

President of the Trades and Labor Council Asks Gray's Organ to Tell the Truth

The Free Press today repeats the falsehood that Mr. Charles J. Meaden, president of the London Trades and Labor Council, resigned his office as a protest against the passing of the resolution declaring Mr. Gray, the Conservative candidate, an enemy of organized labor. Today Mr. Meaden, sends Mr. Gray's organ a flat denial of its statement.

It remains to be seen whether the Free Press has sufficient decency left to publish Mr. Meaden's letter, and put him in a proper light before its readers. Whether it does or not the people of London will know the truth, for a copy of the letter has been received by The Advertiser. It is as follows:

London, June 9, 1905.

To the Editor of the Free Press:

Please allow me to correct some misstatements which have appeared in your paper regarding the meeting of the London Trades and Labor Council. I did not resign as you say, because I was opposed to the passing of the resolution against Mr. Gray. As a similar motion had been passed against Mr. Rumball, because we believed he was unfair to union labor, I was of the opinion, and am still of that opinion, as it had been proven that Mr. Gray had been unfair to labor, the Trades Council should put itself on record against him. I resigned because after the motion had been put which declared Mr. Gray an enemy of labor, and after it had been carried by a large majority, certain members of the council persisted in arguing the matter against my wishes. I may add that I have the greatest respect for Mr. Marks, and like other members of the trades council, I have the greatest faith in him. I believed every word he said regarding Mr. Gray, at St. Thomas, and I believe he proved his case against Mr. Gray.

CHARLES J. MEADEN.

What do the union men of London think of the action of the Free Press in deliberately publishing a false report of the meeting? What do they think of the paper which throws dirt at the representatives of organized labor, because those representatives see fit to put it on record that Mr. Gray, the Conservative candidate, killed the union men of London in 1899?

PROVINCIAL RIGHTS CANNOT BE DENIED THE NEW PROVINCES

Alberta and Saskatchewan Protected by the Constitution—They Can Appeal to the Privy Council in Any Event—A Question of Interpretation.

PROVINCIAL RIGHTS ARE NOT IN DANGER.

The enemies of the Government are craftily borrowing the old war cry of the Liberal party in the hope that Liberals will be lured by a watchword which has no sincerity and no meaning in the mouths of those who utter it.

If a full measure of provincial rights is being denied the new provinces by the Ottawa Government, THE NEW PROVINCES HAVE THEIR REDRESS.

They can carry an appeal to the highest tribunal in the empire, the judicial committee of the Privy Council, and have their rights determined. The Privy Council is the arena in which the battle of Provincial Rights has been fought in the past. It is there that the boundary between the federal and provincial jurisdictions is permanently fixed. It is there that Sir Oliver Mowat won his victories for Ontario.

Every constitution is developed by a process of interpretation. The B. N. A. Act has been constantly in the courts. It will be in the courts again if the new provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan believe there has been an infringement of their rights.

When the enemies of the Government tell you that the autonomy bill is an invasion of Provincial Rights they should in honesty add that Provincial Rights are in the custody of a power higher than the Parliament of Canada, and that power is the constitution of Canada, which is a series of imperial enactments.

What nonsense then to say the Federal Government is withholding any of the constitutional rights of the new provinces when the new provinces will be able in any event to secure their rights from the highest tribunal in the British Empire!

LIBERAL RALLY JUBILEE RINK TONIGHT

Tonight a grand Liberal rally will be held in the Jubilee rink, Lytle street, London, Ontario.

There will be seats for everybody, and the big rink will be found comfortable in all respects.

All the issues now before the public will be discussed. Hon. C. S. Hyman, Minister of Public Works; Hon. Frank Oliver, Minister of the Interior; Mr. Ralph Smith M. P. for Nanaimo, B. C., will address the electors. It is the earnest desire of the Liberal party that every voter in London but more especially every voter in East London, should be present to hear the speeches. The Liberals court the fullest publicity in regard to every detail of the Liberal policy.

ONE REASON JAPANESE WON

Gunnery Had Practiced in Rough Waters as Occurred On Tat's Day.

Tokio, June 9.—As to the causes of the annihilation of the Russian fleet in the battle of the Sea of Japan, the Japanese press points out that the Japanese gunners habitually practiced in rough water, holding that unless the marine artillery was effective from an unsteady platform he was of little use. The Russians habitually did their practice in smooth water. The high seas that prevailed on the day of the battle were a distinct advantage to the Japanese.

The sinking of the battleships Borodino and Alexander III, and other Russian ships was due to their fore-and-aft watertight compartments. When one side of a compartment was pierced and filled with water the equilibrium of the ship was destroyed and the firing was stopped.

The unparalleled effectiveness of the Japanese torpedo attack is still the subject of discussion. Many believe that submarines or some new explosive improved the torpedo practice. Among the Japanese the theory that the Russian ships were destroyed by submarine mines is persistently held.

Alfonso Visits the Zoo.

London, June 9.—This was the last day of King Alfonso's stay in London. He leaves here early tomorrow morning for Spain. His majesty spent this morning in witnessing a drill of the fire brigade, inspecting the National Gallery of pictures, and in seeing the Zoological Gardens. Subsequently the young King, accompanied by King Edward, went to Windsor. A state ball at Buckingham Palace tonight will be a new programme for King Alfonso's entertainment.

Deadly Ice Cream.

Nashville, Tenn., June 9.—Twenty-two guests of a local hotel were suddenly taken ill yesterday, shortly after dinner. Ice cream was served at the meal, and attendant physicians attribute the sickness to some preservative used in the milk, or poisonous poison. Five doctors were called to attend the affected guests, some of whom are in a serious condition. Among the sufferers are several members of theatrical attractions showing here, and six members of a criminal court jury.

"WICKED IN SPIRIT" SAYS REV. MR. CLARK

Protestant Pastor Deplores a Campaign Circular.

CALCULATED TO DO GREAT EVIL

A Copy of the Infamous Document—Disgraceful Language Used in Attacking Autonomy Bill.

To the Editor of The Advertiser:

I have no wish to take any public part in the present election contest, but I cannot refrain from saying that the accompanying circular which came to me in today's mail is essentially wicked in spirit, and calculated to do great evil to the community in which it is circulated.

Yours very truly,

W. J. CLARK.

"FOR GOD AND COUNTRY."

Canada "Expects that every man this way will do his duty."

"THE AUTONOMY BILL."

"Quick action is needed."

As a patriotic Canadian and an elector, I beg to suggest as a quick and effective method of dealing with those very objectionable clauses of the autonomy bill now before the House the following plan, namely:

Let every patriotic citizen in every constituency throughout Canada, both Liberal and Conservative, who has the welfare of his country at heart, write individually and without delay, sending a brief worded protest against separate schools and against the public funds being devoted to separate schools, and against coercion, such protest to be sent to the member of the Dominion Parliament at Ottawa representing the constituency in which he lives, urgently requesting the member to strenuously oppose any and every attempt made by its promoters, who are the enemies of true progress, to coerce or to shake the new provinces of our great and growing west, or to impose upon them any of those very objectionable features which are contained in the bill, and if they are not withdrawn that he should vote against the bill.

We are firmly convinced that this plan would prove to be a very practical way, and perhaps the only effective way, in a crisis like the present, for the electorate of Canada to be heard, and to make known the will of the people to their representatives at the capital on short notice.

The members of the Cabinet or Senate should also be communicated with in the same way, when they fail in their duty to their country, as they have so lamentably failed on the present most important occasion, and the electors of Canada should at this juncture take the opportunity to say whether or not our representatives at Ottawa, either in "The Cabinet," or "The Commons," may with impunity, or reckless indifference, "betray our country to Rome," or "barter away our birthright," for a miserable mess of "political preferment potatoes," or for some vile sop of personal gain or advantage. Evidently they have forgotten the fact that "our fathers" fought the same treacherous foe, and bled and died.

A POSER FOR HAULTAIN

Why did Premier Haultain travel past seven vacant constituencies in the West, where he could at this moment be holding bye-elections, to talk to electors two or three thousand miles from home?—Toronto Star.

HAULTAIN ASKED TO BE HONEST

He Once Demanded That the Present School System Be Preserved.

[From Hamilton Times.]

Why do not the Tory emissaries who are just now overrunning London and North Oxford try to be truthful? Why do they falsely allege that the Northwest is having a system of schools forced upon it against the will of its people? Section 93 of the B. N. A. act would, we have not the slightest doubt, have protected and perpetuated the minority's rights if there had been no educational clauses in the autonomy bills.

But if not, what about it? Did not Mr. Haultain declare that the people liked the schools? Did he not say that if he were dictator he would not change the system? Did not his draft bill, prepared to serve as a guide for Parliament, make sure that it should be provided that the school system now in force should be maintained? Here is section 2 of the bill:

"On, from and after the said 1st day of January, 1906, the provisions of the B. N. A. act, 1867, except those parts thereof which are in terms made, or by reasonable intendment may be held to be specially applicable to or to affect only one or more but not the whole of the provinces under the act, composing the Dominion, and except so far as the same may be varied by this act, shall be applicable to the Province of — in the same way and to —"

LABOR DENOUNCES GRAY

That while this Trades and Labor Council does not desire to make any pronouncement as regards the political policy of either party in the present contest it desires to place it on record that during the Street Railway Strike in 1899, Mr. William Gray, the present Conservative candidate, proved by his action in St. Thomas that he was an enemy of Organized Labor.

Resolution adopted Wednesday by the Trades and Labor Council of London.

IMPARTIAL OPINION

Rev. E. D. McLaren, D.D., general secretary for home missions in Western Canada, after an extended trip through the Northwest, says:

"A great many of the people profess to feel somewhat resentful of what they call the interference by outsiders, and maintain that if they were prepared to submit to the educational clauses in the Autonomy Bills the people of the East had no right to interfere. They profess to be satisfied with the educational system."

Rev. James A. Carmichael, D.D., superintendent of home missions, of Winnipeg, previously for twelve years Presbyterian pastor at Regina, and a successor of the late Dr. Robertson as superintendent, says:

"It is difficult to see how the Northwest school system could be improved upon. It works splendidly. People in the west are undoubtedly satisfied with it, while theoretically I would prefer no separate schools, I do not believe it wise to ride over the wishes of the minority, and I think the ideal condition is more nearly approached under this system than it would be were the privilege of separation denied the people. The Northwest system is most satisfactory indeed, and I am of the opinion that under it separate schools are much less objectionable than they might be were the principle of separation removed entirely in opposition to the protest of the minority. The fact was that people were not so eager for separate institutions when they had the legal right to enjoy them as they would be were these denied them."

Rev. Dr. Milligan, of Toronto, after a visit to the Northwest, admits that he could discover no agitation about nor opposition to the Autonomy Bills, and that the Northwest people "seem to be more concerned about dollar bills than Autonomy Bills."

Dr. G. U. Hay, editor of the Educational Review, St. John, N. B., and a Conservative, says that he went west himself a strong opponent of the measures and expected to find intense antagonism in the west against them. To his surprise he failed to find anybody in the west at all agitated. Everyone seemed quite satisfied with the bills. "The Northwest people say that they would maintain the present school system anyway, and the cry of coercion, therefore, does not affect them." Mr. Hay visited Regina, Calgary, Revelstoke and other places, and found the people everywhere absolutely indifferent or evidently satisfied. At a three-days' conference of educators, neither in public or private, was the subject for years have approved and brought it up, and nowhere was he able to find any discontent.

