go home, or who, if they do go home, are greatly pressed for time. With this service at their disposal they will save car fare; they will get a thoroughly satisfying luncheon; and they can have the comfort of the lounge room in connection with it. The arrangement is four to a table; all the appointments are harmonious; there is an air of quiet dignity about the place. Mr. W. A. Cooper, manager of the sleeping and dining car department, said that this was in accordance with the well-known policy of the Canadian Pacific for taking care of its employees. The people in the offices constituted quite a little city in themselves. Many could not go home with convenience. This luncheon room would meet the wants of many. Of course, there would still be 30-cent luncheon upstairs, and the regular dining room in which you could have what you wanted and pay for the same as much as you liked; but this was strictly for the employees, male and female, who would prefer to have their luncheon inside the building to going to restaurants—those of them who were in the habit of going to restaurants.

Dr. X hired O'Brien to clean off the walk from his house to the front gate. At the close of the day, when he examined Pat's work, he was dissatisfied with it.

"O'Brien," he said, "the whole walk is covered with gravel and dirt. In my estimation, it's a bad job."

Pat looked at him in surprise for a moment and replied: "Shure, doctor, there's many a bad job of yours covered with gravel and dirt."

GLOBES IN NATURE

Why Raindrops and the Planets and Suns Are Round.

THE FORCES OF ATTRACTION.

As a Crowd Gathers in a Circle Around an Object of Interest, So Molecular and Gravitational Impulses in Matter Act Toward a Center.

Falling rain forms into spherical drops for the same reason that the earth has become a globe—namely, because that is the shape in which the internal forces of attraction attain a balance. In the case of a very large and massive body like the earth it is the attraction of gravitation that controls the form, but in that of a small body like a raindrop it is the molecular attraction of the infinitesimal particles.

The intensity of molecular attraction, which is the force that holds the components of bodies together, is far greater than that of the attraction of gravitation, but it is exercised over a comparatively insignificant distance. In each case, however, the resultant of all the attractions between the individual particles is a force directed toward the center of mass.

But by the principle of inertia time is always required for any force or combination of forces to set matter in motion. The larger the volume of matter concerned the longer will be the time needed for the internal forces to group all the particles symmetrically around their common center of mass.

It is upon this principle that the old fashioned shot towers are operated. Molten lead is dropped from a great elevation after passing through a sieve to facilitate its separation into small masses, and during their downward flight these masses are rounded into little spheres by the mutual attraction of their molecules, which group themselves around a common center.

With very large bodies not broken up into small portions the gravitational force plays the principal part in shaping them, because gravitation is effective at great distances and throughout vast masses, while cohesion, or molecular attraction, is extremely limited with regard to the space over which it acts.

Each molecule attracts a little group of other molecules close around it, and these in turn attract their immediate neighbors. Within the space occupied by a raindrop the molecular attraction is the master force and quickly shapes the mass into a sphere.

And just as a spoonful of water thrown from a high tower will descend in the form of one or more round drops owing to the resultant pull of all its molecules toward a common center so the entire ocean if it were flung out the entire space would become a gigantic ball of water rounded into that shape by the gravitational attraction acting throughout its whole mass.

It is by no accident that all the planets are spherical. They have taken that shape as inevitably as a loose stone rolls down a steep hill. Their forms are not perfect spheres, because they have been subjected to outside disturbing forces, such as the centrifugal effects of their rotation on their axes and the deformations produced by the attraction of other planets and of the sun. Even the heads of comets are spheroidal, although they are believed to consist of swarms of small bodies like meteors.

The tendency of masses, whose component parts or particles are free to move and choose their positions as freely in up and down as in horizontal space. Being confined to one level, they arrange themselves in a circle, which is the section of a sphere.—Garrett P. Serviss in New York Journal.

A human crowd certainly would take a spherical form if its members were able to choose their positions as freely in up and down as in horizontal space. Being confined to one level, they arrange themselves in a circle, which is the section of a sphere.—Garrett P. Serviss in New York Journal.

Political Chances.
"I see when a man runs for office he has to put himself in the hands of his friends."

"Yes, my dear." "If a woman ran would she have to put herself in the hands of her woman friends?" "I suppose so."

"Well, I do not imagine many women will run. Think of taking such chances!"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Pleasure.
"I put through a big financial deal last week," remarked Mr. Dustin Stax. "I thought you said you were going on a pleasure trip." "Could there be any pleasure greater than putting through a big financial deal?"—Washington Star.

"Waiter, the steak is so tough I can't cut it with this knife." "Very good, sir—I'll bring you another knife, sir."—Columbia Jester.

VALUE OF GOLD.

While That is Fixed, Its Price is Regulated by Premiums.

Gold is not considered a commodity in the ordinary sense of the term, but is the basis on which the values of commodities are determined. Its value does not fluctuate, but is universally fixed at $20.67 2/3 ounce or its equivalent. Its price, however, fluctuates, as in the case of premiums. Its value is stationary; hence the term premium. The difference between the fluctuation of that and the purchasing power of gold may be simply illustrated as follows:

That while its value remains stationary a premium would serve to reduce its purchasing power, to be added to its cost, but an advance in the price of commodities would operate to reduce the purchasing power of gold, taking $1 as a unit.

For instance, a dollar will purchase an article whose price coincides, but if an advance in the commodity raises the price of that particular article to $1.10 the purchasing power of gold would necessarily be reduced proportionately. Or, again, in times of adversity, commodities are cheap, the supply invariably exceeding the demand, the purchasing power of gold would then be greater than in times of prosperity, when the supply does not meet the demand and higher prices for commodities result.

There is no difference in the cost of a pennyweight of gold today from what it was ten years or more ago.—Pittsburgh Press.

Force of Habit.

The late H. Gassaway Davis, once a United States senator and candidate for vice president on the Parker ticket, was a brackham before he became a millionaire and is said on one historic occasion while steering soundly in the senate chamber to have dreamed that he was still guiding an unarily freight train through the mountains of West Virginia. The dream was inspired by a nearby colleague, Senator Allen G. Thurman, who blew two mighty blasts on his nose. Davis, thinking he had heard the freight whistle, seized his desk as if it were a brake and nearly twisted the thing from its moorings before he came to—New York Mail.

Its Easy to Wish.

