PREFACE TO THE SEVENTH VOLUME

$I^{*}$N the preface to the Sixth Volume of this work, published in the spring of 1901, It was remarked that the last half-dozen years of the Nineteenth Century, which that volume covered, had been filled with events so remarkable and changes so revolutlonary in politieal and soclal eonditions that many people had asked for an ex. tension of my work to report them. The years then reviewed diselosed only the beginnings of what the decade since las been developing, in movements and aehievements so varied, so numerous, in such rapid sueeession, wlth effects so profound aud so problematical, that their appeal to our interest seems the strongest that lias eome to us yet from luman hlstory. That the interest in them justifies this further extension of my eompilation of "recent history" has been made elear to me by the frequency of the suggestions of another volume which have come to the publisher and to inyself. In the new volmme I have striven to make a elear exhibit of all these strangely pregnant evolutionary and revolutionary movements of the prenent time, which are traversing all divisions and institutions of all society, occillental and orlental, along all the lines of lts organization, - international, national, munieipal, politieal, industrlal, intellectual, moral, - leaving nothing in life untoucled.

A few indicatons of the suljeects dealt with most extensively in the volume may convey some idea of its seope, and of the aims pursued in its preparation. For example: "Railways" and "Combinations " ("Trusts"), treated mainly as the sub. jects of regulative goverımental action, oecupy 38 pages in all. "Labor Organization" fills $0^{5}$ pages witi. the ineidents of its trate unions, 'n' or parties, strikes, mediations, arbitrations and industrial agreements. "Labor" . . ction" receives 6 pages, for the aceount of what has been done in various countrie in the matters of employers' liability, industrina insurance, hours of work, etc. "Labbor Remuncration" receives 9 pages, for the reporting of experiments in coïperation, profitsharing, wages-regulation, pensions, ete. Various dealings with the problems of "Poverty and Cnemployment " are set forth in * pages; similarly the problems of "Crime and Criminology" receive nearly 6; those of the Liquor Traffle 9; those of the Opium evil, 3. The development of organized work for "Social Betterment " is traeed in 5 pages ; that of reform in "Mnieipal Government" in 12. The "latee Problems," which are troubling many countries and peonple, are depicted in 15 pages. Twenty-six pages are given to the Educational history of the last deeade; recent "Seience and Invention" are reported in 16. "Children under the Law" are he subjeet of 8 interesting pages on recent legislation touching the young.
The contradictory states of temper in the world on the subject of War are depicted under two eontrasted headings - "War, The Preparations for" and "War, The Revolt against," in particulars whieh fill 35 pages. Of the one great war of the period, between Japan and Russia, and the trimmph of mediation which brought it to a close, the narrative, in about 20 pages, is full. The story of the late revolution in Turkey is told authentically in 9 pages, and that of P'ersia in 10. The abortive attempts at revolution in Russin, and the sham of constitutional government eonceded, have their history in 18 pages. The signs of wakened life in China are described in 12. The diseontent of India and Lord Morley: measures of reform in the

PREFACE TO THE SEVENTH VOLUME

British-Indian goverment, enlarging tite native reprewentation In It, are set forth broadly in 15. (ieneraliy, as concerns the IBritisi Empire, the interesting conditions timat have arisen in it very lately, ahling Soutis Afriea to the group of unltied Coloniul Ihominons, witich are young Jritish mations in the making, and druwing them ail into a deague with the "Mother Country" for organized imperial defense, are anply portrayed. So, too, ure the agitations in recent British polities at home, which have arinen from ar: increasing antagonlsm between jomalar interests represented ho the House of Commons and class interests intrenehed in the House of Lords. In Amerlean politics, the remarkable invigoratioa amd freshening of spirit which characterized the aiminist ration of I'resident lloosevelt are made apparent in a broad exinbit of their many effectlve results.

As was said of Volume VI., It can be said, I think, with even more truth of this, that it presents " Ilistory in the making, - the day by day evolution of events and elanges as they passed under the hands and before the eyes and were recorded by the pens of the actual makers and wit nesserw of tiem."

As an appendix to the present volume, a new fature, related to the whole work, has been Irtrolueed. It offers a eonsiderabiy extensive series of systematic courses for historieal study and realing, the literature for whieh is supplied in the seven volumes of "History for leady Referenee." This has heen prepared in response to many rembests which the publishers have received. Even for casual Investigations it will be found servicealle to every possessor and user of the work.

Nelther that protest nor the comnsels of friendship produced at that the the iesired effect in In Pna. and, far from rescinding the contract or making the hopel-for mexlitienthons therein, the ikolivian Govirnment conchided nn especiai arrangement for the purpose of hurrying the entrance of the yndicate into the prasession of the territory.
"When I assimmi the government lime was the situation, and in midition the inhahitants of the Acre, who had again proelamed their indepenclenee, were masters of the whole country, excepting lberto Acre, of which they did not get possesslon until the end of Jnnuary. Although since Jamary negotiations have heen initiated by is for the pirpose of removing amicatly the canse of the disorders and eomplientions which hare hati their sent of action in the Acre ever since the time when for the first time the Bo. livinn anthorities penetrated thither, in 1890 , yet the Government of La Paz has neverthelesa thonght proper that its I'resident and his minlster of war shouid march ngainst that territory at the lead of nrmed forces with the end in riew of ernshing its inhahitants mul tion estahishing the agents of the symbinate."
The Brazillin President procemied titen to relate that he hni notitied the Bolivian Government of the intention of Srazll to "diefend as its boundary tbe parallel of $10^{\circ} \div 0^{\prime}$ sonth, " which it held to be the fine indicated by the letter and the spirit of $n$ treaty coneluled in $1 \times 67$ : and that Izolivia had thenagrredi to $n$ settlement of the dispute through diplomntie chnnnels. "Lpon the Boiivirn Gowernment agreaing to this," he contimuert. "we promptly reestablished fredont of trasait for its foreign commerce by Brazilian wnters. Shortif after tbis the syndicate, by renson of the indemnity which we paidit, renounced the concession which lnd beru ninde it, eliminating thus this disturbing eiement.'

In conclusion of the subject, I'resident Aives reported: "To the l'eruvian Government we imve announedi, very willingly, since Jamunry, that we will exnmine. with attention, the claims which in due time they may bepleased to make rpon the subject of the territorios how in dispute hetween Brazil and Bolivha."

The result of the ensuing negotiations between Brazil and Bolivia was a treaty slgnedi in the following November and duiy ratified. the terms of whieh were summurlimi ns fullows in a despatch front the Imeriean Jegation at la I'az, December if: "Three months uftur exchange of rutifieations I Brnail is to pay nn indemnity of £1,0N0,000 and in Mnreh, $190 \%$, $£ 1,000,000$. Subsequently it was determined in Boivita that the entire inciemnity received from Brazii shoulid he expended on rairoads, with an aldi-

For tite settiement of the rumaining question of rights in the Aere territory, between Boinvin and Peris, $n$ treaty of arbitration, negotinteri in December, 169:, hut rntitiod with monlithations by the Ibolivian C'ongress in (Oetober, 1243, provided that " the high contructlng pirtiessubnit to the judgment moi decision of the (lovernment of the Argentine lepuhlic, as arbitentar and judge of rights, the question of limits now peniling betweren both republics, so as toointain a iefiniteand maplenlabiesentence, in virtue of which ail the territory which in 1810 helonged to the jurisdic. tion or dist riet of the Aucient Audienee of Charcas, within the ionits of the viecroyaity of Buenos Ayres, by acts of the ancient soverrign, may briong to the ilepoblie of IBolivia; nui nii the territory which at the sume Jate and by acts of equni origin beionged to the viceroyaliy of Perumay belong to the IRepublic of I'eru."
The case was pending intii Juiy, 1909, when judigment favorable to the claims of Peru was pronomiced hy the Iresidient of the Argentine Republic, Neñor Fignerois Aicorta. According to the awari, asnnmoune di ofticialiy from Peru, the line was dirawn to "follow the rivers Heath nud Madre de ilos up th the mouth of the Toromonas and front there a straight ine ns far an the intersection of the river Teluamanu with moridian f8. It will then run northwarisaiong this meridian until it meets the territoriai sovereignty of mother nation."

The Bolivinns wre enra, if by the ifecision against them, and rhotom nttaeks were made on the Argentine Lagation ut Ia Puz, the IBoilivian cupital, and on Argentine consulates elsewhere. Worse thnn this in offensiveness was n published deciarutlom by I'resident Montes of Bolivin that the arbitmition nw nrd respecting the frontiers of Bolivia and Peru lad been given by Argentina without regard to IBolivia's pretition that an actunl inspection of the territory shoulid be made In case the documents ami titioss submittel were unsutisfactory. "1hid this been done," said the President of Boliria. '"the urbitrator woniti have been conviuced of the respective possesslons of the two countries. It is incxpionble how the arbitrator, ufter exmmining the titles and documeuts, conld give such n decision. Ile passed over the elementary principles of internationai rights in awarding to Peris territory wbich had never been prestioned as belonging to IBoilvia. As n eonserurnee Boivia rejects the award.'
The insulted Government of Argentiun demanded explanations; dipiomatie relntions between the two countries were broken off, and wnr seemedi imminent. Fortuntely the term of Preskient Nontes was near its close, andia unn of evidently eoolor temper, Flidioro Villa. 7nn, succeeded hilm in the l'resitency on Angust 12th. The new President. in his message to Contgress next diay, while charicterlaing the award as unjust, snldi: "We must proceed rircumspectly, andi be guldei by international rights and the customs of civilized nations in slniflar cases. I consiller it rigit to nvnil ourseives of the means offered by diplomaey to obtnin a rectifleation of the new frontier line given by arbitration, this saving the ampromised jusenssione of bollv la."

With this better spirit entcriug into the contro-

This agreement was effected ou the 11tb of September, and lis terms, as made known In a despatela from Iklo de Janelro, were ns foilows: "I Ieru surrenders to Bolivia a very smail extent of terrltory lying betweuln the Iadre de I)los Inlver and the Acre, truversel by the rivers Talna. mato nul iJuymaro, wild toge iner form the river Orton, an afifnent of the Beni River. This territory, with an nrea of about 6,500 square kllometres, was diseovered and colonlzed by I3ollvians, who to-lay are in posxesslon of numerons prosperons indnstries there. I'ery gets pessession of all the npper course of the Madre de Ifios, from Its herd waters to its contluence with the river IImuth. Such a slight mollitica. tion as the foregoing from the decislon reached by the arliltrator in no way disturbs the Argentine IR"pulific."
As between Pern and Brazll the boundary question wns settled by u treaty signed at litio de Janeiro on the 8th of September, three days before the Bollvian pacifleation.
This probabiy cioscrs a territorlai dispute which has tronbled four eountries in Sourth Anierica for many years, and brongitt puarrelIing couples to the verge of war a number of tlmes.

Early, in the thind year of his reign the new Ameer began to slow signs of a wisb to have his eonntry move a littie on the lines of European progress. The IRusso-Japanese War interested him immensely, und heestabilshed a daiiy post bet ween Khyber and Cabul to bring speed y news of events. AFRICA: Its Coionizability by white peoples. - The regions habitabie by Europeans. - "There are threc ohstacies to the white race from Europe overrunning und coionising the continent of Africa as it has overrim and colonised the two Amerieas and Anstralasia. The first is the insalahrity of the weli-watered regious and the uuinlabitability of the desert tracts; the second is the opposition of strong Indigenons raecs: und the thirt, of guite recent grow'th, is a growing sentiment whicb is increasingly inHiencing publie oplnion, in Europe mare especially. and which forbids the white man to do evil that gool muy come: namely, to displace by fore of arms pre existing races in order that the white man may take the land they oecuny for his own hse. It is probabie that the see ond and thirl reasons combined nay in futare prove the more chective checks. Deserts, to be maule lubitabie and cnltivable, oniy need irrigation, and apparently there is $n$ subterranean Water supply mulerlying most African leserts which ean be tappeal liy artesian wells. The extreme uninealthiness of the well-waterel purts of Africa is due not so numel to elimate as to the presplnce of malarin in the systems of the Negro inhabitants. This malarin is conveyed from the black naan to the white mmn by ecrtain gnats of the gemus A nopheles - possibly by other agencles. But the draining of narslas and the sterllisathon of pooks, together with other measures, may gradunly bring ahout the exifinetion of the mosiuito: while, on the other iand, it seems as though the drug (Ciasise Beareabit) ohtained from the roots of a cassin lonsh nay ret as a complete eure for malarial fever.
"For praticul purposes the onive areas south of the Sahar: insert winels at the present time are favourable to white colouisation are the following. In West Africa there ean le no winte colonistion unter existing conditions: the winte man ean ouly remain there for a portion of ins working Iffe as an elluentor and adminlstrator.

In Nortin-East Africa, Abyssinia nad Firitrea will suggest themselves as white man's countries - presenting. that is to say, some of the conslitions fayourabie to Furopean colonisation. The nethal coust of Eritrea is extromely hot, aimost the inottest country in the world, hit it is not necessarlly very unhealthy. Tine lieat however, apart from the exlstence of a fairly abundant fative jopulation, almost precludes the inlea of a Furopran settlement. But on the monntains of tbe hinterland whlein are still within Italian territory there are sald to be a few smail ureas suited at any rate to settlenient by Italians, who, by-the-by, seem to be gettling ou very well with the natives in that part of Africa. But a European colonisation of Abyssinia, possible as it inght be clhmatically, is out of the question in view of the relatively abnadant and warilke population indigenons to the Ethiopian Emples.

Then comes Central Africa, which may be taken to range from the northern limits of the Congo insin and the Great lakes on the north to the Gumene kiver and the Zambesi on the somth. British Fast Afriea and Liganda offer probably the largest contimous area of white mun's cunntry in the central section of the continent. The Ankole country in the southwest of the Cganda I'rotectorate and the highlands north of Tanganyika, together with the slopes of the IRuwenzori range, oller simnll tracts of land thoroughly sulted to oceupatlon by a white race so far as elinate and fortility are concerned ; bat these eountries have alrimbly ben oceupied, to a great cxtent, by some of the earliest forerunners of the Caucosian (the [Bahima), as well as by sturdy Vegro tribes who have hecome in ured to the cold. To the northeast of the Vietoria Nyanza, however, there is an aren whieh has as its out posts the sonthwest ecosist of lake IRadolf, the great monntains of Welmsien and Elgon, and the snow clad extinct volranoes of Kenla and Kilimanjaro. This land of platemax and rift valleys is not far short of $\quad 0,0$ on stume miles in exterit, and so far as climate und other physieal conditions are concorued is as well suited for ocerupation by liritiol retters as 50.000 spuare miles of this Fast Ifrie:th territory is more or less in the occupation of sturdy Negroor Negroid rices whom it would be neither just nor cilsy to exped.

Tha only portion of German East Africa Which is att all sulted to Faroperan ettlement lies ulomer the edge of the Nomat-Tamimyika Platemu. Ilere is a district of iblthe more than a thonsem stuare miles which is not only elevated and healthy, but very sporsels popilated by Negroes. I fow patches in ther Kattanga district and the extreme southarn part of the Congo Free State olfer similar eonditions.
"In British (routral Africil we have perlangs 6,000 squarre miles of elovited, spirarely popm Iated, fertile comintry to the northwent of lake Nyasa mal along the roul on Tanganrikit. There is alsu lime of this deseription in thi North-East Ifloulesian province of lisitisll ('entral Africa, in Manikalimd, and along the water parting he. tweren the ('onges and the Zamberi systemes. Then in the amthermonst prolongation of l3rit. ish C'ratral 1 frianare the celebrated Nhiré 11 ighlands. which, t yother with a few outling mountain diatricf to the southwest of liake Nyasa, may mifar a total area of about 5,000 square miless suitable to Europern colonimation. A small portion of the liogumbigue prowince. in the interior of the Angurbe coast, might answer to the sime clescription. Then again, far away to the west, umblil the same latitudes, we have, at the back of Mossumedres and IBenguela other patches of white man's country in the mountalns of Baihmato and Shella.
"In South Africa, luyond the intitudes of the Zamliesi, we come to lands which are increasingly suited to the white man's oceupation the further we proced sonth. Vearly all Ger. man south-West $A$ trica is arid desert. but inland there are plateanx and mountains which somethines exceed 8,000 feet in altitude, and which have a suffleient tainfall to muke Enropean arricultire possible. $\qquad$ Abont two-thirels of th. Transvaul, a third of Rhodesia, a small portion of sonthern Bechuanaland, two thirds of the Orange ikiver Colony four-fiftus of Cape Colony, und a third of Natal sum up the urcas at tributed tos the white man in South Afrlea. The remainfier of this part of the continent must be considered malnly as a reserve for the black man, and to $n$ much smaller degree (in Nouth. East Afrien) ns a theld for Aslatic colonisation, preferentially on the purt uf I3ritish Indians.
"Counting the white-kkinnedi Berbers and Arabs of North Ifrien, and the more or less pure blooded, light-skinned Eyy pitans, us white men, and the lime they occupy as part of the white man's share of the lark Contlnent, we may then by 11 rough caledaton arive (by udding to white Ninth . Ifrea the other areas ennmerated in the rest of the continent) at the fol. lowing estimnte: thut about $9.0,000$ square miles of the whole Ifriean continent may be attrib. uted to the white man as his legitimate share. If, however, we are merely to conshler the territory that lies ofen to liurapean colonisation, then we mast emsiderably reduce our North African extimate," - II. II. The expedition then propeeded against Sokoto, where fecble resistance was offered, and the sent of the sul. tanate was taken on the 1.⿹th of Narch. They ure ahnost perfect oetahedrons of good water. The regular exploitation may be suld to have brgun in sroptemher, 1018, the total roeoveral before that date only amounting to $2 . \mathbf{i}^{20}$ earats. JoubertPienaar, one of the prominent Boer lealers In the Buer- British Wiar, is the authority for start ling statements eoncerning the eontinned main tenimee of slavery In lortuguese $A$ frim. He attempted to become a stather in that region and rehated subsequently what he sinw and heard during his stay in it. Of an experionee at the Island i'rineipi. he said: "The Eughish director of the cuble oflice took me to some of the eocoa plantations, with whhel the sloper of the hills are envoreth. ill told me that it was a terrihly unlucalthy place to live nud that Europeans eouln not exist there for more than theonple of months at a time, ant that frequent changes have to be innde, therefore, in the telograph wopartment. Ile toll me, further, that the suar before the whole oricrinal population of the islam had diel from malarial fover. and that tbe fullowing Year they imported five handred slnres, men nud women, to repepulate the inlmud. That was ten montha before mer visit. Pointing to five wonmen walking on the streret. he sald: "There are nif that are left of the women importesl, and only nbust a dozen mon remain.' I neked hin how they earries! on the work of the plantations. Ile said it wasiome by simply importing ala ves. from time to time, to replace those who had died."

Gentral Joubert-Piennardechares tlat he mever heard of $n$ single ease where one of these slaves had returned to his own eountry, while in the coast towns the abmormai proprortion of native women and children noticenble is due on th. fact that the mon have been sent as slisers to the lslands. The mothod of obtnining the slaves and of making the pretense of a contract with them is thus describert: "When any slaves nre wanterd in the islands, the plantation owner Infurmis the slave.tmders on the mainland. The South and Central American nations: Their recent rapid advance in character, dignity, and importance. -Among the astonishigs changes that bare come upon the political face of the world within a few years past, producing aew arrangements of rini or standing and new distritutions of Influence in the great family of nathons the emergence of the South American republics from generally chronic disorder and obscurc namportance to a position. almost suddenly recognized. of preseat welight and dig. nity and great promise to the future, is far from the least.
In 18, met, Mr. Elaine, as Secretary of Statc, opened the first tell-planned endeavor of our gorernment to put itself into such relations with them. of friendly influence, as the elder and stronger in the fumily of American republica ought to hold, there was little appreciation of the importance of the movement. Even Mr. Blaine did got seem to be fully carnest and fully sanaruine in it, or else bis chief and his colleazyles in the gorcrument werc not beartly with bim: for his admirable scheme of policy was almost wrecked in the sscond vear of its working, l, r the unaccountablc impatience and harshness with which I'resilent Harrison wrung humiliating apologies from Chili for a trifling olf ense in $1 * 92$. The seeming arrogancen on por then mentfesen cast a reasonable suspicion on the motives with Which the great republic of North America bad made overtures of fraternity to the republics of the South, and it freshened an old distrust in their minds.

Ilappily, however, Mr. Blaine, In 1890, had brought nbout the creatlon of a harmonizhig and unlfying agency whleh aceded only the in effect great results. Thls was the Burean of the Ainerlcan Ik.publies, established at Washington, by a vote of the delegatea from elghteen North, Sonth, and Central Ameriean goveriments, at on Internathonal Anerican Conferenee held In that eity in Mareh of the year named. Its linamedlate pur. pose was the promotion of commerclal intercourse; but the latormation spreal with that object, through all the countries concerned, has carried with :t every kind of pactic understandlag and stlmulatinn. The common aetion with comnuminterests thus organized mist have had more than anything else to to with the generathg of a publies splrit, lately, in the spanish. Amuerlian countries, very diferent fromanyever manifested hefore. It has wakereel matonalanbitions lu then and sobered the fictions temper which kept them in political disorder so long.
Ten years ago, the Ceutral and south Amerlcau republics hat so little standing among the nations that few of them were iavited to the Pralee Comference of 1 ! 4 ) , and the invitation was accepted by none. Spanish Ameriea was repre. semed by Nexico alone. At the emfereace of $1: 107$ at The Ilagne there were dellegates from all, and several among their delegutea took a notably important part, giving a marked distinetion to the proples they represeat. It was by a special effirt on the part of our then sec. retary of state that they were brought thus into the eouncil of ntitions.

Mr. IRoot has ham wonderful snceess, indeed in realizimy the nim of the poliey projeeted and initiated by Br. Blatine. ITe has cleareal away the distrust and won the contidence of onf fellow Anurieans at the midele and south of the emont nemt. bringing them to a friently acerptanee of the hething which gens naturally wh the power and the experienere these lonited Etiates. The resulting weislt ia worth polities of what may be eallent the (tonert of America. varalleling the Concert of Europe, is one of the enw.."ter products of the present extraordlany time.
Their Second International Conference, at the City of Mexicu, in 1901-2. - Its proceedi $\cdots s$, conventions, resolations, etc, The First Intrantiomsi Conferane of Ameriean lupublies was ledel at Washington in ther winter and pring of $1 \times 89-90$, attended by delegaters from "ishaten Govemments of the New Virlal. It was attemidel by delegates fromevery imlerendent nation then existing in Americh, heing twenty in aumbr: but the delegation of Vimonela was willurann by the Gegernacat of that Siate on the 1 thla of Jamary, ant the Witherawal was male retractive to and from the protecting 31-t of Derember. The delegation from the Linited staters was composed of William I. Burlama, formerly Envoy Exiraor. diuary and Minister I'laipotiontiary to the Argentine IRepublle ; Mr. John Barrett, formerly Minlster Ifesident of the Unlted Stater to Sianu: hinl Ilessrs. Charles M. Pepper and Volney W. Foster.
The following account of the work of the Conference and lts results is complled from the re. port male by the delegates of the Unlted States to the Department of State: "Señor Laigosa. elmirman of the Mexican delegatlon, was clinsun temporary presllent, and the Conference then proceded $\omega$ its permanent orgaization by the elcetion of his excellemey Señor Lic. Don Ignaclo Muriscal, milnister of forvign affairs of Mexleo, and Ilon. Joln Iny, Sceretary of State of the Unltel Stutes, hom rary presldents; Señor Lie, Don Genarol hairosn, fiexico, presldent : Senhor Don José II'y giue Duarte I'erelra, of Israzil first vlece.presldent, and Señor Doctor Don Bal. tasar Estupinlan, of Nalvalor, second vice pres. ident.

Under the rules adopted 10 vornmiltees were appointed and the work of the conference was apportloned nmong them,
"Diseussion between the representatives of the Republics that wonld eonstitute the conference began months preclous to Its opening upon the subject of arbitration, and while every desire Was manifested then and thereafter by all to see. a eoneluslon reached by the eonference $\ln$ which all inight join, unsettled ifions existed betreen some of the Republh :1, at would partlcipate in the conference of a dinater that mate their avoidaure diffleutt in any general dlscussion of the subject. $\qquad$ Thils ilificulty became more apparent as the conference proceeled with its work. .. It was tacitly agreed between delegations, therefore, that the difecussion of the subject should be eominined, so far as posilble, to a committee.

- There was at no time any remort favoring a trenty eovering merely arbltry tion as a principh: all dulegations were arblatin tion as a principle; all dulegatlons were in favor of that. The prout of dlscussion was as to the extent to whic) che priacipleshonld be applied. Concerning thas, three riews were supported in the conferrace: ( A ) Ohtigatory arbitationt, corering all questlons pending or future whe they thid not affect cither independence or has ma tional honor of a country ; (b) Obligatory arbl :rathon covering future puestions only and datining what guestlons shall constitute those to be excepted from arbitratiou; and (e) Fucultalive or wohntary arbitration, as best expressed by The Ingue enncution.

1 plan was tinally suggested proviline that all delegations shandi sign the protorol for adhesion to the convemtion of The Ilague, an orimimhly sugerested by the linited states delegation, and that the advocates of ohligatory arbitratlonsign, betwen themsetwes, a projeet of treaty obligatins the ir respertive sovernments to subinit to the perminent romirt at The Ilague all questions aris. Iny or in "risteme, hetwere themselves, which did mot affect their findependeree or their nathome! honor. Botlit the protocol and treaty were then to be bronght befure the conferenee, incor porated in the mimutes without debate or aetlon, and sent to the minister of foreign relations of Sexico. to be oflefilly certified and transmittel by that oflcina to the se veral siguatory goveraments. These, after a protracted cicbate on a point of order lusolving the plan adopterl, fater accepted In open conference a sointion which made tilen - as tiney grently desired to be, in another form than that adopted - parties to the protocoi. The project of treaty of compulsory nrbltration was slgned by the defegations of the Argentine lin.publec, Boivia, silnto Domingo, El Suivador, Guatemala, Mlexico, Paraguny, Peru, L'ruguay, and Vonezuela.
" By the above pian the conference nttained the fighest possible end, and for the first time eatrin of the Anericaa Republies, as a result of that actlon, takes her place by the side of the other countries of the world in favior of inter. natlonai arhitration: more than this, by the nuanimons neceptance thus of The Ilague conrention on the part of the 19 Ikemblies represented In the conferrace, it is given that force and character which places it to-day us the fornul expression of the governments of tine entire civilized world in favor of prace. The delegates of the Unitrd States believe, Donce, that $s: 0 \mathrm{~b}$ stnntial progress and a noteworthy und hlstoric step la adivnnce has heen taken in the interests of peace, and thut means hare been provlded ly which wars wifl be reudered less frequent, If not wholly avoided, betwern the conntries of the Wistern Ilemisphere. The openlng of the dobrs of the jermanent tribanal of The Iingue to aii of the Republies ef America, as this protocol hus done. is of itself all achievement of the greatest lmportaner. As a result of thls action the Amerlann lepmblics now have nt their eomanmal the machinery of that great international body for the pucific settleneat of ony dispute they may desire to refer to urhitration. lieyond this the obligations linposed by their adhesion to the convintion to have recourse, ins far us circumstances allow, to the goml oftices or mediatlon of any one or more friendly powers, uni to permit these offers to be made withont considieriag thene mufrienully, is certainly a point of great vaiue gained by ull.
"In ahbition to accepting The IIague conve tion the conference went further. It aecopted the three llagine conventions as priuriples of public Amerienn international wand atitor izod and requested the I'resid!er f the Bexlenn IRepublic, as herrotofere expl negotiations with the sever: ments looking towns the ma - enter inpon -in Govere: tricted application of arbitration possi, uhl the wiy for sueh a step uppear open. It aldition to the protoeol and trenty referred to, another step was taken In the directiun oi ihe settiement of inter. natioual controversies hy the udoption and signing, on the part of every eountry represented in the confercuce, of a projeet of trenty covering the arbitration of pecuniary claims. I'nder this the several republics obligate thenselves for $n$ perioni of five vears to submit to the arblitation of the court at The liapue nli clams for pecuni. ary loss or damage whleh may be presented by their respective eitizons and which caanot be nmicabiy mljusted througin diplomatir chnnnels. when such elaims nre of sufthelent lmportnnee to warrant the expense of arbitration. tholiti both parties prefer that a spead jurialletion be organizel, arcording to nrtlele 21 of the conventhon of The ifague thls may 'e dioae, and if the permanent court of The Ilague shall not be open to one or more of the signatury repubiies for any canse, they obligate thenselves to stipulate then in a speeinl ireaty tife ruites under which it tri bunal shail be ertablisheri for the auljustment $c$ ? the matter in tispute. and tive from of jrocedure to be foliowed in such rlitiration. As a suppie. ment to the protoed an, itroty ubove referral to, this project of trels, y is of great importance ani will most certuiry be of wile benefit to the prond relations inni intercourse between the Unitenl States ,und her sister ropuhices of this llemisphere."
" Anong the ntost important recommencia. tions mad:? by the First International Amerlean Conforence. held in Wishingten in Ixsu- 01 , whth a view to faciliballog irade and commonication butween the Americian krpublies, was that lookitis to the comsiructlon of min Intercontinental railway, by which alf of tike rapublies on the American continent would be put into rail communleation with ench other. In the instructions to the delegates from the Enitedi States, jrepared by secretary lkoot, this Wher admonition was conveyed: -
"It is important tinut you should keepln mind and, as uccasion sel ves, impress npon your colfeugutes, that such a confurence is not an agency for compuision or a tribumai for aljnulleatiou; it is not designed to compel States to make treatles or to observe trenties: It shonid not slt In fuelgment upon the eonduet of ung State, or madertake to redress alieged wrongs, or to settie controverted questions of right. A suceessfui attempt to glve sucis a charueter to the Conference would neceswarily he fatal tothe Confurence Itself, for few if any of the States represented In it wouid be willing tosubmit theirsurereignty to the supervislon which would be exerctsed hy a hoir thas arogatlog to itself supreme and lndethlte powers. Tbe true funetion of auch a conforence is to deal with matters of common interest wibich are not realiy subjects of eontroversy, but unon which compurison of vlews and friendly discusslon may smouth awny dilierences of detail, develop substantial agreement and iead to coiperation along eommon iines for the attaimment of ohjects which ali renily lesire. It follows from this vlew of the functions of the Conference that it is not expected to nccomplish nny strikligg or spectuculor tinal results: but Is (t) theal whth many matters whieh, not being subjects of eontroversy, uttract little puhiic attention, get which, taken together, are of great importance for the development of friendly inturourse among nations; and it is to make such lrogress as may now be possibie townat the acceptance of inleals, the fuil realization of which may be postponed to a distant future. All pro. gress towaril the complete reign of justice and prater among nutions is accomplishad by long and patient effort and by mnny sumessive steps: ani it is contidently hoped that this Conference wili mark some suhstantial alvnocement by ali the Imerican States in this process of developing Christim civilization. Not the least of the benefits anticipated from the Conforrnce wili be the estahlishnient of agrecable personal relatlons, the renioval of inisconceptions and prejullices, and the habit of temperate and klndly discussion among tbe representatives of so many IRepuhlics."

The following acconnt of the Conference and its action Is derived from the subsequent official report of the Delegates of the Lnited States:-

Tite sessinns of the Conference rerc held in a spaclous and ornate buibing. erceted espeeially for this purpose hy the Braxilian Government. and situnted on the superb new bonievned that for nearly four miles follows the slure of the Bay of IRio, nat at the end of the new Ivenidu Central. The huilding is a permanent one, reproiuced in granite and marble from the plans uf the palace procterl by Brazii at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, at St. Louis. It is surrounded by an cxquisite garlen, and, facing as it dies tile entrance to the nunderfully beautiful Bay of Rio, the building is a notabie landmark. The palnce was clatomtejy iightend and was the center of attraction day and nigit for great crowds of people, and nothing in counertion with lts equipmeut and administration or that eouccrned the eomfort or conveulence of delegates was left undone by the i3razilian Govermment. The Monroe lalace now lecomes a uational meeting piace for the pecpie of Bracii. It will remaln as au arlornuneut of the spleudid new lklo that has risen from the old eity during the past two or three yenrs, and as un evillence of the progress and energy of the Brazilian people.

- The Coufereuce was formally openel in the prosence of a lurge nad distinguished nulience on the evening of July 2:3, 1006, by llis Kxceileney the Haron dollio Branco, the distiugulshed Brazilian minister for foreign affairs. ## AIGENTINE REPLBLIC

A. D. 1905. - A revolutionary movamant promptly suppresaed. - A revolutionary unilertaking, in Buenos Aires and suseral provinces, hal its outhreak on the 4 th of February, hut was auppressed se promptiy that the puhfle disturlance hy it was very lirlef. I'articulars of the affair were ruportel by the American Min. ister at Buenos Airis, Mr. Braupré, as follows: "On the afternom of the 3 l hastant pumors of an intendel movement suhversive of the catabiisieel government of tiis country catne to tife Fienieral autiorities from rarlous partsof the liepuhilc. These rumors were at trat diweredted, hut thaily provel ao perslintent that the Dresideut and heals of the varions departmenta of the government procceded to take measures of precontlim. In the carly hours of the mornlng of the next day, the fiti Instant, the antlcipated outhreak came sinnuitancousiy in the capital, Itusario, Menioza. Cordoba, and Bahia Bianca, these heing the largest eities of the Repurhile and the principal political and nilitary centers.

- In the capital tife pian of the revolutionists sems to have heen to attuek the police atations and military arsernai, with a view perhaps of forcing the poilice of the capital lnoo thelr ranks and of supplying themselves with arms and munitlons. At the arsenai, iy a simple strata. gem of the minister of war, the maicontents were lured into the building and arrested. Alout the poliee atations there was some tighting, particularly at Statlon No. 14; hut the lusurgents proved unpreparel and insufficichtiy orgaalzed, sin that hy dawn the movement inad compieteiy failed in this clty. Exeept that many of the slops remained closed throughout the day of the 4 th, and except for the presence of armed poilice in the strents, there were no evidences of any revolutionary effort. Some haif dozen fa. tailthes are reported.
"- The prompt and effectlve suppresslon of the revolution in this city la due in large measure to the energy and judgment dispiayed by the Presi. dent and his niluisters, who spent the entire nigit In the Government House in council. Following, up the preeantionary measures of the ad instant and the actlve measures of the night of the al and 4 th , the President procerted at $8 \mathrm{~A} . \mathrm{M}$. of the 4th to deciare the Repuhiic iu a state of siege for a period of thirty days, to call out the rescrvea and to establish a ceusorstip of the press and of the telegraph serviee.
" The movement in Rosarlo was about as bricf and unsucerssfui as that in the capital, so that by the forenonn of tine 4 thi it was knowin to have faited ln the two principai eitics of the Repuhlic. Here there was also some hiond shed.
" In the meantine the real center of the move. ment was the city of Corioba, while serlous trouble seemed $\ln$ view $\ln$ the city of Mendoza, Where the revoutionists were said to be in a atrong position, and in the provinee of Buenos Aires, where troops and marines were aiready In movement from Bahia Biauca upon the capl. tai."

Forces llespatched to those points made as quick an ending of the revolt there as at the capitai. "The revolutionary forces at Cordoba had made prisoncrs of the rice.president of the ilejuhlic, Dr. Figueroa Aieorta, and other prominent eltizens. These prominent men they are reported to Lave propused putting in their van. guard unless concessions were made to them.

The plysical person of the ruler is, In trith, the same in both conntries, but the juridleal persoa. ality of the King of llangiry ls distinct and, as to the contents of lts prorosrative, whely different from the juridieal ?wrsomality of the Einperor of Anstria. Ilungary is the ohlest consti. tutimul country on the Furopean Continent. The roynd preogative iu her cuse is memana thon of the constitution, - not prior to it. -and consists ln such rights as the mation lats thomght fit to rest ln her king. In Instria, on the other bund, the cxisting constitatlon is a free gift of the limperor, and hiss coaferred on the perople of Auntria such rights as the Fimperor has thought fit to grant to th(o). The title of Bimperor of Allut rial IInngary '...[sometimes used ] is simply tansense. 'lohe tine-hallowed nhd II mararian crown has mot luen melted luto the brimd new Austrian lupurial diulem. That inperial title dors not contain, to any extent, the llangarian roval title. The Fimperor of Anstria, as such, his just is much leral power in llmugary as the l'resident of the L'nltoulstites has. lhe is. jurid. lea. lly spuaking, a forcign potentite to us.
()n these fandamental truhs, no IInagarian - to whatever party he may belonir -atmits discuscion. . The Iiheral party. Vanepuished at the last clections, does uot iu the least differ from the victorious opposition as to the princi ples laid down in these pages: it only ulvocatal It greater umonat of forbearance against the petty encruachuments whieh practically ohscured them. That policy of forhearmee beamo gradually distasteful to the country : seejnir It shaken in the pulble mind, the receint prime minister, Count Tisza, formel the whitpry ielen of gaining a now lease of power on its lehialf by a pirlimmentary eoup ditit. The mes of the Ilouse were broken, In arder to prevent future obstraction, chiefly against military bills. This brought motters to un aente crisis. The parliament in which that breach of the rules bad takon place becime anft for work of any sort, the country had to be consulterl, and down went the Liberal party and the lalf-hearted policy it represented with no hope for revirul.
'The army question, with lis ever recurring dimenhies, is a lighly charari riatice feature of the chronie latent contlict between the Austrian and the IIungarian mentality. It amounts to this, that, as we are a natloa, we mean to hare an armed force correspondlag to our astlonal in. dlylifuality, conminded in our tanguage, and aerring uister our thgs and cmblems. It woutd be unnatural for any mation, hal would be, fll fact, aa abdicatlon of the title of "uation, to remonnce such a national clalin. The Anatrians, on the otber hand, - and, unliappily, their In fluence is stllt prevalent fis this questloa. - not yet linving abradoned the leten of a purs Aust rian emplre, uncompromisingly alhere to the present military organization, which makes the German langrage ana the Imperlal cmblems prevaleat thronghout the whole army, its Ilungarlan por. tion lnefuded.

In Septenier, $100 \%$, the Fimperor-Kiar summoned the dblefs of the opprsing conlition to Vlenna and renewed his condeavor to mike terms with them ; but his own romithoms, relative to the army, to the lanfuage of commaml ame ser. Flee in It, to the tarlff relathons betwern Anstria and ltungary, and to other unaters of dispute, were apparently as meompromisable as theiry, and only intensitied the bud fecling in the conn try.

A little later the Fejervary Ministry maounced a programme of poliey whith otfered cencersions and many excellint nicasurns. but nll sure one of them were scorned. That one was a proposal of untversal suifrage, with direet socret balloting, which in both llumgary and Aestria hal mow beome a sulijent of wile popular demame. The agitation fur it leceme clamorons in the later months of the yenr. esperiblly in the Austrian bowns. The Fejorvary programme wis will planned to be troublesume to the opponents of the fios. ernment. While Hot surrenh rintr to thelr dimmal for the Magyar lamange of command in the IInngarian part of the Inperinl army, it proposed that the men who do not spatik that langlatige slowhd be trained in it as fir as possible. A. D. 1902.-Popular opposition to the plural vote. - Demand for constitutional revision defeated, - General strike in the country. - Substnntlally universal but not equal suffrage is given to the male eitlzens of Belgium by the Constlitution of the kingrlom as revlsed in 1893 (see Constitution of Belgiem, in Volume I. of this work). All have one vote, but eertain classes of persons, qualifica by property ownership, tax-piyments, education, oftee-bolding or professfoual dignlty, are glven one or two supplementary rotes. Opposition to this political inequalit: bad been growing from the first, until it multed the Socialist nnd Liheral pnrtles: a denind for the revisiou of the Constitntion, uot only to aholish the plural suffrige, but to iutroduce proportloaul representation and compulsory flucation. The ngitatlonattending this demand brought abont, In April, a general strike throughout the eountry of workmen in nll departments of industry, to the extent of 350,000 . The Goverument reslsted the demand, maintainling thnt the system of plural votiug had not been suffciently tried, and the bill for eonstitutional re. tlsion was defeated in the Chamber of Representatlives, after a bitter debate, by 84 votes to 64.

The situatlon was described as follows by Mr. Townseul. the Amerlcan Miuister to Belginm, in a despateh of April 19 : "The strugele lutween habor and capital ia Belglam has become extremely acute in the past fow years. A large industrial population, continced to a small super. ficial aren, with long hours of labor and small witres, hare combined to problice a feeling of discontent among the working classes, who, perhnps injustly, blame the existing Government for a condition of nflairs which may be due 'o economie eoulitions rather thm politleal. This Is a factor which may the largely responsible for the rnpld grow th of Socialism in Belgium during the past few Jears. Liboralsand Soclalists have combined to fight formiversal suffrage, and have raised the cry' one man one vote' as a panacea for the exlsting ills.
"The Clerkals mantain thant the exlsting systeas of pharal voting meets the present requirements of the eountry ; that It pheres a preminm ou erlucation, and aets as a check to the power of the fignorant, who are prone to resort to violence aud dlsorder. The more moderate Idberals In the House of Rupresentatipes expressed a willingness to aceept a eompromise in the shape of a total abolltion of the triple rote, grantlug one vote at 25 years and a sceond vote to married men of 35 or 40 years, with legltimate lssue. The Clericals, however, would not consider a com. promise and opposed revislon in any form.

" During the past fortnlght, while the debates on the subjeet of revision were being held In the House of Hepresentntlves, the soclallsts and workingmen have held 1 ightly meetings at the Malson du l'euple, and have frequently paraded the streets shouting for unlversal suffrage and 'one man one vote." The laheral members, as well as some of the sociallst leaders in the Honse, have cautloned the parialers to be ealm, to avold violence and disorder. 13ut the ranks of the puraders have been swelled by the addition of the representatives of the very lowest aud crimlnal classes of the population, the resnlt belng a ennflet with the poliee followed by the breaking of winlows and other damiges to property. Shots were exchanged between the geniarmes and rioters, several of the lutter being killed and wonnded. Similar scenes wore att the same tlme enueted in other towns in Belpinm, consequently the Government ealled out the troops. Order has been restored, but the streets of Brissels, as well as the large towns, are liued with soldiers, A general strike has taken place in nll the indug trlal ecuters of Belgiuru. with the avowed objer of foreing the Goverument to grant universal suffrage, but whthont success. The feeling, of unrest is very geueral all over the country." I'epers rclating to the Foretyn lulation* of the $U$. S., 1 $10 \mathrm{O} 2, \mathrm{p} .8 . \mathrm{I}$.

Belgian feeling on the subject of the ehnrges of brutal oppression lin the Congo Free State was decply stirrad, nud its eurrent ran strongly against the acousers of the ling. The public in gencral appears to have been fully persuaded that Interested motives were acturting the whole critielsm of Congo adminkstraton, and that the stories of inhumanlty to the natives were wholly false.

The revolts of 1393,189 i. and 1904 , menacing in varying degree, were oublursts fostered ly a central. ization of uational vitality which insplred the belicf in each insurrectionist that it was but ne. cessuly to strike the head. - the body would lle dormant. The justification of this belief lay in the historleal fant that the vast majority of suc. cessafil revolts throughout sumth America have couslseal merely lu coups détat. The masses hare laln dormant, and the fightlog, If any, has generally come after the somersanlt.
"The revolt of Niuvember of last year in Brazll was so typlesl of south Americau revolutions, anl so clementary, that it affords a luchd llus. tration. Owlag to the prompt and efflcient meisures taken hy the govermuent to suppress true reports of the disturbance, and owlug, too, to its signal fallure, this revolt ras scarcely mentioned by the American press. Nevertheless, It missed by httle causlag internatlonal commotlon. . .
$\because$ A great epldemic of smallpox led the government to require of Congress in law inmking vaccination compulsory. Long and heated debute on the constitutlonality of the measure weut on, while the ephdemle assumed alarnuing proportlons. The Execntlve's patlence being worn out, arbltrary pressure was brought to bear, and the law passed. Thls interventlor brought down the general censure of the press, and the opposltion seized the handle with disproportiouate avillty. Un the eleventh of November a mass meetilig was held In one of the central squares of 1 Rio Janclro. $\qquad$ The mulunted pollce broke up the mueting with the flat of the sword: no lives were lost. On the following day the scene was duplicrated, several people injored, and a life lost. By night riots had broken out ln varions parts of the city.
$\because$ Up to the foriteenth of November, revolution was not even rumored. . . . Toward evening city and government were genninely surpriscd by the news that General Tramassos, who was to have cummunded a battalion in the review, inmmeliately upon the: gnnomecement of its postponement liad proceeded to the Military Arademy on the outskirts of the eity, and, before the student bixdy, lat demaded of the olliow in charge tmasfer of hiscommand. Frlghteneal by the attitubleof the cadets, the commanding oftieer made a puerile protest, and surrembered. He and his statf were allowed to withdraw, and carried the news of the revolt to the dity. It was soon comtirmal : the cadets were alvaneing on the President's palace: under the leadership of General Travassiss. . . .
" The shortest line of marril was ulemg the bay frout, and to repulse the attack were scont by land a battallon of the line remforced by pulice. and be sea two graboats unter the phat of searclilights from an aruborel crusisr. "Such wns the comedy of (errors whleh will be known as the Revolt of 1004. The proceedings were contidentinl, and no report of diserssions made !uhbir: but the resulting reselutions, toretherwith thi opening address of the Cohnial secretary, and certala statements on subjects considered, are printed In n l'arliameatary puper (Cd. 1:93) from which the folluwligg account of the Conference is derivel:

Mr. Chamberlnin in hls address argued strongly and with fecliag for a polltical federatlon of the Empire, He sald: " 1 may be considered, perinuss, to he a dreaner, or too enthuslastle, but I do not hesitate to siry that, In my opinloa, the political feleratlon of the Euaple is within the finits of possibility. 1 recognize as fully as uny one can do the difticultices which would at. tend suchngrent change in our constitutional system. I recogrulse the varicty of interests that are concerned: the Innuense disproportton In wealth and the population of the difierent membery of the Empire, and above all, the dlstances which still separate them, and the luck of sufticient commanication. These arc daticalties which it one time appeared oo be, and indeed were insurmount:ible. lint now I cannot but recollect that similar dilleultins almost, if not quite as great, have lucen sarmonated in the case of the C nited States of Amerion. And diftienttics, perhaps nut puite so preat, but still very conshlerable, have her summonated in the fed. cration of the Dominion of Cannada. . . We have no ryht to put by oar acthon any limit to the Imprrial patriotism of the fanme; anul it is my opininm thist, as time goes on, there will be a eontimally growing sense of the common ho. terests which unite ns, and nlso, prorlaps, which is curally impertant, of the common daneers which threatell us. It the same time I would be the lat to surgest that we shonld doanything which could hy uny possilility |re consitiered premature. We have had, wichin the last frew vears, a most splendid witence of the results of $n$ voluntary union without any formal ohligations, in the grent crisis of the war through which we have uow happily passerl. The action ot the self governing Colonies in the time of danger of the motherland has prodnced luere a decep muln lasting impression. . . 1 feel. thercfore, in view of this it woull be a fatal mistake to transform the spontnneous conthusiasm which has turen so readily shown thronghout the Empirc into anything in the nature of an ohligation which miglit bent this tlme unvillingly assumed or ouls formally accepted. The link which unites us, almosit invisible ns it is sentmental in its character. Is one which we would gladly strengthen. but at the same time it has prover itself to be so strone that certainly we would not wish to substitutc for it a chain which might be galling in its Incidence. And, therefore, upon this point of the falitieal relations between the Colonies and ourselves, His Majesty's Govcrament, whlle they would welcome any ap-

Concerring preferentiai trade, the following resolutions were alopted:
" 1 . That this Conference recognises that the principle of prefirential trude between the Uinitet] Kingdom and Ilis Majestr's Donthions beyond the seas would stimulate and facilitate mutual commercial intereourse, and wombl. by promoting the cleveiopureat of the resmicers and indus. tries of thre seviral parts, strengthen the Eimplre.
"2. That this Confureace recognises that, in the present cireunstmees of the Colonles, it is not practicable to adopt in grenernisystem of Free Trade as between the Mother Country and the Britlsh Dominlons beyont the seas.
"3. That with a vicw. however, to promoting the Inerease of trade wititin the Empire, it is llesirable that those Colonles which liave not aiready alopted such a policy slimuld, as far as thelr cir. cumstances pernit, gire substantial preferentia! trentment to the products and manufactures of the Uniterl Kingdom.

The I'rime Mininters of the Colonles alsostated the extent to whlel they were prepured to recomnenil to their scveral Parliaments a preferentini tremment of lsritlsh serels: The l'rember of C'anada would propow: to contlnue the exlstlig preforence of $8: f^{3}$ per cent., and an miditional preference on lists of seleetell artleles-(a) by further reducing the duties in favor of the luiterl Kinglom; ( $b$ ) by raining the ditios agalnst forelgn imports: (e) by Imposing duties on certain forelgin huports now on the free llat. in New Zondmal the recommendation wond be of a general preference hy ${ }^{10}$ jer cent., or an equivilent In respert of llsts of selectedl artleles on the lines proposeil by C'anadn. At the Cape anil Nutal a preference of 25 per cent. Would be idvised, or its equivalent glven by increasing duti-s on forelgn imports. The recommendation in austraIla would be of a preferential treatmeut not yet deftned.

A resolntion was udopted favoring future Conferences at lutervals not exceciling four yenrs. Other resuhtutions roesmmended that a preforence be given to proxlucts of the Ennple in ull Goverument contracts, impurial or Cinloninl; that the privilegev of eonst wise trale within the Empire be refuvel to countrles in which the corresponding tride is eonfiued to ships of thelr own hat lonality: that a minturl protection of patents within the Empire be tevised; that the principle of eheap postage between the diferent parts of the Fanpire on all newspapers and perodianals published therein be adopted: that the metrit sytem of welifhts and merasures be abopted iliroughont the Finplre. BUDGET OF 1909, The British. Sre (in this vol.) Enoland; A. D. 1909 (Apmil-DEC.). BUFFALO: A. D. 1901.-The Pan-American Exposition. - Assassination of President Mckinley. - Vice-President Roosevelt beccmes President of the United States. In Volume VI. of this work, whiel went topress in the spring of 1901, an aceount was given of the plan and preparations maie for the PanAmericin Exposition at Buffaio, then just at the point of being opened, on the 1st of Jiay. The following charaeterization of the Exposi. tion hy a visitor is sufficient to add what was then said of It :
"They have staged eicetricity at Buffaio this summer, and they ciali it the fun-Anerican Exposition. It took a rictangle of 3.50 acres for the stage, and over $$ 10,000,000$ for the scttings. The resuit, baidly statet, is the most giorious night scene the world has ever had the fortune to witness. The staging of Niucara is the one unforgettahle thing abont the affalr. The PanAncrfan is, however, much more than this. . .
" It may le well to say that the original gen. erte scheme for the Fixposition, that of joining the three Americas in a unitied attempt to show one another their trade resources, seems to be in resuits far less prominent than was hoped at eomhlned scheme of substantial reductions in telegraphie rates."
first. For one reason or another, - I have heard European intlueuces in Soutls Aincrica given as a ehief canse, - the Latin Americas did not cooper ate as was expecteli. The great trade idea npon which the Pan-American was originully based gradualiy facei, and gave piace to the idea of an eleetrical beatifieation-for which the spectator will perhaps he thankful. There are exhihits, to he sure, from nust of the South American countries, hut the United States occupies industrially foreground, haekground, and mifdle distance. The other eountries fil in the odd corners. The andeut patriot will see no lack of proportion in this; and as there is a hint of Mexico and the Argentiue, and very crellitabie exhihits by Chile und Honduras, we have enongh of the sister coutinent to justify the name. . Nost of the sontheru repulalies are represented in one way or another. It is hard, however, to explain the insutheieney of Cannia's exhibit. It is upon much too small a scale to do credit to her great resources. It is worthy of note that when the other countries realized the importance and beanty of the Pari-Ancrican, they set ahout vigorously to retrieve themselves.
"So the staging of eleet ricity was uniertnk en. There was Buifislo to start with, aud Buffalo is hackerl in the creat ruce of American eities by the power of Niagara and the eommerce of the Lakes. It is delightfuily necussible and plensing. Here was the psychological place. It was also the psyehological moment, - a period of general prosperity, a time when America had set about her great task of making commerciad vassais of the Old Woril countries. The psychologieni ilca eame with eluetrieity, and under this lappy triad of intliences eonspiring for success the work wns begun.
"The managers took n hig rectangle of unused land to the north of a beautiful park, and welded with it the most attractive portion of that park for their groundwork. Then they elarted an ceffeet. They put millious into an attempt to please, and did more. for they have hoth pleased and startiod, - an effect peenliarly deilghtful to Americans." - E. R. White, Aupecta of the Pan-American Eirposition (Atlantio Jonthly, July, 1901).

The Pan-American Exposition may be said to have been paralyzed in the first week of its fifth month by the awful tragedy of the wanton mur. der of l'resident McKinley, while it entertained hin as its guest. Mr. Mekinley, with Mrs. Me. Kiniey, lad arrived in Buffalo on the 4th of September, for a long planned visit to the Expogition. and had acecpted the hospitality of its Jresilent, Mr. John ( M. Milhmrn. On the afternoon of the Gth he held a public reception in the Temple of linsie, on the Exposition grounds, and it was there that the brutai asvassin found hls opportnity for the deed. The following graphie nnrratire of the tragedy is from the pen of Mr. Waiter Wellman in the Americin Rericw of Ririers:

"So lonir as the American States liad free, fertle lands, it was aithrnl that population should flow into the Republic. - It is apparent that, even witi tire best business management the Enpife can appiy to the direction of its population, the American Immigration to Canadin will continue to exceed thr t from Great isritain. One of the most careful and solvernumded of our puhlic men with whom $】$ talked a few diays aro, a man who knows the West and for yrars has indintinate othelai knowlerige of the movements of jopulation on both sides of the borifer, bedierestiat In the next ton or tweive years five milious of Americans wili conte into Canala. Cjon this I pronounce no opinion, sare to ngree that the overilow from the Inited states is Hommi to inerease in volume. Naturally tiere are those amongst us who regard 'the Aneriran invasion' witin uncasiness, and foar the nlthate effect upon ourfinstitutions and upan the relation of Comada to the Enipire. In this eommexion 1 can only say that for some years I have been at pains to consult men from all parts of the West who shonld know the anind of tinese American settiers and their general disposition towards the social and political institu. tions of tice country, and ns yet lhave not fonnd a single Western (abarlian to express npprehen. sion. They ail ngree that, while tire Aurericans have naturai affection for 'Old Glory' and as yet may confuse the Fourtir with the. First of Jilis, they pay rendy ailegiance to the flig under which they inuve come to live, and very generaily agrec that the impartial and intlexibie administration of justice in Canads is in itself sutilcient reason for the permanence of the Britisil allegiance and uniouest loyalty to Canudian institu. tions. Winat may be hidden in the womb of the fiture, when many of tikese Americans sit in the Legislatures and in the Federai Parliament, and become powerfui in monlding pubiie policy, we cannot know, but at least it is seldom that the scedis of revointion thrive amongst a prosperous agrienitural popuiation.
" But it is to one particular phase of the movement of popalation that I desire chicily to cadi attention. The migration to the West has had a marked effect on the older Canadian proviuces.

Many farms in the long settied districts have been almost deserted. The oid remain; the young have gone. The only compensation is that the sons prosper in the West."

It has both advantages and disel rantages. There are few men of wealth or lelanre in Cs cimdian publle llfe, and generally a private party fund hus been providerl for the support of the leuler of the Oppoulton. The charge wan comronily made that as this fund was likeiy to be pruthen by the few weaitily men of the party they would exact compematlon in the form of oftelial appointment or leglsiacive favnur when the Oppowition ieader became the heal of the Guvernment. It was deeded, therefore, to give a salary, equal to the emoluments of a Mlninter of the Crown, to the iemier of the Oppoaltlon. Mr. Borden [iemuler of the Oppositton In Ontarfo for wane tlme past ) sanetionel this legis. latlon and accepted the remnuemtion provided. It was argued that ise thus bernme a pensioner on the forvernment, and that a sarvlic considieration for wha sainry wnuld affect hisindicpeutrnee and restrain his critlelsm of the paymasters on the Treasury beurstes. Mr. Borimo, while dia. presel mure tian onee to relinqulajs the salary. felt that this critielsm was undust, ned, knowing the grnve tinaurial distresses whicil some of hits prefecessora hal caperlencel, watterl patlentiy for tive attinck to exhaust ltseif and for opportioulty to prove that he was uot a deprentent of the Trensury. The real test whil come, however, if the suatem of Parilamentary groaps shanind ever replice the estabishaml two party system in Camala. A. D. 1906. - Honduras, Gustemala, and Salvador: War, ended by mediatlon of the United States and Mexico. - Neither the Convention of I'eace and Compulsory Arbitration signed at Corinto in 1002 by the presidents of all Gve of the Centrai American repubiies, nor the peace agreement bet ween four of them two years later, suffleed to prevent an outbreak of war in 1908 whleb involved the three states of Honduras, Guntemaia, and Salvador. Prealdent Roosevelt, In his annuai Message to Congress that ytar, referred to the war as having arisen from "trouble which had existed for some time"; but does not indicate the nature of the "trouble" : nor in any ilght thrown on It in a foug diplomatle curresponitence between the parties to it and the governments of the Unlted States and Mexico, which sppears in the American report of Foreign Helat lons for 1906 . I'robably nobody outslde of the beliigerents ever learned definitely why they feit cattel upon to tight, or what they had to settle when peace was male.