Dr. A. B. Baird, of Manitoba College, a resident of Edmonton for years, has stated that:

"The Northwest school laws of 1892 were those which the people had sanctioned—a system with which all were satisfied, and which since its adoption has practically never been complained against by anyone. The education clause of the bills simply continues this system, which the people themselves have approved and sustained. The education clause was, therefore, a reasonable settlement which would be accepted as satisfactory by the people directly affected."

Prof. Bryce, LL.D., of Manitoba College, was recently in the Northwest and "found no excitement or discontent over the education clause." Dr. Bryce, himself an earnest educationist, who was prominent in the Manitoba struggle ten years ago, declares that the Northwest school system is "as near to a pure public school system as is workable in Canada—practically a better working system of public schools, in so far as religious parties are concerned, than our Manitoba public school system. It is the best yet devised for approximating to uniformity."

HYMAN WILL WIN SAYS THE GLOBE

The Tactics of His Opponents Are Strongly Reprobated.

[From the Toronto Globe.]

The campaign in London continues to proceed satisfactorily from a Liberal point of view. The splendid speech delivered there Monday night by Hon. W. S. Fielding was an excellent commencement of the second week of the campaign. It was by far the most masterly address yet delivered there. The honorable gentleman's lucid presentation of the Government's educational proposals in the autonomy bills was most convincing, and the warmly enthusiastic manner in which the great audience expressed its acknowledgment of that fact will long be pleasantly remembered by those who were present at the gathering. Hon. William Paterson's address was also effective.

Hon. Mr. Hyman's canvass shows increasing strength for him. The claim of Mr. Wm. Gray and his friends that he has always been a friend of the workmen has been effectively dispelled by the charges of Mr. Joseph T. Marks, editor of the Industrial Banner, and these have not been met with anything like convincing frankness. The Conservatives have now, as has been previously stated, dropped the pretense of making anything but a religious and racial cry campaign. This on behalf of Billy Gray and the Workingman.

How can the man who called Joe Marks a curse and did his best to knife the unions pose as the friend of labor? As the Irishman said, how can a horse run a mile on a half-mile track?

It seems that Billy Gray was successful in hiding his zeal for the workingman up till last October, when, a few weeks from an election, he woke up one morning to find his heart flooded with one of those grand passions for a great cause which often turn the course of history.

Up to that time, Billy had not told his love, but had let concealment like a worm in the bud feed on his damask cheek and injure his chances with the labor organizations. He had not only concealed his affection, but he had even done things to throw labor off the track—as for instance when he went down to St. Thomas and told the London Old Boys how they could help to break the street railway strike.

Billy's was not a sudden change of heart like Saul's of Tarsus. Our theory is that it had been coming on him for a long time, and that the thing overmastered him at last. It was not love at first sight, but a slow, insidious growth that ripened just in time for the nomination meeting.

Billy, as we know, had been struggling with it. When people are in love they don't know what is the matter with them. As Lord Chumley says, they can't eat, they can't drink, they can't smoke—just look at the blamed moon.

Whether Billy had these symptoms, lack of appetite, absence of thirst, a proneness for star-gazing, we cannot say, but certainly his actions proved the old proverb, that love is blind. When he went to St. Thomas in August, 1899, and murdered the thing he loved best—as Othello did Desdemona—he simply didn't know what he was doing.

But Billy's great love for labor having outrun the little turbulences of his early career and settled down into a calm, majestic stream, it occurred to his friends that it was time to advertise it. They did it with such skill and authority—touching up Billy's good points and hiding his little infidelities to the cause—that labor was deceived. Billy himself kept a straight face, uttered the most beautiful, pink sentiments, and shook hands from 6 o'clock in the morning until 12 o'clock at night. He threw himself into his part with such earnestness that he almost began to believe he was what he made himself out to be.

Of course, even at that time, there were people who suspected Billy Gray. Although he said his lines with great conviction and had learned some pat phrases, he neither dressed nor looked the part. Some people, even then, expected what afterwards happened—that Billy would turn out to be the villain in the drama, instead of the honest, but handsome, blacksmith, who does the grand things the gallery applauds.

Nobody ever saw Billy going round in blue jeans. There was no sweat on his brow that he could not have easily avoided. His hands were too soft and there was an easy rotundity about him that showed he was not in active training on the workman's job. He gave jealous persons room to sneer at his pretensions, and through his inattention to little details, gave rise to invidious remarks about the amount of manual labor he was guilty of in his life. There were—would you believe it?—small-minded people who said that Billy didn't even have to work hard at selling crockery, because his manners were so charming and his samples so excellent that the goods sold themselves. They forgot, for the moment, that politics alone is work enough for a strong man.

But time passed—which is a habit time has—and Billy was once more a candidate. Love's young dream was broken. The serpent had entered paradise, and doubt and distrust came with him. Billy had soured on labor and labor began to know what Billy's wooing was worth. All the sly, colorable things Billy had said or had caused to be said about his rival were uncovered, and it became evident that Billy had tried to land the goods on false pretenses. Labor began to look toward the cool, strong, efficient man who stood on the ground of fair play and just treatment to everybody, the man who did things and let it go at that. Labor knew him for a thoroughbred, and Billy's stock went down when a comparison was entertained. At this ticklish stage in Billy's courtship the Free Press came out with the announcement that Billy was hand in glove with King Edward. The obvious inference was that he had turned the cold shoulder on his old flame and the engagement was off.

After that, evidence of Billy's duplicity began to pile up with alarming rapidity. The St. Thomas incident was recalled, and everybody wondered that they hadn't understood what it meant before. Joe Marks is a labor man. There is no doubt about that. It was a nasty slap in the face when Billy Gray spoke of labor's friend as a curse. The incident gave rise to a great deal of explanation. Where Billy produced his own word or that of interested friends, Joe produced affidavits. An affidavit more or less is nothing to the rage of a rejected lover, and Billy, having pool-poled the whole episode, did not hesitate to give the affidavit an "emphatical denial." Brought to bay, confronted with the proofs, Billy wasn't going to stick at a denial or two. In Billy's frame of mind it adds nothing to the situation if Joe Marks is made out to be a liar as well as a curse. The infernal regions have no fury like a suitor scorned.

After this unfortunate denouement Billy grew careless. He threw off the mask, and let things slide. At the nomination meeting he was so changed that labor didn't recognize him. His heart was hardened. He allowed Mr. Cockshutt to sneer at the labor which is now making the prairies golden with wheat, the strong right arms that are heaving out a heritage in the Northwest, the good, hard-working citizens that Canada is rescuing from the servitude of the Old World—to sneer at them because they have names which are not as easy to pronounce as Billy Gray's.

Yes, Billy has been found out. The disguise has been pierced. Green goggles and false whiskers could not reinstate Billy Gray in the affections of labor. Once bitten, twice shy. It knows him faithless and perjured. It could tell him in a hundred ways. The resolution of the Trades and Labor Council declares that Billy Gray has shown himself by his actions an enemy of organized labor. It's goodbye, Billy. Take back your engagement ring.

Still, it's always a poignant thing to be off with the old love and on with the new. Although the Free Press has published the bonns Billy Gray and King Edward, it still struggles up to the notion that there is an alliance between Billy and labor. To hold Billy up as the workingman's friend the Free Press involves itself in a horrid coil of mendacity. It runs amuck of its own conscience. It sees red. It blusters and when it doesn't bluster it asks the other fellow to stop pinching. It seems that Billy is getting the worst of it.

Oh, what a tangled web we weave, When first we practice to deceive!

Just run your eye over the—er—equivocations the Free Press has found it necessary to indulge in the last week. Give the Free Press credit for its courage in sticking to them, but don't pass them up. They are worth reading. They all spring from the idea that Billy can still square himself with the workingman for what he did in the street railway strike. We give the Free Press' statement and the contradiction in each case:

Item—President Meaden, of the Trades and Labor Council has resigned as a protest against the resolution. President Meaden did not resign on that account. He was strongly in favor of the resolution, and, in fact, objected to an irregular attempt to reconsider it.

Item—The resolution was carried only by a small majority. As a matter of fact it was carried almost two to one.

Item—The meeting was packed by Advertiser employees. The meeting was not packed by anybody. There were only two Advertiser employees present, whose business it is to attend the meetings, being regularly certificated delegates.

Item—The Typographical Union is up in arms against the action of the Trades and Labor Council. In another column will be found a letter from the President of the Typographical Union denying the charge explicitly.

Item—Mr. Paladino, formerly secretary of the Trades and Labor Council, presented three certificates, which were not accepted by the president. Mr. Paladino can prove an alibi, not having been at a meeting for some months. Further he is no longer a member of the Trades and Labor Council. He represents the imputation that he is a forger.

a candidate, who, according to the Tory organ, is merely a proxy for his Majesty King Edward. Is a fitting commentary upon the state of mind of the local Conservative leaders. Desperate men resort to desperate means, but in the present instance there is not a single indication that these means are the electorate of London to desert the man who has served them in the Commons with distinction and honor. London wants Hyman in the Government and London will put him there.

Railroad, just outside Queen's Park. In large numbers yesterday afternoon to watch the workout of horses entered for next week's races. The weather was perfect, and, although the track was somewhat slow, good time was made. At present, there are over 70 horses quartered at the park, besides the matinee horses, and there are more to follow. Dan Hopkins, of the well known "Horse World," has more horses and several other trainers are on the way here.

The horses were out in full force yesterday, and were prepared to do edge. "Big" pretty a bit of going and could be desired was shown when Hagler, 2:03 1/4, and Jubilee, 2:12 1/4, were out. The latter, together with Havers damed was behind Jubilee, and one of his men was up behind Gallaghier. They went their miles like a flash, and the crowd was on its feet and noses. Some caught the first mile in 2:18 flat, and the second in 2:15 1/4. The horses were full of go at the first mile, and were in the lead of the pack. Then, Dan McEwen worked several of his horses. He has a roan horse that paces very fast and true, and looks like a money maker. He is called King and Gertie Hunter worked a good mile. Maplewood and Fred E. Whiting moved along at a good clip and were in the lead. Then, Dan McEwen worked an easy mile, as did her half sister, Delbars. It was a continuous round of racing, and the enthusiasts were in the best of times.

If Old Sol will continue to do business for a week, there will be some splendid racing at Queen's Park next week.

New York, June 8.—Beldame, the 10-1 favorite, today displayed her old time form and won the Standard stakes at Gravesend, under a heavy track. Her victory today made Beldame's record contest for the Sebaste handicap, which is run next Thursday at Sheepshead Bay. Beldame ran the mile and a quarter in 2:16.7, a fine time considering the bad condition of the track. Calmform also ran close together for nearly a mile, when appeared as if he might beat Beldame, but was slightly away from him. But O'Neil at once went to work on Beldame and an eighth of a mile from the wire drew ahead of both Calmform and O'Neil to the wire Beldame drew away and won under a hard ride by a length from Calmform, who was a length behind. Max Engelberg, winner of the fifth race in the fifth round, was disqualified for fouling and Burns was rider. The final round of riding at Gravesend, where the Sebaste race on Tuesday, June 6, was disqualified for being five pounds short in weight. Doyle, who rode him, failed to get his animal started. The Sebaste was disqualified on that ground.

draws today, Alexander Herd, Huddersfield, a former British champion, was leading with a total of 1. The score of W. Anderson, the American champion, was 174, and that of Alex Smith, American, was 169.