Two of Twoblie's acquaintances met on a street corner and one remarked that the daily papers again referred to Twoblie as a possible appointee to a state petty office. "He is always being mentioned for some kind of office," he continued. "I wonder why he never gets appointed to one?" "I suspect," said the other, "that's because Twoblie's friends are the sort of people who wish you well without stopping to see whether their wishes are carried out or not."—Argonaut.

A Changed Conception.

"What's your opinion of Bommaser?" "Well, when I first met him he impressed me as being a leader of men, a 10,000 volt human dynamo, a clarion voiced czar who would brook no opposition, but when I met him the second time, in his office, I sized him up for a pusillanimous mouse." "Where did you meet him the first time?" "On the telephone."—New York Times.

A Lightening Change Artist.

The rapidity with which chameleons change their color is marvelous. You gather one from an outdoor shrub and it immediately becomes dark, almost black, hissing and with its mouth wide open, threatening to bite. Meanwhile it is never still, but continues to crawl upward whenever possible—up you, up your sleeve, always upward. By degrees the angry black changes into whatever color is nearest. If one's dress is of a brownish color so is the chameleon's.

Delayed.

"Henry," said his wife reproachfully, "do you know that it was 3 o'clock when you came home this morning?" "You are mistaken, my dear," he replied. "It was just 1.30. I looked at the clock on the church tower as I passed the corner." "Far be it from me to doubt your word, Henry," answered his wife, "but if that is the case it must have taken you an hour and a half to open the front door."—Exchange.

The Subject He Liked Best.

"You talk well on the subject in which you are most interested," said the impertinent girl. "And what is that?" said the man, smelling a compliment. "Yourself," said the impertinent girl demurely.

An exchange says: It is mighty mean to patronize a merchant who will trust you until you get so far in debt to him that you are ashamed to see him, and then go and spend your cash somewhere else, and where you could not get credit. The honorable way would be to spend your cash with the merchant who trusted you.

The motor car demonstrates distances and opens up to the public many districts that formerly were so far out of the lines of travel as to be almost unknown. Furthermore, there has been a notable improvement in the accommodation provided for tourists and travelers who have occasion to pause for meals or stop for the night in small towns or at wayside inns. Altogether, conditions are such that touring, except in rare instances, is comfortable as well as interesting. It is not surprising, then, that the touring bureau of the Ontario Motor League reports that the touring this season is by far the heaviest on record.

Make your rural home beautiful. Lay out spacious grounds around the farm house, plant shade trees, lay gravel roads and plant flowers. Don't lay up all your net earnings for the benefit of your heirs and lawyers, but spend some of it beautifying your home. The farmer who always shuts his eyes to the aesthetic features of his life and screws himself down to the task of making money, loses a large portion, and the biggest portion too, of his existence. His home should be an attraction to himself, to his wife and above all to his children. Unpleasant homes in too many instances drive the sons of farmers to the towns, to excitement and dissipation, and to wreck. Such sons do not generally leave pleasant and beautiful homes.

The Late Mrs. Tucker.

Tuesday morning, September 29th, marks the date of the passing of one of the most respected citizens of Newbury, in the person of Maria Beaumont, the wife of Charles Tucker.

The deceased was born at Melbourne, Ontario, where her parents were pioneers of that community, being among the very first white settlers. Coming to Newbury as a bride about fifty years ago, she resided here continuously ever since, and during that time, by her pleasant smile, her generous hospitality and warm sympathy to all in distress, she won the hearts of all and endeared herself to the whole community.

Being a devout Christian, she always took a very active part in the affairs of the Anglican Church, of which she was a staunch member and ever a leader in any work in connection with it. Mrs. Tucker also took a very active part in all the social and charitable affairs of the village. So loyal was she that she was ever ready to give a helping hand to anything to further the interests of her beloved Newbury.

Of all the virtues of the deceased the most outstanding was her unselfishness. If there was a possibility of promoting the happiness or increasing the comforts of anyone, Mrs. Tucker made every effort to accomplish that end regardless of the sacrifice to herself.

To her family she has been a most devoted wife and mother. She leaves to mourn her loss her husband, Charles Tucker, for many years clerk of the village, and one daughter, Annie, who it is needless to say have the heartfelt sympathy of the entire community.

Douglas-Walker.

A quiet but very pretty autumn wedding was solemnized at the home of Wilfrid Walker of Walkers on Tuesday, Sept. 26, when his eldest sister, Margaret M., was united in marriage to Andrew Douglas of Moss. The ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. Dr. J. Frazer Smith of Burns' church in the presence of the immediate relatives of the bride and groom, took place under a beautiful arch of maple leaves decorated with flags. Promptly at 3 o'clock, to the strains of Lohengrin's Bridal Chorus, played by Miss Helen Douglas, sister of the groom, the bride entered the drawing room, leaning on the arm of her brother, and was prettily dressed in ivory satin, de chene with crystal and pearl trimmings, wearing the customary bridal veil caught up with orange blossoms, and carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses and maidenhair fern. After congratulations the guests all retired to the dining-room where a sumptuous wedding dinner was served, the tables being decorated with pink and white asters. The young couple then motored to Glencoe, taking the Eastern Flyer for Toronto, Hamilton and Burk's Falls. The bride traveled in a smart suit of Belgian blue gaberdine and black velvet hat with pink wings. The many and valuable presents received testified to the high esteem in which the young couple are held.

Convocation of the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

To the Members and Adherents of the Presbyterian Church in Canada:

The existence of our Church is threatened. At the recent Assembly held in Winnipeg, it was decided by a majority vote to proceed with the Union between the Methodist and Congregational and Presbyterian Churches of the Dominion. In face of a growing opposition—and in despite of widespread doubts as to the wisdom of the step—the final vote was taken and the Church committed to the proposal. There is a strong and ever widening desire on the part of a large number of the members of the Church to maintain, in the meantime, the continuity and identity of the Church of our fathers. This call is to a Convocation which shall organize the opinion and the intention of the Church for this end.

It is proposed to meet in the city of Toronto for at least three days, beginning on the 17th of October next. Representatives from all parts of the Church are to be present. Questions will be discussed relating to the present crisis, as well as questions touching the worth and the perpetuity of Presbyterian Doctrine and Order, while it is expected that a permanent organization may be created for the purpose of protecting the interests of the Church all over the Dominion. Before very long a detailed programme of the Convocation will be forwarded to you and in the meantime we shall be glad if you will plan to be present yourself, encourage others to attend, and forward to the Central Office the names of those in your neighborhood who stand with us in this great concern.