Seemingly IIonduras was the aggressor; but the affair secms hardiy wortb the trouble of any deep investigation. Its chief Importance is In the successful mediation that was undertaken jointly hy the governments of tbe United States nul Xexico, of which President Rooseveit made report in the Message referred to sbove:
"Tle thorougbly good understanding which exists between the Unlted States and Mexico," said tbe President, "enahied this Government and that of Dexico to multe in effective mediation between the warring Repuhlles; whlci mediation resuited, not without iong.continued and patient effart, in bringing ahout a neeting of the representatives of the hostlie powers on board $n$ Unlted States warship as neutrai territory, and ponce was there concluded; a peace which re snited in the saviny of thusamis of lives nnt in the prevention of minealcuiahie amonnt of mis. ery and the disatriction of property and of the means of livedihoml. ## CHILDREN, UNDER THE LAW

CIIlLDREN, UNDER THE LAW

City to hls plare of summer residence, at Freeville, a few miles from Ithaca aud not far from Auburn, N. Y. He found it hard to rule them, and no satlsfaetory corrections of wrong-doing und had lehavlor could be devised. Pbysically they were hettered hy their summer outings, hut he conld not see much galn in other ways. This eontinucd for some seasons before hls exjriments with them began. The tirst to he applled wiss a rule that such articles of clothing ant the lik: as had formerly been given to the boys must he paid for in work it the outset thiy resented the ilca; but hefore the summer was over they were all cheerfully at work, and the tonc of the party was muehimproved. In the next year eulprits. who robbed orcbards nud committed otber misemennors, were arralgned before the whole coinmunity. for a learing and a publie verdict as to their guilt. Hard labor at stone-bremking and the buildiug of a road now leeame the penalty for wrong doing, and, prese:atly, there was a boy constable to see that they did their worls.

So, step by stip, from year to ycar, the fabric of self-government and self-supporting industry was construeted, until the Junior Republic emerged. winl its l'resident and other exeentive oflicers, its representative legislature, its courts, it- police, its own monetary system and lank, a puliticul and industrial commonwealth of bors and girls (for hoth sexes bave been included), takenout of a dereliet elass for trentment by this simple inmorulation with social responsibilltics. The legislature bas been abolished by the eitlzens themselvis, and all laws are made iu town mect. $\operatorname{lng}$, which ls held once a month.
'The Republic has been in existence long enougb to give the experiment a fair trial, and the results justlfy thr' expectations of its friends. In round uliuhers, about tlve hundred have gone out from the Repuhlic lnto llfe. most of them taken from the class of hoys and girls wbose environment was fruitful of erime and whose ten deney whs toward a eriminal eareer. Of these tive hundred two or three are known to have re turned to crlme. and five or six lave disappeared entirely. But of thrse elgit or ten fallures not one was fu tue lepublie more than a few months. not long enough to get the benefit of the training. The otber four hundred and ninety are known to be earning an honest llvellhood by honorable lahor; and of these four hundred aml ninety, twenty have eitber gradunted from college, are now in college, or are just prepuring to enter eollege. At thia writing two new lkepublies ure about being organized, one In Georgia and oue in California. and a movement is on foot for the organization of a National Association."

Some months later than the above account of the Junior Republie there were reported to be klndred organizations modelled upon it in Connecticut and Maryland, wlth movements to the same end in Massachusetts, Pennsylyania, and New Jersey, as well as ln some countries abroad. Mr. Thomins M. Osborne, of Auhuri, who has been from an early day the cbicf supporter of Mr. George in lisis work, said recently in a published letter: " 1 believe that the suceess of the Junlor Republic idea, as we have worked it ont during the list fourtecn years, is no louger dependent upon Mr. George, its originator, or upon any one man. Its estahlished ptineiples will now llve on into the far future, and work the sure righting of thousunds of youngsters gone wrong in every section of the greater repullie."

But it may work mueh more tban "the sure righting of thonsands of youngstirs gone wrong." It mas, if its working widnens and roots itself among the instltutions of the future, as it seems likely to do, have a very potent and positive political influence in the worle. If men and wouncurepresentative of a class that is now tronllesome io clemocraes, politicslly as well as otherwise, should by aul hy be hroight in large unmbers yourly from gradination in the Foung lepultic trainine schools of lmitative eltizensbip, to be joincd with their eldera in larger splicres of nore entire self-government, are they not likely to introluce a profounder change ln the operation of repuhlicm institntions than can now he foresern?

Juvenile Courts. - Their origin and development. - A collection of repors on "Chilldren's Courts in the Luitel State's," prepared for the Interuational Prison Commission nud elited hy Mr. Samuel J. Barrows, Commissioner for the Cnited States, was publlshed In 1004 as Hong 1)ocimment No. 701 of the 58 th Congress, 2d Session. The following necount of the origin of the now widcly estahlished Juvenile Courts of America and Europe, num of thelr developmeut in the Uniterl status clurine the tirst four years of their existente. is derivel from those reports.

Commissioner Burrows opens his introlnetion to the collected reports with the following remarks: " If the question be asked, 'What is the most notable development ln judicial principles and methods in the Unlted States within the last five years?' the answer may unhesitatingly be, - The introductlon and establishment of juvenlle courts." Never perhaps has any judicial reforin made such rapld progress. Beginning in Chlcago iu 1899, this institution has sprung thp in cley after clty and state ufter state until It is now established in elght States and eleven large cltics. This progress bas beent made not merely by cbanges ln procedure or legal technlque, nor by the latroduction of a new methol; it is most of all hy the introiuction of a new spirit mol a new ain.

It must not be supposed that the juvenilc court ls only a smaller court for smaler offenters or simply a court holding separate sessions for such offenders; It represents an altogether different principle. The juvenlle court Is in life saving fustitute in society.
"It is scarcely necessary to say that chlld-savIng nethods, institutions, ind organizutlons have long thourlshed in the United States. The Northern States have regarded juvenile reformatorles as a part of their correctional equipinent, and the courts liave served as vestihules for such institutions; but they have only been Incldentally a part of the process. We have not before real. leal what the court might be and do before resorting to Institutions. The chidren's court still maintains rehations with the reform school, hut it represents hitself actlve and vital forces and inrokes a whole range of influcnec aud motives which are personitl and formative. It appents to the reforin school not as the first, but only as the last resort. The jurenilc conrt has diseovere 1 that the child is a child, and, as Jukge IInrley says, 'The child should he treated as a child. Instend of reformation, the thought and htea in the judge's mind should always he formation. No chitid should be punished for the purpose of making an example of him.'
"The methmia of children's courts, or juvenile courts as they are termed la some States, differ in different places. In some States the judge is detailed from some other court ; in some courts hut oue judge is assigned to this work. In New York scveral judges from the court of special sessions act successlvely in turn as judges of the children's court. In Diaryland and Iudiana the jullges of the chlhlren's courts excreise this function only, and it is clalned tbat it is better than the method of rotation, since the juldge who contines himself to juvenile court cuses becomes a specialist in thls work. In Colorath.Judge Lindsey is not only judge of the juvenile court, but also of the county court. Ife finds alvantage in the furt that in his first capacity he can protect the child, while as judge of the connty court he can also sentence the guardlam or parent who is responsible for the child's delinquency.
" An essential feature of every juvenile conrt is the probation system and probation officers. Their duty ls to investigate the case bcfore trial, and, if the child is placed on prohation, to exercise watcheare over them uutil the period of probation is closed. It is in this wny that the parental care of the State is exerted."
The City of Chicago and the Legtslature of Illinois have the honors of the origlnation of the Children's Court as a dlstinct creation of Iaw. The Visitatlon and Ald society of Chicago had ben fuboring slike 1 wit in steure varions measures of advanced legisiation bearing on child. saving, without much success, untli, as related in a report by Mr. IIurley, of that Socirty, the Bar Assoclation of Chleago took the matter in liand, iu 1899 , and appointed a committee to pross lt. This commlttee drnfted the first juvenlle court law ever planned disthetly to that end aud ... cured lts enactment hy the Leylsiature of the State. The law went into force on the 1st of July, 1899. The Court was soon opened, and Judge Tuthill, of the Circuit Court of Illinois, who presided In it froun the first, las stated the principles of its constitutiou and action in these following words:
"The hasic princlple of the law is thls: That no child under 16 years of age shall be considered or le: treated as a criminal; that a chllhe nuder that age shall not be arrested, indlcted, convicted, lmprisoned, or punlshed as a criminal. It of coarse recognizes the fact that such chilitren may do acts which in an older person would be crimes and be properly pumblable hy the State therefor, but it provides that a chlld under the age mentioned shall not be brauded in the openlng years of iss life with an Indelihle stain of criminality, or be hrought, even temporarily, into the companionship of men and womeu whose dives are low, rlcious, and crlminal.
"The law divides chiklren inte, two classes, the 'dependent' and the 'delimulut.' $\mathbf{A}$ dependent chlth, in the lanyruge of the law, is a chilid -- who for any reason is destitute or homeless or ahandoned, or has not proper parental care or guarlianship, or who habitually begs or recuices alins, or who is fonmel liveng in any hre se of ill fame or with any vicious or disreputalle person, or whose liome, hy reason of neglect, crnelty, ordepravity on the part of the parents, guardinn, or other person in whose care it may he, is nu untit place for such a child.' A 'dellmuent child' is defined to he - 'any child under the age of 16 who volates any law of this state or any city or village ordinmec, or who is incorrigible, or who knowingly assoclates with thieres, viclons, or immoral persons, or who is growing up in idleness or crime, or who hnowingly frecfuents a house of ill fame, or who knowinity patronizes any policy shop or place where any gaming device is or shall be operated.'
"The law places its enforcement upon the judges of the circuit court, who are recguired to select onc of their number to perform these dutics as a part of the judicial work of such findge.

The circuit court is a court of orig. inal and unlimited jurisdietion, the highest in the State, and the duty of holling the jurenile court was placed in the circuit court (rhich for conrenience is designated the 'jurenile court') as au indication by the legistaturc of the importauce to the State of the work to be done.
"The case of ench child brought into court, whether dependent or deifuquent, hecomes of recorl, and every step taken iuthe case is shown upon the court record."

Interest in the Illinois Law was awakened quickly in many parts of the country, and requcsts for coples of 1t, says Mr. Inrley in his historical sketch, "bcean to pour in from all directions. These requests were promplly answered and copies of the Juvenile Court Record, puhllaled by tbe Visitation and Aid Society, containghg the ueces $\sim$ ary information, were sent to applirants. Agitation hagan in niher States

Zor a Iaw similar to the one passed in Illinols, and those who helped to form the Illinois law were invitud to visit uther states to explain the measure and the method of administering the law in Cook County.
"The Illinois law proved so satisfactory that many judges throughout the country, not wishing to await the action of $n$ legislature, established branches in their several courts for children cases only, and in the treatment of the cases applied the probate and chancery powers of the court. This was the case especially in Deuver, ('olorado, where Judge Ben D. Lindsey had a complete and well-equipped jurenile court and prohation system hefore the legislature took any action whitever. A like court was suhsequently adopted in Indianapolis hy George W. Stubhs. The two latter courts were carried on practically in the same way that they have heen slnce laws were arlopted by these States. In most of the States the prohation offiecrs are voluntecrs."
Judge Lindsey, of Denver, has woll celehrity among the presiding magistrates of the Juvenile Courts hy the klindly slirewdness of the methods by which he has won the coufilence, the admira. tion and devotlou of the boys and pirls of his city, within the classes with which he has to deal. The sceue which his court-room presents on the appointed days when the delinquents on prohation come in a body to report to him nnd to be talked to hy him has heen often descrihed, and it scerus to exemplify a kind of influence that would go further than any other in resistance to the vitiatiug conditions which surronnd messes of the young in all cities. Judre Lindsey's extended report of his work and experience in the Denver Juvenile Court. puhlished in the collec. thon referred to above, is a paper of remarkable interest.

As stated alrendy, the Juvenile Court is now an eatablished institution in nearly every part of the Linted States, and in many countries abroad. It was estahlished in Great Britain by the notable "Children Act" of 1908 (see ahore), and was instituted that year in several of the German cities. A Press despatch from Berlin, March 15. 1909, reported the opening of a congress in that city, under the auspices of the German Association for the Care of the Foung, which ains at the extension of this important reform. "The lubors of the society," says the despnteh, " seem to have heen stimulated hy the passing of the English Children Act of 1908, a German translation of which has been distrihuted to members of the courress. The movement for the estah. Iishment of special Courts for juvenile offenders Wias taken up in Germany lnter than in some other countries, but aas recently made rapid progress. Thefirst 'shildren's Courts were estah lished on January 1. 1008, at Cologne, Stuttgart, and Breslnn, and there are now 26 such Courts in i'russia. Ofliclal statistics, however, indicate that in recent fcars the total numher of juvenile offenders in Germany has grown ahout threc times as fast as the total numher of offenders of all ages. During 1906, 55,211 persons under the age of 18 were sentenced, as compared with 51,232 in 1905 and 49,993 in $1904 .{ }^{\prime}$

At the merting of the International Prison Commission, at Lausanne, Switzerland, in 1007, it was slgnificant of the deep interest which the childreu's court has awakened in Europe that nineteen societifes In France. including the Acailemy of Moral and Politlonl Sciences, the General Noclety of Prisons, and the faculties of law of I'ar's, Lille, nad Mont pelller, and several of the most prominent trihmals in Frauce, asked to have the whole subject of the organization of chikiren's courts elueidated and discussed. similar intercst was shown lu switzerland and Germnny.

In an extended letter to the London Times published Augnst 19, 1909, Niss Florence Dav-enport-IIIll traced the origin of children's courts to Massachusetts, und gave the following account of their Introduction from that source of sug. gestion iuto Australia, and thence, to some ex tent, iuto Great Britain. Miss Davenport-IIII's statements on the subjectare, in part, as follows :

Although we heur little now from our carliest exemplar. Nlassachusetts - possibly hecause she has, I belleve, cleared away the cliss to he dealt with - it is desirahle to renieniler it was she who evolved the then new principle of nlsolute teparation of child from udult, and devised its potent supporter, the probation system - n sys. tenn affording wntchful and kindly help to strong and nngbe wilful wenklings. Thus did Massa clusetts heco: e a nohle example, making the way plaln for cer successors. Mr. Joseph Sturge, attrneted enrly in the eighties by reports of the 'plan,' visited Boston to invocilgate its methods. He descrihes in a pithy narrative sulase. quently puhlished how his highest expcetations were fulfilled; and it is i:teresting to learn from his pen that the prooation system hy which jurenile offenders are suved from inmprisonment has becn so successful, ceonomically nud morally, that the city of Boston now eruploys a probation agent to deal with suitahle adult cases in n corresponding manner.'
"A copy of Mr. Sturge's narrative renched. hy gool fortnne, the Chicf Justice of Soutli Alstralia, then presiding at a Royal Commission of lnquiry concerning adult aud juvenile dependents on the State. He recognized, and in his fortheoming report exponuded, the value of the Alassachusetts plan in its application to ehil. dren. The result was the croation hy the south Australinn Gosernment of a departnient, entitled the State Children's Council, conslstiug of 12 ladies and gentlemen nominated hy the state ns honorary meuncrs, tw, deal with erring and neg lected children on the lines of that plen.
" Ninctecn years ago the Chiliren's Court was opened In Adelaide, and in Oetoher, 1903, thanks, Slr, to your sympathetic courtisy, the repro. duction in The Times of a letter cleserihing it in the Melbourne Argus from Miss Alice Ileury mole known among us its scope, niethods, and snccess. ## As Workers

Canada: Child Labor Legislation. -

 " There is not in any province a comprehenslve act dealing with the sibject of child labor as a whole, and efen in Ontario. which has its Factories Act, its Shops Act, its Mises Act. its Municipal Act, its Truancy Act - all bearing on the matter more or less directly - it la il possible for young children to be kept at work hy their parents for mereilessly long houre under sweat.slup conditions. Prlnce Edward Island, Sas kntebewna, and Aiberta have netber Shops nor Fuctories Acts. Ontario, Nova Scotha, Manitobab, and Britlsla Colmmbia lave botb; Quelece and New Branswlek have Fuetories Aets, mid six of the provinces have Mines Acts. The sevvean Fuetorles Aats reseuble one mother closely. In wemeral, they prohibit the employment of girls moler elyliteen and boys uuder sixteen ia fatetories where the work is dagerons or talicaltiy: forbid the employment of ehildren under fourteen in any manufacturing establishueat (exerpt caming factorics) in three provinees: limlt the bours of labor for women and chiltren to ten bours a day und sixty hours a week; and spereify the amount of overtime pera :ssible for these classes of workers. The Shops Acts, npon the whale. allow greater latitule to the eniployers of childran: thas the hours of labor are ionger atad the comditions ofteu not lessinjujous than those In fuctorics. Except ln Onturio, no age llmit is set muler whirh a child may not berin work in a shop. Agrin by the Dlines A.ts of British Colum. hia. chilhiten of twelve miny he empioyed above groumid, and by tbose of Siskatchewanand Nova Sootin boys of twelve may work under ground. The enforement of the laws restricting chlld libor has, from varlons causes, proved somewhat lamequate. For lnstame. Nova scotla lias had a Factories Aet since 1901, but no inspextor of factories till the present vear : while Ontario, with a Truancy Act that, if eaforced. wonld present many children from engengiag in unsuitnble labor, has vested the appolutment of trunney oflicers in the municlpalitles, and these. in many instances, huve neglected to make appointments." - The Outlowh, Noe. 14, 1908.

Recent clanges in child labor laws in Canada are its follows :

England: The Employment of Children Act, 1903. - In Act "to make Better l'rovision for Regulating the Employmeut of Chilleren" leerame law in August, 1003. Must of the responsibility for a proper protective regulation of child labor was lmposed by this ennetment on the lonal authoritiess of the lingrlom. Among lts provisions were the following :
"1. Any local anthority misy make breisws (1) prescribing for all children, or for hors and firls separitely, and with respect to all occupatlons or to any speclifed occupation, - (a) the age beiow which employment is illegal: and (b) the hours letween which employment is illegal; and (c) the umber of dally and weekly hours beyond which employr ent is illegal : (ii) prolihitIng absolutely or permitting, suhject to conditions. the employmeat of ebildreniuany specitied ocrupatioa.

(2) A child under the age of elevea years shali aot be cmployed ln street trinding.
(3) No chlld who is employed half-time under tbe Factory and Workshop Act, 1H01, sbali be euployed in any other occupatloa.
(4) A child shall not be employed to ifft, carry, or move anything so heavy as to be likely to canse injury to the child.
(i) A ebild shail not be employed in any occupation likely to le injurious to bls life. limb, health or echucation, regard belng bad to bis pby. sical condition.
"4. - (1) A byelaw made under tbis Act shail not have auy effect uatll contrmed by the sec. retary of state, and shimll not he so contirmed untilat least thirty day after the local authority luve publisbed it in sucb manner as the Secre. tary of state may hy general or special order direct.
"13. In tbls Act - The expresslon 'child' means a person uader the age of fourtee years:
'The expression 'guardian,' used ln reference to a child, inclusles any person who is lhble to maintain or has the netual custody of the chilel :
"'The expression ' employ' und 'employment,' nsed in reference to a child, include employment in an: iabour exercleed by way of trade or for the purposes of gain, wbether tbe gaia be to the child or to any other perso:1 :
"The expresslon 'street trading ' iaciudes the hawking of aewspapers, mntches, flowers, aad otber artlcles, plnying, siaging, or performing for profit, shoe-blacking, and any other like occupatioa carried on ia streets or public places."

Germany: Child Labor Legislation and its operation. - The IRelchstag, In 1903, passed a new law for the protection of chile ron, concerning tbe operation of which n well kno vn Euglist student of social coulitions in Germany wrote as follows in 1908:
"Several significant facts may he aoted ia reiation to tbe protection of childhood ln Germany. The legal age of admission to full cmployment In factories and workshops is fourteen years, though on the production of effciency certificates cbildren may be employed for not more than six bours dally at the age of thlr eea, yet of the $5,607,65 \%$ iudustrial workers subject to inspectloa In 1905 only 10,245 , or under 0.2 per cent., were below fourteen years, and In some States there were none. To show the progress whlel has heen made in tbls respect it may be stated that ln $18: 510$ per cent. ( 88.000 out of a total of 880,500 ) of the factory workers were hetweea twelve and fourteen years of age. . . . At the same tlme there is reason to believe that a serlous exhausthon of juvenile strength tak es place in the unreg. mated home ladustries of Germany. Further, from the age of six the chlld of tbe people attends the primary schion for seven or elght ycars, and In many cases lif is required to attend a contin. uation school several years longer. In most of the large towns the scholar from first to last receives free systematic medical eare at the bunels of the scbool doctors. ## CHLLDREN, UNDER TIIE LAW

The thirteen year agc ilmit is fixed oniy in North Carolina, whilch excepts apprentlces.
The twelve year limit in applied (wlth excen. thons for the vacation months) to factorles or tores $\ln \mathrm{Cullfornla}$, to most descriptlons of regular empioyment In Maryiand, and to factories in West Virginia. It is appiled to factories, with varied exceptlons, In Arkınsus, Fiorida, Georgla, Loulslana, Misslsslppl, New Ilampshlre, North Dakota, south Carolina, and Texas. It appifes to factories, quarrkes, rallroals, and messenger arrvlee in Vermont, andi to factories, stores, and mines In Virginia. To mines distinctly It applles in Alabania, Florkla, Maryland (if the twelve-year ehlld is not whoily llllterat(e), North Carollna, Nortlı Dakota (In school hours). Pennsylvania (ln bituminous mines only), Sonth Caroliua, VIrgInla, West Vlrginia (vacation excrptill).
The ten year oid imit for iabor to be iaw fui was ouly in Georgla factori's, wlth exceptions for the linbes of whlows and dilsabied fathers.

As to hours of labor, ' sly states llmit em. ployment to 9 hours in one day and 54 in one week: - Callfornia, Delaware, Florlda, Idaho, Mistourl, and New York (applying to children under 16 In stores and as messengers).
" Treenty-four states restrlet work to 10 hours In one day and either 50,58 or 60 hours In one week.
" Five states, Alabuma, Georyia, North Carollna, Pronsylvanla and Tennessec allow more than 10 hours work ln onc day," In the hours per werk they permit.
" Those states which fall to restrict the homrs of labor allowed In one reek as weli as i:n one day lnvite the posslbility of seven days' labor. In Washingtoln, for example, women and giris may not only work ten hours at nlght, they may do thls every night, inelnding Sunday.
"Work at night is effectively restricted to the 16th blrthday in 18 states. Twelve states set an early closine hour for ehllilren under 16 years, New York ixing 5 p. M. ; Dichigan, Ohio. "Children have no positive immunl'y from night work unless the hours are exp:icitly stated between which it is unhw ful to employ them. The District of Columbia, 4 territorles and 20 ع'ates fail to prohlbit work at nlght after a definite closing hour. The sinister featire of this tist is the presence of Connectic $*$ Delawnre, Indiana. Loulsiana, Maine. Narylam, New llampshire, Tennessee and West Virghin, all of them Important manufacturing- states laving Industries in which children are employed."
Since the compilation of the above several states hare made important changes in or addltions to their child labor laws. as follows:
in Kentucke the age limit is rilsed to 14 years durlng sclool terms, cliblren between 14 and 16 not to be employed without eertificate from school authoritios. The hours of labor are limited to ten hours a day and slety hours a week, and aight work is prohlbited for chililren uuder 16 years.

work is prohlblted for boys under 10 and girla under 18 years.

Misslssippl has establlahed a twelve-year ilmit, $3 p p l l e a n t s u n d e r$ sixteer. oelng requlred to furnisli a certiticate of age and ednentlonal adrantages, and one from county health ollicer show. iug physleni conditlon. The tlme limit is ten hours dally, 08 lioure a week.
"New Jersey enactell a compulsory educatlon law, requiling schooi attendance of ali elillifen between the ages of seven and scventeen, except that children of fifteen who liave compietell the grammar grades und are reapularly eniployedinay be excused. This places the age Ilnit fur em ployment during the school period at tifteen years.
"In New York a isw was passed transferring the enforcement of :le mercantile chlhi labor law from local boards of licilth in cities of the first class to the State Labor In-partment, and providing for the creatio. of a burean of mercantlle inspection. This law became effective October 1st, 1J0s." It made lniportant chunges, affectIng dangorous employments, which became elfective October 1st, 1009.
"In Ohio an important measure was passed llmiting the hours for burs under sixteen nad girls under elghtecn to eight per day and forty. eight per week." - National Child Labor Committee (Generul Secretury's Annual Report).

Prince Ito, thc veterall statesminn of Japan, regards the constitutloual experimeut ln Chla with more anxiety than hopefulness. Speaking on the suhject In August, 1909, he expressed doubt of lts success, and thought failure would luperil peace In the Far East. His reasoning la brlef was this: "First - the enormons area of the Ennpirc and the defectlve facilities for communicatlon would greatly imperde the assemhliag of a Parliameut, espccinly in thene of emergency. Sccondly, the lmmovahle character of Chinese coaservatism forbade a chaage even of the system of taxatlou, notwlthstanding the State's urgent neel of funds, aud there was, therefore, still greater difliculty 1 ln effecting the radical alteratlons required by a constitntlonal system. Thirdly, thc Chinese were untrulned in local ndmiaistratlon, the lastltution of which wns an essentlal prelude to a natlonal Assembly. Ile said he was astonlshed at the silence of Oceldental puhlicists on this question so vitul to the peace of the Orleat."

By a protocol of Decemher, 1905, after the closiag of the IRusso-Japancse War, there was an attempt, between Pekiag and Tokyo, to detine the efferts of the Trenty of Portsmonth, "specially in the bearings of that article of the Treaty which ceded to Japan, "with the consent of the Government of Chlnn, the lease of Port Arthur, of Tallea, and of the adjacent territorips and territorial waters, as well as the rishts, prlviteges und concessions connecterl with this lease or forming part thereof," and likewlse, of "all the public works and property withln the territory over which the ahove lease extends": hut misunderstandings and differences of opinion were sure to arise. Whether it has thern more by the fault of Japan than of China that they arose nad increased untli, in the past year, ther became a serions estrancement. is a question on which the judgment of forign ohservers is contlicting. The veteran represeatative of the London Timesut Peking, whose friendship fir the Chinese is fast fixed hy long residence among them, lays the greater weight of responsihility 1 mi Japim, though he findsa lack of reasouableness on thoth sldes. Iapan, he says (writiag July 19. 1909), was weleomed in Chlua with open arms nfter her victorimis wir. "Xo nation ever had a greater opportunity, and faulty must have been the policy which in so short a tlnc has wrought so great a clange. Japan is now regarded with a coi-prehensive distrust that is most disquietling. Not long ago more than $1,0 \mathrm{MO}$ Japancese of different clases were. emploged in China, in schools mul colleges, In the army and police, in law and prison reform, Iu agrleulture aud sericulture, In telephone and electrle light companles, ou railways, and in many other cupacities. At present there are fewer than 400, 52 of whou nre lu Pecking, aud these numhers will he further reduced as existlug contracts expire. Siuilar reductions are noted In the number of Chlaese heing educated In Japan. Threc ycars ngo there were more than 20,000 ; last yenr there were more than 10,000. The number now is 5,125 , and only yesterday it was arranged that in the case of a body of 300 Government students just returned in China, only 88 would be seut to take their places."

At present each country, through lts Press, Is protesting agulast the unreasonahleness of the other. Contradletory statements on questhons of fact are made ou almost every point at Issue."

The main contention has related to the projected extenslon hy China of a rallway to Fa-ku-menn from the termlaus of an existing line at IIsin-mln-tun, west of Mukdeu. It was iu the agreemeat of Decemher, 1005, that no railways in compettion with the South Maachurian line, which Japan took from Ikussla, should be built. The Japanese assert that they had In view thls very Fn-ku-menn extension when that stlpulatloa was inserted. The Chinese declare that the ncgotlation on thelr part lasd reference solely to the area east of the Llao River. Japan nade two alteraative proposals for the settlemeat of thls question: "Oac that the Chiucse should huild a rallway from Fa-ku-menn to the South Manchurian Railway lustead of to Hstn-min-tun, or that the Japanese should bulld a rail way from the South Manchurian liue to Fa-kn-menn aad thence to the North, In which case Japaa would withlraw her objection to the Fa-ku-menn-Hsin-min-tuu rallway, provided that china undertook not to extend the linc heyond Fa.ku-menn without a previous agreement with Japan." China is sald to have declinet discussion of these proposals, but offered arbitration of the whole matter. Jnpan ohjected to arhitratioa without previous discussion of her new propasals. And so the dispute seemed deallocked.

Another dispute turned on the interpretation of a clanse in the Agreement of Derenher, 190., whelh reads: "China agrees that Japau has the right tolmprove the Antung-Muklen Kiallway so ns to make it fit for the conveyauce of commercial and Industrial goorls of all natlons." Japan undertook, as a necessary "improvement" of the road, to reconstruct it. With a change of gauge to connect it with the standard gauge of the South Manchuria and Korenn roads. Chima dended that the agreement gave a right to recoastruction. Severul other questlons arlsing between the two peoples have helped to raise lard ferling on both sides; but these lave seemed to be at the frout.

At length ou the 6th of August, 1909, Japan brought discussion of the Antung. Mukden Railway questlou to a summary ending, hy a note to the Chinese Government which mnnouaced that "the Imperial Government ls now compelled to take Independent action, and to proceed to carry out the necessary work of reconstructlon aadi improvement according to treaty righta" Before taking this declsive stup. the Japanese Governincut is suld to have coasulted

Great Britain and other powers, and to have had approvai of her action ftom London, If not arom elsewhere. Chinn yielded to the nitimatum, and this ieading cause of quarrel between the griat iutions of the East was removed on the 4th of Scptember by the signing, at Mukden, of a memorandum of agreement, reportedi in substunce as foilows: China agrees, tirst. not to constract the Ilsin-min-tum-Fa-ku-men lhilroad whitout consulting Inpan ; seeond. that haif the capital required to extend the Kirin lailrond shull be lorrowedi int Japan ; thiril, that Japan will be permited to extend the Yinkow and im. prove and motieruize the Antung-Mukien Railruads. to which China was bitterly opposed; fourth, thmt Japan may work the mines iu the Fushun and Yentai districts, und huve joint exploitation of the mines rached by the Antung ani Manchurian Raifoad lines.
In the Chientan houndary dispute Japanagrecs to recognize Chinu's sovercignty, while China agrees to open four trude murts in the district.
Iu a ietter to a Loudon journai, a few dars before this settiement of the Antung Mukden Railway question, Lord Staniope saidi: " The Chinese have surciy deeper reasons for opposing this stheme than the mere fact of reconstruction. They well realize that this railway, crosslug narrow ralieys, ean have no conmercial finture, but is sirtuaily a strateric rallway to strengthen the Jupanese grip on Manchuria."

It was headed by two Iligh Commissioners of distluction, Tai llung chii and Tuan Fang, and they Were attended by thirty-five scholars and functinuaries of note. They received much attention during their stay of five weeks in the Vnited States, and were placed ly the Government under the speciai charge of Professor J. W. Jenks. Writing subsequentiy of their mission Professor Jenks said: "The purpose of the conmlssion is, primarily, to make such a study of the political institutions of the varions countries visited that thes will be ahle, on their return, to offer vaiuable suggestions for the improvement of their own. There is even serious talk among the high officials in China of some form of a constitution. In consequence, the commissioners are as cager to iearn regarding the working of some of mur institutions as regarding their form of urganization. Inasmuch as poiltical reform nee'ssarily involves sociai reform, even as a condition precedent, the commisslon is devoting special attention to the stuis of education, in univervitics and schools, and to methods of social amelioration, in prisons and asyiums for the insane and the poor. Another misunderstanding has evidently given rise to the statement that Kharhin has recently been converted into an international con. cesslon. The coutracting partles never had auy such intentions. By reaso of legal acts, as well as of tradicions and conditions of a local character. under which Kharhin sriginated, it is clear that this is a special kind of concession, which Is distingnished from other concessious by its exceptionally liberal and (xceedingly hospitable regulations in regard to foreigners."

A. D. 1909 (Oct.-Nov.), Eiection and opening of Provincial Assemblies.-Beginnings of the jastitution of Constitutional and Representative Goverament. - The foilowing, from the Peking reports to The Times, London, narmates the actual beginning of the series of proceedings planned and promised for the graduad institution of representative constitutional government. The first is of the date of Oct. 14. 1909:
"To day niarks an era in the establishment of constitutional government in China. In ohedience to the Imperial decreses of October 19. 190\%. and of July 22, 1008 , ordering the estahlishment, within one year of the latter date, in each of the 22 provinces of China proper and in Manchuria and the New Domizion of provincial deliberative assemblies, elections have been in progress for some time past, and the assemblies meet in accordance with the regnlations for the first time to day, the tirst day of the ninth moon.
" The elections have taken place according to

- regulations, and halls have heen erecued for assemblies to sit wherever a Viceroy or a t, vernor has his seat. The number of members varies from 140 in Chih li, 114 in Che-kiang. to 30 each in Kirin, Lehlnn chiang, and Hsin kiang . The incomplete returns which have heen pilh. lished show nearly 1,000 voters for each repre. sentative.
"For wecks pas, remorts hare been coming in from provincial autho..cies asking for instruc. tions and information conccraing this new departure. An edict issued last night renewa the lmperial admonitions to membera of the assem. lities as to their deliberations, and to Viceroys and (invernors as to their supurvision of the delihera. tiuns, and exhorts all todisplay a foyal patriotiam suthat the country may atiain strengthand prosprrity. Thi event may he one of great historical importance."
The next was sent from Peking on the 6ith of the folluwing November:
- Already, in the opening elehates of these Provincial Assemblies. one alprehends the coming chaos, one hears the ars; whlopering of the approaching atornt. Peking, prisupied in ignorance and petrified in recdio val statecraft, trifies with Demos at its lloors, c, vidently hoping that the Assemhlien will cone me their own smoke. ami that the Mandurin II by be preserved hy the time honoured deviee o holding the balance hetween contending classes. But the spirits which the Vermilion Pencil has called from the Celestiai deep, though elected with all ponsible precautions of 'silkccated' franchise, and under the clofe lirection of Viceroys and C vernora, show signs of scant respect for he Central Government and of little sympathy for ita dificulties. Alrcady, wlthin a fortnight of their hirth, many of the Assemblies have passed resolutions denouncins; several of the Government's pet proposcis - $\because g$, the opium monopoly, the stanip tax, arn the foreign loan for the Itankan-Canton and Ihioknu-Szechuan Railways. In the case of the stamp tax, 15 provinces have cxpressed the opiniou, and bave induced the local officials in many cases to endorse it, that the proposed levy is impracticable, so that, In the words of the native Press, 'its impos'tion is deferred and the Ministry of Finance is at its wits' end." Concern. Ing the vered question of the raliway loan, the Ilupei Assembly is reported to have endorsed, without a ''issentient, their chairman's declara. tion that $\therefore$ : Government's scheme shouid be resisted 'tu the death.'
"The spirit which animates these Assemhies is evidently very similar to that which speaks through the vernacnlar Pruss; fon whastic, pa-triotic-in the sense that it denounces everything foreign - hut lackir.f, so far, in intelligent leadership and constructive policy Their attitude towards the Central Government is generally one of scarcely veiled contempt. I cannot flhstrate hetter Its general tendency than in the woris of a native journalist who, in a recent criticism of the Grand Council, congratulated these rniera of China on their remarkable longevity, hut ohserved that 'there is little hope of longevity for an Empire that is governed hy sucb incompetent survivals.'

A few weeks later, after the forty days' sesslon of the new I'rovincial Assemblies had ended, this writer und changed his view. Writing on the 22d of December, he said: "A stindy of the reports of the proceedings so far availahie of the first session of the Provincial Assemhlies supports the contention that the Throne has been justified in granting the suhjects c' the Empire a limited right of speech througb their chosen representatives. The programmes of dehate have been strictly in accordance with the Imperial edict, and the proceedings have heen marked with dig. nity and decorum. The net result justities the declaration made hy a high authority, who has been given special opportunity of forming a judgment, that the ' memhers have fulfilled their appointed task of working in harmony with the execntive authoritios in the interests of their respective provinces.

partiy under Japanese control, and which looked, also, to an interuational undertaking of the coustruction of a Chinciow-Aigun linc, to tap the Rasalan Transsiberian roal at Taitshar. In a publishedstatement subserucntiy, the American Secretsry of State, Mr. Knox, cxplained tinat his Government, duing the recent railway lonn pegotiations, inai pointed out to the interested Powers that tife greatest dauger to the policy of the open duor in ('hina and the development of her forelgn trade arose from disagreements among the great Western nutions, and had ex. pressed the opinion that nothing wouid afford so impressive an object-iesson to Ching and the world is the spectincle of the four great capitailst nations-Great Britaln. Germany, France, and the C"nired States - standing togetier for cquai. ity of commercial opportnaity. The American Government believed that one of the most effect. Ire steps to tisls end in order to secure for China tire enjoyment of ail political rights in Manchu. rianal to promote the normai development of the Eastern provinces was to take the Jinnchurian railruals out of Eastern politics and to piace them under an economic and impartial adminis. tration by vesting in China iherself the ownership of the niliways. Sucis a policy wonid require the cominnatlon, not oniy of China, hut of Inussia adi Japan, hoth of whom it would cnahie to shift their onerous responsihilities in connexion with those railways on to the shouiders of the combinei Powers, incinding thenscives, and would effect a complete commercial neutraliza. tion of Manchuria.
The proposal of a nentrulization of the existing Danchurian railways was not received whth favor in cither Jipua or Russia, and the other Powers conccined have manifested a disposition to defer to the view taken by those two Govern. ments, which are mont immerliateiy touched by it. The position of lic Japanese Government on tife question was suated pubiiciy in sn address us the Dict on the 27th of January by Baro: Konnura, Minister for Foreign Aflairs, who asid:

- The United states government recentiy proposed a pian regarding the neutralization of Manclurian raiiwaye. The Imperimi government, in vlew of the important Japanese interests in. volved, and considering that the proposal came from a friendiy Power with which the empire was on terms of ciose intimacy, suhmitted the yuestion to, the inost carefui examination. While determince to adhere scrupulously is the policy of the open door and equai opportunity, it should bcr sognized thet the realization of the proposed plan would iaroive radical char pes in the condifion of affurs in Manchuia wifich were established hy the treaties of $P$ rtsmouth and Peking. Tine change must he ntte: ded hy serious consequences. In the region affected hy the South Jinchurian Railway numerous underiakings isave been promoted in the belief that the radi. way would remain in our possession. At a con sequence, the imperial governmeut, with regret, Was obliged to nnnounce its inability to consent to the proponal. I trust that the Cinited States will appreciate our position and that the other Powers will equaily recognize the justice of Japan's attitudc."

Tlic Russian Government is understond io have taken substantially the sume ground. ou the general question of a ncutralization of Mau ciurian rallways. There and clsewilsere, however, there is said to be a readiness to consider the in cidentrl proposition of an internationally financed Chinchow-ligun road.

Unit :d States: A. " One of the first aets of Prcsident liooseselt was the reorganization of he civil service commission. Whileh, under the admulnistration of Preshlent Mrkinkey, had become lax and Ineffertive. since then the enfercement of the law und rules by the commission has been sincere, vigorons mid lmpartial. Partlenlarly strict has heen the enforcement of the prohibithon agalust pulitical asseasments. Twice ln the milst of politieal campalgus has the President orliced the removal of prominent offleials for le ying assesments on their subordinates.
 velt has extended the scope of eompetition to many new and Intportant ofllees. Notable among these extensions have leecn the restoration of the field servier of the Wiar Department (withdrawn by l'resident Mckinley) and the elassification of the rural frec delirery servlce (now numbering some to, (hw), the forestry servicc, dephty entlectors of hitermal revenne, depnty collectors of customs, deputy naval offlecrs. and cashiers nud thance clerks in post oflless. His latest nud most striking extension has been the classificatlon of

He has by vetolng the Crumpacker census Gill tefeated the attempt by Congress tu ohtain as spolls some 4,000 clerkships for the next cenmis.

- This is a brlef recoriof Preshdent IRonsevelt's service to civil servlee reform during his alministration. In conshifering the criticisus of his cours: whleh have been made frnm the to thme: by the League ant the press, thls servico shoukl be kept In mind and corefully weighed. For instance, agalist thls reconl of constant advance. ment, the suspension nf the rules la individual cases - In all about $3: 0$ - although in our oplnlon arbitrary and dangerons as precedents, are of compuratively minor importance. A few have been male for political reasons; the far grenter number, frowever, were acts of charity or persomal impulse, ani Progident Romsevelt blnialf reallzad the danger in this practlee and took steps to curtail 1 l .

In passing on the justlce of the other criti. cisms of President Itoosevelt's cours. regarding the civil servlee one shonld keep In mind the distinction which lie has so sharply drawn be tween the classified and the unclassitleal service. This is clearly set forth in $n$ reply tn a letter from the civil service commission enllng his attention to the omlssion from the postal regulathons of Preshicnt (leveland's 'pernlefous ar theliy' order, null quoting a passage from the 1 th report of the commlssion. President hooserelt salif: 'I personally drew the paragraph which son quote. The pamgraph was drawn with a view to making a sharp line bet we a the aetivits nllowel to puble servants withln the chasified service and those whlthout the chasslfied service - the latter untier our system ary as a rule chosen Inrgely with reference to political consid. rations. and as at rule nre, noll expect io be, ehamed with the change of partics. sermell to me at the time. and I still think, that the line thus drawn wis wiee mal preper."
"In considering such app-intments on pasttions in the unclasifiet service is that of James (C. Charksion as surwe or of the Piatt of Xiow York for instance, a just analysiv must tuke inte, account these frankly expresetd views. I'red. dint limserelt drew a line betwern the classithol and unclussitried service. and as to the latter rerognized and nvailed himself to some evtent of existling conditions. He believelt that so long as positions remnined in the anclnssificd serrice it was impractleal to climinate polltical ronsiderations and that nuy nttempt to do so led to hepocrisy. Ilis remely was to place the positions in the classtied s.rvice. wherever practleable. And he has extembil the line of the classified service higher than ever hefore. The League does not ieliere this theory is ideal, hut in carrying it ous the Prisident has certainly not sut the reform back. Critielsm basen only on the fact that one who has renderel great service to a cause has not accomplished all that lta nrdent supporters wish to accomplish can be properly set down as captions.

In June following this important enactment, the Secretnry if state, Mr Root, submitted to I'reshient linseveit the draft of a recommended executice order, which prescribetl new rules to he followed in filting the consulne offices, ns classified hy the recent Act. In dolng so. the Secretary made this explanation : .' The main features of the order were emioodled In the carly forus of the Consular lieorganization Bill pnssicl at this ses don of Congress, hat they were irrupped out, larycly for the reason that their fnactment by Cougresa woutid npleat on be an infringement upon the President's constitutional power to appoint consuls. Your adoptioc of these rules by executive order will lwe free from that objec thon, and judging from the very pomblive eommendation whiteh many memberin of both Inuses have expresmed for the propomed elange in the methoul nf appolnting consuls. I do not douht that the new aystem will secclve the hearty approval of the Nemate and of C'ongreme whenever vecasion nay arise for an expreasion upon the subject.'

A. D. 890\%. - Extension of the Merit Syetem to newrly one-third of the Fourth Cises Postmasters of the country. - In the Annuai Ifeport of the Couneli of the Nathonal Civil Ser. vice Reform League, presentell at the annuai meeting of the League in December, 1906, it wus sald: "The great event of the year, whiein soaptiy eommenorates the 25th anniversary of the passage of tite Pendicton bili. is the extension of the competitive system to ali fourth ciass postmasters in the part of the eountry north of tie Ohio and east of the Misgiasippl, that is, ita the New England Stutus, New York, New Jerney. Pennaylvania, Ohin, indlana, ILinols, Wisconsin, and Michigan. Thisis an extension covering more positlons than suggested by the civil service commission. It is an extension iarge enongh to be of present ad. vantage, is made in the more thickiy settied porthons of the eountry, where it is easiest to carry it out, and yet it is not on so large a scale as to invite mistakes or perhsps partial faliure. This extension coversabout 15,000 positions. The orier of i'readent Cleveland of May 26, 1896 [see, in Volume VI. of this work, Civil SERVICE: ResFoim: Listed States], covered about 31,000 places; and yet, from the point of poilticai sig. ultrance, this present extension is the most ini. portant, we believe, in the history of civil serFice reform since January 16, 1898, and when Its purpone is filly carried out it whii inciude - me 53.0000 places.

The report then reviewed the efforts that had heen in progress sinee 1889, with the support of Presidents C'ievciand and Rooseveit, to hriag about the inciusion of this ciass of postmasters, at the ieast, under the rule of appointment suls. ject to competitive examination. President Rowserelt, in his annual Message of 1007 , hail said "The fourth-ciass postmasters' convention has ed a very strong resolution in favor of piacing the fourth-elass postunsters under the civilservice law. The Administration has already put into enfeet the poiicy of refusing to remore any fourth-class postmasters save for reasons connected with the good of the servies: and it is endeavoring so far as possible to rimore them from the domain of jurtisan joiltics. It would be a most desirahie thing to put the fourthelass postmasters in the cinssitied serviee. It is possible that this might be dione without Congressionai action, but, as the matter is debatahle. I earnestly recommend that the Conereas enact a law providing that they be included under the elvisurvice law and put in the cinssified serrice."

These last mentioned sucecsses of Cribe. U'ribe had no permanent effectiveness, for his surrender, whtii 1300 men and 10 pleees of artillery, was announced presently as having occurred on the 25 th of October, 1802. It seemed unfortunate that he did not sueceed in overthrowing the Conservatives, or "Blues," who held the government, since most accounts of their rule represented lt as hopelessiy bad; but a change for the better came without revolution after no long time.

A. D. 1903-1906. - Feeling toward the United States. - Of the feeling in Colombia toward the L'aited States, consequeut on what oceurred in Panama, Mr. Barrett, American Minlster at Bogotá, reported in 1908 as follows:
The question is continualiy asked nue: What is the attlturle of the Colombian Goverament and people toward Americans and American in. terests on account of the I'anama affair ? Without entering upon any political discussion, 1 wish, la answering this pertinent inquiry, to take advantage of the opportunity to pay a just and frank tribute to Colombla. Speaking in the firit place for myself as minister 1 can truthfull say that, ever since my arrival here seven monthe ago, I have been treated with a o nerOus kindness and sincere hospitality that nave made a drep impression on me and tnereased my respect for Colombians in particular and Latin Americans in general. The Cnited States minister has leeen extended Invltations official and personal, and the L'nited states legation la turn has beeu contlmally frequented ly leadling men of all parties, as if nothlng had ever happened to mar the entente cordiale of the two eountries.

In the granting of concessions and In the hearing of ciains the Government has treated Americans wlth as much conslderatlon as Europeans. During my stay here, and up to this writing, there has not been one complalnt lodged by Americans $\ln$ this legation of unkind treatment by Colombians due to any political anti-American feeling. In my own travels in various parts of the conntry, officlals and peons alihe have everywhere accorded me pollte and even gracious attention. To let lt be known that I was C'nitel States m' lister has always led to extra courtesies rathe: than to any lack of them.
"I could not. however, have it understool abroad that there is not stiil strong feeling against the Chitci states. It does exist, but the passing of vears, and gencrous, fair treatment of Colombia and Colombians by tite Cnlted States and its cltlaens, in international relations and frientily social und commercial Intercourse, can effeet lts pradual disappearance. Such feel. ing does not take the attluate of personal enmity toward Amertcans. file cobombinas, high ant low, are too polite and sensille for that. It is a feeling in the minds and hearts, based on high politleal and patrlotie grounds, whleh, however, with commendable philosophy, recognizes the Inevitable and now turns to the future to bring hlesaings that will counterbalance the losses and sorrows of the past. The very courage and nobility of thls attitude of Colombla is one of the chief reasons why 1 predict for her a magniticent future. Already thls pollcy - If I may call it a policy - ls bearing fruit in the development of a greater and more friendiy and syinpathetle Interest throughont the United States in Colomhia, which ls destined to lead to a mutualiy favorable understanding and settlement of ali diferences in the near future."

"Great eredit." wrote Mr. Barrett, $\cdots$ Is lue to General Hafsel Reyes, I'resident of this fepublle, for his untlring efforts to restore the prosperity of his country to the position it accupled before the last elvil war and the loss of Panma. He has so far effectunily stopperl revohitlons, and, if his iife and health are spared, Colomhia would scem to be assured of peace at lcast during his administration."
A. D. 1905-1909: - Troubles with Venezuela over the navigation of rivers flowing through both countries.- The arbitrary aetion begnn hy the iij-tempered and arrogant Castro, of Veaczucla, in 1902, when he stopped navigation on the rivers whleh How from Colomhla to Lake Jiaracalbo, in Venezuela, and thus open (ommunication to the sea (sce above), was coatinued or resumed la subsequent years, and was a distressing trouble to hls Colomblan nelghbors. In July, 1905, the Colombian Governmeat appruled to that of the United States for its good ollices la maintaining the priaciple of free nav. iration on rivers that are common to nelghboring countrles. "From the time of the award which decided the bonndary dispute lietweea the two conntries." suid the Colomhlaa Mialster to the United States, In a communication to the American Secretary of State, "the polic'y of Venezuela in matters relating to the transit trade of Colombia and the navigation of the commen rivers, has bcen marked by a consplcuous spirit of hostlity. $\qquad$ Neither fogical arguments aor hlstoric precedents, such as those submitted by the Colombinn chancellery to the Government of Venezneln for the recognition by the latter of the prlnciple of free trade over the natural waterways placed hy God at the disposal of all nntions, have avalled."
The writer then reviewed at considerable length the arguments with which the Govern. ment of the Unlted States had contended In the pust with Spala aad Great Britain for the free nulgation of the Mississippi and the St. Lawrence, and said in conchsioa: "It would be desirable, and I wonld ask that it be done if this nute were favornhly recel ved ly the Government of the Énited States, that the American minis. t'r at Caracns be appropriately lnstructed In the sense of declaring on beliaif of the eonmercial interests of the eltizens of the United States his lesire that the Goverament of Vencruela make the navigation of the Zulla and Orinoco rlvers free, and urgiag, hy persuasion, that the prind. To this retuest the then Acting Secretary of State, Mr. Adec, made a favorable reply, August 5 , saying: "The principie of the free navggatioa of rivers has been advocated by the United States and malntalned in its relations with its nelglibors for many years. Thls government is ready, therefore, to nse its good offices in the sense requested, and Mr. Russell lins beea instructed upon arrivlag at hls new post in Veaczuela to take advantage of fittlag occasion to express to the minlster for foreign afiairs the great satlsfaction with which the Unlted States wonld vlew the aloption and proclamatioa by Venezueln of the genernl principle of the free navlgation of rivers and tluvlai arteries of eommunication common to neighboring countries.

"It is of course to be uaderstood that in tonching npon this matter this governmeut does not seek to intervene or mediate ia any way ia the relatloas hetween Colomhia and Venczinela, but is merely iaterested in the maiversul recognition of a policy beneticial to the commerce of the world.

In the followiag December, the endeavor seemed promising; for the American Minlster to Colomhia was ahle to report the sigaligg, at Ibogotí, of a protocol, preparatory to a aew treaty of amlty, commerce, and navigation, to be concinded at Caracas. Four months later, on the 27th of April, 1906, Ninister IRussell, at Caracas, annonnced the arrival there of the Cofomblan plenlpoteutiary, General Benjamin ilerrera, appointed for the negotiation of the treaty agreel upon, hit reported further that the Veaczuelan Government had refnsed to receive hinn, demanding that someboly else be scitt. No settlemeut of the matter conld be obtained while Castro controlled Venczuela. Since his elimlaatlon it has heen reported that President Gomer, his successor, has aannlled his decrees of hostility to Colombian commerce.

pointed 'Constitutional and Legislative Assembly,' is about the oaly one that cau preserve the peace and direct the country into the line of prosperity aud progress.

- Ender this system of governinent the country has enjoyed almost perfect internal peace diring the yenr. This is the political theory that is most widely aceepted at the present time ia Colombia. Of course, there are those whodo not ngree with this theory, which they consider as the natural actlon of men who are more anxions to preserve order than they are to establish trith and justice, and there are not lackiag those who say that in the long run it will be found to he a foolish system.
" It is pointed out that the idea that grievances can be done away with hy forbidding men to complaia, or that the criticisms can be met by excommunicatiug the critics, or that changes can ine prevented by patting the trouhlers to silence, is contradicted by the experfence of the rest of the world. The klni of effort that is being nade in Colombin to prevent the liberty of the press, of puhtic spetech, and of personal opinion, is like the effort to prevent the escape of stean hy the safety valse, and is very likely resilt ia an explosion."

The state of puhlic feeling in Colomhla hecame further complicated, no douht, when, carly in lanuary, 1909 a tripartite trefic: was nego. tiuted, with l'anama and the Cul, cil States, for the settlement of qarstious connected with the secession of i'anania in 1003. Panama, in this truaty, agrecd to pay Colomhla the sum of $$ 2.500,000$, as her share of the Colomhian public deht, receiving recograition of her independence in retarn. The treaty was sabmitted to the Colombian Congress by I'resident Heyes on the 24 th of iehruary, with a special message of recommendation; bat public feeling was said to be bitterly against it. for the reasons that no wrongfulucss in the trunsuction was recognized and the indemuity was insaflleient. i)istarbances which broke ont at Bogotá and in the provinces nbout the middle of March were attributed mostly to this cause of discontent. For some reason of discouragenuont or disgust, the I'resident wus reported to have resigned his office on the 13 th, but was persuaded toresume it next day.

It was now deciled to suspend considera tion of the tripartite trenty. until it comld he submitted to an elected National Congress, the chection for which would be held on the 20th of the coming July. In Junc, a few weeks before the appuint od clection, President Reyes made a sidilen departure for Europe. ilamors that he lind gone ifcanse tired of political strife and would uot return were contradicted by the Co.

Iomhian Consui at New York, in a published note which sald : "His departure, the causes of which are well known throughout Colomhia, was due to the fact that after five years atrenuous labor he desired a rest, and last March to the National Assuruhly expressed his desire to retire temporarily from the Presidency, hut, owing to the opposition of pullic sentiment and the strong desire of the people to have hlm remaiu. he determined not to leave the 1'residency until electlons to the coming Congress had been made. To this Congress, about to he eonvened, and in which ail partics are represented, President Reyes conflies many of the cares of government, left hy law umicr his jurisdiction until Congress should assemhle, and withdraws, temporarily only, from the discharge of his l'residential datles, leaving in his atead Gen. Jorge liolgain, his must intimate friend and former minister of war, who will continue to pursue in all matters the same policy as that adopted by his predecessor. Gen. iteyes diring his stay in Europe, wheuce lie has goae, will perfect plans for developing railroad and other industríes in Colombia. There is absolute peace und tranquillity ln all parts of the commery."
i3ut the "ahsolute peace and tranquillity" of the country was ahaken in the first week of July by a revolutionary outhreak at Barranquilla, scon sa ppressed, and the resignation of l'resideut ikeyes was received sooa thereafter, from aliroad. The election of his successor now devoived on the new National Congruss, elected hy the people on the 20th of July. It gave the office, for the remainder of the unfinished term (which expires August 7, 1010) to Sentor Gonzales Valencia, who had been proclaiued hy the Barranquilla revolutionists the month before, though he disavowed their movement.

Combination - The following is a Press despatch from Halifux, N. S., Nov. 13, 1909: "The formation of the Canads Steel Corporation, the propoed $870,000,000$ merger of the Dominion Iron and Steel Company and the Duminion Coai Company, was made possible hy the agreement of James Ross of Montreal, president of the Dominlon Coal Company, to transfer to asyndicate of Toronto capitalists a portion of his holdinge of the coal company stock. Finai arrangements regarding the stock transfer will he made here to diy, President Ross owns coal company stock of a par value of $$ 5,000,000$, and, although he does not dispose of all this, he is to transfer eaough to give control of the coai company to the 'loronto capitalists, who have alrcady acquired a controlling interest in the steel company. The plants of the Dominion Iron and Steei Company and the Dominion Coal Com pany are in Cupe Breton, where they give em. ploymunt to thousands of men, and wherc they have ransed little tisilng viliages to spring up futo thinrishing rities." Annonncement of the completion of the merger was made in Decemher.
A. D. 1910. - Anti-Trust Bill in the Dominion Parliament. - A strongly coastructed measure for controliing and regulating commercial and industrial comhinations, to eheck re struints of trade and undue enhancement of prices, was brought into the Dominion House of Commons on the 18 th of January, 1010, hy the Miaister of labor, Mr. Mackeuzie King, and its passage was suid to be assured. Mr King's explanation of the Biii, as summarized for the Associated Press, was as follows:
"The Bili, Mr. King stated, was not designed to interfere with trade, hut to protect the puhlic from the operation of monopolies. The hili provides that if six or more persons show prima faele evidence to a superior court judge that a combine exists, which has unduly enhanced the price of a manufactured article, unduly limited the produetion of any commodity, or naduly restricted trade in any way, the juige shail order the minister of lahor to have an luvestigation madc. This shali be done hy a hoard of three, olle me'mher to be appointed hy those who complain. one hy those complained against, and a chairman by the flrst two, and if they fail to select the judge who has heard the complaint shall act.