Hamilton, June 7. This was the first afternoon of the races with pleasant weather since opening day. It brought out the largest crowd of the meeting, the usual big percentage being from Toronto. The track showed a vast improvement from yesterday's conditions, but it was still very heavy and sticky. The fields were not large, but the contests were good. The results:

First race, purse, selling, 3-year-olds and up, 6 furlongs—Young Henry, 109, even, won by a length; Yama Christy, 109, 5 to 1; 2, Little Tom Tucker, 109, 7 to 5; 2, Time, 1:20½. Allotpath, Jimmy, Harry New, No. Trumper and Graef.

Second race, purse, selling, 3-year-olds and up, bred in Ontario, 1 mile—Dileas, 83, 9 to 5, won by a length; Gladstone, 102, 10 to 1; 2, Young, 102, 25 to 1; 3, Time, 1:48. Nesto, Sampson and Chataineau also ran.

Third race, purse, selling, 3-year-olds and up, 1 mile—Gibbs, 112, 12 to 1, won by a length; Varieties, 110, 11 to 5; 2, Miss Morgan, 99, 3, Time 1:14. Pride of Galore, Go Luck and Blue Bird also ran. Blue Miracle and George Perry also ran.

Fourth race, purse, selling, 3-year-olds and up, 5½ furlongs—Hyperion, 107, 5 to 1, won by five lengths; Love Note, 107, 4 to 1; 2, Scarcrow, 101, even, 3, Time, 1:23½. The World, Ed Bradley, Electress, Barklemore and L. J. also ran.

Fifth race, The Royal Stakes, 2-year-olds, 5 furlongs—T. S. Martin, 117, BASEBALL. APPLAGGATE JUMPS. Applaggate, the crabs of the Toronto Club, jumped the team at Providence, and has gone to Williams port, Pa., to play independent ball. News reasons was assumed, since the team was to play only its own team. It will leave the Toronto team in a awkward position, as it was none too strong with high hopes.

New York, June 8.—The Majestic, in today from Liverpool and Queenstown, reports that for two hours last Saturday her engines were stopped and the ship lay as quietly as a stone. The cause was a severe attack of seasickness, while the surgeon labored to save the life of Arthur Campbell, a second cabin steward. Campbell had injured himself so severely during a violent attack of seasickness that the surgeon had decided that a delicate surgical operation must be performed at once. To obviate as much as possible the danger of vomiting, the steamer on the high seas, her engines were stopped during the operation. Campbell was said to be on the way to recovery.

Choose King From Danish Royal Family.

Copenhagen, June 9. — It is reported that the Norwegian Government, in view of King Oscar's apparently definite refusal to consider the offer of the Storting to place a prince of the house of Bernadotte on the throne, has privately approached the Danish royal family to ascertain if an offer of the throne would be received by a member of that family, preferably Prince Charles, son of Crown Prince Frederick. The general opinion expressed here is that such an offer would be refused.

According to reports from Stockholm King Oscar may be induced to reverse his decision and to favorably consider the offer of the throne to a member of his house. Leading Swedish politicians are much divided over the question, which it is understood will not be definitely decided prior to the extraordinary session of the Riksdag. Authoritative information received from a Norwegian source represents the majority of Norwegians as opposed to giving the throne to a prince of the house of Bernadotte.

It is further stated that King Oscar would definitely refuse the throne for a member of his family and that if the Danish royal family should be unwilling to accept the offer of the throne, then, Norway will become a republic, and that as favored by the mass of the people. It is further stated, however, that the offer of the throne would be refused.

ASK HIS LICENSE BE KEPT

All Classes of John Pleasance Petition
In Behalf of Mr. John Pleasance.

Chatham, June 8.—The decision of the new board of license commissioners to take away the license of John Pleasance, of the Hotel Rankin, at the end of thirty days, is creating a good deal of feeling here. Pleasance is a Liberal, and a good hotelman.

Following the petition last week filed with the commissioners by the city council, the county council today unanimously passed a strong resolution, requesting the commissioners to reconsider the Pleasance case and grant him renewal of his license, the hotel being a very popular one with the county visitors.

The resolution sets forth that the Boston Corbett, the man who is credited with having shot J. Wilkes Booth, the assassin of Lincoln, is residing in Texas.

Religion Passions.—E. E. Sheppard Hits at Foster.

Woodstock, June 8. — The Citizens' Association of Toronto arrived here to-day and held a meeting at the city hall in the evening. The particular note that this organization is playing in the present campaign is the fanning of the fires of race and religious passions. Londoners will hear them Saturday and will be able to size up this latest of the Toronto butters-in. In the matter of bigotry, this organization is everything else beaten by a mile. To use a race-track phrase Mr. E. E. Sheppard is the chief offender, and the following quotation will give an idea of the sort of stuff he spouts. Speaking of clause 16 as amended, he said: "Separate schools are all run on the idea of establishing a new France on the banks of the St. Lawrence, and of making Canada a Catholic country." There is small likelihood of such stupid stuff having any effect on the electorate of North York. In fact, the moderate segregation into the riding has materially added to Mr. Smith's chances, which were small to begin with.

Mayor Scarff presided at the meeting, which was a fairly large one. Mr. E. E. Sheppard, Rev. Mr. G. H. Torrance, Mr. J. H. Gault, Mr. W. H. Parthing, T. Athol and, R. L. Shaw, the speakers, also occupied seats on the platform. Mr. Sheppard worked out this warm one

Rev. Canon Farthing, rector of New St. Paul's Church, of this city, expressed himself as being in sympathy with the objects of the Citizens League. He explained what part he had taken in the formation of the Citizens League, and how he had supported the Government of Sir John Macdonald in regard to the Jesuit estates. On the subject of the Jesuit estates, he said that he had supported the resolution passed by the Ministerial Association condemning the autonomy bills. He repeated the untrue and ridiculous charge that Monsignor Sbarretti had dictated to the Premier as to the Northwest educational policy.

damaged. Some of the upper floors of the building are used as lodging quarters, and there were some narrow escapes, as the whole building was quickly filled with suffocating smoke. Some of the occupants had gone to the swimming pool in the basement for a morning plunge, and had to make their escape to Dominion Square with little or no clothing.

What Will London Answer.

"A vote for Hyman is a vote for Laurier," Sharrett and the hierarchy. -London Free Press.

The mask is discarded. Here we have the appeal to religious passion in all nakedness. Here we have the bald charge that C. S. Hyman is a traitor to his own flag and his own faith. The appeal means this, if it means anything.

What men make the charge? Are they not the same men who in 1900 said in Quebec that "Laurier is too English for us"? Are they not the same men who in 1900 in Quebec fathered the infamous "Pamphlet No. 62"? Are they not the same men who simultaneously in 1900 throughout Ontario were appealing on the cry that because of Tarte the Government's loyalty to British interests could not be trusted? Are they not the same men who in 1896 courted a solid vote in Quebec?

What is to be London's answer on this occasion? London knows C. S. Hyman. He has lived his life in London. During half a century he has known and been known to London. As a boy, as a youth, as a young man on whom heavy business cares were thrown in the city council, as mayor, in athletics, and now for nearly two decades in that public life where a man's conduct, sympathies, propensities and motives cannot remain long hidden from his fellows. C. S. Hyman has been known to London, in the highly-burly and rough-and-tumble of business, sports and politics, did C. S. Hyman ever resort to a mean action? Did he ever show the white feather? Did he ever in any capacity reveal the spirit of a demagogue? Has he ever, as a public man, appealed improperly to a class interest, either the laboring class, the professional class, the manufacturing class or any other class? Has he ever appealed to Protestants against the Catholics or to Catholics against the Protestants? He has been in business during a quarter of a century in London. Can any man charge him with any meanness or sharp practice or improper dealing? He has joined in athletics. It is in games perhaps better than anywhere else that boys and men come to know each other. Did Charlie Hyman ever sell a game or reveal a trait that was not honest and manly? In public life heavy responsibilities were thrust upon him. The chairmanship of the railway committee is no light task. Who has ever denied either his ability for the task or his strict fairness in the position? Opponents and friends alike declare him to be all that the post demands. The chairmanship of the redistribution committee in 1903 was an especially difficult task. He fulfilled that duty with conspicuous and, indeed, remarkable success. The opposition members of that committee, Messrs. Borden, Monk and Haggart, each testify to his honorable dealing.

Is it likely, then, that a man in whom during fifty years of an especially active life has never been discovered a yellow streak, who has served a price, been the price of public office or political preferment, his religious faith, his political honor, his country's interests? This is the imputation against Hyman, neither more nor less; that is, a man deserving of no trust, no confidence, and of nothing but reproach and the scorn of his fellows.

Is C. S. Hyman deserving of the scorn of his fellows? Is he a man deserving of no trust? We venture to say that he has not a reputable friend or enemy in London, a supporter or opponent in politics, who thinks so or will declare it. We venture to say that Hyman has not an acquaintance in London who does not in his heart feel and know that the aspersions thrown upon him is cowardly and dastardly. As the Advertiser said a few days ago, C. S. Hyman as a citizen, as an employer of labor, as a representative of this city in Parliament, has always "made good" in every respect. He assumes no disguises. There is not a hypocritical pore in his skin. He pretends nothing that he is not. He has no poses. He is free from fads. He is the same Charlie Hyman to every man in London, the same during an election contest as at other times. His actions tell his aim, which is to do the best he can for the city as a whole and for every class and person in the city.

What answer is London going to give to the dastardly charge urged against this son and citizen of London? In political fights hard knocks are expected, and Hyman has always given and taken them with good humor. But surely it is carrying the warfare too far to impeach the personal loyalty and honor of any man without just cause, and we are confident that fair-minded London on Tuesday next will give with no uncertain emphasis the answer which such a dastardly appeal deserves.

Northwest Prepares to Celebrate.

Western men now visiting the city say that if Parliament and the eastern provinces wish to hear a protest and feel an indignity worthy the name they may have both by failing to pass the autonomy bills within reasonable time.

They say that since the terms of the bills were announced and since the educational clause was changed to exactly meet the wishes of the Northwest members of Parliament, the people of the Territories have been resting in a particularly satisfactory frame of mind, delighted with the various provisions of the bills and a good deal amused at the ravings of the Toronto press. They have entered heartily upon preparations to fittingly celebrate their inauguration on 1st July at Regina, the old capital of the whole Territories, and the capital of the new Province of Saskatchewan. The mounted police have been preparing for an appropriate part in the functions, and the Ninetieth of Winnipeg have arranged to go to Regina to aid in the celebration. Civic dignitaries all over the Northwest and public men and people generally are planning to be at Regina on Dominion Day. An excursion party of Washington newspaper correspondents, going through the west by invitation of the Western Immigration Association, have arranged to time their trip so as to be at Regina on that day. The Northwest Boards of Trade Convention has been fixed for Regina on the 29th and 30th June, specially to enable the delegates to join in the provincial establishment celebration. The whole Northwest people, everywhere and in every way, far from refusing or even hesitating to accept the autonomy terms, have on the contrary, accepted them eagerly and heartily, feeling that they are being dealt with fairly and even generously.