Arrangements have been made for the usual Convention rates on all railway and steamship lines. Entertainment will also be provided for all delegates for the time they may be in Toronto on the business of the Convocation. If you desire to be our guest will you write at once to the Secretary, at the above address, so that arrangements may be completed?

It is not possible to over estimate the gravity of the situation. The high court of the Church has precipitated a crisis such as Presbyterianism nowhere has ever had to face before. We are encountering new experiences, inasmuch as it is our brethren who are seeking to wrest our beloved Church from us. All that we ask for—all that we have asked for—is that, in accordance with the oft-repeated assertions even of those who stand opposed to us in this hour, the Church should not go forward to this Union unless and until it is accepted with "practical unanimity." We need guidance for the coming days. Will you not join us, not only in the Convocation, but now and every day, in asking that the Great King and Head of the Church may, even yet, intervene to save us from the breach with our brethren which the unwarranted action of the General Assembly has so unexpectedly thrust upon us?

JOHN PENMAN,
Pres. of General Committee.

Chairman of Central Executive, Toronto. (adv.)

Miss Riggs was fortunate to find some fifteen dollars which she had mislaid a few weeks ago and was thought to have been lost or stolen. It was carefully laid away in a drawer.

On the fair grounds, a lady (evidently not of Scottish extraction) was heard to remark, "Why don't they get a band for a change and have some music?"

J. W. McAlpine, who has been in charge of a mission station at Rite, Alberta, for the summer, was home last week and left on Monday to resume his studies at Victoria College, Toronto.

Walter Haultstone received word on Monday from his brother Harry in France, stating that he had been wounded in the hand in battle and expected to be invalided home in about six weeks.

Maurice Gosson, junk dealer, now of London, was taken to Victoria Hospital last week with a fractured skull, the result of a strenuous argument with Harris B. Dym, whom he accused of stealing some wire.

Hickory nuts, chestnuts and walnuts will not be as large a crop this season as last year. The long dry spell dropped their growth and many fell off the trees, which will account for only about half a crop.

Owing to changes at Canadian headquarters in England, it is said that Col. A. D. McRae, son of Mrs. Mary McRae of Glencoe, has been appointed as quartermaster-general by Col. Neill, will become deputy minister of militia.

Word has been received that Pte. Handy Devlin, a former member of the 101st Battalion, has been wounded as reported in Friday's list. He is a son of Geo. W. Devlin, formerly of Appin, and a grandson of Mrs. John Devlin, Appin.

The death occurred at the residence of his son, John Webster, Clay street, Dunwich, on Sunday night of one of the oldest residents of that township, in the person of William Webster, aged 92 years. Mr. Webster resided for many years at Cram.

David A. McCull, Longwoods Road, Ekfrid, had a remarkably good yield of grain this season notwithstanding the unfavorable weather conditions throughout the summer. He had nearly one thousand bushels of wheat in all, including 675 bushels of wheat off 20 acres.

Anniversary services will be held in Knox Church, Newbury, on Sunday, October 8th, morning and evening. Rev. Kenneth Macdonald, R.D. of Galt, will be the preacher for the day. Special music will be furnished by the choir, assisted by Mrs. Webster of Melvin, Sask.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hurley of Denver, Colorado, have returned home after a two weeks' visit amongst friends and relatives hereabouts and with Mr. Hurley's mother and brother at West Lorne. Mr. Hurley conducted a barber shop in Glencoe for a few years. He has been located in Denver for the last twenty years.

Last week's rains came just in time to save the fall wheat which was coming along very poorly. The crops were not coming at all, and fears were entertained by the farmers that the season was so dry that the wheat would be a complete failure on the clay lands. A scarcity of water for cattle was also much felt and pastures were drying up.

Mrs. Mary Jane Chittick, widow of the late Christopher Chittick, passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. S. McElliott, Brooke, on Wednesday morning, Sept. 27th, at the advanced age of 81 years and three months. Her husband predeceased her in April, 1914. Mr. and Mrs. Chittick formerly resided in Glencoe. Mrs. Neve, Glencoe; Mrs. James Lethbridge, South Ekfrid, and Mrs. Geo. C. McFarlane, Toronto, are daughters.

The Public Library Board has decided to move the library into W. A. Currie & Co.'s grocery store and appoint Roy Roberts librarian at a salary of $75 a year, the present librarian, Mr. Barker, having resigned. A property tax was levied on the building, which is equal to $75. And now there is a new bone of contention in the life of our village.

Horses of the Glencoe district are capturing the bulk of the prizes in the show ring at the local fairs again this year. Last week at Wallacestown D. J. Mitchell was awarded 1st and Roy Gough 2nd for single carriage; Munroe & Gilbert 1st for carriage team and 1st in three-year-old carriage class; James Poole 1st, Jamieson Bros. 2nd and Archie McMurphy 3rd in roadster class; Roy Gough 1st in combination saddle and carriage class and 1st for lady's driving outfit; D. J. Mitchell 1st, Munroe & Gilbert 2nd and Roy Gough 3rd in high stepping class.

In these days when the country is flooded with inexpensive books, magazines, newspapers, religious tracts and thousands of fadist leaflets, not to speak of the tons of government reports (mostly avenues for graft) flooding the mails from Ottawa and Toronto, some people are beginning to think that there is about as much need for the village public library as for a fly wheel on a wagon. Truly, "of making many books there is no end."

The St. Thomas Times says:—Alexander (Cappy) Martin, Moore street, is taking in the Glencoe Fair and renewing old acquaintances. Mr. Martin was one of the early pioneers in that vicinity, and was a prominent agriculturist before retiring a number of years ago. Mr. Martin has reached the ripe old age of 75 years, and is hale and hearty and reads the newspapers without glasses as easily as he did at thirty. Mr. Martin is well posted on the current topics of the day. His son, William Martin, tobacconist, accompanied him to the fair.

How TO CLEANSE THE SYSTEM.—Parnelle's Vegetable Pills are the result of scientific study of the effects of extracts of certain roots and herbs upon the digestive organs. Their use has demonstrated in many instances that they regulate the action of the liver and the kidneys, purify the blood and carry off morbid accumulation from the system. They are easy to take, and their action is mild and beneficial.