- Tinis bonrd has the fill powers of a eourt to compel the attendunce of witnesses and the prodnction of evidence. The board must report to the minister and he must give the report the fullat mublicity.

Two remedies are provided where a comhi nation is reported to exist. The government may withiriw the tariff protection from the articles produccd by the eoinhine and bring the manufacturers intocompetitiou with the worid.
"The other remedy is a provision that if the combine persists in its course after ten days there slall be a tinc of $$ 1.000$ a day imposed untli the almise is remedied. There is also provision that whell a patentee makes use of the protection of the patent art to restrict trade or unduiy enhance prices hils patent may be revoked.
"The act prorides for its expeditiousand thorough eaforcement, and all expenses of iavestiga. tion are to be barne by the goverment.

- Where question is raised as to the scope of the investigation, the board shali make it as thorough and compiete a: public interest requires. Boards are to conduct their investigations in puhile and the decision of two member: shall be the decision of the board. Whenever the minister of labor believes that counsel should ald the investigation, the boand may retain the services of a lawyer upon the consent of the minister of justice. Witnesses are to be allowed the ame fecs and traveliag expenses allowed at the present in civil suits. With the consent of the minister of labor a board may employ experts to examine books and to report upon technical questions."
Germany: Corporation Reform as the Germans have handled it. - "Thirty years ago the German people went through corporation experienees much like our own. There, as here, the corporation, as originally designed, was a mere sheli. There, as here, under the sheiter of that shell, the property of the country was being trausferred from the German people at large, even the little they bad, to the few. There, thirty years ago, as here now, great corporate scandals were exposed. And there, as liere, the human nature that is everywhere behind civilization eventualiy began to recoil. It hegan there before it began here, only because conditions reached a cllmax there earlier than here, and becanse we as a people were too pronperous and too husy to look even a little way beneath the surface of things.
" But wheu the work of reform did come there, it was a genuine reform. it did not content itself with indiscriminate denunciation, or with mere lawsints. Nor did it die out, leaving the door still open to every character of corporation the cunning of men might eonccive. Before a corporatiou can he organized in that country, it must prove, as in a court proceeding, its rightful title to a corporate existence. In the same way it inust establish the anount and the character of the capitalization it is aliowed to put out. When property is turued iu, its value must he judicially ascertained. C pon otticers and directors is uot eonferred suprene power; in the Gcrman eorporatiou the shareholders' meeting is the counterpart of our New England town meetings - a gcnuine assembly intended to to something more than pass resolutions of approsal. And every riolation of trust. wot mereiy to the publie, hut to tbe shareholder as well, is quickiy punished wei munishment that smarts. There is in the Gerpuitl corporation no romm for one to do, with impunity, in his eapacity as a corporation otheer or promoter. what if tone individualiy would land him in the penitentiary." - Judge I'cter $$$. Grosscup, The Cormorition and the People (The Outlook. Jan. 12, 190i).

The Cartels. - Industrial combinations, quite as effective $n s$ the Trusts on the United States, have been ereated in Germany on a wholly different plan. The constituent organizations in them, of capital and industry, are simply knitted or tied together by hard and fast agreements, instead of being fused into linge eorporations, as the Trusts are. For the kind of eorenant which minites them a military term has been horrowid, and ther are ealled Cartels. The difference be. tween the Cartel a ad the Trust is described bs a Scottish writer, D. H. Macgrcgor, in his work on Industrial Combinations, as follows:
"The Cartel is an agreement for a time, the Trust is a permanent structure; the former is

The principle of the pure (iartel is compensatory aetlon. What they stand to lose in one asject they atand to gnin lu the other.
"The operatlon is broadly as follows. The members of the Cartel, meetling as prodicers $\ln$ gencral asscinhly. determine a price for their produet which covers cost of production, beiag in fact practically a competitive price. This is the base or normal pirlee iRichipreis). Thus they assure thomselves, In this capacity, of adequate remmeration. They $t!$ - 11 sell to the Syadiente, that is to themselves as members of the Syndlente: for what ls called the 'taking over' or 'accountlig' price (Verrechnungspreis) which Is usually on the average hlgher than the base price, so that they have aow crented for themselves as producers n 'Cartcl advantage.' The Sy ndicate then resclis to the consumer, for a price which will be as high as it can get, but which varies with the compretition to be nuet In ditfereat parts of the market ; this price (l'cr. kaufizreis) may not in some caser, es high as the taking-over price, or may not pixceal it by more than the margin necessary to eover the Nynlicates expenses of managemeat. . . . It is the Syndicate whicl figures in the public eye; aad while it ltself offers no siga of monopoly profit it shciters the compaales which gaia sy its handling of thelr gools. It couccals monopoly divillends." - D. II. Mncgregor, Industrial Combination (ry. Bell d Sons, Lond., 1406).

Growing magnitude of companies, - Industrial concentration. - "The tenteney to industrial concentration is shown by the returns of pulhie companies, which point to the growing dominatiou of large undertakings. In spite of this tembloney townrds the eon. centration of rapital and the multipliention of large undertakings, however, Germany ls still an interestiag illustration of an : adustrial country whieh has aot yet entirlly gone over to the fate. tory system of produetion. The comblation includerl the Anuerlean, the Red Star, the White, the Athantic Transport, tie Ley. land and the Dumbinfon lines. Both American and British cepltalists were represented in the board of dircetors, the former ln the majority. Sev. eral partuers in the tirm of J. The first step towarils such a shlpring consbination had wean taken siatcea - "ers befure, when the IBritish Innan stceamship line was taken orer by the In:crnatlonal Nuvipation Company, made up of Americans, at the head of whom was Mr. Clement A. Griscom, of l'hiladelpinia. - The Britluh Goverument promptly withdre:v the lib. eral subslly whieh it had been payinf to the Inman liners: but Mr. Griscom and his comrades bronght the New York and l'aria beneath the Stars and Stripes, hulit the St. Iouia and St. Pleu', secnred a subsily from the United titates and gave the first-class Britlsh lines a most formhlable competitor. Indeed, commercinl riralry in high grade ships on the North Atlantic soon hecume too keen to permit of reasobabie dirl dends and Mr. Griseom fonnd British slip-awry. ers in a responsive morkl when he broacherl auew the great ldea of an interathonal eomhinution.

- This unlon was made all the easier by the fact that ureunwble another important IBritish stcamshlp concern, the Leyland line, had been acquired hy Mr. J. Plerpont Margan in the spring of 1901. Thls line, Itself the fruit of sereral consolidations, eontrolled the largest British to: nage in the Corth Atlantle trale. It owned mo fast mall ships, no greybounds. But it did possess forts or fifty govel, useful stemmships of molerate sped, many of them of large tommare, and fit for pussergers as well as freitht. The main Leyland service lay hetween Bostor or New Furk on this shle, and Liverpool or Lembon on the othrer, and the buslness of the compang had been so protitable for a long turm of yeure that its shares were 'puoted at a haudsome premi 1 m . The auxietice with which the comhination was regarded at tirst in Gruat Britain were ailayed materiaily hy Mr. G. ibaifour. I'resident of the Board of Trade, who made public, in a speech at Sinefliedi, the terms of an arrangement that had been made hy the Government with the Cuvard Company, on one hand, and the Comhinatlou on the other. United States: A. D. 1900. - Definition of the term Industrial Combination formulated at the Census Bureau. - Statistics as collected in 1900. - "'line oftichis of the census Office, in order to prevent misconeeptions and insure consistency in the plan and system of tahulation, formulated the following definition of the term 'industriai combination':

- For the purjose of the Consus, the rule has been alopted to comsider no aggregation of mills an industrial combintion, meses it consists of a number of formeriy independent mills which have been hronght together into one company under a charter obtained for that purpose. We thercfore exchude from this category many large estahishments comprising a number of mils. which have grown up, not hy counination with other milis, hut hy the crection of new plants or the purchase of old oues
"No far as can be a thined from the data in the Census (Office, ti numier of these indus. trial consoidations is 188 . They controi 2803 arparate piants, scattered throughout the L'nited ELates, 2020 heing nctive and 174 idle during the census year. For 56 of the file plants no ruturns couid he ohtained, aaking the total number of reporting piauts 2147 . The 188 comhinations extend to slnost ail ilnes of industry, produc. ing articles of luxury, materiais essential to the upbuiding and growth of the country, and even the very nevessities of iffe. Fuliy 50 per cent. of these coml dions were chartered just prior to or during the census ycar; and it is noteworthy that the epldemic of industrial consoildation, as far as the socailed monopoiles are courerned, has heen practicaily conflned to the past four years. It is evident, therefore, that tho disease - If It he regarded as such - has spread very rapidiy.
"Naturaliy enongh, iron and steci, with 69 comhinations, heais the list. The number of reporting plants engaged in this industry is 489. and the capitai invested, consisting of iand, huildiugs, machinery, ioois and impienents, and cash and sundries, is valued at $8848,000,000$." - W. A. D. 1901-1903. - The question of Federal Controi and Regulation. -Urgency of President Roosevelt for effective legislation. - In his first Message to Congress, three months aiter his succession to the Presidencr, I'reaident Iecosevelt expressed his mind frankly and cleariy on the then incrcasing demand in the country for more stringent measures of government, to controi and regulate the exercise of the power which great aggregations of incorporated capltai have created in recent times. In part, he then said:

The tremendous and highly complex indus. trial development which went on with ever accelerated rapidity during the latter haif of the nincteenth century brings us face to face, at the beginning of the twentieth, with very seri. ous sociai prohlems. The old iaws, and the oid customs which had aimost the hinding force of law, wore once quite sufficient to regulate the accumuiation and distribution of wealth. Since the industrial changes which have so cnormously increased the productive power of zuankinif. they are no ionger sufficient. Tic growth of cities has gone on heyond comparison faster than the grow th of the country, and the upbuilding of the great industrial centers has meant a starting increase, not merely in the ageregate of wealth. but in the number of very large indjvidual, und especliniy of very large cor porate, fortunes.

The process bas aroused much antagonism, a great part of which is wholiy without warrant. It is not true that as the rich have grown richer the poor have grown poorer. On the contrary, never before has the arerage man, the wage-worker, the farmer, the small trader. been so well off as in this country and at the present time. There bave been abuses connected with the accumulation of weaith: yet it remains true that a fortune accumulated in iegitimate husiness can be accumuiated hy the person speclally lenedted oniy ou condition of conferring immense incidentai henefits upon others. . . . It cannot too often be pointed out that to strike with ignorant violence at the interests of one ect of men slmost inevitabiy endangers the: interests of all. $\qquad$ . Much of the iegislation directed at the trusts would have been exceedingiy mischievous had it not also been entireiy ineffective. In accordance with a weil.known sociologicai iaw, the ignoraut or reckless agitator has heen the realiy effective fricnd of the evils which he has been nominaily opposing.
"Ail this is truc; and yet it is also truo that there are reai and grave evils, onc of the chief boing over capitalization because of its mnny haiefui consequences ; and a resolinte and practical efiort must be made to correct these evils. There is a widesprend conviction in the minds of the Americun people that the great corpora. tions known as trusts are in certain of their features and tendencics hurtful to the generai welfare. This springs from no spirit of envy or uneharitabieness, nor iack of pride in the freat industrial achicvements that hare piaeed this country at the head of the nations strugging for commereini supremacy. . . . it is vasel upon sincere conviction that combinatlon aud coneentration shouid be, not prohibited, hut supervised and within reasonabie limits con. trolled; and in my judgment this consiction is right.

The frst essentini in determining how to deal with the great industrial combina. tions is knowiedge of the faets - publicity. In the interests of the public, the Government shoulid hare the right to inspect and examinc the workings of the great corporations eugaged in interstate husiness.
"When the Constitution was adopted, at the end of the eighteentis century, no human wisclom couid foreteli the swecping changes, ailke in ladustrial and poiitienl conditions, which were to take piace by the beginning of the twentieth eentury. At thnt time it was accepted as a matter of course that the severai States were the proper authorities to regulate so far as was then neecossary, the comparntively inslguificant and strictiy focaized eorporate hodies of the day. The conditiuns are now whoily different and wholiy different action is calied for. I believe that a law can he framed which wiil enabie the Nationai Government to cxircise control aiong the ines above iudicated: profting by the experience gained through the passage and administration of the Interstatc-Coninuerce Act. If, however, the fuigment of the Congress is that it lacks the constitutional power to pass sueli nn act, then a constitutionai amentineut shouid be submitted to confur the power." - President's Measage to Congress, Dec. 3, 1901.

In the following suumer, duriug a tour which he maie through some of the New England Stites thc President gave prominence to the same suliject in his adidresses, emphasizing the necessity of federal iegisintion to arm the Generai Government with more effective authority for regulathg the action of corporations engaged in interstate tmde. In speaking at Providcnee especialiy, his remarks caused a great stir of feeing in the country, and secm to have signalled the beginning of an open array of hostlle cos. porate Interests against $1 \mathrm{~m} . \mathrm{m}$. On that occasion he spoke jartly as foilows:
"Those great corporations containing some tendency to monopoly. which we have grown to speak of rather iooseiy as trusts, sretine creatures of the State, and the State not onij has tile right to controi them, hut is in duty bound to control them wherever the need for such controi is shown. There is cieariy a need of supervision need to exerclse the power of regulation on the part of the representatives of the publie, wherever, as in our own country at the present time, husiness corporations become so very strong, both for beneficent work and for work that is not al. ways beneffcent. It is idle to say that there is no need for such supervision. A suflicient warrant for it is to be found over and over again in any of the various eviis resulting from the present system, or, rather, iack of system.
"There is in our colntry a peculiar difficuity In tile way of exercising sucin snpervision aud controi because of the peculiur division of governmental power. When the industrial conditions were simple, very iittic controi was needed, sud no troubie was caused hy the doubt as to where power was iodged under the constitution. Now the conditions are complicated, and we fild it dithenit to frame uationai icgisiation which shail he adequate, winic as a matter of practical experience Stnte action has proved cutirely insufticieut, and in ail human prohuhility cannot or wiif not be made sufficient, to meet the needs of the case. Some of our States hnve cxcelient iaws laws which it wouid be weil indeed to have enacted by the national iegisiature. Bituthe wile differcnces in these iaws, even betwecnodjacent States, and the uncertniuty of the power of enforcement resuit practicaliy in aitogether Insufticient controi.
"I believe that the nation must assume this power of control by icgislation, and If it becomes evicient timt the constitution will not permit necded iegislation, then hy constitutional amendment. The inmediate need of dealing whth trusts is to piace them undior the real, not, nominal, control of some soverrign to which, ns its crature, the trusts shail owe alloginnec, and in whose courts the soverelgn's orders may with certniuty be enforced. That is not the case with the ordinary so-calicd' trust 'to-day, for the trust is a large State corporation, fencraily dolug business in other States niso, nud often with a tondency to monopoly. Such a trust is an artificial creature not wholly responsihie to or controinhlie by any legislature, nor wiolly subject to the jurisdiction of any one court. Some governmentai sovereign must be giveu fuii power orer tincse artificiai and very powerful eorporate beings. In my judgment this sovercifn must be thi nationai government. When it has heen given fuli power, then this fuli power can be used to controinny evil infinence, exactiy as the government is now using the power conferred upon it under the Sherman Anti-Trust isw.
"Even when the fnli power has been conferred it would be highiy indesirabie to attempt too much or to begin lyy stringent iegislation. The mechanism of modern business is as delimate and complicated as it is rast, and nothing wollid he more productife of evil to all of us, and especially to tuose icast well off in this worid's

In his next Message to Conpress, President lRoosevelt renewed his urgency for the needed iegisiation. " "io more inportant subject can come beforc the Congress," he sald, "than this of the reguiation of interstate husiness. This conntry cannot afford to slt supinc on the plea that under our pectilar system of government we are heipicss in the presence of the new conditions, and uuable to grappie whth them or tocut out whatever of evil has arisen in connection with then. The power of the Congress to regulate interstate commerce is an ahsolute and unqualifien grant. and without limitatlons other than those prescribed hy the Constitution. The Congress has constitutional authority to make all laws neeessary and proper for executing thls powcr, and I am satistied that this power has not been exhausted by any legislatlon now on the statute books, "- President's Mesange to Congress, Dec. 2, 1902.

Aycar later, when the President addressed his Jicssage to the next Congress, at the opening of its first session, he was able to say; "The conntry is especinlly to be congratulated on what bas been accomplished in the direction of provlding for the exercise of supervision over the great corporations and combinations of corporatlons engaged in interstate commerce. The Congress has created the Department of Com-

Investigation by the Commissloner of Corporations. - On the 7th of March, 1904, the House of IReprescontntives adopted a resolution r'questiug tixe seceretary of Commerce and Labor to "investigate the cnises of the low prices of beef eattle in tirc Unlted Stutes since July 1st. 1003, and the anueuaily large margins between the prices of beef cattic and the selling prices of fresh becf, abi whether the said conditions have resuited in whole or in part from any contrnet, combination. In complianre with thls resolntion, the Com missioner of Corporations, Mr. Jumes IR. Garficld, went to Cinieago In Ajrii and began the requested insestigation, which was prosecuted throngiout most of the ensuing genr. "The inquiriss of the lharean of Corporations were naturally concernerd chietly with the six creat concerns whicis. by the injunetion of 1902, were grounm! togetice, ant whicik were parularly considcred as the Becf Trust. Joerph, Fort Worth, south St. Paui, and Nioux Clty."

As for the National PackIng Company, it grew, apparently, out of an abortive achense for the conseilidatlon of the other tive coucerns which was rumored in 1902. "Nhortly prlor to the formation of this company the Armour Interesta had sequired control of the G. II. Ifammond Company and the Omaha Pheking Company, the Swifty had secured the Angio-Amertean Provision Compauy and the Fowler Packing Association, and the Morris family had hecome don. inant in the United Dressel Beef Company of New York. The National PackIng Company, organized in 1003, took over the control of the various corporatious thus previously ncyulred by the thrre packing intcrests named, und has since absorbed two or three other smaller concerus. Thedircetoratc of the Nationai Company conslats almost wholiy of representatives of the Armour. Swift, and Morris companies. Ashle from thls community of interest, the burenu finds tint there is un important Inter ownership of securities umong the slx leadlug packlog com pankes."

The 'Bly six' are by no means the only slaughtercrs of cattle In the Unlted states. They. witit m few milnor affiliated concerns. killed 5,621,697 cattle In 1003; while, from the best arailable data, the Bureau of Corporutions computes the total slaughter of the country at abont $12,500,000$. But the proportion of 45 pr . cent. thus indicated by no means measures tite fuli economic significance of the slx great packers. Tincir importance lies in tire fact that thcy are the only concerns which do an cztcnsive busi. ness in shipping dressed becf. . . . The roport glves clear and detinite in. formation as to the trust's field of operations. It shows that the slx companles shaghtered In 1003 only about 45 per cent. of all the cattle killed In that sear, but that these companles slatghter nearly 98 per cent. of all thc catcle killed in the leadlag Western packing centcra, and that they control a large percentage of the trade In beef In many large citles - 75 per cent. The Judge then pronouncel scntence on them as follows: $\because$ I'unlshment for thla offeuse as fixed hy Congress has a wide range, glving the (ourt unusual latitude, ranglng from a nominal tine without Imprisonment to a heavy fine and two f'ars' imprisonment, all In the discretion of the Court. The defendant also claimed that, as there were no other slluppers of oil over the ('hicago and Alton Rallway, no one was lijureal by the secret rate. On this matter the court sald:
$\cdots$ It is novil, lndeect, for a eminicted defendant to urge the complete trinmph of a dlshonest eourse as a reasou why such a course slould go unpuulsherl.

- Of course, there was no other shipper of oil, nor could there be, so long as, by secret arrangement. the property of the Staudard Oil Company was hanten by railway common currlers for one third of what anyhorly else would have to pay.
"Movell by these conslderations. the court adjuiged, on Augnst 3,1907 , that the defendant should pay the naximum whatty and flued the Stamlard Oil Compmin $$ 20.100$ for each of fence. that is for each of the 1462 counts in the ludictment upon whleh consiction wasobtained. The total fine, therefore, anmuntel to $$ 29,240$. 000."-Francis Watker, The Oil Trust and the Gorernment (Political science Quarterly, Jarch. 1908).

On $n$ writ of error the case went now to the United States (Irenit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit, where It was argued at the April session, 1908, nald the opinlon. by Julge Peter S Grosscup, Circuit Judge. delivered on the 22d of the followiug July. In this opinion the District Court was hid tio have erred In deciding that each single carload of oil was to be dealt with ns a suparate offence, nol that it reasoned erronemasly in determining the fine Imposed. On this latter point Julge Grosscup said:
"1)id the court. In the fine imposed, alouse its diseretion? The defendant indicted, triet, and convieted, was the standard Oll Compuny, a corporation in Incliann. The capital stock of this corporation is one million dollass. There is nothing in the rieord, in the way of cridence, either hefore conviction, or after convietlon and lefore sentence, that shows that the assets of this corprotation were la expess of one million dolars There it mothing in the record, either before convletion, or after conviction ard before sentence, that shows hast the def fulaut, before the rourr, liad ever hefure been wuilty of an offence of this eharacter. It mily, theri-fore be safely assumed, that but for the relation of the defendant hefore the court to another eurperation, not before the court - a relation to be presently stated - the court would have measured out pundshment on the trasis of the facts just stated.
"That muler such circumstnaces the punish. ment would have been the maximum punlsh.
ment, does not scem possilhe ; for the maximum aentence, put lato executlon agalnst the defendant hefore the court, would wlpe out, many times, and for lts tirst offence, all the property of the defendant.
"isrlefly atated, the reason of the trial court for Imposing thils sentence was because, after convictlon and before sentence, it was hrought out, on an examhnation of sonne of the officers and stoekholders of the Standurd Oil Company of New Jersey, that the eaplal stock of the Standard Oil Company of Inillama, the defendants hefore the eourt, was princlpally owned hy the Now Jersey corporation, a corporatlon not before the court - the trial court aildlag (upon no evilence bowever to be found In the record, and upon no information specially referred to) that in concessions of the character for whleh the defendlant before the court had heen indicted, tried, and convicted, the New Jersey eorporation was not a ' virgin' offender.
"Is $n$ sentence such as this, based on reasonligg such as that, sound i l'assing over tbe fact that no word of evidence or other Informatlon supportlng the trial court's comment is to be found in the record, would the comment, If duly proven. justify a sentence such as thls -oue that otherwise would not hare been Imposel? (an a court. without abuse of judicial discretion, wipe out all tbe property of the defendant before the court, and all the assets to which its creditors look, in an effort to reach and punlsh a party that is not before the court - n party that has not been convlcted, has not beern trled, has not been indicted even? Cam an American judge. withoui abuse of jultelal discretion, condemn any one who has not had his day in court?
"That, to our mind, is strange doctrine in Anglo-Saxon jurisprulence.

- The judgment of the Dlstrict Court is reversed and the case remanded with Instructions to grant a new trial, and proceed further la aceorlance wlth this opiniou."
The Government failed $\ln$ attempts to secure a rehearing before the Appellate Court, as well as $\ln$ an appllcation for the reviewing of the case hy the Supreme Court.

On the new trial to whleh the casc was remmdel Judge Landis, whose julgment hall been set aside, declined to sit, nnd Judge A. 13. On the 2d of Mareh Juilge A11derson sustnined the motion of the defence that the government must proceed on the theory that there wer: thirty six alleged offences - that is, that each settlement on which an alleged relute was pali! Insteal of encll carloal, c(onstitutal a separate offence. This mate it impossible to claim n penalte beyond 8820,060 , being at the rate of $$ 20,000$ for each offence. and he was remaaded to custody (June 18, 1005). An sppeal to the Supreme Court followed, which was argued in the early days of January, 1006, and declded on the 12 th of March following.
The decision of the Court, renlered hy Justice Brown, was on two issues whleh it found to be presented in the case: The first involving "the fmmunity of the witners from oral cxamination; the secoud the legality of hls action in refus: lug to produce the documents called for by the subpurna duces tecum." The witness justlfed his refusal to answer questions. "1st upon the ground that there was no specitic 'charge' pendlng before the grand jury against any particular person; $2 d$ that the answers would tend to criminate him." On the first point the Court found It "eutirely clear that under the practice $\ln$ thls country, at least, the examination of witnesses Leed not be preceded hy a prosentment or ludict ment formally drawa up, hut that the grand tury may proceed, either upou thelr own know ledge or upon the examlnation of witnesses, to inquire for themselves whether a crinie cognlzable hy the Court has been committed." As to the plea of an apprehended self-incrinination, the Court held that the witncss was protectinl by the aet which provides that no person shall be prosecuted on account of anvthing concerning which lie may testify or produce evielenec. luut it was further insisted that while the inmunity statute may protect iadividual witnesses it would not protect the corporation of whieh the appeilant was the agent and representative. "This is true," says the Court, "hut the answer lis that it was not designed to do so. The right of a person under the Fifth Amendment to refuse to lneriminate himself is purely a personal privi. lege of the witness. It was never intended to permit him to plead the fact that some thlod person mlght be incrimlnated hy his testimony, even though he were the egent of such person."

On the second issue in the case, the substance of the decision is in the following passages from it: "llaring already held that. by reason of the immunity act of 1003 , the withess could not avall himself of the Fiftli Amendment, it follows that he camot set up that Amendment as against the productlon of the hooks and papers, since ia respect to these he would also he proteeted hy the immunity aet. ... We are of the opinion that there is a clear distinction in this particular between an individual and a corporation, and that the latter lias no right to refuse to sulmilt lts books aud papers for an examination at the sult of the State: . . . The individual may ataud upoulifs constitutional rlglits as a citlzen. Ile is contled to carry on hls private lmsiness ia his own way. . . . Among his rights are a refusai to lucriminate himself, and the immunity of hluself and his property from arrest or seizure exccpt under a warrant of the law.
Upon the other hand, the corporation is a creature of the State. It is presumed to be incorporated for the benefit of the public.

Its rights to aet as a corporation are only preserved tolt so long as it obeys the laws of lts creation. There is a reserved right in the Legislature to investigate lis contracts and to find out whether It has exeeedcd its powers. . . . The defense amounts to thls: That an officer of a corporittion. Which is charged with a criminal violation of the statute, may plegr the criminality of such corporation as a refusal to produce lis books.

Taking note of the fact that the franchlses of the eorporation la thls case were derived from one of the States, the Court procerets to say: "Such franchises, so far as they involve questions of inter-state commerce, must also be exercised $\ln$ subortination to the power of Congress to regulate such commerce, and $\ln$ respect to this the General Government may also assert a sovereign authority to ascertain whether such franchises have been exercised in a law ful manner, with due regard to lts own laws. . . . One of the evidences of tis monopoly adduced by the Government was the enormlty of its earn lngs which were summarlzed thus : The Stand ari Oil Trust and the Standard Oil company, on an investment of $869,024,480$, had earned up to the end of 1906, $\$ 838,783,783$. Addlag the estlmated profits of 1907 and 1908, we bave sub. stantlally, the brief states, a billon ciollars carnel by this company in twenty seven years, with an original investment of alhint $\$ 69,000,000$.

The United States asked for a perpetual in. junctlon, and for the dissolutiou of the Standurd Oll combination. Hearings were held in New York, Washington, Chicago, Cleveland, and st. Lonis, about four hundred witness : heing examincd. It was not nutll the 5 th of .1 pril, 1900. that the case reached the stage of argument, hefore Julges Walter H. Samborn, Willls Van I)e. vant'r, Willam C. Ilook and Elmer B. Adams, constituting the U. S. Clrcuit Court at St. Louis. The declslon of the Court was announced on the 20th of the followhing November, the four juiges concurring in the oplnion, written by Judge simborn, which held the standard oil Company to be an lilegal corporation and decreed its illssolution. The character of the decision appears from the syllabus of Judge Sanborn's opinlon, which rerals:
'Congress has power under the commercial clanse of the Constitution to regulate and restrict the ase in eommerce among the several states, and with foreign nations, of contracts, of the methoul of holding title to property and of every other instrumentality emploged ln that commerce, so far as it may be necessary to do so, in orler to prevent the restriint therenf denounced by the Anti-Trust Act of July 2, 1890 (26 Stat. 29)

Test of the legality of a combination under this act is its necessary effect upon eompettion in commerce among the states or v ith forign nations. If its necessary eff cet is on:y incident ally or indirectly to restrict the competition. while its ehief result is to forter the trale and Increase the bnsiness of those who make audi operate it, it does not violate that has. But if its necessary elfect is to stitle or directly and sub. stantially to restrict free competition in com meree among the States, or with foreing nations, it is llegral within the meaning of that statute.

The power to restriet competition in commerce anoong the several states, or with forcign nations, vestell ha a person or an association of per. sons by a combination, is ludicative of the elar acter of the combination, because it is to the interest of the parties that such a power shonld he excrcised. and the presumption is that it will he.
"The combination $\ln$ a sligle marporation or person, by an exchange of stock, of the power if many stockholders liolding the same propor thons, respectively, of the majority of the stork of each of the several corporations engaged in commeree in the same articles among the states or with foreign nations, to restriet eompetition therehn, renders the power thas vested In thi former greater, more easily exercised, more durable, and more "ffective than that previoust. held by the stockholders, and it is 11 legal .

Each of these corporations was engaged lu some part of the huslness of producing, buying, retining, transporting, and schling petroleum and its products, and they were conducting about 80 per cint. of the production of the crude oil and more than 75 per cent. of the business of the purct sing, retinling, transporting, and selling petrokemn and its products in this country. Hany of them were engaged in commerce in these articles among the several states and with foreign natlons, and were uaturally competitive.
"1)uring the ten years prior to 1870 the seven individual defendants had acquired control of many corporatlons, partnerships, and refiners that had heen competing in this business, had placed the majority of the stock of those corpo. ratlons and the interests in property lu huslness thus ohtained in various trustees to he beld and operated hy them for the stockholders of the Standar'l Oil Company, one of the nineteen compankes in which the individual defendants were principal stockholders, and had therehy suppressed competition among these corporations and partnerships.
" $\ln 1879$, they and their assochates caused all the trustees to convey their interests in the stock, property and business of these corport. tions to five trustees, to be held, operated and distributed by them for the stockhohlers of the Standard Company of Ohio. From 1879, untll 1s93, they prevented these corporations and others engaged in tbls husiness, of which they secured control, from competing in thls commerce by causing the contrul of their operations and peliorally of a majority of their stocks, to be hehl in trust for the stockholders of the Stantaril Company of Onio, and, from 1892, until 1899 , they accomplished the same result by a similar stock-bolding device, and by the joint equitable ownership of the majorlty of the stocks of the corpurations."

COMBLNATIUNS

"The conference of 1907, though larger in numbers, was much unore of a unit in sentiment. It developed at an early stnge of the discussion that thern was no inportant element antagonizIng the trast and combination as auch. There were few speakers who failed to dwell upon the advantages which'had accrued to the nation from some combinations, and from the spirit of assoclation which, after all, cnnot be separated from them On the other hand, there was no lack of emphasis in dwelling upon the evils which had been disclosed among trusts and combinations.
"The resolutions of the conference, adopted by a unanimous vote, reveal these tendencies. They are a call for further cxauination and more light, but a call for such examinntion along certaln pretty well defined lines. They should receire the attention of Congress as an expression of the popular will on this pressing question."

The Conference held uhe sessions, extending over four days, focusling the thought of the best minds of the country, and the connsels of the largest practical experience, ou all points in the many-sided prob' ${ }^{\prime} \eta$ before it. On all that appear most import smong those peints it came to a full and clear agrecment in its conclusions, as embolled in the following resolutions, which were adopted by unanimous rote, a committee being appointed to present them to Cougress and to the Yiesklent:
"After twenty years of Federal legislntion as Interpreted by the courts, directed against the evils of trusts and combinations, and agalost railroud rebutes, beginning with the interstate commerce act of 1887 nul the nati-trust act of 1800 , a gencral and just conriction cxists that the experience gaiued in enforcing these federal acts und others succeeding them demonstrates the necessity of legislation which shall render more secure the benetits aiready falned nad better meet the chauged conditions which have arisen during a long period of active progress, both in the enforcement of statute law and in the remoral of grave aboses in the management of riblroads and corporations. These changes now demmated nre:
loirst - Inmediate legislation is required, following the recommendatho of President Kooserelt and the Interstate Commerce Commission, permitting agreements between railroad corporatious on reasmable freight and passenger rates. subject in all respects to the approval, supervision, aml action of the Interstute Conmerce Commission.
"second - The enforcoment of the Sherman act and the prowerolings moler it during the sulministruti mo of l'residents llarrison, cleveland Mokinley, and Roosevelt lave accomplished grent national results in awakesiag the moral sense of the American people and in asserting the supremacy and majesty of the law, thus elfocmally rofuting the inmpression that prent wealth and large corporations were too powerful for the inparisil execution of law. A. D. 1007-1909. - Thievery of the Sugir Trust. - In the fall of 1907 dlaclosures were male to the Government whleh led to an investlgatlon of the methods whereby imports of raw sugar for the American Sugar Refining Company, knc $n$ commonly as the Sugar Trust, were weighed for the payment of Customs duties, at the Company's docks in Williamsburgh aud Jersey City. Ther sult of the investigatlon was to prove that this cnormously wealthy corporatlon, not satlsfied with extortlons of protit from the public by lts monopoly of the vast sugar trade of the country, had stooped to practhecs of systematic theft firm thic Government, ly devlces thrit would almost shamic the professional playe"s of a thlmblerigking game. Sev. eral ingentuus inventlons of trickery with the welging scales had been ermployed at the sugar docks prior to 1904 , but the crownlng one appears to hare been brouglit to use in that year. "This," said the New York Erening Pust of April 29 , 1909, in a full rehearsal of the story of the Sugar Trust larcenies, "consisted of a thiu steel corset spring, which was luserted through a hole drilled In the uprights or stauchions supporting the scales. If inserted at a time when there was a loud on the plationm, its pressine ngalist the Walking heam of the scale resmitted ln creatiug a false balance, and in making the load appear cousiderably lighter than it really was. This little deviee proved to be so satisfactory for the purpose's for which it was designed that it was fitted eunall th. seventeen gorernment scales at the Havemeyer & Edder retinery. Holes were drilled in the stanchlons of each of the scales heuce the 'case of the seventeen holes to which Mr. Stimson callel attentlon. So successfil was the operation of this mechanlsm that it was used constantly down to the rery day. Niovember 20 . 1907, when a C'nitel States Treasury agent found lt in use.

The methor of use was slmple. The scales were placed with the starchlons in $a$ dark corner, next to the wall. and close beside this stanchion sat the company's chocker, whose ostensible duty it was tirecoril in a little book the weight of cach load as it was read off to tim by the government weigher standing at the other end of the scale. The checker's really Important duty seems to have been, bowever, to manipulate the steel spring throigh the hole ln the stanchlon. so that on each truck lond, the company which employed him was saved the payment of duty on some fourteen pounds of sugar.

Fridence was adduced at the subsequent trial to show that the company consdlered this special service on the part of its checkers worthy of additional compensation. For although there were seventeen scales, all of whleh eonkl he used for this purpose, practlcally all the weighing was done on slx, and the six reliable check. ers who, year In and year out, operated the little Consequent or the dlscovery of these facts, "several indletments were found against the Sugar 'Trust's employees, and whth that dlecovery as a basis the government began to work up its ease.

Wheu the government eame to work up its cuse and to fix approximately the amount cut of which it had been defrauled, it was fonnd possible to present a plece of evhlence whlch so thoroughly ellached the cuse that de. fence. When it caule to be made, was so reak ns to be negllglble. This evlilence conslsted of a tabulation compariug the weights of sugar on Whleh duty was pald and the welghts for whlch the company pald the planters between the thme the first cargo of sugar of Deeember, 1901, arrlved at the refinery and the discovery of the fraud in November, $100^{7}$.

- It took a score or more of accountants worklng steadlly for six months to complete the tabulation, but when it was tinlshed the astonlshing corroborative story it told made it well worth all the time and trouble expended. Never was there a better exnmple of the deadly parallel. For every entry the weights on which dutles were levied wns set alongslde of the welghts for whiell the company puid the planters."

The first result of the proceedings of the Goverument against the thlevish Trust wns a pecuniary settlement wlth it, concernhng whieh the following ollcial statencent was given ont at Washingion, hy Attorney-General Wickersbam, on the 99th of April. 1909.

[Soon after this setthment with the Govern.

The Conference itself had givell an such authority to anty Committee: hut, in view of the situs. tion as it had developeal, the Executlve Commit. tee of the Federation took the matter up. The result of its action was the proparation of a Jihil, which was subnitted in che time to C'ongruss, and which beeame the subject of numerous hear. ings hefore the Judielary Committees both of the House and of the Senate, but especially of the llouse. The Bill of last spring was based upou the belief that at that time, and before the ap. pruaching Preshential election, it would be innf"silile to ehange the substantlve law as cnibod. leel in the Sherman Antl-Trust Act. This being taket) for granted, it became Impossible to do more than propose a method by which, without thanging the low, certain restralnts of trade, if not disapproved in odvance loy some government authority, wight be assured fredom from prose. ution. The hearings hefore the Congresslonal fommirtecs mude it evident that no relief from the embarrussments caused by the Sherman AntiTrust Law ean he lonked for along this llae of procedure. Pcriapslt nught also to be said that aone ought to be lookel for, because the sltuatlon really calls for a chunge in the sulastantive provisiony of the law. Let no one imagine, how. ever, that it is an easy tining to say what such changes in the iaw ought to be. Jour Commalt. t"e last spring begau Its work In the hope that It would be able to submlt a law whleh would commnud very iarge support, not only from em. ployers but also from organlzed inbor. After working upon the subjeet for many weeks, the 13111 which it netually presented commanded no large measure of support from clther. The mercantile classes favor amendments to the law whleh, Insteal of forhidding all restraints of truie, whl furble only unressonable restralnts of trude: and whth will provide amnesty for the past, (1) on the theoretical ground that what has been cione has often beeu donc without any realization that It was concrary to the law; and (2) on the practical ground that to attempt to rip up what has aiready been done wili destroy the lndustry of the country, The representatives of orgauleed iabor, on the other hand, ask to be whltied ultogether from the provlsions of the sherman Aet. It is evident to your Committee that the changes deslred by the mercanalle chasses are geing to meet with very serions objectlun, unleasthey are combined wlth some positive lear. istathon which will provide some effective metholl of ussuring to the country, in the future, the power to protect Itself in alvance from new com hinations in the ladustrisl sphere, such as have beren made in the past, and whichoriginally cre: ated the sentlment whele placed the Sherman Autl. Trust Law upon the statute borsh.
$\because$ In other worils, precisely as a city may desire (1) limit the height of buildlags, for the future, withulit taking down those that are ulready erceted, so many persons believe that the rlatht to nake conimercinl combinations, in the future, should he under some surt of goveramental eontrol, eren though those alrcaly formed be left unnolested; and such promous, also. believe that there is the same inherent right in the boly prolitic to do the one as the other. On the other hand, the demand of organazei labor to be exempted altorether from the operations of this Act has been ohjected to in the past, and is likely to $h$ objected to in the future, as elass legislation of at kind that has no place ou Amerienn soii, becauseurganked labor is beliceved to be enpable of cxercising rest raint of trade no less than cominerrial eorponitlons.

These being the terms of the problem, it is apparent, on the face of things, that the effort to amend the Sherman Anti-Trust Low in any clfective way is beset by diffculties at cvery turn. . . . The whole subject is made infinitely ditllenlt hy the Constitutional limltations upon the power of Congress, which inare led the L'nited States Supreme Court to decide, In effect, that Congress can regnlate inter-State commerce, but eanuot regulate the corporation that does It; because the corporation that does inter-State commerce Is a crcature of the State and not of the United States. The scparate States, on the other hand, can regulnte the corporations that do inter State commerce, becausc they create them: but the States cannot regulate the Inter. Tiate commerce that is lone, because under the Cnlted States Constitution, inter-State commerce is under National control. It cannot he too elearly apprebended that the effect of this

The loan wns made on terms which give the lender eontrol of a ma. jority of the stock of the Pennsylrnula Sugar Retiniug Compnny, and Mr. Segal found, when too late, that the reai lender was the Sugar Trust. It usin fts puwer to shut down t!e piant, whlc! was said to be the most perfect of its kind, nad the Pernsylvanla Company was wreckerl. It broughe a suit for damages to the amount of $$ 30,000,000$, iuflicted upon it ln contravention of the Anti

The opposite bank is clther under the Soudanese or the Uginda Government. There are numerous lslanis, ant as ail these are under Britlsh rule - for the thalweg wiich, under Treaty, is the Belgian frontier, sklrts the western bank of the river- 1 cannot say that 1 hiul an opportunlty of sceinga full त्रो) miles of l3elglan territory. At the same thne, I saw in govil deal, and I noticed that, whereas there were numerons villages aud huts on the eastern bank and on the isiands, on the Belglan side not asign of a villnge existet. Indeed, I do not think that nuy one of our party saw a siugle liuman bring in lelginn territory. except the Belgian otllcers und men and the wlves and ehildren of the hatter. Moreover not a slngle uative was to be seell either at Kiro or Lato. I asked the Sweilish oflleer nt kiro whether he saw mueh of the natives. IIe repilin lin the negative, adu. log that the nearest Bari village was situnted nt some distance iu the interior. I understand that no Belgian oflicer 'an move outside' the settlements whthout a strong ghard.'

This is in ine with some parts of the experience of Mr. ('asement, the 13ritish Consular Oflicer referrell to in the nrticle guoted alove, whotrav. elled for nhout ten werks on the Upper Congo in 1903 , and whose report of what he saw in clables such acrounts as the following, of conlitions around Lakc Matumba: " Each villnge I visited around the lake, save that of $Q$ and one other. lad becu abandoned by its luhabitants. To sone of these villages the people have ouly just ret urned ; to others they are ouly now returning. An incident related by Mr. Casument is thls: "Steaming up a sniall trihutury of the Lulongo, 1 arrlved, uupreceded by any ramonr of iny eoming. at line viilage of $A$. In an open she ${ }^{\text {a }}$ I found two sentries of the la halanga Com-

The chlef of these mentrles, a man called $\mathbf{8}$-_- who was bearing a double-barelled shot-gun, for which he had a belt of cartridges - at once volunteered an explanation of the reason for these women's detentlon. Four of them, he said, were hostages who were being held to insure the peaceful settlement of a dlspute between two nelghbouring towns, which had already cost the life of a man. . . The remalning fleven women, whom he indicated, he sald he had caught and was detalnling as prisoners to compel their husbands to bring in the right amonint of ludia. ribluer required of them on next market duy.. Wnen lasked if it was a woman's work to collect Indla-rubber, be said, "No; that, of course, it was man's work.' 'Then why do you eatch the women and not the men?' I nskid. 'Don't you see,' was the answer, 'If I canght mul kept the men, who would work the rubber? 1hat if I catch thelr wlves, the hushands are anxlous to have them home agaln, and so the rubber is bronght in quickly and quite up to the mark." When I asked what woald hecome of these women if thelr husbands failed to bring in the right quantity of rubber on the noxt mnrket day, he seld at once that then they would be kept there untll their husbands lad redeemed them." - Parliamentary Papurt, 1 frica, AO. 1 (1904), Cu. 1933.

13 ut the facts whiv 1 eomenin the Congo ad ministration most eoneluslvely are found in the repurt of the Commitssion of Inquiry appolnted by King Lcopold himself, - especially lu what It represents of the heartless oppression of the iabor tax, or labor imposed on the natlves, In thelr ("ompulsury carrylng of goods or collectlon of rubber, forkl und woorl, for the State and for the eompanios that operatc under the King's grants. As to the labor tax exacted in fond, for example, the Commission expresser itself as follows
"The decree fixes at forty hours per month the work which each native owes to the Stute. This tlme, cousidered as n שaxhmum, ls certalnly not excessive, especially If one takes account of the fact that the work ought to be remunerated; lut ns in the lminense majority of eases by the weight of its recurrent demands, which deprive the tax of its true character and transform it inco an lncessant corvec.

Doubtless the adage, 'tlme is money.' cannot be applied to the natlves of the Congo: . . it is none the less lnadmisslble that a taxpayer should be obllged to travel over nlnety three miles to carry to the place of collectlon a tax whleh represents ahout the value of twenty $\cdot$ nine cents.
"Natives inhabltlng the environs of Lulonga were forced to journey in canoes to NouvelleAnvers, which represents a distance of forty to fifty niles, every two wecks, to carry their tish; und taxpayers have been sec.n to submit to im. prlsonnient for delays whlch were perhaps not chargeable to them, if we take into nccount the considerable distances to be covered periodically to satisfy the requirements of the tax."

As applled to the collectlon of ruhber, the socalled lalortax was found lig the commission to consume so much of the tlme of the natives sub. jected to it that it practlcally made slaves of them, and nothing less.
When the abused native is pretendedly pald for hls labor or its product, it is by some trifle In metal or flimsy woven stuff, which costs the State and its tributary compan' 's wext to nothing ant is next to worthless to the reclpient.

And not only loes the State exercise over the unfortunate suhjects that were delivered to it an authority of Government which appears to be little else than a power of extortlou, bit it has taken all their lands from then, sulvianlally, and left them next to nothlng on whleh to perform any labor for themselves. It has decreed to itself the ownership of all land not included ha the native villages or not under cultivatlon. Concerning whlch decree the Commission remarks :

As the greater part of the laud in the Congo has never been under cultivation, this interpretation gives to the State a proprlctary right, absolute and exclusive, to almost ali the land, and as $n$ consequence lt can grant to itself all the pronluct of the soll and prosecute as robbers those who gather the smallest frult and as accomplices those who buy the same. . . . It thins happens sometimes that not only have the natives been prohiblted from moring tbelr villages, but they hare been refused permission to go, even for a tlme, to a nelghborlng vlllage without a suecial permit."

In the shmmer of 1003 the British Government was moved to address a formal communication to all the Powers whlch had been partles to the Act of the Berlin Conference of 1884-5, wherchy the Congo State was ereated and entrustel to King Leopold, asking them to consiler whether the system of government nal of trade monopoly estublished in that State was lu conformity wlth the provisions of the Act. The Brltish Forelgn Secretary, Lord Lansiowne, in hls despatch (Augnst $*, 1903$ ), rehearsed at length the charges that were brought against the Congo administration. concerning lts extortion of labor from the uailves by a methol "but little different from that formerly employed to obtaln slaves," saying: "IIls Majesty's Government do not know priclsely !" what extent these accusatlons may be true; hut they have heen on repeatedly made, anit have recelred sueli whele crodence, that lt is no longer possible to junore them, and the ques. tion has now arisen, whether the Congo State

Can be considered to have fulfilled the npectal pledges, given under the Berlin Act, to watch over the preservatlon of the natlve tribes, and to care for their moral and material advancement."

At the same time, the dispateh called the attentlon of the Powers to the question of rights of trade in the Congo, saying: "Artlcle $I$ of the Berlin Act provides that the trade of all natlous shall enjoy complete freedom in the basin of the Congo: and Artlele $V$ provides that no Power wbich exercises soverelgn rights ln the basiu shall be allowed to grant therein a monopoly or favour of any kind ln matters of trade. In the opinion of Hls Majesty's Government, the system of trude now existing in the Independent State of the Congo is not in harmony with tbese provisions. . . . In these circumstances, His Majesty's Government conslder that the time has come when the Powers partles to the Berlin Act slould consider whether the system of trade now prevaillng in the Independient State is ln barniony with the provisions of the Act; and, In particular, whether the system of maklng grants of vast areas of territory is permisslble under the Act if the effect of such grants is in practice to create a monopoly of trade."-Parliamentary Papers, Africa, No. 14 (1903), Cd. 1809.

Durlag the next two years the Congo Government was persistent indenying and attenipting to refute some parts of the reports sent hone by l3rlish consular officers ln the Congo; but after the puhlication of the report of its own lnvestigating Commlssion, In 1905, there seems to have heen more retieence observed. But the Consuls wlio reported to London from the Congo country do not seeti to have found the wretched natives much relieved by thesp decrees. Viee-Consul Armstrong, writlng from Boma Deeember, 1907, after a prolonged journey throngh rubber-collecting regions, deelared his conviction that "the people worked from twenty to twenty five days a montb " to satisfy thelir labor tax. He added: "The 1 miprovement that lias been made by the appllication of the. "I calcuiate thr rubber at 10 fr . per kllog., the value placed upon it by the State in the Com merviai Keport issted this year. The market value in Autwerp is from 12 fr . to 13 fr . per kilog. From this amount of 570 . mist the deducted the cost of transport, which cannot be more than 2 fr. per kilog. rendered at Antwerp, so that the net protits derived from thls one allage wouid be a fittle more than $456 \%$. per anmmin. One bundred and twenty natives, together with their wires and chlldren, which would bring the population of the town to about 400 souls, slare this amount of 28t. 16. and as this is padd in cloth at 7+d. per yard aul salt at 1 s . $\boldsymbol{i} \frac{1}{2} d$. per kllog., it is evident that they cannot receive very much ench, and that they coinplain of their remnneratiou."
lhese were not the only ofticial witnesses now testifying to the barbarities of commercial ex. ploitatiou that were perpetrated in the Congo country under proteuces of administering the Gorernineut of a State. leports to the sane effect were coming to the Government of the Cnited states from its Consuls in the Congo. Consul. Generai (.. R. Slocum wrote on the 1 st of December, 1946, to the llepartment of State at Washington: "I have the honour to report that I tind the Congo Free sitate, under the present régime. to be nothing but a vast commerciad en terprise for the experiation of the proxlucts of the comitry, part ularly that of ivery and rubber. Almitted by l3elgian othcials and other forcigners here, the state, an 1 tind it, is not open to trade in the intembed sense of arifle 5 of the Berion Aet under which the State was formed."
A year later, the succeeding Consul-Generai of the Cinted States in the Congo State. Mr James A. Smith, made a similar report: "In excluding the native," be wrote, "from any proprietiery right in the only commodities he possersed which wouhd scrve as a trade medium -that is, the probluets of the soll-and in claming for itsilf and granting to a fert con cessionary compantes in which it holds an interest excmsive ownersilip of these products. the Alministration, in its commercial capacity has effectiruly shut the dion to free trade and creatci a vast monopoly in all articles the free dom of buying and selling which alone could form a proper basia for legitimate trade trans actions butreen the mitive and independent purchasirs. ('ompetition, by which aione can a healthy condition of trade he mantained, has becn entlrely eliminated. The fovernment is but one trementoms commercinl organization: its achminist rative muchinery is we ked to bar out ali outshle trule and to absolntely controi for its own benefle and the concessionary companies the natural reseurces of the country.'

In the same report Mr. Sinith sare details of an experiment he had male. in eonjunctlon with the chef de secteur at Vimblata, to fest the truth of the assertions made by the natives as to the length of time neecssary to gather the rubber which they are compelled to furuish. The place for the experiment was selected by the chef do sectenr. and he chose the five natives who were employed in the experineut, and who wero promisel rewaris an an incentive to do their best. The uen worked for four hours, and aithough Mr. Smith vouches for the fact that they did unt lose a minute, they oniy meceeded in gathering 650 grammes. From this, as Mr. Snith argues, the amount of tlme they would have to ypedil in collectling the rubler tax works out at if hours a month, or, counting eight hours a day, at 140 days a rear. This dld not indude the time spent in iraveiling to and from the rubber bearing districts.

Before this time, Amerlean interest in the Congo State had become more than fiumanita rian, and more than a commercial interest in the geueral opportmities of trade; for heary Ameriean capitalists had secured concessions from King Leopohl in a large territory for the development of railways, rubieer production and mines. The fact was announced In the fall of 1908 , aud the numes of John D. Hockefeller Jr., Thomas F. liyan. Harry Payne Whitner, Edward B. Aldrich and the Messrs. Guggenheim were mentioned as prominent in the group to Which the grant was made.

Under the Couvention of 1890 between Kinc Leopold and the Congo State, as one party, and the Kingdom of lelginm as the other, it became the right of the latur, on the expiration of ten years, In 1000, to amnex the Congo State to its.lf isece in Velume VI. of this work, Cosuo State A. I). 10(0). The right whe not then exercisell; but the question of taking oror the sorerelgnty of that great African domain came under warm discussion in Belgium before many years, and, fually, in 10 , it renched the point of a keen negothation of terms with the King, attended by iively contlicts in the l3elgian Chambers. While the question wins thas jending fu Belgium, the British Governnent tonk necasion to express its riews to the Belgian Gorernmeut, as to the ohiligations whieh such an aunexation would involve. This was done on the 27th of March, 1008. in a despatch from the Foredgn Minister, Sir Edward Grey, communicating an extended" "Memoran. dum respecting Taxation and currency in the Congo ree state." The language of the despatch, in part. was as follows:
" 11 is Majesty's Government fuily recognize that the choler of the means bir which the admitiistration of the Conge may be brought fato line br the Ilerlin Ant rests exchusi reiy with Belglum. Verertheless, wille disclaiming ail idea of inter. ference, llis Majesty's Goverument feel that in fairness they should leare the lBeiglan Government in no donbt that in their opinion the exist ing administration of the (congo State has not fulfilled the objects for which the State was orig inaily recognized, or the conditions of Treaties and that changes are therefore required, which should effect the following objects: 1. Rellif of the natives from excessire taxation. 2. The grant to the natives of sufficient land to ensure their ablity to obtain not only the food they re. quire, but also sumficint produce of the miif to chable them to buy und se-ll as in other European Colonies. 3. The possibillty for traders what. crer their aationallty may be to acquire piots of iand of reasonable dimenslons ln any part of the Congo for the erectlon of factories so as to enshie them to estahlish direct trade relatlons with the natlves.
"Taklng the three points enumerated above in order, it appears to His Majcaty's Government that -
"1. As regards the question of taxation in iabour, the ahuses to which the system has given rise have only been rendered possible by the absence of a proper standard of value. They believe, therefore, that the oniy sure and efficacious means of preciuilng the existence of such abuses in the future is the lntroduction of currency throughout the State at the carlicst possit)le date. Both the Reports of the Commission of Inquiry and the experience of Ifls Jajesty's Consular officers agree in the concluslon that the natlve bas learnt the use of money, and that currency would be weicomed hy all classes, native and European alike.
"2. The natives in the concesslonary areas should not be compelied, hy either direct or indirect means, to render their labour to the Com. panles without remuneration. The introduction of currency shouid contribute greatiy to the protection of the native againat the llificit and excessive exactlons on the part of private indivlduals Such protection, however, cannot be adequately secured unless the iatter be compeiled to pay the gative in specte at a fair rate to be fixed hy law
"3. They would urge that a iarge Increase should be made in the land alintted to the natires."
The exceptlonal failure of the Congo State. among African coionlcs, to introduce the use of currency in transactions wlth the natives, and the comnection of this fallure with the state of things existing there, is discussed at length in thr Jlergo ranium, with a practical summing up in these s-ntences: "The Secretaries-Grneral said the native in tie Congo had nospecle. Truc, hut why has he no specie? Because, as aiready espiained, during the twenty-three years that the Congo State has been in existence no serious attempt. in spite of all assertlons to the contrary, has ever bewis made hy the State to Introduce currencr on a sufticiently large scale. In every other Europesn Colony in Africa has the native crme to learn the practical raiue of a medium of exchange. What are the reasons that the Congo State should stanil in an exceptional position in this respect? They are unfortunately ohvlous enough. The truth is that lt is preclsely owlng to the absence of a proper standard of value that the Congo Governmentand the Concessionary Companles hare been able to abuse the system of taxation In labour, and realize enormous profits out of the incessant iabour wrung from the population in the guise of taxaation."
This communication from Great Britain to the Belgian Government was folinwed sonn (in A prii) by memoranda from the Government of the Unitad States, setting forth the hoprs and cxpec. tations of adminlstrative reform with which It contcmplated the proposed annexatlon of the Cinners State.