Western men who here declare that the present satisfied feeling prevailing in the Northwest would quickly give place to strong resentment if it should become likely that the bills would not pass in their present shape. This view is borne out by Mr. Haultain's statement at Calgary last week. Mr. Haultain evidently has been told some things when in the Northwest recently, and was trying to square himself by saying that it was not the duty of the Opposition to oppose the bills any longer. The Northwest people certainly do not wish the bills opposed, and if Alberta and Saskatchewan do not come into existence on 1st July, the Conservatives will have to answer for it to the Northwest people.

If, then, the Northwest wants the bills to pass, Mr. Haultain admits it, and himself joins in the statement that the bills should now pass—what is London's duty? Is London called upon to sacrifice its own civic interests and C. S. Hyman for the sake of saying that certain bills in which London has no direct interest shall not pass, when the Northwest people declare that these bills which directly affect them ought to pass? The Northwest wants these bills. London, by declaring for C. S. Hyman and its own welfare, will meet the Northwest wishes and interests.

"Howling Clericals."

The Toronto World says that Dr. Baird, Dr. Bryce, Ralph Connor, Dr. Carmichael, Dr. McLaren, Dr. Milligan and others failed to find hostility in the Northwest against the bills, because they are "inspired by bitter and unreasoning partisanship," because they are "wild party fanatics," and because they are "a few howling clericals." Of course, Messrs. Bennett and Haultain, who are those howling clericals, are not partisans. Oh, no; Messrs. Bennett and Haultain—and Billy Maclean—are strictly impartial witnesses.

A Wise Provision.

In 1878 the first Northwest Territories Act was passed. At that time a majority of the inhabitants, other than Indians, were Roman Catholics, but in each settlement, where the majority were Roman Catholics or Protestants, there was a minority of the other religion. This was before the days when the secularization of schools had taken such a hold on the popular fancy, and each section of the community wished to have its religion taught in the schools. Accordingly provision was made in the act whereby either minority might set up schools in which, besides secular matters, its own religion might be taught.

This act met with the approval of both political parties and of both Protestants and Catholics. In 1880 and 1886 this clause was re-enacted and confirmed by a Conservative Government at Ottawa, almost word for word, again with general approval. Under this act many schools were set up, mostly general public schools, but some strongly ecclesiastical and under church control—all supported out of public funds; but in 1891 the new school ordinances were passed by the Territorial Legislature. These ordinances are statutes in form and substance, and have the force of law, but in name are called ordinances, and not statutes, because they are nominally promulgated by the Lieutenant-Governor.

These new ordinances changed everything. Under them there were no more church schools or schools controlled by any church authority—all became public, national, secular schools. But the Legislature of that time and place by this time Protestant in majority, had regard, not only to its legal duties and limitations, but to the good faith to be kept with the minority, and to that toleration and care for others' conscience so essential in national and social life. With Catholics, and with many Protestants, it was a matter of conscience that their children should daily be instructed in religion. The majority did not say, "You shall not." They said in effect: "Your children must have a good secular education. It is necessary for the safety of the state, where every voter is one of the rulers, that they may be educated, so that they may read for themselves and learn the things which pertain to government, and may know their duties as good citizens; that provided for, you are welcome to teach your children your religion in your own way. To secure the education necessary to good citizenship we provide by law that the hours from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. shall be devoted only to the secular education which the state requires, the remaining half hour till 4 p.m. you are welcome to devote to teaching of about 175 or more people, and after which there was plenty left, and her presents was many in number. So you fix it up like it ought to be and excuse scattering words and bad writing I remain, your Respect, Rev. Thomas Key.

The minority accepted this provision as the best arrangement available for both worlds. It has continued in force for fourteen years. We are mainly of two religions here and in the Northwest. It is absolutely necessary that we live together in peace and harmony. To leave this question an open one would be to give to those new provinces a legacy of discord and controversy. To the Catholics it is a matter of conscience, and the question of separate schools or no separate schools would be contested at each general election, generating infinite bitterness, strife and division. If the Catholics, holding perhaps, the balance of power, should succeed, they would, perhaps, have given them a system of real church schools. To fix the present system, a system quite satisfactory to almost everyone in the west, and which has worked quietly and well for fourteen years, is to get rid at once of the incentive to religious debate and of the probability of a change in the direction of church schools.

Somewhat Mixed.

If, therefore, they are on the British North America Act, passed in 1871, under the reign of Queen Victoria, mother of King Edward, that Mr. Gray, as the representative of Mr. Borden, stands.

A vote for Hyman is a vote for Laurier. A vote for Gray is a vote for King Edward.

No, these quotations are not from different papers. They appeared in one paper, the London Free Press, only a week apart.

A vote for Hyman is a vote for London.

The galled jay on Richmond street is wincing badly.

Perhaps it would be well for the Free Press before going further to take a blue pill.

Regina, Calgary and Edmonton have made no protest against the Autonomy Bills. Why should London?

The Opposition appeal narrows down to this, that the only good Liberal is the dead and departed Liberal.

As this contest proceeds it becomes more evident that the Free Press has a hot air chamber where its brains ought to be.

The brazen appeal to passion and prejudice is an insult to Protestantism in London. No wonder a Protestant pastor enters a public protest.

Patriotism is not more the last refuge of the scoundrel than in this pretended care for Protestant interests on the part of the men who assume it.

Will Mr. Haultain explain tonight why he hasn't tried to fill the seven vacant seats in the Northwest Legislature?

While the Free Press may aim at the truth, six lies about the labor council in one edition is pretty bad schooling.

Edmund E. Sheppard, who is to speak here on behalf of Mr. Gray, spends most of his time lampooning all clergy.

What do sensible citizens think of the shameless attempt now openly made to divide London and Canada on the lines of religious cleavage?

Mr. Beck has been boasting in Toronto that Gray will be a winner. As a turfman he ought to remember Sir John A.'s dictum that there's nothing so uncertain as an election or a horse-race.

Quite a Spell.

[The Orthopedist, in Town Topics.] There once was a certain fair youth; So hard did it ache, That it kept him awake, And he hardly could tell you the truth.

A friend sent a fine large bouquet Of flowers that were fragrant and sweet; Said the youth: "Now I guess I shall soon convalesce!" And he forthwith improved from that date.

Said a frisky and frolicsome lamb To an ancient and learned old ram, "I find that I squint, And I don't see my way out of it!"

A maiden once bought her a toque, And the bill for the same was no joke; Said he: "I don't mind, As she tossed each fair curl; Said her father: 'I'm sorry you wouke.'"

Said a mule to a horse: "If you neigh, There's only one thing I can say; You'll never be heard, For more than a word, When, in earnest, I set out to neigh!"

A poet once fashioned a rhyme In praise of the scoundrel and chyme; Said he, "If they buy, The price will come huy!" But the editor sent him a rhyme!

Lathesmith Out for Pinkie.

[Hardeman, Tenn., Free Press.] Miss Pinkie Hamm, daughter of Mr. Reuben Hamm, of Jasper, dropped in to see ye editor this week, and left a dollar with us for a year's subscription to the finest paper in Tennessee. We air always proud to have the ladies call on us and we reciprocate all that Miss Pinkie said of us. She has eyes like stars, a cream de mint complexion, and her smile reminds us of a oasis in the Desert of Sarah. Come again, Pinkie.

Wants "Fiting."

[Edgefield, S. C., Chronicle.] Mr. Editor: Please allow me space in your paper, on last night, which was the 23d of this month, there was a marriage at my house, or home, rather, of a girl that I raised, whose name was E. B. Garriette, is now married to Mr. Johnny Homes, and we had a grand time, and almost a glorious time, and plenty to eat and furnish a large crowd of about 175 or more people, and after which there was plenty left, and her presents was many in number. So you fix it up like it ought to be and excuse scattering words and bad writing I remain, your Respect, Rev. Thomas Key.

Hero of the Hour.

[Chicago News.] Little Willie—Say, pa, what is a hero? Pa—A hero, my son, is an umpire who can face six thousand fans and call three strikes on the batter of the home team in the ninth inning when the crowd is expecting him to bring in the winning run.

Skeptical.

[O'Donovan Schwartz.] HE. If I were Andrew Carnegie, And you were simply you, To keep your close attention I'd tempt you with a pension— Would eighty million tempt you To win your concession, If I were Andrew Carnegie, And you were simply you? SHE.

If you were Andrew Carnegie, And I were simply I, I wouldn't get that bribe, oh, You'd love some girl in Skibo, And I'd sit home and cry, I don't think you'd be my beau If you were Andrew Carnegie, And I were simply I.

Advantage in Kansas.

[Chicago News.] "Sally's father said her beau should never step foot in the house again," said the Kansas girl. "Then I suppose she had to give him up?" interrogated her chum. "No, indeed. She entertains him in the cyclone cellar."

Easy for the Tailor.

[Chicago Tribune.] "There's a sort of a bump right here on your chest," said the tailor pausing in his measurements, "but we will make the clothing as if it were not there." "I know you will," sighed the customer. "That's my pocketbook in my inside vest pocket."

Always the Case.

[Exchange.] She—Mrs. Nuwed has a bird of a bonnet. He—And her husband has the bill of the bird.

Just in Time.

[Philadelphia Ledger.] "Going out, eh?" she sneered, after their quarrel. "Yes," replied her husband. "I'm going to congratulate Ned Pilkington. You're slow. The engagement was announced six weeks ago."

"Yes, but I was only broken off yesterday."

Bessie's Figuring.

[Washington Life.] "Bessie, how many sisters has your new playmate?"

"She has one, mamma. She tried to fool me by saying that she had two half-sisters, but I guess she didn't know that I studied fractions."

The Builders.

[Chicago Tribune.] We quarrel of land and line, We bicker of work and wage; We trouble our souls with a doubtful sign, Forgetting our heritage of old, Forgetting the tireless hands; That fared, undaunted, through unknown lands Till the path was made complete.

The fathers—the men who dreamed, And dreamed were strong to dare, To struggle ahead to the goal that gleamed, A prize that was rich and fair, The fathers—the men who thought Of all that the center of the business, And hearts uplifted, essayed and wrought All the work their dreams compelled.

We pluck from the vines they set, We walk in the ways they made; We have their fields, and their forests yet, Are giving us rest and shade. Who builded a place for us, A country magnificent, brave and bold, In their faith all glorious.

We quarrel and dread and doubt, Forgetting we only hold The comfort within and the peace without Of all that the center of the business, Forgetting the toil and stress, Forgetting the bygone age, When cities were planned in their completeness For a future heritage.

the same extent as they apply to the several provinces of Canada, and if the Province of — had been one of the provinces originally united by the said act."

That is, section 93 was to be declared to apply to Alberta and Saskatchewan in the same way as if Alberta and Saskatchewan were provinces.