Are The Four Fruits Used in Making "Fruit-a-tives"

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" is the only medicine in the world that is made from the juices of fresh ripe fruits. Thus, it is manifestly unfair to say, "I won't take Fruit-a-tives because I have tried other remedies and they did me no good!" On the other hand, the fact that "Fruit-a-tives" is entirely different from any other preparation in the world, is just why you should give it a fair trial, in any trouble of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys or Skin. "Fruit-a-tives" is composed of the active principle of fruit and the greatest nerve tonic ever discovered. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. Debate thy cause with thy neighbor himself, but when herself is present open not thy lips.
A husband was recently very sad because his wife had gone on a visit which she would not shorten in spite of his appeals to come home. He finally hit upon a plan to induce her to come home. He sent her a copy of each of the local papers with one of the items clipped out, and when she wrote to find that what it was he had clipped from the papers he refused to tell her. The scheme worked admirably. In less than a week she was home to find out that it was that had been going on that her husband did not want her to know about.

Diamonds glistened round her perfect throat, upon her head rested a magnificent tiara of the same stones, her hands flashed as if touched with living fire. She might have stood as a figure of Undine—as beautiful and as soulless.

All round her the little band of courtiers thronged, ever-changing, and passing on to the ball-room as others eagerly took their place. Half-past twelve struck, and she grew more impatient; the blue eyes sparkled frostily, the red lips became more tightly set.

"Lady Merivale looks tired," Mortimer Shelton said to his partner as they passed her. "You can see that by the sweetness of the smile with which she has just favored Hadley. She wishes him anywhere—I know. Funny thing about you ladies! the madder you are with one poor dev—fellow, the sweeter and deadlier you are to the rest of us."

His partner laughed; she was a bright little brunette, flushed with the dance, and thoroughly happy.

"Why should we wear our hearts upon our sleeves for cynics such as you to peck at?" she replied. "The art of dissembling is one of our few privileges. But do you think the Countess is angry? She is so beautiful."

"Marvellous!" exclaimed the cynic, raising his eyebrows. "Dear Lady Chetwold, is it possible that I hear one beautiful woman praise another's looks?"

The little lady flushed.

"It would be a greater marvel still if you men gave us credit for just a little generosity. But tell me, Mr. Shelton, where is Adrien Leroy?"

"My dear lady," said Shelton, with a wicked twinkle in his eyes, "if I knew that Lady Merivale would be down on me like the proverbial load of bricks. He was to have been here; but his movements are as uncertain as her ladyship's smiles. See, she has fairly extinguished poor Hadley—drowned in sweetness!"

"You are a horror," laughed his companion as the waltz came to an end. "I shall be quite afraid of you in the future—I'd no idea you were so cynical."

"I could never be cynical with you," he said gallantly. "By the way, have you seen Prince Prowsky to-night?"

"Yes," said Lady Chetwold, "I am engaged to him for the next dance—if he remembers it. He is always so forgetful."

"Put not your trust in princes," quoted Shelton. "But if his Highness should be so ungrateful, perhaps you will allow me the pleasure—"

"Certainly not," she retorted brightly; "Caesar or nothing!"

"And here he comes," laughed Mortimer, adding softly, as the Prince came up to claim his partner, "and here is someone even more interesting—look."

Lady Chetwold followed the direction of his gaze and saw Adrien Leroy advancing up the rose-decked room. As usual, his appearance created something of a stir, for he was popular with men and women alike, and no smart gathering seemed quite complete without him. But the young man appeared totally unconscious of the interest he was evoking as he bent over his hostess's hand with a murmured greeting. Then turned to make his bow to the Prince, who, as firm an admirer as the rest of Society, had paused to exchange a word before the dance commenced.

Adrien sank on to the velvet lounge beside the Countess.

"Don't scold me, belle amie," he said in his soft tones; "lay the blame on Mr. Paxhorn. I dined with him at the club. You know what Paxhorn is—there was simply no getting away. But now, have you saved me a dance?"

"You do not deserve one," she said, all the irritation melting beneath the magic of his smile and the music of his voice.

"It's a mercy," he retorted lightly, "that one does not get all one's desserts in this world!"

"I saved you the next," she said, giving him the programme. "You see, I am as foolishly forgiving as ever!"

"You are gracious and sweet!" he murmured in her ear. "How could you ever be otherwise?"

The soft phrase passed unheeded. "You have been down to Barnister again?" she inquired.

"Yes," he replied, as he settled himself more comfortably. "You have been very attentive to your father lately," she said a little suspiciously; "I thought filial affection was not the Leroy's strong point."

"Nor is it," he said with a laugh; "but it is business, my dear Eveline, odious business, into which Jasper inveigles me."

"I thought Mr. Vermont was the new machine that was to save you trouble?"

"Yes, that's what I thought," was the languid reply. "But one has to turn the handle, even of machines. There are signatures, and leases, and Heaven knows what else besides."

"How is Lord Barnister?" she inquired.

"Splendid."

"Lady Constance also well?"—with the slightest tinge of restraint in her voice.

"Yes," he answered indifferently; adding, "but you haven't asked after King Cole."

"Ah, no, but you would have told me at first if anything had been wrong with him."

Leroy smiled. He knew that to be true.

"He will win, you think?" she asked anxiously.

"Oh, yes!" was the careless reply. "Vermont says there is nothing to touch him."

The Countess raised her eyebrows. "You trust this Vermont with a great deal, Adrien. Your horses, your wine, and your legal business. He must be a wonderful man."

"Yes," he answered confidently. "Jasper's a treasure. Nothing comes amiss to him. I should be in my grave if I had to face half the worries he wrestles with daily. Come," he added, as the first bars of the new waltz floated from the gallery; "and with a sigh of enjoyment she rose for the promised dance."

"No one's step suits me like yours," she breathed, when they paused for rest. "Adrien, shall I back King Cole for another two hundred?"

The two sentences were, perhaps, rather incoherent, but curiously characteristic of her ladyship; for in addition to a partiality for betting on the turf and speculation on "change"—both, of course, sub rosa.

"Oh, yes," he said, as they started again. Jasper has put two thousand more of mine on today. There he is, he broke off, as the sleek, carefully dressed figure of Mr. Vermont entered the ball-room.

"Talk of angels," murmured Lady Merivale, but with a glance implying that she meant a being very far removed from that celestial grade.

Jasper Vermont did not excel at dancing; yet, strange to say, he was invariably invited to every function of the season. Indeed, the hostesses of Mayfair would almost as soon have omitted the name of Adrien Leroy himself as that of his friend.