A few months later the treaty of annexatlon wrs agred upon, and the annexation consum. materl by an Act of the Beigian Parliament, pro.
 nonnerment of the fact by the Belgian Ministry at Washington, Secretary Koot replled at consill erable length, In a communication which bears the date of June 11, 1909 : "The Government of the Cnited States," nalil the Secretary, "bas observed with much interest the progress of the negrotiations joriking to such a transfer. in the expectation that under the control of Belgium the condition of the natives ruight ixe beneficially Improved and the engagements of the treaties to wislcis the C'nited States is a party, as weil as the hlgh alms set forth in the A su- ican memorandu if Aprii 7 and 19, $160 \%$, and cieciared ln the Beigium repifes thereto, might be fully reailzeti.
"Tise C'nited Statea would aiso be gratificd lip the assurance that the Bugian Government will consider itseif specificaliy bound to discharge the obligations asaume if by the Independent statc of the: Congo in the Brusseis Conventlon of July 2 , Its*), an assurance which the expressions aiready made by the Government of Belyium in regard in its own course as a party to that convention leave an doubt is in entlre accordance with the sentiments of that Government. Among the particular clauses of the Brusseis Convention which scem to the C'alterd States to be speciaily relevant to existing conditlons in the Congo region are the ciauses of Artlcie If., which fociude among the objects of the convention:
." To diminlah Intestine wars hetween tribes by means of arbltration; to lnitiate them in ag. ricultural labour and in the lndustrial arts so as to increase their wifare; to raise them to cirll. ization and hring about the extinctlon of harbar. ous customs.
". To glve ald and protection to commercial entroprises; to watch orer their legaiity by es. pe. ilf controiling contracts for service with natires; and to prepare the way for the founda. tion of permanent centres of cultivation and of commerciai settlements."
"The United States has been forced to the conclusion that in several respects the system inaugurated b : the Independent State of the Congo has, in its practical operation, worked out results inconsistect with these conventiouai obligstions and calling for very substantial and eren radicai changes io order to attain conformity therewith." Moreover, it renders nugatory the provisions of the successive declarationsand conventions, clted by the Secretary, which have girin such rigits In the Congo State to citizens of the C"uiudi States and others as must be maintained.
" it should always be remcmbered," wrote Mr. Root, "that the basis of the sovereignty of the Independent State of the Congo over all its territors was in the treaties mavie by the natlve Sovercigas who ceded the territory for the use and benefit of free sitates established and belog estahlished there under the care and supervision of the International Association, so that the very nature of the title forbids the dest: uction of the tribal rights upon which it rests without securing to the natires an cnjovment of their iand which shall be a fuli and alequate equivalen for the tribal right, iestrored Titus no recognition was given to the Belgian annexation. ideeognitlon was held lu abcyance, awaiting further information and evidence of reform in the administratlou of the Congo State. And this is the attltude assumed by the Britisis Government, whleh waited long and with growIng Impatience for assurances from Belginm, whth proceedlags that would givesign of mak. ing tilem good. On the 24th of February, 1909, the suhject came up in Parliament, witi nsser. tlons that "oppression of the natives was stiil golng on just as before the annexation, "aul that "Gruat Britaln had waited for months whlle the crueltles against whieh she had protested still continued." In tise dehate, slr ('harles Dilke referred to the fiarmony of action lin the matter hy the United States and Great Britain, and expressed his convietlon that " the coisperation of two sueh powerful Governments iu the cumse of humanity wouid be irreslstihle." Sir Edward Gruy, speaklng for the Ministry, said:

"I an giad that in the course of the debate it has been emphasized that this attitude is not ours alone, hint that the Unlted states has spoken with equal emphavis and takern up the smee position. I aun sorry that no other Power has taken up the sante position so strongly: but as there is only one Power which has deelared itself so defliniteiy on the question as ourselves, I shouid like to say that I am glad it is the Cnited Stmes."

Aliuding to a remark inale by one of the speakers In the dehate, that the Government might have preventeri the anuexation of the State by Belgium, Sir Edwarl said: "I do not think we shonll have prevented the anncxation, bist in any case I should not have tried to prevelt the annexation. And for this reason among others - that if belgium was not coing to take the Congo State in hand and put it rlght, who was? I lave never been able to answer that question. Certainly not ourselves, hecause me have aisays dienied the intertion of assuming any responslbility over an enormous traet of? if where we hive suflciont responsibility already."

The Forelgn Secretary conciudied his speech by saying: "if Belgium makes tie administration of the Congo humane and brings it into accorti, in practice and spirit, with the alministration wiich exists in our own and neigibourlng Africin coionies, no country will more eordially Welcome that stute of things than thls or more warmiy eongratulate Belglım. But we cannot commit ourselves to counterslgn, so to say, hy recognitiou a secoml time, thr system of aftminIstration which has exlsted under the old rigime,"
Again, in Jay, the question came up in Par flament, with Impatient criticism of the Government for not taking peremptory measures to eompel a reformation of Ibeigian ruio In the Congo State, one speaker suggesting a "peace. ful blockade" of the mouth of the Congo. Sir Edward Grey repiled:
"If this question were rashiy managed It might make a European ques!lon compared to which thoee which we have had to deal with in the iast few months might he child's pisy. Take, for instance, the questlon of peaceful bisck: ade. It is no gooi talklig of peaceful biockade. Biockade is hlockudc. It is the usc of force. If you are to have hiockanic you must be prepared to go to war, and a biorkade of the mouth of the Congo means hlockading a river whieh is not the property of the Congo or Belglan Government. They lave one hank of the river. Sureiy if you are going to piedge yourseif to take steps of that kind, and to aecept the responsibility for them, It is not too much to say that you must be prepured to raise a European question which wouid be of the gravest $\mathrm{k}^{\mathbf{3}-\mathrm{d}}$. Australia : Undertakings of Irrigation and Forestry, - During a hrief visit to the Cnited States in 1902, Sir Ealmund Barton, then Premiter of the Commonwealth of Australia, contrihuted to The Independent an artiele on "Australia and ber Problems," in whleh he wrote:
"Another grest prohlem with which we are struggling is that of irrgation, and a joint irrigation scheme is afont for using the waters of the Murray, our greatest riyer, to fertillze lands In New South Wales and Victoria. The Murray forms the boundary of those two States and afterward flows through South Australia. It is (1) the interest of New South Wales and Victoria to use the waters of the Murray for irrigation purposes, and it is to the interest of South Australia to use the Murray for navipation. We hope to harmonize those interests and are working to that end.

Just hefore I left Australia I attended a conference, held on the border, between representatives of the various States as a result of which cach has appointed a hydruulic eugineer to a juint eonmisiou on irtigation. These will make an Investigation adil report their opinion in regard to the best practicable system for conserv. ing, storing and listributing the Murray's waters without interfering with its navigation. We have good reason to believe that hy neans of a systeru of locks and weirs it is quite possible to Irrigate a very large extent of dry country by means of the Surray without injuring its navigaility. Later we will take up the prohlem of using the waters of the Darling in a sluilar way. It is a very long river, whlch during the raing $5 x: a n n$ sends an immense volume of water into the Murray.

Another of our prohlens is in regard to forestry. We have planted sone trees but not nearly enough of them, and eannot yet tell anything about results. Along with this tree plantin t. also, denudation of our timber has been g.ing on, for Australian hard wools, heing imporvinus to water, are now used all over the worlif for street paving purposes. Great harm has been done, und the waste is still going on, I f our national Governmeat cannot interfere in the matter, and the land owners are in many insianres reckless. The remedr nust come from the common sensc of the people."

SInce the above was written, progress has been made in carrying out the projects of Irrigation, as Was stated in a speech by Lord Fortheote after his return to England, in the autumn of 1004 , from five years of service as Governor.

General of Australia. "Both in New South Wales and Vietoria," he said, "very large irrigation works are in progress, and will be completed in a very short tinue, adding enormously to the acreage of land it for cultivation.

Canada: The Dominion Forest Reserves Act. - Irrigation in the Northwest. - A Dominion Act of 1906, thus short-titled, provides as foliows: "All Dominion lands withln the respectire boundaries of the reserves mentioned in the schedule to this Aet are hereby withdrawn from sale, settlement and occupancy under the provisions of the Dominion Lends Act, or of any other Act, or of any regulations made under the -n Act or any such Act, with respect to mines or miuing or timber or timber liceuses or leases or any other matter whatsoever; and after the passing of this Aet no Dominion lands within the boundarles of the said reserves shall be sold. leased or otherwise disposed of, or be located or settled upou, and no person shall use or occupy ans part of such lands. except under the provisions of this Act or of regulations made thereunder."

The schedule referred to lists 21 Forest Reserves In British Columbia, Manitoha, Saskatch. ewan, and Alberta. They are placed under the management of the Superintendent of Forestry, for the maintenance and proteetion of the grow. ing timber, the animals and hirds in them, the fish in their waters and their water supply, the Governor in Council to make the needed regulations.

In a paper read before the Roya ${ }^{1}$ Colonlal Institute at Lonilon, England, in January, 1910. Mr. C'. W. Peterson, Manager of the Canalian Pacific Irrigation Colonization Company, gave the followlac aceount of what is being done in the Arid Belt, so called, near Calgary. in the (anadian Northwest: "The Irrigated land in Aberti and Sasinatelewan nearly equalled half of the total irrigated area of the United States. In the gear 1894 the Domlnion Government withdrew from sale and homesteal entry a tract of land eontaining some millions of acres incated eust of the city of Calgary, along the main tine of the Canadian Pacific Kailwiy. The object of that reservation was to provide for the construetion, ultimatelf, of an irrigation scheme to cover the fertile Bow River Valley. The Canalian Paeific Kailway Company undertook to constrict the digantie irrigation system in yulestion, and soleeted as part of its land grant a hlock eomprisis. three million acres of the hest agricultural lands. It had now been opened for Egypt : A. D. 1909 . - Completion of the Esneh Barrage. - Animportantindidtion to the Irrigatlon works in Eisypt. supplementing the great dam at Assouan nud the Asslout barrage, was completed In Fehrunry, 1000, when the Esneh barrage was fomually opened, on the 9th of thut uonth. Esneh ls a town of some 25,000 luhahiltants, situated ln Upper Kgypt, on the west burk of the Nife, and the work now compheted wilh, even in the lowest of floorls, ensure a plentlful supply of water to a grent tract of land In the Nite valiey from Esnch northwarde. In deelding to undertake the constructlon of this lntest barrnge, at a point nbout 100 miles atorth of the Assouan reservolr, the Government were intluenced by the great success of the Asslout barrage, but thnt work differs from the new barrage in belng designed as $n$ low-water summer regulator, wheruas the function of the Esnch barrage is to hold up the water $\ln$ low floods.

Germany: The work begun a century ago and its reault.-"Germany, a century ago, faced just such a situation as now confronts us [the lnited states]. Then there began the work whleh we must now undertake. New forests were pinnted, wherever the lnnd was unsultable for other purposes. Thls planting was done year after year, so that each year n new tract would come to maturity. Forest wnrdens watched for thres, and laws forbade careless huuters setting fires in the woods. Timbermen were foreed to gather and burn what twles from the sinshings could not be used in the still or burned forcharcoal, and broad lanes were left through the forests ns supps for tires. In this way there arose titose magniticent German forests whlch now return the enpire an average net annual profit of two dollars and a half for each nere, on land which is otherwise unusable: ancl, lesides, give their services free for the storage of water and for the retention of the soil.

- In our own land something of thls sort has alrendy been done. New lork has nearly two millini acres of land in forest reserves which are thelng carefnly tunded. Pennsylvanla has half as much. Minnesota is already securing considerable protit from the manngenient of its white pine reserves and is sceding down large areas: anll the ot ler lake stntes nre alsomoving, but :1ll this is bing done slowly, nnd lacks much of the encreg and cosperation which should aecompany it." - J. Great Britain: Outline of undertakinge by the Government in 8909 . - Development and Road Improvement Act. - In his Budget speech to the llonse of Commons April 29. 1900, the Cinancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. David LioydGeorge, gave n lirmul inuliration of undertakings contemplated by the Goverument, in forestry work (afforestntion. or reafforestation) and on other lints directed toward a more effective pre. servation :mid development of the natural resources of the country. In the afforestation of the Was: e lands of the cuuntry, he said. $\cdots$ We are far behlud every other civilized country In the world. I have figures which are very inter.
euting on thle point. In Germany, for Instance, out of a total area of 188 millifon acren, 84 mill. llons, or nearly 26 per cent., are wouded; in Frauce, out of 180 million acres, 17 per cent.; even in a small and densely populuted country such as Belglum, 1,260,000 acree are wooded, or 17 per cent. In the United Klngdom. on the other hand, out of 77 malillon acres, only 8 mili. lions, or 4 per cent., are under wooxi. Bir Herbert Maswell, who has made a study of this question for a good many years, and whuse moleration of statement is beyond challenge. estlmates that, in 1900, 'elght millions were pnid annualiy ln salaries for the administratlon, fornantlon, and prearvation of German forests, representing the maintenance of about $2(0), 0 \times 10$ families, or about $1,000,000$ souls; ard that in working up the raw material ylelded by the forests wakes were carned annually to the amount of 80 mllll ons sterilng, malntainlng about 600,000 familles, or $8,000,000$ souls.' The Committee will there percelve what an important element this is in the labour and cmployment of a country. Any one who will take the trouble to search out the census returns will find that the number of peopic directly employed in forest work In this country is only 16,000. And yet the woll and the cllmate of thls country are just as well adapted for the growth of marketable trees as that of the States of Germany. Recently we have been faroured with a atriking report of a Royal Commission, very nuly presided over by my hon. friend the member for Cardlf. A perusal of the names attacherl to that report will secure for it respectful and favoursble consideration. It outiines a very comprehenslve and far-reaching scheme for plantling the wastes of this country. The systemntic operatlon which the Commission recomimend is a gigantic one, and, before the Government can commit thenselves to it in all fis details, lt wili require very careful considera tlon by a hody of experts skilled ln forestry. I am Inform d by men whom I have consulted. and whose oplnion on this subject i hlghly valuc. that there is a gowal denl of prellminary worti which ought to be undertaken In this country before the Govermment could safely begin planiing on the large scale $\ln$ ilicated in that report

I am aiso told that we connot command the serrices $1 n$ this country of $n$ sufficient number of skilled foresters to direct planting.
-I doubt whether there is a great induatrial country $\ln$ the world which spends less moner directly on work connected with the develop. ment of its resources than we do. Take the case of agricuiture alone. Examine the Budgets of foreign countries - 1 have done it with great advantage in other directlons-examine them from this particular point of vlew, and hin. menibers, I thlnk. wlil be rather ashamed at the contrast hetween the wise and favish generosity of countries much poorer than ours and the shurislchted and niggardly parsimony wleh whit b we dole out snall sums of money for the encouragement of agricuiture hit our country.
"I will tell the House what we propose. Thire is a ccrtain amount of money, not very much, spent in this country in a spasnomitic kind of way on what 1 will call the work of nationnt development - in light raliways. in hanrbours. In lndirect liut very meagre assistance to agriculture. I propuse to gather nll these gmats togrether into one grant that 1 propose to call $n$ development grant, and

Dec. 3, 1901.

The Nationalizing of Irrigation Works. The highest quallty of statesmanship is repre. sented by such recommendatlons as these. No far as concerned the proposed natlonalization of lrrigation works, to reciaim the arid lands of the West, they bore frult within a ycar, In the passage hy Congreas of the leclamatlon Act of Junc 17, 1902. It devoted most of the proceeds of the sale of pulbic lands, in Arizons, Callfornla, Colorado, Illaho, Kansas, Montana, Nevada, New Mexleo, North and South Iakota, Okla. homa, E゙tah, Washington, and Wyoming, to a specinl lecelamation Fund in the Treasury, for the creation and maintenance of irrigatlon works. This was a measure for whlch the late Major John W. Powcil, Dlrector of the United States Geological Survey, had iaborel incessantly for mang rears. In his book on "The Laris of the Ard Kegions" he was the first to slu possibility of redemption for mast of the spaces of land then supposed to be hopeless desert, and he pleaded with Congress, session after scssion, for some national undertaking to store and distribute the waters from the mountains that would give ilfe to their soil. In 1888 he sueceeded so far as to win authority and means for investigating the water supply for the reglon, and from that time he hail kept an efficient smail corps of engineers at work in the surrey and measurement of streams. accumulating informatlon that was ready for immediate use when aetual constructive work was taken In hand. At once, on the passage of the Reclamation Aet, the Director of the Geolorical Surfer, acting under the Secretary of the Interior, began the cxecution of plans already weli matured, for Irrigation In Arizona and Nevada; and was able thrce years later to report similar undertakings In progress whithin three of the ten Territorles and thirtecn States.

In May, 1008 , the following statement of the reclamation work then In progress appearedl in The Outlook: "The vork as a whole rivais the Panama Canal in the lahor and expense In rolredi. The emplormene of 16.000 men and the expendi. ture of $$ 1,250.000$ every month are but Inedients

In Nrw Mexlco one of the iargest diams in the worli is being constricted. In Callfornis and Nevada great reservolr and irrigatlon piants are being built. These projects lie in North and South Dakota, Montana, and Wash. ington. In thrse Ntates lanis that have lueen considered as wortinless except for the coarsest kirt of grazing are being transformed into productive farnis. In Nouth Dukota the largest earth dam in the world is being constructed, that nlnety thousand acres of land may be made fertile; whlle just east of the Yeliowstone Park is being built a solid wall of masonry 310 feet high to inid back the waters of the shoshone Klver until a reservoir of ten square milles, capable of irrigating a hundred tionsand acres, is formed. The production of these irrigated lands is marvclous."
The latest official statiatics that are avaiisble represent the total of acres irrigated at the end of the year 1007 as being $11,000,000$, $\ln 167,2(4)$ farms, at an average cost (of constructive work) of ह13. 46 per scre.

A National Forest Policy. - Less promptitude of action foilowed the Preshlent's urgiag of measures for forest preservation, and his warnings to Congress and the eountry, agalast the consequences of this inaction, were repeated from year to year. Ilis Message of December, 1904 , carried a spectaliy urgent plea for legisla: iton to unify the natlonal forest work. "I iase repeatedly," he said, "called attention to the confusion which exists In Goverument forest matters because the work is scattered amoug three indcpendent organizations. The U'nited States is the only one of the great nations in which the forest work of the Government is not concentrated under one department. In consonance whth the piainest dletates of good aifministration and common sense. The present arrangement is bad from evcry point of view. The Introluction of this system bas been brought about by the efforts of an organization which bearn the name of the Horstal Associatloa, concerniny whone experimentai nadertakings the London Timeo sald. lately, In an edltorial artlcie: "Those who have hitherto been aceptlcal an to effective treatment of the criminal classes wonli do weil to consult the report for 1009 of the Borntal Association. The adrocates of the Boratal byotem claim to hare arofied these mlatakes. 'It Is aot," they say, "a aamby paniby system; only those who accept lis etrong laceutive and reformative miethols find it tolerable; those who do nut, entreat for removal to other prisoas where lea development and improvement of thelr latent chpacitles are demanded.' it seeks to inure to harl work the lads subject to lte discipllae; it woull make them strong and fit to handie tonle Inteiligently; it would turn them loun healthy and weil set-up men. Probation Syatem, as established by recent leglalatlon in New York. - "Probatlon, as authorizel by the lawe of New lork State, Is a system of disclpilne and correctlon. or, In some cases, of moral guardianship, applied by courts to sultable offenders, after coavictlon, for the purpme of lmproving thelrcoudict and circumstaaces without committing then to histitnt lons. The defendants are releasel condithonally on their gooi behavior, under suspended sentence, and unler the friconliy but authoritative supervlsion of representative of the court, known as a probation officer. The probation law contemplates that In placlag a defebilant on proba. ton certain terms aad conditlons shail be imposed, and it provides that If the probutioaer violate tbese conditlons, his probation wificer may return him to court for the execution of senteace. Beshies ustualiy requlring each probathoner to report to hlm from time to tiuse, the probation officer is expected to vislt the proba. tloner at frequent lutervals and to do whatever seems essential to improve hls surroundings and habits. The prohat ioa officer should report regularle to the court concerning the progress of each probatloaer. When so drected by the court. the probation officer also investigates cases, particufarly with reference to the history, circum, tances and character of the defendants, in onler to iny before the court facts which may be important Indeterminiag whether they should be placed oa probation.

- It ls desirable to keep the distluctlon bet ween probatlon mui parole cleariy lnmind. Vnder the New York laws the word prohution refers to the supervision of liffendants who, after conviction, are relonsed under anspurated sontence. The suspension of sentence aloue does not constlute probation: there must als, be oversight by a probation ollicer. The woni parole, on the other hand, is applied to two entirely lifferent sys. tems. Ia some courts before convictions ure fonad. cuges are adjourned from time to thae and the defeluiants conditionaily r-feased ; and thls is enlled parole. There is no autiority to apply the term probation to this practice, becaum umier the New lork state lawe a person cannou be placel ou probatlon until after convicton. I'arole is the appropriate word to use also is contuctlon with the comitlonal reluase of inmates from penai or reformatory instibutions lefore the expiration of their term of commit. ment.

It would not (d) to walt for the new goveroment to pass laws ur to create ofilices and appolnt aduinlstrillve offleers and veat them whith powers, for th," Instant that the new government was ereatinl the Intervening government ceaset, ant the perfod of walting would be a perlod of anarchy
' It wum necessary, therefore, to take such ateps that the new Government ahould be createrd as a golug concern, every offleer of which shonlil be able io go on with hls part of the businces of fow rning under the new soverei,nty whout waiting forany new authorlty. That ceveryiling necessury to this end should be done, and that it should be chone accomllig to a conslatent and maintalnable legal theory, caused the Department n goul deal of mollcitude. A. D. 1906 (Aug.-Oct.).-Outbreak of insurrection. - Appeal of President Paima for American intervention. - The Republic practically without a Government. - Secretary Taft, sent to the lsiand, establishea a Proviaional Government. - Governor Magoon. The frst report to the Government of the Linited States of an outbreak of insurrection In Cuba wss sent from the Ameriean Legation at Havsns on the 21 st of August, 1906. Between 1000 and 1500 men were then said to be in arms in Plnar dei Rio, under Colonel Pino Guerra, "a Llheral member of the present Congress and a veteran of the War of Independence." The in. surgents represented the politieaf party ealled Liberai, hostlle to the party ealied JInderate Which eontrolied the Goverument and ejjoyed the favor of President Palma. They colplained of unfairness in late elections and demanded a new electoral inw with a new eleetion to be hefd undel it. The Government had no effeetive armed forees to use against them, and some effort by business men of Havana and by "veterans" to medinte hetween the parties and pacify the revolutlonists were withont avaii. Events, therefore, moved rapidiy to the producing of a situt on in whleh President Palma, on the 12th of September, asked for American interventlon, and begged 'that President Roosereit send to Havana with rapidity 2000 or 3000 men, to avold any eatastrophe in the capital." Two days fater the request was repeated with more urgeney, the Consui-General at Harana statlng in a tele: gram to the State Department at Washington:

- President I'alma has resolved not to eontinue at the head of the Government, and is ready to present his reslgnation, even though the present disturiances should cease at once. The viee. presitlent has resolved not to aecept the office. Cabinet ministers hare declared that they wili previousiy resi $n$. Lniler these conditions it is Impossible tt Congress will meet, for the faek of a proper person to convoke same to designate a new president. The eonsequenees will be absenee of legai power, and therefore the prevailing state of ararchy will continue uuless the Cnited States Government will adopt the measures neeesary to avoid this dangcr."
The action then taken hy President Roosevelt was recounted hy him in his next annual Message to Congress, as follows: "It was evident that ehaos was inpending, and there was every prohability that if steps were unt immediately taken by this Governmeut to try to restore order. the representatives of various Furopenn nations in the island woud apply to their respective governments for armed Intervention in order to protact the lives and property of their eitizens. Thnuks to the prepareduess of our Nary, I was able immedintely to send enougi shlps to Cuba to prevent the situation from beeming hopeless: and 1 furthermore dispatchal to ('ubu the Secretary of War and the Aasistant Secretary of State, in order that they might grapple with the situntion on the gronnd. All eflorts to secure an agreement between the coutending faetions. by which they should thenselves come to an amicable un derstandin:- and settle upon some modus vivendi - some provisional gorermment of their ownfailed. Finally the Iresident of the Republic resigned. The quornm of Congress asseubled failed by dediberate purpose of its members, si) that there was no power to act on his resiguation, and the Government came to a halt. In accorl auee with the so called Ihatt amendment, wiicht was emboried in the eonstitution of Cula, I thereupon pructaimed a provisional government for the ishnd, the Secretary of War acting as provisional governor until he could be replaced hy Mr. Mingoon, the late miuister to Panamin and goveruor of the Canal Zone on the asthmus; troors were sent to support them and to reliere the Nary the expedition ieing handled with most sntisfactury specd and efficieney. The insurgeut ehiefs immedintely agreed that their troops shonld lay down their arms and disband; and the agreentent was carried out."
From an "Epitome of events attendant upon the establishment of the Provisional Governacut oi Cuha." publisised in Pirt 1 of "Papers relat. ing to the Forcign izefations of the Cuited States," for 1906, the following is taken:
"On Saturday, September 29,1904 , a provisional govermment exercisiug Cubansovercignty under the authority of the President of the Cnited States was established, und a proclanation was iscued to the cuhau people setting forth the cr $:$ yes for this uction and diffining the position of the Linited States toward ('uba.
-Since the American commissioners nuder stand that the deepublic of cuba is contimuens and that they are only the ad interim executives, the various departments continue to function as lefore with the assistant secretaries as ucting ineals, the ony offleinls discharged being those taken on to met the exigencies of the revolution.
"At the time the commissioners assumed con. trol there were mumy politieni prisoners in the jails throughout the island. These, of wiom sis seral were prominent literals who had several thees been consuited by the comnissioners while on parole, were immedintely set at liberty
"The dishanding and lisarming of the rehe forces and. incidentally the goverument militia, enisted spectally for the revolution, has been the chief concern of the provisional government from its establishment until now. It was carried out hy a commission of Amprican nnd ('uban military oflicers, of whieh Gen. Frederick

"On the 10th Instant [October] Provisional Governor Taft issurol a gencral amnesty proela. matlon to the people of Cuha, thus Indicatlng that quiet and peace lave heen restored. Save for sporadle local (listurhanees, the entire country lis trancuill.

In his proelamation of Septemher $29 t \mathrm{l}$, on taking possession of the Goverument, Secretary Taft used these clear and distinct worils: "The provisional government hereby establlshed will he maintained only long enough to restore order, pener. and mublic confidence, hy dlreetlon of and in the name of the President of the L'nited States, and then to hold such elections as may be necessary to determine on those persons upon whom the permanent government if the repub. lie shoulal the devolvel.

In so far as is consistent with the nature of a provislonal government established under the anthorlty of the Linited Ntates thls wlll he a Cuhau Gorernment, conforning with the eoustitntion of Cuba. A. D. 1906-1909. - Under the Provisional American Government, - Election of a new Congress and a new President. - Restoration of the Repnblic. - In lis Message to Congress. Docomber. 190\%, I'resident Roosevelt described the conditions that had provileol lu the island for two years undor the provisiunal fowernment. institutul by Necretiry Taft and over which Governor Magoon had presided. In a few words. as follows: "Absolute quintand prosperity have ruturned to the islind heeanse of this cietion. Weare now tuking steps to provide forclections in the ishaul and our expectation is within the coming rear to be able to turn the island over agaiu to a government chosen by the people theronf, C'uba is at our doors. It is not possible that this Nation should permit C'uha again to sink into the condition from which we rescued it. All that we ask of the Cuban people is that they be prosperons, that they govern themselves sul is to bring eonteut, order and progreas to their istame, the Quen of the Antilles: and our ubly fatirference has been and whll he to help them a himpe these results."

Three partios were In the fiell, Conservatives, Miguelistar, and Zayistas. The Mhemelistas were politleal followiors of Geuerai Jose

Jamuary 08,1909 , was the day fixed for dis. solving the provlsonal government and reinvestius the Culuans with political independenec ; but the Congress was organized and held Its inltial session on the 18th. The President and Viee. Iresident elect were inaugurated witl simple ecremmies on the 2sth. President lionsevelt, on that day, sent a message to the President and the Congruss in these worils :
"Gov. Goveruor Magnon, in his brlef aldress, surrendering the reins of government to l'resident Gomez, sail, in part:

According to newspaper reports, however, the popular feellng was somcwhat diverent from the sentiment expressed by Presideut Gomez, If the coliuess with which tbe Cuban crowd of that day watched the departure of Governor Magoon and hls associates could be taken fur a sigu. They sallicd for home immediately, un the new battlesblp Mainc. Ahout 3000 Americau troops remalned on the lsland, uuler command of Najor-General Thomas L. Barry, until the Ist of Aprli foliowing. On the departurt of these. Prcsident Gomez sald to Geoural Barry: "It ls pleasing to me to acknowledge the great aptitudes and quallties of the Ariny of Pacitication under your command, which has brought to a bappy conclusion Its honorahle misslon of watcbing over our country In the difflcult days, now happlly past, and iu malutainlng and reatlrming the most friendly relations with our peoplc, in whose name I as. sure you sour efforts lave heen crowned with the most fatterhig success. I pray you, generul, to express to your vallant solliers the ex. treme gratitude and admiration which tbe government and tbe pcople of Cuba have fur tbem."

Of President Goluez tbe following account was given at the time of hls iuauguration by the New York Evening Post: "Major-Gen. José Miguel Gomez, the tirs President of the new Cuban Republic, is ffty-threc years of agc, and a nutive of Santa Clara province, wherc be bas always cnjored extraorclinary popularity and Influence. Ile participated ln two Cuban revolutions against Spaln, in the first of whlch be reached the rank of major and in the secoud that of inajor-general. He was selected as Goveroor of Santa Clara province by tbe government of lnterventlon, and when his term explred be whs elected Gorernor.
"In Mar, 1905, the general was nominated for the Presidency by the Nathonal Liheral Conveotion. but resigned bis candidacy four months later, giving as the reason for thls actlon that it was impossible to contluue tbe campalgn whthln the hounds of the low, and lnying part of the blame on the United States, owing to the Platt ameodment. An uprising in Cuha followed, which ended with tbe deposition of President Phima and the intervention of the U'inted States.

In August, 1906, Gen. Gomez was arrested, charged with conspiring against the Alministration of tbe late President Palma, but he denled the nilegation and was relcased from custoly nfter a month's imprisonmeut. In December of the same jear Gov. Magoon appointed him secretary of a commission to revise tbe lnws of Cuba. These iocludied the draftlig of an clectoral lisw, new provinchl and municipai laws, a lare definiog the organlzation and functions of the jullchary, a civil service inw, and also laws on surh other subjucts as may be referred to lt by the provisonal Governor."
A. D. 1907. - Population. - Remarizable increase in eight gears. - "The population of Cuba on September 30, 1007, was 2,048.940; at the census nuxt proceding, taken under the Amerir 1 ahministrationin IN99, at the close of the Spanish-American War, the popuiation was $1,572,797$. The ratc of increase in these eight years ls not less than 30 per cent, or at the rate of 39 per ceut per decade. Tbls is a very rapin rate of increase - greater than that of any other country with which I am acqualnted. Thls iocrense has not been hrought about by immlgration, for iu the eigbt years the net immigration (that is, the excess of arrivals over departures) numbered oniy 75,000 , and tbe clement o: fureign birth lncreased from 11 per cent to 11.2 per ceot oniy, but it has been brought ahout almost entirely by the excess of blrths over deaths.
One peculiar pbenomenon of this lncrease is that the rural populathon bas galned much more rapldly thon has the urban - a condltion which rarely exists, as in nearly every country in the world the drift of population is toward the cltles. The urhan population, ineluding all places of 1,000 Inhnbltants and over was 43.9 per cent of the total jopulation. In 1859 it was 47. I per cent. If the urhan popuiation be iimited to towns of 8,000 iuhahltants, the proportlon was 30.3 per cent. The chlef cltics are Hahana, with 29\%, 159 inhahitants, or about one-seventh of the populr lon of Cuba : Santiago de Cuba, 45, 471): Nnta'sas, 36,000: Clenfuegos, 30,100; ant (amaguey, 29,616. The number of inbahitants per square mile in the Islarias a wbole was 40.5 , or ahout the sane ns in Missouri, Virglnis, or South Carollna. The fereign-horn populatlon formed 11.2 per cent of the totai. Of this element fourfifths were bora in Spain and less thau tbree per cent in the United States; Chlnese and Africans were more numerous tban United States people.
$"$ As to color, about seven-tenths of the populatlon were wbite, tbe remaining three-tenths belig colond, including negroes, mixerl, sonl a few thousand Cbinese. As lu tbe Unlted States, the colored elcment is lncreasing less rapilly than is the white popuintlon."- I Icnry Ganuett, National Geographic Magazine, Feb., 1000.

As reported from Washlngton, nearly 57 per cent. of the population of Cuba, at least ten rears of age, can read, the percentage in the large cltles bclog 82.6 and in the rest of the island 47.8 according to flgures obtalued in the eensus recently taken. This census shows tbat in $190 \%$ almost one-third of the children were atteoding school, as compared witb less thaz one-sixth in 1899. See also (in this vol.) Education: Cuna this year the tobacco crop, too, is fair in quantlty and quallty and goingst estiefactory prices. But, so extraordinary le the present situation. times were never harder ln ail the hlstory of this island than they are to-day, msterial evidences of prosperity to the contrary notwithstanding.

"Yet values have not dropped. This is no panic. It ls merely a standing still - a waiting for somethlng to bappen. Just what It is that is due to oceur noboly will say. Asked what he is afraid of, the Spanfard, who is the lmisiness man of Cuha, shrugs his shoulders and siifts his eyes ; pressed for a reply, he answers enigmatically: 'There Is no confldeucr.' The feeling grows that the present governauent will he foreed lnto the hands of a recelver, llke any other hankrupt concern, hefore even its liveliest opponents can organize to end it more lierolcally.

DAYLIGHT SAVING MOVEMENT. What is known as the Duyllyht Saving Movement, which has ncquired much strcagth in Eng. land and lans galned sonse fuvor in the laited States aud elsewhere, is salel to have been first mooted hy a bulder In Loudon, Mr. Whlet, who suggested the possibllity of seeuring a nost im. portaut general udvantage to the whole romm ilty ly establisining a legal difference between summer and wliter in the numbering of the hours. The proposition is to retalu the standard clock time for all the year except between a given date In April and a glveu date in September, wlthin whieh period the clocks shall be set forward one hour, making sla oclock lu the morning, for example, become screa.
At first the proposition exclted little hut laughter; but the more it has been cousldered the more advocacy it has won. A bllt to reallze It has heen twlee before Parliament, failing to be passed, but galnlng votes. The main difficulty ls to make people "e why there should be legislation on the sulije : : why those who wish to hegln the labors of the day an hour earlier In the suumer than in the winter may cot do so without any nueddling of law wlith the elocks. The reasons why were set forth very clearly in one of the dchates of Parliament on the subject. Sald one speaker: -. The Blll as lntended to heneflt town dwellers. Two-thirds, If not threefourths, of the popuiation dwelt in towne, and lt was these who suffered from failure to take advantage of the summer dayllght. It had been asked why it was necessary, In order to lnduce town populations to follow the exanple of agriculturists, to proceed by way of legislation. The aaswer was simple. There were 140 atatntes in which various phases of town life were regulated hy the clock, and if they desired those who llved $\ln$ towns to tale adrantage of the summer devilght hy begianiag work carlier in the morn. ing. It was surely easier to accompllsh that end by passlag a peneral Act of thls kind than by bringing in liills to amend eneh of the statutes In whieh particular hours were speelfied."
As another (Mr. Wiaston Churchlli) explained: "It was qulte impossible for an individual to make alterations in the hours at which he dis. charged particular duties, whlle every one else remaiued unchanged. wlthout subjeeting hlmself to a great deal of laconvenienee, and the fact that particular firms liall already adopted thls early rising system, lu splte of the enormous incoarenienee which attended all alteratlons from the regular habits of the communlty as a wheole, was not, as the hon. member for Rye suggestrd, an argument against the necessity of the Bill. It was, in hls judgment, very good evidenee of the real, natural pressure that there Was hehind a measure of this character. If all the world were to change elock tlme together, no one would be consclous that that chanze had accurred, except at the nioment of change. But where a change of elock time came lato contact with unchanged tlmes, as in the casc of the American markets or of the Contincntal mails and tralns, there, undoubtedly, they would get frietlon and discordance. ile was, however not at all sure that that frietlon and discordance Unre any senslble proportion to the interests Which might be benetletully aff ted or that that frlction and discordance coulu not be adjusted without any very serions ineonvenleace. 13ut whether that was so or not, he was quite clear that auy sueh change as this must be made by legislation, or it could not be made at all."

The Danisb Iefeuse Commission is far from being unanimous as to what is the best plan maklog for a complete protectlon of the capltal. The majority of the memhers are for the ahnndot.Ing of the fand defenses and the strenuthening of Secland's coast llae hy adding more forts and introduching a minng systeri eovering all the ndjueent wa. ters. The minority of the commission, however, and the lcading nilitury experts of the country are for the retention of the present land fortitications, in order that the capital may he securely protected against an cnemy $\ln$ rading seelma from the north or the west. Politically, the controFersy was curiously aitered in February, 1909. hy it sullen change of front on the part of the Premler, .11. Ncerganril, of which the Copenhagen correspondent of the London Times gave the following aceount

The Premiur, who represents the mnjority in the Ilouse, declarell that he had changed his opinion and now shared the vlews of the small group of the Right on a prestion which is the most urgent of the day - namely, that of nathenal defercec, or, to spak predisely, how Denmark can be placed in a pusition effcetirely to maintain her neutrality if threatencd hy any Power. He adopted the oplalon that Copen hagen must le fortitied on the fand slde os well as on that of the sea, and that Denmark, in view of her dlfficuit atrategieal situation, should avold showing any favour to IRussia, Germany, or Great Ifritain. The surprise which the Premifor's speech caused in ail poiftical cireles was m. hounded, M. Neergaard had kept the secret of hls scheme so weil that only a few persons knew that the I'remier might euter into negotiatlons with the Right, which hus its maln support in the lipper IIonsc. That he would go go far is to adopt the Conservative view was wholly un expectid.
"The Defence Cominittee, which had bern sitting for seven years, issued a report which eontained no very clear recommendatlons. lut M. Neergaarl, who is, by the way, hlmself to soldier, working in conjunetlon with the Jas. Ish general staff upon the material which the cominltte e hal collected, drew up a schenie of Daulah defcnce, hasedi upun practical vlews and conslderations of international law, hut almost the direct contrary of the proposals whieh his own party, the Left, had adopted only one year ago. And tils position was takeu up so deffnitely that at the general edectlon iu Nay the people wlll have to decide definltely for or against the Iremier. It is evident that M. Neer. giard himself must he aware that his actlon wlll spilt up his party, the aliled Centre gronps in the Folkething, that some nicmbers will goover to the IRight, und that others will approach the Radlenls and socinllsts. The comments of the Gorernment Press nirendy ciearly show this.
" For hnd and sn forlifientions, the construction of 20 torpedo-hoats and six submarines, fim. provements ln the systemi of mines, dec., the sum of $42.200,000 \mathrm{kr}$. $\left(£^{2} 2,344,444\right)$ is denmended 1 m . mediatcly. Whlle an anmmel increase in the militury buifets of about $3,827,010 \mathrm{kr}$, ( $£ \mathrm{I} \mathrm{I} 84,8,3,3$ ) is nlso proposed. This is a lurge amount of money for a smali country with unt $2,600,000$ inhahit. mits; mit, as is well known, the conretry is in a strong thancial position - execeptionally strong. in the oplaion of some ohsersers."

In May, as the elections appronehed, the same correspondent wrote: "All purties unite in the view that Denmark nust ndluere to a polley of the strictest neutrality. But while the Coniscr. vatlves urge that thls polley must be observed hy a system of fortifications, strong enough to show that Inenmark is ready to tefend her nelltrality if she is threntened, the Soclalists pretich the gospel of dlsarmament as a step towaris eternnl pence, und urge furthermore that $\mathrm{in}_{\mathrm{e}} \mathrm{n}$ mark is too wenk and smali to organize any real defence, nad must therefore rely upon tbe gencrosity of her stronger nelghbours.

In nddition to the two mnin parties there are a number of political gromps whieh are des. thed to plny an important part in the elections and may ln fact deride their lssuc. These groups consist of the Modernte Left, the Reform Left, and the Radieal Left. Tbe Slolerate Left, the party of the present Premier, Mr. N. Nerergaard, has, bowerer, already adopted the policy of tho Conservatives and nerds little more than mention. The Reform Ieft, the party of the former Premier. Mr. F. C. Christensen, numhered at:: il a few months ago ifi, or nearly one half of the Folkething, which bas $11 \pm$ memhers. Now it has heea aplit up on the defence question. Of its nembers 14 agree with Mr. Neergaard and the Conservatives, and 83 are reorganized under the leadersitp of MIr. Christeasen, who wants ('openhagen fortifed, hut not on the liaes of :se Neergard scheme with Its new land fortifles. tions.

The elections were held oa the 25 th of May and the foliowing was reported next morning to the press: "The ciectioa campaign has been heated The returns up to the preseut show that the ministeriais have elected 38 adherents, II. Christensen's party 34, the parties of the So. cialists and the Radicals, which opposed fortl. ficatlons, 89, end that eleven are doubtful. The milaisters of faaace, justice and commeree bave beenunseated. Premier Neergaard and the other ministers have been re-eieeted."
Aaextraordiasry session of the neve Parilament was summoned by the King on the 9th of Sep. tember. Premier Neergaard iacked a majorlty ia the Folkething, and falled to arrange an arreemeat with ex. Premier Christensen on the deferee question. ILe adi his Mliaistry resigned oflice, aceordingly, in a few weeks, and a new Cablict was formed under Couat IIolsteln-Led. reborg, In which SI. Christensen was includerl as Mlinister of Defence. The appointmeat of the latter was oflensive to a iarge part of the public, whlich heid him responsibie for gross frainds iu the publle service, commilted by a former Nlinister of Justice, M. Alberti. An Immense popular demonstration against the ohnoxious Miaister of infence was carried out at Copenhagen on Aus. gust 29 th; but he stayed is oftice some weeks longer, 'intil a scheme of defence had beca agreet upoa between ex. Premier jeergaard and hitu. g.ll, and carried through I'arliament, Scepteniber 2fth The scheme provides for strong sea fortifl. cations for Copenhagea, whlie the iand defences of the eightics will be malatained and somewhat strengthened by two new forts, which are, bow. ever, offlelally characterized as sen forts.

Three weeks after the passage of the D.*ence Act M. Christensen resignetl, and was followed out o: offlee by the whole IIolstein-Ledreborg Ministry before the end of October. For the Grst time in Denmark a Radical Miluistry was the formed, under MI. Zahle.

Jamaica: A. D. 1907. - The destruction of Kingston by earthquake and fire. - 'On Momlay afternoon, the $14 t 1$ Jamury, 1907, ut abont 3.30 r. M., the eity of Klngston and its Suburbs was almost eatircly destroyed by leavy earthruake shocks. There was little or no whad at the time; what little there was was from the east, and the atmospherical conditions werequite normal. The shocks apparently approached frou the southat tirst and then from the west. They are varionsly estimated to have lasted from ten to thirty seeonds, the latter estimate being the gencral opinion. On the other hand, severul Enclishmen who were In the open at the the and in no immediate clanger from falling louses, © 6 .. consider 20 seeonds the ontshe limit of the taken by the shocks. During this perlod un enormous mumunt of damage Wus done to life and property large numbers of buildings at once collapsed. As is, mfortumitely, usual in such cases, fires broke out in several places In the commercial portion of the town.
" 'nfortumately, the Central Fire Station was destroyed by marthuake, so the fire engine was not aivalabl. The means at hamd were thas very lniduquate for tighting tho Hames, although thry wrore supplemented preatly by fireexthghishing appliances from the various shlpsalongside the wharves, and those belonging to the wharves themselves. The tire, however, spread with terrible rapility, aml all efforts were di. rected to waris isolating the hurning area. Durluge this time the light wiud blowing was ahout aortheust, but it luter in the afternoon went round to the north and northewest, thas londing tremendons ussistance to the people in their ef forts to extinguish the fire. Many injured persons, buridel in the falling dibris, were burnt to death. Meanwhile, vast numbers of the lnhmbit. ants were flyint northwards to the racceourse and open spaces outsle the town, where they spent the night - small earthquake shocks beinip frle at frefurnt intervals luring that time. It may be said thut the whole of Kingston and its suliurbsare elther lest royed or in ruins. A few of the substantally built houses are still standing. but so shaken and injured by the shocks that is will be fumosaibe to repair them.

It is extremely difficult to restimate the total ioss of llfe in the earthquake aul fire. The Govermment hare called on the lnlabitants to register the mames of their killed and misslng. hat up) to this datr [Jamary 29] there has been little response. On the isth Jannary, some eleven shys after the eataotrophe, the numbers recorded at the Registrar's Office were only 121, although at least four times that number are known to have been burled or cremated. The careful opinlon of promlaent oftleials $\ln$ Kingstun ls that the loss of life will be about 10000 Of the hijured the dally number of in paternts at the hospital is about 300 , mostly cases of concusslons and legs amputaten,
"' The large numbers of women, children, anl old or disabled men encamped lit the l'ublle Gardens and meccourse, de., were supplled whth food ratlons daily, under the supervislon of the Rellef Committe'e. Over 3,000 people dally huve been receiving this relief. At no time does there apperur to have been a scarclty of fool or water. A tremendous strain at once eame on the staff of the hospital, the place belng besleged with the injured and their relatlves. large numbers of merlical men from the out distriets at onec proceedeal to Kingston and assisted in atteading io the wounded. With the aid of thrir ready as. sistance, and that of many volunterer uurses from the eivil pepulation, the hosplal statif were an abled to cope with the situation, and at the pre sent time work is proceeding there wlth great smothness and reguhrity. The American ships 'Indiana,' 'Mlssouri,' and 'Whlpple,' nlso, on arrival, landed thelr surgeons, who at onece ess talhished a hospital on shore aud reudered great asslstance.

Dlrectly after the earthquake, aud while the fire was ln progress, the greater portion of the black and coloured populatlon were stupetied with terror and amnzement, and lent little or no aid to the white members of the community and the tronss and Aremen in thelr rescue work. Vast numbers of them thed from the elty. Some hecame frenzied and ran here and there declaring the end of the world had arrived, iunpeding the work and terrifying the workers. Others formil groups and conimenced praying. It the l'euiteatary, the prisoners, who remained seated in thelr ranks on the paradeground all night, spent the time lin singing hymas withont ceaslng. Is sonn as the first pavic had subsicled, the black population berame quite apathetic, and it was with great diffeulty that the Government were able to get ahle bralied men to take part ln the work of lemolition and clearing the strects. This, In spite of the fact that the wages offered were 2 j per cent. more than the usial rate.
" Considering the magnitude and wide:spre'ad nature of the dlsuster, the loss of life micht easily have been on a much larger scale. The earthurake crame at a time of clay when the lahouring part of the population were at work away from thelr houses, and the streets In the busy commercial quarter preseated the come paratively deserted appurance so nsual in the ufternoons in tropiful places. As the strects in this fuarter were very barrow and the bulldinges on each side of them lofty and of solid construs thon the luss of ilfe must hare been largely in. erensed had the earthquake happened during the busy portion of the diy.

Owing to the elry weather now prevailing here, the homeless population, roughly ra eamped on the open spaces, are suffering litthe or no harlshlp, It is to be hoped tley may be permanently sheltered before the wet season eommences."- lipport by Major C'horn, B. A. D. 1 y08.- The administration of the Department of Edncation in the Chinese Govern-ment.-Under the date of November 9, 1908, the Peking correspondent of the Loudon Times wrote of the administration of the governinental Department of Education as follows: "The Minispry of Education is under the presidency of a learned acholar of the old type, Chang Chih-tung. The old system of examination has entirely been abolished. Education is improving, hut there is little attern it at uniformity. There is no lack of deslre to learn, hut the teaching outside of the misuion: schools or of colleges under forelgn control ls quite unsatisfactory. No attempt is made to olitain the servlces of the hest man. Japan engaged the hest foreign teachers that money could find, with the result that the standard of edncation is there very hlgh. But Chins seems to think any teacher good enough so fong as he is a chade better educated than the pupil he has to t sh.'

On the other band, Professor Thomas C. Chamberiin, of the Univeraity of Chieago, who spent fonr nonths of the past year iu China, investigatingeducational conditions, has reported that "the old education has practically passed away, and the government is making streuuous, and on the whole ramarkahly successfni, efforts to huild up a system of education modelled on that of Europe and America. In all the larger cities of China buildings have been crected, teachers and puplls yathered, and schools of the modern type organind. In not a few cases, as, for example, at Foochow and in the far west at Chentu, the oid ex. amination halls have heen torn down to make plaee for achoois modelled on those of the west."
A. D. 1908. - Chinese Students in America. -. The disposition on tite part of the Chinese Government to send picked students to America for theireducation, aithoughinterrupted formany vears after the first set of twenty came in 1872 . has siuce 1800 shown a comparatively steady growth. During the past ycar 155 Chincse students werc naintained at various educational instithtions in this country on foundations provided cither hy the Inperial or the Provincial Governunents. At the request of Yuan-Shih-Kai, then Viccroy of Chihli, of whieh province Tientsin is the chief city. the number of these privatel y supported atudents, but, according to the best advices obtainable at the Chinese Legation, there are about two hundred.
" More important than anything that has yet taken place in this movement of Chinese education in America is the recent determination on the part of the Imperial Government to devote a sum equal to that placed at their disposal by the remission of the Boxer indemnity to the founding of an Educational Mission in this country. - According to the telins of the agreement contained in the note of Prince Ch'ing to Mr. Rockhilf last July, hy the end of the fourth year from the inauguration of the scheme four hundred students, seut hy the Imperial Government, will be arded to the large and growing number of their young fellow-countrymen already coming to America." - George Miarvin The American Spirit in Chinese Lducation (The Outlook, Not., 1908).

An English correspondent, writing from Peking, Sept. 24, 1909, reported: "This week 47 students selected hy examination for proficiency in English and Chinese are leaving Peking for the United States to enter upon studies paid for by funds from the unexpended balance of the Boxer indemnity. They have heen selected from ncariy 500 eandidates who competed for thls great reward from many provinces of the Empire. An excelient body of young men, they ought to do credit to their country." - It is the realization of that danger, hut cven more a realization of the needs of Chlna, which have fed to the formation of the China Emer. gency Appeal Committec.

It is the ohject of this Committee to utilize to the full the nnexampled present opportunity of estahlishing in Chims institutions through which the Chinese people may be traincd to educate themsolves in the Western knowledge and civilization whlch they have set themselves to acquire.

Egypt: A. D. 1901-1905.-Recent Development of Puhlic Primary Schools. Sehools for Girls. - "Before the English oc. cupation great inasses of Fegytians remained ignorant. Until withln the last five gears public primary education for tbe poorer classes. asite from the mere learnlng of the Koran. was almost unkuown. At the present the public schonls arc belng established e"crywhere, and grants ln aid of these schools are paid In proportion to the attendance and the records made by the pupils. Likewise, certain positions ln the elvil service can he filled only by those who hold ccrtificates from schools of certuln grades. As a conseruence there has becu a grout awakening of interest. Nost of the teaehers of these public schools are Mohammedan, and the schools are non-Cbristian in their instruction. The Koran is still used as a text-book for many purposes. but the education is practical in lts general nature. The chillmen are tanght, besides readlag and wrlting, the elements of the sciunces, and they choose either French or English ns the forelgn language which they will learn and that in which they will receive instruction in the more advanced stullies where Arabic text books cannot readilr be procilele. It is a noteworthy fact that while, In the earlior days. Freuch was the language more frequently cliosen, nearly all the pupils are now sclecting English. There are also provisious for tralnligg ln law, ncticine. agriculture, engineering, etc. The law school is the most popular, while the agricultural college - although the hasis of Egyptian sealth and prosperity is and must always be agriculture - suffers from lack of pupils. The main contentlons were raficed by these sectlons of the BIII, and as soon as their be ring and effect were discerned the Nonconformist opposition was rallled in strong force. The following from an artiche by [icr. J. Guinacs, logers shows the attitude dind feeling of the Xumconformist oppositiont:

- Hitberto a certain proportion of the cost of these schools has been burne by Churchmen themselves, and Sonconformiats hive been conthat to regard that as fuirly providing for the wrertian tenching that was given. Tlary did nin recarl the arrangement as wise or salutary. But they acpulieseed considering that they had it" respuasibility whaterer for the slenomina. tinnal tenching thnt wis given. The new Act alt a fll the conditions. The State now assumes all the respousibility for the support of these schoois. The inst vestige of voluntary support is swept awny, and they become In every sense !יart of the National School system. The burien of their suppirt is thrown upon the puhic funds. Uniy ia the mutter ot zontrol and of their religions teaching da they retain anything of their private chnracter.

They are to be supporteni out of the pubiic funds. But they consthtute $n$ privilegen cinss of schonls under private managers, and their elifef tenclers hnve to helong to a particular Church nui to give instructlon in its principles and doctrines. It is this whifh has stirred the indignation of Noncouformists. They conselentlously object to pay for the suppurt of eisionds staffed by Anglican teachers and employed in the dissemfuatlon of Anglican loctrianes.