A train of the Pere Marquette was at Iona when the first broke out, and the engine was ordered to proceed to Dutton with a flat car and bring the fire department from that place. Another engine was at Blenheim, and this was sent with a car for the Ridgeway firemen. The latter were soon on the scene, and the Dutton men were about to start for Rodney when they received word that the fire was under control and that their services would not be required.

Fortunately, the fire was confined to the Davies establishment. The building belonged to Mr. David McRitchie, and it was totally destroyed. The contents of the store and the bake shop were consumed, together with a part of Mr. Davies' household effects, on the second floor.

The loss of Mr. Davies and Mr. McRitchie will be about equally divided, and it is understood that it is pretty well covered by insurance.

A ROW AT STRATFORD

Two Well-Known Citizens Arrested Over a Charge of Intimidation.

Stratford, June 8.—There was some excitement here today over the arrest of Mr. Alex. Lancaster, who was charged with intimidating G. T. R. men with the object of getting them to quit work. The arrest was made by G. T. R. Detective Day, who, it is said, was attacked by friends of Lancaster in attempting to effect a rescue. The officer succeeded in placing his prisoner in the lock-up, as well as a man named Pitcher, who it is alleged incited the crowd to riotous acts. The citizens generally believed a serious mistake had been made, as both Lancaster and Pitcher are held in great respect by the community, being men of most estimable character, considerable indignation prevails here over the incident.

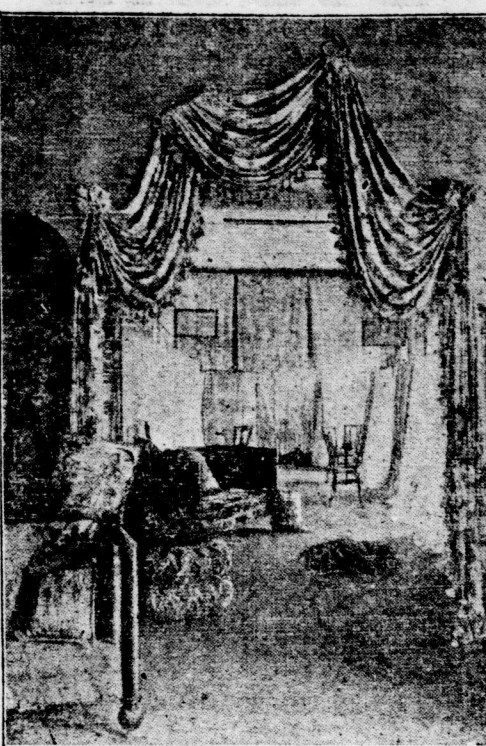

Edward Doyle, the blind poet of New York, has just issued his third book. He is 20 years old and has been sightless 37 years.

FIRE THREATENED RODNEY VILLAGE

Assistance Sought From Adjoining Places Was Unnecessary—$5,000 Loss.

The business portion of the village of Rodney, which recently sprung into prominence through the murder of Miss Eliza Lowery, was threatened with destruction by fire this morning. A bucket brigade composed of all classes of citizens succeeded in confining the blaze to one building, which was totally destroyed, together with the major portion of its contents. The loss will not exceed $5,000.

The fire was discovered in the bake-shop of Alexander Davies, a two-story brick building, situated on Front street, in the center of the business district, at 8 o'clock, and for a time it burned fiercely. The villagers turned in with a will and fought the flames, with buckets of water, more place being without a fire department, but in spite of their best efforts they could not prevent the destruction of the Davies shop. The wind carried the smoke into the shoe store of Mr. Eberhard, adjoining, and the jewelry store of Mr. Schmidt, three doors away, in such quantities that it was thought both of these places were also on fire, and it was decided to call for aid from Dutton and Ridgeway.

A train of the Pere Marquette was at Iona when the first broke out, and the engine was ordered to proceed to Dutton with a flat car and bring the fire department from that place. Another engine was at Blenheim, and this was sent with a car for the Ridgeway firemen. The latter were soon on the scene, and the Dutton men were about to start for Rodney when they received word that the fire was under control and that their services would not be required.

Fortunately, the fire was confined to the Davies establishment. The building belonged to Mr. David McRitchie, and it was totally destroyed. The contents of the store and the bake shop were consumed, together with a part of Mr. Davies' household effects, on the second floor.

The loss of Mr. Davies and Mr. McRitchie will be about equally divided, and it is understood that it is pretty well covered by insurance.

A ROW AT STRATFORD

Two Well-Known Citizens Arrested Over a Charge of Intimidation.

Stratford, June 8.—There was some excitement here today over the arrest of Mr. Alex. Lancaster, who was charged with intimidating G. T. R. men with the object of getting them to quit work. The arrest was made by G. T. R. Detective Day, who, it is said, was attacked by friends of Lancaster in attempting to effect a rescue. The officer succeeded in placing his prisoner in the lock-up, as well as a man named Pitcher, who it is alleged incited the crowd to riotous acts. The citizens generally believed a serious mistake had been made, as both Lancaster and Pitcher are held in great respect by the community, being men of most estimable character, considerable indignation prevails here over the incident.

PREMIER KNOWS NOTHING OF IT

The Colonial Conference Rumor Brought Up in the Commons.

Ottawa, June 8.—Leader Borden, in the House this afternoon, drew attention to a London report stating that English Radical papers positively announce that Laurier, replying to Lyttleton's communications re the next colonial conference, has "firmly refused to take part in any tariff discussion until the opinion of the country has been ascertained at a general election." The cabinet went on to say that if Laurier refused, the conference of 1906 will not be held, and added that if the Liberals were to win the next election the conference would be allowed to meet with a clear prior announcement that all schemes for a preference involving a British tariff against the foreigner are impossible.

Having read the dispatch, Mr. Borden asked whether or not the alleged policy of the Liberal party in Great Britain, as set forth in the cablegram, would be likely to call into active existence the declaration made by the Prime Minister and the other Canadian ministers at the colonial conference, and renewed by him, he had received no communication from Mr. Lyttleton or anyone else on the subject of the proposed colonial conference, or upon any matter that might be discussed at that conference, neither had he addressed any correspondence to Mr. Lyttleton on the subject.

"And added he, 'with regard to any change in our policy which might be effected by any change of Government in Great Britain, I have only to say that our policy stands as it is, and cannot be affected by any changes that take place in England or elsewhere.'"

THE NEW MODERATOR

Presbyterian Assembly Choose Rev. Dr. Armstrong, of Ottawa.

Kingston, June 8.—The 31st General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada convened in Great Memorial Hall of Queen's University last evening. After routine, Professor Bryce, of the University, was elected Moderator.

George Hay, Ottawa, seconded the nomination of Rev. John Somerville, D.D., as appointed assistant clerk of the assembly.

A communication was read from Rev. R. H. Warden, D.D., expressing regret at his enforced absence and requesting that Rev. J. W. McMillan, of Kingston, and Rev. John Somerville, D.D., be appointed assistant clerks of the assembly.

Dr. Milligan spoke of the financial genius and fine spirit of Dr. Warden as an influence in the assembly. A committee will be appointed to express the assembly's loss by his absence.

Dr. Milligan's theme in his sermon was "The Eternal and Destiny-Determining Word."

A SHARP LESSON TO LAKE POACHERS

Fort Stanley, June 8.—The Department of Justice, Ottawa, sent John Farley, K.C., of St. Thomas, here yesterday to hold an investigation into the sinking of the tug Grace M., of London, by the Vigilant, Wednesday. Nothing particularly new developed, but it was established beyond a shadow of doubt that the Grace M. was poaching in Canadian waters, and the evidence taken went to corroborate the reports already published.

No blame can be attached to Capt. Dunn, and it is admitted he did all he could to avoid a collision. The tug was owned by Capt. Galbraith and Engineer Raillesson, and valued at about $3,000. The two men lost were married men, and Martin Olson leaves a wife and one child before. After the investigation, the three men were allowed to proceed to their homes.

Capt. Dunn, although in the plain discharge of duty, deeply deplores the loss of life in connection with the affair, and the hope is freely expressed that this will be more than a warning to American fishermen to keep in their own waters.

Capt. Galbraith thinks the tug received no damage by the collision, as both boats were practically going in the same direction, but the lake being rough the momentum of the larger boat simply rolled the tug over so far that the water rushed in at the open engine house door, and she filled before she righted. Every effort was made to save the crew, and it is supposed the two men that were lost became entangled in the nets the Grace M. had on her deck.

The tug lies in about 90 feet of water.

Ruins of the Aztec City.

City of Mexico, June 8.—Laborers excavating for the telephone underground cable system have found a number of clay utensils, concrete foundations of temples and pottery covered with hieroglyphics; also Spanish coins whose dates are undecipherable, but which are believed to belong to the period of conquest when Cortez razed every building in the Aztec capital.

A wall uncovered shows evidence of having been built on the ruins of another city lower down.

HOW GRAY KNIFED THE WORKINGMEN.

I, Joseph T. Marks
of the City of London
in the County of Middlesex Editor

Do solemnly declare that during the recent street Railway trouble I made a visit to the London Old Boys Association in St Thomas as the official representative of the London Trades and Labor Council and the Street Railwaymen's Union.

I went there with the object of securing their sympathy and to induce them to refrain from going to Springfield. I used every argument in my power to plead the cause of the men who had the active sympathy of the majority of the citizens of London. At that meeting Mr. W. Gray the present Conservative candidate was present although not a member of the St Thomas Association and he used every argument in his power to have the St Thomas Association go to Springfield.

He stated that but for a few interested agitators the strike would have been settled long ago and that I was a curse to the City of London. For nearly two hours there was a very heated controversy between Mr. Gray and myself and a great deal was said that would take up too much space to repeat here.

There were members of Trades Unions present at said meeting who can also testify if necessary to the truth of above statements.

And I make this solemn declaration conscientiously believing it to be true and knowing that it is of the same force and effect as if made under oath and by virtue of "The Canada Evidence Act, 1893."

IN WATER A DAY; THIS DIVER LIVES

Caught by Trap Door and Imprisoned for Twenty-Four Hours.

Canton, Mo., June 8.—After being imprisoned for twenty-four hours, loaded down by a diver's armor and under fifteen feet of water, Daniel Hayes was brought to the surface at 3 o'clock this afternoon in an unconscious and almost dying condition.

He is a professional diver and had been employed to remove the brush and debris from the immense pipe which serves at times at low water to drain Lima Lake and transfer its surplusage to the Mississippi River.

While at work Saturday afternoon Hayes was sucked under the pile of refuse and over against a bowlder in a way which prevented him from loosening himself from the tangled hoses which held him down.

In signaling to the men in charge of the air pump he could not let them know his location, as the air hose, being wrapped around the rock, caused deceptive bubbles to come to the surface.

He responded to the signals sent him by means of the rubber tube which supplies him with air. The rope that had been placed about his body seemed to be in working order, but it was quite impossible for the men above the surface of the water to elevate him after the usual manner.

Major Meigs, engineer in charge of the river improvements, scoured the cavity for a diver to go to the rescue of Hayes, but was unable to find one until today, when Eugene Farris had tried to this city from Burlington.