It was difficult to explain this other than on account of his engaging amiability. Probably Vermont would have transformed the famous advice of Urich Heep to "Always be obliging." Certainly, no pleasanter company could be found, whether for man or woman; whatever the hour, however mixed the company, Jasper Vermont had always a smile, a jest, or a new and piquant scandal. In the smoking-room he would rival Mortimer Shelton in apparently good-natured cynicism. In a duchess's boudoir he would entertain the afternoon tea hour with the neatest of epigrams and the spiciest glander of her Grace's dearest friend. Nothing came amiss to him; as Adrien Leroy had once said, he was "a walking encyclopaedia."

Yet with all Mr. Vermont's charm of manner, he could resent, smiling still, an impertinence or a snub, and deal back a tongue thrust that would effectually put his opponent hors de combat. Truly of him might be said, "I smile, and murder while I smile."

To-night he was apparently enjoying the gay scene before him. His sharp black eyes were like little snakes, darting here, there, and everywhere, while he wagged his smooth head to the time of the music, as if in keen enjoyment.

Mortimer Shelton noticed him; "floating over his former victims," he commented, almost audibly, as he and his partner passed close to where he was standing. Vermont, however, apparently did not hear him, but continued to smile amiably as the dancers whirled by.

It was nearly daybreak when the carriages drew outside the great house to take the guests to their respective homes; and, having successfully steered a young Marchioness into her electric brougham, Leroy found himself standing close to Vermont, not far from where his own motor awaited him.

"They call this pleasure, Jasper," he said, almost scornfully, watching the struggling, aristocratic crowd with a half-contemptuous smile on his lips. "Why, it's hard work. They fight and push for the sake of a few hours spent in a crowded, poisoned room; and there's no prophet to rise up and proclaim it madness."

"No," laughed Vermont cynically; "prophecy nowadays have no liking for being stoned; and, after all, life would be unendurable were it not for its pleasures. Let me remind you that it is nearly four o'clock, and you are due at Lord Standon's rooms."

With a sigh Leroy turned and jumped into the motor, followed by his faithful squire; and the powerful car footed its way through the twilight of the dawn.

Here, amidst light and laughter, the goddess of pleasure was being fed by her youthful worshippers, and none appeared a more eager votary than Adrien Leroy. Yet, as he stood, champagne glass in hand, preoccupied the toast of the evening or rather morning, for the dawn was breaking in the sky—there was none to tell him of the impending cloud of treachery that hung over his head. None who dare warn him to beware of the friendship of Mr. Jasper Vermont.

Infectious Sore Mouth in Young Pigs

An outbreak of sore mouth in young pigs is sometimes noticed without appreciable cause. It is sometimes called infectious stomatitis, as the stomach is often involved. It is due to a specific germ.

Causes.—This disease is seen almost exclusively in pigs under two months old. The principal predisposing factor in the development of this disease is filth. Dirty quarters, filthy feed troughs, mud-holes, accumulation of manure in the lots, poorly ventilated pens or sleeping quarters, allowing hogs to borrow in manure heaps or stables, and feeding decomposing food and filthy slops, are the conditions that predispose and render hogs readily susceptible to infection. Some claim that the virus of the disease (a germ known as necrosis bacillus) is found in the intestines of all hogs, but in animals well cared for and in good health it cannot multiply sufficiently to cause trouble. The disease may rapidly spread through a whole litter by the teats of the sow becoming infected and distributing the germs among all nursing her. The germ does not seem able to get a hold on a normal, healthy membrane. It is necessary for some abrasion to be present in order that the germs may be able to get the necessary start. Abrasions may be caused by eruption of the teeth, by injury from sharp-pointed objects, or by inflammation of the mucous membrane of the mouth.

Symptoms.—At first the symptoms are much the same as those of an ordinary sore mouth, but are much more severe. The patient refuses to nurse or eat. It is dull and listless and there is an increase in temperature. If the mouth be carefully examined at this time it will show a number of inflamed patches, especially on the lips and gums. In the early stages of the disease the spots are of a deep red color, quite dark, and the gums are seen to be considerably swollen. In severe cases the swelling of the snout and lips may be sufficient to close up the nostrils and cause the patient to breathe through the mouth. At a later stage the spots become ulcers, the margins of which are much inflamed and thickened, while the centres are a yellowish white. Later the centre becomes depressed and presents an ulcer which is very slow to heal. The gums may slough sufficiently to involve some of the teeth, and the ulcer in the lips or snout may be very deep. Pain is well marked, and the least movement of the jaws causes intense suffering. The patient is unable to eat, hence rapidly loses flesh and strength. The sloughing ulcers cause a disagreeable odor. The course of the disease is usually rapid, lasting from 3 to 10 days, and a considerable percentage of the affected die.

Treatment.—In the prevention of the disease there are two important lines to be followed. First, the prevention of the appearance of the disease in the herd, and second, the prevention of its spread should it appear. As a precaution against its appearance the quarters in which the pigs are kept should be cleaned out regularly, and should be sprayed with a disinfectant, as a five per cent. solution of carbolic acid or one of the coal tar disinfectants, at intervals of at most three weeks. When the disease appears in a herd the affected ones should be at once moved from the others, or a better plan is to remove the healthy ones to quarters known to be non-infected. It is also well to remove the mother from the rest of the herd, as pigs of other litters may suckle the infected teats and develop the disease.

Curative treatment must be well attended to in order to get results. The mouth should be irrigated with some strong, non-irritant disinfectant, as a solution made of 1 oz. of potassium permanganate to a gallon of water, or a solution of boracic acid 1 oz. to a quart of water. The ulcers should be touched with the point of a pencil of the nitrate of silver, or with a mixture of equal parts of butter of antimony and tincture of myrrh carefully applied with a feather. This treatment should be repeated twice or three times daily for several days. Where large numbers are affected and it is not convenient to apply this treatment, a simpler treatment can be given by making a bucket full of one of the above solutions, or a 4-per-cent. solution of one of the coal tar disinfectants, and dipping each pig head foremost into it. In this manner the ulcerated surfaces are brought in direct contact with the disinfectant. Some claim to get good results by putting a teaspoonful of the flowers of sulphur into each pig's mouth twice daily.