- For thirty ycars the Erec Churclues of Eng. land iave quietly submitted to an arrangement whleh practleally ieft thonsnnds of the seliools under the absolite sway of the clergy. There were thas vast dis:a set sof the country, and those the districts ienst open to the free play of public opinion, in which Nonconformist children were forced into the ranks of the paplls, while Nonconformist tenchers were fust us resolutely kept out of these fnvoured preserves of sectarimism. What can be plainer than that a wlee statesmanshlp ought to follow in the samp path endeavouring to create everywhere local educational authorities chosen by the people and responsible to the people. keeping these local authoritles up to the nark by making a alare in the lmperial grant condltional upon full efficiency, hut tesching them to look upon the schools as their own, and to feel that It is their own lnterest as parents and citlaen to malie their schools worthy of an advanclag nation? No such jdea has been present to those who fraued this liill. It reduces, lnsteal of in creasing. the clemeut of popular intereat and popular eontrol."Schoof lioards are to he swept away, and whth then those eleeted women member who have been so valuabie and Influential an element. The substituted Connty and Borough Councils are, no doubt, clective boxiles. Hut they have so many functions already besides those ciluca. tiounl functions which nre now to be thrown on theon that the fatter will play a snall part, nad their discharge of those functions cantot be effectively reviewed by the people at an election. Moreover, every Ccuncil is directed to net through un Elucation Committee largely, or possibly entirely, consisting of persons outsid. their own bodies. It Is certainiy desirable to secure an element of special knowledge. But the poify of these committees - and policy (except as regarls fiunnce) is to rest with them - will neser be subject to any review by the electors, to whom the committees are nowise responsible. The farlt is stili worse when we come to the local managers. Where there exist only denom. hational schools, there will be no popinlar con. trol at all, for the permissive appointneut by the Edhration Committec of not more than one-third of the locul manngers is a merels nomival concession, ifite illusory for the: prirpose of securing any luenl power, any local interest, any local sympathy. in most cases this pernisaive right of appointment will probably be used to adil to the denominational manngers some person or per. sons recommented by them, or one of them, to the Education Comnittee, which sits in the dis tant connty town and may know nothing about the locality.
"It is not from any superstlions fuith in wop. nlar election or in what are called ' lhemorratic principhes' that I deplore these provisions of the bill. It is becanse they tend to whthdraw from enfucation one of its most vahable propulsize forces. - These word wcre spoken of seconiary edu cation. They ap, "w wh even greater forer to elementary. The ex perience of thirty four y cars contirms them. But there is nothing in this Bit] to give effect to their principle." - Janes Bryce, 1 Fice Worde on the Dier Lilueation Bill (Sine. tecnth Century, May, 1902).
The bducation Bill passed lta thlrd reading in the House of Commons on the 31 of Ileeember. hy a vote of 246 against 123 , being $n$ nujority of exactiy two-thirds. In the Honse of Lords it recelved hriff discussion and a few amendments, which the Commons accepted, and it was sent quickly to the King, receiving the royal aswent lecember 18. And now there came luto action the stubborn revolt which took the name of "passive resistance," - the refusal, that is, of a eonsiderable body of perple to pay the rates levied for school purposes under a law which they held to be unjust. Their attlonde, and thu consequences they sufferel, in imprisonment and the seizure and sale of thelr property, are di. scribed in the following passages from an artlele hy one of tinc leaders of the movement :
' It ls diffleult to heliere that, at the beginning of the twentiet century, Englishmen of high character and indisputable logalty are heing sent to prison for exactly the samc reasous as those which were urged for committing John Bunyan to liedford Gaol; for ex. 'sing Richard Baxicer to the hrow beating of Judge Jeffreys and! a sentence of eighteen months incarcerition: and for sending George Fox tu the nolsome sham: geons of Carlisic and Ierby. Laucaster nud London. Americans canmot eredit it. The evonists of Canala and Austraiia suy.' ('an these things be "'; and even Englishmen would never arcept the humiliating fonclusion. if they were not cunfronted by the undeniablefaet. The fact isthat nearly one hundred fremen of England, respect. able and Gul-fearing citizens, have been sill. tenced to different periouls of iuprisonnent since November, 1903.
" Imprisonment is oniy one plase of this at vancing enuse; atother is that of the public sale of the furifture, pictures and heroks of those wiou refuse to submit. The first sale was at Wirks worth, in Derbyshlre, on June 26th, 180:3; ant it has been followed by about 1.600 more in dif. firent towns anil villages, allover England. In one extremely fiagrant lnstance. one humired pounds" worth of goods were taken for the sum of fifteen shillings, and ln mnny cases fidelity to conselence has momit loss of trade and if position. . . . No luss than 40,000 simmonsed bure been sent forth by the overscers to compel recaleitrant rate-payers to appenr before the maglstrates nad 'show cause' why they wifi not pay.
"Now, it is for that process we canu.. ant will not pay any rate whatcver. We object to many of the provisions of the Education Acts. They are anti-democratic, unfalr. unjust; they mre destructive of educational efficlency and social peare: but the one thing that has created the Passive Resistauce unvement is not the destruction of the School Board, not the foss of popular control, but this intrusion into the realm of coascience by the State. In Waies, where the Noneonformists are very atrong, the resistance berame more than pasalve. The County Councils rerusel generaliy to put the Act into operation, and I'arilameut, In August, 1004, paned what was described an the "We.dsli Coercion Act," to compel their obutience to it. This Act allthorized the centrul Board of Edueation. in the case of a county proclainued in defauit to provide for Church schonls and to dedart such appropriation from the Goverament gruat for edurational uses to the county. As the Wefict thus caused in the sum sovilable for the Nintional mehonls would have to be made up by the county, the recalcitrant county would thus inibretiy be madilled with the maintenance of the Chureh schools. Hut Welsh resistance was not si easily ovarcome: for a new plan was devord, accurifing to which every proceeding under the Coercion Act would be nut liy the re. slguation of county ediurution cornmiti-en and mamagers of the Nathomal schools. Certainly no otber country lus turned the education of childreu and young people to such chornous ail vantage. A good and efficieut education has beeu made notonly accessible but aiso roupulsory in every corner of the country, and oul of the most priceless features of this ed ace tion has been and is the fuculation of reni, per. sunal interest in the national welfare. Further, the fullest possible use has heen uale of scientithe iuvestigations, and whit sciences have been drawu into the service of the nution. The result of this hus been truly amazing: in fact, wholly nudreant of. There can nofouger be any doubt that Germany's industrial advance is mainly due to the extent and thoroughuess with which technieal educution is being conducted. Briethy stated, the secret of the pronounced success of the techuical colleges in the Fatherland iles in the fact that they have kept pace with the everincreasiug scope of nll brancbes of science in foneral, and, to the sume extent, with the everincreasing demands of the present day industrial enterprises upon seientific investigation and rescurch." - Lonis Elkind, Germany's Commer. cial lalitions (Fortnightly Reriere, July, 1906).
What scems to be the most satisfying explanation that has been given of causes or rensons lying behind the extraordinary development of scientific training on practical lines in Germany, resulting in so wonderfui a speed of industrin promress within the passing generatiou, was citcil from a German scientist by President 1'ritchett, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, iu an article contributed to the Rerieve of, Meriers, February, 1906. "About a year ngo," stid President 1'ritehett, "I henrd a fanous chemist iu Germany explain the present industrial supremacy of his country in words something like these: 'Forty years ago,' said he, 'the scientitic men of the varions Gierman states tlevoted their study almost wholly to tireoretical fubjects. They were hmmorously deseribed as given up to investigations of the dative case and similar iupractical problems. In a measure this was true. The investigntors of tiat day had a wholesune contempt for anything which prombent direct utilitarian results. But the developum of the spirit of research throughout the (irrman nuiversities trained ugreat army of men to be expert investigators, aud when a ninited Gurmany arose to crown the labors of Williani. and of Bismarck, with it came a great national spirit in which the men of science shared. They ruslized that to them were conmitted the great iniustrial problems which mast be solved in order to unke the nation strong, nud scientitic reserareh, which up till then had been mainly theoretical was turned to the inmediate solu. thon of the industrial prohlems of the natiou. No fonger the dative case alone, but the development of the chemical, eiectrical, and minerai resources of the country formed the avenues of scientific activity, and scientific research, which had till then heen looked upon as theoretical accompiishment, hecame the greatest tinancial asset of the Fatherland.'
"There is truth in this statement. The research habit, long cultivated in German universities, had nourished a hody of men trained to research, men who had ncquired tbe research babit and the spirit of investigation. When, therefore, the probiems of indastriai develop. ment began to appeal strongly to the nationai spirit, the country had a trained body of men to call upon who threw themselves heartily and enthusiastically into these practical industriai probicms."

A correspondent of the London Times, writing in May, 1909, draws attention to an influence on Internationai trade exerted hy the German technical schools which is generaliy overlooked: "In the German technical high schools," he writes, "an appreciable proportion of the students are foreigners from various countries in Europe. Among these foreign students the Russians and Poles hold the tirst place in Ger. many as regards unmbers, there being about 2,000 . There are aiso an appreciable number of Scaudinavians and Dutchinen, with a few Belgians, Spnuiards, Italians, South Americans, and Slavs from Austria and the Balkan States. There are very few Englishmen, Frenchmen, or Americans. $\qquad$ At present quite a iarge proportion of the engineers and manufacturers in the ueutral conntries on the Continent bave been educated in Germany or Switzerland, and as a result there is a great bias in favour of German machinery and productions.

- As the outcome of this feeling it is a difllcult matter for British manufacturers of machinery to obtain a hearing when tenders are being considered on the Continent, as the prejudice ill favour of German or Swiss machinery is strong."
A. D. 1898-1904, -Rise of Commerciai Universities. - A report on Commercinl Instruction in Germany by Dr. Frcderic Ikose, British Consul at Atutigart, presented to Parliament in September, 1904 (Ci. 233i). gives the following account of the rise of the Commercial Universities which have been developed in Germany since 1898. carrying the process of training young men for business life to a higher point than had been aimed nt in the older commercial schools:
"The commercial universities for higher commercial instruction (Handelshochschmlen) have been founcied within the last six years [189819041 and mark a further step in the development of commercial instruction in Germany. Their aim is to afford persons engaged in business and industry on a large scale (Grosskaufleute and Grossindustriclle), masters at commercial schools, administration officiais, bauk officials. Consular officials, secretaries to Chambers of Conmerce, and so forth, a deeper und hroader measure of instruction in commercial and national cconomical matters than that provided by the various commercial schools. The special province of the commercial unirersities lies less in the mere acqulsition of commercialtechnica! knowicdor and attainments for iumbdiate practicnl detailed application, than in the
for the higher branches of the commercial profession. They are intended to awaken and derelop the mental faeuities of a merchant, to enabile him to grasp the Inner working and meaning of nationai and international economy, and to understand and judge lits causes and re suits, its temporary and permanent pbenomens ; as far as commercial officials are eoncerned tbey are intended to impart generai knowledge aud understanding of the economic conditions of commerce and industry witb their manifoid ainis and requirements.
" This measure of university ednention (Akademiscbe Bildung) is also intended to mise the sochini position of the mercantile jrofession, nad to increase its political importnnee and intuence in public life. Generaity speaking the instruction is arranged to include tbe following suh. jects:-Politicai conomy, commerciai history and geograplyy, commerelal iaw in all its aspects, the orgunisatlon and mnagement of commerclai undertakings and their tecbnical details, indnstriui law, tinanciai science, bank, exchange, monetnry, and credit operations, state and administrative law, and so for
At the writing of Dr. Rose's report tbere were four of these commerciai universities, The old. est, at Leipsic and Aix, were founded in 1898 , the former in connectin:, with the Lcipsic University, the latter conte eted with the Aix Tecbnicni tuiversity. The other two, at Frankfort-en-tbe-Main and at Cologne, were opened in 1001. Tbe Frankfort University, winth bears also the name of " Academy of Social and Commerrial Seience," and tbe Cologne University, are both independently organized. "The initiative for the foundation of the commerciai universitics," says Dr. Rose, "has been taken hy Chambers of Commerce and municipalities, and mot by the governments of the German states. The intter, however, are now becoming aware of the importance of the morement. Fur the present their action is limited to the supervision exercised by the Ministers of Elucation and Industry and Commerce

The foundation of the commercial universities has hronght forward many opponents. who not only deny their utility but consider tbem actually hurmfui, bccuuse the persons they instruct become ton old before they engage in practloal business work. . . . The extreme oppunents go further and deny that a commercinl university is able to train practical husiness men, and nseert that this can only be done by Close and continual contact witb actual husiness !ife, and that the nequisition of too much theoretical knowiedge injures the practical facnities.

The whole opposition to the commerciai universities seens to be based upon a narrowminded and rague idea of the part they are destined to play in the future. . . Luless in duatrial and commercial life in the future is to degenerate whilly into one fieree and relent less struggle for one-sided nggrandisement, to the detriment of other members of the soclal boty, ample opportuniti"s for the thorongh compre. hension of the sotial and economic condtions of the present day must twe provided."

International Interchanges : Of Professors. -Of Students. - Of Teachers' visits.-A fund provided by Mr. James Hiazen IIrde, of New York, enabied Harvard C'nlversity, in 1904 to accept nu Invitntion from the Sorbonne, at l'aris, to send one of its professors to pive a course of lictures at that uncient institution of iearning, on suhjecets relating to the l'nited States. Irofessor Burrett Wendell was chosen for the pieasant mission, and has been followed by others in succeeding years, who have given courses in rarious French unirersities, while the compliment ilas been returned, in lecturing visits from a number of the most distinguished men of letters and learning in Frnuce.
This opened what seems to have becone an established und widening system of lecturing interchanges between Amerienn and Enropean tiniversities, tending greatly to promute lx+t/r ncynaintance betreen matious and better undir standing of each other. At nbout the tinis. ir soon after, the mission of Professor Wendell io Paris, nrangements were made for a similar in terchange betwecn Iiarvard and the Uuiverity of Berlin. moaths ago, [1904] when, through the intercession of Professor Harnack, an officiai proposition embodying it was made by the I'russian Government to the Harvard Corporation, and adopted by the same. It is most fortunate that the (ierman Emperor, with his quick grasp of inturnathanal relations and his deep sympathy for the thonal relan people, has now giren to this whole subject a much wider scope hy proposing to ex. tend the exchange of professers to other univer. sities in Amcrica and Germany ; for it seems as though such a measure cotild not fail to open the way towari a veritable fraternization of the moral, intellectual, and industrial leaders of both nations."

In the iatter part of 1905 , a Therdore Ronsevclt Irofesenshlp of American IIistory and Institutions, in the Cniversity of Berlin. Was eudowed witl thr sum of sin, 0,00 by Mr. Jumes Sjeyer, of New York, the endowment being placed in the hands of the trustees of Columbia Cniversity. The pian of this professorship had been arranzed with the German Emperor by 1'resident Butler, of Columlia, at an Interview in the previous sum mer. Nominations to it would be made by the trusters of Columbia Cniversity, subject to confirmation by the Prussian Ministry of Education and to the Emperor's sanction; eack iucumbent to hold the office for one year, and the fucumbents to be so chosen that in successive years the field of American history, eonstitutional and administrative law, economic and sociological problemsaud movements, education. contributions to dience, technology, the arts and iiterature, be prosented with some fuliness ; the professorship to be filled by members of any Ancrican insti. tution of learning, or by schoiars not connected with academic institntions. The sclueme lnvolved also the establishment at Columbia Cui. versity of a similar professorship of German history and institutions, the lectures in New York to be delivered in English. The first incumbent of the new professorship in Berlin wis Dr. Burgess, Professor of Political Science in Columbla Laiversity, who began his work in iserlin in the wintur of $1906-7$, and took as his subject American constitutional bistory.

I movement looking to the estabisbment of similar interchanges between Ameriean andi Sean. alinarian Universities was inaugurated in 1908 by the "Scandinavian American Solidurity," a suciety organized in the Cnited States that year, with Dr. Xieholas Murray Buther of C'olumbi. Cniversity, for its $i^{\prime}$ resident, and Professor Carl Lorentzen, of New York C"niversity, for its Seeretary. The Danes resident in New Vork City and Chicago arranged that $1^{2}$ residet:t 33 utier of Cohmblia and Preshent Nactrackeu of New Fork University should cach gipe lectures at the Cuirersity of copenhagen that year, and raised the necessary funds. The lectures were given at Christiania, as weil as at Copenhigen, and appear to hare aroused a widesprod interest. Nurwegian and swedish L"nivcrsities and the Cniversity of ifelsingfors, in Finland, have siguithed a wisi io participate iu the interehange, and it is more than likely to bccome permancntly arranged.
An educational interchange of a different character, but equally important, was instituted in 1906 by Mr. Alfred Moscly, an Engiah gentleman of great weaith. Who inviscd tive hendrent Euglish. Scotch, and Irish teachers to visit and in. spect American schools at his expence. Between November, 1900 and March, 190\%, they came in parties of twenty-firc, some remaining one month in the country, some two, aud some even more, visiting many parts of it and all descriptions of its schools. They were selected by an advisory committee in London, which aimed to hare them fuliy representative of the men and women who are engaged in the work of the British and Irish schools.

A return visit of some hundreds of American teachers to Great Britaln and Ireiand, in similar parties, under the auspices of the National Civic Federation, was made in the fall of 1908 . The schools of both countries gained, beyond question, from what each had to offer of suggestion to the other.
The organization of a "new educational movement to provide for the interchunge of Cindver. sity students among the English-speaking peoples" was announced in Engiand in June, 1409. ". The object," it was stated, " is to provide opportunities for as many as possibic of the educated youth of the L'nited Kinglom, Canada, and the Coited States (who, it is reasonable to suppose, wili become leaders in thought, action, civie and natioual government in the future), to obtain some real insight into the life, enstoms, and progress of other nations at a time when their own opinjons are forming, with a minimum of inconvenience to ticir academie work and the least possible expense."

A great number of the most distinguished men of the time in British public and professional iife were iistelamong the otheers and committe. members of the organization. with Lord strathcona as President for the Cnited Kingiom. As set forth in the prospectiss of the society. "the additional objects of the movement are to increase the raiuc and cfficiency of, as wedl as to extend, preseut C̈niversity training ly the prori. sion of certain Travelling Sholarships for practical observation in other eountries under suitable gnidance. These schoharships will enable those students to benctit who might otherwise be unable to do so throush tinancial restrietions. It alsocrables the administration to exercise greater power of direction in the form the travel is to takc. In adilition to acalemic quadifications, the selected candidate should be what is pumbary kuown as an 'all round' man; the selection to be is. "ng the lines of the Rhoies scholarshipa.

- To afford technical and industriad stadents facilities to examine into questions of particular interest to them in manufactures. EEC, by obser. vation in other countries and by providing them with introductions to leaders in industrial activity.
- To promote interest in travel as an educational factor mong the authorities of C'niversities, with a view to the possibility of some kind of such training beiug included in the regular curricula.
"To promote interest in other Universitics, their aims and student lifc. the compulsory physical training, and methods of working their ways throuph eollege, for example, being valu. able points for in restigation.

Scotiand: A. D. 1908. - Mr. Carnegie's grest gift to the Univernities anc; their studenti. - The irst of Mr. Andrew Carnegie's great gifts to other Institutions of education than the publicithrarles, which he has asslsted In such numbers, was conferred on the universitles of Scotland, his natlve country, In 1001. It was a gift of $$ 10,000,000($ 2,000,000)$, placed In the hands of trustees for two purposes, nameiy, to improve and expand the teaching power of the universitlcs, on one hand, and to put thelr teaching on the other hand, move withiln the reach of sli the young In Scotland whocraved it. It was sald to have been the original wish of Mr. Carnegle to make the tultion of the universities free; hut he found that it would he wiser to strengthen them for thelr work, leave It suhject to proper fers, and provide for an allowance of pecunlary assistance to students, in the discretlon of the trustees. The application of the glft was so ar ranged, one-half of the net annual lncome from the great fund being appropriated to bulldings, cquipments, cndowments of professorships and lectureships, and the like uses for the betterinent of the unlversity work.

There were fears at first that the cffect of so much easing of the atminment of unlversity educution might be injurlous to the spirit ani character of the students who accepted the helpIng hand; hut scven years of experience, under the working of the glft, do not seem to bare just titied tbe fear. In those seven years over 8ow of the Scottish young people hal the henefit of Mir. C'arnegle's help to a college trainlng, and the trustecs of the Fund, in their annual report of 1909 , pronounced the resilit good. "In the oplaton of such men as Lord Rosebery, Lord Elgin. Lord Balfour of Burlelph, Mr. Balfour, and Mr. Haldinne, who are alf helplng to ad. minister Mr. Carneglés eharity."says a Loudon correspondent of the New York Evening Post, "Scotland has much to thank bim for."

Turkey and the Near East: Americen Mission Schools. - "At present [1909] there are about twenty five thousand natlve stuclents in Amerlean schonls in this country. Ameriea can boact to day that she has, in Turkcy, nine col. ieges, fire theologicai seminaries, fifty-seven botreling and high schools, nnd 348 public schools. And, if we aceumulate the work of seventy five cears, It is a slmple inatter to muderstand how many thousands have been celucated in Americau ways and with the American spirit.

- Missionarles came to this country to spread Protestant Chrlstianity nmong the Joslems. They falled in that. The Mohommedau government was agalnst them. They trled to make C'luristlan Greeks, Christinn Irmenians. Protestants Thas did not result in a marked sucepss, hut theirschools, wbleh they opened as a medium of spreading rellglon, were eagerly sought by roung men and roung girls of every race. Ar. menians form the majorlty in this country of those who have recclved an American cducation. Bulgarians and Grecks come next.
- Many I have met who have been thoroughly educated In misslonary lnstltutions. Genetally they are not Protestants, neither much religlously inclined. But tbey are moral, independent, and hroad-minded.
"The Turkish mission, as it is written about

In Americe, is not, in fect, a reai Turkinh miculon: not s Moslem has bunchristlanized; not a slogle Turt is a member of mission communitles; yet native C'hristlans have been widely heiped by the opportunity offered for educatlon and the growth of a spirlt of civilization and himazity.
"Year after year young n.en graduated from American Instltutlons In Turicey to go torward among thelr compntriots as teachers, journalists, and puhlle otticers. The hullding up of brave littie Buigaria is the work of graduates of Robert Coilege of Constantinople. Stambouloff, who made Bulgaria what it is to-day, was an alumnus of the same institution. Among the Armenlan revolutlonary leaders, who worked hamilla-hand with the loung Turks to hring about a politleal chunge in 'furkey, boys of Robert College and young men educated ln American mulversltics are prominent. I know young girls, graluates of the Americen College at Scutarl, who took actlve part ln revolutlonary work during the despotle days of the old régime; and even jolned In the coaspiraey whleh led to the throwing of a bomb at the Sultan during the Selamilk ceremony a few years ago. . . . At Belrut is the Syrian Protestant College, under Presbyterian controi, one of the most enlightened Insiltutions ahroad. Euphrates Cotlege at Harput in Asla Minor, with a thousand students. is a Congregatlonal Institution. At Tarsus, the A postle Paul's lrone, is, appropriately enough. St. Paul's Institute. Througlout Turkey the Congregationalists have over four hunired schools, with over twenty-one thousund pupils. In Syria the Presbytrians maintain about a hundred schools. Thin l'resbyterians (North) have uo work in Figypt, but the Inited Presbrterinns are edueating there no less than fifteen thonsand puplls, a total the more surprising when we recall that the Government schoms in Egy pt have only eightern thousanal puplls. More than four thousame have received Instruction at Assint College, the conter of the Inlted Preslosterian work. . . . As in Persia, the l'resbgterians are the strongest denominational torce. Besides Urumia College. they have about a hundred and twenty-five sehools throughout the country."- American Schools Abroad (The Ouflowh, May 2, 1908).

As explalned hy President Pritchct: In an ar. sicle pullished soon after the organizatiun of their boand, the Trustees had thres furdamental questions to determine: "First. What is a colleze! seond. The truttees wili almo reyuire that an Inatitutlon, to be ranked is a college and $u$ be dealt with as a college officially, must have a productive en dowment of not less than 5000,000 .

A. D. 1907 (Jan.). - State of the country. General satisfaction of the people. - The disaffected a minority. - Transformation effected hy English rule. - Testimony of a French writer, - Those who know the real situ. ation in Eyypt can casily noderstand how almost the whole popalation, with the exception of an Insignitient minority, are satisfled and di-sire no change. It is enough to compare the present state of the comntry - even rapidly and superticiallywith that existing in liNi, to perceive the perfeet satisfaction of all classes and the greatness of the work achieved by England: and the more profonndly this question is studied, the greater the admiration thit must be accorded to Iord Cromer and to all those who during the past twenty-five yoars have worked under his orders at the regeneration of E.pypt. The situation of that eountry in 1842 inay be hrlefly summed up lit the follow. ing manner:

The Government was then in the hands of a band of rebels at the head of whom was the cowardly and worthless colonel, Arahl. The excheyuer was empty; Figypt owed (almost entirely to Furope) vearly tive mlllions sterling. The revenue was insufficlent to pay the interest on her delts. or even to nuert the expenses of government. The puble works were all in such It shate of neglect nud disuse as to he no longer of any sorvice. ('ommerce was paraly sed and $\ln$ dusiry at the last gasp. The fellahereth, to whose labour ligypt owes lim agricultural wealth, hat stoppeal working, for, left at the mercy of the lashas, who extortad from them everything possible dow to the last farthing, they dien of himper. Whether thew workel or not. If we add that their legtiers told the mifortinute people that their suffering all these privathons was solely the fuult of the Christian devils who Were exscting monntalns of gold from Egypt, it is easy to see that fanatlelsm and poverty comhlned were helping to make the sltuation a eritical one for Europeans. It was lnto thls flery furnace that England cotered and Franee re fuscd to follow her.

"This ls now a tale of the past, and on the curtain being raised we behold a transformation so marvellous, so grand, that it is almost lncret ihle. We find Egypt rich and prosperous : a great portlon of her debt pald, an adnirably adjusted budget; her revenues increaslig enormously, regularly every year - and that ln the face of large and lmportant puhlle works, works which daily augment the wealth of the country. Agrieulture is advanelng hy leaps and bommis, while commerce and Industry develop and increase with a rapldity unparalleled in the history of the world. A well-organised network if rallroads, steam navlgation, telegraphs, teie phones, and excellently maintained canals, spreads over the country. Sehools of cvery kind lispe been opened-priniary, secondary, and hlgher schools, technical, coniniercial, and medieal seliools. The fellah works puietly and hap pily on hls land, und the townsman ls growing rich, while business prospers lnereasingly from one cad of the country to the other. From the mouths of the Nilc, from Alexandrla to the great lakes of Central Africa, all aeross Egypt, Nuhla, and the Soulan, pence and quiet reign everywhere. And - strange ns it may seenall these results have heen obtalned, not hy increasing the taxes, but, on the eontrary, by reduelng and even in some cases abolishing them altogether.
-In less than twenty.five years England has accompllshed all this and mueli more stlll. She has effected the marvellous achievement of $r$. muining in Egypt with the unanimous consint of the Powers of Europe, to the great satisfuction of the Eypptans themselves and the foreligners dwelling in Egypt, and finclly of living there as a friend, almost as an ally of France!

The honesty of the Government In all its branches, the imparthlity whth which all ahuses have been punished, and finally the honourable example whleh during five-and-twenty var, the Englisht have set before the Egyptians, have certainy borne gond fruit. To be honest is no longer an cmpty expression on the lanks of the Nile, and the entire population understanls to-day what that word signifies. I think of low ahsolutely unknown it was in 1882! To sum up, Firypt and the Fuyptians have now become cletn, hoth plysically and morally. We many say that Fingland has cleansed and disinfecterl them, "xternally and Intermally." A. They have " weakeneal ns will as strengthened the canse. For a mumber of half riueated natlve thinkers to see Turkey with a Pariament is to make them foel they shuuld have one, too. The British agent points out that the gouth of Egypt, upon whom must rest all hopes of erentual autonomy, are becoming demoralized by such propaganda. They have been clamoring on eviry occasion for a Constitntion." They have bern incited by a virulent press. "When, n few months ago, Mr. Ihallame annomeed that the British army of occupntion was to be increased to the same strength as the force in South Afrias, lispust. ing diatribes were iudulged iu ayainst the Britisharmy. Otheers were deserihed as monsters uf low breeding, ill manners. cownriliee, nud multifarions rlee. A. A telegram was sent from the Cougress to the House of Commons in England, stuthg that the representatives of the Inteliectual elements of organized Egyptian political parties gathered in congress at Geueva on the occasion of the anni. versary of the entry of the English troops iuto Cairo sainted very respeetfully the representathves of Great Britain. recalled the reiterated promise of the British Government to evacuate Egyptian territory, nnd Inasmach in the reasous giren hy Mr. Gladstone for the oucujation no onger existed, asked the House for the homomr of the Finglish nation to secure the whthdrawal of the troops from Egyjotian terrltory. A similar telegram was despatched to the Grand Viaier, Hilmi P'asha, nsking him to use his futinence with England to secure the whthdrawal of the troops.

This was sent on the 14 th of Sepiember, the 2ith annlversury of the British occupation of Eirypt, and on the same day the Prime Minister of Great Briain, Mr. Asquith, received the forlowing telecram from ('airo:

Proportional Representation: England: The subject under discussion. - The practicalillty and desirability of proportional representation has been under investigation the the Lited Kingdom, during 1909, by a Royal Commisshon, Which has had frequent sessions for hearings at Whitechall. At a hearing in October Lonl IIngh Cccil, who repres.nts Ovforl in the Honse of Commons, nrguell with great force in favor of proportional representation, as a mesens of molerating the constrnint exercised over independent opinion ly party thes. He sald that the present system was not satisfactory. It greatly hindered free discussion in the Honse of Commons, and tended to exaggerate there the intensity of fcel. ing and the rigidity of the party system. Majulties were generally lnrge, and often it was introly a trial of endurance. The empty coudr. tinn of the Ihouse on many oecasinus proved that discussion never influenced divistons, und there was an eliminntion of independent opinion. Irceisinns worr on party issues, except when new sulijects surh as the fiscal question, were hrought forward. Whth smalter majoriles ludcpendent nplnlon-specific ratber than general - would have more opportunity, and that would be a faln. There was a growing wendency to lift forelgn politics and, to a lesser degrec, Colonlal politles heyond party, and to a large extent the Governmeat could count on the support of minl. erate opponents when foreign and Colonial mat ters were considered. Ile did not think the effect of proportional representation would te to form any more groups than they had at present, but bis deslre was that there should he members who were not ahsolute party men, and independent members would hnve more rhance of getting returnet. He consldered that deslrahle, and did not npprehend the return of faddlats. Even now fadhlsta were easlly elected to I'arliament, where for the most part they were disregnrtel. He did not agree that practically all sections of the comnunity wcre representerd under the existing sys. tem. A very inrge and mportant sectlon belwen $n$ the two partles was never represented, having al. ways to choose hetween one or the other extreme.
South Africa: The Principle in Practice. - The princtple of proportlonal representntion was hrought into practice th the municipul electlons of the Transwant In October, 19019. The Consthuthol of the Sonth Afrka Crnen, which goes luto effect in the spring of 1010 , applies it. also, to the electim of senators $\ln$ the Unhon Parliament. "The proportional methol chosith is, in earh case, that of the single transferable vote, and the Johnumishirg electlons will fur nish an exnmple of the nse of this system on a hurger scule than any hitherto attempted, whils? the senntorial elections will furnish example, if its applicution to rery smnll electorates. Tha duty of the voter, both In the senatorial and in the manicipal elections, will be the same. It must place the figure 1 againzt the candidite fur whom he desires to vote, ald. in aldition, be may and should place the tigures $2,3,4,5,6,7$, and so on against the names of the other cauli. dates in the orter of his preference. The numbering of additional preferences, if not so vital as that of narking the first choice, Is of extreme hmportance, ami the elertor should continue to indicate preferences until he has exhnustell hits powers of choice. Tbe object, in marking preferbuces, is to prevent the waste of voting power. For, If the elector's first cholec has obtninut more voter than are necessary to secure his eloc tion, or if his tirst choice hins oltained so few votes as to le hopelessly out of the runuing, the returning afficer will carry furwnal these whin in accordnace with the wishes expreswel by the clectors, as indicated by the preferences marke d

The vote is always credited to the tire: cholce and is not transferred save in the cont tingencles unmed. If, however, no cffective us can be made of the vote in the return of the elow tor's first choice the returning oflicer, in the al, scrice of any instructions from the voter, will he unnlle to carry the rote forwarl, nul the whe will therefure have no lnflueuee in de:crmining the result uf the election. Electors shouht the ri. fore exurclse to the full their privilege of marh ing prefercners." - The State (South Alyina" Altimal Magazine), Oct., 1909.
Prussia: A. D. 1909.-Rejection of proposed Reforms. - The result of netw propwisn!s for reforming the litolernble class-sw retu of voting In Prussin (see Constitcton of l'uessha In Volume VI. of this work), proposals of more aincerity than those of 1000 , described ahove, was thus reported in a l'ress despatel from Ber. Iin, January 26, 1003: "The debate upon the inotions regarding reform of the l'russinn franchise was conciuded in the la, wer Ifouse: of the Diet was conctuded two more specehes hal been delivered the Conservatives noved and carried the closure, and the varlons reform proposals were pit to the wote. All the inotions were rejecteri. Ayainat inost of the proposals so large a hostile majority was shown when the leputies were inviud to rise from their seats that no counting of votes was necessary. A motion in favour of the substitution of direct for indirect election was rejectel, upon a division, by $16 y$ votes against 165 - a majority of three. U'pon this question, and also upon the main question the introduction of a unlversal and equal fran. chis: with seereey of the ballot-most of the Centre Party Deputies roted wlth the Left, and the majority consisted almost entireiy of Con servatives and Frec Conservatives. -d States: Direct primary nomination dates. - Iftir a jong anl unsatisfac. rience in the Únited States of the nomi.. wi candilates for pubitic office by conrencions of lelegates, the prople hare been rapidy dierariling that system within the last few sears, replarin: it by the institution of primary elec. tions. at which candilatea for the subsequent election are belected hy direct vote. The old delegate sersten tendel irresistibly to give the picking of eandilates (herwern whom the people had finally a narrow choice) to little handfuls of men who suake numipulative party mannge. ment their main husin-gs in life, with objects of s.If profit. either in mones or politieal power. Effertivererolt agninst thise evil-working system tequn in the Western states and is now strong in the East. The folloring summary statement of what it had aceomplished, np to the spring of $1!\mathrm{m} 9$. is from a pamphlet then published by the Citizens Cnion of Net lork (ity in sup. port of a "Direct Primary Bill" whleh was frming at the time in the Legistature of the stite of Sien lork:
"The nitere primary is now the most usuai sfiem of making nominations in the Cinlted siturs and in no case lias a state, a eomnty, or a town thrnedi back from direet nominations th the convention system. It is $n$ o longer an experiment, having been tried out under varyIng conditions in si) many states that it is possible $w_{0}$ be guided iny experience In avolding the dangers of an imperfect direct primary law.

- Fourteen states [Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Louisiana, Mississippi. Mlssouri, Nehraska, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Uregon, South Dakota, Texas, Washington, and Wisconsinl, with a total population of $25,328.039$, have mandatory laws requiring the use of this plan in selecting candidates of the principal partios for practically all offices. Three other states "Iinnesota, Óhlo, Pennsyivanial have mambitory laws covering practically all except the state oftices. Five other states [Indiana, Massachusetts, Jichigan, New Jersey, Tennessec] have mandatory laws eovering certain localities or offices. Five states [Alabuma. Florida. Kentucky, Michigan, Tennessee], inchding two of the above, hare optional iaws covering practically ail oflleers, the provisions of which laws have been jargely taken advantage of. There are direct nominations iaws of a weaker sort. some of them of little or no value, in many other states. Party rules have estahlished direct nominations for at least the majority party in nearly ali of the Southern states not, nentioned abive.
"About one-half of the states, Including those in which the sysum has been estahlished hy party rules, use direct nominations for prac. tically all clectire offices. The states in which the system is eatablished by mandatory law for practicalif all elective offices have about thirty per cent. of the population of the United States.
"Of the thirty one linited States senators elected last fall. seventeen were nominated by direct primarfes. Fiftenn out of thirty two governors of states were so nominated. There is a strong morement for direct primarics in states which do not at present use this system tu any considerable extent, namely : Vermont, Connecticut, New Ilampshire, New York, Callfornia, Coioralo, Idaho and ltah. In New Ilampshlre, both Repuhlican and Democratic parties declared for it in their party plat forms last fail, and the Republican Governor bas recommended it to the lepubliean Legislature. In California, two direct nominations laws have been passed. but declared unconstitutional. Last fall, an ameniment to the ennstitution of that state permitting the legishature to enact a direct nominations faw was passed by a vole of the people.
- A brief outline of how direct nominations oriminated and how the system has been cxthided unil it has heen substituted for the convention systen by amajoritr of the American people furnlshes a strong arcument in its faror. It is an Amprican system, and a product of the struggle of the American people for the control of thrir government.
$\because$ Direet primaries originated in Crawforl County, Pennsylrania, where the so-malled Crawford County System was establishel by artion of a Republican Countr Committee in 1800 and has been in force ever since. On two occasions. the question of whrther it shonld be retained was put before the Republlcan voters and overwhelmingly decilet frathantmatire, the last of these votes being taken after the sys. tem had been in force for nineteen years. Short Ballot Reform, - A movement that wiil gain force lf the grave reasnis for it ean bc duly impressed on the popuiar mind has lieen assuming organized form of late. The prime mover In it is Mr. Kichari S . Childs, of New York, who began mlssionary work for it in eonvincing maguzinc article on "The Doctrine of tile thort lsallot." pulhisised in 100 s . Printeri afterwards in a smail pampinlet, tbis impressive argument has had wide cirenlation and ias drawn many men of Intluence inco leaguc with tine antior for urging the subjeet on puhife atteution. The aint is to redice eicctive oflces in State, county and town to such a iimited number that the average voter can acquaint himarlf with the comparative merits of candidates and make a fairly Intclligent clooice, which ine cannot do when number is large. "We must shorten the itot," wrote Mr. Chifis, "to a point where the average man wili vote intelligently without giving to politics more attention thinn he coes at present." "Votlng a straight tieket is not a n'3tter of party loyalty so mimh as of nut knowing what else to do, and split thekets will beconle common as soou as the list is re dinced to a point where ench candidate become's in the nind of the voter a clefinite personitity mistead of a mere nume on a long list. Tin nake public othee conspicuous can only be ne complished by making it stand ont in solitule before the grac of the voter. Let ali the cacum hrunces in the shape of minor offices disappenir from the batot and be made appointive. Or at the rery least prevent the few ofllecs from over shadowing the many. Hake all the candidates conspicuons he fetting no one be more conspicus ous than another. "

A digest of the "shert ballot" doctrine is offered in the following propositions:
"To the avernge Aniericun voter most of the ang ballot is a mere iist of names, the registery a genuine personal optuion only on certain com. spieuons oflices - the rest lic necessatrily dele. gutes by default to organizatious of politicsif specialists

- These political organizations, if victorious, sink into the controi of their worst mer leers, sinee these membens haring most to gain and being least scrupnlous can gencrally win withhe the orgrnization. Then these meis run pubiic admin.. trations as baliy as they dure
"But we get gooi men for any conspicuons office where there is udequate publie scrutiny of the cundidiate, and cven Tammany offers us sat. isfactory public servants in such piaces.

Therefore, if we make nrost offices a ppointive 50 as to ahorten the ballit, whl the voter cun muster his whoir, iask, and every clected officer liecomes consplenons beforc his constituents. political machincs wili become impotent and merit wili become the most important asset for a candidate.

Woman Suffrage : At Large : Present extent of the movement. - "We rejoice in the Immense progress made by wnmen in the last 60 years. In 1548 women had rotes nnwhere in the world except the school vote in Kentucky by widows with children of school age, and a very timited franchlse in sonse parts of Europe. To. disy women vote for all elected officers in Finland, Iorway, F. derated Australia. New Zealand, Wyoming. Colorado. L'tah and Itlaho: they have municipal suffrage in England, Scothad, Ireland sni Wales, In Canada, Kansas. Sweden, Den. mark and Iceland; tar suffrage in Louisiana. Mnntana, Iowa and lew fork, and schrol suffrage In one-half the States of the Enion. When that first cravention met, only one college in the United States admittrd women; now hundreds of colleges do so. Then there was not a single woman plysician, or ordained minister. or lawyer: now there are 7000 women physiclans and surgeons, 3000 ordained ministers, ard one thensand lawyers. Thell onlv a few poorly paid emplovinents were npen to woueu; now women are In more than 30 ) occupations, and conmprise so per cent. of our teachers. Then there were scarcely any organizations of women : now such organizations are numberel by thousands. Then the fer women who clared to speak in public, eren on philanthropic questions, were orerwhelmingly conlemned by publir opmion; now the women most opposed to equal suffrage ravel ahont the country making public specches to prove that a woman's only place is at home. Then a married woman in most of our states could not control her own person, property or earaings: now in most of the States these laws have been largely amonded. and it is only in re. gard to the ballot that the tiction of women's per petual minority is still kept up. Most of the demands made by the convention of 1848 , which then seemed so revolutionary, have herel alrealy granted, and are now looked upon as mattors of course. . . . We rejoice in the increasingly rapid progress of the woman shffragc cause. Every year shows some gain. Since our last annual mectlag Parliamentary suffrage has heen extended to the women of Norway : municl pai sut. frage to the women of Denmark: Sweden has made womeneligihle to municipal office; Russia has given wnmen of property a proxy vote for members of the I ouma; sud Grest Britain, with only 15 dissenting votes, has made women eligi. hle as Mayors, Aldermen and County and Town Counciliors. We congratuiate the women of Grest Britain upon their gallant fight for the franchlse." - Resolutions of the futh Annual Convention of the Vational American Woman Suffrage Association, at Buffalo, N. K., October, 1908.

In Europe " there is the curious anomaly that In its two so-cailed repuhlics the eausp of woman suffrage ls more backwais than in almost any of the other countries. In Switzerland every man over twenty may vote. A National Woman Suffrage Association las lately heen organized bich is supported hy many public men.
"In France, ali men twenty-one years old have the franchise. The Sational Council of Women, composed of $55^{\circ}$ associations with about 70,000 membera, has recently joined forces with the Sational Suffrage Cnion, thus assuring strong and systematic effort for the enfranchisement of women. In 1906, a Committer for the Defence of the $h$ 'ghte of Wonien was formedi in the Jiamber of Deputier, to secure the social, ci:Il and political rimlits of women."- Ida II. Zarper (Forth Am. Australia. - The Constitution of the Commonwealth of Australin. in its 41 st clanse (see Conntititice of llintralia, in Vol. VI. of this work) provides as follows:

Fo adult person who has or açules the right to rote at elections for the more mumerons Ilonse of the Parliament of a Ntate, shath, while the right coutimes, be prevented by nuy law of the Commonwealth from votlog at electious for either llouse of the Commonwealth.

Inasmuch as two of the Australian States. south Australi: and Western Anstralia, had alreait extended the suffrage to women when this ferleral constitution was adopterl, they gasined at once, by fis torms, the right ot roting at ivieral elections i: those States. Au account of their first nopuarance in Iuseratian Foderal politics was given sulisequently by on, of the women who participatel. - in part as follows:

- The political ficeatlye is now the possession of the women of Australia, and its influence was a potent factor in the recent feifersl elections. The women of south Dustralia anl West Aus. tralia have had the sulfrace for some rears, so that they are accustomend to voling, but to the women of the other sitetes the whole business was new: nevertheless, they roted in as large numbers proportionaliy as life men in a urajority of the constituencies, while in seine they cast a hearier vote than the men. The total rote was only 52 per cent. Oi the roting strenfth, the low percentage being due to the fact that the people as a boxly have not yet graspel the Federal illea. Federation has not eompletely scotched provincialisin in politics, though it is fast doiug so, if for no other reason than the enormous cost of government In this country. The people are beginning to realize that we are paring the po. litical piper heavi!y - fourteen Ilouses of ParIiament and seven viceroyalties for four millions of people! It is too hig an order, and common sense, as well as the state of our finances, diemands that we should simplify our legis!ativa machinery. It is rieht here, as the Americans say, that the women's Influence will tell. Dur-

Ing the election campaign, it was most evilient that a very 'rrge sectlon of the women farourel thuse candidates who urged cconomy in publie expendiure. Individual women, with no iflea of the value of money, may he extravigant, but most women are compelled by elroumstances to be economical, and lave a hurror of wasteful expenditure. Therefore the gruesing demant for less expensive legishtive nachinery whit tind devoted adherents amongst the women vot. ers $\therefore$ Thic clections had an alded Interest in the apprarance ot four women caudidates in the flelif-Mrs. Martell, Mrs. Moore (New South Wuies), mysilf (Victoria), staniling for the senate; and Miss Sellan Anderson (New Sonth Wales) for the Honse of hepresentatives. All were defeated, hit the defeat was not minexpectel, as we were well aware that it would be altogether phenomenal if women were to succeed In their first attempt to enter a Natlonal Parlament.
". There wrere elghteen candidates in the fleld, and, while unsuccessful, my recorll of 51.497 votes, when 85,387 were sinflicient to secure election, is most gratifying. I polled more heav. lly than one candidate who has been I'remler of Victoria, and than another who had been for twenty-six years a member of the state legislature, defeating the one by 24,327 , the other by 82.438 votes - 51.000 oxld voters, in spite of the opposition of the powerfuid duily papers, and the prejudice that a pioneer always lans to encounter, is nothing less than a triumph for the cause that 1 represent. the cause of women and chil. dren."-Vida Goldstein, The Political Woman in Australin (Jineforth' Century. July, 1904).

The argument that women will not vote is completely disproved by Australian experience. They not only vote, bit they vote in contlnu. ally increasing mumbers as time goes on, and they become educated up to a sense of their po. litical responsibilitics and all that thrse imply. Not all the states discriminate in their returns hetween men and women yoters, but those that do shew mmething like the following: In South Australia, at the last general election. 59 per cent. of the men on the rolls voted, and 12 per cent. of the women : in Western Australia, 49 per cent of the men dud 47 per cent. of the women voted: at the last Federal clection, 56 per cent. of the men voted, and 40 per cent. of the women. None of the Australian states has yet resched the extraordinary record of New Zealand, wherc, in 1002, nearly 75 per cent. of the women electors reconded their votes, as against is per ccut. of their brothers.
" It is unnceessary to aid that the conservative womin votes. Her husband or father and their newspaper take goonl care that the duty of doing so is well impressed upon her, even thongh abstractly they may all three disapprove of woman in politics, and have striven to avert her appearing in that arena as long as they possibly colld

- Among the measures that can be traced to woman suffrage within the last ten yenrs are prematernity acts, acts raising the age of consont. family maintenance acts, and many acts improving children's conditions by extending juvenile courts, limiting hours of work, providfine hetter inspection. Morlidding sale to chitdren of drink, drugs and doubt ful literature."

Alice Henry, The Australian Wiman and the Ballot (North American Rriev, Dec. 21, 1908).
Writing in the New York Erening Poot of Feb ruary 10, 1809 , Mrs. Ida llusted Harper maken the following statements: "The recent an nouncencat that the 1 pper house of Parliament in Victoria, Australla, had passed a woman suf frage hill by a vote of 23 to 5 , marked the giin. ing of complete suffrage for women in ail of Australasla. Slace 10 r ? $\quad$ momen have had a vote In Australia for membe of the national lparila. ment, and for a numher of years the vote for State offlifals in all the States except Victoria. There the lower house, or Assembly, has tifteen times passed a hill givlng this vote to women only to have lt rejected by the upper house, or Council. The Assembly is elected hy popular vote: the Council is not.

With their munl. cipal and natlonal franchise the women were able to make things decidedly uncomforta ble for the opponents, in which they were encouraged and alded by the labor unlons. At last the conncil surrendered uneonditionally, and the vote of twenty-three to five showed that must of them tried to get into the ban 'wagon. The five who voted 'no' were probably 'in for life.' and not afraid of the consequences.

Aus. tralia has thoroughly tested woman suffrace, flrst In municlpal affairs, and then in those of State and nation. There is not one objection made agalnst it which is not refuted by the actual experience of that country. All the talk about who will take care of the baby and what will hecome of the home, its men would brush aside as sc much chaff."
Deamark: Its firat exercise In Musicipal Elections. - Danlsh munlcipal elections in March. 1909, were conducted under a new law which glves every woman who efther pays ili rect taxes or Those husband does so the right to vote. The law also provides for a system of proportloual representation. "There was naturally much discussion leforehand," wrote a new spaper correspondent from Copenhagen, "as to what would be the result of this first experiment in Woman suffrage lu Denmark. The Conservatlves, indeed, protested for a long time before they yielied to its clalms. As far as cau now be ascertained the relative strength of the parties in the councils will be practically unchanged, that is to say, the Couservatives will still hove a slight majority. This is at all events the case in and aronnd Copenhagen, where the women took a very active part in the voting. nearly 35 per cent. of those who were entitled to vote haring dioue so."
Engiand: Qualification for County and Borough Cou cils. - The following are the provisions of an Act of Parliament approved in Angust, 1007:
"A woman slali not be disqualifled be ses or marriage for betnge clected or being a comn. cillor or aldermin of the council of any connty or horough (including a meeropoltan lormugh): l'rovided that a woman if elected as chairman of a county conncil or nayor of a boroush shall not by virtue of holding or having held that offce be a justice of the peace."

la $1906-07$, when the impitient among them began resorting to militaut methods of agits. tion. It is probuhly safe to say that no other movement by any part of any peopie in any country, for ohtnining au extension of poifticni rights, had ever been carrieti by rational diacussion and appeai to a point of more encouragemont than the womas siffrage movement in the Vinited Kingdom hnd then attained. For everrthing elective in local government the vote lad been won for women, nnd the opeuing of county and borough oftices to them was on the eve of heing written into law. Representation in Parliament, ouiy, had not been secared, but the disposition to concede it was growing from dity to dny. It was at this stage of promising progress ln $t$, movement that an impatient see. tion of its a omoters became persaaded that some disturbance of the public peace and some tronbling of the Government would hasten the tinal triumph of their cause. Why they were led to tl. t conclusion was explniaed to an Amerienn andience in New Fork by their leader. Dirs. Y'aukinurst, in October. 1900, as folluws:
"The Liberals failed to put woman suifrage In their Neweastle programme. We waited on Sir IIenry Camplell-i3unuerman, feader of that parts, nad who would be prime minister, but he said he was too busy sceing voters to attend to vomen. The other parties acted in the same way, so we were forcel to other nction. A. J. Balfour, the Tory leader, upou whom we called, declared that he wis in favor of equai suffrage, lut was honest enough to add that no statesman woald propose a bili to give it unless it were maic a practical question of polities.
" You have henrd macin of our methods. "It was at Mancliester, aimost on the site of the Peterloo franchise riots, whin the yeomen. with their bayonets, cut down the men seekintr rotes, that our agitation began. Sir Eifonrd Crey was closing the great i, iberal revivnl fa Lancashire by $n$ great meeting. Women were nomitted to incetings in Ensland in thome lays: it is not so now. We decided to be there with a banner on which we wonld iaseribe the motto - Will the liberal government give workiag wo-

We tried to get them sents in tive front of the balcony, where they could unfurl the hanner. We falled in this, so we got seats in the nrea, nud had to change the banner. The new one whs male on my dining. room tnhle with a piece of calleo and some black paint and contninet! the now world-wide motto: " Votes for Womea.
"Sir Edward Grey delivered a great speceh. but there was nothing in it about giving women votes. Scveral questions were put to him, and he answered as all publle speathers slanetel. end ns they always do in England. When he was doue, more questions were in order. Annie lienny rose aui unfurled her banner, holdiug it up in a hand from which she had lost a finger while at work in the mifls at an age when girls should not be aliowed to work - especially when they are inteaded for motherhood. Holding her companion's hand, she put her question: 'Whii the liberai governinent give working women votes ?' Instantiy the stewards pounced upou her; hands were pressed over her mouth. and she was forced to sit fiown. She was toid to write her question, aud it would be naswered. A vote of thanks was proposed, and Sir Ellwnri Grey answered.
"When lie fulled to answer her question, Annie Kenny rose and Insisted on an answer. She was pounced upon; six mendragged her hnt off nad pailed her to the door, but Ler iast words as she was thrown ou' were :' Sir Edward Grey, answer my auestion.' My daughter took up the task. and repented the question. She, too, was set upon and draged past the stage, upou which sat men who had known her from childhood, who bind voted for her father; but so strong is paity spirit thnt they allowed her to be throw u out withont protest.
"They held a meeting outside aud were arrested for obstraeting the police. They were fined, and went to jail. But we hai galned what we wauted. The press, whicin hai ignored us, heraided our cause. We were giving them good copy."

In the early period of tife campnign of pubiic disturbunce which the nilitaat suffragists had thus planaed, their operations were dirceted mainly to the interruption of speakers nt political meetings, not vaiy by questions, but by beil-ringing and the fike, provokiag forcible (.) fectlon, arrest and tine, or commitment to jail. 1'resently some resorted to the device of chaiaing themselves to seats, prolonging the disturbance niml ficightening its sensitional character. The crowaing sensation of this deseription was achieved on the 8th of November, 1908, when two darinir sutfrugettes who lad unined admission to the women's gallery in the Ionse of Comunons chatued themsefves to the metal lattice work in front of it and opened a fire of questions and demands on the dismayed law makers below. In the previous month the llouse hat been besieged hy a grent mol) of women who ntterupted to force their way into its well gunded chambers. under Slrs. I'naliharst's fead. She and others of the leaders, arrested on this occision, refused to give bonds to keep the peace, and were sen. tenced to inprisomment for three moatis.

From this time on, the decices of public dis. thrbance nud of annoyance to Parlament nad Dinisters became more ind more ingeniously sensitional. One performance, on the iath of April, 1909, was this deseribed by a London aewspaper of the morning after: "St. Stepinen's Ilali is bailt upon the site of the old lariament, its dimensions in lengih and width nre the same, its meluories cmbalm the great Parhamentary tradition. it is the place where the liberties of the people have been won.  vinw that our wif guverning evonuts romill be policy by thent ruatation. There muat be a wrapon io our hames with whitit to meet toose who might atternpt to disintucratu the Empire by fiकal mous. The question whethr we shmia is fustided in raining revemue witt the object of drawing the differcut porthons of the Enmpere nure cosely togntier was certainly wefi worth consideration.

Ali that lie said in these month conveyed the Impressiou that he was in an undetermined. Waiting state of mind on the question rained by Mr. Chamberlain, not yet convinced that his collengue should he supported in the new poiley proposedi. hut ipuite fikeiy to be. Titat, how erer, was not the attltude In which he could bold the two conlesced partles, Consurvative and Liheral Linon, that were lehind him fin the Government. The issue itad instant activity there, divitlitg luth. The Premicr cuuth sitppress debute on it in Parllament, as he did, but everywherc eise in the kiugdom the rage of controversy gathered heat, aud party liues on the side of the Covernment were rapldiy confused. Two members of the Cablaet realgned, while Mr. Chamberlain kept his place in It untlif the gth of September, when he addressed to Mr. Balfour l letter which offered his renignation, for reasons stated as follows:
"' Owing to admitted diffcrences of oplnlon in the Unlonist party the polltical organisatlons of the party were paralysed and our opponents have had full possession of the field. .. I recogalse that serious prejudlce has been created, and that, whlle the people generally are alive to the danger of unrestricted competitlon on the part of those forelgn countries that close their markets to us whlle fading in our market an outlet for their surplus productlon, they havo not yet appreclated the inportance to our trado of Colonlal markets, nor the danger of losing them If we do not meet in some way thelr nat. ural and patrlotic deslre for preferential tradc.

- The result is that, for the prcsent at any rate, a prefereutial agreement wlth our Colonies involving any new duty, however small, on articles of food hitherto nataxed ls, even if accompaied by a reduction of taxation on other artlcles of foud of equally universal consump. thon, uluace eptable to the majority $\ln$ the constituencies.
"I suggest that you shoulat timit the present polley of the Goverument to the assertion of our frectom in the case of all commercial relntlons with furcign countries, and that you should agree to my tendering ny reslgnation of my present ofllce to his Majesty and devoting mysclf to the work of explalning and popularising those principles of lmperini union whlls my cxperience has convineed me are essential to our fl. ture welfare nal prosperity."
Mr. Bulfour's reply to this, when published, disclosel the faet that he was wholly in agree. ment with Mr. Chamberlain, and that they were now parting company in order to parsue a eommon purpose more ciffectually on different liacs. Both saw that England was not to be drawin easily away from its fundamental belief in free. dom of tride; that what they had undertakera would require mush persuasive laber and considerable time, if accomplished at all; wherefore Mr. Chamberlaln accepterl an assiganient to thr missionary field of the lmperialist canse, while Mr. Balfour would conthue his endearor to Inold a party in raitiag for the frnits of the auts. sion. and in possession of the government as long as ciremustances uight permit. The programme was dinclosed frinkly in the two letters. In that of Mr. Balfour he said?
$\because \cdot \mathrm{I}$ greeing as I do with yon that the tiane has come whea a change shonli be made in the fiscal canons ly which we have bound ourselves la our cominerclal dealings with other Governments, it seems paradoxical, indeed, that yon should leave the cabinet at the time that others of my collearues are leaving It who disngree on that very poiat with us both. Yet I can not but admit, howerer relintantly, that there is some force in the arguments with which you support that course, based ns they are upon your spectal and persoanal relathen to that portion of the controversy which deals with Colonisl preference. You have done more than any man, livlag or dead, to briag home to the eltizens of the Fimplre the conscimusness of Imperial ohligation. bud the interlepebitence between the varlons fragments into which the Empire is geographi cally divided. I believe yon to be right in hold. Ing that this interdependence ahould find ex. pression in our commercial relatlons as well as in our political and military relations. I belicre with you that closer ascal union between the Mother Country and her Colonies would be good for the trado of both, and that, if much closer union could be estabilshed on fiting terms, Its advantage to both partles would Increase as the years went on and as the Colonles grew in wealth and populatlon.
"If there cver has been any difference he. $t$ ween us in connectlon with this matter lt has oniv her a with regard to the practicabllity of a proposal which would seem to requlre, on the part of the Colonles, a llmitation $\ln$ the aill-rouad development of a protective pollicy, and on the part of this country the estabisisiment of a preference in favour of Important Colonlal products. On the Arst of these requlrements I say notlinim, but if the second involves, as it alinost certainly does, taxation, however llght, upon food stuffs, I am conrlnced with yoit that public opinion is not yet rlpe for such an arrangement.
-I fecl, howerer, decply concerned that you should regard this concluslon, however well founded, as one whlch makes it diffcult for you, in your very specinl circumstances, to remain a member of the Gorcrnment. Yet I do not venture, in $f$ matter so strictly personal, to raiso any objection.
"If you think you can best serre the interests of Imperial unity, for whlh you hare done so much, by pressling your views on Colonial pre freace with the freedom which is possible in an independent position, but ls hardly computible with office, how caa I critielse your deternination? The loss to the Government is grent. but the gain to the enuse you have at heart may be greater still. If so, what caure I do but acquif esce?

tlve Unlonlst followers from British Free Trade priaciples, proclaimed In 1803, and the Licensing Act of 1904 , haul each, In turn, been produetive of bltter disagreements and ruptures which rapldiy lowered the strength of the party in power. It had becn la control of the Government slace 1895, when lts oppositlon to Irish Home knle was endorsed by a large majority. The next election, in 1900, during the war in South Africa, reinforced its Parliamentary support, and it could count. during the two years following, on more than 400 votes in the House of Commous, against about 268. After that period its Parliamentary majority iu the popular chamber ran down, until, In the later montha of 1005 , it was no more than 75 or 76. Thls would have been an ample majority if it hal represented an equivalent prepouderance of public support, which, manifestly, It did not. For three years the "by-clections," - that is, the speclal elcetions ordercd for flling vacancies in the Ilouse as they occurred, - had been going steadily against the Goverument, and nobxiy doubted that a geacral election would throw it out. It was challenged again and again to give the country an opportuaity to express its feeliag In the matter, by a dissolution of Parliament, without waitiag for any nearer approach to the cad $0^{5}$ the term. This it would nut do; but, on the 4th of December, 190.5, the Premier, Mr. Balfour, surprised the country, and likewise his own Cabinet, it was said, by placing hie resignation in the hands of the King.
This proceeding was reyarlid as an artful mancrurre in politics, for the cmbarassment of the oppositlon. As explainctl at the time by a journalist who wrote of it on the side of the iatter, - "The Liberals naturally desired that tic country sloould have an opportunity of going to the polls on the clear issme raisedi by the record of ten years of Tory administration. They rc. garded Mr. Balfour and his party as being in the dock, and before they thok ollice they whelthed to have the verdict of the comitry returnct by the votes of the electors. But this, for equally obvious reasons, Mr. Balfour wishell to avoill. By resigning now, he compelle $i$ his opponents it midertake the task, flrst of forming a new arministration, with all the risks which it involves of personal slight and sectional differences, amb, sereondly, of faring the risk of nny untoward inristat arising in the next fer weeks which mitht be usel against the new horn goremment. It also would cuable them to obscure to a certain extent the real issur before the romutry. Inst cal of simply votine for or against Mr. Balfont mini hisadministratim, they wonld be asked to express their opinion upon in new ministry, which had not had any opportunity of giving the country a taste of its unality. But as Mr. 13alfour could not be coapelled to stay in when lie had made nip lis minud to go ont, and as it was such a relief to get rid of him on any terms, the Liberals consentel to face the dismd vantages of taking ollce before the dissolution."