With the aid of the steamer Cantonella he was able, after an hour's hard labor, to raise the imprisoned diver, who was almost unconscious and unable to speak.

His suit was leaking badly, and he would have been drowned had the ordeal lasted another half hour.

Restoratives were applied by a physician who has been in constant attendance for 24 hours. After being partially revived Hayes said that a portion of the bank caved in under the surface, the suction drawing him into the big pipe, he was clearing. There was a heavy lid on the outside of the pipe, which, closing down, held him a captive.

The agony that he passed through made him appear ten years older than he did when he disappeared from view.

"I guess that everything I ever did, good, bad and indifferent, passed through my mind at least 1,000 times," he said.

"I have had several close calls in my time, but never before have I been up against what has seemed to me like almost certain death. I could not understand why they did not send one down for me, not knowing, of course, that the air hose diverted the bubbles and made it impossible for them to locate me."

"Every minute of the 24 hours I have been imprisoned I thought the air would stop coming to me, and then, of course, the end was not far off. To say that I suffered the agonies of one condemned to eternal torment is about as near as I can come to saying how I felt while fastened in what I thought was a living tomb."

Hayes is the diver who three years ago was caught under the Flying Eagle near Hannibal, Mo., and held for 36 hours.

One of Hayes' hands is badly swollen and his legs were terribly lacerated above the knees, where the big iron door pinched him. Physicians say, however, that he will recover and be able to be around in three weeks. He says that he will never dive again.

BAILIFFS SEIZE ACTRESS' HOME

Mrs. Potter's Beautiful Place at Maidenhead in Hands of the Court.

London, June 8.—The financial troubles of Mrs. James Brown Potter, the mother of Mrs. James A. Stillman, jun., of New York, culminated Monday when bailiffs took absolute possession of her beautiful country home at Maidenhead.

Having lost a fortune in various theatrical ventures during the year, the beautiful actress is about to lose her home, all that is left to her in the world.

The announcement of this latest misfortune, followed close on the confession of Albert Fossick, the defaulting solicitor, of Maidenhead, who said that the $50,000 trust fund he is accused of having stolen was lent to Mrs. Potter for her theatrical ventures.

The surprising part of Fossick's confession is that he lent the money to Mrs. Potter without security of any kind. He does not advance infatuation for the actress as a motive for his action, and, in fact, gives no reason for his lavish use of trust funds in theatrical enterprises.

Fossick has been a prominent figure in art clubs and green rooms. He knew Mrs. Potter well, besides being her neighbor at Maidenhead. In fact, it is understood that he has been her financial manager for some time.

The seizure of the actress' house by bailiffs, it is thought, is connected with Fossick's defaulting.

Mrs. Potter is now penniless and but for her appearance in the music halls as an elocutionist would be utterly without the means of sustenance.

It is reported that some time ago she appealed to her daughter, Fifi, now answer came back from Stillman, sen., of London, June 8.—In 1901 a $375 sack was seized from Miss Droulette, of this city, as the lady stepped from a Windsor ferry, it being charged that an attempt was being made to smuggle it. Miss Droulette gave a bond for its safe keeping and was permitted to keep possession of it. Now the United States court jury here has decided that Miss Droulette must give up the sack or forfeit the amount of her bond. No proceedings will be taken against her for the alleged attempt to smuggle.

HOW YELLOW HORDE BEAT DOWN ENEMY

Boy Veterans in Resistless Pursuit North of Shaho.

A GALE OF DUST AIDS JAPAN

The Onslaught by Mikado's Men Continues After Mukden Is Abandoned to Its Fate.

Headquarters of Gen. Kuroki's Army, near Tieling.—The first realization of the immensity of the Japanese forces was brought home to the observers, when the two central armies rolled across the Shaho on the morning of March 8 in the wake of the retreating Russians. Beside that, during the battle, parts of two or three brigades of infantry, with a few battalions of reserves, a dozen or more batteries, and pack trains and field hospitals, were all that one person could see in the mountainous country where the great armies were engaged.

But when the whole army moved northward with its impedimenta following, it was an impressive host. Looking from the heights where the Russian batteries had been one could see many khaki-colored processions for miles on either hand, emerging from the valleys and passes where the Japanese had been concentrating since October, streaming across the dry bed of the river, and the narrow channels of ice and winding away among the hills and sandy plains northward.

It was a businesslike army, swathed in dark blue and khaki, with no spectacular show of gold braid or brass, and with hardly a touch of color except the scarlet blankets worn over the shoulders. Most of the men in the ranks were boys still, but they were toughened by a year of campaigning, into hardy veterans. They plodded on silently, as usual, with the show of no excitement over victory, without confusion or excitement anywhere. Japanese domination over Manchuria was spreading at the rate of two miles an hour.

For ten days from that morning the whole country within the area of the fighting was covered with a mist of fine dust, stirred up by the feet of more than a million men and animals. It never settled for a minute. It choked the throat and blinded the eyes, sifted under clothing, made food gritty and turned all water into mud. The flames from burning houses and stacks of grain showed through it in the nights like the moon through the fog. The sandstorms, which began on the second day of the pursuit, and continued at intervals for a week, came from the north, directly into the faces of the Japanese, and made the discomfort and hardship worse. There was great contrast between the country south of the Shaho and north of it. The villages toward Mukden were larger and more prosperous, with better buildings, and the picturesque temples and tombs, surrounded by groves of dark green firs, made a welcome panorama to the eyes of the men from beautiful Japan, who had spent months among the dreary, monotonous hills.

Greeted by Chinese.

Chinese families gathered in front of their houses and greeted the Japanese with shouts. Doubtless they were equally ready to greet the Russians and denounce the Japanese when it was politic. Outside the larger towns Chinese officials wearing their robes of office and buttons on their caps, with banners and soldiers in gaudy uniforms, received the Japanese generals, and Gen. Kuroki and his staff rode into the village where his headquarters now are through a double file of villagers kneeling on both sides of the road.

The beginning of the Russian retreat from the Shaho was orderly, and the Slavs left a clean field. None of the portable equipment worth taking had been abandoned, except hundreds of stacks of tin cases in the trenches, and huts containing cartridges.

Toward evening of that day Gen. Kuroki's troops overtook their foe's rear guards eight or nine miles north of the Shaho, and from that time the retreat became a scramble for safety. At the various supply stations huge piles of grain were fired and smoldered for days. The pursuit continued all through the night of the 8th, and the right division of Kuroki's army came to the branch line of railroad running from Mukden to the mines at Fushun.

On the morning of the 9th a sandstorm began, which threw both sides into confusion and made orderly retreat or pursuit on a large scale impossible. All the telegraph wires connecting the headquarters and the various divisions were blown down so that each contingent proceeded largely on its own responsibility. The left division crossed the Hunho under cover of the thick dust clouds without a battle. Apparently the Russian commander was afraid to risk a defense on such a day, even in the elaborate works which should have made the Hunho the most formidable line of defense, perhaps because his own men were in a panic. Probably this was the decisive day of the battle, for the Japanese forces west of Mukden were being pressed hard, and the brigade on the extreme left was almost wiped out. Had Biderling repulsed Kuroki two or three days at the Hunho the Russian reserves might have been able to turn the tide at Mukden. Good generalship, served by Mikado's men, and good fortune make history otherwise. Kuropatkin had hurried his reserves from Mukden east to Fushun, as the Japanese had planned that he should, and then hurried them back to Mukden, but too late.

Mukden Is Deserted.

The Japanese central army from Kuroki's left was pushing past Mukden, to the north, and Kuroki's left division was marching still further north, protecting his right flank. Having lost the Hunho, the Russian central army left Mukden to its fate and continued in its disorderly retreat to Tieling. That all their dead were left where they fell showed what the retreat had become. On the morning of the 10th the left division again encountered the Russian rear guard in considerable force near east of Mukden, and as the Russians attempted to make a stand they were beaten in two engagements, and in the afternoon the division arrived at the town of San-ten miles from Mukden, on the main road from Mukden to Tieling.

Until the 10th the Japanese army had been pushed forward day and night in the face of very difficulty to draw the attention of the Russians from Mukden, and the men were nearly exhausted by their forced march.

The military roads from Fushun to Tieling wound along the plains among sharp hills, and the division followed this to get to the west of Mukden, while Gen. Linevitch took most of his men directly north through the mountains with the Japanese right army pursuing. Several times the Japanese had brushes with the rear guard, but there was no important action until March 14, when they met the Russian range of high, steep hills, seven miles southeast of Tieling, which strategically was the strongest defense of the city.

There was a broad, level plain in front of the hills, and no avenue of approach for an attacking force except to cross this plain under such cover as could be found in the gullies and behind occasional ridges. Consequently it was decided to attempt the night attack with the bayonet once more, and the first line of trenches below the hills were gained. For a while the Russians held on the morning of the 14th, two battalions were assigned for a frontal attack, one for a division on the right and the largest force on the left.

Russians in New Rout.

A direct charge upon the main trenches was impossible, because the slope before them was almost too steep to be scaled even with the aid of ladders. A lower hill to the west and in front was vulnerable on its west flank, and after an artillery engagement the main body occupied this. Night stopped the fighting, and before morning the Russians had retired in haste, leaving 200 dead, while the Japanese had 800 casualties.

The last stand of the Russians before Tieling was on a chain of hills 3,000 meters southeast of Mukden, equipped elaborately with a long chain of trenches and well-constructed gun positions which held 24 guns. The general division was reconnoitering the positions on the afternoon of the 15th another Japanese brigade from the south began to engage one of the Russian batteries. This partly exposed the Russian flank to the enemy, and 36 Japanese guns were concentrated in the bombardment of that position. Darkness again interrupted the work after an hour's bombardment, and again the Russians retreated, abandoning without serious resistance their most valuable depot between Mukden and Harbin, which was their strongest military position as well.

Gen. Kuropatkin had been there in his special train until the afternoon of the 15th, it was said. When the first Japanese company entered the settlement at 1 o'clock in the morning it captured the stationmaster and two other officials, who had been left with orders to apply the torch at the last moment, but only a few buildings were burned and valuable stores of munitions were left undamaged.

No more drastic encounter took place in this eventful week than the capture of the Fifth and Nineteenth Regiments of Russian rifles by Kuroki's left division, on the morning of the 11th. In the panic which prevailed at Mukden, these two regiments left at 3 o'clock in the morning with no general commanding them, a mixed crowd of soldiers from other organizations, and of camp followers attaching themselves to the retreat. When the two forces discovered each other they quickly formed into fighting line and the Russians came on.

The fight was short and decisive. The Russians could not stand in the open fields under the shrapnel and scattered like sheep, while many parties waved towels and handkerchiefs in token of surrender. The Japanese had only 200 casualties, while dead and wounded Russians were all over the field. During the rest of the day the Japanese were occupied in hunting for Russians in all the surrounding country. The Slavs had broken up into small parties and were fleeing in every direction, some trying to get back to Mukden, others to find roads of escape northward, and many hiding in the ravines and in Chinese houses.

However brave they were in fighting when cornered, some made spectacles of themselves, hardly to be expected of men of a military race.

Pain to Siberians.

Whether the European troops who have been sent to the east are the best quality of the Russian army there is no means of judging, but certainly they have not compared favorably in physique or fighting qualities with the Siberians.