On account of the severe nature of the disease and the fact that most of the pigs that recover from an acute attack do not thrive, but become stunted, it is well to carefully consider whether it would not be wise to destroy the badly affected cases. Cases that recover should be given tonics, as a teaspoonful of equal parts of gentian, ginger, nut vomica and bicarbonate of soda to 8 or 10 pigs twice daily, and carefully fed and cared for for a few weeks.—Whip, in Farmers' Advocate.

Ground Fence Wires.

The loss of live stock from lightning may be greatly reduced if not entirely prevented by properly grounded fence wires," says Professor H. H. Hoy, of the engineering department of the South Dakota State College. According to Mr. Hoy, fence wires on wooden posts should be grounded by running ground wires at intervals of two to four hundred feet along the fence, being securely attached to the fence wire at several points if woven wire is used, and to all the wires when the ordinary barbed wire or smooth wire is used. The lower end of the grounded wire should be carried at least two feet below the surface beside the post, if possible, into moist earth. The wire should be galvanized to prevent corrosion and should be of larger diameter than the fence wire. A number 8 wire would be still better. Just why lightning seems to have a tendency to strike live stock is ex-

STORMING SCHWABEN REDOUBT DESCRIBED BY AN EYE-WITNESS

Last Defence South of the Ancre Was Strongest German Industry and Ingenuity Could Build.

A despatch from the British Armies in the Field in France says: "You have just time to get into a tree top and see us go after the Schwaben redoubt," said a staff general to the correspondent of the Associated Press on Friday.

Attacks have been so numerous along the British front in the last few days that even if informed of all beforehand, the correspondents would have to possess a dual personality to be present at all. The offensive is in one of its bit-by-bit stages, but is being pressed with sustained and tireless fury under the auspices of the halecyon Autumn weather, for the past week surpassed any other week since it began.

First Attacked on July 1.

Schwaben redoubt is beyond Thiepval, which was taken Tuesday. A crucifix once crowned this ridge. Where it stood became the centre of the strongest defence German industry and ingenuity could build. This was the goal of the Ulstermen in their heroic charge on July 1, when they fell face forward under the storm of machine gun fire sent from the site of the former shrine, which peasants working in their fields could see when they looked up from their labors in the surrounding fields and villages.

In all the weeks since July 1 the British made no further attempt at this hill. Their trenches were in the same place as before that day. The "no man's land" or dead space, remained where it was when the Germans first formed their defensive line. But while they were swinging in from the south, where the grand attack on July 1 had succeeded, they had given Thiepval and Schwaben redoubt a fairly allowance of shell fire, though making no infantry attack.

For nearly three months this softening process continued. Then when the British had gained the ridges running at an angle with the old German line of Thiepval they began to take fresh interest in that old first line. Now they did not have to attack it in front, but approached it from the side, as well as having it in a crushing vise.

One German officer, who was captured, said he did not think the British good enough soldiers to attack in this way, which was just the way the British did attack after their lesson of July 1.

GENERAL HAIG DELIVERS ANOTHER POWERFUL STROKE

German Trenches Demolished on Front of Nearly Two Miles and One More Village Has Been Captured.

London, Oct. 1.—A powerful new stroke to-day carried Gen. Haig's British troops within two and a half miles of Bapaume, the high road to which they straddle. They demolished the German trenches on a front of a mile and three-quarters, stretching from a point east of Enaumont l'Abbaye is reported in their hands, according to news reaching Gen. Haig at headquarters.

The new blow was carried out after a tremendous artillery bombardment, the attacking troops being closely followed by the terrible "tanks" which cleaned out the German trenches by an enflaming fire while the infantry swept forward. More than 800 prisoners had been brought in at a late hour to-night, making a total of almost 30,000 on the British front since the beginning of the Somme operations. A division of the new army took part in the fighting, and showed steadiness and endurance.

To-day's stroke followed a night of activity along the two-mile line between Fiers and Le Sars. The British made progress here, while the French, in small engagements, pressed forward somewhat north of Rancourt and south-east of Morval and Clay, where they are striking at Sailly.

ZEPPELIN BROUGHT DOWN IN NEW RAID ON ENGLAND

Great Crowds Cheer Spectacle of Burning Airship as it Fell in London District on Monday Morning.

London, Monday, Oct. 2.—Another Zeppelin was shot down in flames during a raid, which is still in progress, at an early hour this morning. The first report, issued by Field Marshal Sir John French, commanding the home forces, says: "A number of hostile airships crossed the east coast between 9 o'clock (Sunday) and midnight. A few bombs were dropped near the coast. No damage has yet been reported. The raid is still in progress. Some airships are in the vicinity of London, where some guns have been in action. An airship is just reported brought down in flames north of London."

Advices from the suburbs of London give graphic accounts of the manner in which the Zeppelin—the fourth

"And we hope the Germans will continue to think us stupid," said a British staff officer.

Last Commanding High Ground.

But beyond Thiepval was that last commanding high ground south of the Ancre. Bare and brown it looked in the morning, and distinct were the German trenches which were going "to get it" at a given moment.

Meanwhile all along the line of battle came just the steady gunfire which has been maintained without intermission of late. This keeps the Germans always under strain, destroying their works as fast as they can dig. They never know when or where such things as happened at Schwaben redoubt may happen.

And suddenly balls of smoke so thick that they soon became a cloud were laid over the German first line on the ridge, and every one breaking from an ugly flash. Hissing, crashing death laid its gripping, clinging mantle over this trench, whose inmates could survive only by hugging their dugouts. Every shell seemed to fall between two imaginary lines of tape laid for the guidance of the gunners.

When the rain of steel ceased, the British soldiers, timing their arrival to its cessation, were over the parapet and at the doors of the dugouts. Then on to the next trench, in the same fashion the waves of shell fire swept up the hillside as shields for the advancing waves of khaki.

Fighting Still in Progress.

There are creeping artillery barrages and jumping barrages and many kinds as the guns come playing an increasingly skilful part. And the Germans came back, their shells screaming through the British shell curtain, trying to check the human waves. But unless their curtains were laid in the right place they were waste. A line of infantry may be fairly safe with a certain shell fire, but a hundred yards or either side. To-morrow those waves may break with sudden intensity at some other point along the battle line and another village or system of trenches may be taken.

Three quarters of Schwaben redoubt is in British hands, and five or six hundred prisoners were shelled out of their dugouts, while the fighting continues at this writing.

All along the line the British are gaining ground.

Those interested will be glad to know Russel McVicar recovered from a large portion of the things stolen from his house some time ago. A reward of $100 did the work. The stealing was done by two women, neighbors almost of Mr. McVicar.