Sir llenry Campbell-Bannerman was invited hy the King to form a Ministre, and :cceepteyl the Commission. The organlzation of his Cabinet was completed within the weck following Mr. Balfour's resignation. and it took office at once. Parliament was ilissolved on the sth of Jimuary, 1gof, a?d a new Parlinment was summened to nicet on February 13th. Electlons began on the 12th of January and were finlshed for the most part by the 19th. In their total result, they re. turned 878 Liberals to the House of Comuions. 55 Labor representatives, who woull act on most questlons with the Liherals, and 83 Irish Nationalists, whose attItude towards the new Jllnistry would depend upon Its attitude on IrIsh ques. tians, and seemed more likely to be fricudly than otherwise. Agalnst this array on the side of Sir Ileury and bis colleaguea, of pledged partisans nnd comiltional allies, the Conservative Union. Ists had secured an Opposition In the Ilouse that numbered only 157 . The poltical overturn was one of the most remarkable that the C'nited Kingdom lias ever known

Under Secretary for the Colonles, Winston L. Clurrehill.
First fommissioner of Works, I, ouis Vernonliarcourt.
Attorncy General, John Lawson Waltou.
solicitor General. Willian S. Rohson.
That Lorl IRoselery had no place in the new Liberal mlminnistration waa due to his wide disngreement with most of the leaders of his party on the questlon of Ilome liule for Ireland. When le succcealed Mr. Aladstone as I'rime MínIster, in 1N94, fie quite distinetlv discariferl that tine of Irish poliey (see, in Volume VI. of thits work, En(ilavis: A. I) 1N94-1505), and hls an. tagonism to it had undi rigue no cliange. On the nther hind. Nir lienry Camphell-Ianuerman had remained faithfully symputhetic with Mr. Gladstone's idea of Irelaut's due from England, and had remmonnced his standing on it In a re. cent specel. "My opinion." hes sitd. "has long been kuown to yon. Ii is illat the unty way of healing the evifs of Ireland, - ditilculties of her administration, of gIving contentment and pros perity to her people, and of makIng her astrength instead of a weakness to the empire, - Is that the Irish people ahould bave the management of their own domestle affairs; and so far from this oplnlon fading and dwindling as the years pass, it Is becoming atronger, and, what is more. I have more contldence In Its realization. ... If I were aaked for advice by an ardent Natlonallat, I would say my desire is to see the cricetive management of Irish affaira in the liazds of a representative Irlsh party. .... I trust that the opportunlty of maklng a great advance on this opportunlty of making a great advance on this question of Irish goverument wilf not long be delayed, and when that opportunity comes my firm belief is that a greater measure of ayreement tian hitherto as to the utimate solution will he found possible, and that a seener appreciation Will be feit of the benefits that will fow th the Irish communities and I3ritish people throughout the world, and that Ireland, from being disaffected, Impoverished, and discouraged, will take Its place ns a strong, harmonloua, and contented portion of the empire."
That Sir Ilenry, maintaining this posture on the Irish questlon of questions, could be the accepted leader of the LIberal party and the Iremler of Government, aftorded clear evidence that the party, and the eountry whlch coutided power to that party, were at least moin nearly prepared to make the great concession to Irelaud than thcy were to refuse it; but the question entered silglitly Into the parliamentary canvass, though the Conservative.Unlonists strove hard to make it the dominant issue. The publie mind was occupled so fully with the fiscal and edica. tional controversles of the last three years that the motires in its roting came mostly from them. The mandntes of the vote were understood to be especiaily for the ameading of recent legisiation on those subjects and on the terms of the ficensing of the liquor trade. It was equally madersterod that Irish measures in the Giadstone spirit slould be looked for, not hastily uader. taken, but in due time.
The fact of inost impressive sifuificance in the result of the priliamentary elcetlons was the sudden weight that had been given In the IIouse of Commons to the representation of Labor by laboring men. Since 1903 (see, in this rol., Labur Orkianization : England: A. D. $19(\mathrm{~mL}$ 1906: 1903 , and Socialism : Enoland) the labor Party had emerged in British politics as a force to be taken into serious account. Of its 55 numbers in the new Parliament a considerabic number had been elected by a combination of Liberal and Labor votes; but the same combina. tion went ns often to the fucrease of the liberal representation. One large sectlon of the lather voters, organized under the name of the ladependent Labor Party, stood aloof from such alliances entirely. It hat been formed some years before, muder the lead of Mr. Keir llarile n Scottish miner, wlth Socialistie bellefs. But opposed to the nims of tice Marxian Soclalists. aud expecting nothing substantialiy lenelicial to the working class from any political party. IIs mission was to create a Labor Party that would fight Its own battles on its own ground. Ile male no great head way untif the Tafi Vale decision of 1902 roused the British Trade Cnioas to fight for thelr lises. That lirought them iato the ranks of the Independeut Labor Party, and prepared it for the powerful showing it made in the elections of Janiary, 1906, when it polled 303.000 votes, and elected 30 members who are free lances in the House. The remsining 25 Labor Members act with these on labor questions, but otherwise are to be reckoned as allies of the Liberal Party.

Foremost nmong these latter is Mr. John Burns, who represents the Labor Party not only in Parllament but in the Ministry of Govern. ment, being the first of his class to be called to a Cabinet seat. A London editor who wrote of him when be took that seat said: "He has been a worklng engineer, a strike leader, labor agitator, a London County Councilor for cighteen years, and member of Parliament for fourteen. He is a grat leader who never had a party, hut whose inflnence has heen felt in every labor movement in England for the last twenty years. The lalor and social policy of the London County Council has been largely inspired and directed by him. Ife has also molded labor leg. Islation in Parliament. Mr. Burns bas 'scorned delights and llved inborious days ' for the sake of the workers. Ile is an avowed Socialist. Ile has never cbanged his princliples, only modifed his methods. He is a real Falian, a sklliful opportunist, a tireless worker, and a first-rate organizer. Since he became a Socinlist who does things, he has been ostracized by the Socialists who only agitate. Mr. Burns is exerclsing groat influence within the Cablnet, and is one of the men In the confldence and in the secrets of the Prime Minister, who seeks his advice in many matters outslde Mr. Burns's epart. ment."

The same writer gave the following account of the many important dutics and great responsilhilities of the office flled by Mr. Burns, as the Presideut of the Locnl Gorermment Board, which superrises the administration of local government ln all England and Wnles: "As President of the Local Government Board, Mr. Burns has multifarious duties conmitted to his charge. II. has to sanction local loans. supervise the tinances of local authoritles, hold infuiries into proposed new undertnkings, exercise the (almost) legislative powers which Parliament las dele. gated to him by way of provisional orders, and is armed with large jowers of laitiatlve, inspee. tion, revision, and veto, so that in some respects he can revolutionize the whole system of local administration. In the domnin of Pcor l.nw his authorlty is paramount. Ile revises, for exumple, the rules and regulations which guide the sritem of relief and the administraticn of the Poor Law, passes plans for new workhouses. srettes the wares of the nurses and porters, and fixfs the amount of snuff (if any) which a pauper may receive. Sanitary legislathom is also under his supervision, ns lie acts as Minister of Public Health, and berond the more strictly local governmental functions belonging to his department there is the social side of his work, surh as the administration of the Allotments Acts, the Unemployed Act، inquiring into bousing conditions, etc"

A. D. 1906 (April-Dec.).-Fate of the Liberal Education Bill, passed by the Commons and killed by Amendments in the House of Lords. - Resolution of the Commons, contemplating a change of Constitutionai Law respecting the Legislative Powers of the House of Lorda. - When the Education Bill brought forward by the Government in April and passed by the Commons in December (see, in thls vol., Edtcation: Exoland: a. d. 19M6) had been killed by destructive amendnuents iu the Honse of Lords, the Prime Minister, Sir IIenry Camplell-Bannerman, proposed to the IInuse of Commons a resolution, which wins alopted, derlaring that "the power of the other house to alter or riject hills passed by this house should be so restricted hy law as to secure thut within the limits of a single Parlinment the inal decision of the Ilouse of Commons shatl prerail." In plainer words, thls proposed an amendment of what has been, since 1sis, an unwritten but understomi rule of the British Constitulion. namely, that the IIouse if Lords cannot defeat a measure which has been passed hy the Commons in successlre parliaments, and this certified, by an interrening $\boldsymbol{r l e c t i o n , ~ a s ~ b e i n g ~ t h e ~ e m b o l l i n e n t ~}$ of a popular dernand. The proposed amentment is to give the foree of law to a repented enactment of the Honse of Commons, "ven "within the limits of a single Darlianuent," and without the intervention of an clection.

The ? 'remier has explained that this resolition is alopted only to foreshatow action which the Ciovernment intents to take at some conrenient future time so fur as indicated by the Premier's resolution, he and his colleagues. if they do anything affecting the peers in Parliament, will not touch the cextsting composition of the aristocratic house, but will only shorten the suspense In which it mny hold legislation that is persisted in ly the popular house. Is now exercisel, the practical effect of the suspensive veto of the Loris, if not submitted to by the government, is to hring shout what is actunlly a referendum of the question at issue to the people. The proposed constitutionnl amendment would elimlnate the referendum and empower the Commons to override the opposition of the Lords

The legislative function of the Ilousc of Lords would not dlfer anbstantially then from that performed hy the President of the United Stutes. Acts of Congross require inc approvial of the Iresldent to make them law. His disapproval sends them back to Congress for reenactment, if two. thinds of both bouses persist in them; annulling thern if they do not. The function is slmply a critleal one, and involves no exerclse of leglalattve powers, If the language of our Constitution ls correct: for that instrument, In the first section of its tirst article, says: " all leghlative powers herelu granted slall he vested $\ln$ a Congress of the United Stater, which shall conslat of a Senate and in House of Representatives," Thus the refercuce of leglalation to the President for his approvnl or disapproval is not recognized as a frunt to him of particlpation ln the exerclse of egislative powers."
In this view the Britlsh IIouse of Lords, when Its part in legislation is reduced, like that of the American President, to mere criticlsm, expressed In approval or a suspenslve veto, cannot rightly be regarderl ns a leglsfatlve booly, and P'arlin. ment can larilly be counted among the bleamemi legislatures. as we hare connted it hitherto. The Ilcuse of Commons will hind nll the powers of legislation; the IIouse of Lorls will be lts ofllcial critle, commissioned ouly to mnke ft thlnk twlee u the emartment of some of its laws.
The King has no rolee now in the mnking of Britisls hares, although, when his prerogatives nre described. It is still said that whe nay refuse the reval assent to nny hills." Two humdred years ngo it ceased to be prudent for royalty to exerelse thut prerngutre, nall Queen Anne, lu 10it, asserten it in practice for the last thene. The sovereigns of the redgning Ilouse of Ilanover lave never enjoyed the satisfaction of refusing assent to nn act of Parlinucht. Even George 111. lid not venture lt, tholagh he stoutly asserted his rimht.

A. D. 1907-1908. - Proposais in the House of Lords of Reform ia its Constitution. Coasequent, no doubt, on the inerease of populsr hostillty to the llouse of Lords whlch it ulsr hostinty toy the dealing with the Education Bill of 1906, and the serlous threatenlngs of an undertaklng in the llouse of Commons to "end or mend "it as a hranch of Parliament, the Lorils, in 1907, gave thought among thenselres to the expedleney of a coustitutiounl reforma. tion of their llouse. In February, a blll was proposed to them by Lord Newton which pro. vided in its first two articles as follows :
" 1.- (1) After the termination of the present session of l'arllament a writ of summons to attend and to sit and vote in the Housc of Lords shall not be lssinel to any temporal peer of the pecrage of England entitled by deseeut to an hereditary seat in the llouse of Lords (in this Act referred to as an heredltary peer), unless he Is a representative or a qualifict herelitary peer within the meanlng of thls Aet, nor to any lord spiritunt, unless he ls a representative lord splrltual withiu the ueanling of this Act."
"3. For the purposes of this Act the expression 'qualifed heretitary peer' meaus an herelitary peer who possesaes any of the qualit. cations specified $\ln$ the First sehedule to this Act."

The schedule referred to was as follows: Qualifications mintithang an Ilfreditary peer to a What of Scmansa: I. The holding at any time of any of the following Oflces :1. lifigh judiciat otfice, within the meaning of the Appellate JIrrisdietion Aets, $1 \times i 6$ nad 1nsi. 2. The ofllee of First Lord of the Treasurg. Seeretary of State, Chareellor of the Exchequer, l'resideut of the Council, or Head (not being a permanent Civil Servant) of any other Government Department. 3. The oflice of L.ort Lieutenant of Ireland, and secretiry to the Lord lieutenant. 4. Office of Vlecroy of India, or a (inernor of the Presidency of Jladras or Bomhity, of of Lleutenant Gorcraor of any Province of India. 5. Oftice of Governor-General of the themlulon of Canada or of the Commonwealth of Australia, or of Iligh Commlssioncer of South Afrima, or of Gorernor of any Colony. 6. The Onlice of Parlianentary Under Secretary, Parliamentary Secretary, or permanent Vader Sec. retars, iu any Government lephrtment. 7 Ottice of Lord of the Admiralty or member of the Army Counctl. 8. Offle of Mlinlster pleniputentiary, or nny higher othiee, in Ilis Majesty's Diplomatie servier. 9. entiere of Vied-Adultal, or auy ligher oflice, in 1 lis Majesty's Naral

Forces, or of Lleutenant-General, or any higher ofllee, in His Majesty's Land Forees.
"11. Eleetion to zerve in the llouse of Commons on not less than two occaslous before succeedlag to the peerage."
In addltion to the hereditary peers thus qual. Ified to sit in the House of Lords as proposed to be reformed, the 1311 provided for the clection by the peers, from their own number, of repre. sentatives, to the extent of one fourth of thelr whole number; and likewise for the electlou by the iords spiritual, from thelr ranks, of represe, itatlves in the same proportion of number: such represpntatives to form part of the House of Lords in Parliament. It authorlzed, further, the appointment by the King of peers for Hife, to be "peers of Parllament," these never to exceed one bundred in number.
Debate on the Blll in May resulted in the sub. stltution for It of a resolution, that "a Select Committee be appoiuted to consider the suggestlons whleh hare from time to the been nade for increasing the effleleney of the House of Lords in matters affecting legislatlon, and to report as to the desirahility of adopting them, elther In thelr orlginal or ln some moditied form." The report of the Committee (tweutyfive in number, haring Lord llosebery for its clected chalrman) was not brought in uutil near the close of the followiug year. Its recommeardatlons were considerably on the lines of the Bill described above. It suggested that the reformed House of Lords should be made up of three elasses of mercbers, namely, hereditary peers who had beld certain hlgh public offices mueh the same as those schednled ln Lord New. ton's Bill; two hundred representative "Peers of Parliament," elected from the whole borly of the peerake, not for life, but for a single Parliaunent, and ten lorls splritunl, to lnelude the two archhishops and cight bishops to be eleeted. The self-governing eolonies, in the judgmeut of the Cominittee, should he represented in the House of Lords, and twenty years of servier in the llouse of Commons should entitte an Irish peer to a scat ln it.
The plan submitted by the Committee would reduce the Ilouse from 617 members to alrout 8:0). No aetlon has been taken on the report.
A. D. 1907-1908. - The Small Holdings Act. - The first year of its operation. - In 1907 an Act passed Parliament which provided for the acquistion br local authoritles of lanl to be diviled into small botdings for sate or lease to buyers or tennats who enuld not otherwlse he plaecit ou it for self-sipport. The results from the first year's operition of the Act was reported in September, 1909, by the Board of A grieulture ant Fisheries, whieh admlnisters the law. The following arc statements from the report of the Board: "Stated shortly, the result, so far as small holllnes are eoncernch, of the first year's work since the Small Holdings and Allotments Act, 1907, eame into oprration has been that 23.285 appuicntions have heen received by connty comells for 373, 601 ueres, that 13.202 applicants hnve heen npprovel proclsionaliy ns suitable, thint the estlmated quantlty of land required for the suitable applicants is 185,098 neres, that 21. . 417 acres have been nequired by county councilis, of whieh 11.346 neres have becu purchased for £ 9.30 .965 , and 10.071 nere lensell for total rems amounting to $£ 11,209$, that the fand acquired will provide for about 1,500 of the applicants, and that 504 of them were in actual possession of their holdings on December 31, 1908 .
"' It may seem at tirst sight thal the progress that has been made in satisfying the keen de. mand for small holdings which the Act has dis. closed has been small, but the tigures do not glve at all an adequate iden of the amount of work that has been actually done. It must be remem. bered that practically the whole of the tirst six months of the jear were oceupled in the preim. lnary work of constltuting conmittees, issuing forns, receiving and tabulating applications and holding local inguiries, and that untll this work was completed litte progress conld be made in the acyulsition of land.

The rate at which land is being accquired is now increasing rapidly, and we have little doubt that by Michaclmas, 1909, not less than 50,000 acres will have becil ohtained. In additlou to the holdings which hnve been provided by county councils, the returns we have obtained show that over 700 applicants have been supplied with holdings by landowners direct, mainly through the interven. tion of the councils.
"In considering the results alrendy accom. plished it must also be borne in mind that the problem is to fit particular men to particular land, and not narerely to acquire whatever land may' be in the market nad to offerit in small holdings. The great majority of the applleants clesire land in close proximity to their homes, nud it is obviously more difficult to ncquire a large numher of detachel plots than to toke a whole farm or cstate and divide it inton number of small holdings.
"A striking feature of the applicntions made under the Act has been the small extent to whicli the applicants desire to purchmse their holdings. Out if the 23,295 npplications received during the year, only 629, or 2.7 per cent., expressed a desire to purchase. . . The Tet imposes no direct obligntion on councils to provide houses, but we are of opinion that where nu npplicant desires a holding to which he will devote his whole time and from which he will get his whole Hving councils should he prepared to erect a house and the necressary buildings."

The pereonal ascendency of the Gcrman Emperor was unchallenged la Europe.

In the course of seven years condltions hnve been transformed. London is now the dlplomatic capital of Europe. Ifesentful enemies like France have been reponefled; friendships with America, Austrin-Hungary, Italy, and Spain have hecn strengthened: strainel relations with liussia and Germany have been eased; and by the alliance with Japan forces have been readjustel for the maintenmate of existing order in the P'nctic. A. D. 1909 (Feh.). - The Opening of Parliament. - The session of Parlianent was opened by the King with due form and ceremony on Fehruary 16. "The Royal processlon from Buckinghain Palace to Westnilnster," says a report of the occasion, "touk place la tbe dim grey light of a typical February afternoon, and the pageant lost much of 'ts heauty In consequence. In splte of the cold wlud and the absence of the genial sunshine whleh is such a valuable asset on occasions of spectacular display, there appeared to be as nany people as ever along the route of the prucession. These formal opentngs of Parlia. ment, which have beeome customary slace the buylnning of the present relgn, are elearly popular with those of the King's subjects who know nothing, except hy hearsay, of the impressive scenes whlch are to be wltnessed in the House of Lords. The immense crowds who assemhled to watch the King and Qucen pass yesterday, waitlog patlently for hours in order to enjoy a few minutes ceatatie slght-geelng, welcomed thelr Majeatles with a cordiality of the meaning of whlch there could be no doubt. The Klng and Queen, In thelr wonderful gold conch, whth Its sldes of glass, must have been gratifled with the respect and affectlon whlch were manalfested from all quarters."

A. D. 1909 (March), - Representation of the People Eill. - Proposed Universal Suffrage, including women. - Its second reading. - On tbe 20th of March, 1909, the second reading of a hlll describrd as "the Reprewentatlon of the People B111" was moved and seconded In the Ilouse of Commons. Its provisions were substantlally for univeral suffrage, includlag women. In explainlng the measure, the nember who moved the second reading - n representatlve of the Labor party, Mr. Ilownard sald: "It was difficult, if not ahnust imposslble, to deal with a reform of the franelise without at the same time dealing with woman suffrage, and it was diffentr to deal with woman enfranehlsement withont at the same time making some alteratlon ln the existlng franchlse law which should meet the condition of the new ele. ments proposed to be placel on the reglister. The llonse must face the situathon as a whole and handle the tro reforms in one sclieme, because by a eonrdinated Bill there would be a hetter chance of getting nearera settlement. In the Bull that he submitted to the Ilonse there was no abolition of any old franchise. It proposed to create a residential franchlse in order to do away with the hariships wbich any one with a knowletige of registration knew to exist in connexlon with the oceupation vote of men. The secome clause proviled for a restrletion of plural voting, and the third clause related to the removal of the sex disquallication."
Before debate began another member pre: sented a monster peltion argalnst the political enfranchisement of women, suid to contain 243,00x) siguat urcs.
The atittule of the Government towarl the bill was explahed by Mr. Asquith, the Premier. It was well known, he said, that on the !ssue whither women sboukl be granted the sulf rage Ninisters were not of one mind. But they were strongly in favour of a whe reform of the exlstlng suffrage. They desired the abolitlon of plural voting, the disappearance of the artifleina distinctions between occupiers and lodgers, tho naterial shortening of the perlod of qualification, and an effective simpllfication of the machinery of registration But any measure to bring ahoit these reforms ought. In hls opinion. If it was to take its place on the Statute-book, to proceed from the responsible Government of the dar. and to be carefully remoulded In the light of prolonged Parliamentary discussion. For these reasons he thoucht it was not necessary tbat the members of the Goverament should vote for the second reading of the Bill under consideration.

After some hours of debate the closure was moved and the second realling of the bill was carrled by 157 votes agalnet 122.

- con. sequenees, the promhetion of the Budgei aill be In itself an event of wo small moment, from what It signifies of the development of democraey in Great Britain.

As a formulated "Flnance Bill," the Budget was not subnitted to the ilouse of Comunons and to the publie in print untll the 28th of Mny. It was then entlthed ${ }^{-1}$ A Bill to grant certinin Inties of Customs and Iniand Ierenue (Includ. ing Exelse), to alter other Duties, and to nmend the law redating to Customs and Ininnd IReveune (includhg Exeise), and the Xntlonnl Dibt, and to makerther provisions for the Finuncial Arrangements of the Year." Until then lts provisions ware knowin onty from the statement of them matle four weeks before by the Chancellor of the Exchetpler, Mr. Invid Lloyd. Goorfer: in a speech exteuterl throngh suveral hours, "bieh even bis opponents were forced to chnracterize ns " n wonilerful elfort."

Thi, Chancellor's explnmition of the Iuulget rested primarily on the fnct that an antlelpated detieit of $£ 15$, tivi.000 retuired to be illled from new sources of revontue. Of the maln causes of the deticit he sail: "Were I denling whth a shorting tam only for tetupmaty catasc like fore. stahments. I might have resorted to some temporary shift which would have carried me over untll next year when the revenue would nisume its normal course. But unfortunately I have to reckon no merely with an enormous increase la expendl! . e e thls year, but an inevitable expan. siom of vome of the heaviest Items in the eourse of the coming years. What is the inerease of expendituredue to? It la very well known that it must be placed to the eredit of two ftems, sud practically two items alonc. One is the Navy, nad the other is old-age penslons. Now l hare one observation whleh I think I am entitled to make about both. . . . The inereased expentiture under both these hcals was substnitlally incurred with the unanlmons assent of all jmliti. cal partiss in this Ilouse. There was, It ls true, a protest entered on behalf of hon. memhers be. low the gangway ugainst incrensed expentlture In the Navy, but as far as the overwheluling majortty of members in thils House are concerned the increase has recelved thelr sanction and approval. I am entitled to say more. The attltule of the Government towards these two branelues of increased expenditure has not leen one of rushing a reluctant fifouse of Commons into expense which it dlstlsed, but rather of resistlog appeals criming from ali quarters of the llouse for stili further inereases under louth heads.
"We are told that we ought not to hnve touched old age penslons, at least not at the jre sent moment, when heavy flabillties were in vight In connexion with the drfenee of the conntry. I may point out that when we lntroluced ohr Old-Age Pensions Bill that emergeney lid not arisen. I3ut. apart altogether from thit, we had no honourable alternatlve left. We simply honourid a cheque drawn jears ago In fincour i? the aged poor. whleh bore at its foot the signa tures of all the fenders of pollticai partles ln this country. They had nif promised pensiona at election after election, ind grent pollitienl purties have no right to make promises to poor peple hir return for politienl support, viniunble to them. mid nll these people had to glve, and then time nfter thme return the blll with "No assets " writ. tell acrons lt."

I'rocerding next to survey the "Inevitnble ers pansion " of future expenditure to whleh he litul referred nt the outset, and which could he firno seen in connection with the nnvy and with sodibl reform, the Chancellor denlt at length ou the demnnds that were pressiug from the latter side and would not be postponed. "What the Gor. ermment have to ask themselves." he suid. "is this: Can the whole subject of further surlal reform be post poned until the Inereaslng devants made upon the National Exchequer by the growth of armaments has ceased? Not merely can it be postponcel, but ought it to be pust. poned? Is there the sllyhtest hope that if we defrreel considerntion of the matter we arelikely within a generatlon to find any more favourable. moment for nitending to it? I confess that, is to thint, I nm rather pessimistic. And we have to ask ourselves this further questlon-If we put off denling with these socinl sores are the evils which arise from them not likeiy to grow nad to fester until tinally the loss which the country sustains whl be fiffnitely greater than nnythlng lt would have to bearlin payiug the cont of an hmmediate remedy? Tbere ire bua. dreds of thousands of men, women, and eblldren

Last sear, while we were dischs. slog the ()ld-Age Penslons inlll, ail parties lin this llonse recogaized fully and freely that onee we haul started on thege ilnes $t=$ case for extension was Irreslstitule. The leader of the Opposition, in what 1 venture to regari as the most not. able speeches hu has prohahly delfeered during thls Parliament, lecognized quite lwhlly that, whechever party was in power, provislon would have to be male is some shape or other for those who are out of work through uo fault of thelr uwn. nom those who are incapacitatid for work owing to phrsieal causes for whlch they are not responsthle."

The speaker then deveioped at iength the fa: tuntious of the Government oa these iines of soclal reform, which wiil have to inelude under. takings of some system llie the German, of compulsory insurance against slckness, aceitient and unemploynent, nad which will have to look to the organiathon of labor exchanges ame to the uprulag of wider thelis for employment, by development of neglected resources of the conatry. thronish afforestation, througla promotion of agriculture, aad the exteaslon and improvement of rumis.
Aud aow, at last se began to uafold his plaas for raising the meas whth which to deal with all these augan ontenilemands on the Governmeat. and stared them whth a schedule of increused taven on antomohles. Further Ilctails of his arth me are summarized in the following, from The Tines " Review of l'ariament," next morning

The right hon. geathman was iistened to with intease attenthon when he proceded to aanounce aa lncrease of the income-tax and of the estate duty, lle proposed that for carnell in. compa uader $£ 2,004$ thr tas shoulil remain at 9 d. but that between $£ 2,000$ and $£ 3,000$ it should te 1s., and that nll other lacomes now liable to the shilling tax shomhi pay is. 2l. Iloldine that the family maa was entitled en more relief than the buchelor, he proposed tiat on nll iacomes under e:o 00 , in addition to existlng abatemeats. a special nbatement should be allowial of $\$ 10$ fur +wery child under 16 yars of age. Ile hoped (o) eet $£ 180,000$ be the pirtial restoration of the shilling luty and e3,000,0100 from the additional 21. on the ligher incomes. There was also to lie a super tax on incumes excerding $£ 5,000$, to be levid on the amount by which such incomes exceeded $\mathbf{\Sigma 3 . 0 0 0}$. The tax would be at the rate of Gul. In the pound. Exclnmntions denotiag freat disapproval arose from the Claionist beaches when this was mnouaced. The ricld from this super-tax, Mr. Lhysd-George explained, would be in a full year $£ 2,300.000$; but this year not more than $\$ 500,000$. He next came to the Denth dutles. There would be no chaage ia the case of estates up to $\mathbf{£ 5 0 0 0}$, lint between thls liuit aud the fimit of two militions graduation woulit be steepened. The dutr oa estates betwern $£ 5.00$ and $£ 10,00$ would be 4 per cent.: between $£ 10.000$ and $£ 20,000$. 5 per cent. : $£ 00$. 000 to $£ 40,000,6$ per cent. : $£ 40,000$ to $£ \% 0,000$.

Thls hew scale was extlmated to yleld $£ 2,5$,00, 000 thls year, $\mathbf{~} 4,200,000$ next year, aall aflerwarla $\dot{x}^{t}, 400$, (vG). The wetthed Estate duty he raised from 1 per eent. to 2 per cent. From thls source he hoped to get fow, (x) thls year aml e'sis.040 in 1910-1011. The Latucy and successioa duty was to lee raisell in momu cases from 3 per cent. to is per cent., and ln ail others to 10 jeer cent. The yleld from thls next year would be $[1,6(1),(0)(x)$, and woukl inercase in the course of time to $£^{2}=100,1000$. Property alienated infer cicon withln tive years from teath was to be liahle to duty. (Hhjects of national and scleadite iaturest would only be clargeable for duty when they were actually sohl. There were to le ineremsed duties In bonds to bearer and la stork and share transfers. The estlmated yield from the increased Stamp Duties would be this year $\pm 63.00,0100$.
"It whs at this point in his speech that the Chancellor of the Exchequer reypuired rest and thut the sittlog was suspemeel. Whenin halfanhotur's time It wis resumed, the right hon. geutleman continued his sperech with renewed vipour. 1le lealt at conslulerable feugth with the subject of licenses, llwelling on the value of the monopoly grauted to the llyuor trade and arguing thut the foll exacted by the puble was ludieronsly hadequate. ile explained indetaila mamer of changes which he proposed to effect. the chief heiag a unlform charge of 00 per cent., subject tor minimuin rate la urbun areas twcording to population. Fiur clats there would lue a pumednec rate of $d. on the amount taken for the sale of liymor. The yiell from his revinion of the liguor licensing law

- Then he turned to l.md, Irawing a marken distinction hetwe:n the agrinultural landowner ant the urban laadowner, of whom he spoke with shate scorn. Ile proposed to lery a tax sin the value accruing to lami in the future throuth the eaterp,rise of the communter, taklag the land apart from buildinges and other improvements. This dinty of 20 per cent. on unearned increment would be payuble on two orcasions - whea land was sold and when land passed at death. A prollmianry valuation of the lad at the price which it night be expected to fetch at the presint time would be necessiry; and as the tax was to be imposed only on the natarned Inerement subsequently accruing on that valua. thon, the yicld would probably be only $£ 50,000$ In 1 ghe, but in future years it should prove a fruiful source of revenue. It was further proposed to levy an annual duty of one halfpenay in the puad on the capital value of undeveloped laad nad undeveloped mlaerals. Until the proposell raluation of the land of the Cnited King. dom on a cupital basis was completed, it would be impossilule to cstimate the yleld of this duty, but till then the duty would be calculated on the declaratious of the orners, and in the current year he expected it to bring la $£ 350,000$. A 10 per cent. reversion duty was to be imposed on any beaclit accruing to a lessor on the termiuation of a iease, and from this source a yield of $£ 100,000$ was anticlpititl. The three fand tazee wery, accordingly, calculated to produce $\mathbf{c} 500,000 \mathrm{ln}$ the current jear.
"He next dealt whith indirect taxation. He proposed to ralce the present duty on spirite by of. od. per gallon. This would juetily an increase in the retall price of whaky of one half. penny per glase, which would recoup the pubflcan for the additional duty and lewre him mume. thing more to mitigate the pressure of the new dutles on licenses. The $y^{\prime}$ : 1 , during the eurrent year, be eatimated at $\$ 1,600,000$. He aloo propusel to increase the duty on unmanufactured tobacco from 8s. to 8 s . 8d per lb ., with equivaient additions to the rate for cigare, elg. arettes, and manufactured tobacco, the return from which he estlmated at $£ 1,800,000$ durlag the eurrent yenr anil $12,250,000$ for a full year.

The Lotal estimated revenue was $8162,560,000$ and the total estimated expendlture $£ 162,102,000$, lenving a margin of 2488,000 for contingenciea, In concluslon, the right hon. gentlemnn-auti. clpating the charge that he wus Imposing very heavy taxation for a tine of peace - dechared it Was a war Hudget. The Covernment hal declared implacable war against poverty. It whe 8 oclock when the right hou. gentleman fulshed, armld the cheers of his supporters."
That Mr. Lloyd-George's Budget was a gage of battic and that the fight over it was ferce is knowin to everybody, for the dla of the conflet penet rated to every corner of every land. The key note of the outcry agalnst it was somnded in The Times of next morning. which opened its ellitorinl comment with these" words: "One general imprenslon will be very widely made by the complleated mad portentous luudget whleh Mr. Lloyd-Gcorge expounded nt enormous length yestering. Thnt is that the huge defieft of nearly sixteen milllons is to be ralsed nlmost ex. chuslvely nt the cost of the wealthy and the fairly well-to.do. They are struck at in all sorts of Ways, through the incone-tax, the legncy dutles, the estate dities. the stnmps upon thelr invest ments, their land, thels roynlties, thelr brewery dividends, and their tnotor-cars. So when Mr. Lhoyl George exclains rather theatrieall. Mr. Emmott, this is a wnr Buaget. hls wonls carry a meaning whleh he did not intend. IIs talks of waging war agalnst poverty, but thnt is ar ver really waged by unjust exnetions from those whose custom prevents a worse poverts thau nny we know: mal whose hrains and cap thal conint for nt least as much as thews and sincus. C'ntess men exempt from lncome-tax cliber smoke or drink. they do not pry a single penny towards making up a defelt malnly due to a punsion scheme of whlel they reap the whole benefit. The doctrine of soclai ransom has never been carricd quite so fir."
Solt wns braniled by Its opponents as a "Socialist Budget" and its authors as allies of Sncinlism, throughout the campaign. This denunciation was applied especlally to the tax on unearned lnercments of vahe in land, as such increments should occur hereafter. On that point of opposition to the Budget Mr. Asquith. the Prime MInlster of the Government, Apenking It apublic meetlng In London, had this to say: -: The increment dinty is a tax of 20 per cent. on :he inerease in the caplan value of certain kinds of lnad whieh is shown on the occasion of its transfer or dovolution, and which ta not attributable to the efforts or to the expenditure either of the owner or the nccupler. That is what the Increment duty la. Now what is it not ? I apoke Afremoments ago of crrtain clasaes of land. Let me mak you to obmervo, firat, what are the kinds of landed proferty which are altogethry exempted from the cope of this caxation. In the firet place, all aricultural land which has no bulking value abive lte agrleuttural value: next. amal properties occupied by thelr owners; thrdly, property belrnging to local authoritles; agaln, property held \%or publle or chartable pur. poses ; and, anally, property beionging to statutory companlea, such as raflways, which cannut be used for other than atatutory purposes
"Now, suppose the case of hand which does not fall whithin any of those exempted calegories, how is the duty charged? Here, agnin, there is a great deal of misapprehension about $1 t$, so it is better to state the case ns clrarly as one can. You start wlth the site value of the innd at the present moment, and by site value - 1 anm not golng into technicallies - we mean, roughly speaking, the value of the land divested of tie bulldinge. You do not go baek into the pust, you take thinga as they are: you do not rip up the privious history; you do not interfere with exlsting or past contracts. You give to eviry man, thowever be has acqulred ti, the full anil undisturbed enjoyment of the rights, priviliges, and property whleh he at present posersses. Niarting with that datum line, you wili sur that in years tu come, when that piece of land is transferred by sale - It may be by lease-or devolves upon death, the site value (you sre comparing like with llke, mind yout at that date - that is to say, the value after glving the owner and every one who has been interested in the lnul eredli for all expendture they linve made in the why of improvement and development In the interval - comparing slte with site, If you find an increment in value there, you ang that it ls an increment due to the comnunity, to soclal causes, to enuses over which the owner Was no more responsible than you or I, and that It is not unfair in polat of justice, and that it is in the highest degrec pudient in print of policy that the State shonid be conteled to claim for Itself ln relle! of the necessitles of the sanue community some part - not any cxagger. ate : exolbitant part - hat some part, of the In it i. ent which has so acerued. I may point out ${ }^{2}$ it ere is no duty chargeable nt nll. so tender 5 ay frlend Mr. Loyd George (langhter anil rs) leen to the laterests convernctl-he lisa 5. .n of a most sympathetle niture - sometimes Inm ilsposed to think be is of almost too impressionnlle $n$ anture when appents of thls kime nre nddressed to blm - so tender has he heen of all these interests that he has agreed that no duty should be chargeable uniess the lnerement value amounts to at least 10 per cent., and where it is over, the first 10 per cent. should rscapr free. That is the Inc. mment duty whleh Iori lioths chld tells you-I think 1 nm not misquoting him - is rank and undiloted Soclnism. nnd which Iord Lanadowne says ls golng to shake the rery toundations of elvilized society.
" The propriety and justlee of taxing thls kind of increment, In the csse of these ciasses of land rests upon the most solid ground both of author. ity and experience. It has been advocated for generatluns by the moss emicent ecouomists. It heneratuns by the most emirent ecouomils. It Dy more than one Royal Commicelon. It wes approved in princlplemore than once oria by the fate non-progreaclve Houne of Commona. It has been put in practice in various forms for iocal ourpoees $\ln$ not a few Continental munictpalities and in many of our own Colonies, and, I bellove, dways with succesful reaults. And let me add, by way of climax to that catena of authority, that it is at thio moment, or at any rate was a few weeks ago, the alternative proponal put forward by the Conaervative party in the Relchstag in Germany - in Incremeut duty, not for local but for Imperial purposes, was the alternatlve proponal to the Budget of Prince Bulow put forward by the Conservative party in the luclchntag in Germany, and thls is rank Soclallam!"

Fext to the proponed land taxen, the most bitterly opposed leature of the Budget was the in creased revenue to be exacted from the Ilcensed monopollst of the llquor trade. Everything, however, in its new taxation was denounced by the Conservatives. who set agalast it thelr own project of obtalning Increased revenues hy recuruing to the protective tarif whlch Engiand had abandoned three-quarters of a century ago. Tie cry for what they preferred to cail "t tarift reform" had heen allencod since the election of 1010, when the electurs of the Kingdom rejected Mr. Chamberlaln's revived protectlonlam by an overwielming vote. Now it was ralaed agalu, anel fuliy made the prime article $\ln$ the Couservitive crem, as It had not been before.

It was not until the 4th of Novimber that the Finance Bill was brought to Its thiri remiing In the Ilouse of Commons, and was passed, by the heavy majortty of 378 to 149 . From the beginning it was known, of course, that the mersure hind few friends lu the Honse of Lards, and wouid gr own in lefent there if tie Peer ventured to ume tise rigit to negative a mones Bill. - T muny generations they had not Asputed the waim of the Commons to exelusive controi of revenue legislation ; bint a theory had now been mooterl, tinat Mr. Lloyi-Gcorye's Buiget Bili differed from a niere money blii hy carrying Sociailstic $\operatorname{lmplicat}$ 保s tacked on to It , whitin the IIouse of Loris was under no obiligntion to accept. Whether the loords would or woulit not be bold enougin to act on thls tbeory and throw down the I3ili, as they hal thrown down so much of the nou-Ananciai legisiation of the Llheral Govermment, had been a serlous question throughout the debates. Sir Eiward Grey sadi of it. In a speech at Leerls, in August:
"As to the fate of the Buiget - Is it goligg to be destroyed by the liouse of Ioris or is it not? The leaders of the Tory party - with whom the declsion rests - are very cautious In expressing their opinions. Some of the rank and tile hase salid the House of Lodls is going to destroy the Bulget, or have spoken as if it were so. But the leuders-Mr. Balfour, Lurd Lansdowne, and so fortil - have been very cautions. They are great partsans in thls matter of the open door, ir. perhaps I should nar, of two open door*. They have studiously kept iwo doors open, and as far as Lord Lansdowne's utterances go, he bas kept the door open for passing the Budget in the House of Lorls or rejecting it. He rays the Ilouse of Lords is bound to dieclide so that the prople should te pmperly monsultel. and that thist Is the function of the House of Lords, to prutect the right of tite people to have their say on the subject. A very nice function If only if was performed Impartially ; but when it is a fupetion which has been in abeyance for the greater part of the last 20 yearn, and is on! $y$ to be erected into operation when a Liberal Givverb. ment comes Into otilice, It is not function fer which we can kave much reepect. But, neverthelests, it is so In our Constitutlon at present that the House of Lerds is a weapon-s great gun, if rou like to call it $s o-$ whlch can be polnted only galust Llherai mensures - not agrinst Conervative measures - nnd whici is In the hands of the Conservative party. Now there is the Hindget golng premently w the Houme of Linals; there ls the gun polnting when it arrives there; there is the Conuervitive fuger on the trigger. Are they golng to fire the gun or not? They du not kuow thenaelves yet. They are debathug in thelr own minds what will happen If they fre tie gin. Will they destroy the Bualget, or will the recoll be more injurions to themelva? Or, perhaps, willthe gun burat altogether if they lef it wil? We know what their wlaies and Inclinatlons are: whet we to not know at the present time is how nuch nerve they have got. Hut of this I am $r$ svinced Whatever the IIouse of Lorda niay cio, when the time comes for an appeal to the country, it will the an appeal on this isudget as a Free Trada Budget, and agalnst the ulternative c tarlf reform.

Others among the prominent Libernla spoke wlet more temper of the threatened action of the Lords. Mr. Winston Churchlli, for cxample, at Lelcester, In September. salll: "The rejection of the Budget by the Ilouse of Loris . . . would be a vlolent rupture of constitutional custom and usage extendling over 300 years and ricognized during all that time by the lealers of every party ${ }^{\text {s- }}$ the State. It would invoive a siarp and sen. " Jreach with the traditions of the past: and تhat does the Ifonse of loria depend upon if not niont the eriditions of thes past? it ronld amount to an attempt at rivolution not by the poor, but by the rich; not be the masses. but by the privileped few : not in the name of progress, but in that of reaction: nut for the purpuse of broadening the frimewnok of the State, jut greatly narrowinglt. Such anattempt. gentlemen whaterir rou may think of it. such an attempiwoull be historic in its character, and the result of the battle fought upon it, whever wins. must inevitahly be wo of an annual, but of a permanent aul rinai ch, acter. I say to you that we to not scek the struggle. We have our work to clo: but if it is tu come, It could never come better than wow."

Very soon after the Biil had been passed orer to the llouse of lords it was known that the Conservatlve leaders had eonsented to its death in that boty. What may be called the death sentence was pronounced on the 22d of Novens ber, when Lond Lansdowne moved the following amendment to a motion for the second rending of the Bill: "Thut this II nuse is not justified in giving lts consent to this Bill untll lt has been submitted to the judgment of the country."

one of their bench, Lord Jamen, as follows:
"The effect of thls rule and others that exist is that a member of the trade union is compeiled to contribute to the support of a member of Parliament, who is competled to answer the Whip of the Labour Party. I construe thls conditlon as meaniug that the member undertakes to forego bis own jndgment, and to vote in ParIlament in accordance with the opinions of some person or persons acting on bebaif of the La. bour Party. And such vote would bave to be given in reapect of ail matters, inciuding those of a moat general character - such as confidence In a Ministry or the poilicy of a Budget - matters unconnected directly at least with the interests of inbour. Therefore I am of opinion that the application of money to the maintenance of a member whose action is so regulcted is not within the powers of a trade union. If your Lordships decide on this hranch of the case that the respondent is entitled to judgment, It is unnecessary that any opinion should be expressed upon the very hroad constitutional question ralsed for the first time in the Court of Appeal affecting the general support of nembers."

Tire reauit was genoraily disappointing, because wholly inde. cisivc. The new IInuse of Commons was fornd to be nuaic up of 275 Liberais, 278 Cnionists, 71 Nationaiists (Irish), 11 Inde pendent Nntionalists, and 40 Labor members. Neither of the polticai parties arrayel on the main issues in. voived had won n majority. The peopie had rendered 110 recognizable verilet on the Budget, or on the tarif question, or on the abolition of the veto power claimed hy the Ilouse of Lords.
Iiven with the support of the lator inembers the Aspuith linivtry wne in a milnority. The baiance was heid by the Irish members, and it was oniy hy compromise with them that either

Liberals or Unioniats could do anything. Had the MIniatry beer ahle to choose its own course it might have preferred, perhaps, to push the Budget question to a settlement before attempting to determine the future of the House of Lords; hut the leader of the Nationalists, Mr. Redmond, gave prompt notice that they would allow no such second-rating of the Loris' veto question to go into the programme of legislation. Probably, therefore, there were negotiations between Liherals and Natlonalists hefore Mr. Asquith announced the intentions of the Government, which he did on the 28th of February, - Parliament having been formally opencif on the 15 th. Up to the 24th of March, he ciaimed all the time of the House of Commons for im . mediate measures which must be adopted before the close of the financiai year, to provide im. mediateiy necessary means for maintaining the national credit. Then, "when the IIouse reas. sembled after Easter, on March 20, the Government rould present their proposals on the relstions between the two Honses. They would he presented, in the first instance, in the form of resoiutions afflrming the necessity for excluding the House of Lords aitogether from the donuin of finance, and inviting the House to deciare that, in the sphere of legisiation, the power of the veto now possessed by the Lords shouil le ${ }^{20}$ iimited as to sezure tie predominance of the deliherate and considered wiil of the Commons within the lifetime of a single Parliament. Further, it would be madie piain tifat these constitutlonal changes were without prejudice to and contemplated in a suhacquent year the substitution in our Second Chamber of a democratic for an bereditary basis. When these resolutions fiail been agreed to, they would be submittell to the Ilouse of lords, so as to bring the main issue to a 'rial at the earliest possibie moment."
This programme of procedure appears to inse meen hastened slightly; for despatchrs from London ou the 21st of 3lnreh announced that Mr. Asquith ind brought forward his resolutions. and thint their purport was as foilows: "The first resolution provides for conpicte controi of money bills by the Ilouse of Commons, thuy unmistakn if "iisposing of the question that was precipitated ly the Lords' sejection of tlirbudget : the speond precludes the Lords from rejecting any bili that has been passed by the Commons at three successive sessions, providied the cotire time the hili has hevn before the House is not less tinn two years; and in the same case the hill becomes a law without the royal assent."

A. D. 1850-1907,-Growth and changes in population. - The shifting of numerical weight among nations and peoples, -Some statistical statements of surprising interest were set forth $\ln$ an article puhlished by Professor Sombart, of Berlin, in 190\%. German statisticlans have a reputation for aceuracy, and we have no ground for questloning the figures auhmitted hy this profeasor, which show that, notwithstanding the great flow of emigration from Europe within the last 60 years, Its population has increased from about $250,000,000$ to $\mathbf{4 0 0 , 0 0 0 , 0 0 0}$ sinee the midilte of the nineteenth century. The maln growth, however, has been in Russia, from which the emigration has been slight.

The exhiblt of relative inereasc in the several countries and among the several races of Europe is more iuterestlng and more inuportant than the total growth. This comparison gives a heavy galn of welghi to llussia sinee 1850, a conslderable gain to Germany, slight galns to AustriaIlungary, Great britain and Ireland (wholly on the lBritish slde of the United Kingdom), Belrium, and the Netheriands, whith comparative losses in all the reat. The drop made by Franee in the scale of population is distressingly great. Out of every 1,000 inhahitants of Europe in 1850 , 137 were In Fraure; hut out of the same num. ber of Europeans in 1905 she counted but 94. Russia, In the same periol, raised her share of the population of Europe from 215 per 1,000 to 285 ; Girmuny from 138 to 145; Austria-Ilangary frum 114 to 117 ; Great 13ritain and Ireland from 10) to 105; Belgimm from sixtecu to seventeen: the Netherlands from twelve to thirteen. On the other hand, Italy droppetl from 9.5 to 80 ; Spaln and Portigal from 71 to 58 : Sweden, Nir. way, and lemmark from 29 to 27 ; the Balsan States from 60 to 53 ; Switzerlaml from nine to elght.

Carrying the eomparisons of rulative popula. tion laek to the begiunlug of the last century, Irofessor Somhart finds that Germany, which galnedi ground In the last half of the period, had lust more in the first hulf than thst gain made good. In 1801 the Germans furnighed 160 to each 1,000 of the population of Europe, against their present count of 145. Bui - Britain and Ireland gave but 93 to that 1,000 In 1801 against the 105 of the present time. The gains of Russia and the losses of France, Italy, and Spaln were alike continuous from the first to the latest date.

As the result of these differences of advance in population, the Slavle peoples have been raised from the loweat to the highest weight in numbers; the Germanie have dropped just enough In the scale to take second place : while the Latinlzed folk of Southwestern Europe, or Latins as we call them, have fallen far from the share they had in the peopiling of the eontinent 100 years ago. Of each 1,000 Europcans in 1801 the Slavs numbercd 268, the Latlos 3.5 , the Germanles 375 . In 18.50 the count was 310 for the Nlav, 821 for the Iatin, 869 for the Germanie. The next 5.5 years brought the Slav to the front, with a great bouud. and the tigures in the eol. mul for 1805 are $3 \%$ Slav, 373 Germanic, 251 Latin.

These statisties hold a numher of deep meanings; but they are especlally eloquent in thelr showing of the deadly effeets of the Napoleonic wars. For Franec thre has heen no reenvery slnce those horrible years when the Corsican vamplre sucked at her veins ; and Spaln and ltaly are stll! sleklied from the same causc. But Germany's langnishing ended when the long peace of the last 30 years began. Her ritallty, had never been spent, even lu the Thlrty Years' War and hy the belligereney of Frederiek, "ealled the Great," before Napoleon came to trample upon her, as that of France had beenexhausted hy her Bourhon and Corsiean masters.
A. D. $1870-1905$. - Rate of Increase of Population in other countries compared with Germany. - "1 During the last few decades, the populatlon of Germany has been Inereasing with marvello:s and unprecedented rapldig. From $18 \%$ to the present time it has grown irom $40,818,000$ people to more than $60,000,000$ people, and has therefore luercased by 30 per cent. During the same perfod, our own [British] population has increased from $31,817,000$ people to $43,000,000$ people, or by hut 32 per cent. No natlon in the world excepting those oversen which yearly recelve a huge number of immlgrants from ahroad multiplies more rapldly than does the German nation, as may be seen from the foliowing figures:
"Average Yearly Increase of Population between the Last and the I'revious Consus.
Germany, 15,000 people per milllon of lnhabltants.
Russia, 13,600 people per million of inhahitants. Holland. 12,300 people per miliion of inhahitants. Switzerland, 10,400 people per million of Inhnbltants.
Beigium, $\mathbf{1 0 , 1 0 0}$ penple per mlilion of inhabltants.
Great Britain, 0,400 people per millon of inhablt ants.
Austria-Hungary, 9,800 peopic per million of Juhabitants.
Spaln, 8,800 people per million of Inhabltants. Italy, 6,900 people per milion of Inhabitants.
Fracee, 1,700 people per million of inhahitants.
"From the foregoing tahle It appears that not only the population of Germany, but that of all the chichy Germanic nations, Increases very much faster than that of all other nntions, Russia excepted. However, Russla cannot falriy he compared with Germany, partiy because her populatlon statistles are not reliabie, partiy because the growth of her population is to some extent due to conquest.
"The aroud hoast of the Pan-Germans that It is the destiny of the German mee to rule the worid woull appear to be correct, were it not for a siuguiar phenomenon which, so far, hins remained alinost unobserved. Later fipmres, relative to France, on this sub. ject, ware given by the Phris correspondent of tite New lork Feening Poat, writlny June 12th, 1900 , When he suid: "F'rom IPOI to IOOS the blrthrate Was high enough to incrense the population of France 18 for every 10.000 yearly. During the same perinal the relative Increase per 10.000 was 106 in ítaiy, 113 in Austria 121 hi England, 140 In Germany, ind 155 in Hollaud. . . Coming back to aingle years, the birth rate of 1006 oniy increased the Freneh population 7 per 10,000 ; that is, among every 10.000 inhabitants there were as many births of living chlldren as there were deaths taken altogether, plus aeven births more. In 1907 there were five fewer hirths than deaths per 10,000 inhabitants. And now here comes 1008 jumping back to an excess of twelve hirths over deaths per 10,000 . Such sudden fuctuations can be selzed on hy no theory; 1007 had lts deficlt because It had 19,802 more deaths than the average; 1908 recovers lost ground because It had 48,266 fewer deatis than 1907 , or 28,774 fewer than the avcrage of the preceding period of five years. Aiong witil this slow hut sure decrease in the absolute birth rate of France goes tho happier decrease of deaths, owing to greater weli-heing in general and better popular hyglene In particuinr.
"Statistics have something better than this to show. The steady increase in marriages, which I noted last year, has gone on. For 1008 it is the heaviest slnce 1873; the total number was 315,828 - which is 1.172 more than In 1907 and 9441 more than in 1006 . Divorces, for ali France, were $10,573 \mathrm{In} 1906$ nnd 11,515 In 1908 .
"Why do Frenchmen have few children ? Herause they deliherately wiii not to have them. Thit is the auswer which every inteligent oh. server wito passes his Ife among Frenchmenas onc of thenselves, not as an outsider - wiif give spontancously; and it is the answer to whick all statistics nnd all verified socinl facts lead up."
A. D. 1878-1909. - Thirty-one Years of Peace, broken only by Thirty-one Days of War. - In the spring of 1807 there were titirty. oue days of war hetween Turkey and Greere. With that exception there have heen mo hostilities on the European continent sluce Kusia fougit the Turks in 1877-78, a periol of thirty. one years. Iu the preceding thifty years there had been nenrly a score of serious insurrections and wars: the widespread revolutionary cor flicts of 1848-49, In France, Itaiy, A ustria, Ilungary. Gormany, and Denmark: the coup if'ilat of $1 \times 51$ in Francu; the Crimeun Wir of 18.4t-it : the war of France and Sarlinia with Austrin in 18.59: Garimki's liberation of Siclly aud Nuples In 1861, and his attempt on liome the next remr ; the Greck ruvolutlon of 1 s 02 ; Polish revolts of 1861 and 1863: the Sehleswig. Iloistein war of 1804 : the Austro-Prussian "Seren Werks Wiar" and the Austro-itailan war, In 1866; Garihulif:s reuewed attack on the lapai goverument at IRome in 1867 ; revolution in Spain in 1868; the Franco-German War and the lisurrection of the Commulists at Paris in 1870-71: tice revoits of Bosnia and ilerzegovina in 1875 and of Buigaria in 1876.

There is no mlstaking the hopeful significunce of so striklag a contrast as this; and if we lonk back through two more similar perimis, carch of Whith represents the avernge temt reckoneti for a generation, we find the key to a better under. standing of its hopefulness. Behlnd the turhulent thlrty years from ' 47 to ' 77 are thirty years during most of which Furope lay blecting, panting, exhausted by thirty other years of the French Rezolition amb the Sispolconic mars; exhausted physicaily hut stirrid deeply in lirain and heart, sull pathering strength for the efforts wwind freer nid better instltutions of government and more homogencous organizations of aationality which most of the conflict hetween 1847 and 1877 represent.

It is because those conflicts resulted in far better political conditions, and in much of eatisfaction to racial affinitles and national aspirations long reaisted, that the people of Europe, in these last thirty years, have anjoyed the longeat exemption from war cn their own soli that their history reeords.
A. D. 2903-1907. - Reneval and maintenance of the Tripie Alliance, - Its value to Italy. - The Triple Alllance or Dreibund of Germany, Austria-IIungary and Itaiy, formed in 1883 and renewed $\ln 1887$ and 1891, was renewed for the third time in 1902, a year before the end of its term, by the Zanardelli Government. "The term of this renewal was for six or 12 yeurs ; that is to say, if the treaty were not denounced in 1007, five years after lis actual renewnl, it shonld be considered as holding gool for the full term of 12 years. The treaty was not denouaced by the Gfolitel Ministry, with Sigaor Tittoni Minlster of Foreign Affairs, and therefore is in force untll 19i4, 12 years after its thind renewai by Princtil. Exeept in the ease of a very marked alteration in tho friendly relations between tho three eontracting Powers there ean be no question of its renewal or non-renewal nt this date. That case has not arrived ; the cordiai relatlons between Italy and her allies, In apite of eonjectured though uaseknowiedged differenees of opinion, remain ostensibly unaltered, and may still be consitiered as correctly deacribed in the worls usci in thelr speceines in Vieana by the Emperor of Austria andi the German Emperor, and in the telegrams which they afterwards ex. ehanged wlth the liing of Italy.