The total of prisoners taken that day was nearly four thousand. They were a fierce and savage looking crowd all wearing big black or white sheepskin hats, many in dirty coats, most of them heavily bearded, all unwashed for days. Among the officers were several old men, one of them a veteran of the Russo-Turkish war, with a white beard hanging to his waist. He gave his age as 72.

The next morning they went down the road in a big cloud of dust—a long and picturesque procession of dejected looking Moujiks, with their officers riding in Chinese cars, and jeering Manchurians running along the flanks. They were off to join the army of Russians in Japan, which now numbers nearly 100,000.

KING ALFONSO AT ALDERSHOT

Spanish Monarch With King Edward Reviews 25,000 British Troops.

London, June 8.—For the first time since his arrival in England King Alfonso today saw the sun, and it was a bright summer day for the most important function of his visit, the military review at Aldershot. The young king and King Edward, accompanied by Queen Alexandra, the Prince of Wales, the Duke of Connaught and the princesses drove to Waterloo station. About the railroad station, where a grand guard of honor was drawn up, immense crowds gathered, and King Alfonso was given the noisiest welcome of his visit. The cheering strata proceeded in a royal car to Aldershot. The two kings on arriving at the camp mounted chargers and accompanied by their staff, the members of the army council and the foreign military attaches, proceeded to the parade grounds. After a royal salute the kings rode along the line and inspected the troops, followed by the whole cavalcade, except the Queen's carriage. About 25,000 troops of all arms were in review.

SPEEDY CURE OF MISS EGGLESON

She Is Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and Writes Gratefully to Mrs. Pinkham.

For the wonderful help that she has found Zula Eggleston, 6 Erie St., East, St. Thomas, Ont., believes it her duty to write the following letter for publication, in order that other women afflicted in the same way may be benefited as she was. She writes:

Zula Eggleston

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

I heartily recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a uterine tonic and regulator. I suffered for four years with displacement of the uterus and no one but those who have experienced this dreadful agony can form any idea of the physical and mental suffering those endure who are thus afflicted. Your Vegetable Compound cured me.

Within three months I was fully restored to health and strength and now my periods are regular and painless. What a blessing it is to obtain such relief when so many doctors fail to help you. Your medicine is better than any doctor or medicine I ever had.

No other medicine has such a record of cures of female troubles as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Women who are troubled with painful or irregular menstruation, backache, bloating (or flatulence), leucorrhea, falling inflammation or ulceration of the uterus, ovarian troubles, faintness, indigestion, nervous prostration or the blues, should take immediate action to ward off the serious consequences, and be restored to perfect health and strength by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her experience is very great, and she gives the benefit of it to all who stand in need of wise counsel. Address, Lynn, Mass.

GOING TO SLEEP BY A BURGLAR

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE WORKINGMEN OF LONDON

Little Girl Mistook the Masked Man for Her Own Father.

New York, June 5. — Little Helen Meehan, having been nursed by a burglar, a real burglar with a black mask and dark lantern, is now the envy and admiration of her playmates in the neighborhood of her father's home at Wadsworth avenue and One Hundred and Eighty-eighth street.

Helen, who is only 4 years old, was picked up from her bed early yesterday by the burglar, who wrapped her tenderly in the coverlet and then carried her down into the cellar, where he sang her to sleep. Then the burglar went back to work and collected a large part of the wearing apparel and jewelry of Helen's father, who is a lawyer in the Potter building, on Park row.

So far as can be learned the burglar entered the house about 3 o'clock in the morning. He went through the dining-room, but the plate having been carefully locked up for the night, he made no attempt to secure any of the things in the room.

He made his way softly up to the second floor, his feet soles making no noise. In a room in the rear of the house he opened the door and entered, sleeping, but as he approached her bed she opened her eyes sleepily.

"Hello, papa!" she said, and the burglar, who was in the habit of wearing a mask, waited for a moment, then he said, "Hello, my little girl, I am your father." The child smiled comfortably as she snuggled down among the covers, however, and was in no fashion alarmed.

"Papa's playing 'black man,'" she said, looking with half-open eyes at the black mask.

"Yes, papa's playing with his little girl," said the burglar, as he picked the child up and wrapped the covers about her. Instantly she sank back to sleep and knew nothing of the trip down the two flights of stairs to the cellar, taken by the burglar with soft, catlike steps. But she awoke as he placed her in a corner, covering her over. Whereupon he crooned consoled her for a while and then went back to his dangerous task of looting the house.

On the way he stopped in the dining-room and picked up a couple of bottles of beer from the refrigerator, one of which he believed he had stolen from the window to a fellow burglar. Then he continued upstairs and collected several pieces of clothing and a stickpin when a steady yell from a servant girl on the top floor sent him scurrying from the house with his plunder.

Mr. Meehan at once discovered the strange absence of little Helen and the whole house joined in the search for the child. She was at last found costily sleeping in the cellar, where her father picked her up and opened her eyes sleepily and murmured:

"Baby doesn't want to play any more, papa. Baby's too sleepy."

It was not until later that she learned of her adventure and told what she could remember of the man in the mask.

Akron, Ohio, June 9. — A bottle containing a nickel and a message, set afloat 11 years ago by Attorney W. J. Laub, of this city, in New York harbor, was picked up recently at New York, and today Laub received a letter from the finder, who signs himself Ahmad Bin Musa. The letter reads:

"Most Honorable Sir, — I send you with this epistle the piece of money you request be returned to you. It gives me great pleasure to do so. It was the instrument by which my most cherished friend, returned to me after running from me and had gone down to the sea to drown himself, but seeing the bottle floating about, he rushed into the water and frantically seized it, and upon opening it, not being able to read it, thought it was a message from the 'Great Allah,' sent him to return to me. He hastened to return, bringing the letter and the coin with him. I had missed him for several days and his rainments were in shreds.

"The sight of him brought me such joy that I hurried to greet him as one of my own flesh. He then showed me what he had found, and after studying the message carefully I deciphered the language and I was so pleased again to find my servant that I took him to my private quarters, and after meat and wine to be served in honor of the little message which saved my servant's life and brought him back to me. I am a thousand times thankful for your little missive of kindness which must have led you to do this, and if at any time you may decide upon visiting the seashore I will be very pleased in meeting such a bright and thoughtful gentleman from the great country of the west.

Ex-Vice-President of the Dominion Trades Congress Writes.

Reasons Why Mr. Hyman Is Entitled to the Support of Labor.

Dear Sirs and Brothers:

As a bye-election of very considerable importance is about to take place in your constituency, made necessary by the elevation of Hon. Mr. Hyman to a cabinet position, minister of public works, and as the issues on which the contest is being waged seem to me to have obliterated many, if not all things that more directly concern us as a labor class, I take the liberty of addressing this open letter to the wage-earners of London, setting forth some facts and conditions which prevail at present in the Department of Public Works, and the chances of a change detrimental to the cause of labor, which might result from the defeat of the Hon. Mr. Hyman.

In taking this liberty, I hope not to be misjudged or to be considered "butting in," when there is no warrant for it. If the election were a general one or the fate of the Government were at stake, you would be justified in considering it presumption on the part of myself or anyone else from another part of the country to intrude myself upon you, but it is only a bye-election which will not affect the Government, and even if Mr. Hyman is defeated cannot bring comfort to the Opposition, owing to the fact that the Conservative party is very much at variance on one of its main issues.

As an ex-officer of the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress, many of the wage-earners in the labor movement in London who know me know that I always had a predilection in favor of the Liberal party, but I cannot be said to be on any occasion where the interest of labor was involved that I have not been fair and honorable and impartial, and ready to sacrifice any political feeling or advantage if, thinking the best interest of the cause of labor were being served, so, in the present case, I will endeavor to offer a few facts which concern us as wage-earners, as a reason for favoring the Liberal party, and especially organized labor, to support the Hon. Mr. Hyman in the coming election.

DAY LABOR.

In the first place, you know how persistent the trades councils, and the Dominion Labor Congress, has been in the demand for the doing of all costly sleeping in the cellar, where her father picked her up and opened her eyes sleepily and murmured:

It was not until later that she learned of her adventure and told what she could remember of the man in the mask.

A GENERAL FAVORITE.—In every place where introduced, Dr. Williams' Electric Oil has not failed to establish a reputation showing that its sterling qualities which it possesses are everywhere when they become known. It is in general use in the most civilized countries as a household medicine, and the demand for it each year shows that it is a favorite remedy.

SURE REGULATORS.—Mandrake and Pundell are known to exert a powerful influence on the liver and kidneys, restoring them to healthy action, inducing a regular flow of the secretions, and imparting to the organs complete power to perform their functions. These valuable ingredients enter into the composition of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and serve to under them the agreeable and salutary medicine they are. There are few pills as effective as they in their action.

shop for the manufacturing and repairing of its own furniture, the biological building at the experimental farm, conservatories on Government Hill, Major Hill Park and Rideau Hall, and it may be mentioned that the department has purchased its own shipyard both here in Ottawa and at Sorel, for the building of dredges and repairing of the same.

All painting, carpentering masonry, plumbing, brickwork, snowcleaning, etc., on public buildings, formerly done by contract, is now being done by day labor, which means the employment of large numbers of skilled and unskilled labor, directly by the Government, and not subjected to the exploitation resulting from the contract system.

I could go on and enumerate many other instances of the day labor system were it necessary, but it should be enough to record this fact, that the Toronto Trades and Labor Council publicly thanked the minister of the department for having expressed confidence in the union men, and in connection with public buildings at Ottawa, as well as having all such work performed by day labor rather than under the contract system. The resolution went on to assure the minister of the support of organized labor throughout the country in a continuation of this policy.

Now, so far as day labor is concerned, it has a firm friend in the person of Mr. Hyman, as previously stated all members of the Liberal party are not so favorable, and it is quite probable that the Government, Mr. Hyman would mean a victory for the contract system over day labor.

The effect would soon become apparent in the department, and on some ways postoffice and militia, where day labor is gradually, but surely getting a foothold and it would be small blame if in a city so well organized as this, the Government could not bring to the principles of labor were not appreciated.

FAIR WAGES.

In this connection it is necessary only to refer you to the Labor Gazette of May, 1905, in which we see the fair wages and the union men, and the latter claiming that the council owes it quite a large sum of money, but the peculiar circumstance is that it is through the board's own mistake that the debt was allowed to accrue. The matter has gone to committee, and it remains to be seen whether the council will pay the debt or leave the court to decide the question.

A communication from L. H. Harstone, barrister, of St. Marys, contained the board's contention. This was to the effect that the council still owes the board $789.39 over and above what was paid as the county share of the St. Marys school. The council makes out the board of the school had been making a mistake in its reckoning of the amounts due by the county, and has taxed the latter less than was proper. This mistake was due to the fact that the fees of pupils should be taken from the board's own funds, and not from the county share. The board had failed to do this. The writer had gone into the matter with A. B. the bride being Miss May, youngest

Mr. Ernest Atkins, accountant for Messrs. Stevenson Bros. & Baker, of cream crepe de chine and carried a bunch of bridal roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Alice Moritt, was prettily attired in gray silk, with touches of pink, and carried a bunch of pink roses. Miss Ella Harding played Mendelsohn's Wedding March with artistic precision and sympathy. Mr.