The village has been saddened by the passing away of one of her most popular citizens in the person of Maria Beaumont, wife of Charles Tucker, municipal clerk. Deceased had been ailing all spring and summer, but her friends always hoped for her recovery until a few days previous to her passing away, when she was unable to leave her bed and sank rapidly, dying Tuesday morning, Sept. 26th. The late Mrs. Tucker was a loyal little woman, full of zeal for all patriotic work and a good worker in her church or anything for the advancement of the village. Among her last words were these two sentences, "Everybody has been so kind," "Underneath are the Everlasting Arms." The funeral services were held from the home she so dearly loved on Thursday at one o'clock, Rev. J. Hale, rector of Christ Church, officiating. Interment at Oakland. Among the many beautiful floral offerings were a wreath from the Red Cross Circle and a spray of cream roses from the Women's Institute. The pallbearers were J. A. Armstrong, Wm. C. King, F. Robinson, W. J. Armstrong, D. J. Batsner and Wm. Bayne. The family left after the husband and one daughter, Annie Laurie. Among those from a distance who attended the funeral were her brother, Wm. A. Beaumont, and two sisters, Mrs. Merritt and Mrs. Harris of Detroit, Misses Nellie Archer, Ida Gibb, Lulu B. Merritt, Mary Neil and Allan McNichol, of Detroit; Mrs. Geo. Lansebury and son Lytle, D. G. Archer and wife, of Windsor, and Chas. D. Harris of Toronto and D. J. Batsner and wife of Cincinnati.

A large barn raising took place on the farm of Archie McVicar on Saturday, when his friends and neighbors assisted him in raising his barn. The framing was done by D. F. Mitchell and the captains were Dan McNaughton and John Leitch. The race was a tie. The bulk of the material used was a building Mr. McVicar purchased on the old Robinson estate which was built in 1865. Supper was served on the lawn by Mrs. McVicar and her lady friends.
A man who believes in the old saying, "See a pin and pick it up, and all that day you'll have good luck," saw a pin in front of the postoffice the other day. Bending down to get it, his hat tumbled off and rolled into the gutter, his eyeglasses fell and broke on the pavement, his suspenders gave way behind, he bust the buttonhole on the back of his shirt collar, and he all but lost his new front teeth. He got the pin.

A large barn raising took place on the farm of Archie McVicar on Saturday, when his friends and neighbors assisted him in raising his barn. The framing was done by D. F. Mitchell and the captains were Dan McNaughton and John Leitch. The race was a tie. The bulk of the material used was a building Mr. McVicar purchased on the old Robinson estate which was built in 1865. Supper was served on the lawn by Mrs. McVicar and her lady friends.
A man who believes in the old saying, "See a pin and pick it up, and all that day you'll have good luck," saw a pin in front of the postoffice the other day. Bending down to get it, his hat tumbled off and rolled into the gutter, his eyeglasses fell and broke on the pavement, his suspenders gave way behind, he bust the buttonhole on the back of his shirt collar, and he all but lost his new front teeth. He got the pin.

Newbury School Fair.

Despite a northerly wind and rain the school fair on Friday was a great success. There was an attendance of nearly 300. The entries every class and all exhibits were splendid.
On account of the spring rains and the dry summer the agricultural show was not as good as other years, but considering the unfavorable season the potatoes, mangolds, beets and corn were excellent.
Cakes, flowers, candy, hemstitched towels, cushion tops, writing, maps and all collections of seeds, woods, etc., were also shown, and prizes awarded.
The races were entered into with much zest, and this made the fair lively and interesting.
A shooting gallery was on the grounds, and lunch and candy were sold by the Women's Institute.
A concert was held in the hall at night, at which Sergt. McKaye of the Army Medical Corps of Toronto gave his interesting address: "Canada and the Empire," also readings from Dr. Drummond's poem, "The Habitant," "Little Batiste," "The Dublin Fusiliers." Solos were sung by M. Fowler, and a pennant drill by eight girls. The hall was crowded, proceeds being $4.

Kilmartin.

A great deal of the success of the fair and concert is due to the efforts of J. A. Armstrong, principal of the public school.

ENGLISH PANTOMIMES

HOW THE MODERN ENTERTAINMENT IS STAGED IN LONDON

No Class of Dramatic Production Entails Such Unlimited Thought and Care of such Extended Preparations in Advance—Number of Fairy Tales Suitable Are Limited—Salaries Drawn Are of Royal Proportions.

THE pantomime is the entertainment of the hour in Britain. How is the modern pantomime made? Mr. Arthur Collins himself once suggested the following recipe: "Take one old well-worn fairy tale, one music-hall comedian with lungs of brass, two knockabouts with heads of ditto, and one serio-comic with a cast-iron voice. Mix some scenery with a ballet or two, several hundred supers and children, and some pretty girls. Then take some popular songs—America for choice—and add a little music. Dress well and serve with limelight. Time, from four to five hours."

Needless to say, however, Mr. Collins' reputation as a suggestion that the Drury Lane pantomime is created in any such rough-and-ready fashion. On the contrary, he once declared that no class of dramatic production entails such unlimited thought and care of such extended preparations in advance. Mr. Collins says, too, that he and his collaborators always attach the greatest importance to the choice of their subject—though this might hardly be supposed from the frequency with which the same stories are treated. But apparently the number of fairy tales considered suitable is very limited.

Next to its spectacle the most important part of a pantomime is its fun, and according to Mr. Collins this is a more difficult element to provide than any other. Jokes, in fact, are a little-kettle, and how they will take no man can tell. Such, at any rate, has been Mr. Collins' experience. "Over and over again," he has recorded, "jokes that in reading over the book we had laughed at have fallen woefully flat at the first performance and have had to be cut out. Others, again, from which little or nothing had been expected have been received with unlimited favor by the public on the first night and have helped to make the success of the piece."

As to the cost of a modern pantomime, it is something stupendous. The times have long since passed, indeed, when John Kemble could give us a general direction for an entertainment of this sort: "It must be very short, very laughable, and very cheap." For better or for worse we have changed all that, and a Drury Lane pantomime of to-day that hopes to justify its existence must run for a very long, very gorgeous, and very costly. Sir Augustus Harris once unlocked the secrets of his account books to the astonished gaze of the public and disclosed the fact that pantomime princes and their attendant ladies very rarely draw salaries of royal proportions.