- Some Italian politicinns, however, seem disposed to questlon the utility of an alliance which does not relieve ltaly from the necessity of spendlng nore money on her nationnl derence. What, they ask, is the use of the nlliance if we have to make these heavy sacriflees $\ln$ order to iucreaso our ariny and navy and put our frontice fortlitcatlons in orier? The answer is more simple $t^{\prime}$ a agreeable. It is preciscly the existence (, ne Triple Alliance that has permitted Italy to acire her Austrian frontlor absolutoiy open to invasion, and to nllow both her army and aavy to fail below the stnadard which she had propused to keep up. The nllianee has secured her inmmity for her meglect. But she has naturally pald for that coaiblned neglect and im munity by arcepting a suborilnate rôle by the sile of her allies." - Riome C'orrespondence, London Times, May 15, 1809.
A. D. 1904 (April), - The Entente Cordiale of Engiand and France. - In hls interestlng work on "France and the Aliances," fonnded nan course of leetures Idclivercd at Ilarvari Linlversity in 1908 , M. André Thailen revlews the long antagonlsm between Fingland and France, which ran through their instury, from early in the Fourtrenth Century to the last year but une of the Ninetcenth, when, in March, 1809, France, by treaty with the 3ritish Government, gave up lier strong degle to extend her Nortio Africnn dominion castwaril to the Nile. Then he asks: " Hhow came it that whithin firn yrara a aincera uncierstanding was estahlished betweer the two lirelitary enemies $q^{\prime \prime}$ IIe answers the question by saying: "Neithar in Finpland nor in Franee is the principle of the understanding to be cought. Rather was it tive fear of Germany which determined England - not only her Kiag and Government, but the whole of her people to draw near to France." This, without douht, is subatantially the true explanation of the friendly agreements, forming what is known as the Bintente Cordiale between England and France, which were sigoed on the 8th of April, 1904. They involved nothing in the nature of a defenaive alliance against Germany, and they had been prepared for by a rapid growth of natural and real good feeling between English and French folk; but lt is certain that they received their immediate prompting from the common recognition, In England and France, that Germany had become a rival in political and economie amhitions to both of them, more formidablo than dither could he to the other. Thls gave them a common reason for obliterating all their old differcnees and causes of difference, sad exhilhiting themselves to the worid as friends.
M. Tardien eredits tine English King with the initiation of thls most important rapprockement. " lle it was," says the Freneh wrlter, " who both conceived and facilitated it, witite still many belleved that the moment was premature. Edwnrd VII. has been both praised and attackel without stint. Perhaps he deserves neither the 'excess of honor nor yet the excess of nlum"." Among preseat goverelgns, he has one superiorlty, that of having gained cxperience in life before reigning. . .. He is not afraid of taking the iniflative; nod so far his initiative las been a suecess. The boldest example of it was his visit to Paris in 1903. Pitting nside all objectious, and being convinced of his sneeess, he arrived in France amidst un ntmosphere of uncertalnty. When the first platoons of cuirassiers rode down the Champs Elysées, embarrissinent and anxiety wchathed on the public. The Nationallsts had decharel tibeir lntention of hissing. What would be the result of n hostife manifes. tation $i$ Tlie King, as far ns he was concerned, did not lielieve lin the danger, and he was right. The l'arisians aecoried him, not an enthisiastle, but, froat the tirst, a respectful, and soon ngeninl, recuptinu. The road was clear. Two months later, Mr. Lonbet paid King Filward n retnrn visit. And, on welcoming his collengue. Mr. Delcassé, to London, Lonf lausdowne said to him: ' Now we are going to lave some converzithon.' As a matter of fact, there was coavershtion both in Paria nad in London. . . . Strictiy suenking, there ware thr e Agreements, or two Declaratlons and oae formal Convention, signed on the Ntil of Ipril, 1004, constinuthe, togcther, the Ingio-Frencil Eintente. 'Tiue tirst, a "Deciaration respecting Egypt and Boroce ${ }^{\text {," }}$ ran ns follows:

They declare that they will not obstruct the action taken by France for this purpose, provided that such action shail leave intact the rights which Great Britain, ia virtue of Treaties, Cunventions, and usage, enjoys in Morocco, including the right of cousting trade betweeu the ports of Morocco, enjoyed by British vessels since 1901.

The trade of both hations with Jlorocco anl with Egypt shali enjoy the same treatment in transit through the French and British possessions in Africa. An Agreement between the two Governments shnli settle the conditions of such transit and shall determine the points of entry. This mutunl engagement shail be hinding for a periol of thirty years. L'nless this stipuiation is expressly denounced ut least one year in advance, the pertod shall be extended for five years at a time. Nevertheless. the Government of the French Repuhlic reserve to themseives in Blorocco, and IIs Britanuic Majesty's Government reserve to themselves in F.gypt, the right to see titat the concessions for roails, rallways, ports, &c., are only granted on surfin conditions as will mnintain intact the nuthority of the State over these great undertakings of public interest.

"Antrele. FI. 1 Ir uther to insure the frec pasange of the Shez. (anal, Ifis Britannle Majes. ty's Government declare that they mithere to the stipulations of the Treaty of the 9yth October,

This condition does not, however, apply to the piaces at prescnt in the occupa. tion of Spain on the Moorish coast of the SIed. iterranean.
"Ahticle VIII. The two Governments, inspired by their feeling of sincere friendship for Spain, take into special considerstion the interests which that country derives from her geographical position and from luer territorial possessions on the Moorish coast of the Mediter. rancan. In regard to these interests the Freach Government will come to an understanding with the Spanish Government. The agreement which may be cume to on the subject bet ween France and Spain shali be communicated to His Britan. alc Majesty's Goverument.
"Article IX. The two Governments agrue to afford to one another their diplomatic support, in order to obtain the execution of the clauses of the present Declaration regarding Egypt and Morocco."

Tite more formaliy designated Convention re. lates to questlons concerning the New foundland fisieries and certaln boundaries between French and English possessions in Africa. The artleles respecting Newfoundiand and the fisicries are as follows:
"Arricle I. France renounces the privilcges estahlished to laer nivantage by Article Nill of the Treaty of Utrucht, and confirmed or modified by subsequent provisions.
"Anticle II. France retains for her citizens, on a footing of equality with Rritish subjects. the rigit of fishing in the territorial waters on that portion of the coast of Newfommilnad comprised hetwen ('ape St. John nad Cape Hay. passing by the nortil: this right shall be cxircised during the usual fishing season elosing fur atl persons on the $20 t h$ October of ench yiar. months before they come into operation. The poileing of the fahing on the ahove-mentioned irrtion of the coast, and for prevention of lificlt iquor traffic and smuggling of aplrits, shali form the subject of Regulations drawn up in agreewent hy the two Governments.
"Article III. A peciniary indemnity shall be awarded by Hls Britaunic Majesty's Government to the French eltizens engaged in ishIng or the preparation of fish oa the , Treaty Shore, who are obilged, elther to ahandon the estabishments they possess there, or to give up their occupstion. in consequence of the modithcatiou introduced b; he present Conventlon into the existing state ut affalrs. Thls ludemnity cannot be ciaimed by the partica Interested unless they have been engaged in their business prior to the elosing of the fishing season of 1903. Ciaims for Indemnity shail he submitted to an Arbitrai Tribunai, composed of an officer of cach nation, and, In the event of disagreeunent, of an Umplre appointed in accordance with the procedure iaid down by Articie XXXII of The llague Conventlon. The detalis reguiatlug the constltution of the Trihunsi, aud the conditions of the inquiries to he instituted for the purpose of substaatlating the claims, shail form the subject of a special Agreement between the two Goverunents.
"Abticle IV. IIIs Britanule Majesty's Government, recognizing that, in addition to the iudemalty referred to in the preceding Articie, some territorisi compensatlon is due to France in return for the surrender of her privilege in that part of the lsiand of Newfoundiand referred to in Articie II, agrec with the Governmeat of the French Repubilc to the provisions cubodied in the following Articies: "
The provisions here referred to, containcd in the subsequent articles, modify the former frontier between Senegambia and the English coiony of the Gambia, "so as to give to France larhutenda and the lands and landing piaces belonging to that locallty ": cede to France "the group known as the Isies de Los, and situated oppositc Konskry" ; and substitute a new boundary, to the east of the Niger, for that which was tixed between the French and British possessions hy the Con rention of 1868 .
The Declaration which concindes the serics of Agreements has to do with matters in Siam. Maiagsscur, and New Mebrides. As to Nian, the two Governments "dcciare by nutual agreement that the influence of Great Britain slail be recognized by France in the territories situated to the west of the basin of the liver Menam, and that the infl rence of France siail be recognized by Great Inritain in the territories situsted to the enst of the sasice region, all the siamese possessions on the cast aud southeast of the zone above described and the allacent isiands coming thus henecforth under French intinence, and, on the other haud, ali Siamese possersions on the west of thls zone and of the Giulf of Siam, inciuding the Malsy Peninsuia and tie adjarent isiands, coming undrr English intluence. The two Contracting l'sertles, dischiming ail lide of annexing any Siamese territory, and determined to ahstaia from any act "iich might contravene the provisions of ex. isting Treaties, agree tbnt, with this reservalion, and so far as either of them is concerned, the two Governmenta shall each have respectively llberty of actlon in thelr apheres of infuence above defined."

The further agreements were, on the part of the Brltish Gorarnment, to withdraw a protest it had ralsed against the customs tariff estabIIshed in Madagascar, and, on the part of the two Goveruments, "to draw up In concert an arrangement which, without involving any modificatlon of the poiltical atatue quo, shali put an end to the dlficulties arising from the absence of jurladiction over the natives of the New Hebrides."

In the British Parllamentary Paper (Cd. 1952, Aprif, 1904) which gave official publlcation to these Agreements, they are accompanled by an explanaiory despatch from the Marquess of Lanaiowne, British Foreign Secretary, to Sir E. Monson, Ambassador at Paris, whlch affirms distinctly that "if any European Power is to have a predominant lnflucnee in Morocco, that Power Is Frauce." The language of the despateh on this suhjeet is as follows:
"The condition of that country [Morocco] has for a long time leen unsatisfactory and fraught with danger. The authority of the Sultan over a large portlon of hls doninions is that of a tituiar Chief rather than of a Ruler, Life and property are unsafe, the natural resourees of the country are undeveioped, and trade, thongh lncreaslag, is hampered by the poiltical situation. In these respects the contrast between Morocio and Egypt ls marked. In spite of well-meant efforts to assist the Sultan, hut little progress has beeu effeeted, and at this moment the prospect is probably as iittle hopeful as It ever has been. Without the Intervention of a strong and elvlifed Power there appenrs to be no probahility of a real improvement In the condition of the country.
" It seems not uanaturai that, in these circumstances. France should regard it as failing to her lot to assimme the task of attempting the regeneration of the country. Iler Algerian pos. sessions adjoin those of the Suitan tbroughont the iengtio of a frontier of several hundred miles. She has been compelied from time to time to undertake military operatlons of considerable ditticulty, and at mueh cost, in order to put an cud to the disturbances which continunily arise auongst tribes aljoining the Aiferian frontier - tribes whlch, although nominaify the subjects of the Suitan, are, in fact, aimost entirely be. rond hils control. The trade of France with Jlorocco is again - if that across the Algerinu frontier le included - of comsiderable Importance, and compares not uafarourably with our own. In these circur uces, Francc, aithough in no wlse lesiring to uex the Suitan's domlnions or to subvert his hority, secks to extend her Intiuence In Moroccu, and is ready to submit to sacriflees and to incur responsibilitles with the object of putting in cnd to the condition of anarchy which prevails upon the borders of Algeria. His Majesty's Government are not propared to assume such responslbilitles, or to make such ancrifices, and they bave therefore readily admitted that If any European Power is to have a predominant Influence In Noroceo, that Power is France."

Of the rectrornt and equally important recog. nition by France of the paramount influence of Grcat Britain in Egypt. Lord Lansdowne wrote: "From the point of vlew of Great Britaln the most important part of the Agreement whleh has been concluded in respect of Egypt is the recognition by the F'rench Government of the predominant posltion of Great Britain in that country. They fully admlt that the fulfilment of the task upon which are entered In 1883 must not be lmpeded by any suggestion on their part that our interest in Egy pt is of a temporary char. acter, and they undertake that, so far as they are concerned, we shall not be Impeded in the performance of that task. Thls undertaking will enabie us to pursue our work in Egypt wlthout, so far as France is concerned, arousling interantionnl susceptiblities. It is true that the other Great Powers of Eurupe also enjoy, in virtue of existing arrangementa, a privileged position in Egypt ; but the interests of France - historical, politlcal, and financlal - so far outwelgh those of the otber Powers, with the exceptlon of Great Britaln, that so long as we work in harmony with France, there seems no reason to anticipate ditliculty at the hands of the other powers.'
A. D. 1904-1909. - General Conseqnences in Europe of the Russo-Japanese War and the Weakening of Russia in Prestige and Actual Power. - "Europe is apparently on the eve of such a new comblation of the Great Powers as was caused by the Franco-Germau War of 1870, and just ns nfter that fatefnl event Berlln became the centre of the continental political system, so Paris bids falr to play thls part in the near future. For France has never been so powerful a factor in politics since the fall of the Empire as to day. Everyone recognises that ber nlllance with Rissin was the first step from the isolntion which followed her milltary reverses towards her relustatement in the political hiernrchy, and some of the most popular mui statesmanlike politicians of the Repuhlic hold thint the dlssolution of that partnersblp will te the second. For the good which it achleved, they ullege, was largely accldental, while the cosi it entalled wns proportionately great.

- The chief alm of the French statesman who struck up an alliance with the Government of Alexander III. was to neutrnlise Telltonic nggressiveness, and if possible to recorcr the lost provinces as well. The lntter pnrt of this programme has turned out to be a will o'the-wisp, while the first item can now be reallsed independently of the Russian nlliance. Moreover, France, far from leing isolated to day, connts among lice frieuds and natural allies not only the Latin perples lmit the smaller States of the Continent, to say nothing of Great Britain.
"The niotlves which induced Germany, Austrin Ilumgary and Italy to enter Into partuershlp have lost their force: the Triple Alliance has censenl to exist in nught but the name. Italy was the tirst of the three Stotes to lireak nway. And her atherence to the league was so obvlonsly opposed to the sentiments of licr people and the real intereata of the natlon, that only the strong. est concelvable motive conld keep her in the noconcenial sorfaty of her formeroppressor. That motive hat been supplleal by I3ismarck, who persuntel Crispi that clertcal France was at the lwek and coll of the Vatican, and only a walted a preqperuts minemt to disunite Italy and restoro Rome to the l'ope. But to-iay Germany herself has becone the most trusty and perhaps the most helpful friend of the Holy See, while France has atruck a vigorous blow on the ilne of cleavage between the political and eccleslastlcal institu. tlons which eonstitute the Catholle Church. The rullng body in Parllamentary Germany is the Cltramontane centre, and If any State in Europe eould bo conceived to be espable of breaklag a lance for the temporai power of hla Iloliness, it would certainly be one of the two Teutonle Finplres of Centrai Europe,"-E. J. Inlilon, Foreign Affairs (Contemporary Reviev, Aug., 1004).

The following is from a apeclal correspoudent of the New York Erening Post, who wrote from St. Petersburg on the Sth of Mrich, 1900: "The international position of I Russla has weakened greatiy during the iast five jcara. Before the Japanese war and the revolutlon her strength Was enormous, and a Japanese officer who vislted St. Petersburg in 1003 wrote in a Japanese pain'r that, judging by the attention which was pald to the Czar by every court in Europe and hy the respect. Almost awe even, with which he was regarded, that monarch might almost be styled the king of kligg. The war and the revolution made short work, however, of this respect and awe. The Emperor Willlam first took ad rantage of Russla's weakness ly springing the Morocco surprise on Enrope ; then laron von Acrenthal annexed Bosnla and Ilerzegovina, whlch lie would ncrer, of course, have dared to do six jenrs ago; while recently in the Duma Mr. Is wolsky frankly confessel that Russia can do absolutely nothing; thut the war and the revolution have bled her whlte, and that no nswistance or hope of assistance can be given to the Serbs and the Montenegrins."

D. 1905-1906, - Sudden hostility of Germany to the Anglo-French Agreement concerning Moroceo. - The Kaiser's speech at Tangier. - Threatening pressure on France. - Demand for International Conference. Results at Algeciras. - What use the French Government wished to make of the free exercise of influence iu Jorocco whlch Great 13ritain cousented to, in the agrecments of Aprll 8, 1004, is stated by M. Tardieu in his "France and the Alliances," with more than probnble truth, as follows: "There was no design of conquest, or of protectorate, or of monopoly: Conquest would have cost too dear. A protectornte would have served no purpose ln face of the exclusivenuss of the tribes. Jonopollzation would have been contrary to internatlomal treaties. To create pollce forces with Murocean natives and Algerim instructors in nll the prlucipul towns; to restore tinances by means of a more lomest collection of taxes, a gennlne checking of expenses, mul the repression of smugglling ; to incruse the carrylng trade by public works wisely plnuncod and the construction of ports, brhlges und ronals all this by coutract law; to multiply hospltala. schools, educational and charitable instlutions, - such was the tenor of the programme.

As Mr. Deicassé wrote: 'Far from diminlihinit the Sultan's authority, we were pecullarly an: ions to enhance his prestlge." "

Por almost a yuar after the signing of the Anglo-French agreements of April, 1004, no ul. jectlon was ralsel In Europe to the undirtakiug by France of such regenerative work in Monuceo as they contempiated. Italy had assented to It before Engiand dili. Spain did the same a few months later. These were the l'owers nost concerned. The Germua Atilhssador to Frunce lad been informed of the tenor of the agreement witit kngiand a fortnight before it was signed, ani no critieism came from his Government. After the text of it had been puhished, Chancelior von Buiow salif in the Reiehstag: "We kaow of nothing that sinonid lead us to thiuk that this agreement is direeted agalust any Power whatsoever. . . . Froal the point of view of German interests, we have no objection to make against it." Juring the cieven months that foiiowed this utterance nothing appears to have beeu done by France In Moroceo that changed the situation; but something changed the ofthelai attithie of Germnny towards what it had found neceptabie hefore, and changed it rery suddeniy: On the 81st of Mareh, 1910., the German Em: peror, on a yachting crise to the Mediterranean, disembarked at Tangier, and found oceasion to sidress these remarks to a representative of the Suitan:
"To day, I pay my vixit to the Sultan in his charmeter of independent sovereign. I hope that, under the Suitan's soverelgnty, $n$ free Moroceo will remain open to the pacitie comprtition of ali nations without monopoly and without annex. ation, on a footing of absolute equality. My vivit io Tangier is iateaded to make kaown the fact that I am resolved to do all that is in my power properiy to safegunri the interests of Germany, siaee I consider the Sultan as heing in absintely free soverelga. It is with hiun that I man tu eome to nn understanciing respueting the best way of safeguarding sueh interests. As regards the reforms which tive Sultan is intuming to make, it seems to me tinat nny action in this direction shouid be taken with grent precantion, respect being fad for the religions sen. timents of the popniation in oriter that there unay be uo disturbance of public tranquillity."
dil Europe read an emphasiad threat in these words, anif felt instantiy that they meant hostiie intentions towarís France. That they came so quickir nfter the erushing defeat of linssiant Minkien: tint Russin, nily of France in Europran pobities, wouli ueed no fonger to be countoi, for some indetuite future time, ns a military l'ower; that the Dual Ailianer, whish bal bein the prop of France in the recovery of fier staming among the l'owers. was thus suidealy a broken reed, aud that cireumstances wrep pronitions, therefore, for humilintug her agnin, - incre were facts for a bit of reasoning which suggested itseif quickly to a multitude of milud.
Twerve days after the speech of Wiiliam II. at Tangir Chanecilor 130how adiresseri a eircuinr in the Ambussadors of Germany at various capifils, direeting then to demand an futernational Cinference for the settioment of natters enneern. ins Moroceo. A iitile fater the Moorisis Suitaa, Ahi el Aziz, entiorsed the demand, in the following missive, adifessed to the suverai iegntions of foreign governincuts at Tangier:

- We have been ordered hy our master the Sultan (Goul strengthen him) to request all the zrest frowers to ibold a conference at Tangier. connposed by its honorabie representatives and those appoluted by the Maghzen [the royai couvcil or Cahinet] to discuss the manner for uitabie reforms which lifis Shereedan Majenty has determined to introduce into his Empire. and the expenses to carry out the same. We therefore beg to inform your excelieney of this, so thut you may notlfy your governmeut and re. quest theni to permit your execlieney to attend and conference for the above mentioned purpose nnd let us kaow of fis answer, and remaiu in peace and with joy. Written at the Holy Court at Fez on the 25th day of lahe 1st, 1905 : eorre sjonding to May 29, 1905. Momammed Bes Abuy Tonaen."

Meantime, Germany was bringing pressure at puris to force the resignation or remoral of M. Deicasse, the Foreign Ilinister, whose poliey was now said to be "A threat to Germany", and the Frunch Government, unprepared for war, sub mitted to concessions whieh in voived that resuit. It entered on prefiminnry pururpolers concerning the demand for an international eonferenee, and sifowed Minister Dricassé to resign.

A fair-minded German's view of the proceedings of the German Government in this matter wasexpressed by Mr. W. C. Dreher in his next annual review of "The Year in Germany " for The Atlantic Monthly. Frankly neknowledging that the Moroceo coutroversy had " ieft with most other nations a distinctiy disagreeabie impression of the disturbiag tendeneies of German poliey," and that the Kaiscr's famous speceh at Tnngier had "astonished the German people not less than other aations," he remarks: "For the Germans had learned to nequirsce in the Anglo-Freneh settiement, under which France was to have a free inand for its scheme of pénétration parifiyue la Morocco. The utteranees of the Imperial Chaneelior in the IRelehstag eleariy indicated that the Government aceepted with good grace the general terms of that settiement. The peopic, too, hud heen sellooied hy the inspired jress in the theory that Germany's conmacreiai interests in Horoceo were so insignifiemt ns not to warrant the inauguration of a large and energetie netion to nssert them; nud this view had been geacraily neeepted by them, harring the noisy fittie fac. tion of Pan Gremans.
"The chief fanlt of Germnny's Morocco poliey was, aceordingiy, that it was sprung upon the German people themseives without warning, without any preparation of thelr minds for it; hence they inperfectiy compreisended it and never iad any great interest iu it. They did not feel that it was a matter intimately affecting the nution's interests; and winic the Germnn Ambas. saior at Paris wns assertiag Guraiany's solidarity with Moroceo, the press at home was diligentiy ocenpled in convinelug the outsite worid that Geruasy wouid never go to war on account of that remote nad iusignilieunt state.
"Despite the nbruptuess and fack of skili in launching its new poliey, however, the government's position was iogical nnd. Within rertain limits, reasonnbie. France and England had nssmmed to dueide the fate of Moroeco betwren themsel ves, whereas the Madrid Treaty of 18 wn. to whieh Germnny was signatory, had explieitly given an international eharacter to the Moroccan question. This was cieariy an afiront to Germany's llfnity aud an nttempt to isoiate her, which ought to have heen ohjected to nt onec." - W. ('. Dreher, The Tear in Giermuny (Alian. tic Monthly. Nor., 1906).

In due time the further detalls were arranged, nnd representatives of thirteen governments, numely, of Anstria-llungars, Belgiun, France, Germauy, Great Britaln, Italy. Morocco. the Netherlands, Portugn, Simin, Russla, Sweden, and the Conted States, were assembled ha Conference on the 15th of January, 1000, not int Tangler, but at the Spanisla cliy of Aigeclras on the coast of the siralts of iilhraltar. The United States were represented by the American Ambassudor to the Freneh Rejublic, ITenry White, and by the Ameriman Mhister to Morixces, $s$. R. Gummere. The instructions muldressell to them from Washington by the Sec. retary of State, Mr. Moot, were partly in these words:

The United statea is a partcipant In the discussions of the conference suldy by reason of being a treaty puwer, having conventional engatenents with Morocero dating buck to 1836, by which this country uot only enj ya sprecial priv. leges, but fa cntited to the mos fi,vored pantlon treat ment for the thme belag. With the spectal political problems of influance and amoclation affectling the relations of the Moroccan Empire, as a Mediterranean state, to the powern having interesta in that great cea and whose concera iles anturaily in the conservation aud ex. tenalon of its commerce for the common benent of ail, the United States have Ilttie to do beyond expreaslon of lts [their ?] wish that equality and stability be secured.
"It In expected that your attitude in the pro. ecedings of the conference will dispiay the im. partlai benevolence which the Unitel States feels towarl Moroceo and the cordial and unhlased friendship we have for all the treaty powers. Falr play is what the United States naks - for Morocco and for all the interested natlons - and it confldently expects that outcome. The com. plete dissociation of the Cinlted States from all motives or influences which might tend to thwart a perfect agreement of the powers shonid, in cave of need, lend weight to your imparilal conusels in endeavoring to compose any disshlence of aims which nany possilhy develop in the courne of the confertnce."

Algcelras, the chosen seat of the Conference, had been three times a landing place of the Moors iu thelr invasions of Spaln. ." The molern town," says one who wrote an account of the Conference, "dattag only from 1760. lans hut oue attraction, a magnificent English hotel, bullt by the owners of thic pleturespure railway whleh connects it with the rest of Enrope, and of the corresponding stcamer service across the bay to Gihraltar, placing it in touch with all the world But thls attractlon sufficed, and the Reina Cris. thar Hotel was engaged for the delegates, while the town-hall was cleared and refitted for their deflberations.
"The mectings were held at irreguiar Intervals. about three times a week, being summonel whenever the l'resldent was advisct that sufficlent Instructons had been recelvel, or that the drafting commiltee had some document to present for consideration. Formal sessions were lield from ten to twelve in the mornlag, the confrrence meeting in committee from three to tive In the afternoon, the drafting and translating committers assembling when and where convernlent to their nemhers." - Bulgett Meakin. A. D. 1907 (Aug.). - Convention between Great Britain and Russia, containing arrangements on the subject of Persia, Afghanistan, and Tibet. - Parnilel with tbe Agrecments - the "Entente Curdiale"-of 1904 belween England and France, in its purpose ami In its importance to Europe, was the Convention between England and Mussia In 1907, which harmonized the interesta and the policy of the two nations in matiers relating to Persin. Afghanistan, and Tibet. In each case the dictating mothe looked not so much to a settlement of the particular questions involved. as to a generai extinguishment of possible causes of contention which might at some time dis::: $:$ !, the peaceful or friendiy relations of the peoples concerned. Taken together, the two formally expressed understandings, Anglo-French and Angio-Russian added to the Franco-Rumalan Alliance of 1805 ( A. D. 1805) coastituted, not a new Triple Alliance, set over againat that of Germany, Austrit. Hungars, and Itaiy, but an atuicable conjunction Which bore suggentions of alliance, and which introduced a counterwelght in European politics that makes undoubtedily for peace.
The Angio-Rumeinn Convention, signed August 81, 1007, contained three distinct "Arrangements," under a common preambie. as foliows:

I'resuming the forcgoing Inthuces, the six main canses for the phenomena of $\mid$ whl ware: (1) The series of cnormons rom inty amnigamations, beginuing with the hitiondoilar sitcei incorporation, and culminating in the purchuse of the British steamship) Ilnea at wihily extravagant prices: these operitions Ir-ing hased on issutes of securltien In unfrecedeativi quantlt : (2) Formation of nudicrwriting syalicates' to foat these securities, one of those symdientes receiving a lonus of $8: 0.000 .000$ for one year's use of $\$ 25.000,0100$, and ail of them using fruely for their purpuses the surphases of hif. insurance companics nad the deposits of trist compmies: (3) Sequisltion of control of great raifay companles hy iow rful mifionaircs, thrumbli purchase of suck of these raiiways in the opron murket, often at extravagant prices: the furchase.money being obtained througit is. sue of bomls by rallways aircaily nuber control if the purchasers: (t) Wild sjeveniation by the pubif. "1902. - This year was one both of riaction and of further expansiou: it was lwoth a legiti

"Its saifent phenomena were these: (1) Abundant harvests: (2) Urerstraining of hank re. sources by financlal 'deals' and stork kix. change speculation, ex ha usting the bank surplus in September: (3) Enormons increase in impurts and decrease in agricultural exports, ainng witlt Enrope's withdrawai of Its capitai ( (4) Rapil advance in cost of raw material and labor: ( 5 ) Struggie of capitalists to so ent ruach themseires in control of corporate cnterpriscs that they cortid not be dislodged.

- 1903.         - The year whlch foliowed was an entirely logicai sequei. Its controlling factors were: (1) Foreed llyuidation by individuais and syndlcates who were tied ujin new seenritios at a tinc when the livestlag piblic withdrew from the market : (2) Inabiitity of great corjorations to seil lxomis, and their remort to notes at a high interest ratc: (8) Ahnndant grain crops, hut ant inaderpuate cottou crop, with great apechiation. and fanine prices: (t) Rapidifail in the price of steel and iron: (\%) Screre coutriction In protits of Industriai combluntons, with reluend dividends iu some, roorganization of capital in othcrs, and bankıuptcy in stiil uthers.

- In law, speculation becouse gambiling when the trading which it livolves does cut lead, and is not Intended $w$ lead, to the actual pasing from hand to hand of the property that fo denlt in.

The rules of all the exchanges forbid gambling as deflned by thla oplaton fal the N. I. Court of Apprais, ease of Ilurd va. Tayior, $181 \mathbf{N}, Y .281$ ]; but they make so eusy a technical dellvery of the property cuntracted for, that the practical effert of mueb apiculation. in polnt of form legitimate, is not greaty ditferent from tbat of gambing. Contracts to buy may be privately oflset by contracts to seli. The offsetting miny be tonc, In a systematle way, by clearing houses, or by 'ring g'timments.' Where dillverletare actuaily made, propirty may be temporarily borrowed for the murpuse. In these ways, speculutlon witich has the legal traits of legitmate deuling may $g^{\circ}$ on slmost as freely as mere wugering, and may have most of the peeunlary and lmnusal offects of gambling on a large scale.

A real IIsthetion exists bet ween apeculation whleh is carrled on ly permins of means and experience, and hasel on min hielligeut furecast, and that whieh is cartied on hy persuns without these 'qualifications. The former is clowely caunertell whit regular business. While not unuccompanio! by waste and loss, thls speculation arcouplishes an anount of gomal which offsets much of its cost. The lutter does but a small anomint of grool and an almost lncalculable annomit of cerll. The prollem, wheriver speculation is strungly rooted. is to eliminate that whieh is wastefill und morally dest ructive, while retaln. ins and hlowing free play to that whith is In-lu-flath. A.D.1908-1909. - Russian Measures for the Destruction of the Constitutional Autonony of Finland. - The reactlonary determlnations of the IRnssian Government, since it mastered the revolutionary movements of $1905-6$, are revealed in nothing clse more pluinly than in its steady pursuanee of measures to extingnish the degree of nutonomy which belongs to Fliland, under the constitntion that was confirmed to its people by the Tsur Aleanaler I., after he had taken their eonntry from the Swedish erown (see, in Volume lV, of this work, Seasdinavian States: A. D. 1807-181( ). One of the most arhitrary of the early measures In this direction was the assumption by the Tsur, in June, 190 , of $n$ right to confer on the Russinn Councll of Dinisters cer. tain powers of control over Fianlsh leglslation. The protests of the Diet nud Senate of Finlnud against thls nud other attacks ou thelr constitutlomal rights led to a dissolution of the Diet, and the eleetion of a new representative body, eurly In Way, 1909. The election prodnced substantially the same pepular representation in the now Diet that had characterized its predecessor, and its attitnde townrd the antocratic in vasion of Fimish rights was the same. The No ial. ists receired 99,447 votes. The party of the Ohd Finus which inclines to submissiveness polled a tental of 52,396. The Constitutional purties, the Fonng Finns and the siwerles, recoived respect ively $2 x, 711$ and $15,88,5$ votes, while the Agra. rian Socialists fot $13,64 x$ and the Christian Workmen $61 \%$. The Uld Vinns stand alone against the ofler parties.

Vacant seats were filled by an appointment of naval and milltary offleers who were sald to be " techalcaily Finnish eitizens," hut all of whom, save one, liad spent thelr ilves in Russia. A month later, Novemher 17, a Press despatelı from Helsingfors made the followling annonncement:
"At an nll-nlght sesslon which ended to-day the Flnnish Diat rejeeted the government bll pruviding for Finlnnd's contriliution to the Russinn inllltary appropriation. A resolution was ndopted reyuestlng the Einperor to relntrodnce the measure in a constitntional form. The dissolution of the Dlet is expected. The Emperor has ac. cepted the reslgnatlous of the Finnlsh Senators who refissed to remuln in office if the liussian demand for a bler millitary approprintion by Finland was pressed." The expectatlon of another dissolution of the Diet by the Tasr, as the eonse. quence of this action, was realized the next day.

Some months prior to thls time a joint eommittee of IRnssians and Flnns had been appointed (1) formulnte rnles or prineiples thut should apply wlth nuthority in futnre to leglslation for Fia. land. Agremient between the two eonstitnents of thls Ifusw-Finnlsh committee appears to have lreen impossibie from the beginnling. The Finnish menbers apprehend a military dic. tatorshlp."

The St. Petershurg eorrespondent of The Times liad previously stated what the prescription of the Russinn niajority of the Comnittee world be. They maintuin, lie wrote, that "there naver was a Coustitntion granted to Finland himeling on Rassin us the Soverdga Power, and that therefore, a new order of proecture can be cstahlished inderendently of the Finnish authoritles liy un Aet of legislation passed by the Inissinn Legislatnre nlone. The Fiunish lbiet shall be entirely ignored in suct matters, while there is a provision for some cases that the opinion of the Fiunlsh Simute shall be taken.
"It is diftlenlt to understand what legislative matters are to ln e left for thr Fimish Ilet to deal with: bat it serms that the IRisslan mont bers are not sure that they have corered the whole gronnd, for thelr project contains a chuse In the iffect that mulditions to their llst may be made by weans of Imperial iegisiatou.
"It is proposed that Finlnnd shall be repreented in the Russian Dumn by five members, one of whom shall be elected by lussian resi. dents in Finland who are not Finnish citizens, whilst the Fiunish Dlet shall send one member to the Council of Empire."

The tirst movement, probably, on these new lines of Imperial goverument for FInlnnd, was that reported in a Reuter message from St. Petersburg, Deeember 24, as follows: "The Cabinet has approveo new regulations wherel)y ail documents issued by the Chancellery of the Governor-General of Finiand shull be worled in lussian without a Finnish or Swedish transia. tion."

M1. Failières was recleeted President of that body, while M. Bourgeols was seated again in the presidiug chalr of the lower Chamber. The Combes Ministry was strengthened In lts hold of power by the contlnued agicaion that attended the execution of the Assoclations Law (see In Voiume VI. of this work, France: A. D. 1v01) as applled to the rellglous orders and hrotherhoods. Its sup. port was a shiftlig one, made up sometlmes by one comblnation of the many party divisions In the Chambers and sometimes by another; but It dill not fali throughout the year to find somewhere a majority that wouid not allow a politl. cal erisls to be brought on. Everywhere the closing of the schoois and houses of the unau. thorize 1 assoclatlons was reslsted whth Increasing determination, and the proceeding becance too much retarded to satlsfy the supporters of the law. Ohjectlon was raised to the separate dealing with questions of authorizatlon for this and that order or congregation, andithe Government was called upon to name at once to the Chambers the whole llst of instlintlons which it would have anthorizations refused to. In Mareh this demand was acceded to, so far as concerned the male congregatlons, and a great debatc, of a fort night's duration, in the Chamber of Deputies. resnlted in the refusal of authorization to all the teaching. preaching, and contemplatlve orders. of Redemptorists, Capuchlus, Henedictines, Domiluicans, and Passionlsts. A few months iater the same entlre refusal of authorization to the teaching orders of women was voted, hut by a diminished majority.

The Clerlcals, on their slde, were as energetic as the parties of the Government, and were supported very generaliy by the magistracy of the country at large, which deait so ienieutly with the resistance and rioting provoked br the enforcement of the iaw that the Government was left practicaily dependent on the army and the price. The army, too, was a loubrinl instrinent of anthority in many cases. numerous otticers of all grades resiguing to escape the repuonant mandate of law. The most threateniug situation arose in Britany, consequent on the imaguration of a monument to Kenan, which the Catholics regarded as an insult to the Church.
One final step in the secubarizum of education in France was taken iate in the year. by the passing of a bill which practically estibblished a State monupoly of celucation, by repenling a las of 15:0) that abolishell such inonopoly. By the new law all memhers of any religions onder, authoriacel or unauthorized, were forbidden to engage inteachlng.
The extent to which the schoois of the religious congregations were being closed luvolved a great expenditure for bulining new schooihouses, and the Government had difficulty in passing an Act which iaid the eost of this provision on the commanes, insteati of acc patng it for the state at large. It carried the Act, however, notith.

A. D. 1905-1906. - The Separation of Church and State. -Preceding Contentions. - Measures and Proceerlings of the Separation, as recounted by writers of each Party. -The separation of Church and State in France invoived the nuilification of the Coneordat, negotiated by Napoleon I. with Pope I'ins VII. in 1802 (see Paracy: A. D. 1808-1814, in Volume IV. of this work), and of what are known as the Organle Statutes, promulgated by the Freneh Government at the same time. The former was in the nature of a treaty ; the latter was not. Tle French Government chaned rights under buh; the Roman Church acknowledged moforee in the Statutes that coula be linding on its.lf. This difference, which entered luto much of the controversy preceding the measures taken by the Goveriment to separate the state from the Church. is explained in the first fuotation bciow. - following which, two accolnts are given of some anong those controversios, ant of the proceedings connected with the adoption and execution of the Act of Separaion, - oue armont written from the view-puint of the Guvernment and the othor from that of the Chureh:

- The Concordat conslists of a preamble and sercuteen statutes. It is a reciprocal contract between the tempora and spirinal powers, and is therefore at the same time state law and Church litw. Tie proamble states that the Cathoic, Ipostolic. and lonan relision is that of the great inajority of the French peonle: It does not sby that it is 'the religion of France," as the lloly See would have wished, and consefuently it does not restore to the Catholic religion lis former character of heing a State religiou. Ifter establishing a new fistribution of the French dioceses, It directs that the bishops shall be 'nombated' by the forernment and "installed by the I'ope. The alienation of ecrle. siastical property, effected by the Revolntion, is definitely sanctioned. In return the Governmont undertakes, as had aircady been done by the Constituent Assembly, to secure : $a$ reasonable allowanfe to the hislinpe and curis, whose dio ceses and parishes will be Included iu the new arrasgement,' and to inke 'mensures to allow Frenel Catholies to make foutudions ho favour of churches if they wish.

As regards the Organic Stntutes, promulgated ut the same time as the Concordat. 18 th April, 1×02, they proclaim that no hill, pastoral letter, or writhg of any klad from the Holy sie shall be pullished la France withont the au. ; uority of the Government; no councll, geveral or spethal, shall he held without this authority.
'lhere mast he no other delegate from lione in Franee beshles the Nuncio, the ollichal repre sentative of the Soverelgn Ioutiff. Any Infrae tion on the part of the clergy of the provisions either of the Concordat or of Freneh law is re ferred to the Councll of state, whomast lecide If there has ben any nhase. The Or vie stat utes were "ipually couserned with pue-tions re lating te discipline, doetrine, and even dogiua which ure purcle spirltual questions. They therefore not vinly uphelal the Declaration of 16*: as a elecharation of the princlples of the Gallean Church, but also expected all the professors to tench it In the seminarles. Accord. lng to the Concordat, bishops had a right tor appoint curis: the Organic Statutes obliged them (0) whain the approvai of the Government for their appointments.

- Alhouph the Orcanie Statutes are, with the Concordut, part of one and the same Stat law, they must ant he fonsldered to be entirely on the same fo ang. The ('oncordat eoncluded hetwent the two powers hands them together : thr Orimic Statutes, an exclosive product of the Froneh Govermment, never received the sumetion of the lupal autharity. They were, on the contrary a sombere of further quarrels with the lloman Comrt liven in our days. they frequently lemal to contlict. the representations of the ('hirch having refasect. on varions ocert. sions, to reconuise the validity of decisions male in virtue of the se statutes by the Freneh Government." - Jules Legrand, chureh and Stute in Frunce (Cintempurnry heviex, May, 1941).

Pleard himself spoke with an uggresslic bollness of aclf-justiticution in the debatc. His speech, made on the 20th of Jnly, ealled out M. Delensae, presideat of the investigathg Commission, who monnted the tribne and delivered an attack on the Governmeat, ticree whit the anhmosities of a long nntagonlsm between N. Delcassé with references to that Muroceo affuir in which he mud Fraace were subjected to mortifeations at the lantls of Germany (see, in this volume, Evuorr: A. D. 19(0)-1906). It is a matter on which sore fecling exints naturally in Frnuce, aml conecrning whlel the sympathy of the uation is with M. Delensse. ## FRANCE, $1900^{\circ}$

By 212 votes to 176 priority was rejected. As coon as the President haci read out the Ggures, M. Clemenceau and the Ministers rose, and leaving the Government Bench filed out into the lobbies. Loud cheers from the IRIgit and the Extreme Left followel them to the door. It was the fall of the Minlstry whlch has enjoyed the Inngest lease of iife of any under the Third Repuhlic.

After holding a consultation at the Palais Bourbon, the I'rime Minister and bis colleagues Immediately proceeded to the Elysie in order formally to tender their resignation. P'resident Fallieres, who was at dhucr and who had not heard the result of the vote in the Chamber, was taken by surprise and expressed regret at the departure of M. Cleluenceau. With whom he had collaborated so long. The short intervicw, which lasted only ten minutes, concluded with a formai request on the part of the President that M. Clemenceau and hls coileagues would continue to discharge the duties of thedr respective Departments until the appointment of their successors."
Though his colleagues went out of office with him, it was M. Clemencean, alone, who could be said to have "faliell." Even that characterizatlon of the occurrence was criticised by one of his opponents, who said: "M. Clemenceau did not fall; he plunged out of office." "The Chamher had no intention of upsetting the Goverament," said one of the Repulblican journais of P'aris, "and an hour earlicr. In fact, had londly checed the Minister of Marine, M. Picard." in these circumstances it was certain that the change of Ministry would make little change in the character or poliey of the Govern ment. It did. in fact, make noestensive change in "ren the persmucl of the Ministry; for six members of the (abinct of Mi. Clemencean reappeared in lis successor. and these included the new Premicr. M. Aristide Briand.
The chaice of M. Briand for leadership in the Government appears to have been made by a common censensis of opinion that be was the cine man pointell to by all the ciremmetanees of the case. Is Minister of Public Worship he had shown a temperateness of disposition and a political capacity, in steering the country through the stormy achievement of the separa. timn of the State from the Church, which won hich amimition and estecm both at lome and abread. Ite had been kaown as dlstinctly a Socialist. according to the full meaning of the terim in Prance. anel had come into public life with the prejudices ritised asainst that hrand of radic:alism to contend with. But he had piven gonal proof that he could be practically a states. man as wedt as theoreticaly a tocialist, and France appeared on be fully willing to sce the helm of cowernment put into his hands. If. is the first fully professed soctinlist to attinn that poition in a great state. In making up his Cablact he called into it two others of his own socialist spet. namely, M, Millerand, to be Min. ister of Pablic Works. Posts, and Telegraphs. and M. Vivimi to be Mbluter of Labor, us he hat beth before. For himbelf he retained the Minitetry of Public Worship, and, with it, the Ministry of the Interior. Of other importint departments of he Gorernment. that to Foreeme Atfairs was reassumed by M. Pielion and that of Puhic Instruction by II. Domergue. General

Brun became Minister of War and Adminal Boue de Lapeyrerre, Milnister of Marine. The Cabinet appears to have been generaliy recog. nized as one of exceptional strength.

On the 27th of July the new Premler ${ }^{2}$,olke as such to the Chamber of Deputies for the fras: time, and did so, it was manlfest, with lmpres. sire effect. "If I deemed my person to be an eiement of discord in the Republican party," he sald, "I should ask you not to foilow me. I could not suppose that serious men would come to ask me to sort out, as It were, from my old ldcas those which experience has contirnied within me and those which it has made me dis. card. If I had been base enough to do that, my interpeliators would be right if they refused me their contidence. I come before sou just as I am, a man whom you ali know. I have been working with you of the majority for the last seren years. You know that I am not afraid of Ideas, and that my way of thlnklng is daring. The Republic scems to mio to he the germ of all progress, but I admit only such lideas as are feasible. Je suis un homme de réalisation. Those who have watched me know that full well. If there be among you any who are still ignorant of these facts, fet them vote agalnst me. I have as yet no mandate from you. Toulght I may have one, hut at prescnt there is still time for you to refuse to invest me with one."
At the ciose of the Premier's address a motion of confldence was made, and carried by 306 votes against 46.

There, as in New Hork. only exactly enough votes to pass the blll were secured : one Senator was present for the final rote In splte of lliness whlch suhjected hlin to the most serious inconvenience, and one senator had to be sought by messenger with a motorcir sud brouglit by an all-nlght ride uinety miles through the Ioulslana marshes. This means in Japan practically an end of horse-racing, nad necessarily a heary loss to the stockholders in the varions race tracks. The development of racing in Jupan was extremely rapid. From a single course established it Fokohama hy forelgners, at least half a dozen tracks were lin full swing when gamblling was prohihlted. It is evilient that the eurfare-show of resulte in the eler•位 cannot be taken for a true indle. tiun of the prevalent state of mind in the Einpire. The Centrists or Clerieals, fur camp e, elecked more than twice as many deputies as the Noclel. ists, by nearly $1,000,000$ votes less. The Soclalists polled aboit $2 \%, 000$ vetes more than lu 1903, and yet lost 36 seats. Tise inegulty in the apportionment of representatlees which promuced thls trareaty of representation had some beginuing no doubt, in the organizatlon of the imperial gratem, thlry six years before; but it had been aygravited by the enornously dlaproportionate growth of cltien eversince inat our cunvitu. eney In Berlin, with it resent population of nearly ${ }^{-0} 0.040$. hat the sime represcritation us a town of 60,000 people ls doubtiess an extreme ins.ance of the lnequalaties that had come about, but the distortlot was unirersal, and altogether in fo sur of the e unt-y lamiowning elass. The Sociallats polled some 2.20 .000 mure roles than In 1! 13 , and this was reckoneti as an herease substantially commensurate with the general growth of jophationin four years. As stated and illustratel abore, the election gave the Govermuent mo majority of naturna supporters. For the carrying of its measures it was ieft dependent on a coalition of Liberal with Conservative votes. The allianec was an incon gruous one, produced hy nothlug but a common oppositien to Bociallats and Clerleals, and it hrought the Liherals into an utteriy false ponition. Within the trat year there were signs of a Liberai revolt from it : whereupon the rhancellor made known that he would renign if the supporting coalltion or "bloc" was not maln talned. To avold sueh a governmental crisis the Llherais were sald to have given promlses of contluued support.

The Silitary learue was baked. evidiently, by a strong pipuiar feeling arainst the Government, partly well founded, perhaps. but largely due to an unreasoning desire for rash mulertakinga to ecure the abuexation of Crete. The revolution in Turkey had stimulaterl this by seming to open opportunities for breaking the island away frum the elamedi soverdignty of the Turks. What Balgaria had hen able tis do in the situation for herself, atul what dustria had done in anmexiner lbomia and llerzegovina, it must be that the Powers which held Crete in commission, so to sjask, couhl fo for Greece, in the present state of things, if circece had a competent fioverument to deal with affais. Aecordiug to a manifesto published by the League on the 27th, its demands, summarized in a letter from Athens, were as follows: "The offleors helonging to the Military League respectfuily ask the lilng and the Giovernment to carry out radieal reforms, mad espeeially 10 proceed with the reorgnnizatiou of the army and navy, in order that Greeee might not in the future hive to undergo nuy nure humillatlons sueh as she luad had to tolerate in the past. Among the detailed features of their programme they ask that four chisses of the resurve should be ealled to the colours mmmally for mancurres, that ahattleship of not iess than 10,000 tons, and eight destroyers of wot less than 1.00 tons eanh, should be eanstructerl, that the existing thret crilisers slomild ber repaired, that all the usejuss small ships shauta be sold, inchuling the Runallyahts, with the exception of one for the Klng, that a war selenol shonitl be established, that a foreign gencral with sume aflecers should be catled in to organize a Stalf serslee and to lowk after the theoretical am! praetical training of the army and nave, and that a mure ellicient corps of tiendarmeric chould he organizeif. A. D. 1902. - Revoiution and Civil War produced by a Blunder of Law. - Resignation of President Sam. - Election of General Nord Alexis. - An outbreak of revolutlon in Haltl occurred under singular circumstunces on the 12 ch of May, 1002. As related in a de. spatch of a few da; later by Mr. W F. Powell, Lnited Stateu Minlater to Maltl, the clrcum. stances were these: When, in A pril, 1806. Geaeral Theresias Simon Sam was elected President of the Repubile (see, under ijayti, in Volume VI. of thls work), on the sudden death of President Itypolite, "Congress enacted a daw requiring hlin to enter upon the dutles of the Presillential ottlee at once, and to remain in offlee untll May 15, 1903. This law. it seems now," wrote Mr. Powedl, "wns not constitutlonal, as the constitutlon states: 'That 'rpon the denth, resignation, malfeasunce in oflice, or remotal therefrom of the President before the 15 th of May (iin my year) the eabinet or comnell of ministers is charged with these funetlons until the 15 th of May, when the newiy e' ted i'resident shalit assume the dintes of tl: resldency ; hut if a President shoaid accept oftlee or enter upon the dutles of the same prior to thls thue (15ih of May) then his term of office must explre on the 15 th of May of the year preceding the tine that it actunily explred, thus not allowing the incumbent to reminin in oflice the fuil seven ycars, the time for which he was elected.'
"For some reason this prerislon of the. stitutlon was not thought of else forgothn, at the time Generul Nam was eiceted. Nomen. tion was made of this section matil about a y yar ago, when the question wis i:unched upon the pubife view by the cnemies of the Govermurcut. The more this question was discussed the nore potent it becime, nintil it occupied the attentin of alt classes to the exclusion of afl other matters.

The several poltieal arrests and the exlle of many persons within the past two sears have been on acconnt of this discussion, thes demanding that this nricicle of the eonstitation should he literal'y followed, the (iovernment, on its part, hel: ving that fin the arrest and eatle of all sach pelsons all discussions and agitation of this natter womld cease. But this riew on the part of the Govermment prodneed, i tem of fricinds, enemies, who were dally strength.
"At the several hiterviews i hat with the Pro. sident no to the time I ieft for Simbin oaminto (February 10) he statell hat it was his intention to remain in office until he had finished his term (to May 15. 1903) ant that he wontd not revim or cease to be I'resident prlor to that time. lle linil alse Impressed this fact upon the numbers of his cahinet up to $\mathbf{3 n} \mathrm{n} 1$ of the present vear, Whan it whs learned that it was his intention th reslgn at an eariy chy." This ammonerment bronglit a number of enndidates into the theld. and Mr. Poweit, on returning to Port nu P'rime on the 11th of May, founi a precarions situation there. ITe secural an interviow with I'resident Sam the following noornligg, and "was informed that he had determined to resign, that his reviznutlon was ready to be sent to Coagress, that hee was tlred of this constnnt agitation, nud th:t her would leave hy the French steamer then in pirt for France, where tir would pass the remethen of his life in quietness and prace; that sluce ft wal the wish of the peopic to have a new

One of the candldatel, General Leconte, member of the Government about to he dissolved. "felt certaln that he would be elected. as be had sufficlent votes pledged in hoth houses to elect blm. Thls news spread rapldly, the streets becamc full of armed citizens wending their way toward the chambers to prevent, forcibly If necessary, his electlon. At Hrst it was didtcult to get the members together. The streets In the nelghborhood of the leglslative hulls were thronged witb people and the Government troops, the latter to protect the members in case of vlolence. Several secret mectings of the members were held. At last the doors werc opened, and as soon as opened cvery available vace not occupied by the two houses was tille the friends and foes of General Leconte. As th. balloting was about to conmence some one in the chambers tired his revolver. In an instant shooting commenced from all parts of the roun. One or two werc killed and the same number roumlel. The menbers all sought shelecr in the most available piaces ther could find-under henches or desks. Others forgot the way they entered and sought exit by means of the whinlorrs. By tinls means the populace prevented the election of General Leconte, furcibly adjourned the chambers without date, and dispersed the nembers of both chambers. The Government troops lamedlately retlred to the palace, the arsenul, the harracks, or the urrondissement, as it was thonght that an attack would be immediately made on each place.
"A committee of safety was at once formed to sufuguard the interests of the chty, and as the news reached the other chties of the Republic siniliar commolttees were named with like duties. The next object was to secure tire palace, arsenal, and the Government huildings. A conereted attack was made on each of the above places at 10 r . M., lasting about twenty minutes, in which the Government troups werc the victors. It is suppused that in these engagements about one hunilred persons were cither killed or wounded."

The next day, on the ex-President's reguest, Mr. Powell, as dean of the dipiomatic corps: arranged with his associates to escort Gencral and Mrs. Sam, together with Genersl Leconte, to the stemner on which ther wivhed embark, and their departure was nudisturbrit

This cave a fine opening for future troubles. Meantime, irregular sklrmishing. preliminary to poaltive civil war, was bringing all business to an rall. On the 2fth of July Mr. Powell reported to Wishington that civil war hal beell declared. The contest for the Prishldency seemed narrowed to tro enudidates, General Nord Alexis, Minis. acr of War and Marinc in the Erovisional Gevernnent, and Mr. A. The elcetions were determlned und the Chamber of Deputles was organized about the 20th of August. The Deputles bad then to cbocie the Senatorial hoty, and the strife of factions among them prevented that ciection until late in the year, wben tbe forces of the Provisional Govera. ment ind acbleved succerses wileb brcught the clvil war practically to an elifl. Generni Nord Alexls, who hud heen campalg ing ior mouths, returned triumphuntly with his wimy to fort au Prince on the 14th of De eembe! ; wha acclaimed President by the Arn'; on the 17th, and was formaily elcectell by the "aslonal Assembly on the 21st. He was thea reported to ke 85 years old.
A. D. 1908. - Revolution once more. Overthrow and expuision of President Nord Aiexis. - General Antoine Simon his elected successor. - The Government under President Nord Alexls was maintained for six years, be lts own unsparing inse of power, it would seem, rather than by the good will of the country. Revolutionary projects had been crushed with prompt vigor hefore tbey had much chance of development, until Sovember, 1408. when one, led ley a displaced military commander, Gencral intoine simon. ran so rapid a course that it arrived at complete sucecess on the 2d of the foi lowlug month. The aged but indomitable Nord Alexle strove hard to resist it, even to the last inch of tighting in inis own palace: but Port au Prince rose agaust him: his partisans fell away; Lis soldicrs deserted: and tinally, on the afternoon of December al, he consentid to be taken on boarll a Frencla trahins. slip, then in port. In doing thls there was ditheultry ir aving him from an angry city mob. The escatpe of the fallen President was described in a Port au Prince despatch to the Asmeiated l'ress as fol lows:

- So zerions was the sitnation that the French minister. M. Carteron. and othet foreign representatives, with member of a specially ap puinted committere, furcel themselves upon the Prevident. who finally consinted to withlraw. Shonta greeted him at he stepped to his carriuge. M. Cirteron, carrying the French tri-rolor. therew the follds of the Hiag ower the shonlders of the de 1 al presilent to protect him. . Ill illoug the route the people who linel the strerts shouted, jeered and cursed the fillen Presilent, but when the landing stage was reacherl, the mob lost ali restraint. The scene was trgic and shamefnl. Infuriated women broke thronsh the cordon of troops and shrieked the coursest insulta Into the very face of the Presiden!. who strose bravely to appear undiserayed. They hur!ed themsel res. tichther with huds and fect, a gainst the soldiers. who found ditliculty in forcine them back. One woman with a murderons kinfe, got to the President's side and male as sweep at his hody, but the blow fell shin, $\qquad$ al. before she conld follow it with another, she was seized by a soldier. A man struck the a resident a glancing blow with his fist on the neck. Alexis, ghaklig his head, so, turned to M. Carteron and sald: I told you your excellicner:.
"To elear space, the troops fired several vol-l-ra orer the her, is of tir mol. For a momert, thiy gave way, and Alexis, with the French col. ors draped about ble, wras bustled into a skiff, in tow of a steam iaunch, his disordered suite tumbling in after him. As the launch drew away, three Haytian gunbonts and the Auseri. can warabips in the harbor tred a salute to the fallen President.
"A trunk which was ieft behind on the pre. cipleate departure of the I'resident and his party from tine wharf, was seized upon hy the roters and hroken open. It was found to contain some 810.000 in goid and 20.000 Haytisn gourdes. Tine specie was scattered about and promptiy pillaged."
According to a despatch of the next day. "r rot and piliage swept through the night foilowing the filght of the fallen President, Nord Alexls. The populace, maddened hy a tsste of revolt. gave themselves over to ahsolute license, They looted stores and residences and then fought among themseives over the booty until an armed force, hastily gathered together by General Poitevin, fired a voiley into thic moh and Gnaily drove them into hiding. In aili, tweive personswere killed and many wounded before order was restored.