Will R. Jex supported the groom. After the ceremony had been performed by Rev. J. Clark, who is a close friend of the participants, the guests, about thirty in number, sat down to toast was proposed and responded to

VERNON STOCK CO.
SCORE A BIG HIT
Audience at the Grand Immensely
Pleased—Performance
Tonight.

An entertainment of more than ordinary worth was presented at the Grand Stock Company opened their three-days' engagement with a splendid presentation of the comedy drama, "Slaves of Opium." The story of the play deals with the love of a rich Chinese man, a high-binder, who flowers. The action of the piece takes place in San Francisco, and was well staged, special scenic and lighting effects being used in abundance.
Where all the members of the company were so good, it is difficult to make comparison of their merits. However, next to Mr. Vernon himself, who was seen as King Low, most of the applause went to Miss Dottie Green, who played Maggie Murphy, a child of the streets. This little lady is the cleverest, singest and dancing sourette ever seen in a stock company, and the audience last night could not get enough of her. Mr. Vernon moved with a grace and ease that was in the difficult character he assumed, was very happy. Of the supporting company, Mr. C. C. Sheldock and Miss Dottie Green played the parts of "villain" and "heroine" respectively, and in turn incurred the hate and love of the boys in the gallery.
Although, in the opinion of the audience, the play was not a circumstances be considered a good evening's entertainment, Manager Vernon has decided to extend the play to the drama, in which six clever turns are shown. The best of these is the Julian brothers, acrobats. Their work is not long short of a circus. Mr. John Weeks is the best soft-shoe dancer seen here in some time, and Miss Dottie Green danced and sang very well into general favor. The illustrations and moving pictures are new and well put on, and for good measure, Manager Vernon had his stagehand set a scene with the curtains up. This will be repeated at each of the performances of the Vernon Stock Company. "Tonight the Funst" will be bill, and a splendid production is promised. There will be a change of specialties, and at the bargain prices which prevail, the house ought to be packed to the doors. Tomorrow afternoon the Vernon Company will be seen in "Miss Hursey from Jersey," and at the "Military Night," tomorrow evening, at which the men from camp will attend. "In Montana," a great military drama will be the offering.

A communication was received from the property-owners of Queen's avenue
last meeting, in which they requested asking that the tar macadam pavement on the street be repaired. It was referred to the engineer to make a report.
A large number of local improvement petitions were reported as sufficiently signed, and the works will be advertised at once.
The matter of changing the name of Shoebottom street was laid over till next meeting. In the meantime the Shoebottoms that the land for the thoroughfare was decided to the city on the condition that it be named Shoebottom street. If there is nothing in the city records to prove that this claim is true, the board will change

the name of the street to Thornton avenue.
The request of the Bricklayers'
Union that when the city has bricklaying to do it shall in the future employ none but skilled bricklayers for it, was granted, the board voting unanimously in favor of the request.
The petition for a cement walk on the east side of Waterloo street, between South street and the river, was laid over until the board can see what can be done toward the grading of the street.
A petition from the property-owners of the north side of Queen's avenue, between English and Ontario streets,
for a cement curb and gutter, was received but as it was irregular, in that it did not ask for the curb and roadway as a local improvement, it was filed.

ALMA DAUGHTERS' RECITAL

Class of 1905 Entertain Large Audience at Dundas Street Church.

The 1905 class of Alma College gave an exceedingly artistic recital at Dundas Street Church last evening. A large crowd was present, and were enthusiastic in their appreciation of the several numbers on the programme.
The young ladies acquitted themselves creditably, and each deserves mention.
The piano solos were given with technique, and sympathetic interpretation.
Their programme was exceedingly difficult, and the memory work of the young ladies was splendid. Miss Walton's pupils recited well. The vocalists showed the careful training of Miss Freek, and were indeed a credit to their teacher. The entertainment was under the patronage of the London chapter of Alma Daughters. The programme was as follows:
Concerto in D Minor for piano and orchestra (1st movement). Rubenstein.
Miss Beatrice Harrison.
Scenes—Act I, Scene II. "Merchant of Venice." Shakespeare.
Portia—Miss Annie Joynt.
Nurse—Miss Elizabeth Stewar.
Aria—"O Had I Jubal's Lyre" (from "Joshua"). Miss Elizabeth Stewar.
Piano Solos—
(a) "Bourée." Chopin.
(b) "Chant de Noël." Rubinstein.
(c) "Valse in A Flat." Chopin.
Reading—"The Leper." Willis.
Miss Muriel Pottier.
Concerto in G Major for piano and orchestra (1st movement). Beethoven (Cadenza by Carl Reinecke).
Vocal Solos—"Berceuse" (Joelynn).
Godard.
Reading—"Playing the Society Belle."
Wilson.
Piano Solos—
(a) Preludes—Nos. 1, 4, 2, 5, 7, 20, 22.
(b) "Staccato Caprice." Vogrich.
(c) "Like a Song." Allitsen.
Concerto in D Minor for piano and orchestra (2nd and 3rd movements).
Mendelssohn.
Poses by elocution and physical culture graduates. "Rock of Ages."

the fog was too dense to permit of any shunting, there was practically nothing else for him to do than to push the cars in front of him to London.
The text of the verdict is as follows:
"That Albert Shannon came to his death on the 27th day of May, 1905, on the Grand Trunk Railway, in the East London yards, through neglect in observing the rules of the company, provided in such cases in question;
and we would further recommend that the Grand Trunk Railway in future make such regulations in case of fog, and further recommend that the Grand Trunk Railway do away with blind sidings that necessitate the running of cars in front of engines."

Special attention paid to spring wedding orders, Hueston's livery.

BLAME WAS PLACED ON SHANNON ALSO
Jury Holds That Dead Brakeman
Was Partly Responsible for Accident.

Coroner MacLaren's jury on the case of the late Albert Shannon, who met his death in the East London yards of the G. T. R., a fortnight ago, decided last night that the immediate cause of the accident was the neglect of the crew of the first train to place a flagman at their rear when backing into the sandpit siding.
The fatality occurred in a dense fog in the early hours of the morning, and Shannon was crushed to death in the caboose of a freight train, which was struck by the engine of another freight, which entered the siding from the east.
Last night the jury heard the evidence of the inquest, and a verdict was not reached until 12:30 o'clock.
The evidence went to show that, although there are no written regulations bearing on the point, it was the rule that a train backing into a siding should have a flag man at its rear.
Since Shannon was brakeman, and riding on the end car of the first train, the jury decided that he was as much to blame for not keeping a lookout for danger from the rear as any other member of the crew.
The fact that the second train had a flat and two box-cars in front of its engine, thus making it more difficult to detect its approach, caused some discussion, but the majority of the second train pointed out in his evidence that since these flat-cars were in a blind siding when he got them, and

ME TOO
The "Tail Enders" That Follow Genuine Articles.

It is sometimes interesting to watch the curves imitators make to get the public to buy imitations of genuine goods.
Every now and then some one will think there is a splendid opening to fix up something like Postum Coffee and advertise the same way and take advantage of the business.
An imitator is naturally ignorant of food values and how to skillfully make a cereal coffee, on scientific lines.
Such men first think of preparing something that looks and tastes like the original, with no knowledge of how the grains should be treated to prepare them so that the starchy part is transformed properly and the valuable nourishing elements made digestible.
Such imitations may be foisted on the public for a short time, but the people are critical and soon detect the difference, then the imitators go out of business.
Something like 400 of these little factories have been started in various parts of the country in the past nine years, and practically all of them have gone the "long journey." Just lately a new one has come to life and evidently has no intention of going back by copying the style of the Postum advertising in the papers.
This is a free country and every man who makes an honest product and honestly labels it has the right to recognition, but the public has the right to know the facts.
Postum is the one original and genuine cereal coffee made skillfully and for a definite purpose. It has stood through all the wars of the imitators, and the approval of the physicians and the people.
People who really seek to free themselves from the coffee habit and at the same time to rebuild the soft gray matter in the nerve centers and thus reconstruct the nervous system, broken down by coffee, can rely on Postum.
There's a reason.

SQUIRE SMYTHE DEAD AT WINDSOR
Well-Known Londoner Passes Away After a Month's Illness.

The death occurred in Windsor at 8 o'clock last evening of Squire John B.
Smythe, one of the oldest and best-known residents of this city, who had been lying at death's door at the home of his son, ex-Mayor James P. Smythe, of Windsor, for the past four weeks.
The sad news will be learned with regret in this city and locality, where the squire was a general favorite, and where his familiar figure will be greatly missed.
The illness which led to Squire Smythe's death began when he was on his way to attend the funeral of a relative in Michigan. Squire Smythe was taken to his son's residence when the train reached Windsor, and it was thought at first that he had been stricken with paralysis. The physicians discovered, however, that the patient was suffering from organic trouble, and although every effort was put forward to save his life, all hopes were given up about a week ago.
The late Squire Smythe was born in Margate, Kent County, England, 78 years ago. John Smythe, his father, served in the Peninsular war, and took part in the battle of Waterloo. Moving to America in 1822 with his family and settling in New York State, the squire finally came to this city in 1838, and after completing his education at the old grammar school on the court house square, entered the mercantile house of Lawrence Lawrason & Chisholm. Later on, deceased and his brother, A. G. Smythe, started a grocery business, and Squire Smythe continued in it for upwards of 40 years.
The deceased took an active interest in the Canadian militia, and served in the Northwest rebellion of 1855, as quartermaster of the Seventh Regiment. His ability did much to improve the commissariat system of the army, and at the time of his demise
he held the honorary rank of major.
He was for many years connected with the Western Fair Association, having held the positions respectively of director, grounds superintendent and secretary. He was a member of the Massachusetts fraternity, and in 1861 was elected to the city council, on which body he served for 16 years.
Deceased married, in 1850, Miss Clarissa Adelia Leonard, sister of the late Senator Elijah Leonard, and her death occurred in 1873. The following children survive: Mrs. A. Gillard, Muskegon, Mich.; Mrs. (Dr.) J. S. Edwards,
Grand Rapids, Mich.; Mrs. Caleb Wall,
Windsor; John, Detroit; James P.
Windsor; Deloss W. San Jose, Cal., and Frank and Miss Hattie, of this city. Mr. A. G. Smythe, of this city, is brother.
The remains will be brought to this city for interment.

OFFICER'S PLUCKY ACT
Stopped Runaway Horse and Saved Ladies From Injury.

The most thrilling incident of the present camp took place yesterday afternoon. Among many visitors to the camp were two ladies who were accompanied by a child, and drove a very spirited horse. The Twenty-seventh Regiment Band was playing at the time, and the beating of the drum terrified the horse, which began to plunge and rear, and then started at a lively clip toward the tents. The driver held on bravely, but the horse, now thoroughly frightened, became unmanageable, and continued its pace.
Lieut. Morgan, of the Twenty-sixth, was equal to the occasion, and by a great effort succeeded in seizing the horse by the head. The animal struck and plunged desperately and dragged the officer several rods, but Lieut. Morgan finally managed to sub-