Here are a few items from the civil list which prevailed in those days at the "Lane":
Principal boy, £60 to £100 weekly; troupe of acrobats, £60 to £70 weekly; clown, £30 to £40 weekly; premiere danseuse, £30 to £60 weekly.

These figures have been very largely advanced upon in many cases since then. The late Mr. Dan Leno's salary was in his closing years as much as £250 weekly, while the present salary paid to Mr. Harry Randall and the late Mr. Herbert Campbell certainly ran into three figures also. And their successors, such as Mr. Willie Bard and Mr. George Graves, have certainly received no less.

Then, of course, apart from the principals there is the great army of subordinates and supernumeraries—500 or 600 of them at least. The members of the ballet alone average £1 10s a week. And finally there is the theatre staff—carpenters, scene-shifters, property-men, gas-men, electricians, dressers, checkbookers, attendants, clerks, accountants, etc.—which at pantomime time costs from £1,000 to £1,200 weekly. After which it is not difficult to believe that the total cost of running a Drury Lane pantomime cannot be a penny less than £4,000 a week. Add these running costs to an initial expense of some £25,000 or £30,000, and some notion will be gained of the responsibilities of pantomime production.

It Would Not Do.

The Master of Elibank is a firm believer in the art of judiciously sprinkling his speeches with good stories. One such anecdote he tells concerns a Highland farmer, who once handed a parcel in at a small Scottish railway office. "Do you think," he asked the man in charge, "that it's well enough tied to trust going in the van?"
"Well, I'll see," answered the porter, dropping it with a crash. "It'll get that here, an' it'll get that at the junction"—giving it another bang—"an' it'll get that at Dundee," banging it so furiously that the contents scattered all over the floor. "If it be going farther than Dundee," he remarked at last, "it'll nae do at all."

Mrs. McKenna's Talents.
Mrs. McKenna, wife of a British Chancellor of the Exchequer, is well known among her friends as a musician and composer. At a concert given at Wimbome House a few years ago a distinct success was accorded with a song entitled "Evening," the beautiful words being by Miss Alice Meynell and the altogeth appropriate music by Mrs. Reginald McKenna.

PROF. ASHLEY ON COTTON.

Former Canadian Professor Says Embargo Hit German Industries

More than twenty years ago a brilliant young man came from England to the chair of political economy in the University of Toronto. Prof. W. J. Ashley was the pioneer in modern economic studies in that university. He had many enthusiastic disciples who, after he went back to Birmingham University, in 1892, and was succeeded by Prof. James Mavor, the present head of that department, thought that a strong light had departed from academic affairs. In the January issue of the Atlantic Monthly, 1915, Prof. Ashley writes an article on "Germany and Cotton," in which he treats in detail the various effects of Britain's belated declaration that cotton is contraband of war. He shows that while cotton was of prime military importance to Germany as the basis of all nitro-cellulose explosives, it had also an economic significance in Germany's internal conditions. He points out that since cotton was made contraband there has been great unemployment in German textile centres. The price of raw cotton (in Germany) in July, 1914 was 65 1/2 pennings per pound; in December it had risen to 91. In June," he adds, "with the blocking of the Italian Avenue, the situation in the cotton trade began to look threatening. The Saxon export business was conferred to be quite gone." "According to careful calculations, a year's consumption, at the present probable rate by the German and Austrian armies, amounts to some 110,000 tons of cotton."

Prof. Ashley's comment on the alleged substitutes for cotton in the making of propellant explosives is noteworthy. "It might be asked," he says, "whether the ingenuity of their chemists cannot find a substitute. The ingenuity of chemists, even before the war, had succeeded in producing a nitro-cellulose out of wood pulp, though it had never actually been used in heavy guns. But as a propellant it is weaker; and this means that its use would necessitate new firing chambers and new sighting in all existing guns. Heavier guns would have to go to the workshop. . . . But consider the difficulty of shifting from one propellant to another in midst of war."

A GREAT CHANCE.

Russia Will Afford an Immense Market for Canadian Goods.

There is a great chance for Canadian trade in Russia, according to a returned war correspondent. The money will be needed, too, for Canadian money.
"Prior to the war," Mr. McCormick says, "nine-tenths of the goods used in Russia passed through Germany. They had German cashiers for most of the banks, and much of the bank stock was held by Germans.
"Now Russia wants open markets to the world. The commercial leaders do not want to confine their business to one country.
"The military alliance with France and England is likely to result in a commercial alliance following the war. England and France, no doubt, will desire a commercial treaty with Russia, so that they can control the sales. Russia feels, however, that if it can break away from commercial dependence it wants to avoid a possible trade domination by England such as was exercised by Germans.
"In trying for business in Russia it must be borne in mind that the language is different, the religion is different, weights and measures are different, and the customs are unlike ours. The Russians ponderously cling to their ways and we've got to sell to them in their own way.
"Russia is the biggest market in the world. Not in our lifetime, or the lifetime of our children or grandchildren, will it be a manufacturing nation. There is a demand in Russia in normal times for every manufactured article. The war is being fought now in the manufacturing district of Russia. These factories after the war will not be in use for some time.
"Anglo-Saxons are the slaves of interpreters and the interpreters are not always working for the Anglo-Saxons' interest, and there is no use hoping to do any considerable business without learning the Russian language. It is easy to learn and our salesmen should be educated in the language before attempting to make sales there. Don't step on the pet hobbies of the Russians. They are easily insulted."

Why They Do Not Go.
The Toronto Recruiting Depot is now engaged in recruiting the police census cards. About 20,000 cards have been returned. Those handed in early in the week of the census are very well answered. Those of the latter part of the week are not so satisfactory. This is due to the publication of the fact that the census was not compulsory.
The cards are being divided into four classes: Those who are willing to enlist at once, those who will later, those unfit, and "miscellaneous." When the cards are completely sorted, the depot will start to communicate with the men according to the information supplied.
Some of the cards have very amusing and very shocking remarks, instead of facts.
"I'll go when all the pink ladies are gone."
"Very much married."
"I have seven reasons: a wife and six children."
"There are too many walking fashion-plates adorning the streets. When they go, I go."
"When the poolroom burns have gone."
"Safety First."
"My starboard leg is off."
"When the gang of swankers have gone from Exhibition Camp."
"My two brothers have been training in Canada for eleven months. Why do they need me so badly?"