Past 00 years of age - how many years be. yond noboif knows - Nord Aiexis inad faced his foes with the strengtio and determinstion of a man in the very prime of life. To day he said: " The courageous conduct of M. Carteron (the French minister) saved my life.' ...T The President wis broken-hearted over the attltude of his peopie, of whose hosility he was entireiy ignorant. 'They aiways checred me when I appeared in the streets, he aaid mournfuliy. 'and I have alwsys labored for their goorl.'
"ife protested sgahst the 'legend' thst he ever had shown any cumity tows rd the whites. and, for the first time, spressed his vews with regard to the sumuary executions which took piace on March listh last, When many men were shot to death by oricr of General Leconte. Ile had always been convinced, he said, that the men had been killed during an attack upon the palace. II ofticiais and those upon whom he dependell hail krpt back the trath from him.

- With regard to his destination, Nord Alexis sadd that he would wait until he could the transported to Jsmalca, Saint Thomas or Marti. nique."

General Simon and his victorions army of rebelition entered the capital on the 5 th. Some degree of order had been restored by a Committee of Safety, under cx.President Legitime, but fresh strifes were imminent between rival can. didates for the racant presidency. Simnn, with his milltary following, brushed them aside, and obtained a unanimous election hy the Haitian Congress on the 17th, assuming office as Yresident on the 20th.
A. D. 1909. - The Haitian People. - The spiendid industry of the Women. - The carse of the country in its Military Government. - "Four fifths of the Ifaitians - the pensantry of the conntry, that is to say - are bardworking, pearcable country people. These four fifths of $3.140,040$ are entirelv negro in four fifths of $3.1 \% 0,010$ are entirely negro in race, and probably represent a mingling of West African types from Senegambla, Datiomé, and the Congo. It is a race which exhitbits, away from the towns, a tinc physical development: its skin colour is much dirter and the negro type morc pronounced than in the Cinited States. . . . The women are the hest part of the nation. They are piendid, unremitting toliers. Ir iface of ail discouragements with which a ba jovernment ciouds their exiatence the women of Haiti almost remind one of cer. tain patient types of ant or termite, whu, as fast as you destroy their isbour of months or daga, hasten to rapair it with unalacking energy.
‥ The curse of Haiti from the day she eatab. lished her independence in 1804 in the present time is the tyrannical and wastafui Government of the military party. Scarcely a Presi. dent in the hiatory of Haiti has not been a nilitary man and the favourite icader, for the time -ing, of the major portion of the army.
La: President Antoine Simon will foliow in the hloody footstepe of ail his Presidential predecesoms is improbahle. He is a man of obvi. onsiy kindly nature, with a record of 22 yeari ensentialiy ciement goverument of the great eonthern province of liaiti; but he is an old man of finperfect edncation, and though he may turn oilt a compiete surprise, yet so far he has doue nothing to improve the conditions of political elections. The whole power of the country is stlil entireiy hased on the soidlers." -Sir Hisry Johnston, in The London Timen, April 13, 1909.

ICELAND: Its Ancient Claims to Nationality. - Within the last few years the Ice. landers have been asserting their ancient right tua mational life of their own so seriously that the King of jeumark has exerted himsclf to soothe their discontent with but partial success. For naany historical reasons Iceland ought to have an independent standing among the European states. For some of those reasons its people scem fairly entitled to recognition as the forcmost representatives of the old Norse or Scuninavian race. Their ancestors were men of the best blood of Norway, who quitted that country lut the nintb century and took possession of the arctic island, because they would not submit to the despotiam established by Harold the Fairhaired. That they took with them the best euture of tbeir race and time is proved by the fact that almost everytbing we know of the old Norse litcraturc, and of the mpthology and blatory embedded in it, was preserved by their penis. Le:rning was chcrished and cultivated among them from the first : and they had the capacity ami the spirit for self goverument from the first. Before the end of the tenth century they had adopted a ropublican constitution and founded a commonwcalth which endured for about 300 vears. This antedated the rise of tbe city sepublics of Italy and the free cantons of tbe $S$ wiss by oue or two centuries at the least.

IMMIGRATION AND EMIGRATION.

Australla: A. D. 1909. - The needs of the country. - The attitude of the people toward Immigration. - The difficulties. Speaklng at a dinner in hls honor, givell In Londonf, nfter his return from tive years of serviee as Governor-General of Iustrallii. Lori Northcote touched on wiat he deecribed as "the Aaron's rod of uli politicalqueations in Austraiia, which, If it dexs not swallow up the others, at nlievents the others depend upon it " - meanlag the increase of Austrslia's nopulation. As to the attitude of Austraila to the immlgration question he said: "No doubt, from tlme to tlme cer. talt over.zealous ofllchals have made mistakes which hare prejudicedi Australla in the eyes of the britisi public, but 1 do not behere that anvthing in the nature of a thed deslre to keep ont men who are able to sustain themselves by their labour has ever existed. of cuurse, Nustralia has her number of unemployables, and is not prepared to lmport more from the old coun. try. Then 1 come to the rery important ques. thin of coloured lnamigration, and that is a question we should look nt from an Ausiralian as well as from a Britush point of view.

Suppose Austraia or Camada confronted hy the presebee of a large number of Isiatics, men of abllity enough to hold their own. men who. If they come there. come to stay, and it is quite concelvable from an Australlau indnt of view tiut it ther ion not rigidly secure themselves against the piossibilit- of being swamped by Islatic labour, they may he presented with a problem even nore serinis than is the gremt negro ques. thon in the Culted States. I sigy this to show that there is more to be sald for the Alstralinn point of view than some peaple are Inc'ined to suppose. Of comrse a grent deaid depends upon whether the huge northern territory can he popmated ly white men. Cpon that I hesitate to pronmence a defnite opinlon. I belicre it is possible for a white man, if he is steadr, sober. and careful, to colonize for a time thls great tropical hant: hut it is a very sefious matter how far the climate is suitable for women nod childrea, and whe her we can hope from gener. atlon to generution that a healthy and virile race cau continue to live and breed in that cli. mate. The territory is over half a million square mile In extent, and the whlte popuia tion ls well under 2,000 people.

There is plenty of iand aii throngh Austra Ha for ment who are wiling to go there and wili be stealy and sober and work inari. I have been Nortit, Sonth, Fast, and West. 1 ran claim for ntyself the credit that I hare travelleri falrly harl, and I have scen in every State of Australia pienty of land availnble for close set. tiement. If tise great landowners are disiucline ! to seli their itoldings - and 1 yulte neknowienge that a great deal of the best land in Australia is In comparatively few hands - at all events the tate Governments have very large reserves of land : mui by the application of Irrigution and other methois of seientitic farming they conld compete on even tirms int lanst with these simutters. and they coulid turn these waste lands into firtile country fit for settiers. 1 am very glad to think that both in New Sonth Winks and Viotoria very iarge Irriuntlon works are in progress mal will be completed itt a very short time. addine enormonsly to the a rereque of land fit for ciltivation: and 1 say deliherately and ad. risedly, 1 care not for reports of (bimmlssions or individnals, that there is hand nul to mare for generations for men who are realy to uniertake tbe cuitivntion."

A correspondent of the London Timfs, writing from Sydncy in January. 1009, on the subjort of the vast cuantity of fertile land in lustralin that is locked up by private owners in vast sheep runs, to the exchusion of settlement, had this to say: "Yon mat take it as an aximm that immigration to Ansirillia wili do no gixul tili the fertlle lands are thrown open. Anid a very burge proporthon of the elosed land is ront. trolled from London, either by ex-Anstralians who live there aud draw their income from Anstrallan property, or by big liritish companiss.

It is necessary to waris seriously sharehohl. ers nod directars of the big compnnies tinat they must put pressure on thelr officiais out here. or prepare to hare nore drastic pressure forced on themselves. At present, those othials are oiten responsible for A ustralitan dislike of the absente company."

immaration and emigration

In another letter to the same paper it was asld: "Somehow or other the locked-up lands must be opened for agricultural uses. No one now doubts that, and only a few owners, usually elther absentecs or corporations, pretend to doubt it. The Labour recipe is a Federsl land tax on estates over $£ 5,000$ in value, of such a kind that fuir use of the land will produce proft on whlich the tax will he a mere fleahite, whlle lt will be serious charge on fertlle land that is used only for sheep runs. The proposed tax is to be F'ederal simply becanse there is no bope of passing the requisle Bill through several of the state Cpper Houses: otherwlee it is more properly a state eoncern. Now what we have tu remembur is thst this le not only Labour's remealy. I believe it would he quite posslble to earty such a proposal in the present Federal Parliament, so definttely has publlc opinlon swung round agalust the hig owners who keep their Innd lide. If it is not carried next session, it will be be. cause Mr. Deakin gave his word two years ago thst he would not introduce the subject in this Parliament; hut Mr. Deakin's attitucle is this -that he wishes the States woild do It, that be dues not conaider this larlament has any mandate to legislate for it, but that he personally lias always favoured such a tax, and, if the states take no steps in that direction, he will support, oreven propose, the mensurc when it has been submitted to the conntry at a general clection. It is useless, therefore, for any one to decry the tax as merels a Lahour ldea, a 'Socialistic' nostrum. The support given it in Austrulia ls for wider than that. And, nonrt from the many who advocate it as the best renimy for the present land-hunger, there is nin increaslug body of eleetors who are heing forcel into supporting it because no other remedies seem praet leahle."

The nttltude of the Australian Labor Party on the inseparable 1 mm igration and land questions was stated very clenrly and succlactly in letter to the London Timirs, slated at New. castle, New South Wales, June 30,1909 , hy a meinber of the Party, Frank l'ittoek, who sligns hinself "a Maglstrate of the Territory." He writes: "We cannot at present obtain land for our own genuine land-scekers, skilled in the peculiar requirements of pnstoral antl agricultural work on the Australinn soil. We certainly are unable to give our own uncmploved a chance on the land. Any impertntions of labour from over the seas merely serve to render more distressful the unfortunnte position of the colonial ont-of.rorks. On the other hand, we do now, and always have. relcomed new arrivals who nar be able, in the near future, to effectively angment our productive wenth. The party fully recognizey the need of popitation - of the right sort. We have vast elnpty spares all over the continent, now grnzing grounds for sheep, yet eminently suitable for luteuse settlemeut. The Austrailinn labour pnrty secks the support, at the forthcoming general clection, of all who belleve, as does sour orn Austrnlian Correspondent, that the satisfylng of the earthhunger of our people is the grent outstanding nerd of the day. Can we hut he authorized to foren the hige minnpolists to surnender phrtinas of their holdlnge we shall hare. not only land for our own landless, hut land nnd to spare for thase who seek it from the British Isles.

IMMIGRATION AND EMIGRATION

We dare not, as a conscientious and humsen. itarian party, invite our kith and kin fror other parts to come here now. We should be l. altore to the Emplre, betrayers of the race, if we en. dorsed la any way the attlude of thome who seek, a pparently, to thood thls fair land whith any population at all, regartless of the evil consequences to the lmmigrants themselves, and allke regardless of the grave injustlce therehy done to native i.mrn landless and. in many cases, at present, work-seekling Australiaus.

A Press clespatch from Sydney, October 30, made the following annoupcement: "Under the closer settlement amendment 1311, which is now before the Legislative Conncil of Now South Wales, the Guverament will be empow. ered hy proclamation to earmaris estates In the vicinlty of towns which inight impete settlement. When such estates are of the value of £10.000 and upwards the (iovernment may agree with tho owners to subdivide them on terms and areas to he ngrced $u$ non, su as to ensure bona fule settlement. If the owners fulthl the agreement, the pruelanatlon will be cancelled: If the owners refuse to subillvide within five rears, the Goverament reserves the power to resume at the value on the date of prochamation."

During the second quarter of the century wrore wo furuines. with an estimated mortality of 300.000 . During the third quarter there there were six famines, with a reerded luss of iffe of $5,000,000$. During the lant quarter of the century, what E Eightern fatines, w ith an estimated mortaity rraching the aw finf lutals of from $15,000,060$ to 23,010 , Why. And this does not incivile the many more milions (over 6,0.10, un0 in a slugle year) hareiy kem alive by government doles.

What is tin: cause of these famincs, and this appailing fincreame in their number und deatructivenes. The common answer is, the fall. ure of the rains. But there seenis to be no pyl. dence that the rains fall worse now than they diti a handred years ago. Merecver, why shouli failure of rains bring famine? The rains have never falied over areas wn extengive as to pre. vent the raising of emongit food in the fand to supply the needont the entire popuiation. Why then have people starveli?.. B canse they were so indescribably poor. All candid and thorongh investigution into the causes of the famine of india has shown that the chicf and fundamental eause has been ani is the proverty of the peopie, - a poverty so serere and terribie that it keeps the mafority of the entire popula. tion on the very rerge of starvation even in years of greatest pleuty.

And the people are crowing poorer and poorer. The fate Mr. Willium Dighy, of Lonfon, fungun Intian revilent. in his recent book entithed, proaperous Indis, shows from ofticial - stimates ard l'arlimuctary and Indian Blue Broks. that, whereas the arerage daily income of the people of India in the year 1850 was estiinateri as four cents per person (a pittance on l.ich one wonders that any human being can , $\because$, in 1582 it har falien to three ceuts per ferson and in 1900 actualy to less than two cents per person. Is. it any wonder tiat peopie athlured to such extrcmitie's as this cail lay up uc. hing ?

- Onf raiser of India'a impuverishmont is henry taration. Taxation in England and Scotland is bigh, so high that Engisbmen and Scotchmen compiain bitteriy. But the people of India are taxed more than twice as heavily as tine people of England and three times as heavily as those of Scotland. Accoridng to the latest atatistics at hand, those of 190\%, the annuai aver. age income per person in India is about $$ 6.00$ and the annual tax per person aboul $$ 2.00$.
"Notice the single item of salt taxation. Sait is an absolute necesslty to the people, to the very poorest; they must have it or dle. But the tax upon it which for many years they have been compelled to pay has been much greater than the cost valuc of the salt. Under thls taxation the quantity of salt consumed has been reduced actually to one-half the quantity declared by medical authorities to be absolutely accessary for health.
- Auother canse of India's impoverlshment is the destructlon of ber manufactures, as the resuit of British ruie.

Great Brimin wanted Indin's markets. She could not find entranee for Britlsh manufuctures so long as India was supplied with manufactures of ber own. So those of India must be sacriticed. England had all power in her hands, and so she proceeded to pass tariff and excise laws that ruined the manufactures of Indhand secured the market for her own goods.
" A third cause of India's imporerishment is the enormous and wholly unnecessary cost of ber government.

Another burden unon the people of Indiu which shey ought not to be compelled to bear. and whith does much to increase their poverty. is the enormously heavy military expenses of the government.
" lerhaps the greateat of all the canses of the imporerishment of the Indian people is the steadr and cnormous diraln of weilth from ludia to Engiand, which has treen going on ever since the East India Company first set fort in the land, three hundred jears ago, and is still going on whith steadlly increasing rolume.

A. D. 1905-1909. - The Partition of Bengal. - Resentment and Disaffection of the Bengalese. - The Swadeshi Movement. Reported improvement of conditions in the new province of Eastern Bengal and Assam. -Tine partitlon of Bengal, in Octoher, 1005, one of the latest measures of Lord Curzon's ad minlstratlon of the Government of India. gave rise to much native agitation and diaaffection, and is stiil under criticism In Engiand, hut not llkeif to be undonc. In the view of the AngioIndian Government the partlition was a neces. sity, because of the magnitude of the province, in territory and populatlon, which made the task of provinciai alministration too diffcult. It was far the iargest of the adminlstrative dirisions of Britlah Indla, containligg neariy a third of the Indlan subjects of the English Klng. Asmam, formerly joined with 1 l , had been separated from it adminlstratively in' 1874, under a Chief Commisaioner. Fifteen of the eastern districts of Bengal, adjacent to Assam, were now unlted with the latter to form a new provinee, called Eastern Bengal and Assam, and this disruption of the old province was re. eented very passionately by a large part of the Bengalese. They refused to belleve the rensons given for the partition, but gave it an offensive explanation, which one of the natlve fournals In Calcutta pint briefly as foilows: "The ob. jects of the scheme are, briefly, first, to destroy the collective power of the İengall peopie; sec. ondly, to overthrow the political ascendency of Calcutta; and, thirdly, to foster In East 13cugal the growth of a Mobammedan power which it ls supposel wiii bave the effect of keeping in check the rapilliy growing strength of the edueated Hindu communlty." In the official Brit. ish view, on the other hand, the whole stir of Bengalese feciing was artfully wrought up for mlacibievous ends; but it is easier to believe that something in the nature of a bistoric sentiment of nationality was realiy burt and angered hy the partition. Yet Bengal cannot be said io have had anything that rescmbled a distinct national hlstory for many centurles beforc it came under the rilc of the British East India Com pany. in 1765. Nor had its name been precisely and continunusly attached to any well-defined territory.
Whatever the source of exclted feelling may have heen, howeser, it was ardent and persist. ent. rspecially in the educated ciass, and it cave a start to what received the name of the iwa. deshl or national movement of hostlity to all things English, lirected malnly to the hoyeotting of English nerchandise, and to the organi ration of eflorts for promoting home prodaction In all industriai fields. The swadeshi movement soon spread beyond Bengal; hut lts stimuiations have been centered therc. The intensity of the feeling In Bengai was such that on the 16 th of October. 1905, when the partition took effect, the Ilindus of Calcutta put on mouning car. ments. suspended husiness and work, and yow d that its anniversarles shouid he memorlal mourning days. Pupils $\ln$ natlve scheols became sin offensive in their anti-English demonstrations that the Lleutenant Governor of the new pro vince, Sir l3ampfylde Fulier, in February. 1906, unwisely requested the Calcutth V'niversity to disaffiliate two schonts in the Pabma distrint. taking away the pecuniary ald they reectved The request was disapproved by Lori Curzuis successor In the Viceroysity, Lorl Minto, and rather than withdraw it the Licutenant. Gov. ernor resigned.

In the winter of 1909 the London Times sent a special correspondent lnto Eastern Bengral to study the results of the partitlon, so far as le. veioped in three years. His ohservations anil conclusions were communicated in a long, lnteresting letter from Dacca, February 15th. the wrote: " No one can vlsit the new province, and endearour to inquire impartially protoles conlition before the ' partition.' without reallzhig that some alministratlve division of liengul had be. come Imperative. Until five years ago, Eavect Bengal was the "Clndereila of the provinces of India. Gnod administration stopped short on the line of the Ganges. Beyond that line otticers were few, and the interest of the central authoritles in their work and in the welfare of the people in their charge was comparatively lim. people in their charge was comparatively limalstentily neglected lo the temporury settled tracts. Calcutta and Its immedlare vicinity, and the more accemslbie distric of Old Bengal, absorhed the greater part of the time and atten. thon of the Bengal Government. Mloney was poured out upon Calcutta and its envlrons, and Eastern Bengal was tinancially starved. Very little wes spont uponeducatlon, and the whole

The very railw were constructed, not to serve the needs of these 30 millious of people, but to meet the requirements of the city on the Hughli.
"It is remarkable to note how, in the short nace of three years, the old deplorable condi. tlous of Eastern Bengal have already under. gone a satisfactory process of modification. The province is no longer content to be diragged the thail of Old Bengal. A new and independent provlucial spirit is springing up. Eastern lengal is beginning to recognize all that a separate existence means to it. Its Civil ser. vants, from the Lleutenant-Governor downwards, take a pride in the great work of regeneration which has heen entrusted to them. Their task is enormous, and the workers are far too few. They are like men who have been set to create a new colony out of a land of chaos. They have hefore them almost as formidable an undertaking as the making of moieru Egypt. but It is an Egypt of green rice tields with half-a-dozen Niles.
"The demand for higher education In Eastern Beagal ls perhaps greater than in any other part of India. The admirable Government College at Dacca has now been provided with splendid huildings, hegun, however, hefore the 'partitlon.' The whole province is heing sup plied with a set of colleges adequate to lis netis. The staffs of the colleges are being aug. mented and thelr admlnistration overhauled. The princlpal private colleges are als, being asslsted with liberal grants and transformed into institutions which will give a sound edueation. The exceptionally iarge number of 'high' Enylish schools in Eastern Bengal had also heen greatly neglected, both those under the Govera. meut and those in private hands. Ail are now being inproved, and are receiving liberai asslst. ance.
"Another Important task undertaken by the new Government is that of conducting an elaborate surver and framing a Record of Rlghts in the zemindurl tracts which eonstitute the bulk of the province. The undertaking was devlsed hefore the 'partition,' but lt lias been expedited by the change. It is an extraordlnary thing that $\ln$ all these permanently settled areas there has been hitherto no record and no map. The consequence was that the cultivators were conatantly hullied and harassed by the agents of the ahsentee zemladars, and were never ahle to feel any reasonahle securlty of tenure of the land they tilled. Land disputes were Incessant.
and were constantly accompanled by loas of life. In the Backergunge district, the most turbulent area in india, there were frequent rlots, of which murders were an almost lnvariable feature. Since the framing of the lecord of Rlghts in Backergunge thls class of erime has already decreased by 50 per cent.
"I have get to meet angbody, English or In. dian, who can tell me in what respect the 'parti. tion' has $\ln j u r e d$ a single living soul; while one has only to vislt this province, invlgorated with new ilfe and lnspired hy new aspirations, to reallze the henefits the severance has conferred upon milillons of neglected people. Toalter or to nodify lt now would be suiedial folly; it would be worse, for it would be a rrimlnal hlunder. It would not placate the wordy 'patriots' of Cal cuta, who have used the 'partition' as a rallying cry for lack of a hetter grievance : and it would allcnate the 18 millions of backward Mahomedans in the province who have placed their alliance In British honomr and IBritish pletges, The Nawah of Daccu, with whom I had a long conversation on the suhject, fec:lared that any attempt to meddle with thi. 'purtition' -an attempt hes still seemed to foar was possible - would produce the most deplorahle results among his co religionists. . . . Nor is there the slightest aced for ehnuge or modification. Tho "partition' is already thrice justitied in the eyes of all men, save only a fiew malcoutent members of Parliament who know nothing of present conditions in Bengal. Even in Calcuta the outcry, whleh was always liss against the fact of the "partition' than arainst the motive which the Bengalls erronemsty believed to have prompted it, has long ago died away. Yet. justifiahle and necessary though the 'partition' was, it remains to he addel that, apart from its complez admhulstrative prohlems, Eastern Beu gal will never he a rery easy province tueontrol. The high easte Ilindus, the Brahmin?, the Baidras, and the liayasths - the Brahmins and the iresser Irahmins. - rule the roast, and it will he hong vears hefore the teeming millons of Mahonichan enltivators emerge from their depressed condithon. The few Mahomedan families who ean elaim nohle birth are deroulent and disappearing. Thue Himas hare absorbed their lands, the clever lawyers have converted themselves luto rich landuwners. It is from the ranks of these high-caste llindis that are trawn the mem. bers of the revolutionary socioties to whleh I aliuded In a telegraphic despateh sent from this city resterday. Tliese classes show a persistent and increasing spirit of hostility to the British Raj which no anount of coneiliatory measures will overconce. It ls impossible to move about the provluce and to conrerse with the men who know it best without feeling that the situation is fuli of dangerous possihilities. The men of Easturn Bencal are more cournreous, more determinml. more persistent than thelr compatriots in Olil Bengal; and the better elasses of IIindus liave qualities whieh are not easily diseernible in the Calcutta bubu. They approach more nearly to the spirit of the Mishrattas of the Deecan than any other section of the people on thls side of India. It is a significant fact that most of the prisoners sow under trial at Alipur in connexion with the unsthlst conspiract came from Eastepa Bengal. But even as one writes one reallzes how difficult it is to genersilize in this country of

D. 1907-1908. - The Onthreak of Anarchism. - Summary Measures of Suppression. - The native disaffectlon in ISengarl which leeame anarchistic in its violence in 190\%, nad which prerperated a number of murders thefore It was suppressed. culminnted on the $10 t h$ uf Fibruary, 1409. In the assas-ination of a prominent native lawycr, Ashutosb Biswas, who hal tiken part in thi prosecution of some of the an archists. Writing of that crime, from Calcutta, a spectial correspuntent of the London Times, whun had bern purning an investigation of the terrorist conspiratry from its beginning, gave an extended aceniant if what he had learned, part of whitu ls given in the following:

Ali that can be sald wioh certainty is that the gospel of violence, the creed which advocates the use of any form of force against the Britlsh, is Mahratts in Its origin ; hut to far it is the Bengalis alone who have put it into practice. It was conceived In Poona, which elty has always continued $t o$ inspire and direct It ; it was transferred to Baroda, where it flourished in secret among a limlted clrcle; and it was transplanted to Calcutta, where It grew apuce, somewhere hetween the years 1902 and 1904. Certain elasses of Hengalis, who are all adepts at in trigne, took up the new idea with enthusiusm. hut not all who knocked were admitted to the inner circie. The real conspirators were stlll prohably few in number when the 'partition' of Jengai gave the politicians their opportunity. The anarchists were furions at the partition agi. tation. They were quite content that iess militant persons should prepare the gronntl for them, hy preaching to the people of the iniquities of the British Raj; but they were reluctant to see the popiliar mind aetively dlverted to such minor issues as suadeshi and the hoycott. The extermination of the British was their one and only aim.

However, as the Congress politicians had succeeded in aronsing intense cxcitement abont the jartition, the anarchist gang sought to turn the situation to their own advantage. . . . Ie. cruits were, however, oniy gradnaily adnitted into the innor ring; and there were many people who associated with the anarchlsts, and sometimes farnished them with funds, who never took part in thelr operations. Propagands formed a prominent feature of the anarchists ${ }^{\prime}$ work. In this departinent the worst tyjes of seditious journals, which have now disappeared. played a great part. They were ranged lu rows. ahout 50 men, all young, all huddled furether and squattlog on their haunches. The oniy man among them with an intellectua The oniy manalo Ghose the alleged leader face was Arablndo Ghose, the alleged leader, who sat in a far corner. He has the face of a drommer, as indeed he is, and with his long hair and short beard might very well pass for a ecrtain type of artistic Frenchman. Whether he be gnility or not is no affair of mine, but his revirl excites pity. IIe went to England with hrilliant gifts and ingh hopes, and he had a distingulshed career at schooi and Universlty. But men who profess to know say that he had more than the ordinary share of the rough and tumbie of jurenile llfe amidst alien and often thuightless comrades, and that those yeurs were mate thoroughly unhappy for him. One of the triais for serlitlous journalism whick eaused most excitement throughout India did not arisc from puhications in Bengai, hut in i3ombay. The uecused was Bal Gangadiar Tilak, a Brahmin, professor of faw and mathematics, who conducted a native paper calied the Mahratis. The specific charge against him was that in his newspaper he had urged the peopie to demand the restoration of the old Shiwaji religious festivils and. if it was refused, to throw bombs nutil it was grauted. The government contended that he had not incited the people to violence in overt worls, hut hy subtle insinuations and unmistakable innucndo. Torpid energies and siecping ambitions were pricked In India hy the amazing triumph of the Japanese, as thes were elsewhere throughout the East ; and It is since 180: that the demand of the Hindus for a political life of their own has taten a tone which commands the ear of all cpen-minded and generous Englishmen, like John Biorley.
and draws from them the response they are now trying to make.
So far as it is a demand for an Independe.at Indian Empire, with the whole fabric of Brit. lah rule 3 wept away, it comes manifestly from nothin's that has weight or force in India itself. Prohaviy no Ilindu who couid make intelligent ?se if political freedoin ever dreams of the present possibillty of a nationalizer' India, in whiel the $200.000,000$ of his own re ee and creed and the $60,000,000$ of Mohammedans (saying notluing of the added millions of other lineage and other faiths) would be peaceful forn citizeus, administering the institutions $e$ - elf-goverument in harmony together. The Noslems, at least, are under no illusion as to what would happen if the ineongrious elements of the enormons population of India were left polltically to themselves. under the conditions that now exist. In 1908, when that idea seemed to be growing in Hindu thought, they organized an "All. India Moslem League," avowedly, as deelared hy the Nawah of Daeca, " to save themselves from heing suhmerged hy an enormous and noisy mujority of the other race." ." The safety of the Mohammedans," said the president of the eonference. "'lay in logalty to the government; they must be prepared to fight for the govers. ment if necessary." Thus British rule in its present form has the Mosiem dread of IIindu aseendency to glve it a suhstantial support, even though the Hindus outnumber the Moslems hy more than three to one. In thinking power, the llindin is perhaps the higher type of man : but the blood of the Afghan and Mongol conquerors of Ilindustan must have trans. mitted more of political as well as military energy to the lioslems of the present day. The IXindu mind is too mrstically metaphysical for the politics of a world that is dominated hy its least metaphysieal minds.
But the higher intellizence of the Ilindus appears to agree with that of the Moslems in understanding that India is in no present condition. for taking its politiend fortune's into its own hands. The really intelligent classcs hare been making it plain. liowever, that they do want a more effcetive participation in the management of thei: iwn affairs than has beren allowirel to tiem hitherto. and it is the elaim of that chass which Lord Morley and his collongnes in the British Government are acknowledging and aiming to satisty. It seems to have been gencrally and fairig represented in the great conveutions assombled anaunlly for many years past, under the name of the" "Indian Xational Congress," an unnfileial ('ongress, possessing no authority, but exereising an influence that has iacreased. Its charncter was descrihed a few years ago in one of the American reviews by a writer who said that he had watched it from its birth:
"The Indian National Congress," he wrote, $"$ is avowrdly national in its name and scope. The I'rovir ial Congresses which meet in every province for the discussion of provincial matters, unite toget her in a National C'ongress, which is annna!ly held at a chosen contre, for the further. ance and discussion of national interests. A Congress eoasists of from five hundred to one thousand of the political leaders of all parts of India, comprising representatives of nohle familles, laddowners, memhers of local Buards and munfeipalities, honorary magistrates, fellon inf universities, and professional men, such as :- . neers, haakers, merchants, shopkeepers, juirnalists, law yers, doctors, priests and college protessors. The delegates are able to act in eoacert and to declare in no uncertain aecents the com. mon puhilc opinion of the multitude of whom they are the mouthpiece. They are as repre sentative in regard to religioa as to rank and profespion: Ilindns, Iarsis, Nohammedans and Christians have in turn presided.
"The dellberations are marked hy acumea and moderation. The prineipal items of their propaganda constitute a practical programme dispiaying insight and sagacity, and covering most of the political and economie prohlrers of the Indian Empire, I take it upon mrself to say, as a watelful cye-witness from its hirth, that the Indian National Congress has dis. charged its dinties with exemplaty julgment and modcratlon."- Sir IIenry Cotton. The Sico Spirit in India (North A merican Revieve, Nor., 1806).

The neting of this Indian Congress in I 909 was he at Madras on the 27th of December. not long after Lord Morley had explained his plan for the eniargement of the leegislative Councils in India and for the election of a cur tain numibe- of their menrbers by popular vote. In the address of the I'resident of the Congress, Dr. Iash Biharl Ghose, the proposed refurmis were diseussed at length, and weleomed with warmth, as going near, apparently, to sativfying the claims of the majority of those represented in the Congress. "We are now," said the speaker, "on the threshold of a new era. Ir important chapter has been opened in the his. tory of the relations hetween Great Britain and India - a chapter of constitutional reform which promist's to unite the two conntries together in closer bonds than ever. A fair share in the Gorernment of our own country has mur heen giren to 11 . The prohlem of reconeiling order with progress, effieient administration with the satisfaction of aspirations encouraged hy our rulers themselves, which timid people thought was insoluble, has at list heen solved. The people of India will now he associated with the Government in the daily and hourly aumin. istration of their affairs. A great step forward has thus heen taken in the grant of represent. ative government for which the Congress had been erylng for years. W. do not know what the future destiny of India may he. We can sae only as through a glass darkly. But of this I am assured, that o: our gennine eo-opera. tion with the British Government depend our future progress and "'e development of a fuller social and political life. Of thls also 1 am assured, that the futnre of the country is now ia a large measure in our own hands."

At ahoitt the same time the All-India Moslem League held its meeting at Amrissar, and gave ari qually hearty welecme to the princlple nf the proposed reforms, hut appealed rgainst the mode of election eontemplated. Which might the to the disadvantage of the Bloslem nifnority. In tho address of the Iresident, Mr. Ali limam. he said: " it is impossible for thonghtful man to approach the anhert withoult regard to:tif pathetie side of the present aituation. It is the liberalism of the great British nation that has taught Indians, through the medinm of English education, to admire democratic institutions, to hold the rights of the people sacred above all fights and to clalm for their volee first place in the government of the country. The mind of closc upon three generations of the eduested clases in the land has been fed on the lueas of John Stuart Mili, Milton, Burke, Sheridan and shelley, has heen flled with the great lessons olutinalle from chapters of the constitutional history of England and has been intluenced by inexpressible conslderations nrising out of the American War of Indepentence, the relation of Great IBritain whth her Colonies, nud last. though nut least, the grant of Autonomy to the Buers after their subjugation at an enormous sacriliee of men and money. The bitterest eritic of the eduented indian will not hold him to hlame for his present stute of mind. It is the English who lave carefully prepared the ground and sown the seed that has germinated into what some of them are now lisposed to eonsider to be noxious weed. It will be a dwarfed imagina. thon however that will condemn the educational policy of the large hearted and liberal-nindei Eughivimen who fald its foundation in this eountry. Those who inaugurated it almed at risising the people to the level where co-operation and good understinding hetwen the rulers and the ruled are posslble. Under the circumstances, the desire of the edncated Indian to take s prominent part ln the administrition of his commery is neither unmptural nor unexpected.

The beat sense of the country reengnizes the fiet that the jrogress of india rests on the muintenance of order and internal peace, and that orlur and internal peare in view of the conds tions oltaining in our country at present und for a very long time to come, immensmrently long that to come, spell 13ritishownation. These expressions from prominent leaders of the two principal races of India are quite in arcurd with the judgment of liberal-ninded Eurlishmen, as to the present duty of their goverment to the people of this great Asiatie Dependeney. They are quite it accord with the fulement that has dietated the mensure undertakin by the present Britlsig Government. They reornize that the relation whieh England bears t. Indla, hewever unjuallfabia in its origin it mis br, is one that cannot le suddenly changed without freat dinerer and eertain liarm. As Gohisin : hath has sald:
"Toattempt to strike the haianee between the advantages und disadvantages of British rule ln India would be to enter lnto a boundices controversy. Foreign rule ia ltscif must always be an evil. India was rescied by Great Britnln from murderous and devastating anareliy. Though at the time she was phntered hy onlelal coriupthon of a goxd deal of the wealth which, being poor though gorgions. she could ill afford to tose, she has slnce enjoyed general peace and order: lonth, we may $t$ sure, to a far greater extent than she otherwlse would have done. The deadly enmity between her races und religlons has been controlled and assuaged.
" It does not appear that there is any consid. arahle migratinn from the provinces directly under British dominion to those whieh are under nutive rule. The people, no doubt, nre generally tixed to their hablations by poverty and difliculty of urvenent ; still, if they groatly preferred the native rule, $n$ certain nimonnt of migration to it there would probnhly be. That the musses of tudia in geueral are miserably pooi eamot be denied. The question is, whether ur. der the :logul Emperors they were better ofl.

The population has vastly increased, and its inerease mily in some measure aecount for denrth. With regard to fisenl and commercial questions, it may siffly be suld that, at all eveuts in lute sears, there has heen u0 d'sposition on England's mart to do anything hut justiee to Indis.
" Inda's eomplaints, speaking generally, seem to be of things insp parable from foreign rule, the whthirawal of which wonld the the only remedy. But suppose 3 ritish rule withdrawn from ludia, what would folluw ? is there anything ready to take its place? would not the result be anarehy, sueh as prevailed when England emme upon the secue, or a striggle for ascendeney between the Wahmmetmand the IIndro, with another battle of Paniput? Suppose he Mahometan, stronges in spirit though werker in numbers, to previni, would his asecndeney be more bencticial and less gating to the Hinteo thas is thit of the English Sihib?" - Goldwin Suith, Britiak Empire in India (Vorth American Relicur, st ft. 7,1011

Of the nilimate possibilities of a nationallzed unitieation of the mighty masses of population In the vast peninsmle, there cau, pernaps, be as much or moresaid hopefully as against the hope. A writer who believes that ther may be an independent India lias put an outline of the argunsent, pro nad con, in these few foliowing worls:
"India, we are -1most tired of hearing, is as iarge as Europe, putting aside Russia and Seandinaria, with es grest a population, as many diverse and heterorencous nationalltles, differing from eael other in language, in enstom, In religion, and in ererything that makes for Individualitr; and we might as well speak of the Indian nation as the Enropean nation.
To thls contention loung ludia opposes the most emphatie contridetion. India la a nation, a people, a country : its interests and aspirations are one and unlque. Raliwars, telegraphs, post. offlec, the Press, education, knowledge of Eng. llsh, have welded into oue harmonlons whole ali the manifold centrifugal forces of its vast area. Ioung India will quote Switzeriand as an example of a country with severai languages and two conflir:!ng reilgions, and yet undoubtedly constituting nation. If the only tongue in which the Mairassl and the Bengali can com mualcate is Eingiish, so let lt be. It is sufficient that L medium of communlcation exists. And It does exlst. The educated Indlan speake and writes ln Engilsh no casily as In his own mother. tongue. It is in Englisis that the must vehement tlraies against British rule, whether priated, spoken, or dealt with iu private correspondence, are hurled across the land. Poiftically speaklug Latiore is a suburb of Caicutta. The fact can. not be galnsuld and minst lee reckoned with. India, as a whole, as a politlesi unit, has found a voice. There Is a natlonal India. as there is not a nationai Eurone." - E. (: Cux, Janger in India (. Fineteenfl Century, Dic., 1908).
This view reccigntzes, as was recegnized in the adidress of the l'resident of the Aii-Indla Moslem League, quoted above, that Eaglish ruie and Engish lafluence have done mucíi toWhrds preparing both the conntry and the people for the self.government to whllh the iatter are now beginniag to asplre. It must be saiti, however, that most of this preparation has ber. casually conseryueat on iolicics that had no such deliberate intent. Lntil inlte late years therr is little sign to be seen in lsritish Indian policy of a thought of developing opjortunity and eapabily in the people to becone more thun valuable customers und docile waris. While India wins in the hands of a commereial compaay it was mannged. natmrally, iike an imperial estate. with stricily economic objects in view. Even thea there was wisely economie consideration friven to the exeneral welfare of the people; but it wins welfare as seen from the estate owners stamppoint. The proprictary government did many things for its sulijectemind srosants, bet. treat their conditions in muny ways; adeled greatly to the cruipment of their lives: but it dial very little, if anything, toward putting them ia the why of bettering thage for themselves. It contearpiated nothing fur India but the perpetuity of its manngement as an lmperial estutc. entailed la the possession of a proprictary race
The taking of this innperial estate from com pany momngement into nationul management has not secmed hitherto to aiter the husiness nature of its aliministration very much. Its many millions of ininnlatats have becre better gowernexi and better caref for, without doubt but the idea of beareoteace to then las acfer beren mieh enlarged berond the ithat of an honestly goml ororsecing care. Institutions have bern proviled or encomraged for the educating of it class among them which could be of usefuil astictare in the earotaking of the mass; but coramon ectucation for the mass, to qualify them better for the rare of themsedves, received scant attention till idyurs ago. In the very explanation that is often given of the present ilsconteat in india there is un impencliment of the past triatmeat of the conntry by its able and porerful masters, It is said that the cducated outside of the sorvice of the governument, and that an increasingiy large class in excess of the oponings which that arpeien ran afforl has been elucated in recent years : that, eonsequently, the swelling crowd of dissppointed place-seck. ers, whose intuligence and ambition have been whetted in the higher schools and colleges of the Indian Emplre, are the disturbers of public eontent. After a century and a half of 5,4 . preme British influence and power In India, there ought to have been more and better open. lags of opportualty for educated young Illndus than through the doors of publle office. There would have been if the development of country and people liad been $c$ naucted whth more refer. ence to their bencfit, un witl less close attertion to the finterests of British trade.

Since 1882-3 there has beea more endeavor to establlsh and assist nutive prlmary schoois : but the perceatage of population that they reach is small. Tisere is also a shatier number of non clertive lown bedios dischargiag similar duties in towns other than constituted municipalitics, and in cautouments.
"The municipal hodies exist, raise funds, and exercise powers muler enactments which provide separately for the special requirements of each province nad of the three presidency capitals, Bombay, Calcutta, and Mairas. In the municipalities as a whole about half of the mentbers are clected by the townsfolk under legal rules; in cvery town sume, and lu n few minor towns all, of the memhers are appointed by the Government. In almost every municipal body one or more Government otficiais sit as momhers. The numher of Indian and non-official members, however, in every province, largely excerds the number of Furopeans and oficials. The municipal bodies are suhject to Government control in so far that no new tax ean be luposed, no loan can be raised, no work costing more than a prescribed sum can he undertnken, and no serions departure from the sauctioned hudget for the year can be made, witheut the previous sanction of the Government: and no rules or hyc-laws can he enforced wlthont simllar sanction and full publication.
" There were 746 munlcipalitles at the end of 100\%-8, containlng withln their llmits over 16 milllon people or 7 per cent. of the total popu. latlon. Generaliy speaklng, the lncome of munleipalltles is sminl. In 190\%-8 their aggregate lacome amounted to $£ 8,910,000$, excluding loans, sales of securitles, and other extraordinary receipts. Ahout 40 per cent. of the total is provided by Calcutta, Bomhay, Madras, and Rangoon.
"The interest In munlcipal eiectlons, and ln municipal affals generally, is not usuaily keen, save ln a few citles and large towns; bilt, as educatlon and knowledge adrance, interest in the management of le :al affirs gradually increases. in mos* provinces municlpal work is fairiy well done, sud nuuicipal responsihilities are, on the whole, faithfully disciarged, though occasional shortcomings and fuilures occur. The tendency of local bodics, especlaliy la the smalier towna, is to he siow la imposing additional taxes, in siopt Ing sanitary reforms, and in lncurring new expenditure. Many nembers of municipal bodies are diiigent iu their attendauce, whether at meetings for business or on henches for the decisinn of petty criminnl cases."

The efected members of these municlpal committeces number less than tire thousand. This, therefore, is the extent of the class in the whole of British Iniia, which now receives an elementary political traiuing. Nothing more is necred for proving that India cannot possibly be prepared for lulcpendent self goverament.
la a memorable speech made by Lord Ma. caulay in 1s33 he predicted a time when Eng. land's Iudian subjects might demand English institutions, and exclaimed: "Whenever the day comes It will be the proudest in English listory." The day has coule, and it does not bring pride to Eugland : because her wards in india have not been made realy for what thes ask. It will need titne to repair the long neglect; but there is no gramer fact in recent his tory than the beginaing of the labur of repalr. It is to be a work of education, not for the peoille of India alone, hat for Englishimen us well. They are tolearn, and have begun to larn, the mistake of egotism and self-suthiciency In their gevermment of these people. Sonte months ago there was published in The Times of India, at bombay, a number of articles on the causes of the existing (liscontent, some by English writers, some by lifulus. some hy Mohammedans, all serionsly and frankly studying the situation, and most suggestive in their thonglit The cause emphasized must by one of the Euglish writers is that whicl alwars has worked and nlways will work when one selfecomplacent and self. condibut people undertakes to be an overruling provillene for another penpic, by making laws for it and managing its aftnirs. The more conscionsness there is on tife ruling side of just Intention and superiorknowledge, the less likeiy It is to satisfy the ruled: lncause the satisfylap of lts own judgment of what is good for the latter is sssumed to be enough.

During tise last half century, at least, the British Government has endeavorcd, without a douht, to do good to Its Indinn suhjects, and it has slone them great good: but everything has been donc in its own way, from lts own points of view and upon its own judgment of thlags needful and good and right. And this is why its Indian subjects not oniy feel wronged, but are wronged.
As the writer in The Times of India reminis inis eonntrymes, "right is a reistlve term," and not. he says, "as we Ishanders wonti lave it, an uhsolute one. A thing that is right for us, with our pust trainiag and trueitlons, inay not oniy seem, Int rally be, a grave wrong tothose whose environment differs from our own." tle cites instancery uf grase mistakes in well intenied ieglatation that would have been aroided, If the makers of the laws had counseied sufticiently when natives of experience in the matters concernodi. One example is in a iand alienation act, for the J'unjah, whieh was framed with purely philanthropie metives, being intentied to free the nutive pemantry - the ryots - from thrai. dom to money lenders, but whieh, hy muking the recorcry of dicbts dithenlt, has trebied the rate of interest to the ryot, who borrows just as much, and mortgages litmerif inswad of mort. gaging his laud. Ailuding to this urei to another act of excellent intention hut irritating effect, the writer says: "When these worthy aims of government were ciehated in the 13 mm hay and Punjal, leqislatures, who was there, among the otheials, in touch with Indian feeling and sentiment? Who ainong the senators ever suggested the possihility that the evif of mort gage und borrowing was not intrinsieally an evii in India, hut that legislation - our own past leaislation - hudi made it so? Was there no oftl ecr uf fovernmant who conldi ativise the nuthortites thist every Hindoo. almost, is at luent a money lender: that it ls second nature to him: that imelebtedness in ltself is neither reproarli ner handieap in his eyes; and that if you take from him his friedom of harter you do take his iff:" "
"' We liave failed.' says this writer, " to araii ourselves of the materiai we olrselves linre tralume." That, undonhtedly. is the eardinal mistake that the English in Iudin lave maie. Until now, they have not taken the best of India into their eunficlenee und their counsels.

Another of the writers referred to above gave another characterization of the IBritish rulo as the natires more gencrally feel it, in which a deeper working of more suhtle irritations can le seen. lie wrote: "fersonal rule, the will of the king, (ind's anointed and therefore invested with quasi-divine samction, is the or pule to which the East has been used, which it ean like and reepect. The people can understaud, even while they suffer under, the most extraragant individual caprices; and when the tyrany becomes ton intolerable. they aiways had in the lat resort an excellent eliance of being able to overthrow lt. But they eannot and prombly n"ver will understand, stifi itss anpreciate, the (o) implacnhle, inhmman impersonality of the English government. They might as weil he forerned by a dynmmo, whout human howels or passions. It eannot bu hummly approached; it has no human side ; its very impereahilitr is exa-perating: and the exactitnde with whichit motios out its machinemade justice, according to intiexthle rules und formula lato which no human equation enters, chills and repeis the Fiatern mind. an! lis strongth is eommensentite whth its remorselessness,"
"They might ns well he governed by a dy. namo!" That, in this connection, is a power.
fully expreasive plirase. The dynamo and cverything of a dyamme nature - every mechanienl motor-working of furces, whether ms terial or poifical, are naturally congenial to the man of the Western worid - understandahle ly him, arrifiealie to him - and they are not so to the man of the Finst. Somewhere ln tie process of thelr evolution thic one got an aptitude for projecting work outwarily from the worker artion at bome romove from e actor - shattle throwing. for example, car ed out from the wenver to the arms anil fingers of a machine and government from the preonally governing wili to an arganie poilical system - while the other difi not. in this, more than in anythiue else, periaps, the radical dif:s aee of nature between the Occilental and the , riental persples is summed up. The one is endowed withaself. enhancing jower to act thronghexterior aged. cles, of mechanism in his physieai lnhore, of representutive lnstitutions in his government, of systems and orgunlems in ail hls doings, which the other ineks.
This might have seemed a generation ago to set an insurmonntable harrier against the pass. ing of democracy and democratic lnstitutions into Asiar: hut we have iftlle rlght to diay to inaggine that anything can stop their march.

A. D. 1908-1909, - Passage of the Indian Councils Bill by the Pritish Pariiament. Popuiar Representation in the Legislative Counciis introduced. - Lord Morley's expla. nations of the Measure. - Appointment of a native member of the Viceroy's Executive Council. - The great project of reform in the Government of India which Lord Morker, as Sccretary for India in the British Administra tlon, hronght before I'arlinment in ilcermher, 1008, embxiied fundiamentally in what was known diuring the disenssion of it us the Indian Comells bill. ham its origin more than two ycars before that time. not in the enuncils of the British Ministry, but in thase of the (ens. crnment of fadia. The facts of its inception and preliminary consiferation were indiented in a British Ikiue Book of 190 m (Cd. 4426), which contaned proposuls on the st.bject from the Government of indif, dinted Octoher 1, 1908, and the rupiy of Lord worley to them. Nowemher 27. Jore reepatly the caris history of the reform project wis teld brietiy by the Viceroy of India, the Fari of Ninto, ln a speerel In Councii, on the 28th of Niareh, 1900 . Fle sad:
" The materinl from which the Councils Bill hins heen mamifactured was supplied from the Sceretariat at Simla, and emanatedi entirejr from the buremaeraey of the Government of indla It was in Augast. 1906, that $i$ drew attention in Comedi in a contifential minute to the change which was so rupidly affecting the jolitical atmosphere. hringing with it questions we could not afford to ignore, which we mitit attempt to answer. pointing nut that it was ullimportant that the initiative shonid emanate from us, that the Government of India should not he put in the position of appearance of having its hands forced hy agitation in this country ut by pressurc from liohue, and that we should be the first to recognize the su:rounding conditions and piace hefore his Majestr's Gorernment the opinion which personal experience snd close touch with the everyday iife of India entitle us to hoid. I consequently appolnted the Arundei Committee. That minute was the first aeed of our reforms sown more than a year before the first anarchist outrage sent a thrill of shocked surprise througtout India-the attempt to Wreck SIr Aadrew Fraser's traín In December, 1007, The pollcy of the Government of Indla In respect 10 reforms has ernanated from mature consideraton of pulitical anl sociai conditions, while the administrative changes ther adrocated, far from being conces. slons wrung from them, have been orer an: orer agaln endangered by the eommission of outrages whlch could not but encourage doubts as to the opportuneness of the introduction of politiml changes, but which I steadfastly re. fiselt to allow to injure the polttical weifare of the loyal masees in latla."
The lui in Connctls l3ill was printed on the $201 h$ of February, 1004. and its second reading in the liouse of Lords was moved by Lord Jor ley in an explanatory speech on the 23d. A prefatory memorandum accompansiug the tcxt of the Bill was as follows:
"The object of this Bill is to amend am ex. tend the indian Counclls Acts, 1 S61 and 1892, In sucli a way as to provile:
" (i.) For an enlarg'ment of the Legislative Conncil of the Governor General and of the ex. isting l'rovinclal Legislative Councils, (ii.) For the clectiou of a certain progorton of their mumbers by popular vote: and "(ili.) For greater freedom to discuss matters of general phlilic Intercst and to ask questions it their meetlogs, and more especially for the diw'ussion of the annual financial statements.

The Excentire Councils of the Governments of Malras and Bow ibay are enlarged, and pow. ers are taken to create Excentive Conncils in the other Provinces of India, where they now ha not exist. Provishon is also made for the afyuintment of Vicc.l'restdents of the varions (comeris.

The details of the necessary armangements, which must vars widely ln the different l'ro. viness, are left to be setijed by monnof regulatinns to be framed by the fiovernment of India an! approved bs the Secretary of state."

In his spect on moving the second reating of then Bill. Lord Morley said: "I invite the 11. to $\because$ 多e today the tirst lefinite ant operative step in carrying out the policy which I hal the honour of stating to your lordslips just before Christmas, and which has oecupied the :tetive considerntion both of the IJome (iov (rnmelit and of the Govermment of Imda for vers nemrls, if not even more than. three yents. The statement was awibled in luli.t with an evpectancy that with time became almost impationce, and it was recelved in India-and that, after all, is the point to which I looked with the most anxiety - with intense interest atad attention and various degrees of approval. from warm enthusiasm to cool assent and acquleseence. So far as 1 know ... therc has heen no sign in any quarter, sare possibly in the irreconclable camp, of organized hostife opinlon among either Indinns or Anglo-Indians
"There are, I take it. three classes of people that we hare to consider in dealing with a seheme of this kind. There arc the extremists, who nurse fantastic dreams that sume day they wili drive un out of Indis. In thls group there are academic extremists and physical force ex. tremists, and I have seen it stated on a certajo suthority - it cannut be more than guessed that they do not number, whether academic of physlcal force Eatremlsts, more than one tenth I think, or e, en 3 per eent., of what are calleu the educated elass in Indla. The second group nourtis no bopes of tbis sort, but hope for au. tonomy or self.government of the coloniai specles and pattern. And then the third sectlou of thls classification ask for no morc than to be admitted to co operation in our adminlatration, and to tind a free und effective rolce in expressing the intereats and needs of their land. I believe the effect of the reforms bas been, is being, and will be to draw the second class. Who hope fur colonial altonomy, into the thirl class, who will be content with being admitted to a falr and full co-operation."

As to the ohjections mased by the Mahomeians of India. to the plans of the measure for their representation fo the Councils, Lord Morley announced the reatiness of the Government to yield to them. "We," he said, "suggested to the Government of Indla a certain plan. We did not prescribe lt, we thi not order it. but we suggested and recommented this plan for their consideration - no more than that. It was the plan of a mixed or composite electoral college, In which Mahometans and Hindus shoulh? pooi their votes, so to say. The wording of the recommendation in my dispatch was, as I soon dlscorered, ambiguous - a yrievous defect, of which I make bold to hope i anm not very often in public buslness guilty. But, to the best of my beljef, under any construction the plon of IIndus ant Mahonedins roting together in a maxed and composite electorate would Lave secured to the Mahomedan electors, wherever they were so minded, the ehance of returning thedr own representative lu their duc proportion. The political idea at the bottom of that recommenda. tion which has fomm so little farour was that such composite action wonlil briug the two great communities more clusely together, ant this itea of promoting harnony was hehl by men of very bigh Indian anthorlty and experinnce who were among my adrisers at the India Ollice. But the Iahometians protested that the Iliadus would elect a pro Mindu upun it, just is i suppose In a mlxed college of say is Catholics and 2.5 I'ro. testants roting together the Protestanta might suspect that the Catholics voting for the Irotestant would choose what is called a lomanlzInc Protestant and as litth of a Protestant as possible.

At any raic, the Government of Intiu doubted whether our pian would work, and we have abandoned it. I do not thiak it was a bud plan, but it is no nise, if rou are making an earnest attempt in good falth at a general parlfication, out of parental fondaess for a chause interrupting that good process by sit ting too tight.
$\because$ The Mahomedans demand three things. I 1ad the pleasure of receiving a deputation from them and I know very well what is in their minds. They demand the election of their own relpresentatires to these councils in all the stages, just as in Cyprus, where, I thinl, the Matome. dans vote by themselves. They bare nine rotes and the non-Slahomedans hare tbrce, or the other way about. So in Bobemia, where the

Therefore we are nut without a precedent and a parallel for the lifen of a mparate roglster, Aecondiy, they want a number of wrata in ezcess of their numerical atrength. Those two demande we are quite rends and intend to neet in full. There in a third denmand that, if there is a IIIndu on the Viceroy'. Executive Council -a mubject on whlch 1 will venture to may a ilttle to ynur lon'shipa before 1 slt down there should be two Indlan menifern on the F'ceroy's Conncil and that one should be a Malomerian. Well, as I told them and as I now whll your lorishlps, I see no chance whatever of meethg thelr view in that way to any extent Tuming to a much criticised feature of the projecteif remodedling of Inflan Government namely; the sunouncerl Intention of the Guvern. ment to name an Indlan memher of the Viceroy's Execntlve Councli- the Necretary reminded the lloume that thle was not touched hy the pending blll. for the reason that the appointment of that Council thes already within the province of the Crown. In meeting the obfections ralsed th thls part of the reform project, he umused the Ilouse gruatly by remark. Ing: "Lord MacIonnell mad the nither duy: - I belleve sou cannot find any indivliunl native gentleman who has enjoyed the general conf dence who would te able to glve udvice and assistance to the (iovernor-General in (ioumeli. It lias been my fot to be twice Chlef secretary for Ireland, und I do unt lielieve fenn traly say I ever met in Ireiand a slagle individual native gentleman who 'enjoyed general confidence.' istion is whether there is no one of the 300 allions of the population of india who is competent to be the offrially eonstituted adviser of the Governor Gi neral in Comencil In the udininistraton of Indlun affalrs. For a year and a half I have had two Indians at the Councll of Indin. and I have never found the slichtest restriint whatever."

Debate on the Bill in the IIouse of Loris was resumed on the 4 th of March, and it was amended by striking out a chaus which gave power te constitute provincial exerutive councils in other provinces than Dalras and ISombuy, where they were already existing. It then pissed through Committer, and on the 111 h of March it was read a thlrd time and passed by the lipper IIouse.

A fortnight later. Lord Moriey bronglit into exercise the authority possessed by the C'rown, to appoint on its own judgment a nitive member of the Viceroy's Exreutive ('ouncil.
